Aubrey's Revenge.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

The man caught her hand and covered it with burning kisses. "We are well met," he said. "You shall help me, and I'll pay you your price. I've got plenty of money here in my pocket. Will you promise to be my friend?"

"Yes, I'll promise." "Swear!" he cried; and with a sudden movement he drew a gleaming knife from his pocket; "swear to be my friend, to do my bidding, or I'll take your life."

The girl was startled, realizing for the first time that she had a madman to deal with, but she managed to retain her self-possession, and even to smile in the man's evil face.

"Put up your knife!" she commanded quietly. "I am willing to help you. I have wrongs of my own to avenge. This man whom you pretty Kelpie is soon to marry, was my lover once. But he deserted me for her sake."

"Ha, that is good!" cried the man, bringing his hands together with a sharp report. "We are well met. By helping me, you will avenge your own wrongs, and I'll pay you handsomely in the bargain. What do you say?"

"I am ready to do your bidding," was Aubrey's prompt reply. "But the storm takes my breath here," she added. "Come with me to a place of shelter, where we can talk over this matter at our leisure."

She left the street, and went back into the Van Cortlandt grounds, the strange man following her step by step.

There was a shed attached to the rear end of the building, and in this they took shelter, and, sitting down, side by side, like old friends, they spent quite a little while in earnest, intimate, confidential talk.

When Aubrey made her way into the house some little time later, she looked like another person. She no longer seemed gloomy and downcast; her step was light, her head erect, and her eyes glowed with excitement. She had proved the truth of the old legend that when man wills the devil drives, and the vengeance for which her soul longed was within her reach.

CHAPTER XXXV.

Carroll Fitzhugh was not the happy man the world supposed him to be. His engagement to Mrs. van Cortlandt's beautiful daughter had been duly announced, and the date of the wedding was under consideration, it is true, nevertheless the expectant bridegroom had a good many secret troubles to worry him.

To begin with, there was that ugly skeleton in his closet. He was at Van Cortlandt Place a great deal, of course, paying court to his pretty fiancée, and no matter when he went, whether to make a morning call or an evening visit, he was sure to encounter Aubrey.

The girl had never passed the bounds of common civility, never approached him, nor in any way sought to remind him of the past, since that first time, but her strange gray face

Every Neuralgic Headache Cured! Use "Nerviline"—It Won't Fail

There may be a thousand pains; yet, excepting sciatica, neuralgia is the worst. Most remedies are not strong enough or penetrating enough to relieve neuralgia. You know everything you have tried has failed to give even momentary relief, and you have decided that neuralgia must be borne forever.

Do not make this mistake — try NERVILINE. Apply it to the sore spot. Notice the glow that spreads deeper and wider as Nerviline's curative power is carried further and further into the tissue. How quickly the pain is soothed! How rapidly it lessens! In a little while you and accusing eyes were a constant menace, and the young aristocrat would have sacrificed one-half of his earthly possessions to have been rid of her at once and forever.

He was puzzling his brain as to what course to pursue, when Mrs. van Cortlandt quite opportunely took the embarrassing matter out of his hands. "I am going away for a few days," she said to him one morning when he came as usual, bringing a great bunch of hothouse flowers for his betrothed, "and I want you and Kelpie to be very good children while I am away."

"Oh, we shall be sure to do that," he answered gayly. "Shan't we, sweetheart?"

Kelpie stood in the bay window, holding out a bit of sugar to her pet goldfinch. She was thinking of Pete, the green parrot, and heartily wishing herself back at New Castle Light; so her answer was not quite as pleasant as it might have been.

"I can't promise," she said. "It depends on what sort of humor I happen to be in. I never can tell, you know, until I try! But where are you going, mother?"

"To New Orleans," replied the lady. "I'm going to take Aubrey back to her old home."

Carroll's heart gave a great leap, but his handsome, high-bred face gave no sign of his inward emotion.

"Why do you persist in taking Aubrey back to New Orleans?" Kelpie demanded. "She told me, only yesterday, that she preferred to remain here."

"I don't think Aubrey always knows her own mind, dear," answered the lady gently. "Since I have made her understand that it is her duty to go, she isn't at all unwilling. The old lady, whose fortune she expects to inherit, is bedridden and needs her attention; so nothing remains but for Aubrey to go."

"Poor Aubrey, I pity her," said Kelpie, as she went skipping out of the room, with Sulp and Snap jangling their silver bells behind her, and the goldfinch perched on her wrist, taking no notice whatever of her lover or his roses.

Carroll was accustomed to the caprices of his pretty sweetheart, so he merely smiled, and Mrs. van Cortlandt went on, watching the young man covertly as she spoke:

"Yes, I shall take Aubrey to New Orleans, no matter whether she is willing or not. I regret now that I ever invited her to my house. She isn't a proper associate for my daughter. You and Aubrey were friends at one time, I believe, Carroll?"

Every nerve in the young man's body thrilled, but his fine training stood him well.

"Well, yes, we were friends, after a fashion, I met her in New Orleans during the carnival season a few years ago, but our friendship didn't amount to much. I found her rather a strange girl."

"She is, and I shall be glad when she's out of the house," said Mrs. van Cortlandt, with a long breath of relief.

"There's nothing between them," she said to herself a moment later. "I've been making mountains out of molehills, that's all. I'll take Snap-dragon along, and we'll dispose of the girl in some way. She's a killjoy in the house. I'll get her out of it to-morrow."

Alas, how many of us lay our plans for to-morrow, taking no thought of what may happen to-day!

Kelpie was dreadfully homesick that night. She had received a letter from the old keeper, and, while he had carefully avoided dropping a

"Syrup of Figs" For Constipated Child

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little stomach, liver and bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know it is a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs" which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeiters sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

hint that could in any way hurt or distress his little woman, even in his words of love and his tender prayers for her future happiness there was a tone of sad regret that went to Kelpie's heart like a knife.

"Poor old daddy; poor, dear old daddy," she sobbed. "He tries to make me believe he doesn't mind my being away, but I know he does! He's almost heartbroken. He'll get sick and die some day, and then I should never forgive myself as long as I live. I'm sorry I ever left him; I was a wretch to do such a thing, a heartless, wicked wretch, and God will never forgive me. Oh, I wish I was back in the dear old lighthouse. My heart aches for the sound of the sea. I wish I had never left my dear old home."

Barring her pretty head in the silken cushions of the sofa, Kelpie sobbed and wept as if her heart would break.

