"I Heartily Recommend"

Putnam's Emulsion To all who are suffering from affections of the throat and Lungs and I am certain that for wasting diseases nothing superior to it can be obtained.

"I have been suffering from Pulmonary Diseases for the last five years. About two years ago, during a severe period of my illness, was advised by my physician to try Putnam's Emulsion. I did so with the most gratifying results. My suffering was speedily alleviated, my cough diminished, my appetite improved, I added several pounds to my weight in a short time and began to recover strength. This process continued until one week which was a misery to me because once more a pleasure. Since then, Putnam's Emulsion has been my only medicine. As one who has fully tested its worth, I heartily recommend it to all who are suffering from affections of the Lungs and Throat, and I am certain that for any form of Wasting Diseases nothing superior can be obtained."

A HARD CASE.

CHAPTER I.

"Yes, dear reader, a very hard case. Everybody said so and everybody keeps saying so. There can be no reasonable doubt on the subject. So if you try to be patient and charitable and all that sort of thing, I'll tell you something about it. You see, I am just dying to tell somebody, so I'll just rance you're sitting over there by the fire, and while it rains and rains outside enough to fret a saint, I'll talk it all over with you. Well, to begin: I am the hard case. I, Belle Harley, aged nineteen and a half, well born, well educated and well disciplined generally. I am a very pretty girl, but I say uncommonly pretty. There! I see your eyebrows go up and I know the cause. You are shocked, of course, because I say I am pretty. The difference between other pretty girls and myself is that I am honest enough to declare what I know so well. Haven't people been telling me so always? Don't I see myself in the glass a dozen times a day? Aye, and don't I see it in other people's eyes every time I walk in the streets? Why, I know it well. Of course, I know it well. I've got a pretty figure, too, and such a pretty foot, and oh, me! these two pretty feet do walk me into such a lot of trouble!"

We are living in the South—in Florida, papa and mamma and I. We had a lovely home there—not a stately home, but a bird's nest of a place, all flowers and shade and quiet and fragrance, and besides this, almost too many alligators and snakes, all things considered. I was the only child about, and it goes without saying that I was Queen Bee and "ruled the roost." My dear old mamma mummy said I was the very best child in the world, and mamma said just as often that I was the worst. There will be such little differences of opinion in the most harmonious families.) My papa was an old man, with snowy hair and feeble steps, even in my first recollection of him, and people were always mistaking my pretty, youthful mother for his daughter.

One hot day I remember nurse took me over to the Banterze Plantation, stay a few days. I was then about ten years old. Well, we stayed a week there, and I was very happy playing with the Banterze children, and then we went back home, and there was my mamma in a black dress, looking sad enough, and she told me my poor papa was dead and buried, and that she had only me to love now. After this it was teachers and lessons, lessons and teachers, all the time. Generally these (the teachers, I mean) came from New England and were very nice and kind and faithful with me, but one was a hard case, and my mamma mummy hated them all accordingly. One day, when I was about eighteen, I had been all the morning on the lake with Carlos (Carlos Halesen was one of our neighbors, and a handsome, graceful crook he was too). He had just asked me to marry him, and I had told him, "maybe I would and maybe I wouldn't, I'd see about it"—I had just come in and found a tall, ugly, long faced man sitting with mamma. He looked at me awfully hard, with his eyes half closed, and she said:

"Oh, Louis! Don't you remember Belle?"

He said (graciously! what a gruff one he was to be sure):

"No; how could I, when she was only seven when I saw her last?"

He really looked as if he was angry with mamma for asking the question.

"Belle, my daughter, speak to your Uncle Louis." This was poor little mamma trying to smooth him out again.

"How do, Uncle Louis?" I said.

"H'm, she's independent as a wood-sawyer," he remarked very pleasantly, "and just like she was ten years ago."

"Yes, that's her way, Louis. I am afraid she is a little too independent."

"Seems so indeed."

"But she's grown up pretty?"

"Eyes too large and too much, entirely too much, Kate. I don't like redundancy, you know, Kate. I like a girl with a cool eye—her's ain't."

"No, I am afraid her's ain't."

"Mamma, I said, 'if you and Uncle Louis are quite through interviewing me, I'll go up and take off my bonnet.'"

"Very well, dear, go along, if you like, you'll find us both in here when you come down."

"No, I won't either," I thought, as I slipped out at the back door and went over to nannym's cabin to tell her that my Uncle Louis, whom I hated, had come—we both knew he was expected—to take mamma and me to live with him in his dismal, hateful, stupid, brick and mortar house in that far-off New York, where it snowed from year's end to year's end, and where the people's hearts were as cold as the climate.

You see, dear reader, you needn't mention it, but I had never been farther from the plantation in my life than St. Augustine one way and Savannah the other.

Sure enough the plantation was sold and all our pretty furniture and silver and things, and we came here to New York to live, and I'd no sooner gotten here than I fell in love with New York, and have been faithful to this sentiment ever since. We have lived with Uncle Louis in his bachelor home all this time. Mamma says Uncle Louis is a good man, and is a father to me, and I suppose she knows; but, dear reader, I'll tell you in strict confidence the Bible says 'it is not good for man to live alone,' and Uncle Louis has been trying it fifty-seven years, and oh! ye gods and little fishes, how he has soured on it. You see, the trouble is he cannot let me alone.

"Belle, are you going out again?"

"Yes, sir."

