THE NORDLAND GIRLS.

First of the Baraca's Entertainment Course a Real Treat.

The entertainment given by "The Nordland Girls" in the Foresters' Hall under the auspices of the United Baptist church was the richest musical and histrionic event that it has been the privilege of a Hartland audience to listen to for years. It is really doubtful if ever there was given here by a company of artists a program so thoroughly refined and classic. It is equally doubtful if a company of entertainers, of any class, ever won the same appreciation. We like never to use the superlative but feel it unjust in this case to refrain. So far as the individual numbers of the program were concerned it is impossible to say there was a "best". The readings were quaint selections delightfully given; the soprano has a voice of unusual sweetness, splendidly controlled; the violinist and the cellist are real artists. That there was organ instead of piano accompaniment was a matter for regret. The violoncello has a voice for richness and sympathy unlike anything on sea or land but its timbre is grotesquely approached by the organ and its true sweetness was dulled.

That buildings are built that will not admit a piano, or that pianos are constructed so that they cannot be put into any building, is a matter for regret. Hartland should have a public hall with a piano in it.

The next of the series of entertainments will be an evening with Pitt Parker, the celebrated cartoonist, artist and lecturer. This promises to be of unusual merit, and, although entirely different from the event of Thursday evening, no less interesting.

That Hartland is given the splendid opportunity to enjoy the course, is largely due to the efforts of Rev. S. W. Schuman. As usual, in Hartland, there are those who criticize his activities, but there are more who are grateful.

The toning upward of the local taste for amusements that will result from this course is sure to be marked; and regeneration is needed. There are in the village, and nearby, those who will be satisfied with no lower class of entertainment, even as there are those whose desire will never go above rag-time and coon-shows.

The Observer has never felt more keenly alive to any progressive movement and urges the support of all, for the undertaking is fraught with some hazard from a financial standpoint. The course is not for money-making, but for creating higher ideals in amusement, for preventing cerebral atrophy and mental starvation.

PIANO CONTEST POSTPONED.

Season Too Easy, Roads Too Bad for Cavassers—Will Begin First of the Year.

Confronted on Monday with more work than it seems possible to accomplish, the manager of The Observer could see no prospect of sparing the time necessary to carry on the Piano Contest or any work outside the regular office routine. This is the "busy season" in the newspaper offices, and the prospect is for a continued rush until after the Christmas holidays.

Not being able to give it the time its success would demand and considering the bad roads candidates would have to travel, we reluctantly let the Contest stand aside until January, when, more fully prepared than we are at present, and with the Christmas rush past, the work will be carried on with vigor.

Half-a-dozen candidates have been nominated and have already done good work, enough work to show us it is going to take a lot of time on our part. These candidates are asked to wait until the contest opens again. The votes they have will stand to their credit just the same. In fact, after the holidays the work will go along in precisely the same manner as has already been outlined.

Agricultural School at Woodstock.

Premier Fleming, the board of school trustees and the executors of the Fisher estate were in conference at Woodstock on Friday discussing the plans of an agricultural college, a school of domestic science and manual training.

Mr. Fleming said it was the intention of the government to establish two agricultural colleges in this province, one at Sussex and one at Woodstock, providing the executors of the Fisher estate would be willing to erect such a building, containing also the domestic science and manual training branches of the public school.

The government would bear the whole expense of the maintenance of the institution, the school trustees to have charge of the departments connected with the schools.

The executors and trustees were favorably disposed toward the scheme. Another meeting is to be held when architects and a representative of the Ontario College, with provincial representatives, will be present and endeavor to get facts and data necessary to determine the probable cost of the work.

From present indications the building will be on Chapel street, near Hedley Moore's residence, and will probably cost in the vicinity of $75,000.

On the Farm

MAKE BETTER VEAL.

The high price of mutton during the last few years has encouraged, particularly dairymen, to pay more attention to making good veal, but there is a woeful lack of this kind of meat now on the market.

Most dairymen will not take the trouble to fatten calves, but send them to market just as soon as they are past the age limit, and the result is entirely unsatisfactory, both to the seller and the customer.

Well fattened calves, weighing from 120 to 150 pounds, always brings high prices, no matter what the condition of the cattle market may be. City people eat a great deal of veal and would consume much more if they could get what they want, but the stuff seen on the market is for the most part stringy, unfinished and not all satisfactory.

Many calves are sold when a week old at three to four cents per pound, when if fed until they weighed 25 pounds, would bring double the money, but dairymen have not yet learned how to feed calves in order to make good veal.

The European farmers make good money out of the right calves. The youngster is carefully fed from the day he is born, being confined in dark stalls. He is fed liberally on oatmeal, whole milk at the start and skim milk later, with some roots, and when he goes to market he is about as toothsome a morsel as can be found anywhere. Englishmen are very fond of this kind of meat, and price cuts no figure with them.

There is no reason why our dairymen should not increase their profits materially by feeding calves; and it has always been a source of wonder to us why they so neglect this part of their business.

The fact is, the public, to a large extent, is so prejudiced against veal, having read gruesome tales about both veal being too often marketed, that thousands are afraid to buy veal of any kind. If a better system of feeding calves were adopted, and the business systematized, we would have in a few years a line of choice meat that would sell readily at very high prices.

The first thing that is to be done would be to amend the laws to prevent the railroads and express companies shipping veal under four weeks of age. The amount of immature stuff that goes to market every day is appalling, and we believe that 75 per cent. of it is unfit for food. How it gets past the inspectors is something no man can find out.

LAMB RAISING.

The farmer who will pay close attention to his breeding stock and raise native lambs of uniform size and breed, feed them intelligently and market them at the right time can make more profit from his flock than from any other farm investment. As a rule the native lambs sent to the markets are so badly mixed, both as to breed and feeding that they are a torment to the buyer and of little profit to the owner.

This is one of the reasons why the western range lambs find great favor in the big markets. They are more uniform in size as they are fed in large flocks and go to market practically in the same condition. Only a small portion of the native lambs that are sold on the eastern markets can be called prime, and this fact is entirely the fault of the farmer.

As a rule, sheep-raising on the average farm is merely a side issue and little attention is given to it. The remedy of the present condition of the native lamb market lies entirely with the men who produce the lambs. Whenever the farmers are engaged in the producing of prime lambs for market at any season of the year, the business has proven highly profitable.

Of course the best markets are just before Christmas and in the early spring; at this period the prices are always high.

America is becoming a great mutton-eating nation, and if the farmers will improve their flocks and their methods of feeding there is no reason why the native lamb market should not prove more profitable than that controlled by the range district.

MOST FAMOUS CLAN.

The Clan MacDonald is probably the oldest and most famous of the Scottish clans, claiming descent from Donald, grandson of Somerled of the Isles, in the 12th century. Somerled's name is Norse, "Summerlidhi," summer-slender; that is mariner. He was son of "Gillebrighde," son of "Gille-ad-sannan." These two names are thoroughly Gaelic, so that on the whole Somerled may be regarded as a Gael ruling independently over the mixed Norse and Gael of Argyllshire. Somerled died in 1164.