Mrs. van Cortlandt was shocked when she came to see if her daughter was becomingly attired for dinner.

"Why, my darling, my precious little daughter, what's the matter?" she cried, taking the girl in her arms and embracing her tenderly. "What has happened to grieve you? I came in to take you down to dinner, expecting to find you charming and radiant and here you are, crying like a baby, and not even dressed. My dearest tell me what has happened. Surely you and Carroll haven't been foolish enough to quarrel?"

"No, we haven't quarreled," replied Kelpie petulantly. "I don't care enough for him for that. I'm tired of the very sound of his name, and of everything else about me. I made a mistake when I came to live with you, Mrs. van Cortlandt." Suddenly Kelpie sat up, her hair in a tumble and her eyes brimming with tears.

"You've been very nice to me, and I feel like an ungrateful wretch, but the life of a grand lady doesn't suit me, and I've half a mind to run away and go back to New Castle Light."

"There's no need for you to run away, my sweet," said the lady kindly; "you shall go back whenever you like, but don't jump at conclusions, my pet. You're out of sorts this morning, and Carroll, selfish fellow, has been teasing you about naming the wedding day. I'll see that he doesn't do it again. You shan't even think of getting married."

"I don't intend ever to get married," Kelpie broke in passionately. "I'm going back to dear old daddy."

Mrs. van Cortlandt laughed indulgently.

"Very well, but don't let us talk any more about it to-night," she said, "you may change your mind, by to-morrow. May I ring for Kitty, my dear, to come and dress you for dinner?"

"I'm not going down to dinner."

"Why, my precious child, Carroll's mother and sister dine with us to-day. I invited them in honor of your engagement."

"I can't help it," said Kelpie willfully. "I'm not going down."

Mrs. van Cortlandt was at her wits' end, but she was too wise a woman to lose her temper.

"Well, I won't insist upon it, my love," she said gently. "I'll go down and make your excuses, and have your dinner brought up."

"I don't want any dinner," sobbed Kelpie. "Go away, please, and let me alone."

Mrs. van Cortlandt was extremely fond of her pretty daughter, but at that moment she could have boxed her ears with all the pleasure in life.

However, she bent down and kissed her, instead, and when she had thrown a silken slumber robe over the girl's shoulders, she left the room and went down to make up matters as well as she could with her guests.

She had scarcely gone when the side door of Kelpie's room opened softly and Aubrey looked in.

"Are you asleep?" she asked.

"No," answered Kelpie, raising her head. "What do you want?"

"I'm going away to-morrow, and I want to say good-by," said Aubrey.

"Besides, I've got something to tell you. May I come in a moment?"

"Yes."

Aubrey entered and Kelpie sat up and put back her tumbled chair.

"I've been having a good cry," she said, drying her eyes.

"What about?" demanded Aubrey.

"Because I'm homesick, and because I want to go back to my friends."

"Why, how funny! I've just been crying because I've got to go away," said Aubrey.

"It seems too bad for them to send you away."

"So it does, but it can't be helped."

"Well, I hope you'll come back some day. But what is it you've got to tell me?"

Aubrey's strange eyes glowed as she took a folded paper from her bosom.

"I've got a letter for you," she said. "Here it is."

Kelpie took the paper and, unfolding it, glanced over the pencilled lines, which ran as follows:

My Dear Kelpie: I have tried to see you, but Mrs. van Cortlandt has refused me admittance. I bring a message from your grandfather. If you care to receive it meet me on the corner of Myrtle Avenue at nine o'clock sharp. I have some important news to tell you besides.

Yours faithfully, TOM.

"Tom here!" cried Kelpie, her hands trembling, and a vivid color rushing to her cheeks. "Dear old Tom! Oh, I must see him!"

She sprang to her feet excitedly, and ran across the room to look at the clock.

"It isn't time yet," said Aubrey, who was watching her curiously.

"Nine o'clock, the man said."

"Why, did you see him? Did you speak to him?" she cried eagerly.

"Yes, I saw him," Aubrey replied. "(To be Continued.)"

OFFICIAL.

LONDON, APRIL 7.—The Russian Government has announced successful progress between Laborez and Uznk, and the capture of twenty-five officers, more than a thousand men and three guns. It reports pursuit of the German army by the British Expeditionary Force, on April 3rd.

The French Government has announced the capture of three successful attacks of trenches southeast of St. Etienne. Precise information has been received by the French military authorities that the British air-raid on the 26th resulted in serious damage to airship and shed; the destruction of two submarines and damaged a third at the Hoboken yards.

ZEEBRUGGE BOMBARDMENT. AMSTERDAM, APRIL 7.—A squadron of British warships lying off the German naval base of Zebrugge to prevent submarines from entering or leaving. On the day evening the warships sunk Zebrugge to a terrific bomb. On Sunday the Germans effected a resumption of the attack, but ships cruised off the coast, and renewed the fire. A Silesia dispatch to the Telegraf says that prisoners are being made in Belgium by withdrawal of great masses of armed troops for the Eastern front. It is expected they will be replaced by recruits that have been drilled in Germany for four months.

OCCUPY WARMBAD. CAPE TOWN, APRIL 7.—Troops of the Union of South Africa have occupied Warmbad, in German South West Africa, 100 miles north of the Orange, without opposition. An announcement to this effect was made to-day.

THE FRENCH ARTILLERY.

PARIS, via St. Pierre, April 5. A recent official note alludes to the great efficacy of the fire of French artillery due to new discoveries, and today the "Eclair" publishes the following extract from one of our soldier's letters: "We were ordered to capture three lines of German trenches and we were looking forward to a hot engagement. The preliminary cannonading was terrifying, the atmosphere seemed all on fire. Then came the signal of the assault. As we were charging we were surprised not to be received by the usual hail of bullets. On reaching the first trench we stopped thunderstruck, the trench was full of corpses, not one wounded. In a corner the soldier who was operating the quick firer was standing chained to his gun also dead. We took possession successively of the second and third trench, everywhere the same silence, the same annihilation. On whole front rain and mist all day. In Ailly Wood, southeast of St. Mihiel, we captured three consecutive lines of trenches, and we also gained a foothold in a portion of the enemy defense works northeast of Regueville en Haye.

The Queen and the Army.

BOVRIL IN THE TRENCHES.