"What for?"

"(Now it just riles me for people to ask questions.)"

"What for, I say?"

"Mamma wants some thread and I want a walk, and I'm going for it."

"Stepping back to the sitting room door, he says:

"Kate, why do you send Belle out shopping? She is in the streets earlier too much. I'll get the thread. Call her back."

As he closes the front door, mamma, who always obeys literally, says:

"Come back, Belle; your uncle will get the thread!"

"Very well; let him get the thread."

"This I say as I watch his back going up one square, and then ran off the other way."

He would stop me anywhere and at any time, just to have a few cross words. One day on the stairway he says:

"Belle?"

"You are staidly vain?"

"Then after a moment—"

"Have you nothing to say? I repeat it—you are absurdly vain!"

"Not a syllable."

"Ah! You're a hard case—you are. Late in the evening mamma and I are in the sitting room, very quiet and comfortable, when he comes in looking black enough. It is evening, and he hates snow."

"Where's my paper? Where's this morning's World?"

My heart jumps into my mouth. I knew where his World was, but how could I tell him?

"Haven't you read your World to-day, Uncle Louis?" I ask, trying to get time.

"Yes, but there's something in it that I want to see, and I must have it, and I will have it. You know where it is. I see you do. Tell it—tell it."

"Oh! my gracious! how he glared, and all about a pitiful nursing paragon really stale and old."

"Do you know where it is?" he asks, leaning towards me with such a scowl.

"Yes, I know."

"Then where?"

"I have got it on this very moment for you. Bustle. There? I said."

Well, after what followed, I felt that I never could again engage the World in another bustle on my own account.

CHAPTER II.

Now, I don't literally love work; of course I don't, but I'm not lazy. So I do whatever I have to do, and then I consider my time my own; but, you see, mamma cannot understand this. I like a brisk walk up and down Broadway on the sunny afternoons. I love to watch the people—all possible sorts and sizes—and the shop windows in their tempting array, and (now don't even tell this, dear reader, I don't mind having the dudes look at me with most evident admiration and say under their breath, but quite loud enough for me to hear, "Very pretty girl, too, and I love to walk on as if I didn't hear and have the same thing repeated half a dozen times within the hour. I suppose all this is a very wrong, very wrong, but as I am a hard case, I'm bound to do wrong, but she says mamma don't know all this. I like to see people, and she tries to be what is called 'very particular' with me. You see, she thinks she must go through a certain formula every time I go out alone, thus:

"Belle, dear, don't look at the men. Hear?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"And don't let the men look at you!"

"No, ma'am."

"I wouldn't walk by the Fifth Avenue Hotel."

"No, ma'am."

"Nor Delmonico's."

"No, ma'am."

"Nor the club house."

"No, ma'am."

"And, Belle, my darling, do get back early. You know your uncle will fret so."

"Yes, ma'am."

We go through this little entertainment every time, and go through it much as gapping irreverent sinners go through the grand ritual, and with as little interest in its meaning.

One day—it was on Thursday, I remember—I had been having a tremendous tilt with Uncle Louis, and was feeling more like 'a very hard case' than usual. I was walking down Broadway and had stopped to cross at Madison Square. But it was a hard thing to do, the cars, carriages, vans, handsome, calm and hussy kept coming. Finally despatching of an opening. I determined to start away and risk getting caught believed. A very foolish thing to do, of course, but I suppose a 'hard case' would naturally be expected to do a foolish thing. So I started, but in a few seconds, feeling the warm breath of a pair of fiery horses in my face, my poor cowardly heart forgot to keep beating. I felt giddy and sick, and then—and then streets and houses and people, all seemed to fall into a big heap together, and the 'subsequent proceedings interested me no more' somehow, for I have never been able to recall them, only a little later—it might have been ten hours or ten minutes—I found myself sitting on a bench in Madison Square, leaning back against a tree, and a man—a rather large middle aged man—with glasses on, was sitting close by me, holding my hands, and as I look at him, he says:

"Better now, ain't you?" and I say, "Oh, yes!"

But my hands are trembling and I feel a little sick still.

"That was a foolish, thoughtless thing to do, you know," he goes on; "being thoughtless, you've had a narrow escape. I knew you'd do it sooner or later."

I could feel the red blood come rushing into my cheeks when he said this, because I knew so well what would inevitably follow.

"Yes, I knew you'd do it sooner or later. Every afternoon you will cross there in the most crowded place, and I knew you wouldn't always make a safe trip. I have seen you cross fifteen times—the sixteenth came perilously near being the last."

"And didn't I know it all! Hadn't I seen him in the very same place watching me, following me up and down with his eyes day after day—such handsome, soft grey eyes, too."

He wasn't a dude—no, indeed!—nor was he very young—thirty-five, perhaps forty—but in all the crowded street there was not another face like his.

"Why do you always walk alone?" he asks.

"Because I don't know anybody here in New York."

"You've no father? No brother?"

"None."

"Are you alone in the world?"

"Oh, no—I've mamma at home and Uncle Louis."

"What would 'Uncle Louis' think of this afternoon's escapade?"

"He'd scold most awfully. I tremble to think of it."

"Is he—his he cross?"

"Excessively."

He laughed a little at this, and then looking very grave, said:

"Promise me you won't do that again."

"What, cross out there?"

"Yes, or in any other such place?"

"Oh, I don't like to make promises. I never did."

