Wealth and Beauty at Stake!

CHAPTER XXXI

She tears her freshly-written letter across and across, and, setting fire to it, burns it to ashes; then goes into her uncle's room, where Uncle Silas lies quiet and sensible yet, and sits and gazes at him, hopeless and helpless, until she fancies the nurse wishes her gone; and then, just as the clocks are striking two, she goes down-stairs again. She would not willingly encounter Mrs. Sarjent just now, but she must, for Lady Nora's sake.

"She will hurt and insult her cruelly," Yolande thinks, growing strong and resolute for the defense of Dallas' mother, "unless I prevent her."

She sits down to wait in the dark, little breakfast-room at the end of the hall, and after a time she hears the carriage draw up, and a loud knock and ring resound through the house.

"Oh, sh-h!" Mrs. Sarjent says, running out noisily, her silk skirts and crinoline catching against the chairs and table. "What a noise at this time of night, with sickness in the house—shameful!"

"Please don't tell Lady Nora she had news suddenly—it will shock her dreadfully!" Yolande says, breathlessly, hurrying to the door as the footman opens it.

"Stunt!" Mrs. Sarjent retorts rudely, being by this time, as she says, determined to "stand no nonsense." "I'll do her good—knock some of the folly and vanity out of her!"

The moment the door is opened the frivolous little lady runs lightly up the steps, talking gaily to her escort—a short, stout man in an eighteenth-century dress—who, entering the hall with her, glances around with dismay and astonishment at the waiting group.

"What on earth's the matter?" Lady Nora demands, laughing, with some asperity, however, in her silvery tones. "Yolande, dearest, what are you all doing at this hour?"

"We might ask you that question, Lady Nora, I think!" Mrs. Sarjent begins, with tremendous sternness and in meaning tones.

She is overwhelmed when Lady Nora receives both her menace and her sternness with a light, scornful laugh.

"Oh, it is your doing, I see!" she says, with gay indifference. "I hope supper is ready—I'm dreadfully hungry. Are you all going to sit up to supper with me?"—with an insolent little mouth at Mrs. Sarjent. "Quite too kind of you, I am sure! Come, Mr. Carter! Where have you laid supper for me, James?"

"In the dining-room, my lady," James answers, glancing from one to the other; while Mr. Carter draws back, twisting his cocked hat about uneasily, and muttering something in an undertone to Lady Nora, and smiling nervously and reprobatingly at the others.

Yolande glances at him amazedly; he is an utter stranger to her, though he and Lady Nora seem to be on terms of familiar friendship, and he is so utterly different from the men who are Lady Nora's acquaintances. He is a fat, good-humored, vulgar-looking little man with a pair of shrewd eyes and red, full cheeks—a "dumpling face" which looks out of the grand curled-wig with a comical owl-in-an-ivy-bush effect. His velvet suit and embroidered waistcoat fit his podgy figure tightly, but there are fine real lace ruffles on his shirt front and around his hands, the stumpy fingers are glittering with splendid diamond rings, and in his lace frill is a brooch of superb brilliants.

"Nonsense!" Lady Nora says, and says it with startling sharpness and imperiousness, in reply to Mr. Carter's deferential manner. "You want supper, and so do I! If you don't stay now, you shan't come to-morrow!"

As she speaks she throws off her gray domino defiantly, and stands revealed a brilliant, airy, glittering little figure all tulle and satin and floating gauze and spangles of gold fringe, with bare, white arms clasped with gold coils and coral and amber beads. She looks like the daintiest and most expensive of dolls for a bazaar counter, or a gorgeous little odalisque in an Eastern stage scene.

She is exceedingly pretty and startlingly undraped, and Yolande, tingling with embarrassment, feels that she would give anything for a good big shawl to cover her up decently from Mrs. Sarjent's merciless scrutiny.

"Mercy on my soul!" that lady exclaims, half audibly, while she stares at the liberal display of Lady Nora's pretty limbs and the fair, smooth skin of which she is so proud.

"Poor Uncle Silas is very ill, dear—very ill!" Yolande says, hurriedly, laying her hand on her arm persuasively, and, longing to get her away.

"We are all in great trouble."

"Very ill? Poor, dear Uncle Silas? Oh, how dreadful!" Lady Nora exclaims, pausing, and trying to summon up a sympathetic look on the pretty painted face under the spangled gauze turban and the great plait of dark hair twined with pearls. "Oh, I am so grieved! Then—perhaps to-morrow" she says, hesitatingly, to her escort, "Mr. Dormer is very ill. So sorry—to-morrow afternoon then."

"To-morrow afternoon, Lady Nora. Yes, certainly," the stranger responds hastily, as if very glad to be allowed to go; and he bows all around in a hurried, hurried manner, backs himself out of the doorway, stumbles against the footman, begs his pardon and disappears. Lady Nora bestows on him the sweetest of friendly nods and smiles as he goes, and says "Au revoir!" to which Mr. Carter does not respond.

"What is the matter, Yolande, with your uncle?" Lady Nora asks, curiously, walking into the dining-room, and ignoring Mrs. Sarjent altogether. "He was quite well this morning."

"We fear it is an apoplectic seizure, dear," her daughter-in-law answers slyly and reluctantly, longing still to get her away.

"He's lying at the point of death, if you want to know, Lady Nora," Mrs. Sarjent interposes, loudly and roughly; "and at such a time as this, with death and disaster in the house, the sooner you take off them scandalous, masquerading things and put on decent clothes the better! And now," she adds, rustling stormily across the room, "I've spoken my mind, and I'm glad of it!"

Lady Nora looks after her composedly, with her lip curling in scornful amusement.

"How ridiculously rude and ill-tempered!" she remarks, coolly, pouring out a glass of Burgundy and drinking it. "I am sure I did not ask your opinion of my dress, Mrs. Sarjent. It is very ill bred to give it unasked. I don't suppose you are aware of that, though."

She shrugs her bare, white shoulders resignedly, and glances at her daughter-in-law. "Send me up some chicken and a plate of that sponge and cream, Yolande, dearest," she says, quietly. "I want to enjoy my supper, and I certainly cannot with an abusive person in the room. It was extremely stupid of James to lay supper here. And come up to tell yourself, love, and tell me everything."

She wraps her domino about her and runs lightly upstairs, while Yolande, trembling like an aspen at the "everything" which she has to tell, sets about obeying her commands most dutifully.

What Do You Think of a Fluid

That will draw roaches and ants out of every hole, crack, or crevice before killing them and not poison food?

That will kill bugs instantly and not leave an unpleasant odor?

That will knock flies off the wall and not harm paint or paper?

That will keep the bedroom, kitchen, or verandah clear of flies, mosquitoes, etc., for several hours after a few sprays?

That will take fleas off a dog and not harm the dog?

That will destroy chicken lice without any injury to your stock?

That applied in small quantities to the exposed parts of the body will insure you from Mosquito bites?

That as a general disinfectant is stronger than the ordinary carbolic solution.

THAT FLUID IS
SAN-O-SPRAY.

No insect can live where San-O-Spray is used. Yet San-O-Spray is non-poisonous to human beings and can be used with perfect safety in pantry, kitchen, dining room, and cellars, moreover San-O-Spray has an agreeable and delightful odor, removing all fetid or unpleasant odors. In addition San-O-Spray is a disinfectant and germicide. Keeps the home sanitary and free from infectious diseases.

The Secret of True Mother-Love.

DON'T KEEP YOUR SON FROM MARRYING!

"My dear," said one woman to another, "I hear your son is going to be married. Your poor heart must be broken."

The mother laughed. "I am not an object of pity," she said; "I am a subject for congratulation."

"What!" cried the first woman. "Do you mean to tell me that you are willing to give up your only child to another woman?"

"Willing and glad," replied the mother, "for I want my son to be happy."

What is a Man's Duty?
"Children are ungrateful creatures," said the first woman, bitterly. "We spend our lives toiling and sacrificing for them, and as soon as they are big enough they leave us. I remember when your husband died, we wondered how you would get along. Well, you did, by working your fingers to the bone."

"You went without everything yourself, but your boy was always fed and clothed, and by hook or crook you put him through school. Now he forsakes you for a pretty girl. I say his duty is to you. He has no right to marry as long as you live."

"Nonsense," replied the mother. "I did my duty by my child, but am I a female Shylock to exact a pound of flesh in payment for having taken care of him while he was young and helpless?"