Few people have will power enough to stop talking when they have said enough.

LIFE OF THE MIKADO.

Yoshihito Will Be Almost the Loneliest Man on Earth.

Yoshihito, youth of thirty-two, has lately succeeded to the imperial throne of Japan. His is a regal magnificence that visits itself upon no other monarch of the earth. Oriental splendor, pomp and ceremony in their very essence invest his rule. His people all but deity him. To them he is the connecting link between God and man. He is the embodiment of the spirit of Japan. He has thirty palaces to live in. The respect his subjects must hold him in is awe-inspiring. They may not so much as mention his name during his lifetime. To say "Yoshihito" is a sacrilege among the Japanese. He must be referred to as the Emperor. When the title is printed capital letters must be used, as must the pronouns referring to him.

Not even the greatest among his subjects may presume to address him. In his presence the greatest must lower their eyes. He may be addressed only through members of the imperial household. At state banquets he will sit alone on a raised dais and none may presume to eat until he has finished. Millions of his subjects bow at the mere mention of his title. Unless he break through precedent he will be the most unapproachable man in the world, which means a splendid location throughout his life.

The question of whether he is personally popular can affect his station little. His subjects believe him descended from the gods. He is the 123rd sovereign of his line tracing the royal descent back to 800 years before the time of Christ. As Emperor he is intrinsically in the intense idealism and mysticism of his people.

But there is another side to the picture. The modern spirit that made its impress upon old Japan in the last decade or two found lodgment with Yoshihito long before he had any thought of becoming a monarch. He learned European ways received a European education developed a fancy for European athletics. As two other sons intervened between him and the throne, he developed into an intensely human young man with many associations, working at school without favor or special consideration. He wedded a merely royal woman with a fondness for European things, particularly for tennis.

Now at thirty-two, in the prime of his youth, he must give up these things in a large measure and sacrifice himself to the splendid isolation and the pomp that are the Emperor's lot. His imperial functions are limited, although the modern spirit has made it possible for him to read war orders and administrative reports when he so desires. That, with ceremony, prayer at the shrine of his forefathers and an occasional review of his troops, must make up his new life.

In its superficial moods the world has been inclined to look upon all rulers of nations as beings upon whom fate has lavished her most bewitching smiles. In time we may come to see these monarchs, or many of them, as unhappy individuals who have been required to sacrifice themselves on the altar of a national fancy and who are destined to a life of repression, isolation and hollowness. An occasional peep behind the royal curtains betrays a sombre truth. A fleeting vision of tragedy was caught by the world when King George reluctantly gave up private life for the throne of England. Another imperial tragedy is suspected in the ascent to the throne of Japan of a young man of thirty-two who had just learned the joy of living.

BEWARE OF THE OPTIMIST.

A New View of the Man Who Is Too Cheery.

A wag has said that pessimists and amateur photographers are curiously alike, in that they always take the worst possible view of everything. An optimist, on the other hand, is popularly supposed to be a brisk, cheery sort of person, who goes about shedding smiles broadcast, and always looks on the bright side of things.

The truest wisdom lies, of course, in refusing to be labelled as either of these extreme types, the best and happiest of all people being those whom it is most difficult to describe. But if you must belong to an extreme type, then I advise you by all means to cultivate a gentle pessimism.

It seems to me that the confirmed optimist needs a heap more luck than falls to the lot of most of us if he is going to make a success of his career, and not a ghastly failure. The smile which never comes off is very jolly and all that, but in real workaday life you will find that it is apt to cause the smiler—and others—a good deal of expensive trouble. Because it is too often the smile of callous indifference or rank stupidity.

The optimist is a bad friend in need. "Never trouble trouble till trouble troubles you," he says gaily, as he slaps you on the back. "Always hope for the best." "Things are never as bad as they seem." "The night is always darkest just before the dawn." These are among his favorite sayings. You grasp him by the hand and declare that it does you good to meet him. And then, if you are a very abject kind of fool, you put all your cares aside, and go with him and enjoy yourself.

Meanwhile the distressed, distressful pessimist, Mr. Dumps, goes on warning you and advising you till you have to be rude to him. And then he takes himself off with a sigh, and does what he can to help you out of your fix in his own peculiarly melancholy, helpful way. But when he has put things right for you, it is the optimist who exclaims breezily: "What did I tell you? I knew that gloomy raven of a Dumps was all wrong!" And then you thank him and say what a capital fellow he is.

But it is perhaps in the commonplace affairs of every day that the optimist gets in his deadliest work, and makes the most complicated mess of things.

For he can never be brought to see that the unexpected is always happening, and that the prudent course is to provide against any possible accidents, however improbable. He is, in fact, too inherently selfish to appreciate the harm he does to others dependent on him by his haphazard ways and devil-may-care methods; and this accounts for his invariable good-humor.

But really the optimist is, in his small way, an unmitigated curse to all in his immediate circle.

EUROPE'S POPULAR BANKS

NOW 18,000 IN GERMANY AND 5,500 IN FRANCE.

Founded by German Financier with a View to Assisting Farmers.

The popular banks of Europe were first instituted about seventy years ago in Germany. From their beginning they have been founded and conducted upon the basis of the unlimited liability of the shareholders. These banks are now found practically in all the countries of Europe, serving especially two classes of the people, the farmers and the wage earners.

The inception of the popular banks may be found in the brain of the well-known German financier and philanthropist Raiffeisen. According to Moody's Magazine he first conceived this beneficent plan for the amelioration of the conditions surrounding agricultural people. In 1847 he established the first caisse rurale, or agricultural bank.

His purpose was actuated solely by a desire to help the farmer by placing within his grasp the facilities with which to help himself, to improve his equipment and to increase his acreage and the productivity of his land and stock.

PLAN QUICKLY GAINS FAVOR.

He neither sought nor obtained assistance from the government, but from the first relied upon the perfect mutuality of all the elements of the plan. The wisdom and practicality of Raiffeisen's system can have no better proofs than the thousands of societies which have been founded during these intervening years upon the identical plans which he conceived and successfully established in the beginning.

Contemporaneous with Raiffeisen another German, Schultz-Deletzsch, established the first popular bank or co-operative credit society for the benefit of the people of the towns, tradesmen and institutions.

He is undoubtedly entitled to quite as much credit as we accord to Raiffeisen, as he extended the work of the latter by assisting a different class of the people who were quite as much in need of banking facilities as were those in the farming districts.

ARTICLES OF ASSOCIATION.

The following are some of the articles of association upon which the success of these banks has been established:

The capital of the society is not fixed, but varies according to the number of stockholders.

The capital is divided into shares of $1 to $5 par value each (i. e., francs, lire, marks, etc., as the case may be.)

