THE TEST. I know there is a great deal said about woman's constancy, and all sort of rubbish, and I admit it is a splendid subject for poets and writers to rave about.

thought of how she had given up her entire love to this man—how she had sat at his feet, so to speak, in the humility of her perfect affection.

When at last she sought her room she was chilled through by the dampness of the cool autumnal night, and after a few hours of fitful slumber, she awoke to the reality of her sorrow and shame.

Then she gathered up all the gifts she had ever received from her lover, removed the betrothal ring slyly from her finger, made all into a package and despatched them without a word.

But, though she neither went into hysteria nor had an attack of brain fever, yet she knew full well how intensely she was suffering, and when her indignant father talked of chastising the catfish, she begged him to be left to the punishment of heaven.

He will receive his just reward, never far, she said with whitened lips. Even as she was speaking a messenger came with the package she had sent, and a note explaining his little move.

Though not his full motive, and breathing undying fidelity and love, and urging her that he would call in the evening and make his peace with her upon the knees of his heart.

But Helene dear, when I tell you just a little more of mine to test your love and constancy, and induced by a bit of badinage from Angier.

And you have the face to tell me that you permit the name of an affianced wife to be the subject of idle language and jest!

Forgive, pardon me, Helene. I see my mistake, and indeed I did not imagine you had interpreted the resignation of your hands as final.

Yes, a woman who is constant to herself and the highest perceptions of right will be true as death to one who serves her esteem.

Let us do our duty in our shop or kitchen, the market, the street, the office, the home, just as faithfully as if we stood in the rank of some great battle, and we know the victory from mankind depended on our bravery, strength and skill.

Angier shrugged his shoulders by way of protest, and Lampton continued: "Don't talk to me about women of character and mind, and all that sort of trash. When I now marry I want a girl with only one idea."

"And that is yourself!" laughed Angier. "Exactly." Then Nellie Ramsey was foreordained before the foundation of the world for you, Lawrence, for, to my positive knowledge, she is not burdened with any other idea.

Lampton spoke the truth when he said Helen Chester was suffering, yet how could she bear the misery all her life, for with her constitution and length, she came to move around as a wounded heart, and physicians ordered change of scene, as she departed to spend the winter in a neighboring city, leaving Nellie Ramsey in full possession of the field, and that young lady looked lovely in her pretty toilet, that set off her pink and white complexion.

A year after Lampton married Nellie and found that she had another reigning passion beside love for him, and that was fashion and dress. Helen Chester had also married and still remained away from her childhood's home.

Every one predicted she would come home a triumphant bride, but for their bridal tour her husband took her to Europe and when they returned she settled down in a calm, peaceful and prosperous home.

The years rolled on maturing and protecting her womanhood until she (now Mrs. Alburta) was a paragon of wisdom and virtue and womanly sweetness.

But at length the ill health of her mother called her home, and with her only child, a noble intelligent boy of ten years, she obeyed the summons. In her wedded life she had found perfect happiness.

Yet the scar of the wound she had received from Lawrence's Lampton still remained, and there were many painful and sad remembrances connected with her visit. She had heard of the prosperity of Lampton. From a promising young lawyer he had risen to the bench.

His only child a weak and delicate boy, somewhat lacking in intellect. This a dozen years had brought to them. Would they meet and under what auspices? She asked herself the question very often during the first days of her arrival.

One day as she and her little boy were returning from a walk in one of the by-roads they came upon some rude fellows tormenting a frail, elegantly dressed lad. In an instant her own manly child had darted into their midst and by a few vigorous blows put the gamins to flight.

"It's a little Julie, the fool!" "It's for so many to pitch on to such a little rat as that, mamma."

Helen stopped down to comfort the child who was weeping loudly. Her mother's heart was broken by the sight. "Julia, what in the world is the matter, and how came you out of the yard?"

At the sound of that well remembered voice Helen released the child from her arms, arose and confronted Lawrence Lampton. Thus they met after the long separation—he so changed with the man, of disappointment and disapproval upon his face and corpulent in form, she so strikingly beautiful in her refined beauty and composed.

"Helene," she returned, perfectly self-possessed, but moved by pity as her eyes dropped from him to the puny, wretched boy. "We came up just in time to protect this child from cruelty."

"Mamma, do you know the gentleman?" broke in Alfred, "and is this little fellow his son?" They were a set of cowards and sneaks imposing on him, and I had the fun of driving them away."

The explanation was made to the father while his gaze wandered from the face of the mother to the child, and again to the mother. "Albe, be quiet," said Mrs. Alburta, preparing to depart, but the boy clung to her skirts, wailing, "No go, no go."

"You will find her pitiable my poor boy," said Mr. Lampton in bitter, almost fierce tones, "and she will go for all your cries and pleadings."

For answer she stooped and kissed the child, and when she again lifted her eyes her head her eyes were filled with tears. Then and without a word she turned to walk away. But in an instant her old lover stood beside her.