The following letter from the Queen has been received by Miss Gladys Storey, daughter of Mr. George A. Storey, R.A., in connexion with her work for soldiers in the trenches:—

Dear Miss Storey,—The Queen has read your letter to Lady Smith-Dorrien, and is greatly interested to hear about the cases of Bovril which you are sending to the front for the use of our soldiers in the trenches.

Her Majesty can fully realize how acceptable and comforting your gift must prove, especially during this cold and stormy weather, and she heartily congratulates you on the happy thought which prompted you to initiate such a useful project.—Yours sincerely, E. W. WALLINGTON.

"Through the generosity of the public," writes Miss Storey, "I have been enabled to send sufficient Bovril to provide over 42,000 cups, which has been very much appreciated by our soldiers in the trenches. I am most anxious to dispatch, as soon as possible, a further supply of 1,000,000 cups of this comfort to the front, and I shall be very grateful to those who will help me to do so by sending a donation to me at 29, Broadhurst-gardens, South Hampstead, N.K. The entire profits derived from the sale of "The Lord Roberts Post Card" (containing his address to recruits and a facsimile of his handwriting) are devoted to my fund, and I shall be pleased to forward 12 of these cards on receipt of 1s. postal order, and a stamped addressed envelope."

Mid-Week Change.

The mid-week change at the Nickel Theatre is one that will afford the greatest pleasure to all patrons.

There are two two-reel films: "A Bit of Human Driftwood" by the Biograph artists is one of the finest ever presented in the city. The acting is of the highest quality, and the story is one which leaves an impression which will not soon be forgotten. "The Battle of the Weak" by the Vitagraph players is also a beautiful picture. The Romance players are seen in a grand story: "The Escape of Blue Pete."

Mr. Cameron will be heard in his great vocal success of Monday night. Everyone should make an effort to see to-day's show.

Metal and black laces appear on the more formal evening dresses.

Opening of the Legislature.

This afternoon at three o'clock, His Excellency the Governor opens the Legislature. Some of the soldiers in training for the reserve company of the Newfoundland Regiment, who are available in the city will form a guard of honor.

As was anticipated the Governor's Speech is largely taken up with the Great War, and what Newfoundland has been doing since the war was called upon to do as a Dominion of the Empire. Foremost among the latter is the making of provision to aid those who may be financially disabled on Active Service from earning their livelihood, and for the dependents of those who fall on the field of battle. This is a debt of honor incumbent on those for whom our brave soldiers and sailors have offered to sacrifice their all.

In spite of the extraordinary addition to taxation made twelve months ago, the Governor's Speech declares that the Revenue for the fiscal year ending in June 30th last showed a deficit. As the fiscal year terminates before there was any expectation of the outbreak of war, the deficit can in no way be attributed to it. It is attributable directly to the policy of extravagance, which has been so justly condemned by the Opposition during the past six years and the rushing into vast obligations without counting the cost. It is the natural result of blind financing.

What is far more serious is that a policy which could not pay its way in the height of prosperity has been brought to a sharp turn by the additional difficulties and surprises of the war, and it will be no surprise to the public to learn of the Government's admission that "even a greater shortage is apprehended than was anticipated at the time of the last June was a quarter of a million dollars. We would not be surprised to find a shortage of three quarters of a million in current account next June. The Government announce that they intend to utilize the Cash Reserve to reduce this adverse balance. This will wipe out the Half Million Dollars Sir Robert Bond husbanded so carefully. But this will not suffice, the Government propose to add to the taxation so greatly increased last spring and further increases in September, by new taxation. The Speech also foreshadows considerable curtailment in the grants of supplies. Little reference is made to other legislation, but the handy annual crops up as usual. The Government are negotiating with a corporation for the establishment of a large industry in the interior. Rumor says it is to extract nitrogen from the air for the manufacture of explosives.

THE GOVERNOR'S SPEECH.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly: The great War in which our Empire is engaged, and which, in order to provide for the Colony's participation therein, compelled your being convoked in Extraordinary Session last September, still continues. The progress of the struggle has been such that it is to give Britons cause for pride in the achievements of the Naval and Military forces of the Empire, and the splendid spirit of union, and co-operation manifested towards the Mother Country by the Dominions beyond the Seas. Equally, however, the events have been such as to establish beyond doubt that Victory will in time crown the arms of Britain and the Allies, and secure to the world not alone a lasting peace, but also a protection against the unprovoked ambition of militarist cliques in countries which have defied the civilizing spirit of the present age.

Under the terms of the measure enacted by you at the Special Session, enlistment of a force for military service abroad was proceeded with. It is a source of gratification to me, as it must be to you, that the response to the call for volunteers proved so large that the original number proposed was speedily doubled, and now stands fair shortly to be trebled. Final honour has been paid to the Newfoundland Regiment by the Imperial authorities, and all accounts agree that the men who have gone forward are doing credit to themselves and their country; while it is almost needless to express the confident belief that when their period of training is completed, and they undertake active service, they will acquire themselves in a manner that will leave nothing to be desired.

Concurrently with the creation of this force, the enlargement of the Newfoundland Naval Reserve, which my Ministers engaged to increase from Six Hundred to One Thousand men, was carried on, and it is equally satisfactory to know that the number was duly enrolled, and additions to this body are still being made. In this branch of our fighting force the Colony has already paid a substantial toll in human life, through the loss of three of His Majesty's ships containing complements of our men, but the relatives of those who have given their lives in the defence of the Empire will have the satisfaction of knowing that the sympathy of their fellow-countrymen goes out to them in the fullest measure, and may well be proud that in the greatest crisis in the history of the British race, sons of the Oldest Colony were found ready doing their duty, and sacrificing life itself beside their brothers of the parent Land, and kindred Dominions.

You will be invited to consider a measure to provide financial assistance towards the maintenance of those who suffer partial or total disablement while on active service, or to the dependents of those who lose their lives while so engaged. To this measure I am sure you will give your most generous and sympathetic consideration.

It is gratifying to observe that private philanthropy has already beneenlisted with highly beneficial results on behalf of those whose ordinary sources of income are impaired or cut off by the absence of their breadwinners at the front, and in this respect the generous contributions towards the Patriotic Fund attest anew the liberality of the people of Newfoundland, while the efforts of the Women's Patriotic Association on behalf of the sick and wounded in the War, and for the provision of comforts for our own forces, deserve equally favourable notice. Their self and self-sacrificing efforts will, I am satisfied, rank among the very best achieved by the women of any portion of the Empire.