"I know there are mothers who think that their children belong to them body and soul, and that they have a perfect right to exact any sacrifice of them. I have known talented women who have been balked in their ambitions by tyrannical and exacting mothers, and I have seen pretty girls grow into faded old maids nursing neurotic mothers who would not employ an attendant."

"And I've known more than one whining old woman who kept a bachelor son dancing attendance upon her, and who told you how it would have killed her for her son to marry; who she made him promise he would never leave her; how she broke off a love affair that he had in his youth, and how she knew he was so much happier with her than he would have been with a wife, because no wife would have been as particular about cooking him the things he wanted as she was."

Personally, I feel that I could do no more wicked thing than keep my son from marrying. He is to begin with, a born family man, the sort of man who could never be happy living in clubs, playing cards, and listening to men's gossip for a lifetime. He must have his own home, his own wife and children, and I would be worse than a fiend if I kept him from the sweetness of a wife's love and companionship, and the joy of feeling his baby's arms about his neck.

"My son loves me. We are unusually companionable. I am an old and experienced housekeeper. Doubtless I make him far more comfortable than his young wife will. But I am not foolish enough to think that my home is really home for him, or that a mother's love takes the place of a wife's love."

"And so, while he is young and capable of loving and inspiring love, I desire to see him marry. Nothing spurs on a man's ambition so much as desiring to get the best for those he loves. I want my son to marry because I love my sex, and I want to present to some girl the best gift on earth—a good husband."

Words We Want.

Our Language Has at Least One Crying Need: Can You Supply It?

Every now and then a prize is offered for a new word to describe a new invention. Quite recently we had such a competition for the purpose of finding a name for the new motor-glider. But words of this sort have a way of supplying themselves. What Briton, for instance, thinks of calling an automobile anything but a "car" or a heavier-than-air flying machine by any other name than "plane"?

Yet, while English is the most prolific language in existence, there are still a few words which are badly wanted, and which would be vastly appreciated by everyone who wields a pen.

One crying need is for a pronoun which will mean equally "he" or "she."

Take an example in point. A doctor is writing directions as to the use of liniment whenever he (or she) is in pain; but, at the same time, it is necessary to caution him (or her), etc.

Such a pronoun would save the writing of millions of unnecessary words in the course of a year. Will some kindly philologist oblige?

Other languages are less well-found than our own, and have absolutely no equivalent for many words which we use every day of our lives. "Upstairs" and "downstairs" are words which have no direct equivalents in French, nor in there any French word for "comfort." The verb "to kick" has to be paraphrased, if you wish to put it into French, and expressed as to strike with the foot."

Before the war the Germans had adopted bodily a number of English words for which they had no equivalents in their own cumbersome tongue.

"Tailor-made," "lawn-tennis" and "sport" are among the terms which were thus appropriated. It would have been pathetic, if it had not been comic, to see their struggles in the early part of the war to find German

MILKMAID MILK

IS THE BEST MILK MADE

In Milkmaid, the natives have curious superstitions about the cow's "partridge," anyone finding a "partridge" and not breaking it, causes the death of his neighbor.

MORE JAPANESE WIPED OUT.

LONDON, Sept. 16. Five thousand persons are reported to have perished in the floods which followed upon the typhoon at Tottori, north west of Kobe, Japan, on Saturday, according to an Osaka despatch to the Central News.

TYPHOON SWEEPS JAPAN.

OSAKA, Japan, Sept. 16. A typhoon broke over the mainland today, the ships carrying relief material to the coast. The typhoon swept north west of Kobe, reported to have been inundated.

LOODS ADD TO THE HAVOC OF THE TYPHOON.

LONDON, Sept. 17. As a result of the typhoon the rivers Chikyo and Takimi burst their banks, destroying many villages. The death toll of rain has been estimated at two thousand. The damage done to the railways has been reported to be very serious.

WILL REGISTER TREATY WITH LEAGUE.

LONDON, Sept. 16. An exchange of telegrams between Geneva says it is officially announced that both Italy and Jugoslavia have agreed to register with the League of Nations, the Treaty of Rapallo of the two nations.

DANGER OF HOSTILITIES.

LONDON, Sept. 15. Italy's notice to Jugoslavia with respect to Fiume problem, sometimes referred to as an "ultimatum," which was due to expire to-day, has been extended, according to official quarters here. It is stated that diplomatic negotiations regarding Porto Barroa in the Delta there, immediately adjacent to Fiume, will continue on the basis of some new Italian proposals.

PREMIER KING LEAVES ON FRIDAY FOR LONDON.

OTTAWA, Aug. 15. Right Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance and Acting Prime Minister, left Ottawa to-day for a short visit to points in Nova Scotia. Premier King sails from Quebec Friday, to attend the Imperial Conference in London.

SEVEN BURNED TO DEATH.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 16. Seven persons were killed and a score or more injured early to-day when fire swept through a tenement in a thick populated district.

PRINCE AT THE PROTTLE.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 16. Lord Renton, the Prince of Wales, arrived in Winnipeg Saturday morning as a Canadian Pacific railway passenger. At Whitehouse, 80 miles west of here, the Prince ordered the train stopped and announced to the locomotive driver that for the rest of the journey he wished to be at the wheel. Although dressed only in a suit of smart English walking tweeds, he mounted the cabin just as the locomotive Casey Jones did. Just so he stepped on it too hard, though, that the official engineer, stood behind him and checked up the steam pressure and other little things.

Another Big Programme at the Crescent.

CHANGE OF VAUDEVILLE AND PICTURES TO-DAY.

The programme at the Crescent to-day is a varied and interesting one from beginning to end. Pat Harrington appears in new and classy selections. Something snappy all the time. The pictures to-day consist of William Cristie Cabanne's great photoplay, "At the Stage Door"--a story of the "back-stage" and the life of a musical comedy star. Her trials and tribulations and final triumph. Altogether this is an attraction that is irresistible. The opening chapter of the celebrated Sherlock Holmes stories commences at this theatre to-day.

Wedding Bells.

GARDNER-HELLIER.

Miss Thea L. Gardner and John H. Hellier, both of St. John's, Nfld., were married in the Church of Our Saviour, Rosedale, Mass., by the Rev. J. Gordon Carey, Monday morning, August 20, 1923. The bride was gowned in Ivory satin and wore a lace veil trimmed with orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Grace Gardner, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a white and lavender silk gown with hat to match and carried a bouquet of roses. Chester J. Cooper, of Boston, Mass., acted as best man. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mrs. Ethel G. Cooper, cousin of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Hellier spent their honeymoon at Concord, Mass., one of the most historical sections of New England. Miss Gardner was formerly of the office of the Horwood Lumber Co., St. John's, Nfld., as was also the groom. The latter was well known in the Nfld. Regt., having spent four years overseas. Mr. and Mrs. Hellier live at 32 Augustus Ave., Rosedale, Mass.

LOSS OF TWO VESSELS REPORTED.

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 16. The steamer Hancock County, operating between Mobile and Windward Islands ports, arrived yesterday bringing twelve survivors from the United States schooner Egalite of New York, lost of Trinidad several days ago. The vessel also brought news of the loss of the Vimy, a sister ship to the Egalite; the two schooners going down within a short time of each other. Whether any lives were lost when the Vimy went down was not stated. The Egalite was making her maiden voyage. The Egalite survivors told of terrible suffering during several days in an open boat at sea before they reached San Domingo City and were finally taken on board the Hancock County.

REVIEWER TAKES OATH OF OFFICE.

MADRID, Sept. 16. General Miguel Primo Rievelra, Marquis de Estalla, head of the revolutionary movement, took the oath of office on Saturday as President of the Council of Ministers before King Alfonso. The new Premier submitted to the King various documents for signing, these included, one proclaiming the dismissal of the High Commissioner of Morocco, Luis Sivia. The directorate at a meeting took the measures to safeguard rights of Government employees, and to make the service more efficient.

BARNES-SNOW.

The wedding of Victor George Snow to Ethel Barnes, both of this city, took place on Saturday, Sept. 15th, at Hopewell Church, by the Rev. H. W. Foley. The bride, who was given away by her father, was neatly attired in a costume of navy blue Polart and carried a beautiful bouquet of carnations and ferns. She was attended by her sister, Miss J. Gilbert, while the duties of best man were performed by Mr. A. J. Snow, brother of the groom. After the ceremony a reception was held at Mrs. Kelly's. The bride and groom left by Sunday's express for Ocean Pond to spend their honeymoon.

FOUR CONSUMPTIVES LYING IN SMALL ROOM.