"I thank you, Helene. You see I do not even know your other name, do not wish so to do. To me you will always be the Helen of other days, and again I thank you for kindness to my child. Forgive my hasty word and tone. My surprise at meeting you is my excuse."

She replied calmly and politely, and called her true name, who was emptying his pockets of marbles for the boy Julius. "And you my boy," continued Mr. Lampton, placing his hand on the head of her son, "you are as noble as you are kind. I thank you for the manly defence of the weak and oppressed, and I hope you may always as now merit the love and respect of your mother. Her standard with the manly courage is very high, but since her blood flows in your veins you must attain to it, and be took his own child by the hand and entered the gate leading to his home."

"What a funny gentleman, mamma. He looked as if he loved you while, he spoke as if he hated and was angry with you." "Why, mamma, you are crying." "That gentleman was once a friend of mine and is very unhappy now, and the tears came, Albe, because I was very sorry for him." "Sorry for him, mamma?" "Yes, my son, did you not see his only child was foolish?" "Was not poor Lawrence Lampton paying dearly for the test of her constancy? Helen thought so, and while she would not have her own life changed she had a tear of pity for his."

A Western journalist writes: "We witnessed a touching scene the other day. A full-grown, healthy-looking married man going toward the suburbs with a base ball club over his shoulder, and a few minutes thereafter, while passing his house, we noticed his wife sawing wood in the back yard." The Colossus of Rhodes was one of the seven wonders of the world and guarded the entrance of the harbor of that famous city. It was a brazen statue erected in honor of Apollo, the tutelary deity of Rhodes, was 105 feet high, and hollow, with a winding staircase that ascended to the head. It was overthrown by an earthquake after standing 56 years. Mehmet Murad, the new Sultan of Turkey, was married a few years ago to a beautiful Circassian slave, who was purchased for the sum of $12,000. She is reckoned of the most beautiful and accomplished ladies in the empire. Several children have been born to the pair, and the father has devoted much care to their education. The Journal of Agriculture states that there is an unusual mortality among cows this season. In Halifax County, especially along the Windsor-Hammond's Plains roads, a large number have died either before or immediately after calving. The "Journal" records with regret the death of the Jersey Cow, "Dairy Pride," well known in Halifax as the finest animal of the breed ever brought to this Province. Robt. Bagnall, the English oarsman, who was looked upon as the "coming man," has been so badly beaten by Wm. Lumsden, in a three mile race on the Tyne, that he has decided to retire. The race took place on the 9th of May for £100 a side. Lumsden allowed Bagnall to lead at the start, but "collared" him after half a mile had been gone over, and finally came in winner by six lengths—time 24.33. A decked dory is nearly ready for sea, at Gloucester, Mass., in which a single seaman purposes to cross the Atlantic. The boat is 15 feet long, 5 1/2 wide, 2 1/2 deep, and is sloop-rigged. Her deck is laid with the view of saving rain water. The sailor is a foreigner. He intends to sail by night and sleep by day, because vessels will not be likely to run his dory down in daylight. At night he calculates to look out for himself, and keep out of harm's way, if he can. WINDSOR AND ANnapolis RAILWAY.—The new time table went into operation on Monday. By the change, express trains leave Halifax at 8 a. m., instead of 8.30; and the steamer leaves Annapolis on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, instead of Mondays, Wednesdays, and Saturdays. Freight trains will leave Annapolis for Halifax on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, returning to Annapolis from Halifax on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. LONDON, June 11.—Gibraltar is being largely provisioned with supplies for 2,000 men for six weeks. The supplies for the Channel Squadron, and other armaments for a fleet of service, are also being vigorously pushed. The Admiralty has issued a circular commanding that the British and the British authorities in an end and the British Flying Squadron, now at Chifu, has been ordered to hold itself in readiness for immediate action. That is every probability that it will be called upon at short notice to help enforce the claims that are about to be made by the British Minister on behalf of Great Britain. LONDON, June 12.—A despatch from Paris says it is reported that the new Turkish constitution will establish equal rights for all persons; irrespective of creed or religion, abolish the office of Grand Vizier, create a responsible ministry and organize a representative assembly, composed of delegates from the various local councils of the notabilities. It is considered certain that the Government will not again ask for Winslow's aid, unless to have the whole matter argued before a full bench, of which there is some probability. Failing in this, Winslow, next Thursday will either be released or surrendered—the latter solution resting on the contingency of an agreement between the United States and Great Britain upon terms of a new extradition treaty. Special Dispatches to the Morning Chronicle.