The Colony, in common with the other portions of the Empire, has suffered in its Trade and Commerce, as the result of the War, but it is reassuring to remember that the fears entertained at the outbreak of hostilities, as to the possible dislocation of our business enterprises and the marketing of our staple products, have been dispelled and that, during the past half year, the prices realized for our codfish have been among the very best on record.

The unfavourable outlook of the Sea Fishery this year is to be regretted, but there is this cause for comparative satisfaction, that the early part of the year, the prices realized for our codfish have been among the very best on record. The prospect before our people for a profitable prosecution of the Cod and other fisheries of the Colony was never better, and there would seem to be therefore especially good ground for belief that all those who will engage in fishing operations the present season will reap a liberal fruit of their labour.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly:

The Revenue for the past fiscal year showed a deficit the result of the depression which had been manifesting itself for sometime previously in Newfoundland, as well as in other parts of the world. This condition of affairs was rendered more acute by the outbreak of the War, and for the current fiscal year an even greater shortage is apprehended. Towards reducing this adverse balance my Ministers propose to utilize the Cash Reserve provided for such emergencies, and proposals will be submitted to you for dealing with the amount which will remain to be liquidated.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly: In July last His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught paid his promised visit to the Colony. He called at Bay St. John's, St. John's, and everywhere met with a most enthusiastic reception. In this City he took part in several important functions, and his visit will long be remembered, and will, I trust, be but the forerunner of others which may follow in the not distant future from other members of the Royal Family.

As you are aware, a Royal Commission, appointed by His Majesty, for the purpose of enquiring into and reporting upon the natural Resources of the self-governing Dominions, has been pursuing its investigations for the past three years, and during last season visited Newfoundland in pursuance of this task. The Commissioners held sittings in St. John's and took evidence in regard to our resources and industries, and also visited Bell Island, and the centres of the Paper Industry in the Exploits Valley. The Report of the Commission has recently been issued, and I trust will prove not alone of interest but of profit to the Colony.

In response to a request by my Ministers that the Fishery Board of Scotland would place at their disposal the services of one of its experts to enquire into and report upon the fishery possibilities of the Colony, one of its inspectors was despatched here in the early months of 1914, and spent some weeks amongst us closely observing our fishery methods and the habits of the various fishes that resort our shores. His report, a copy of which will be laid before you, will probably appeal strongly to those interested in the fishing industry, and may, I trust, form a basis for practical action at your hands.

As announced to you a year ago, Professor Wyndham R. Dunstan, the head of the Imperial Institute in London, was invited to undertake such an examination of the Colony's mineral wealth as was possible during such time as he could spend in the Colony, and he devoted several weeks to this mission last year, visiting different parts of the island and studying the mineral formations. The intervention of the War has delayed his report thereon, but I am hopeful that it will be received in time to allow of its being submitted to you before the present session closes, and I feel confident it will prove of no small value in assisting all to arrive at an estimate of Newfoundland's possibilities as a mineral producing country.

A year ago a Joint Committee of both branches of the Legislature undertook an investigation of Fishery problems of pressing importance, but, being unable to complete the work before the session closed, the gentleman composing it were appointed a Commission under the Great Seal to continue their labours and report at the present session. That report will be laid before you in due course, and you will be asked to give effect by enactments to the recommendations contained therein.

Under the authority of the Act passed at the Special Session, a Commission was appointed to enquire into and report upon the circumstances attending the death of members of the crew of the steamer "Newfoundland" and the loss of the steamer "Southern Cross" and her whole crew; the manner of prosecuting the Seal fishery,

TO INCREASE THE NUMBER OF SENATORS TO A MAXIMUM OF 104. Ottawa, March 24.—Sir Robert Borden has given notice of a resolution in the form of an address to the King for an amendment to the constitution. It asks that the British North America Act, 1867, be amended, first, to increase the number of senators from seventy-two to ninety-six. Although seventy-two was the number fixed in 1867, there have been several increases since up to the present total of eighty-seven. The amendment will thus provide an increase of nine. The nine will be made up by increasing the representation of Manitoba from four to six; of Saskatchewan from four to six; of Alberta from four to six, and of British Columbia from three to six.

It is proposed that the divisions of Canada in relation to the constitution of the senate be increased from three to four—the fourth to comprise the western provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. The eastern divisions will be Ontario, Quebec and the maritime provinces each with twenty-four, and the new western division will also have twenty-four, the representation in the senate by provinces being: Ontario 24 Quebec 24 Nova Scotia 10 New Brunswick 10 Prince Edward Island 4 Manitoba 6 Saskatchewan 6 Alberta 6 British Columbia 6

Another change asked for will increase the number of persons whom, by section 26 of the B. N. A., the governor-in-council, by direction of the king, may add to the senate. The number is now three to six. It is proposed to raise it to four or eight, with the old provision that no new appointments be added until the various divisions get back to their limit of twenty-four each.

The address asks that the number of senators do not at any time exceed 104. It proposes that if Newfoundland be admitted into confederation it have six senators instead of four as provided in 1867. This would bring the constitution of the senate up to a 102 with a maximum of 110 possible through eight extra appointments.

Lecture Night

For S. U. F. at British Hall.

Last night was lecture night for St. John's Lodge, No. 5, S. U. F. The British Hall was the scene of the event and a large gathering of members and their friends were in evidence. After the opening hymn was sung, a lecture on "Some Incidents and Humours of the War" was given by Mr. W. H. Goodland, P. M., who read a lengthy periodical, elucidating the reasons and objects of British participation in the great struggle and emphasized how imperative it was for all of us British subjects to assist in upholding the honour of the flag. Bro. J. C. Phillips, G. S., then treated the audience with a reading, coupling some German Chants of Hate and the British poems to the contrary. The next speaker was Bro. George House, P.M., who took as his subject "Character Sketches of Some Great Leaders," reviewing in an interesting and instructive manner the careers of Roberts, Kitchener, French, Jellicoe, Fisher, Lloyd George and Winston Churchill. Bro. Ed. Spurrell treated the audience to a recitation followed by Mr. J. S. Curlew, P. M., giving an address on "The Origin of the Flag," outlining the union of England, Ireland and Scotland. Combined their crosses constituted the Union Jack.

Following the rendition of the Lodge Ode, a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the various speakers for their entertaining discourses, after which the entire gathering joined in singing the National Anthem.

Oriental Off.