Shocking living conditions came to light at Willested. A landlady applied for an ejectment order against a tenant who, she stated, with his wife and five children, occupied one small room in her house. She asked that the order might be made at once, as another child was expected. The father and three of the children were suffering from tuberculosis, and as many other people were living in the same house, it was a source of danger to them--Dr. Crane, magistrate: Do you mean to say that these seven people, some of them consumptive, are living and sleeping in one room, and that another one is expected shortly to join them?--Father: It is quite true. What else are we to do? I have searched everywhere, but cannot find better accommodation. A member of Parliament and the British Legion has tried to help me, but they can do nothing--Magistrate, to landlady: Have you been to the Willested Council?--Landlady: Yes. The Medical Officer himself came down and told me the conditions were not too bad as things are at present--Tenant: They saw me too, and offered me a Council house at 26s. a week, but that is about as much as I earn. I am now paying 5s. a week--The Magistrate adjourned the case, remarking that it was no use making an ejectment order at once.

Harold Lloyd's Super Comedy at the Nickel.

GRANDMA'S BOY SIX REELS OF LAUGHTER.

The super comedy achievement has been produced, and no less a person than Harold Lloyd is responsible for it. "Grandma's Boy," the greatest of all Harold Lloyd pictures, is to be shown at the Nickel Theatre to-day. It is really wonderful how Mr. Kley can show these tremendously big offerings at such a low admission. In "Grandma's Boy" there is a nice plot with just a little touch of pathos and barrels of real fun--something you can enjoy to the uttermost. The other attractions with this programme are another of the popular "Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" and a "Pathe News." Miss Margaret Freer, the celebrated mezzo-soprano soloist, will be heard in new and popular selections. One of the most popular of all American films is booked to be shown at the Nickel very shortly. The picture is entitled "School Day," and in it is starred that great boy actor, Wesley Barry. It is a picture filled with the joy of youth, the delight of mischievous pranks and is rich in humour and sentiment. See "School Days" and be royally entertained--forget the worries of the day and be a youth again. It's coming to the Nickel soon. Watch this paper for definite announcement.

Afternoon Teas at the Blue Puttee.

On rainy or chilly afternoons nothing so good as "the cup that cheers but not inebriates" at the Blue Puttee. Tea, Coffee or Chocolate served in the most appetizing manner with sandwiches and cake such as you can get at the Blue Puttee only. Large or small parties accommodated. Large parties should telephone 1016 to make arrangements.--sept10,17

THE CANADIAN CHAMPIONSHIPS.
Always anxious to secure the correct news first, the "Evening Telegram" had the Canadian Championships which took place on Saturday afternoon at Halifax, fully covered, and to say this was not done without a great deal of trouble and expense but we feel that the increased interest of late years in athletics and the fact that three Newfoundland representatives were competing fully warranted it.

The annual Canadian Championships which took place on Saturday afternoon at Halifax, fully covered, and to say this was not done without a great deal of trouble and expense but we feel that the increased interest of late years in athletics and the fact that three Newfoundland representatives were competing fully warranted it.

It will be seen that Toronto carried off the premier honors for the day having secured 7 first places and 4 second places. Our own (Halifax) team could not hit the grades with the speedsters from Upper Canada, although we did manage to get two firsts—the Shot Put and Hammer Throw. Considering the handicaps the Newfoundland team had to undergo we consider they did wonderfully well. Following is the tabulation of places obtained by the various centres competing:—

THE ONE MILE WALK.
Seven lined up for the start, including your entry, Bunnell. Sawier from Dartmouth was easily the favorite, took the lead and held it for a lap, when suddenly Granville, the Indian from Hamilton, shot ahead and maintained his lead to the finish in the remarkably fast time of 4:57, closely followed by Metten and Snell of Toronto, with the lanky Newfoundland-lander fourth. Judging from the conversation we had with the Newfoundland teams, manager, we understand that the winner's style of walking is entirely different from that which you do. In fact Mr. Cullen stated that Granville, Metten, and Snell would undoubtedly be disqualified by Newfoundland track judges. You can judge of the fast pace when it is mentioned that the first quarter mile was done in 1 min. 55sec.

THE 5 MILE RACE.

There were 12 starters in this event. There was some doubt about little O'Toole entering, as he was not in top form, and a boil on the inside of his right leg was bothering him greatly. He drew stake number ten from the pole, and was placed to John Bell who drew number nine. At the crack of the pistol O'Toole jumped into the lead and held it for the first lap, with McAuley on his heels, followed by Ladriere and Rae. Bell was seventh. In the rush at the first turn of the second lap O'Toole got nastily spiked on his sore leg which caused him to fall. The accident was most regrettable but it was absolutely unavoidable. Nothing daunted he jumped up again but of course was well in the rear of the others who were going at a fast clip. He was loudly applauded when it was seen he was going into second again. The time was 4:57 for the first mile. McAuley was now leading, Ladriere second; Rae 60 yards astern was third, with Bell 7th. In the meantime O'Toole had acquired ninth place and was travelling strong. McAuley still led at the second mile, with Ladriere right behind him; Ray in the same position, with Bell and O'Toole running together with the former slightly in advance. The time was 10:21. There was a great deal of shifting of positions in the third mile. McAuley and Ladriere who had been running practically neck and neck all through were beginning to show signs of distress. Rae, the speedster from Hamilton, suddenly forged ahead at the close of the third mile and was timed at 16:20. Ladriere had gone ahead of McAuley who was third, with Wright of St. John, fourth, and Bell fifth, running well. Just at the beginning of the eleventh lap O'Toole had to discontinue and went to the centre of the field limping badly to his manager. Rae was still leading, but McAuley and Ladriere had again reversed positions. Wright and Bell held their respective places. The fifth mile showed an increase in speed and pace all round. Rae was running magnificently and seemed to have the race well in hand. He made a superb finish, bying 200 yards ahead of McAuley, who was second. Wright was about one hundred yards behind the wife of the Maritimes, and Bell from Newfoundland, fifty yards behind him. It is conceded without detracting from the winner that the time was much slower than anticipated, 26:18. In his final trials McAuley got it down to a shade under 26, and it was felt that if forced he could do much better. It is quite evident that instead of racing the field, Ladriere and he were racing each other, and seemed totally oblivious to the fact that they were ten other competitors. Ray held himself in check until he saw the weakness in the others and assumed command. At the finish he had lapped all but McAuley, Wright, and Bell. Halifax was glad to welcome the Newfoundland entries, and although they did not acquire any of the honors yet they made a very favorable and sympathetic impression by their sportsmanlike conduct, both in training and during the progress of their contests. They will leave for home by Red Cross liner on Tuesday noon.

MANAGER CULLEN WIRES.

Messages to the A.A.A. from Stan Cullen, who is managing the Newfoundland team at Halifax, practically coincide with those of our correspondent stated above. He says that in the walking no Newfoundland and Judges would permit the stria allowance at Halifax on Saturday. As regards five mile race he wires: "Going into second (7) lap O'Toole was accidentally struck on sore leg and fell. He has had boil on right leg; otherwise team in good health and send thanks to A.A.A. and all others for messages of encouragement. Regret we could not do better. Sports well run, and Newfoundland team received every courtesy possible. Rae is beautiful runner. Personally think Ladriere and McAuley killed each other racing for lead in first two miles. Rae who was about 60 yards behind suddenly came up and passed both on beginning of third mile." Messages from others in Halifax were received on Saturday afternoon and night, and were promptly bulletined at the Atlantic Telegraph Company, W. H. Jackson, and Evening Telegram office. For their courtesy the A.A.A. is grateful.

HOW THEY COMPARE.

It will be of interest to athletic enthusiasts to compare the times and distances made at Halifax on Saturday with the Newfoundland records:—
100 Yards—Halifax, 19 secs.; Newfoundland, 10 secs.
220 Yards—Halifax, 22 1/2 secs.; Newfoundland 24 secs.
Quarter Mile—Halifax, 53 1/2 sec.; Newfoundland 55 secs.

Wesley will play St. Mary's to-night in one of the final games of the Junior League. It will take place at 8:15 at the St. Bon's Football grounds. The game is an important one through the fact that Wesley must win in order to remain in the running for championship honors with the Cadets and the Holy Cross.

SHOULD BE LOOKED AFTER.
Editor Sportsgraphs
Dear Sir—May I ask through your widely read columns if any Club or Association has undertaken to look after Linegar, who made such a splendid showing in the Guards Sports. If not, some of the gentlemen of the

A.A.A. should take him under training and give him a chance. There is no doubt but that he could have beaten O'Toole's record for the 3 miles had he seriously tried. It is as has been so often stated, the object of the A.A.A. is to foster sport and assist and encourage athletes, then in my opinion Linegar should be looked after at once. Trusting my letter will have the desired effect, I am,
Yours obediently,
SOUTH SIDR.