"Child—child!" he says, "you know you run across there to show your little feet."

"Well, they are pretty, and most of the feet about here ain't you know?"

"True, very true; but what value would they have if you had got killed, or had to have them amputated?"

"Oh! for pity's sake, don't talk about such horrid things; and by the way, I must go home. Uncle Louis will make things warm for me."

"May I take you home?"

"Why, no indeed, sir. You know you and I are not even acquainted."

"We'll remedy that," he said, taking a card from his pocket and handing it to me.

I read the name, John Paul Wearing, offices of Wearing, Cutt & Co., Wall St., New York, opposite Stock Exchange, and ever so much more about deposits received and interest allowed, and stocks and bonds and all manner of such rubbish. The only part I cared for was the John Paul, you know.

"And your name?" he said.

"Oh! I'm so very sorry," I said, "but really I forgot my cards."

So he just laughed and bade me good evening and walked off, and I almost ran home, and just as I closed the front door right on the opposite side of the street was John Paul, standing by a gas lamp (how in the world had he got there so quickly?) and he just lifted his hat and bowed and smiled, and I went in and got a blessing, so to speak, from Uncle Louis, and mamma said, whispering from behind her sewing:

"You didn't go by the Fifth Avenue Hotel, did you, Belle?" And I said, "No, indeed, mamma; and I really didn't. I crossed this side."

Now, it isn't strange if after this I had rather a habit of looking out for J. P., is it? And he was always there, in the same place, waiting patiently, I suppose, to see me get killed at that crossing. He always smiled and lifted his hat and looked handsome (some kinds of dark grey eyes look so soft through glasses,) but of course I never spoke or bowed even, because he and I were not acquainted. Once, I remember, just as I was about to cross the street he raised a warning forefinger and shook his head, and I gave it up at that time. But very queer things can come about sometimes. One afternoon Uncle Louis called me down stairs and said:

Belle, I had a letter from your Aunt

Charlotte to-day. She lives in New Orleans, you know, and she wants me to send her your photograph. So get your bobinet and we'll have one taken right away. It's all stuff and nonsense, but I suppose she must be humored."

I was all dressed, fortunately, for if I had been in my Mother Hubbard wrapper he would have ordered me out all the same. Think of my walking on Broadway with Uncle Louis! It was anything but an unalloyed pleasure. He scolded every foot of the way and people around us could hear every word.

"Come along, Belle, what are you staring at? Don't stop at that window, don't walk so fast, bless my life, what a hard case you are, to be sure, and all such phantasies."

Suddenly he pulled me into an open door on Twenty-sixth St., near Broadway, and said:

Among the forty waiting men... The great London strike still continues... The following is the article alluded to: As has been already stated in these columns, the catch of salmon in British Columbia this year is enormous...

The Editor, under the above head, says we "persistently misrepresent the position of the editor in regard to the liquor traffic." We are unaware of any such misrepresentation. We stated last week, and the Advocate copies the item—"that it has no word of condemnation of the liquor traffic, and yet in place of using his influence to put an end to the traffic by assisting to crack it out, he is in favor of licensing it, and endeavoring to bolster it up and make it respectable. Does any one but the editor of the Advocate, and those who wish the inhuman traffic legalized because they are engaged in it, imagine that any less liquor will be sold under license than under the present illegal traffic, and that a legalized traffic will cause any less misery and crime, destitution and war, than the same unregulated. Licensed or unlicensed the results of the traffic in humans, goods like, those engaged in it, is the same."

The editor of the Advocate would endeavor to have the impossible again attempted, and regulate the traffic, and yet he claims that he is not the friend of the liquor traffic, while he endeavors to have it regulated by license, and thus make the people of this country partners in the traffic by participating in the profits of the sale and subsequent sale, by collecting a certain sum yearly as blood money.

As we stated last week the editor of the Advocate can "use strong language in reference to an occasional dealer by a shot from a revolver, but has no word of condemnation of a traffic which yearly slays thousands of human lives," and when this traffic is licensed, or unlicensed does not alter its terrible work one iota.

Committed for Trial. An inquest was held in Nelson on the 4th September by Coroner Dr. Smith, on the body of an infant found by Miss Williams in his water-closet and covered with potato stalks. The verdict of the jury was to the effect that Jane Drysdale, the mother of the child was guilty of concealment of birth.

The preliminary trial of the accused was held in the Court House by Justice Niven, three witnesses being examined. She was committed for trial at the Circuit Court which opened yesterday, this being the only criminal case to be held before the Grand Jury.

Fish Culture.