The foundational object of the society is to procure to its stockholders the credit necessary for their business to stimulate the habit of saving surplus and to provide a safe and remunerative investment for such savings.

The shareholders shall be mutually responsible to the extent of their respective private fortunes for the liabilities of the society, which liabilities are divided among the shareholders pro rata.

No person is accepted as a shareholder unless he is well known to the directors, a citizen of the same locality, and known to be honest, sober and economical.

PRINCIPLES OF LOANING.

The shareholders alone are eligible to borrow money from the bank. The specific purpose for which the loan is asked must be explained, and only the necessary amount actually required is loaned. (This principle of loaning only to shareholders insures to a great degree the security of the loan in that the borrower will naturally protect his own investment as a shareholder.)

The management of the society rests with the governor, board of directors, auditors and the general meetings of the shareholders. These will all vary in number according to the volume of business transacted.

In Germany there are at present 18,000 institutions of this character, of which over 10,000 are country popular banks. There are some differences in the details of the constitution and management of these banks, depending upon local conditions.

About five hundred of the number are based upon the limited liability of the shareholders, and the remaining 9,500 follow the plan of unlimited liability and moral mutuality among the members. During the last year of 1910 the gross business of the German societies amounted to over 6,000,000,000 marks, equal to $1,500,000,000.

NEW IN ENGLAND.

In England the organization of popular banks has only recently been undertaken and their success is still a matter for future development, though it may be safely predicted, as there is ample opportunity and a recognized necessity for these banking facilities in rural districts. There they are known as village credit societies, agricultural credit societies or agricultural banks.

In Austria there are more than

certainly do make short work of headaches. 25¢ per box.

4,000 popular banks and agricultural credit societies and in Hungary about seven hundred. In Belgium there are over 300 agricultural or co-operative societies, of which 290 are based upon the Raiffeisen system.

In Italy there are over 7,000 popular banks and credit societies under the same system, established under the personal guidance of Mr. Wollemborg; of this number 736 are purely popular banks. The Italian popular banks represent a capital of 95,000,000 francs, surplus 57,000,000 francs, total 152,000,000 francs. The rate of interest on loans averages 4 to 6 per cent., and the rate paid on deposits is 3 to 4 per cent.

In France the popular banks are variously known by the names of Credit Agricole Mutual, Caisse Rurale and Regionale, Caisse Ouvriere, etc. They number in the different classes over 5,500 banks and societies with over 1,800,000 shareholders. All these societies enjoy the control of the French Government, as also its financial help.

KEEP CHILDREN WELL DURING HOT WEATHER

Every mother knows how fatal the hot summer months are to small children. Cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentery and stomach troubles are rife at this time and often a precious little life is lost after only a few hours illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the Tablets prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if the trouble comes suddenly, as it generally does—the Tablets will bring the baby safely through. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

AN EGYPTIAN SINDBAD.

His Story Told in Ancient Papyrus 5,000 Years Old.

In the hermitage museum of St. Petersburg there is a very ancient papyrus, nearly 5,000 years old, which contains a story reminding one, says a writer in the Raja Yoga Messenger, of the adventures of the famous Sindbad in the "Arabian Nights."

The hero, a very ancient mariner, begins by saying that he was one of a band of 160 fearless adventurers, "whose hearts were stronger than lions, and who had seen heaven and earth." They were on their way to the Mines of Pharaoh in a ship of 160 cubits, but ill fate awaited them, for presently the wind rose and threw up mighty waves and the ship was wrecked.

Every one perished but the hero, who was washed ashore on a piece of wood. He found himself stranded upon an island, but it was no desert. There were fruits and goodly herbs and many other fine things. The sailor had been piously brought up, for after enjoying a good meal he made an offering to the gods.

Immediately the marvels began, and it is clear that the good character of the hero saved him from destruction, for the next thing he saw was a huge serpent of terrible aspect, his body overlaid with gold and his color a bright blue. However, the serpent did him no harm, but, politely, asked how he had reached the island.

Being satisfied with the answer, the king of the serpents, for it was no less a personage, carried the sailor in his mouth to a place where there was a tribe of seventy-five other serpents. The serpent king said: "If thou hast come to me it is God who has let you live. It is He who has brought you to this Isle of the Blessed, where nothing is lacking and which is filled with all good things."

The serpent then told him to be of good cheer for he would be rescued by a ship from his own land in three months. Our Egyptian Sindbad spent much of his time watching for the ship from the top of a tall tree. At last it arrived, and the first thing he did was to run to the king serpent to tell him. His surprise was great when he found that the serpent knew all about him, and had some gifts ready for him to take away. On parting the serpent said: "Farewell; go to thy home and see thy little children once more; let thy name be good in thy town."

The sailor was very grateful for the kindness he had received and he offered to speak for the serpent before King Pharaoh and to return with a ship full of treasures fit for such a friend of men cast away in a far off land. But the serpent said, for no, they would not meet again, for the magical island would disappear and melt away when he was gone.

HANDLORE AND SYMBOLISM.

Signs of Weakness and Strength—When a Man Is Lying.

When a man is not telling the truth he is apt to clench his hands, as few men can lie with their hands open.

A man who holds his thumb tightly within his hand has weak will power. Strong willed persons hold their thumbs outside when shutting their hands.

Shaking hands when greeting was originally an evidence that each person was unarmed.

Among savage tribes when a man holds up his hands it is a sign of peace, an evidence that he is unarmed or does not intend to use weapons. An outlaw says "Hold up your hands!" meaning thereby to make his victim powerless to resist attack.

When a man kisses the hands of a woman he expresses his submission. This is also the idea when kissing the hands of kings. By this act their superiority is acknowledged.

When an oath is taken it is done by raising the right hand or laying it upon a Bible.

In the consecration of bishops, priests and deacons and also in confirmation the laying of hands is the essence of the sacramental rite.

A bishop gives his blessing with the thumb and first and second fingers. In this the thumb represents God the Father, the first finger is the emblem of God the Son, and the second finger stands for God the Holy Ghost, the three together symbolizing the Holy Trinity.

The wedding ring is placed upon the third finger of the woman's hand to show that after the Trinity, man's love, honor and duty are given to his wife.

Beside the deaf and dumb there are many people, notably of Latin and Semitic races, who talk with their hands.

CAREFUL DOCTOR.

Prescribed Change of Food Instead of Drugs.

It takes considerable courage for a doctor to deliberately prescribe only food for a despairing patient, instead of resorting to the usual list of medicines.

There are some truly scientific physicians among the present generation who recognize and treat conditions as they are and should be treated, regardless of the value to their pockets. Here's an instance:

"Four years ago I was taken with severe gastritis and nothing would stay on my stomach, so that I was on the verge of starvation. I heard of a doctor who had a summer cottage near me—a specialist from N. Y.—and as a last hope sent for him.

"After he examined me carefully he advised me to try a small quantity of Grape-Nuts at first, then as my stomach became stronger to eat more.