The Cost of Crime.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 14.—(Can. Press)—The cost of the community of crime is emphasized in the report of the Committee on Juveniles in the Penitentiaries, presented to-day at the Canadian Conference on Child Welfare now in session here. The necessity of drastic action with a view of improving the environment of unfortunate children are among matters dealt upon. Treatment rather than punishment, the committee urges, and playgrounds for the young rather than penitentiaries for the older delinquents. The report states that a large number of those now serving sentences in Canadian penitentiaries are less than twenty years old. Last year in the Kingston Penitentiary there were 285 inmates under 20; 82 were under 15, and there were 13 who were less than sixteen years old. There are at present over 1,500 young people in Canadian industrial and reformatory schools. The committee also asserts that a large number of the younger people now in the penitentiaries have already served terms in such institutions or in jails. "We find offenders doing evil simply because they have never known good," the committee reports as a result of its investigations, and it insists that by segregation and proper care the majority of juvenile criminals may be reclaimed and made good citizens. The committee refers to a report made recently to the Canadian Bar Association recommending that when a boy is discovered to have unmistakably wayward tendencies he should come under the jurisdiction of a probation officer and be guided beyond the pitfalls of boyhood, and until such time as he has learned to appreciate the good, and follow the good and avoid the evil. Reference is also made to the same report in which it is stated that conviction of a crime costs the government an average of $1,200, to which has to be added maintenance in prison and the loss to the community of the man's labor. The report states that if a like amount were spent in an endeavor to help the fallen, very few would be sent to prison. The recommendations of the committee, accordingly, are that every community should foster home life and give all children a better and happier childhood. Every community should provide supervised playgrounds for winter and summer sports, as well as summer camps. In the appointment of jail and prison officers, policemen and policewomen and similar public officials, regard should be had to their qualifications in preventing mischief, especially in co-operation with schools, attendance officers and probation officers. That all penal and reformatory institutions should be freed from political or other adverse influences. Teaching in the schools which will make them attractive places to boys and girls, and the training of teachers to realize the precociousness of childhood and their unparalleled opportunities in battling for the future.

Our Montreal Letter.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

SUCCESS DEPENDS ON GOODWILL AND LOYALTY.

The greatest man in the public eye to-day is, Sir Henry Thornton, Chairman of the Board of Directors and President of the Canadian National Railways. Faced with an almost unsurmountable task, he faces it with indomitable courage, a brave and stout heart, a clear understanding of what's expected from him, and relying on "willing hands and willing hearts" to keep him, he ultimately sees, success ready to crown his efforts. Speaking lately at Kingston, Ontario, among other things, he said:—

I have bet on the future of Canada and I believe that it is a good bet. E. H. Harriman, one of the greatest of United States railwaymen took the western lines when they were next to nothing and he made them pay simply because he bet on the future of the western part of the States. The bet was a chack. He couldn't lose.

If we have no faith in the country let us put up our shutters and go home. There is no use being whipped at the start.

No army that ever went into battle thinking it was beaten won any fights. We are going into this battle convinced of the future of the Dominion.

We are confident of the support of the people if we deliver the goods. We only ask a fair deal and I believe we will get it.

The Canadian National Railway employs a larger number of men than any other industry and many more for the financial turnover than a bank handling the same money.

We have 100,000 employees from the Atlantic to the Pacific and the greater part of their time is spent beyond the eye of supervision and inspection. Therefore, we must trust to their loyalty to perform their daily tasks.

Aside from that feature, one must understand the geography of the country, understand the character of the traffic and the way it flows; and also understand the economic characteristics of the country where the industrial centres are. Lastly, he who undertakes to develop an organization must know the characteristics of the men he must depend on.

To examine 23,000 miles of road in a country where one section has a different view from another is a task which is not small, and if we are a little slow you will view it leniently. We have developed an organization which is the best that can be provided. The principal factor was to concentrate at headquarters the technical skill for the policy to be pursued.

To attempt to concentrate anything like details at headquarters would be disastrous, so we had to extend authority and responsibility to general managers and superintendents.

Some have said that it is a colossal organization that we have, but in reality most of the officials are only so named because of a revision of territory and practically all existed with the company before.

There is only one case I can think of where a new man was taken on, though many have been dropped: for we do not issue bulletins on those who leave the system.

The savings in the decrease of vice-presidents alone will mean a saving of $100,000 a year.

It must be remembered that it is harder to handle a railway than it is to handle an army, for the army has all its brigades pretty well under eye, while the railway has not.

Consequently, in order that there may be progress and prosperity it is necessary to have an adequate supervising staff; and I intend to have it.

After all, if you play golf, you don't allow your opponent to choose the sticks you must use.

No matter how perfect an organization can be there cannot be progress unless every man is loyal, success depends upon the goodwill and loyalty of every man in the system.

Therefore, I am anxious that justice and sympathy and kindness be shown, so that employees be actuated by a desire to make the system what it can be made.

THE NEW HEAD OF THE DETECTIVE DEPARTMENT.

Inspector Edward Egan, formerly Inspector of the Western Division of police, a post he has filled with credit to the city has been appointed head of the detective department. Big things are expected from his work, and his superiors have great faith in his ability.

That the position is no sinecure is evident by the changes made in the administration during the past ten years. In that time detectives have been under four chiefs, and with the exception of Chief Lepage, none of them are now in the employ of the city.

There is seldom any reason given to the public for dismissals. A change is mooted long before a removal is made, and the holder of the position undergoes the strain of knowing he is aware of his contemplated retirement. The result is disastrous to discipline. The chief, in the meantime, has an unruly lot of men to deal with who take advantage of the fact that he will not stay long at their head.

The chief can use his authority in a way that spells success and gains the confidence of the men under him. "A time for work and a time for play," is his motto. The Executive Committee of the City Hall think that, "There are too many opportunists with their ears to the ground, waiting to benefit their own selfish ends at the expense of doing their duty properly with graft as the ruling duty," on the force, and if one were to believe half the stories told about privileged characters running immoral resorts and dens of iniquity, the report must be true. Therefore, Inspector Egan was appointed to his new post for the special work of getting rid of the "deadwood" which the executive believes exists in the detective department.

"Where is the deadwood?" asks a detective.

"I don't see any on the force," voices the constable.

Yet the executive says there are weak spots in the detective force and a man is needed at the head who will get rid of "deadwood," in other words, men who have never produced the goods. And there are signs that the change is coming with a suddenness that spells disaster to certain men who have given their services to the city for years.

The detective department is the bone of contention, Chief Detective Lepage being slated for removal outright, following an additional three months' leave of absence which is expected to be granted.

The original term of three months expires September 1st, and it is known that ill-health caused the executive to grant the lay-off. Since that time other reasons have been advanced, and no one, not even Chief Lepage, knew the next move.

That is not the end of the situation by any means, as others are to follow in rapid succession. The man who holds the position of Chief Detective will have to be a strong one, with a big stick knocking down idols here and there. "Deadwood," if it exists, will be felled out by the new chief. It is a big job, and no man afraid of criticism can ever expect to get by. Inspector Egan has shown no fear.

THE SALVATION ARMY GIVING CHEAP MEALS.

Three meals for 40 cents is the latest work of the Salvation Army to benefit the cause of humanity. The new lunch restaurant which has been fitted up at a cost of $1,000 is situated at the Army's quarters at 222 St. Alexander Street. This lunch room will be open from 6 o'clock in the morning until 8 o'clock every night. The meals will consist of breakfast—oatmeal porridge with milk and sugar, bread and butter, tea or coffee at a cost of 10 cents. Dinner will cost 15 cents and will be made up of soup, hot potatoes, bread and butter, tea and coffee. Supper will consist of baked beans, bread and butter, sausage tea or coffee and will also cost 15 cents. There is also a long list of special dishes which may be obtained at prices of 5 and 10 cents. Mr. Beechcroft, the Adjutant in charge declared that the Army will also have the soup kitchen which can be used if necessary this winter.

QUEBEC LEADS IN TOBACCO TRADE.

During last year there were in Canada 119 tobacco manufacturers of which 60 were in Quebec, 30 in Ontario, 13 in British Columbia, 3 in Manitoba, two in Prince Edward Island, and one each in Nova Scotia, Alberta, and New Brunswick of the total product of the factories valued at $38,240,000, $51,623,000 came from Quebec.