Our attention has been called to this subject by an article in the Toronto Mail of August 30, in which the enormous catch of salmon in the Fraser river is attributed to the extension of the fish hatchery system to British Columbia. The assumption may be correct, but the article further says that the eggs from all the hatcheries throughout the Dominion tell a similar story, and make it quite clear that fish culture is successful. So far as the Miramichi river is concerned our fishermen are not prepared to admit that fish culture as carried on in its hatchery has resulted in any increase of salmon, but the catch grows less until the business has become a losing investment of a remunerative one. Various reasons are given for this gradual diminution of our valuable salmon fisheries, the principal being the lack of protection of the parent fish in fresh water on their way as well as on the spawning beds. Last spring, an exceptionally early one, it is stated that there was a large run of salmon before any of the nets were put down and no doubt large numbers were successful in reaching the upper waters of the Miramichi river. Here the work of the poacher was put in and we have seen the result, and we are even that dynamite was used for the purpose of killing the fish in the pools, and this is caused by the want of proper and sufficient officers to protect the breeding fish. No attempt has ever been made in the Miramichi river that we are aware of to take the June or July run for the purposes of the hatchery, but later on in the fall salmon was caught for the purpose of filling the troughs of the hatching house. It is maintained by many of the most intelligent of our fishermen that the fish then caught are of a run which come into the river in September or even later and are of no commercial value, because they arrive after the close season has set in, and this is in any part of the year. This is in part explained, no doubt, by the fact that this is the regular year for a good run. We learn from reports in the last Fisheries blue-book that the catch of salmon in the Fraser in 1887 was very large, but that it was small, though good, in 1888 and 1889. This season, however, not only has the expected good run taken place, but the catch has probably been very largely increased by the extension of the system of fish culture to British Columbia. This year the Fraser river and lakes of Vancouver's Island and the mainland. Since then the distribution of fish has been very largely increased, and the Fraser River Hatchery was first established in that province in 1885, in which year 1,800,000 salmon fry were deposited in the various rivers and lakes of Vancouver's Island and the mainland. Good music was introduced between the papers, and a pleasant feature of the evening was the presentation of a white silk banner to the Maritime Union by Mrs. Dr. Todd. The banner bears the motto "For God and home and native land." On a blue ribbon are the letters W. C. T. U., entwined with white chrysanthemum, the emblematical flower of the society, and underneath the words "If God is for us who shall be against us." - Courier.

The W. C. T. U. treasurer's report showed a balance of $253.68. The old officers were re-elected as follows: Mrs. Turnbull, St. John, President. Mrs. Smith, Windsor, Vice President. Mrs. Treman, Sackville, Vice President for New Brunswick. Mrs. Steadman, Fredericton, Corresponding Secretary. Miss Lockhart, St. John, Treasurer. Mrs. T. G. Allen, St. John, Auditor. Amherst was fixed upon as the place of next meeting. Superintendents of departments were appointed as follows: White Cross—Mrs. Turnbull, St. John. Jernigan—Mrs. Reed, Belle Verte. Evangelistic work—Mrs. Sampson, Fredericton. Temperance literature—Mrs. Judge Steadman, Fredericton. Sailors—Mrs. Trenholm, Hantsport. Parlor meetings—Mrs. Archibald, Cow Bay, C. B. Jail and prison work—Mrs. J. E. Clements, Yarmouth. Influencing fair—Mrs. Wood, Fairville. Railway men—Mrs. Wilbur, Moncton. Industrial schools and coffee rooms—Mrs. Henry Dunlop, Amherst. Purity in literature—Mrs. Dr. Todd, St. Stephen. Press—Miss Brown, Chatham. Work in kitchen garden and flower mission—Mrs. Dr. Woodbury, Dartmouth. Petitions legislation, etc.