"I kept at it and gradually got so I could eat and digest three teaspoonsful. Then I began to have color in my face, memory became clear, where before everything seemed a blank. My limbs got stronger and I could walk. So I steadily recovered.

"Now, after a year on Grape-Nuts I weigh 153 lbs. My people were surprised at the way I grew fleshy and strong on this food."

PLANTS HAVE EYES.

Prof. Haberlandt Says He Has Found Them in Tree Leaves.

After long experimenting and study Prof. Gottlieb Haberlandt of the Botanic Institute, of Graz, in Styria, declares that plants, the word taken in its widest sense, and including trees, can see.

The professor says that he has succeeded through photography and the use of the microscope on the visual organs of plants. The images included objects at different distances, and even persons and houses. Plants may, he says, be classed with the inferior animals in this respect. His observations have been confirmed by Dr. Nuttall and Dr. Harold Wagner.

We are still so ignorant of animal, plant and insect life (because we do not understand their language) that we fancy the plant, like the insect, is not conscious of what it sees, but that is probably a discovery for the future. At present we are forced to accept the theory that they are not conscious.

But that they do see, Prof. Haberlandt says, he has satisfactorily proved. He has found the same minute eye such as belongs to bees and other insects in sycamore leaves, in the sugar maple and in the Peruvian acanthus. The eyes of plants appear different from the eyes of insects in that they have no coloring matter, though this is not yet determined.

The professor is continuing his experiments, and he expects to make further interesting and surprising announcements. He says that plants and trees have eyes is undoubtedly a proof that all natural life is linked in one long chain.

On Sale Everywhere.—There may be country merchants who do not keep Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, though they are few and far between, and these may suggest that some other oil is just as good. There is nothing so good as a liniment or as an internal medicine in certain cases. Take no other. The demand for it shows that it is the only popular oil.

PUTTING HIM RIGHT. "Do you admire Burns' poems?" asked the young man with the serious face.

"Pardon me for correcting you," answered Mrs. Pansy Hobblerot, "but Mr. Burns ain't a poetry writer. He's the famous author of detective stories."

A HAY FEVER OPTIMIST. "He sure is an optimist." "So?" "No question of it." "But I heard him growling yesterday because he has hay fever." "That's just the point. He's had it for ten years, but always he is sure that he won't get it next year."

MAN'S REAL DIGNITY. Every young man when starting in the race of life should stamp into his being the fundamental principle of all moral philosophy—that the real dignity of a man lies not in what he has, but in what he is. Beware of being infected by the moral contagion which more or less taints the atmosphere of every rich trading and manufacturing community—the contagion which breeds a habit of estimating the value of men by the external apparatus of life rather than by its internal nobility.

HOW TO AVOID SEA SICKNESS.

There are a few homely remedies for seasickness, such as stuffing the ears with cotton wool, taking a strong cup of very hot coffee or a teaspoonful of neat Worcestershire sauce just before embarking, which may tide the poor sailor safely over a short journey. Chronic victims of sea sickness, however, should give the liver a rest for 24 hours before going on a voyage, eating only food of a simple and readily digestible nature. Rest, with the head lowered in a comfortable position with the hands and feet kept warm, is the first rule in all cases.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

An eminent scientist, the other day, gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a single thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or sore, such injury is insured against blood poison! Not one species of microbe has been found that Zam-Buk does not kill!

Then again, as soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or to skin disease, it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk.

Again, as soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or to a diseased surface, the cells beneath the skin's healthy tissue is quickly formed. This forming of fresh healthy tissue from below is Zam-Buk's secret of healing. This is why Zam-Buk cures are permanent.

Only the other day Mr. Marsh, of 101 Delormier Ave., Montreal, called upon the Zam-Buk Co. and told them that for over twenty-five years he had been a martyr to eczema. His hands were at one time so covered with sores that he had to sleep in gloves. Four years ago Zam-Buk was introduced to him, and in a few months it cured him. To-day—over three years after his cure of a disease he had for twenty-five years—he is still cured.

All druggists sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box, or we will send free trial box if you send this advertisement and a 1c. stamp (to pay return postage). Address Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

A Remedy for Bilious Headache. To those subject to bilious headache, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are recommended as the way to speedy relief. Taken according to directions they will subdue irregularities of the stomach and so act upon the nerves and blood vessels that the pains in the head will cease. There are few who are not at some time subject to biliousness and familiar with its attendant evils. Yet none need suffer with these pills at hand.

HIS TIME LIMITED.

"Your beau," remarked the first summer girl, "doesn't seem to care to spoon in secluded nooks."

"No," responded the second summer girl, "the poor gink only has four days in which to acquire a coat of tan."

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited, Caterham, Nfld. Dear Sirs.—While in the country last summer I was badly bitten by mosquitoes, so badly that I thought I would be disabled for a couple of weeks. I was advised to try your Liniment to allay the irritation and did so. The effect was more than I expected, a few applications completely curing the irritation, and preventing the bites from becoming sore. MINARD'S LINIMENT is also a good article to keep off the mosquitoes. Yours truly, W. A. V. R.

THE MASHER.

A masher is a despicable creature who gets a good deal of encouragement.

No child should be allowed to suffer an hour from worms when prompt relief can be got in a simple but strong remedy—Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator.

Too often it is the things we shouldn't do that seem to make life worth living.

FORCE OF HABIT.

One of the French marshals who had been defeated by the Duke of Wellington in the Peninsula tried to insult the duke, when the latter was visiting Paris. But in the ballroom as on the battle-field, the victory was Wellington's.

Louis Philippe of France had just introduced the marshal to the duke. Smarting under the memory of his defeats, the marshal thought to slight Wellington by him. Louis Philippe was greatly displeased, and apologized for his general's rudeness.

"Forgive him, sir," said the duke. "I taught him to do that in the Peninsula."

It doesn't take very long for the worst to happen.

SOMETHING ABOUT SALT.

The chief thought about salt in the midst of all holiday-makers will be in connection with the sea; but it has other uses and significance. Most people think that spilling salt is unlucky. This superstition has been handed down from the ancient Romans. Two or three hundred years ago all the servants of the wealthy sat below the salt to show their humble origin, and this custom was observed not so very long ago in Scotland. Salting a coffin is still prevalent among some nations, but the most curious use to which salt is put to-day is in Abyssinia and Tibet, where cakes of salt are employed as money.

HINTS ON CANNING.

Always screw the lids of the glass fruit jars so tightly that it will be necessary to break the cans open with a hammer next winter. This is one of the first principles of canning and it should never be violated.

Can everything you find excepting your husband. You may need him from time to time.

It is better to remove the pits from peaches before canning them, for the pits are hard to digest and form a very heavy diet when eaten in the winter. Canned peaches are more to be pitied than censured.

It's all right to build castles in the air if you're willing to work up to them.

A Wonderful Bargain.

For a great big dollar's worth the offer this season by the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal cannot be beaten. A sample copy of their new picture "Mother's Treasures," size 23 by 29 inches, all ready for framing, has reached this office. It certainly is beautiful and every home in Canada will be the better of having a copy in the house.