MONTRÉAL TO HAVE EXPOSITION

The Montreal Industrial and Exposition Association decided to commence operations this month on the large stadium and athletic tracks at Maisonneuve Park. The Association engineers are now going over the plans and will take up the question of a site for the large stadium with the city officials. It is expected that the stadium will be a concrete one and will be the last word in affairs of its kind. President visited the Sherbrooke fair and looked over the different buildings.

THE WAY TO FACE TROUBLES.

They say that loyalty, honor and truth go to make a true citizen. The man who possesses these qualities, is a real man. He never talks about what the world owes him, the happiness he deserves, the chance he ought to have and all that. All that he claims, is the right to live and play the man, that is, to endure trials patiently, and fight life's battles bravely. A real man does not want pulls tips and favors. He wants work and honest wages. A real man is loyal to his friends and guards their reputation as his own. A real man is dependable. His simple word is as good as his bible oath. A real man does a little more than he promises. He sacrifices money rather than principles.

"The man that is proud of his honor, owns more than the man with his gold. And he that has chummed with the virtuous, has found a delight he can hold. There are millions of ways to be happy, too many by far to recall. And he who lives but for gold and for silver, has chosen the poorest of all."

A writer says:

I know people who are so completely obsessed by their troubles, their fears and their doubts, so affected by anything that goes wrong with them that their enjoyment and happiness are ruined half the time. They cannot get anything enjoyable or desirable out of life unless everything is as they wish. Poverty galls a great many people so that they cannot see the bright side of any situation.

On the other hand, I know people who face poverty with a smile. They put their best foot forward, brace up and clean up in the meanest surroundings. The wives, mothers and daughters manage to get a few cheap prints and pictures, and fix up their humble little home to have an atmosphere of cheer about it, whether it is in a dugout or a cabin. In other words, they make the most of their condition instead of continually bemoaning their fate and thus destroying what little pleasure and happiness of mind may be possible for them in their unfortunate situation; they make the best of it. They can even laugh over their misfortunes.

There is everything in the way we face life. Our optimism or pessimism determines what we will get out of life. The fault-finder, the complainer, the one who has scowled on life, the nagger, the selfish, the greedy, dissatisfied, the one with a sour disposition gets but very little out of life, but some natures manage to get joy and pleasure out of life though blind, deaf and dumb. They do not give way to despair. Yes, there are people who can laugh over their misfortunes. Here's an example.

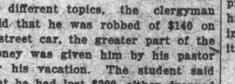

A short time ago while visiting a sick friend, I met three persons, a clergyman, a student and a lady. After some minutes of conversation on different topics, the clergyman said that he was robbed of $140 on a street car, the greater part of the money was given him by his pastor for his vacation. The student said that he had lost $200, either dropped out of his pocket, or one of the "sleek pickpocket artists" had extracted it on a street car. The lady's story was that she had lost a valuable gold watch, which she prized highly, as it was left her by her late husband, and no amount of money could replace it. And yet their misfortunes didn't seem to worry them in the least. They were following the advice given in these lines:—

"Your heart may just be bustin', With some real or fancied woe, But when you smile, the other folks Ain't really apt to know; The old world laughs at heartaches friend. Be they your own or mine, So when they ask you how you are, Just say, 'I'm feelin' fine.'"

FEAR.

WALT MASON

"I don't enjoy my motor car," said Charles Adolphus Squires "although it glitters like a star and has four handsome tires. For always, always as I ride I'm fearing some mishap; into a ditch the bus may slide and spoil my priceless map. The gas I carry may explode as I pursue my way and strew my fragments down the road and up the verdant brae. I often lie awake o' nights and think up grisly scenes, where I collide with other wights, and smash our limousines. I see myself on stretcher borne from scenes of wreck and woe, while creditors stand round and mourn and figure what I owe." And fear is spoiling countless lives, the fear of dole ahead; like Charles Adolphus when he drives, we take up things to dread. My piece gambol by my door, they play with old dog Shep; they have no pimples, boil or sore, they're gay and full of pep. And I regard them with a sigh, with tears their sport I view; to-morrow all these girls may die, of mumps or Spanish flu. I have a dwelling, green and gray, the smoothest shack in town; "But storms will ruin it," I say, "or fire will burn it down." I wonder why we look for woe in every coming breeze; I wonder why we don't outgrow such dippy fears as these.

There are Tricks in every Trade, but few to equal the wiles of the Furniture-Faker.

On the outskirts of a little Breton town, from which not a few tourists return home with "antiques," the rain poured on chests, dressers, and chairs piled high in the yard. This, I was told, was furniture in the transition stage. Within a year or so it would have aged sufficiently to deserve the label, "Antique," and go to take its place in some American home.

I was let into some other trade secrets. It appears that the most skillful makers of "antiques" live in Paris, rather away from the public gaze. They work steadily, for there is a constant demand for old furniture among the visitors from other lands.

The artist in forgery begins by drawing his model from a museum piece. His next step is to prepare his wood by letting it rot in earth impregnated with acid or by rubbing it with wet sand.

Damp and Dust are Useful. As the real antique is usually worm-eaten, the fake must also be so. A very raw artist may discharge shot at it, but shot has a way of remaining in the holes, and is sometimes discovered there by the wrong person. The best method is to place the new wood in contact with a worm eaten piece. The insects themselves do the rest.

These preliminaries being over, the real difficulties begin. The furniture of an age when craftsmen were artists and time was no object has to be copied quickly and cheaply, or the forgery will not pay. Thin layers of wood cut by an electric saw have to replace the thick block of wood out of which the artist carved his ornaments; glue, nails and screws must be used, although they were unknown in the old days. Were one of these makeshifts to be detected the forgery would be exposed.

The wood is outrageously light in colour; its complexion has to be darkened by the application of an infusion of walnut leaves. But it is still new wood; it works, it is hard and dry to the touch, the finished piece looks angular. Therefore it must be covered with mud, so that every pore of it, every cranny will be full, and for hours it is beaten with clubs.

After this the mud is imprisoned under a thick layer of wax. By the time this is done the wood has acquired some of the softness of grain of the old wood. But even then detection is too easy. Hence the exposure in court or garden, where the sun causes it to crack, and the rain to rot, and where damp and dust give it a finish.

After that it is put in a well-used bed-room, where it is hoped it may get stained with candle-grease and finger-marks. At its reappearance down-stairs it is put against the radiator, so that its bronze ornaments may get tarnished. A fall from a staircase will disjoin a panel or break a leg; let it be mended so clumsily that the very tyro notices it. This serves as proof of its genuineness to the unwary purchaser.

Young Fishermen Exiled in Big Cities are Disillusioned.

Golden Goose But Brazen Egg—Bustle, Brick And Brobdingnagian Buildings Not Tailor-Made—Nothing in Lane to Trip Over—Nasal Homesickness—Capable Mr. Contrast Constant Companion.

(By R. I. POLLETT)

During the past two years hundreds of young fishermen from Newfoundland have left their time-worn inheritance of the sea and drifted to the cities of Canada and the United States to begin life all over under totally different conditions of employment and surroundings. Some of them no doubt have some idea of what they were going to do when they left; and while they by no means shuddered at the thought of the life before them, they could not but have departed the homes of their fathers so consistently happy and content as have the hundreds of young fellows who have only wanted to be away from the old place and into the big world to be living in the big cities. It is better, the big majority perhaps, to see having the toughest fight to themselves to the new life; it is the many who ran all the way to the first boat from home, whose adjustment has been in some overwhelming complete.

GOOD-BYE, EVERYBODY.

Of course, no healthy young fellow is blamed for wanting to look at the back-yard fence, especially on days when he hears so much of the world so much about the wonderful conditions that exist there. In the Newfoundlander, Canada and the United States are preconceived as beautiful and alluring pictures bearing the names of these countries, particularly that of the latter, have for them synonyms for "Promised Land" ever since they can remember. They have always heard the United States spoken favorably of;

Abandon—his "homestead" propaganda bunkum, as it sometimes is. They have developed imagination and are ambitious; and ambition is not for fishermen. So they, too, turn their faces from the sea; and they, too, see a barren land. Eventually they leave. But for them the Kyle is perhaps much of an Argosy, with a Golden Fleece, figuratively, very, very woolly indeed.

SO, THIS IS IT.