After many weeks of weary waiting in anxiety and hopeless expectation of getting away, the thirty-three stranded Chinese seaman of the ill-fated Desola secured a passage on the Red Cross liner Stephano, which sailed at 3.30 p.m. yesterday. The Chinese will be brought to New York where they will be handed over to the British Consul who will send them to Liverpool whence they first came.

AMBULANCE CALL.—The ambulance was called out last evening and conveyed to the General Hospital a man named O'Reilly, who was suffering from acute pneumonia.

Man Who Feeds Our Army.

General Sir William Robertson, D. S. O., is the man who feeds Tommy Atkins. He is on the Staff of the Quartermaster General, Sir John Cowans, his special work being to see that the men who are doing the fighting for us have plenty to eat and drink.

He is the ideal man for the job, for he has been in the ranks himself, and therefore knows just what is appreciated and wanted by the men. He does not work on theories, but from practical experience, which doubtless accounts for the almost entire lack of grumbling about the food served out in the trenches.

The story of Sir William Robertson's career reads more like fiction than fact. It is the story of a young man who would get to the top of the tree.

Born in Lincolnshire fifty-six years ago, he began life as a man-servant. The prospect of being a lackey did not satisfy him, however, and so he "chucked his job" as Kipling would say, and joined the Army.

He was nineteen when he enlisted in the 16th Lancers, and it took him just ten years to rise from the ranks to the dignity of a commission in the 3rd Dragoon Guards. Other men have done it—Sir Hector Macdonald and Major-General Sir Luke O'Connor, V. C., for example—but the achievement is comparatively rare and only possible to a man of exceptional determination and ability or of very conspicuous bravery in war.

At the time of the South African War he held his captaincy, and coming safely through this he went rapidly on, gaining promotion step by step. His work against the Boers was the same vital work as this war—providing Tommy's "tommy"—and the manner in which he organised the commissariat was regarded as quite wonderful.

The appointment as Commandant of the Staff College, one of the plumes of the Service, was the War Office's reward to him for his services in South Africa, but what must have been equally gratifying to him was the entire and whole-hearted congratulations of the men and officers it had been up to him to look after in the matter of meals.

General Robertson gained his D.S. O. for his work in the Chitral Expedition. Sir John French has, in one of his dispatches, already "mentioned" him for what he has done and is doing for our troops now fighting side by side with the French and Belgians.

They Learned the Trick

The readiness with which the Indian troops adapt themselves to the altered conditions of modern warfare, is the subject of a letter from Count D'Hincourt, who is with the British forces in France. He says:

In their first encounter, the Indians impudently made frontal attacks, ignoring the obstacles, and throwing themselves on the enemy. But they quickly learned the formidable character of the defence of modern warfare. This resulted in the restraint of their natural ardor, and the use of the inventive genius of Oriental cunning.

"Recently, in a valley bristling with traps and snares, they showed their adaptiveness. It was a night black as ink. Without waiting for the word of command, the Gurkhas crept forward toward the enemy's line. The wind drowned the silent noise, as they moved along the ground, and the darkness hid them. They advanced a long line which extended the whole length of the opposing trenches.

"Arriving at the barbed wire, or which the Germans had placed small bells and other means of warning they cut one by one, using remarkable skill and care making no noise to disturb the enemy."

"As soon as they had finished their work they returned to their own trenches. They explained to the subadar (captain) that the barbed wire now offered no resistance, and after a rapid inquiry, the British did not hesitate to take part in the adventure.

"An Indian lieutenant gave some orders in a low voice. A slight grating noise was audible from one side of the trench to the other; the men were fixing their bayonets. The officer by a silent signal, gave the order to advance.

"The Indians threw themselves on the ground, planting their kukris silently in the soil so as to draw themselves along. The British followed on bended knees, listening intently.

"When they came to the enemy's trenches the Gurkhas threw themselves against the stakes, which were no longer protected by the barbed wire barricades, and leaped like demons into the trenches.

"In the morning, as a feeble ray of sun filtered timidly through the grey clouds, one could see the British seated on the edge of the newly captured trench, smoking their pipes, while the impassive Gurkhas draped in their woollen bannes, dreamed of fresh nocturnal expeditions and new victories."

New York, March 30.—Under the title "Kultur at its meridian," the New York Herald this morning, after quoting one of the survivors of the British steamer Falaba as saying: "I saw part of the submarine's crew actually laughing at us. The submarine finally dived and disappeared," thus comments editorially:

"Great joy in the halls of 'Kultur.' One hundred and eighteen non-combatants, some of them women, ruthlessly murdered, on the high sea. It is the deed!" The World declares it is not war but murder, adding:

"It rouses the pity of the neutral world for the helpless victims and abhorrence for men in high command who order murder done. The higher policy of the war as waged in Berlin, began with a gigantic blunder in the invasion of neutral Belgium. It is continuing it with another in decreasing the deliberate slaughter of men of defenceless women and children."

Billy's Mother's Lesson.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

The little boy who was born disorderly had received a very severe talking to. He was told among other things that he must NOT leave his rubbers in the kitchen where the cook would find them. He MUST put them in the clothes closet.

Two weeks and three days later, his mother met him with a frown. "You've left your rubbers in the kitchen again," she said. "I am very much disappointed in you, son. You know you promised to do better."

"But I did do better," retorted Billy. "Just think how long I haven't left them there, and you never said anything about that."—the sentence struck a chord of self-questioning in his mother's heart.

Whereupon, Billy, who, like most boys, could appreciate a square deal, threw his arms about his mother's neck and answered in a voice that pierced her ears but sounded good to her heart, "So will I."

Could Your Child Avenge You?
I wonder if there aren't a great many mothers who could think over Billy's lesson with advantage. Could your little son or daughter justly accuse you—"You never said anything about that?"

Do you remember to blame the failures and forget to praise the attempts to do better?

Some parents object to rewards. They say the children should obey because that is their duty and not for rewards. They expect more of the little folks than most big folks can attain—that is to do duty entirely for duty's sake and not because they hope for happiness thereby.

The Firm that Praised and the Firm that Didn't.

The big world is full of rewards as well as punishments. Why should their little world be different?

I read the other day of two salesmen who brought in a week of record business to their respective firms. One firm telegraphed congratulations; the other made no acknowledgment. The first man stayed with his firm until he went into business for himself; the second left at the first opportunity. Moreover the first firm grew and thrived; the second went down hill.

Enough said.

HOW NEUVE CHAPELLE WAS TAKEN—ENEMY'S HEAVY LOSS.