The Family Herald and Weekly Star, bigger, brighter and better than ever, along with such a beautiful picture, all for one dollar, is a bargain that should be taken advantage of. It is only The Family Herald and Weekly Star that can offer such a picture free with a year's subscription. People wonder how it can be done, yet still it is done, and the people get the benefit.

ADVANCE IN POTATO PRICES.

Produce Prices High—Eggs Scarce.

That there was this year an over-production of potatoes in all the sections that specialize in the crop is not going to mean the low prices at one time feared. Not kindly intervened and carried off the surplus tubers so that the supply is normal, while the demand is good. The prospect is that potatoes will not go below the present price and that price will likely advance. Still it stands the farmers well in hand to take advantage of what the market offers today and dispose of a portion of their holdings.

Eggs are scarce and high. The farmers who keep a flock of pure-bred poultry and care for them intelligently and with pains, reaps a big reward. The poultry industry is on an upward trend.

Good prices prevail for dressed pork and for all kinds of poultry. There are practically no yellow-eyed beans. Oats are at a fancy figure and buckwheat is in good demand. There is little moving in the hay market as yet.

It was a hard season, crops averaged poor, but higher prices is the farmers' compensation.

Potatoes, $1.10 per barrel.
Hay, $5. to $8. per ton, loose.
Oats, 40 to 45 cents per bushel.
Buckwheat, 45c. per bushel.
Yellow-eyed beans, $3.00 per bushel.

Turnips, 40 cents per barrel.
Butter 25 to 27 cents in prints and rolls; to 25 cents in boxes or tubs.

Eggs, strictly fresh, 30 c. per dozen.
Chickens, carefully dressed, 11c. per lb.

Fowls, 8 cents per lb.
Turkeys, 12 cents per lb.
Geese and ducks, 12c. per lb.

Dressed pork, 8 to 9 1/2 cents per lb., the lighter ones bringing the higher price as usual.

The Epworth League of the Methodist church held its first public service on Sunday evening last under the charge of the social department vice-president, Mrs. G. E. McGinley. The service consisted of choruses, duets, solos, recitations, and an address by Mr. Carr. It was greatly enjoyed by those present. The chairman wishes to thank those who aided in making this first service a success.

On Sunday night some scamps broke open the outer door of the school house, and entering made themselves very much at home. The floor was left strewn with cigarette stubs, the water in the tap was left running, and as the waste pipe was disconnected the floor was flooded. The door of the building was also broken. This may have been fun for those who did it, but it was an unusually foolish thing to do. The trustees are offering a reward of $25.00 for information that will lead to the apprehension of the miscreants.

Record Railroad Construction will cause British Columbia to be the scene of greatest development in Western Canada during the next decade. Premier McBride says will be spent in British Columbia between now and the end of 1915.

Fort George

Is in the centre of this great development

All lots in Central Fort George were sold in sixty days. Other Additions have been put in since. These are going rapidly.

Lots may be had from one hundred and fifty dollars each—Double Corners, three hundred and twenty-five, payments $10 per month per lot or 10 per cent discount for cash.

Now is the time to buy, before the railroads get there. Those who invested in Fort George one or two years ago have already made big profits, but the growing time is ahead. If you have a few or many dollars to invest is the place to put it. I can sell you lots in town sites from St. John to Vancouver, but I believe Fort George is the surest and quickest money maker.

THE JESSOP REBELLION

Mr. Samuel Jessop sat by the open window of the dining-room at Sans Souci, otherwise known as 17, Acacia Terrace, which is the least aristocratic part of Suburbia, West. Opposite him was Esdringham, on the left Versailles, and on the right Chatsworth. All four houses were let at twenty-six pounds a year, exclusive of rates, to desirable tenants of the City-going class to which Mr. Jessop belonged.

The street was straight and dusty and hot. If it had been a little lower class, children would have played hopscotch in the gutter, and piano-organs would have made strident melody, and it would have given some evidences of being alive. If it had been higher class, the houses would have had gardens worthy of being called gardens, rooms which were not always stuffy, and halls in which there was space for more than an umbrella-stand and one visitor, and wallpapers which were really "art," and not merely dreadful imitations.

Mr. Jessop was in Carford & Jellico's, the big export provision firm. His post there was worth just a hundred and sixty pounds a year, and the hope of his ever earning more was too slender to be worth counting upon. Today the junior partner was to be married. Mr. Jessop had given half-a-crown to the silver-rimmed salad-bowl which the staff was presenting, and the firm had responded with an extra day's holiday.

And now Mr. Jessop was sitting at his window, gazing at the vista of insufferable respectability before him, and trying to make up his mind to leave it all and to run away.

It was the merest impulse which had made him stop at the offices of the Canadian Emigration Company on his way home in the evening before, and come away with a handful of booklets and photographs. He had read them through in the suffocating atmosphere of his third-class compartment, left them in the kitchen to be thrown away, and then, suddenly changing his mind, had spent half the morning poring over them again, instead, as Mrs. Jessop had advised, of going for "a nice brisk walk."

Mr. Jessop leathed brisk walks. There was nothing save bricks and mortar, and the plate-glass frontages of the High Street, and the brown, worn-out turf of the recreation ground, to see. It was August, and the longing for green fields and open spaces, and for the scent of winds blowing across rolling plains and winding rivers, had come upon Mr. Jessop, and stirred his blood strangely, and gadded him out of his conventional, black-coated, suburban self.

Fishing aside the papers, he stood up and regarded his surroundings with new, scornful eyes. Five years ago his dining-room furniture—faded oak and imitation leather—had seemed to him the last word in correctness and elegance, and now it struck him as rubbish, and ugly stupid rubbish at that. He hated it. The pictures, "Highland Castle in a Storm," "The Old Man of the Sea," and the others, which would have been glad to consign to destruction, one by one. They were not only purposeless, but in bad taste. As for the pattern of the carpet!

Near the door was an enlargement of himself—one which Mrs. Jessop had given him during their engagement days, when he had been fired with ambition to study languages and to take up a position abroad. It brought him back to the problem of Mary. Did he still love her, or didn't he? Had their marriage been a failure, or had it simply become the ordinary humdrum yoking together of two people who had grown used to one another, and who were mere travelling companions along the dull and arid route which is called life?

Mr. Jessop could not say. Wiser men than he have found it difficult to analyse the depths of their own affection. The wisest have known better than to attempt to analyse a woman's. He only knew that he didn't very greatly care—that the sheer monotony of existence had deadened his emotions until he was tired of everything.

"I'll do it!" said Mr. Jessop, under his breath. Upstairs was twenty pounds the savings of his married life, lately withdrawn from the savings bank, with the wild idea of buying a plot of land at one of the seaside sales.