Whatever idea a person who has never been to a city can have of a city is, more often than not, illusory. That is certain. So the immigrant from an outpost in Newfoundland arrives at his destination at one of the centres of the world, usually in a wonderful tumbling down of things. That in itself is disturbing, since the realities are beyond his wildest imaginings. Possibly he has had some preconception of big buildings here and there, but hardly of Towers of Babel in everyone's back garden; and if it is night when he arrives, illuminated letters written apparently across the sky and the less obstructive glitter of a thousand and two other electric signs and signals are bound to cause drop-jaw and altogether dangerous preoccupation—and all around him is the bustle and "God for us all" abandon of a giant railway terminus. The immigrant is in another land; in fact, seemingly, he is another person. He has little trouble, however, in recovering, but when that is accomplished, he is inevitably within the confines of the four walls of a house with all modern inconveniences and soon will have buried excitement in a deep sleep.

If Mr. Fisherman has come to the city alone and is cast upon his own resources, his position is not an enviable one, even if he have the friendship with bells on, such as unfortunately is too often, at this time, at the sugar-leaf stage of growth. If, however, there is an uncle or a thirty-first cousin in the hectic metropolitan in short, there is no job in the city the hazards are less great. For there are hazards, plenty of them. Impressions upon going out into the bazaar with the rest of the fish are non-existent. The background is not big enough to hold all the variety of wonderful things to be met with in "Main Street"; so it admits nothing that can be assimilated. This bewilderment of the mind is one of the hazards of a stranger in a city. He doesn't know what to think and he doesn't think. It's awful. In fact, there is hardly any way to describe the mental disposition of a person who suddenly finds himself for the first time on, say, Broadway, New York, having come from one of the isolated and consequent old-fashioned spots on the coast of Newfoundland—not even if it's a personal experience.

GET A JOB, SIR!

But the immigrant has come to the city to look for work, and get it—not a hard problem perhaps, but nevertheless nothing to be "spotted" at. To begin with, what can he do? He can catch fish, but they're already caught when they come to the city. He can begin on a three-leg and end on a three-leg, but what's the use of that? He can take hold of off-hand, except perhaps with hammers and saws. The fellow is willing, however, and when the assumed or natural austerity of the employment agent fails, sometimes through repeated experiences, to intimidate him, and the applicant can approach the employment office without failing all over the place, there is assurance of his being placed according to qualifications; and as his capabilities are obviously physical, if not ponderously so, he may have a good chance to exercise them in the factory as in hauling up the doorways of a fish-factory codran "way," way home.

Having secured work through one of the many opportunities that offer in a big city, the young immigrant sets about in a more consistent way to study his environment. Steadily, now, are unfolded to him the many wonders of the metropolis. One after the other, he learns the utilities of modern times and becomes familiar with their conveniences. And the proceeding is, to say the least, entertaining. There is not that feeling of loneliness and timidity sometimes relegated to, small, inconsequential people thrust amongst big, impressive things—not yet. The job in the factory is even more interesting than what might be called his social world. For the first time he sees how things that don't grow are made; and his eagerness to know the "ins and outs" of everything, besides guiding him to knowledge prematurely, often leads to mirth-provoking situations of which he is the lock, stock and barrel—and the target. But, being an affable fellow, a lot of suffering for somebody is averted, and the new hand is awarded his place in the hearts of the gang. Then again, there is the inevitable fellow-worker who respectfully requests an embossed copy of the immigrant's personal history, thank you, and this is what a Newfoundland founder in the States—yes, in the big sister Dominion, Canada, even—has to do a lot of explaining. In fact, one of the things that surprises the visitor most is the fact that the forty-odd thousand square miles of land, Britain's oldest colony, is as yet terra incognita to also out of every ten people who enquire whence he came—and the odd one knows very little at all about it. However, if the enquirer is keeping in touch with newspapers of the Eastern States there will be less trouble to establish an idea of what Newfoundland geographically is, if he is told that it is an island right alongside of St. Pierre—only St. Pierre is a mosquito. And well, many men for his own country peaceful life of this city, it is surprising.

THE WATER'S FINE!

Having been thus initiated into the peaceful life of the city, it is surprising how readily the stranger seems to become an original part of it. Whether pushing his way along the crowded main streets or hopping off to work in the comparative quiet of early morning, there is somehow that feeling of placidity out of the turmoil, dignified acceptance of the ways of the world. No doubt, the possession every week of a pay envelope, has a great deal to do with settlement, the constant "lunge" being almost like slight-bells in summer. At this time, theatres and moving picture halls seat him often and feel him set at all; side-shows and amusement parks are "jam on it," so the fortune that he set out to make is, as yet, root-gardens in Hare Bay. He cannot be blamed, either; it is only a starved nature eating her fill. Alas, her fill! Acquaintances are made recklessly, friendships here and there, and life, on the whole, is more than worth living.

It is here also that the young fellow decides against the simple life from which he was rescued. What for, in the name of goodness, are people at home living? Why, they see nothing, hear nothing, and know nothing—that is, nothing of the wonders of their age—living in the hey-loft of creation! Probably his very thought of home is in terms of city; that many of his friends and past associates should live and die without even seeing a cinema of hearing church bells ring out in harmony across a live world.

ONLY SUPERFICIAL.

But Mr. Fisherman is being fooled. His innate nature has not thus easily accepted the restrictions of city people's and it is only a matter of time before that nature rebels. The change is inexplicable, other than it seems to be a vagary of Nature that she should penalize those who desert her. It is not homesickness; it is something worse. It creeps over him slowly and miserably as liquid glue, until life is anything but a pleasure under the routine that is just now being felt.

There is no matter to whatever extent he is being cast upon his own resources in institutions of young life in a city, interest in everything is somehow impaired; also, whether the young fellow is naturally broody or devil-may-care, the feeling gets him just the same. Childish songs and rhymes once warbled by the gang around the beach-rocks have an egotistical sentiment coming over brick walls in another land years afterwards; even a baking powder can, if it's the kind he has seen mother using in a corner of comfort to the present mood; and as for a Newfoundland coin, newspaper, picture or any other tangible suggestion of home—well, it may be homesickness after all. Anyhow, instinctively, it seems, threads of the old life are picked up and interwoven, so to speak, through the new, precluding early and permanent settlement into the atmosphere of the city.

REASONS FOR DISCONTENT.

The practical side of the deal is not without its flaws, either, and that's the hardest part of it. It is mighty interesting to turn a handle and watch the world go round in a case of pig at one end and sausages at the other; it is extremely comforting, too, to get a pay envelope every week. It is—until the stranger becomes sufficiently accustomed to notice his real position. The facts are disheartening as they are no doubt inevitable. Here he is, a strapping, full-grown man doing apparently twice as much work for half as much pay as the comparatively effeminate city boy who, in no uncertain way, orders him about the place. Now, to be bossed at all is not exactly heartening to the man from the outpost where Jack is always Jack, and Bill—let alone having his wages computed at half a man's salary! For it is not always easy to remember that he is now a boy just starting in. Besides, it is more than a factory job can do to offer the variety, freedom; and above all, the gamble when his spirit craves. So before even if he is educated, he has no experience which often is required of long the fortune-seeker gets tired of rowing back and forth in the calm, with not a hope of even getting hold of a big one, or the satisfaction of having what he believes to be his rightful share. Altogether, it seems as though he is getting everything but what he batted his head for, and although he will in time become reconciled to seeming injustices, impatience is a formidable enemy to the fellow who has started out that handstapped to make his way in the city.

EMOTIONS GALORE.

To resume in general, it may safely be concluded that not ten out of every hundred young fishermen who left Newfoundland in the immigration rush of the last two or three years and sought out the city as a means of betterment, have attained anything like they expected or are living as happy lives as they might have lived at home. The fight is too hard with the hazards not having been taken into account, as was the case in the blind desire for adventure. Big, vital fellows who snapped their horny fingers at hazards that would make the city "guy" quake with fear, crumple up and morally die under the petty annoyances and "women's worries" that are annexed to the relentless rhythm of over-spinning wheels. The mass of brick, stone fronts, paved streets baking in the sun, with never a breath of air, and hurrying humanity red hot and still burning, are a far, lonesome cry from home with its snug little houses along the sea, resonant voices of children playing in the lead-wash—where there is a Tag Day on Saturday.