—Mrs. F. B. Smith, Windsor. Unaffiliated temperance—Miss Archibald, Truro. Scientific temperance—Mrs. Phillips, Fredericton. Dress and hygiene—Mrs. Sutherland, Newcastle. At the evening session Mrs. Trenholm of Hantsport, was appointed organizer for the maritime provinces for the ensuing year. A resolution of sympathy with the work of the prohibitory alliance was passed. A letter from Miss Willard, president of the World's W. C. T. U., was read, urging further efforts to get signatures to the petition to the governments of the world for the suppression of the drink traffic and the opium trade. She hoped that two hundred thousand signatures would be obtained in Canada. Mrs. Conacher, of Campbellton, reported that the Campbellton union, which has been organized but one year, had added 525 names to the petition. Miss Brown of Chatham read a paper on the franchise for women. In the discussion which followed some of the speakers took the ground that woman suffrage was sure to come, but that instead of hastening its coming they should try to know what they are asking for and be ready. The president did not expect the good results that many do from the extension of franchise to women. Wives and mothers should exercise their influence over voters, yet woman suffrage was sure to come. A telegram from the publisher of the Canadian Voice was received. In it he stated that if the Prohibitory Alliance and the W. C. T. U. continued in the good work they were doing, by the year 1892 a prohibitory law would be passed. The usual votes of thanks were passed. The convention then closed with devotional exercises. At the close of the session Miss Phillips, Fredericton; Miss Archibald, Truro; Mrs. Clements, Yarmouth; Mrs. Treman, Hantsport. On plan of work—Mrs. Phillips, Fredericton; Miss Archibald, Truro; Mrs. Clements, Yarmouth; Mrs. Treman, Hantsport. On resolutions—Mrs. Smith, Windsor; Mrs. McArthur, Fredericton; Mrs. Treman, Sackville; Mrs. Dunlop, Amherst. Miss Tilley was invited to meet with this committee. On courtesies—Mrs. Dr. Todd, St. Stephen; Mrs. Woodbury, Dartmouth. On finance—Miss Lockhart, St. John; Mrs. Wilbur, Moncton; Mrs. Raymond, Yarmouth. In reply to a question, Miss Tilley said that the duties of superintendents of departments might be learned by correspondence with the Dominion superintendents who were appointed for that purpose. It was very desirable that proceedings should be printed for the information of the Dominion superintendents. By resolution the parliamentary rules of the National W. C. T. U. were placed in the hands of members. The hour of twelve having arrived, the members of the convention engaged in the noontide silent prayer for the success of the work, a beautiful custom which is enjoyed upon members of the W. C. T. U. for daily observance wherever they may be throughout the world. The afternoon session opened at 2 o'clock with devotional readings by Mrs. Main, president of the St. Stephen union. Lady Tilley was invited to the platform. The revision of the constitution and bylaws occupied the convention until the close of the session. The most important amendments were that county superintendents shall take the place of the divisional superintendents who now have charge of four counties; that two delegates instead of three be sent from each local union; and that the date of meeting be the third Wednesday of the first Wednesday in September. Wednesday evening was devoted to a public meeting in the Methodist church. The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. R. W. Weddall and scriptures reading by Rev. O. S. Newham. Mrs. Turnbull, the president, read an eloquent address on the work of the association, followed by a paper by Mrs. Smith of Windsor. AFRICAN AGENTS.—The German barque Ostlie, which drifted ashore at Berwick Tuesday night, came off unharmed Wednesday night, about 60 tons of ballast having been thrown over. The Mascot towed her up. The smoke stack of the atmosphere is the Captain's excuse for getting aground and the pilots for not having boarded the barque. THE METROPOLITAN PIC-NIC.—About 800 persons went to Blackville, Thursday, on the Methodist picnic train. There were 100 dinners served at the refreshment booth, and the supply of unspiced refreshments was exhausted. Swinging, racing and other amusements were engaged in and all had a good time. The picnickers got back at 8 o'clock. MIRAMICHI DISTRICT MEETING.—The annual meeting of the Circuit in connection with the Methodist Church in the Miramichi District was held in St. Luke's Church, Chatham on Tuesday, Sept. 6th inst. Ministers and laymen were present from Chatham, Newcastle, Derby, Bathurst, Richibucto, and Wolford. Rev. Mr. Tippet of Campbellton, on ground of sickness, begged to be excused. On motion his request was complied with. The financial status of the different churches was then carefully enquired into, and probable receipts and expenditures were arranged for the ensuing conference year. Arrangements were made for holding Missionary, Educational and Sustentation Fund meetings throughout the whole district. As most of the churches in the district are self-sustaining, only one case—that of Wolford—was reported to the Mission Board for financial aid in missionary support. Rev. John A. Clark, M. A., was in the chair, and Rev. R. S. Crisp acted as Secretary. Ordination.—The Presbytery of Miramichi meets at Wolford on the 13th inst. for the purpose of ordaining and inducting Mr. Wm. McLeod into the charge of the Presbyterian congregation of the place. The Moncton Times says:—It is reported that Mr. McLeod will be one of the principal actors in another very interesting event before that time.