A boat was sailing from Liverpool to Canada on the following day. Mary could go back to her people in the North. She had furniture worth thirty or forty pounds. He would get a job on a farm, and later, if she cared to join him, and he could afford it, he would send for her. A note would explain everything; there should be no fuss, nor foolish, exhausting exhibitions of emotion.

At the back of his mind, something told Mr. Jessop that he was behaving like a coward and a cad. In the front of his mind, something else warned him that, if he didn't take his chance now, it would never occur again.

He went from the dining-room to the kitchen. Mary, providentially, was out shopping. From the kitchen he wandered upstairs, and for a moment stood in the doorway of the "best" bedroom, with its mad-dancing zig-zag pattern of vivid blue roses. How came it that he had endured such surroundings for so long! He opened the cupboard, dragged out the Gladstone-bag which had been bought for his honeymoon, and began packing.

The packing took just twenty minutes. He had the vaguest ideas as to what he would need, but a man with a hundred and sixty a year has necessarily a limited wardrobe, and he merely filled the bag with the first serviceable-looking garments that came handy.

The cuckoo clock below chimed eleven. There was a fast-up-train to Paddington at eleven-twenty. There wasn't much time to lose. The note to Mary had still to be written.

He carried down the bag, and went into the drawing-room, where he was buying a magazine at a spindly-legged little "Sheraton" bureau that had been Mr. Jessop's pride, was ink and paper. Mr. Jessop, as his eye took in every detail, was seized with fresh disgust.

He wrote the note. It was very short, very much to the point. No sentimental pangs of any sort assailed him. Anxiety to get away in time to catch the train, and before Mary returned, was the only emotion of which he was conscious. But Mary was not in sight when he slammed the front door behind him, and he caught the train with seven minutes to spare.

It was on the platform that he had a sudden disconcerting glimpse of her. She was buying a magazine at a bookstall, and did not see him. Mr. Jessop's heart gave a jump of apprehension. He became absurdly panic-stricken. He made a sidelong dash for the nearest empty compartment, and shrank into the furthest corner, thankful that the Gladstone-bag had already been disposed of.

Mary, to his horror, followed! The thing was utterly unexpected. He had contemplated all sorts of contingencies and hitches, but not this. He reflected that the train did not stop until it reached Westbourne Park. He sat very still. Mary opened her magazine. He could not see her face, but presently he heard the faint, unmistakable sound of a tear splashing upon the outspread page.

Mr. Jessop found himself watching her, furtively, foolishly. Under his gaze she lowered the paper with a sudden movement, and looked up.

"You!" she said, and the color in her face deepened slowly.

"Where—where are you going?" demanded Mr. Jessop.

"To London, and then to Liverpool."

He realized that she had followed him—that in some incomprehensible manner he had been found out.

"To Liverpool?" he repeated.

"I'm going away—to Canada. I am never going back to Acacia Terrace again—never, never! I won't go back!"

"Why?" demanded Mr. Jessop, shakily.

Unfamiliar fires burned in his wife's eyes as she turned and faced him. They shone with the exasperation of a hunted animal.

"Because, since what I read yesterday, I can't endure my life here any longer! Mean houses in mean streets, with mean little duties, and nothing more! If you'd tried to understand, to make things easier—if you'd made greater allowances—But you didn't. You'd your own routine, your own work, your own outlook! A woman—a married woman—if her voice faltered for a moment—"

"If she's not children, just stays at home until she's poisoned with the bitterness of her life! And so I'm going where there's air and sky and sea. I'm going to work for my living—as housekeeper, needlewoman, drudge of any sort. I'm going to live. You don't want me—you won't miss me! You'll soon forget!"

He stared at her, without words in which to break the long silence that followed. A succession of confused, detached thoughts struggled for precedence in his mind. Mary's outburst was hysteria—the purest hysteria, of course. But it had given him, for the first time, the Other Person's point of view. It had never occurred to Mr. Jessop before that his wife's life had, in any sense of the word, been anything of a martyrdom. Women, he had always understood, were different. Their outlook was narrower. If Mary hadn't been happy, it was largely her own fault. Why hadn't she taken up a sensible hobby?

Why—

And yet—

He got up from his seat and came nearer.

"Where were you going?" she demanded suddenly.

"To London, and then to Liverpool."

Her heavy eyes widened.

"Do—you—mean—"

"I mean that I'd come to the end of my tether, too. I was going to clear out—to leave Carford's and you. If I'd dreamed—"

He paused, on the verge of recrimination.

She twisted away from him, and hid her face in the dusty cushions. Her body shook with sobs.

The train raved through a station. Mr. Jessop stared unseeingly at the platform, with its kaleidoscopic crowd of people. They were nearing London. The houses were growing poorer and poorer and more sordid, the gardens mere grimy little yards behind them. The heat and smoke of the metropolis was heavy over all.

Jessop turned slowly to his wife. The brave mantle of the adventurer fell away from him. He saw himself clearly—a coward, who had forgotten the duty, which lay nearest to his hand.

"It is too late to make a fresh start!" he asked at last.

"If I thought I still mattered to you a little—" her voice was muffled, and he had to bend now to catch the words. "I've been so—so lonely!"

He threw her towards him, forgetting how far from one another they had drifted. His own grievances dwindled and vanished.

"I've been lonely, too. We'll begin again, dear."

The train drew up with a grinding rattle. Mechanically they climbed out.

"Have you any luggage?" he asked.

"A basket—in the van."

He fetched it, together with his own bag. A porter carried both across to the down platform, and told them that there would be a train back in ten minutes.

Rain was falling heavily when the Jessops reached Acacia Terrace again. The exhausting heat of the past week had broken. The gutters were flooded with noisy little streams, and the sparrows were squabbling happily in the newly-washed trees.

Mr. Jessop opened the door with the latchkey which, from sheer habit, he had slipped into his pocket.

"Home again!" he said, and smiled awkwardly.

"Home again!" echoed Mary, hovering between tears and laughter.

It was the phrase he had used when their honeymoon had come to an end, and they had entered No. 17 for the first time as man and wife.

She pulled up the venetian blinds as an excuse for action. Mr. Jessop had passed quickly to the kitchen, and was tearing across and across the note he had left on the dresser an hour earlier. He started guiltily at Mary's step outside.

He came forward, opened it, and passed it back to her with shaking fingers. It was the offer of the management of a Colonial branch of Carford's. The salary, to begin with, would be six hundred pounds a year. The sole condition involved was that he should arrange to leave England in a week's time.

"I suppose you'll accept?" said Mrs. Jessop at last faintly. "It will be a wrench."

"There are bound to be sacrifices," said Mr. Jessop. He thought of his faded oak dining-room furniture, and for the moment his heart grew heavy within him. "But—"

"Nothing will matter if we have each other," said Mary, smiling happily.—London Answers.

A STICK FOR A HUMP.