Considering the conditions of the weather, we were very successful indeed. Miss Furlong and Mrs. Hutchings had the districts well lined up, and all the taggers were on the grounds in time. Up to 11 o'clock the weather got worse and consequently a great many taggers got wet, and had to give it up. There were one hundred and twenty taggers in all. At 3 o'clock the Finance Committee, Hon. W. J. Higgins, Mr. H. Cowan and G. R. Williams commenced the job of opening the boxes. The largest box brought in was by Miss H. Wells, $40.36, followed by Mrs. J. W. Fyoster with $33.81, and E. P. Crowley with $21.82. The other boxes ranged from fifteen cents up to that amount, the total for the day being $501.35. Had the weather been favorable, there is no doubt we would have reached the object which was set at $1,000. Commandant Hurd wishes to thank heartily the Daughters of the Empire and the Girl Guides for the splendid effort put forth in this direction. Also the Finance Committee, and Miss McNeil for kindness in putting her car at the disposal of Miss Furlong for distributing the tag boxes; also Mr. Silverlock, who also put a car at the disposal of Commandant Hurd. We assure them that this generosity is very much appreciated.

Mary Carr Coming in Wm. Fox "Silver Wings."

William Fox's super-production, "Silver Wings," featuring Mary Carr, will be shown for the first time at the Majestic Theatre starting to-day. According to advices from the William Fox offices in New York City, this feature production shows Mary Carr in a far better characterization than in the famous "Over the Hill." Mary Carr's role is that of a mother and a devoted wife who assumes upon the death of her husband, the care of a profitable business that he had built up as well as the care of two boys and a daughter. One son is a quiet unassuming chap and the other a lazy lad who permits himself to become the victim of social parasites and bogus business men. The daughter marries for love much against the wishes of her proud brother. The young man who has toiled diligently in his father's factory is forced to run away because of his brother's crime which has been fastened upon him. The mother—Mary Carr—watches two of her children depart and then discovers that this promising son on whom she has showered so much affection, is himself accused of forgery. He, too, absconds, but his waywardness forces his mother into bankruptcy. After the mother has drunken deep the dregs of poverty the family is brought together by curious twists of fate and once again happiness enters into the portals of their lives.

VANCOUVER, Sept. 15.—(Canadian Press)—The third Triennial Meeting of the Canadian Women's Press Club will begin a three day's session here on Monday, Sept. 24. Its membership of three hundred includes not only newspaper women from coast to coast, but also the Dominion's best known novelists, poets, magazine writers and publicity women, and artists in black and white. Many will spend some weeks exploring western beauty spots and studying conditions. About two hundred are expected to gather to discuss professional matters and the programme includes papers on "Syndicating," Mrs. Joseph Price, Calgary; "Marketing Securities," Miss Agnes Elizabeth Wilson, of Toronto; "Advertising as a Profession," Miss Eleanor Stevens, Toronto; "Ethics of Journalism," Miss Kenneth Haig, Glasgow; "The Field for Canadian Publications," Mrs. Isabel Ecclestone Mackay, Vancouver. Mrs. Lucy Swanton Doyle, of the Toronto Telegram, will deliver her presidential address at the opening session, at which Mrs. Margaret E. Lawrence, of St. John, N.B., will answer the address of welcome. On Sept. 27th, the Club is to go to Victoria as the guests of the C.P.R. for a two day' trip and the programme includes a dinner given by the Victoria Women's Press Club and a reception by the Lieut-Governor, Hon. W. C. Nichol, at Government House. A motor driven around Victoria's environs will be taken Friday morning and on returning to Vancouver, if the Empress of Asia locks in time the Club will be assisted at a luncheon in their honor on Saturday.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR DAN-DRUFF.

Bullion From Sea.

$4,000,000 GIVEN UP BY LAURENTIC-GOLD FROM SUNK LINER TO RELIEVE TAXPAYER.

Taxpayers will rejoice to hear that the salvaging of the gold and bullion from the great White Star liner Laurentic, torpedoed off the Irish coast about seven years ago, is yielding excellent results. Bar gold and silver specie to the value of about $4,000,000 sterling have been recovered from the sunken vessel and lodged in the Bank of England, as a result of the salvage operations conducted by the Navy. These operations, which were begun in 1918, have been carried out by divers from H.M.S. Racor, the Admiralty salvage ship, guarded by destroyers. There were many interruptions due to bad weather and other circumstances. It is anticipated in official quarters that the work will be finished about the end of September. Naval personnel only have been employed on the operations, and the fact that despite the difficulties they should have been so successful and free from untoward happening is regarded as a notable achievement. The Laurentic, a steamship of 14,892 tons, was sunk 15 miles from Lough Swilly in 30 fathoms of water. In her strong room was bullion worth approximately $5,000,000, consigned by the British Government to American bankers, and of this all but 120 gold bars has now been recovered. Last year the Government sent to the scene of the salvage operations a professor, who had impressed the Admiralty with a scheme for locating the gold with a device which operated something after the manner of a diving rod. The diver was armed with a special spear, with which he prodded the sand and mud covering the wreck. On the fact of the Racor was a galvanometer, a sort of clock with the hand pointing to zero. When the diver appeared a piece of iron or other base metal the hand went to the left. When he touched gold the hand veered to the right, and veered further to the right when he touched 18-carat than if he speared a 9-carat bar. The work of the divers is frequently hazardous. Not only is there the risk of submarines, of mines, and of rising rapidly feet foremost to the surface, but they are also subject to sudden attacks by huge dog-fish, and deadly fights take place. Two accidents happened this year. In one case the heavy leaden shoe of a diver came off, and he came shooting up straight to the top. A loose shoe was also the cause of the other accident. A second diver went down to assist his mate to make it fast, and, while stooping, the weights round his neck and chest dropped off and he came to the top feet uppermost. He was seen bobbing about on the surface 90 feet astern, and nearly dead when he got aboard. He was placed inside a big boiler, and a fresh supply of air was pumped into him to reduce the blood bubbles. Too much pumped air is liable to be fatal, and altogether it is a very difficult operation, but, happily, in this case it was successful. The Racor returns to Port Alox, Lough Swilly, between five and six every night, and after she is moored, the boxes of gold are loaded into a cutter in charge of the bullion officer and taken to the destroyers Sarpedon or Raider, the two boats detailed for the work, and which are anchored off the Lough Swilly coast. When the recovered bullion is worth about a million sterling the destroyer, with her precious cargo, steams for Chatham, whence it is taken secretly and guarded to the Bank of England. The divers get a share of 1-32nd part of the value of what is recovered. Last year the share was 1-16th, but so much was salvaged that the authorities reduced the rate of the prize money. The wear and tear of the divers' hands indicate the arduousness of their work. They have scarcely any vestige of finger nails, and their fingers are much cut about. Every night before the diver last down leaves the wreck he places a charge of dynamite against any portion of iron work which interferes with access to the bullion chamber. This is fired by dropping a piece of tin into the water and making contact. The effect of the explosion is that the surface of the water is covered with fish stunned by the shock, and they provide the first course for dinner at night. The gold and silver recovered in the past three years is of the following value:—

Table with 2 columns: Year, Value. 1921: £ 600,000; 1922: 1,250,000; 1923 (up to August 1): 1,957,625. Total: £2,817,625. Less than £1,500,000 remains. This great salvage feat is without equal in the history of diving.

The contract for heating and plumbing at the Insane Asylum has been awarded Mr. W. L. Hallyard, nephew of the Colonial Secretary. Some six or five houses tendered for the job which is estimated to cost in the vicinity of $5,000.

Princess Shot Dead.

LONDON SHOP GIRL'S FATE IN EGYPT—SHOW QUEEN OF THE STAGE.

Brief cables from Egypt announce the death from a pistol wound of the beautiful English wife of a prince in Alexandria. She was accidentally shot, it seems, in the act of cleaning a toy revolver, which she intended bringing to London in a travelling case already packed for the holiday trip. At the age of 26 she had had three husbands, had twice petitioned for divorce, and married two Egyptian princes in succession. The daughter of the licensee of a London suburban public-house, she began life in a Regent-street shop, went on the stage for her good looks and ability to dress, was courted, feted and spoiled by the gilded youth before the war, and assisted a nobleman's son to run through a fortune of a hundred thousand pounds. Just a show or chorus girl in those days, she was the envy of stagelands and a certain society set, but after her first marriage she dropped out of the gay life of London. Now it seems that a sensational fight may be expected for the estate of the princess. Her second husband, a nephew of the ex-Khedive, claims that their divorce was illegal, and that he is entitled to all the property left by the princess, including jewels valued at $20,000. It is a singular coincidence that a deceased elder sister also married a prince—the Duke of Ansoia, who is Prince Louis Alphonse of Bourbon.

Arrested 40 Times at Wife's Request.