London.—The Press Bureau issued the following statement:—

The Field-Marshal Commanding the British Forces in the field reports as follows:—

(1) Since my last communique the situation on our front between Armentieres and La Bassee has been materially altered by successful initiative on the part of the troops engaged.

(2) Shortly after eight a.m. on March 10th these troops assaulted and carried the German trenches in the neighbourhood of Neuve Chapelle. The co-operation between the artillery of all natures and the Infantry was very good, with the result that the losses incurred were not in proportion to the results achieved.

(3) The mutual support which individual battalions afforded each other during the operations was a marked feature of the attack.

(4) Our heavy artillery was very effective. Apart from observed results, prisoners' statements confirm the accuracy of our fire and the damage caused by it.

(5) Before noon we had captured the whole of the village of Neuve Chapelle and our Infantry at once proceeded to confirm and extend the local advantage gained. By dusk the whole labyrinth of trenches on a front of about 4,000 yards was in our hands, and we had established ourselves about 1,200 yards beyond the enemy's advanced trenches. The number of German prisoners captured during the day was 750. There are probably more to come in.

(6) During the 11th inst., the enemy made repeated efforts to recover the ground he had lost. All his counter attacks have been repulsed with heavy loss. We continue to make steady progress.

Hard fighting is still going on.

(7) The local initiative displayed by our troops daily is admirable and says much for the spirit which animates the army. The success achieved on the 10th and 11th is a striking example of this spirit.

Since the foregoing was written the following further information has been received from General Headquarters:—

During the night 11th-12th, and early morning several counter attacks were easily repulsed by the 4th Corps and the Indian Corps with heavy losses to the enemy. Sixty prisoners were captured in a night attack. Also the village of L'Epinette was captured by the 3rd Corps with slight loss.

Mist and fog prevail, and hinder operations.

He had tried. There was no doubt of that. And he had done better. Yet true enough, she had never said a word until he had slipped. Was that the way to help a boy who was struggling against a tendency that seemed to be born in him, she asked herself? Being one of those rare people who are honest with themselves, she answered, "No." And being that even rarer personage, a mother who is willing to acknowledge to her children that she is not omniscient, she said to Billy, "You're right, Billy. I guess I didn't say anything about what you did. I waited until you didn't. I'll do better next time."

LONDON BUDGET—ALLIES IN THE WEST MARK TIME—WAIT RESULT OF BIG RUSSIAN MOVEMENT IN CARPATHIANS—KITCHENER APPOINT COMMITTEE TO OBTAIN LABOR TO MAKE ALL MUNITIONS WANTED.

LONDON, To-day. Although the French are conducting a sustained and a somewhat formidable offensive between the Meuse and Moselle in the effort to dislodge the Germans from St. Mihiel, the Southernmost point of their line, the demeanor of the allied armies indicates a disposition to await the outcome of the Russian gigantic plan to force the Carpathian barrier. Germany is thought to be pouring troops into Hungary even to the extent of weakening her forces in Flanders, and to-night's Austrian official communication notes the presence and recounts the success of German and Austrian troops in Laborez Valley. There is less talk in England of a spring advance of the Allies in France and Belgium, and an increasing appreciation of the task Russia is attempting. This leads to the belief in some quarters that the leaders of the Allied armies in the West, reckoning on the heavy cost incident to smashing the German line there, may perhaps seek only to hold their ground in the belief that the Russians will succeed in invading Hungary and ultimately join hands with the Allied forces working northward through Serbia. Thus what their opponents regard as the weakest of the Teutonic allies, Austria-Hungary would be invaded without the less of the attempt to drive the Germans from France and Belgium would entail. Meanwhile, it is argued the bombardment of the Dardanelles will be continued as the shortest if most costly method of crushing Turkey.

Reports that Smyrna has again been bombarded, lack official confirmation, and the absence of news from the Dardanelles is taken by some to mean that important operations are under way, details of which will subsequently be made known. British forces are occupying Warmond, German South West Africa, is officially announced, and have taken what is considered the Southern capital and terminus of the railway system. Excluding active military operations, the questions of munition and alcohol dominating the public mind in Britain. Lord Kitchener, Secretary for War, took an important step to-night by the appointment of a committee whose duty it shall be to round up labor sufficient to produce munitions, commensurate with the tremendous demand, and the temperance agitation will doubtless have the effect of increasing productivity of labor in general. What the Government proposes to do with the liquor problem will probably be not disclosed until Parliament reassembles on April 14th, but the idea of general prohibition just at present is not seriously entertained. The authorities seem to hope that the desired results will be obtained by further restrictions on saloons. Bulgaria and Serbia have exchanged notes which on the surface appear to end the recent border incidents. Official Serbian circles in London insist that the First outbreak was entered from Belgrade, and that Austrians as well as Turks were found among the dead raiders.

THE PROHIBITION PROPOSALS.

LONDON, To-day. Earl Grey, former Governor-General of Canada, states his family and practically the whole parish of Hewick, Northumberland, have followed the example of the King, promising to abstain from intoxicants during the period of the war. Lloyd George has been the recipient of many sacks of letters from people petitioning him to proceed with prohibition legislation. The Government is endeavoring to probe the national sentiment through various channels such as magistrates and ministers.

GERMAN CASUALTIES.

PARIS, To-day. The Press Bureau of the War Office gave out to-day figures compiled from different official German lists of losses of German officers. Out of 480 Generals in the time of peace, 43 have been killed, 57 are wounded or missing; out of 33,154 infantry officers, 8,604 have been killed, 18,149 wounded or missing; out of 7,063 cavalry officers, 906 have been killed, 811 wounded or missing; out of 12,108 artillery officers, 912 have been killed and 2,254 wounded or missing. The grand total of officers of the German army at the beginning of the war including men in active service, reserve and Landwehr was 52,805, out of which up to March 15th, 9,925 have been killed, 21,252 wounded or missing. This makes the total losses 31,177. This shows that of the grand total of losses among the officers of the German army of more than half their number on the day of the declaration of war.

SUPERMAN APPOINTED.

HUNS KILL PRIEST AND 12 WOMEN IN CHURCH.

LONDON, To-day. The Daily Telegraph correspondent in Boulogne wires that during a religious service on Sunday afternoon, a Taube dropped bombs on a Neukirk church near Ypres. A large congregation was present. Besides numerous cases of injuries, twelve women were killed outright. Abbe Reynaert, who was preaching, was hit by flying debris and was so badly hurt that he died from his injuries a few hours later.