Swing a stick for a hump, physical or mental! A well-known physician recently stated that fewer round shoulders would be observed in our young men of to-day could they but cultivate the habit of carrying a stick. As will easily be seen, the use of a walking-stick inevitably pulls back the arm. And so, quite naturally, too, the chest is pushed forward, thus allowing of its expansion. Whereas the man who carries nothing is invariably nervously conscious of his hands. And to hide them away somewhere, what puts them in his pockets. What happens by the use of a walking-stick, he brings his hands into the line of a slouch, and so to a stoop. But to be at all efficacious, the walking-stick carried must be of ordinary size—that is, to reach as far as the hip. A shorter stick fails in its mission. For either it is swung in the hand, with the other hand in the pocket, or it is carried high under the arm, with both hands buried deep.

FOR THE CANNING SEASON.

In the operation of canning and preserving the most important thing is the getting ready, and this begins far in advance of the actual canning day. Kettles which have never been used for any other purpose than preserving, spoons, knives, forks, skimmers, dippers, funnels, jelly bags, fruit press, strainers, scales, measures, and all necessary implements should be in a state of perfect order and cleanliness. Have enough suitable jars, cans, glasses, etc., with rubbers, tops and covers at hand, plenty of paraffin, labels and cloths for wiping and handling utensils. A long-sleeved apron of red calico will not show stains. The table will be absolutely clean if several layers of newspaper are spread over it. If there is any danger of juice being dropped upon a good floor or linoleum, papers may be spread down there also.

Procure the best fruits and vegetables. Overripe fruits never make good preserves or jellies. Use granulated sugar for all preserves, jellies and jams, light brown sugar for spiced fruits. Heat the sugar for jellies in the oven before adding the fruit juice. Do not cover while cooking unless you want trouble.

Put jars, covers and rubbers in a pan of cold water and bring gradually to a boil. Boil 15 to 20 minutes. When the fruit is ready empty the jars and place upside down on a hot cloth. Put on the sterilized rubbers. Place a knife in the jar while filling, so that bubbles will break. Fill and overflow the jars. Remove the knife and overflow again. Screw on the sterilized tops immediately. After screwing the tops on, dip into hot paraffin over the rubber, thus filling any tiny air passage. Place the jars upside down until cold. Wash off the jars and put in a dry, cool place. A common error when canning fruit is that of retightening the covers of glass jars after the same have become thoroughly cold. This should never be done, as it loosens the cement, which is formed by the rubber ring of common fruit jars coming in contact with the heat, which makes the jars airtight.

The proper method is to fill the jars to the top with the boiling fruit, put on the rubber rings and screw the covers on as tight as possible. If this method is followed a spoiled jar of fruit will be a rare thing. If old lids and rubbers are used, it is well to test them before risking the precious fruit. Do this by first putting a little hot water into the jars, screwing on the lids, and turning upside down for some time. A silver tablespoon placed within a glass jar while being filled will render it crack-proof.

Much of the success of the canning of fruits depends upon the arrangements of the preserve closet. The position is a serious matter. If possible, the closet should face a north or west wall, never a south or east window, for low temperature maintained without special refrigeration is essential. The shelves of a model closet for preserves should not be deeper than six or eight inches, just wide enough for one row of jars. When two or three rows are placed on the shelf, it necessitates constant moving. No one needs to be told that preserves should be moved as little as possible after the covers have been tightened. It is best to have adjustable shelves. In this way one may economize space and utilize all there is without crowding.

Take a sheet of paper to the inside of the fruit cupboard door. On this write the number of cans of each kind of fruit you put away. Keep a small pencil hanging at the top of the sheet of paper, and each time that you remove a can mark it off. You can then see at a glance what fruits you have on hand without moving the jars about.

When you want to open a fruit jar instead of prying open with a knife, just hold the jar top in warm water for a minute. You will be surprised to see how easily the lid will come off, and besides you will avoid cutting your hands, as oftentimes happens.

A young housekeeper, venturing on her first preserving, may like to know that:

Five boxes of currants will yield nine glasses of jelly.

Six pounds of peaches will yield eight pint jars of preserves.

Seven pounds of peaches will yield fifteen glasses of marmalade.

One peck of quinces will yield twenty-one glasses of jelly.

Four pounds of plums will yield five pint jars of preserves.

Four quarts of crab apples, measured after cutting small, will yield ten glasses of jelly.

HOME HINTS.

Cabbage should always be boiled in two waters.
To keep celery and lettuce fresh, stand the roots in cold water.

Put castors on our woodbox if you would have it handy to move about.
Change dish water often—it is better both for the hands and for the dishes.

Never bang an oven door, if you don't wish your bread or cake to fall. Close it gently instead.

To keep flowers fresh, slip every stem and change the water every day. Also a pinch of salt helps.

Cloves placed between winter bedding, blankets and clothing are a better moth remedy than camphor.

To get rid of the objectionable smell of cabbage while cooking, put a piece of charcoal in the second water.

White felt hats can be cleaned by dusting them with white corn meal and brushing the meal thoroughly out.

A spoonful of flour added to the grease in which eggs are to be fried will keep them from sticking to the pan.

If paper shades for the lamp or candle can be dipped in a solution of alum they are less likely to catch fire.

An old Japan tray can be rejuvenated and its usefulness prolonged if you give it two coats of white paint and one of enamel.

If soot falls on a carpet, do not try to brush it off. Spread a handful of well-dried salt upon it and sweep up salt and soot together.

If you wish to bring out the flavor of vegetables to perfection, add a teaspoonful of sugar to the water in which they are boiled.

Add a teaspoonful of baking powder to old potatoes when mashing them and beat briskly. This will make them light and creamy.

If a sewing machine needle sticks in sewing heavy cotton goods rub the line of stitching to be done with a bit of rather dry soap.

Cake-beaters should be rinsed as soon as used, and any dish that has had eggs in it should be filled with cold water until time to wash it.

Fawn-colored suede gloves can be cleaned with a mixture of fuller's earth and alum. Then brush off the powder. The gloves should be on the hands when cleaned.

Every householder should have plenty of dust sheets for cleaning days. Sometimes old sheets can be utilized in this way. New dust sheets are best made of cheap calico.

To take iodine stains out of clothing rub them with liquid ammonia and rinse well before washing. Another method is to wash with alcohol and rinse with soap-suds and then clear water.

THE UMBRELLA.

Earlier Ones Had Whalebone Ribs and Oiled Silk Cover.

Jonas Hanway, the first man to carry an umbrella in the streets of London, was born two hundred years ago. One can well imagine the sensation caused by the first appearance of Mr. Hanway's umbrella and the opportunities thereby presented to the London small boy of that period. The innovation was greeted with various comments, clever or otherwise, according to the intellectual capabilities of the gibe and joke, however. Jonas persevered and produced his "fine silk umbrella newly brought from Spain" on every rainy day for 30 years. He died in 1788 and so the first use of the "apparatus" may be placed about 1756. Thus it is the birth of its apostle rather than its own coming to our shores that we must celebrate.