Montreal, Sept. 15.—"How many times has your wife had you arrested during your 25 years of wedded bliss?" Tom Coleman, 65 years of age, charged with non-support, was asked in court. "I have a record that will beat that of any other man in Montreal," answered Coleman. "She had me arrested about 40 times—starting soon after we were married, and even when I was hurt and had to go around on crutches." "It's a lie," shouted Mrs. Coleman, aged 60, from the well of the court. "Order, order," shouted the court. But Mrs. Coleman was not to be stopped. In the witness box and out of it she kept up a running fire of questions, denunciation and comment of her husband, who had a denial ready for each accusation. She maintained in picturesque language that her husband was not telling the truth. "Mrs. Coleman," interposed the judge, "you talk so much that I am astonished your husband was ever able to live with you at all. You won't let me give his evidence; you interrupt his lawyer, and you appear to need watching finds himself, at some hour of the night, questioned and invited to detective headquarters, where, after further grilling, he is led to the identification bureau and records and the Rogue's Gallery are searched to ascertain if he has ever been 'honored' by the authorities. If he is found to have a record in some other city, he is promptly ordered out of town, and the police see to it that he 'shlups' without delay. If he is a Montrealler with a record, he is reminded that he had better be a good boy and is released with a warning." "Visit Stations. From time to time during the night, the 'cockroaches' drop into various stations around the city, sometimes to report that a man on the beat should be especially watchful of a certain street or building, sometimes to pick up any information of value that may have drifted over the phone from the underworld in the last few hours. But the patrol is continuous, and the sergeants are especially vigilant during the last two hours of their watch, for from four to six in the morning appear to be zero hours for yeggs in Montreal. Crimes of passion, sneak thieves' operations with false keys which are often carried out in daylight, are of course mainly outside the control of the squad. But in the domain for which the squad was intended, it is a pronounced success, and it is possible that, as soon as men can be spared, this preventive measure will be extended.

Hints for Your Home.

Milk should be kept in a well-ventilated place, away from cheese, onions or any other strong-smelling food. Cheese will not become greasy in hot weather if wrapped in all cloth, wrapped in cold water. A fresh cloth is needed daily. Faded carpets are improved by being rubbed with warm water in which a tablespoonful of borax and a little ammonia have been dissolved. To clean a sponge, soak it for a day in a solution of three ounces carbonate of soda dissolved in two pints of water. Rinse well in cold water, and expose to the sun for a few hours. A copper kettle when in use is liable to become blackened. It can be cleaned by rubbing half a lemon dipped in salt over the surface of the metal, afterwards washing it in warm water and thoroughly drying. Sarcopans that have been burnt should never be filled with soda water. Instead, fill with salt and water, leave for a few hours, then bring slowly to boiling-point. The burnt particles will then come off without difficulty. Try a whitening-broom and hot water the next time you have clothes to dampen. They will be ready to iron in a very short time. It will not be necessary to get them very wet, as the hot water is absorbed into the fabric more readily than cold. Discoloring ivory knife handles may be cleaned with a mixture of lemon-juice and salt, while discoloured bone handles should be sand-papered and then polished. Clean pearl-handled knives with the salt and polish with a chamouis leather. In the kitchen a little borax in the washing-up water is a splendid grease and stain remover, and it should always be added to the water in which tea-cloths are washed. A pinch added when boiling green vegetables keeps them a good colour, while a hot solution is excellent for cleaning a sponge.

Police Flying Auto Squad.

RESPONSIBLE FOR DECREASE IN ROBBERIES.

(Montreal Star) Montreal's "Cockroach Squad"—the flying automobile patrol that scour the city from nine o'clock each night to six o'clock in the morning—is routing burglars and suspicious visitors, and in the fifteen days the seven cars have been operating serious robberies have dropped almost 50 per cent. while some twenty-five undesirables have been ordered out of town, and have obeyed. Nightly prowlings of the patrol's light-running cars and the suddenness with which their occupants flash into view in the most unexpected nooks and corners have earned the squad the police nickname of "Cockroach." The squad, comprising six sergeants with chauffeurs in light cars and the usual "strong arm gang" from detective headquarters, has already proven the merit of the policy instituted by Pierre Belanger, Chief of Police, to combat crook activities, especially in the rich business and residential sections of the centre of the city. Make Thorough Inspection. Each car has a certain section to patrol, and the patrol is thorough. The cars run through back lanes, into byways, blind alleys, and courtyards; inspection of large buildings is made and anything that looks at all suspicious is at once investigated by the sergeant and by the experienced policeman acting as chauffeur. No two nights is the route of a car the same. As soon as it starts its journey, its itinerary is a mystery to the crook and therein lies the principal element of strength which the squad has at its command. The burglars and second storey men find their spotters crippled, and they are afraid to take a chance on a big job. Strangers, also, are watched by the police prowlers. Little knots of loungers at street corners are swiftly looked over and who appears to need watching finds himself, at some hour of the night, questioned and invited to detective headquarters, where, after further grilling, he is led to the identification bureau and records and the Rogue's Gallery are searched to ascertain if he has ever been "honored" by the authorities. If he is found to have a record in some other city, he is promptly ordered out of town, and the police see to it that he "shlups" without delay. If he is a Montrealler with a record, he is reminded that he had better be a good boy and is released with a warning. Visit Stations. From time to time during the night, the "cockroaches" drop into various stations around the city, sometimes to report that a man on the beat should be especially watchful of a certain street or building, sometimes to pick up any information of value that may have drifted over the phone from the underworld in the last few hours. But the patrol is continuous, and the sergeants are especially vigilant during the last two hours of their watch, for from four to six in the morning appear to be zero hours for yeggs in Montreal. Crimes of passion, sneak thieves' operations with false keys which are often carried out in daylight, are of course mainly outside the control of the squad. But in the domain for which the squad was intended, it is a pronounced success, and it is possible that, as soon as men can be spared, this preventive measure will be extended.

Higher Gasolene Prices Forecast in States.

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—An early adjustment of the tank wagon prices of gasoline upward probably will take place within the near future, according to John Carson, vice-president of the Taxman Refining Co., who returned after an extensive trip through the territory and from New York. "The gasoline prices will continue throughout the Central States," Mr. Carson continued, "just as long as oil refiners continue to sell their products below the cost of manufacture. The refiner who insists on running his plant without a definite place for his products is the root of evil in the industry to-day. Two results are expected to follow continued financial loss for the entire industry, and finally, government supervision."

MODERN CHIVALRY.

Daily Mail: Peace has its roll of honor no less than war. A shell-shocked officer flings off his coat and dashes into the sea to help a girl swimmer in distress, losing his life in saving hers. A boy of eight jumps into a river and with a splendid effort brings his little sister safely to the bank. A one-armed man, fully dressed, swims fifty yards, reaches a drowning girl, and supports her till a second rescuer brings a lifeboat. An engine-driver stops his train, runs back to the place where he had seen a man on

St. John's Municipal Council. PUBLIC NOTICE. WHEREAS Section 150, Sub-Section "D." of the St. John's Municipal Act, empowers the Council to license and regulate or prohibit the posting of bills or placards, and the erection or display of advertisements in the city limits, the following regulations were adopted at a Regular Meeting of the St. John's Municipal Council held August 31st, 1923:

(1)—No bills, placards or advertisements which tend to direct or interfere with traffic, vehicular or pedestrian, shall be erected or attached anywhere within the city limits unless the sanction or authorization of the City Council shall have been first obtained. (2)—No bills, placards or advertisements shall be erected or attached to property in the city limits, unless the consent of the occupier, or failing the occupier owner or agent of the property to which the bill, placard or advertisement is intended to be erected or attached shall have been first obtained, nor in any case without the consent of the Council. "Property" in these Regulations shall mean buildings of any sort, walls and fences surrounding occupied or vacant property, telegraph, telephone and electric light poles and any other erection to which a bill, placard or advertisement can be attached. (3)—Upon the occupier, or failing occupier, owner or agent of any property, giving permission for the erection or attachment of any bill, placard or advertisement to his property, or property under his control, such occupier, owner or agent shall be held personally responsible for such bill, placard or advertisement being kept in a tidy condition and for the removal of same when ordered by the Council. (4)—The firm, company or organization, or individual, whose goods or business is advertised by any bill, placard or advertisement which offends against clauses (1) and (2) of these regulations, shall be held to be the party or parties responsible for the offence, and shall be liable to the penalties hereinafter imposed. (5)—The penalty for each and every breach of these Regulations shall be a fine of not less than Twenty-five Dollars or imprisonment not exceeding thirty days.