Maritime W. C. T. U.

The eleventh annual convention of the Maritime Women's Christian Temperance Union began its sessions in the Temperance hall, St. Stephen, on Wednesday last, and continued in session three days. The following delegates were present: Mrs. Morrow, Mrs. Currie, St. John; Mrs. Tremman, Sackville; Mrs. Saunders, Bellefleur; Mrs. Spencer, Parrsboro; Mrs. F. Woodbury, Dartmouth; Mrs. T. R. Smith, Windsor; Mrs. Dunlop, Mrs. Christie, Amherst; Miss King, Miss J. B. Archibald, Truro; Mrs. F. Raymond, Mrs. S. E. Clements, Mrs. Haley, Yarmouth; Mrs. Trenholm, Hantsport; Mrs. Walker, Miss McGregor, New Glasgow; Mrs. Porter, Fredericton; Mrs. Hobin, Mrs. Yerra, Gibson; Mrs. Wilbur, Mrs. Snow, Moncton; Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Rigby, Portland; Mrs. Lawson, St. John; Miss Olive, Carleton; Mrs. Chipman, Mrs. Robinson, Miss Ross, St. Stephen; Mrs. Conacher, Campbellton; Mrs. Sutherland, Newcastle; Miss Brown, Mrs. Shirreff, Chatham; Mrs. Long, Mrs. McNaught, Fairville; Mrs. Cummings, Truro; Mrs. Thorne, St. John; Mrs. Carr, Hartland; Mrs. Jordan, Mrs. W. Kerr, Mrs. Burpee, Woodstock; Mrs. Cogswell, Sackville; Mrs. A. E. McLeod, Parrsboro. The convention opened at 10 a. m., with devotional exercises by the superintendent of evangelistic work, Mrs. Sampson, Fredericton. The president, Mrs. Turnbull, made a short opening address. After the enrolment of delegates, Miss Tilley, of Toronto, who was present, was made an honorary member of the convention and invited to a seat on the platform. A vote of thanks was passed to the president for an oak gavel presented by her to the convention. The following committees were then appointed:—On plan of work—Mrs. Phillips, Fredericton; Miss Archibald, Truro; Mrs. Clements, Yarmouth; Mrs. Treman, Hantsport. On resolutions—Mrs. Smith, Windsor; Mrs. McArthur, Fredericton; Mrs. Treman, Sackville; Mrs. Dunlop, Amherst. Miss Tilley was invited to meet with this committee. Blackville. THE CHURCH AND ITS HAPPENINGS.—DENOMINATIONAL AND OTHER NEWS. BLACKVILLE, SEPT. 2.—A party of men under the direction of Mr. Haines are at work making necessary repairs to the South West highway bridge. On Wednesday evening last Rev. Mr. Johnston united in marriage Miss Macgregor Bateman and Mr. Thos. Jardine. Rev. Thos. Allen, Methodist minister stationed at Derby, preached in the new hall Tuesday evening to a large congregation. He hopes to attend here henceforth once in four weeks. The concert given in the hall on Monday evening by several members of the Campbellton Musical Enterprise Co., drew a fair house. The season's sawing closed last Tuesday. It is understood the mill will be generally repaired this fall and put in first class order for next season. The services in the Presbyterian church yesterday were largely attended and the number of persons communicating for the first time larger than for several years past. The pastor was assisted by Rev. Mr. Thompson of Bathurst, who also preached Friday morning and yesterday evening very acceptably. Rev. J. D. Murray of Red Bank occupied the pulpit Friday evening, delighting all with a very able and practical sermon. Already several farmers have their grain crops harvested and one Mr. Mitchell McCarthy, has his threshing done. Today was very warm, the mercury climbing up the 94 in the shade.—Gleaner. Bathurst Notes. BATHURST, SEPT. 5.—The September term of the Gloucester circuit, Judge Tuckwell presiding, opened on Tuesday. There was no criminal business. Besides the local members of the bar, the following local gentlemen were present: Hon. A. G. Blair, Geo. G. Gilbert, Geo. E. Gregory, R. A. Lawlor, Jas. A. Harquail and Hon. P. A. Landry. The civil docket was as follows:—John Foley v. Jeremiah D. Foley.—Thos. Desbary and Geo. G. Gilbert for plaintiff; P. A. Landry for defendant. This was an action for trespass. Verdict for defendant. John Doe ex dem. Augustus Poulin v. Gustave Noel, John B. Noel and Maximilien Noel.—An action for ejectment; settled between the parties. C. Robin & Co. v. Elie Siret.—Assumpsit. Messrs. Desbary and Gilbert for plaintiff; R. A. Lawlor for defendant. Verdict for plaintiffs, $490. The court adjourned last evening. The R. C. Church bazaar, held last week, was an unequalled success, the net proceeds being in the vicinity of $1,800. The lotteries in connection therewith will be held the latter part of this month and the names of the winners will be published in the Sun. At that time, too, the actual net proceeds will be known. There is to be a big day on the Bathurst driving park on Oct. 10th. A June of $50 will be given in prizes, and it is understood that there will be an exhibition of some very fast trotting. The track will be all that could be desired.—Sun. Rifle Competition. The annual matches of the Northumberland County Rifle Association took place at Wellington Range, Chatham, on Tuesday, 3rd. Personal. Mrs. Alex. Fisher, of Southport, having sold her farm and stock, left last night for St. Paul, Minnesota, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Anne Fisher. Several members of her family have been for some years in St. Paul. Mr. Frank Fisher came from St. Paul for his mother and sister some time ago. We wish them a safe journey and every prosperity in their new home. Mr. W. S. Brown is seriously ill at his residence at Newcastle. Mrs. Brown is also ill. Mr. Havelock Johnston, and Mr. Thos. Johnston, sons of our late Postmaster, are spending a vacation at home. The former has been employed for several years in a Philadelphia drug store, Mr. Wilson Harris, of this town, being in the same employ. The annual meeting of this Association takes place to-day at New Glasgow, N. S. Among the business to be transacted that of uniform rate of advertising for the Maritime Provinces is not the least important. On Thursday morning the Association will proceed to Port Milgrave, where they will embark on the steamer "Marion" for a sail through St. Peter's Canal and under the beautiful Bras d'Or Lakes under the guidance of Captain Burchell. At Grand Narrows a party will disembark and stay over night, thus being afforded the opportunity of witnessing the construction of the great railway bridge over the narrows, the abutments of which are being sunk in seventy feet of water. Captain Burchell has generously placed the steamer "Magoola" specially at the disposal of the Press Association, and in this boat the party will take in Baddeck and that sort of thing, and Whycomoguch, the most beautiful spot on these "lakes of gold." There the Association will be shown over the model farm of Jacob S. Hart, and inspect his famous herd of Jerseys. On Saturday the "Magoola" will proceed down the Lakes to the Little Bras d'Or, where they will disembark and after a drive of three miles, North Sydney will be reached. Saturday night, Sunday, and Monday forenoon, will be spent at the Sydney, affording ample time for those desiring to visit historical Louisbourg to do so. At noon on Monday, the Association will embark on the "Marion" to return, reaching Miramichi on Tuesday morning, whence come by rail. Those who desire to visit Canoe, Guyaboro, or any point on the Strait of Canoe, can do so from Miramichi. This enjoyable trip will occupy one week. We wish the members a most enjoyable one.