RUSSIANS DESTROY TURKISH SQUADRON.

PETROGRAD, To-day. Six Turkish ships of war and one big transport have been sunk, and two of the finest cruisers in the Sultan's navy have been badly damaged in the Black Sea operations according to an official announcement from the Russian Admiralty.

MANIACAL FIGHT IN CARPATHIANS.

PETROGRAD, To-day. Reinforcements of German infantry and artillery have reached the Austro-German armies in the Carpathians, and fighting in Beskid ranges south of Dukla and Lupkov Passes has grown into a combat of maniacal fury. Field Marshal Von Hindenburg has sent a group of his most trusted officers to help direct movements of the Austro-German troops. Russian troops are pouring through Rostock Pass, the last mountain in the defile captured by forces of Grand Duke Nicholas, the Russian Commander in Chief.

The Queen Elizabeth.

Washington, March 24.—Naval experts say that while it would be out of the question for the Queen Elizabeth to fire her main battery continuously for one hour, since she could not carry the amount of ammunition for that period, it would cost $1,250,000 for the British super-dreadnought to accomplish such a feat. Said one officer to-night: "Knowing the rate of firing and the cost per shot, any one can tell what it would cost Great Britain to amuse herself by speeding up the Queen Elizabeth. Each of the big guns on that vessel can fire three shots a minute. A single shot costs $1,000. That would be $3,000 a minute for one gun and $24,000 a minute for the Elizabeth's eight 15-inch guns. Thus the total cost in firing at that rate for an hour would be $1,440,000. And this does not take into consideration the cost of ammunition for the secondary battery.

Germany's Dum-Dum Charges Not Proved.

Washington Isn't Convinced such Bullets are Shipped from United States. Washington, March 23.—For the second time an unfavorable report has been made by the United States Government regarding charges brought by the German Embassy that American manufacturers are making dum-dum bullets for the use of the allied forces.

The German Embassy has received from the State Department a long statement, the result of an examination of evidence and exhibits submitted by the embassy to the Department. The conclusion stated in the report is that the evidence and exhibits submitted do not constitute proof of the charge that bullets of the kind mentioned are being made in this country for sale to any of the belligerents. Officers engaged at arsenals in supervision of the manufacture of bullets were called upon to make a careful examination of the sample bullets submitted. The result merely confirmed what was stated in an earlier report to the German Ambassador, that nothing had been shown to establish the charge that American manufacturers have been making such bullets for use in the war. It is hoped by officials of this Government that this exhaustive report will close the matter. There is nothing to prevent the individual soldier from converting an ordinary bullet into a cruel bullet.

No stock is taken in Government circles regarding the charges and counter-charges of the belligerents with respect to the use of dum-dum bullets by their enemies. It is believed these charges have been the result of the credulity of persons ever ready to believe the worst of their enemies.

To Block Kiel Canal.

Story That Fleet of Dummy Warships is on Way.

New York, March 25.—When the White Star liner Lapland arrived here she reported that a dummy fleet of dummy warships said to have been constructed at Belfast under the direction of Capt. H. J. Haddock, Royal Naval Reserve, had sailed from that port on a secret mission. The rumor was that the British Admiralty intended to use them for blocking the Kiel Canal.

These vessels are old steamships bought from the merchant service, and includes ships like the Campania, Oruba and Orstava, which have been fitted with dummy funnels, wooden turrets and guns, and their holds filled with cement to lower them in the water. This will make them torpedo proof, it is explained, because owing to the hardness of the cement a torpedo exploding would only rip a plate off in the hull. An outside belting of cement has been added to the hulls of these dummy warships to protect the engines and boilers.

The fleet has been manned entirely by volunteers, as it is a hazardous undertaking, and the captains are mostly retired rear admirals from the British navy who have volunteered for the war and have received commissions as captains in the Royal Navy reserve.

It is probable that Rear-Admiral W. J. Grogan, whose death by drowning was reported from London by cablegram on Thursday, was a captain of one of these dummy warships, which would account for the reticence on the part of the Admiralty in giving out particulars of the fatality.

CHIMNEY FIRE.

At 12:30 p.m. to-day an alarm of fire was sent in from Box 226, bringing the Central and Western Companies to a house at the head of Carter's Hill. Soot igniting in the chimney caused the fire, which was extinguished with the assistance of the firemen. No damage was done.

FINE DOLLAR.—A trifling assault case was heard before His Honor Judge Knight, this forenoon, in which the defendant was fined one cent and costs. A man named Merrills was summoned to court by a boy named Earles. Both lived on the North Battery Road. The evidence showed that Merrills caught the plaintiff throwing stones at his house during the night time and gave him a beating. The Judge upheld that there was provocation for the assault, and put the minimum fine, as mentioned, on the defendant.

SIR ARTHUR PAGET'S MISSION A SUCCESS.

Rome, April 1.—General Sir Arthur Paget, head of the British military mission which recently was in Russia and visited the capital of the Balkan States on a special mission to arouse sympathy in favor of the Allies, has arrived in Rome. He is said to be of the opinion that the moment has come when the Allies are entirely favorable to the Allies; Great Britain, France and Russia can agree on terms of settlement, if it were not difficult to reconstruct the Balkans.

Obituary.

HUGH REDDY. With regret we record the passing of a well known business man of Marytown in the person of Mr. Hugh Reddy, the senior partner of the firm of Reddy Bros., whose death occurred at Marytown yesterday morning. The deceased was in his 49th year, and had been suffering from a serious illness for about three years past. He visited the city in December last on his usual business trip, and shortly after returning to his home was seen to be gradually failing, as he had learned that his disease was beyond medical skill. For about three weeks previous to his death he had been a great sufferer and the end came as a happy release. Hugh Reddy was the son of the late Richard Reddy of Burin, and in his earlier days worked with the firm of Morris, a flourishing business in Burin in the early eighties. Some twenty years ago he went to Marytown where he gradually built up a business that at present stands in the front rank of its kind on the southwest coast. He is survived by a widow, six children, two brothers and two sisters, to all of whom the Telegram extends sincere sympathy. Mr. Reddy was an enthusiastic member of Terra Nova Council, Knights of Columbus, and to-day the flag is at half-mast on Columbus Hall as a tribute to the memory of the deceased.

McMardo's Store News.