EUROPE. LONDON, June 9, p. m.—In the House of Commons this afternoon, Disraeli said the Berlin memorandum was withdrawn because the Porte anticipated some important points, and offered an armistice spontaneously. England's refusal to accept the memorandum had not been received by any power in an unfriendly spirit but with great regret. The great powers agreed to recognize a truce without the usual delay. The necessary credentials were sent to the English ambassador at Constantinople to-night. Disraeli declared further that the letter purporting to bear the signature, recently published in Vienna, stating that England will know how to resist Muscovite aggression is a forgery. The Berlin and Vienna correspondents of the Times agree in stating that all danger of an immediate outbreak on the Serbian and Montenegro frontiers is removed. The Echo has a special telegram from Berlin stating that the czar has prevailed upon Serbia to adopt a peaceful policy. Turkey has spontaneously offered the insurgents the two conditions included in the memorandum, namely—three months armistice and direct negotiations. A Times Vienna despatch says the Ambassadors of three Northern Powers have sent to Murad simultaneously an identical form of recognition from their respective sovereigns. PARIS, June 9.—Intelligence received here says some of the insurgent leaders have accepted the armistice, and others refused. St. Petersburg, June 9.—It is semi-officially stated that the British and the British authorities in an end and the British Flying Squadron, now at Chifu, has been ordered to hold itself in readiness for immediate action. That is every probability that it will be called upon at short notice to help enforce the claims that are about to be made by the British Minister on behalf of Great Britain. It is now certain that a considerable part of the new crop of Wheat in Canada and the United States has been harvested in a damp and unseasonable condition, and that much of the new Flour will be soft, weak and unsatisfactory. Its inferior quality will not be apparent to the buyer, for damp grain makes flour of better color than the dry, in consequence of breaking up of part of the bran of dry Wheat and admixture with the Flour—the latter making strong—while damp wheat makes runny flour. The product of old wheat, or choice sound new wheat, has become of higher value than that which looks quite as well made from moist grain, and all markets report sound grain to be scarce. The Subscriber will use their experience of twenty years in the trade to procure reliable grades of Flour, preferring sound good quality, even if at a little higher price. The following grades always in stock: Canada Superior Extra, Canada Extra, Canada Strong Bakers, Canada Family, Western U. S. Strong Bakers, Patent Process Flour, Minnesota Extra, OATMEAL, CORN MEAL. A particular brand for Family use always on hand, quality of which is guaranteed. HALL & FARWELL. St. John, N. FOOD FOR YOUNG PIGS.

The value of skimmed milk from the dairy for feeding young pigs is generally estimated high enough by the majority of farmers. Corn meal is selling now at only about a cent and a third per pound...

Cow's milk, after most of the cream has been removed, seems to some very near supplying the pig with the best substitute for its natural food, while corn meal, although rich in fat and heat, is so concentrated and so wanting in the elements for growing animals...

Farmers know that milk is good for pigs. They know, too, that skim milk is a waste product of the dairy, and unless fed to animals, would generally be wasted.

Domestic Items. Bathing weak eyes before retiring at night with a little sugar dissolved in warm water.

Three or four tablespoonfuls of vinegar to the gallon of cream before churning will prevent butter becoming soft in hot weather.

Scorchers made by heated flat irons can be removed from linen by spreading over the cloth a paste made of the juice pressed from two onions, 2 oz. white soap, 2 oz. fuller's earth, and 1 pint vinegar.

FLAXSEED LEMONADE (GOOD FOR COLIC). Pour one quart boiling water over four tablespoonfuls of flaxseed. Strain—put into three hours; cover closely while steeping; then strain, sweeten to taste, and add the juice of two lemons, putting in more water if too thick to be agreeable.

FOR COUGHS—Take a knife or grater, and grate or shave in small particles about a teaspoonful of alum; mix it with about twice its quantity of sugar, to make it palatable, and administer it as a lozenge, three or four times a day.

HOW TO KEEP THE FEET WARM.—In a recent number of the Patent Journal, the particulars are specified of an extraordinary contrivance, which is a combination of foot warming apparatus with a boot.

HOW TO STOP.—Although every woman is supposed to know how to "stop," a few hints on the subject may prove advantageous. "Real thread" lace always has but one knot in the dot while the imitation has two.

ESTABLISHED 1849. (Formerly W. H. Adams' City Nail Works.) Orders solicited—prompt attention and satisfaction guaranteed.

TWO DUCKS.

From the Cleveland Leader. A Cleveland drummer was in Elyria a few Sundays ago, and while sitting in his room, heard from the next room the mysterious question and answer:

"Whose ducky are you?" "I see your ducky!" "A few moments passed, during which the drummer sat in open-mouthed wonder, and the silence was again broken:

"Whose ducky are you?" "I see your ducky!" "A few moments passed, during which the drummer sat in open-mouthed wonder, and the silence was again broken:

A beneficial strike—striking a job. The good Samaritan stopped at the sound of woe; so does a good horse.

A truce. An expensive wife makes a penitent husband. Marriage is described by a French cynic as a staircase with a very steep staircase.

The entire assets of a recent bankrupt were nine cents. The creditors asked magnanimously, and let him keep them.

The difference between an overcoat and a lady is: one you wear and the other you wear.

Crusty says that the list of marriages in the newspapers ought to be put under the head of "Ling Frands."

Many a man who has not a cent in his pocket owns a corn which he would not allow you to step on for the world.

A gentleman in Danbury, Conn., has had perseverance enough to take the temperature of a pig every three hours and break it eight times a day.

A woman in a western city recently fell out of a second-story window and struck on her head. She said she didn't know when anything had made her so mad before.