The Normal School. Fredericton opened on Monday last for a term of three months. Its candidates presented themselves for examination of which number 13 were rejected. The Telegraph publishes the names of the successful candidates, among whom we notice the following from the Northumberland—Wm. Cooke Allen, Milton; Sarah H. Danforth, Bellefleur; Rebecca J. Cushman, Milton; Sarah Curran, Chatham; Maggie T. Daughney, Douglastown; Minnie Elger, Chatham; Isabella H. Falconer, Newcastle; Laura A. Fowler, Little Brasch; Ella Gray, Chatham; M. H. Hickey, Chatham; Annie E. Morrison, Douglastown; M. McDonald, Chatham; A. M. M. Russell, Douglastown; Mary Jane Simpson, Tabusintac. Gloucester—M. Marisa D. Dinet, Bathurst; Alice Payne, Tete-a-pouce; Melinda Francis Archer, Tracadie. Richibucto—Minnie Andrus, Campbellton; Mrs. Archibald, Archibald Settlement; Isabella Devar, Dundas; M. Amanda Doyle, Jacobus River; Miss Parr, Campbellton; Stella McNeil, River Louis; Mary Ann McPherson, Charlo Station. Kent—Lida Forster, Kingston; Elizabeth Lennox, West Branch; Sarah E. Masterion, Kingston; Agnes C. Stevenson, Richibucto; Marion Wathen, Wolford station. Bathurst's Court. From Tuesday, August 27th to Monday, September 2nd a sheriff's court and jury were engaged in endeavoring to decide who was the owner of a certain number of spruce and pine logs, 872, estimated at $9,000 feet. The logs were replevined by Mr. R. Sinclair from Mr. D. Sullivan. John Shirr, Esq., presided. Messrs. M. Adams, R. A. Lawlor and C. J. Thompson for plaintiff, and L. J. Tweedie for defendant. The plaintiff, E. Sinclair, claimed the logs were for him under agreement made with one Hambrook. Sinclair claimed the logs, having purchased them from Hambrook. The jury after hearing the evidence and council on both sides found right and title of said lumber in Mr. Sullivan. The case will again be tried at the circuit court in March next. Forest Fires are raging in all directions and at times the smoke is very thick. In the vicinity of Moncton the people have had quite a serious time fighting the fire to prevent their buildings from being consumed. Along the I. C. R. at places between Moncton and Newcastle heavy fires are raging and much damage has been done. The same cry comes from the quarters and unless stopped by heavy rain much loss will be occasioned. The drought has prevailed for some time and the extremely hot and windy weather has enabled the fire to spread very rapidly. Over 1000 cords of bark was burned at Bess river one or two ago. It was owned by Messrs. J. C. Miller & Co., and was valued at over $3000. Mill Burned. The rotary saw mill of Messrs. J. W. & J. Anderson, Bathurst Church, was burned down on Friday night, August 30th. It was thoroughly repaired last spring, a new roof put on, and casks of water kept thereon in case of fire, and new machinery put in. When the fire was discovered the building was wrapped in flames. Cause of fire unknown. No insurance. Loss estimated at $3000. Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