WEDNESDAY, April 7, '15. To the man who feels in need of a refreshing drink, our Soda Fountain is a real boon. A glass of ordinary Soda—fruit flavor say—or of Coca Cola or of Grape Juice, with or without favoring of Soda water, will give just the fillip that is needed. If something a little heavier is needed, try a malted milk with or without an egg. This will give just enough to keep one going till the next meal, and that without destroying the appetite. All our Syrups are pure and of first class quality. Prices 5, 10 and 15 cents each.

For the present month keep a pot of Cream of Lilies beside your eye, and you will find it very useful during the period of cold winds that we seem always to get in the month of April. Price 25c. a pot.

PONDEROUS PERSONAGES — RAYMOND POINCARÉ.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Slivash." Raymond Poincaré is a quiet Frenchman who does not seem to have much to do in these tumultuous European days. He is almost the only Frenchman who is out of a job. While millions of his countrymen are fighting in the trenches and other millions are doing double work at home he is condemned to a life of luxurious idleness. All he has to do is to be president of France.

Being President of France is like being Vice-President of the United States. It is a sort of honorary interment, wished upon some patriotic citizen. The King of England, the Emperor of Germany and the Czar of Russia are all extremely busy these days with army matters. But if President Poincaré were to wander into the trenches and order an army to advance on the foe he would be slapped on the wrist and sent back to Paris with a warning. France doesn't trust a president any more than she trusts a King. When we elect a president we turn the government over to him and only ask him to present a message once a year and tell us the results. But when France elects a president she moves him into a large Palace, provides him with plenty of food and uniforms and asks him kindly to shut up and play dead for seven years.

Before Poincaré was president he was a very powerful man. He was Premier of France and could run everything in the country. It was a severe blow to step down from this proud place and become a President but he was patriotic and did it. He is the most president France has had, but that isn't saying much. He is about as much president as Mr. Tumulty of Washington.

M. Poincaré is 55 years old and was born in Bar le Duc, where gooseberries come from. He was a cabinet minister at 33 and has been something important ever since until he got into the presidency. He has been a Senator. He is a member of the Academy. He has filled places in several cabinets. He is an author of note. He is still comparatively young and it is believed that when he gets out of the Elysee palace he will obtain some public position and endeavour to rise again to power. Still he has a long time to wait. French presidents serve, however, and do not get any time off for good behaviour.

TO-NIGHT'S CONCERT. — Under the auspices of the St. Mary's Young Men's Association, a concert will be held at St. Mary's Hall, Southside, to-night.

Strange Conduct of the Government.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—I noticed by last night's Government organ that the "Address in Reply" is to be moved and seconded in the House to-day by Messrs. Downey and Parsons. This, I think is the first time in our history that a paid member of the Government and a paid official of the House have been called upon to perform such duties. How can one expect any independent thought or expression to emanate from such sources? Is it possible that the Government had to resort to these men? I may be told that Mr. Devereux proposed the address in reply in the War Session and there is precedent for it. Quite true, but even two blacks do not make a white, and last session being an extraordinary one there may be some excuse for calling upon an orator of the fame of Mr. Downey. I regard this action of the Government an offence against common decency, and I hope the Opposition will not fall to say what they think about it. Yours truly, An Ex-MEMBER.

Handsome Souvenir.

Rev. Fr. Cox was tendered a surprise yesterday when deputations from the Star Association called on him to say farewell before his departure for Montreal. They presented him with a pleasing little booklet of Newfoundland scenes, especially compiled for the Rev. gentleman, showing his name on the front page in gold ink, and a very sincere greeting on the second page, bordered with pink, white and green. The third page contained the names of the patron, officers and committee surmounted by a star in green, while specially printed cheques valued at fifty dollars, alternating with local views, made up the rest of the interesting little booklet. The cover was green morocco, calf lined and bound with pink, white and green ribbon. Mr. J. J. Lacey tendered the little souvenir and Fr. Cox replied happily, thanking the Association for its thoughtfulness, and assuring them they would always hold a treasure place in his affections. He leaves by to-day's train, but will be here for the consecration of the newly appointed Archbishop at the end of June.

Obituary.

There passed peacefully away last evening at his late residence, Mullock Street, a well known and highly respected citizen in the person of Mr. William Dowden. The deceased had been ailing for a short while, and though he had passed the allotted span, the end was not thought to be near as he was able to be around up to about a week ago. He was in his 78th year. Mr. Dowden was born at Bally Halyer, and lived in St. John's all his life. When a young man he entered the employ of Messrs. Job Brothers and Co. and continued in their employ for a period of fifty-nine years. During all these years he laboured faithfully at the South Side premises, always solicitous for his master's interests. Besides a widow, he leaves three sons, Thomas, Allen and Reginald; four daughters, Mrs. James Edwards, Mrs. G. H. Fress, Misses Jennie and Minnie Downey to all of whom the Telegram extends sincere sympathy in their bereavement. Two grandsons, Quartermaster Sergeant W. D. Edwards and Corporal R. A. Edwards are with the Nfld. Regiment at Edinburgh.

Tobasco Has a Big Cargo for England.

The Furness Liner Tobasco, Capt. Yeoman, three days from Halifax, arrived here last evening. Between Cape Pine and Cape Race many icebergs were sighted, and the ship had to be navigated along slowly. She brought a small cargo and sails again this evening for Liverpool. The ship has an enormous deck load of deals on board en route for England. Every available space on the ship's decks is filled with the timber, which is piled to a considerable height.

Anderson, "Broncho Billy," is seen in one of his best roles in "The Treachery of Broncho Billy's Fall." "Red and Pete Partners," the story of a girl and two thieves told by the American Biograph Company in their best way. "The Girl, the Cop and the Burglar," is a very clever comedy with all the Esquimaux stars taking part. The singing by a local lady is a feature appreciated by all the Crescent patrons. Is Tea or Coffee After Your Job?

The average cup of tea or coffee contains from 1½ to 3 grains of caffeine, a poisonous drug that handicaps the efficiency and chances for promotion of many bright men and women.

Read This Letter

"Down at the Junction," writes a railroad man, "where I am employed as Telegraph Operator and Towerman for a busy railroad, where every second counts and where I hold the lives of the entire train crew and passenger; in my hand, I found coffee was making me dull and exceedingly nervous.

"My wife told me about Postum. I tried it and liked it. I never drink anything else now. I have a tin of Instant Postum in my mail. I feel fine, my brain is quick and active and there's no delay at the Junction while I'm on duty. I really think coffee would have put me out of a job if I hadn't quit it for Postum."