Factory Burned. The factory at Rosebank owned by Mr. Abram Scott and lately managed by Mr. Scott had just returned from Newcastle when the alarm was given, and the interior was a mass of flames. Nothing was saved. A large quantity of shingles was stored in a shed adjoining the building and together with all its machinery were destroyed. The loss to Mr. Scott is a heavy one, there being no insurance. The Mercus Fair. If the new pier had been a hundred feet or so from the wreck of the old one the space between them would have afforded a perfect shelter for boats, something that is wanted there very much. Messrs. Adams have set men to work, at their own expense, clearing away the rubbish and members of the old pier, so that boats may get the benefit of what shelter the new one would afford if it were accessible in the rear.—World. Apology. We apologise for not noticing in our report of the W. C. T. U. entertainment last week the beautiful recitation given by Miss Annie Harley, "Scotland's Maiden Martyr." Its position was changed in the programme and was thus overlooked. It was most admirably rendered by Miss Harley. Mill for Sale. The valuable mill property known as Kerr's mill, Rosebank, is advertised for sale by public auction on Tuesday the first of October. See advertisement for particulars. For Cholera, Cholera Infantum, Summer Complaint, Cramps and Pains in the Bowels, there is no remedy that can be more relied upon than Kendrick's Mixture, for children or adults. St. Mary's Church. Rev. Henry Hadden of Gagetown has been called to the rectory of St. Mary's church, Richibucto, made vacant by the resignation of Rev. D. V. Gwilym last spring. Harvest Home. Read the advertisement of the Harvest Home Supper, in Derby on the evening of Thursday, Sept. 19th. Thanks. The W. C. T. U. wish to tender their thanks to all who kindly assisted at the concert given for their benefit on Aug. 30th. Pimples, pustules, rash, eczema, all humors and all diseases of the skin, piles, ulcers, sores and wounds, chapped hands, roughness of the skin, are quickly healed and cured by the use of Bald's French Ointment. Sold by all dealers. THE FANST for September is well filled with interesting reading matter for the little one and pleasantly illustrated. It is published by the well known firm of Lockport & Co., Boston, at $1.00 per year. Pico's Cure for Consumption and Eeedy Cure for Catarrh are sold by E. Lee Street, Newcastle. Married. At Chatham on the 7th inst. by the Rev. Mr. Magy, I. A. KILLAM, Esq. of Moncton, to Miss ANNE F. FAIRY, daughter of the late Charles Fairy, of St. Noels, Hantsport, England. At the Manse, Tabusintac, Aug. 29th, 1889, by Rev. I. Robinson, W. J. Mr. GEORGE MCKENNEY to Miss ALLICE LOGGIE, both of New Jersey, Northumberland County. At Chatham, on the 4th inst. by the Rev. R. S. Crisp, Mr. Wm. STEWART to Miss MARY JARDINE, both of Chatham. At the residence of the bride's mother, on the 28th Aug. by Rev. T. G. Johnston, Mr. LEONARD JARDINE to Miss MARGARET B. Jardine. Correspondence. THE RESULTS. To the Editor of the Advocate: The statement now going the rounds of the papers "that the law officers of the Crown, Sir Richard Webster and Sir Edward Clarke, have reported that the Governor General was right not to interfere with the operation of the Jesuits within the power of the Quebec Legislature, and that there is no cause to send to the judicial committee of the Privy Council, requires confirmation." The so-called semi-official despatches are not always reliable, and, to say the least, there are good grounds for suspicion in this case. But be the opinion of Sir Richard Webster and Sir Edward Clarke what it may, the ugly fact remains that the Jesuits Act is anti-British and as such it is an insult to all loyal Canadian patriots. History teaches that crown officers are not always the best and wisest advisers; and that sometimes their advice has brought the nation into trouble. If today those in high places can see nothing objectionable in replacing the name of the Queen by the name of the Pope of Rome in some of our "Provincial Statutes," the people should express their views in a manner unmistakable. There have been times when British Sovereigns bowed obsequiously to the Pope and would have delegated to him ungrateful powers, and when Protestants and Protestant ministers were compelled to stand earnestly for the truth. Loyalty to the Crown and country forced men to oppose themselves to the king and his legal advisers. We trust that the time will never come when Canadian Protestants will have to use the sword to defend their rights. It will come if we are not loyal to our principles now. It will come if we cannot now sacrifice our political party and unite for the common good. It will come, if we are now prepared to vote for honest and true men to represent us in the Legislatures of their Dominion. Some men are willing to agitate against the Jesuits so long as their agitation does not injure their party! Some Orangemen are willing to cry out lustily against Roman Catholic aggression so long as they are not called upon to vote against Sir John A. Macdonald or Mr. Blake! Some Protestants are loyal to their Protestantism so long as their loyalty does not cost them anything! The Jesuits are united, determined and active. The Jesuits' oath reads thus: "I, A. B., now in the presence of Almighty God, and you, blessed Virgin Mary, do declare from my heart, without mental reservation, that the Pope is Christ's Vicar General and is the true and only head of the universal church throughout the earth, and that by virtue of his office of binding and loosing given to his Holiness by Jesus Christ, he hath power to depose Heretical Kings, Princes, Estates, Commonwealths and Governments; all being illegal without his sacred confirmation, and that they may safely be destroyed. Therefore, to the utmost of my power, I will defend this doctrine and His Holiness's rights and customs against all Opponents of the Heretical or Protestant Authority whatsoever, especially against the now pretended Assembly of the Clergy in England and all Heretics, &c., &c." "I do renounce and disown any Allegiance to any heretical King, Prince or State, named Protestant, or otherwise, to any of their interior Magistrates or officers." "I do further declare the doctrine of the Church of England, of the Calvinists, Huguenots and other Protestants, to be damnable and those to be damned who will not forsake the same. I do further declare that I will help, assist and advise in any place whatever I shall be, and in any utmost to extirpate the heretical Protestant doctrine and to destroy all their pretended power, regal or otherwise, &c., &c., &c." I have this given a part of the Jesuits oath as found on page 23 of "The Story of the Instructions of the Jesuits." Comment is unnecessary. This society has been incorporated in the province of Quebec, and the sum of $400,000, has been paid to satisfy its unjust and illegal claims, and when Protestants are alarmed and begin an agitation in opposition to this enemy of our country they are exhorted to be quiet, and are told "that the Jesuits Act was clearly within the powers of the Quebec Legislature." Well might the moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church of Canada say:—"If the constitution of our country is so fully and un-British as to provide for an open way for aggression on our Protestant rights and liberties, then be it known that those rights and liberties are dearer to us than the Constitution." Yours, PATRIOT. OTTAWA LETTER. (From our regular correspondent.) OTTAWA, SEPT. 9. More seizures of Canadian reds in Behring Sea. The "Lily" and the "Yankee" are the latest victims of the American enterprize "fish." The "Patriot," another seizure had a prize crew of one placed on board, but she sailed for Victoria after the fashion of the Black Diamond. It is now said that the Black Diamond is owned by Americans but Mr. Powell says she is registered as a Canadian vessel with a Canadian owner. The Black Diamond is reported to have again sailed for Behring Sea and if she is the same which the American captured she will be the first of the American prize ships to be captured. The New York Herald characterizes all these proceedings as a huge farce, but it's more an international outrage. These vessels are having their business ruined and the capital invested destroyed. The absorbing question is what is Great Britain going to do about it.

THE RESULTS. To the Editor of the Advocate: The statement now going the rounds of the papers "that the law officers of the Crown, Sir Richard Webster and Sir Edward Clarke, have reported that the Governor General was right not to interfere with the operation of the Jesuits within the power of the Quebec Legislature, and that there is no cause to send to the judicial committee of the Privy Council, requires confirmation." The so-called semi-official despatches are not always reliable, and, to say the least, there are good grounds for suspicion in this case. But be the opinion of Sir Richard Webster and Sir Edward Clarke what it may, the ugly fact remains that the Jesuits Act is anti-British and as such it is an insult to all loyal Canadian patriots. History teaches that crown officers are not always the best and wisest advisers; and that sometimes their advice has brought the nation into trouble. If today those in high places can see nothing objectionable in replacing the name of the Queen by the name of the Pope of Rome in some of our "Provincial Statutes," the people should express their views in a manner unmistakable.