Mr. Hanway had travelled a good deal in the East and here probably he saw the umbrella in all the pomp of Oriental ceremonial and was struck by its possibilities as a protection against the rain of his own foggy islands. At all events he duly introduced it and paid no attention to the storm of ridicule and scorn that broke around him. Very slowly the umbrella crept into more general use. In 1780 a red one appeared at Bristol and created more than a nine day's wonder in the district. Allusions to the innovation began to creep into contemporary writings, and doubtless the low comedians of the time did not lose such a favorable opportunity. For not only was the umbrella an entirely new thing; but it was remarkably ugly and unwieldy. The earlier specimens had ribs made of whalebone and the covering consisted of oiled silk. In 1849 a short treatise on the subject appeared and this monograph stated that the average weight of the 18th century "umbrella" was twenty-five ounces.

One Mark Bull in 1782 took out a patent for a "machine for supporting an umbrella, which may be fixed to any saddle or wheel'd carriage, being far more compact than any hitherto invented." A big step was taken in 1827 when each rib was given a separate hinge. Thence, forward improvements were made in various directions, until we reach the umbrellas of the most modern make.

BUY A FARM

In the West Florida Country, this is not the Florida that you have been reading so much about, but some five hundred miles from the much advertised country. The West Florida country is elevated and healthy, no extreme heat in the summer, nor cold in the winters. Fruit, vegetables, figs, and watermelons, satsuma oranges, fish and oysters are in abundance. Eggs and chickens are extremely high and this is a good climate to raise them in. This part of the world has never been advertised for sale before, and no extravagant literature is gotten out to show the enormous growth of the products, but the growth are here just the same, with a climate seldom equalled and never excelled. Rheumatism, catarrh, and tuberculosis are always relieved and cured in numbers of instances. This land is extremely productive if properly handled. We are offering lands in tracts of ten acres up to five hundred acres at twenty dollars per acre; three dollars per acre per month. Also we have some small and large farms fully improved bearing pecans, oranges, figs, all kinds of berries etc; close to the fast growing town of Pensacola. Particulars may be obtained free of charge from Charter Land Co. Pensacola, Fla. U.S.A.

Now open and ready for YOU. Write and tell me what day you are coming. A postal will do.

Mild Sarcasm from Alberta.

DEAR EDITOR: Have not got your paper for some months regularly but hear it is still alive. Thought that last election would near close its mouth regarding political affairs. If you will send me a bill of my indebtedness and change my paper from Calgary to Chinook, I will try and pay up and be obliged.

Just a word about how things are here.

I like Alberta fine. No place quite so good in my mind. I finished my 3 years duties on a homestead last week and moved to our new town, Chinook. We have got connected up with the outside world after 3 years in darkness, as it were. We have a thriving little town. Mine was the first house on the town-site, Oct. 1st. On Oct. 6 we have besides, a hardware store, lumber yard, general store, and an elevator and bank coming next week. We hope for a good steady little town. We certainly have a good country surrounding it on all sides. The first wheat shipped from here left last week, Grade No. 2. Threshing is well advanced and grain is turning out well. Have had a good year. It takes about 3 years there to make anything of the country. The first year homesteading one gets nothing, the second some can make expenses, the third just a little better, and get our patent for the land besides. Now that our new government has changed the regulation regarding the $300. house, many of us have not the money to build such a house, when something less will do until we get enough land cultivated to make a living on. After three years of homesteading I would not recommend it to my eastern friends as the best thing to do, though I expect to continue it for three years longer. I will give my view on homestead life as I found it, later if anyone cares to hear it.

A Genuine Service.

"I believe," says an old subscriber, "that every time The Youth's Companion enters a home it does that home a genuine service." That describes the purpose of the publishers exactly. The paper is not filled with mischievous or idle thoughts to fill an idle hour. It provides healthy pastime, recreation that builds up. It is to the minds of eager and impressionable young people what sound athletics are to the bodies.

At a cost of less than four cents a week The Youth's Companion opens the door to a company of the most distinguished men and women in America and Europe. Whether they are revealing the latest discoveries in science, or describing great industrial achievements, or telling of their wanderings in strange corners of the world, or feeding the imagination with rare stories, they are giving Companion readers the best of themselves.

Seven serials at least will be published by The Companion in 1913, and nearly 200 other complete stories, in addition to some 50 special contributions, and a treasure box of sketches, anecdotes, expert advice as to athletic sports, ideas for handy devices round the house, and so forth—long hours of companionship with the wise, the adventurous and the entertaining. Announcement for 1913 will be sent with sample copies of the paper to any address on request.

Every new subscriber who sends $2.25 for this fifty-two weekly issues of 1913, will receive as a gift The Companion Window Transparency and Calendar for 1913, the most exquisite novelty ever offered to Companion readers; also, all the issues of The Companion for the remaining weeks of 1912, free.

News of Reformed Baptists.

Rev. J. H. Coy has received and accepted a call to become pastor of the Royalton church. He expects to visit Gordonville and other points next week.

Rev. P. J. and sister Trafton were heartily welcomed by the church and congregation at Hartland, on the 8th inst. A large company gathered at their home and spent a very pleasant evening. Prayer was offered by Rev. H. S. Dow, a reading by Miss Sarah McMullen, and addresses were given by Deacons G. G. Gray and S. Hayden Straw; and Brother Ziba Orser. Brother Trafton responded, thanking those present for their kindness to himself and wife and family. It was a pleasant and profitable occasion.

Rev. H. S. Dow has not been able to procure a house at Caribou, Me. His family still reside at Hartland. A parsonage is quite as needful as a church.

Psoriasis All Over Body

Doctors Said Incurable, But Now There is No Sign of Disease, Thanks to Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mde. N. Massey.

Psoriasis is one of the most dreaded of itching skin diseases. It is a sort of chronic eczema. The itching it causes is almost beyond human endurance, and doctors are accustomed to give it up as incurable.

But here is a case that was given up and pronounced incurable. The result proves that Dr. Chase's Ointment almost works miracles in curing the worst form of itching skin disease imaginable.

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Concession, Ont., writes:—"For five years I suffered with what three doctors called psoriasis. They could not help me, and one of them told me if anyone offered to guarantee a cure for $50.00 to keep my money, as I could not be cured, my disease would all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and I am glad to say I am entirely cured, not a sign of a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this ointment enough."

The soothing, healing influence of Dr. Chase's Ointment is truly wonderful. Eczema, salt rheum, barber's itch, ringworm and scores of such torturing ailments are relieved at once and as certainly cured by the Ointment as used persistently. Mothers find Dr. Chase's Ointment invaluable in preventing and curing the skin troubles of babies, such as chapping, irritations of the skin and baby eczema. At once Dr. Chase's Ointment, 50 cents a box. All dealers or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

The blacksmith shop known as the McLean shop has been opened by Mr. Goombridge who recently arrived from England. Mr. Goombridge learned his trade in the Old Country and has been shoeing horses for many years. During the late Boer war he was with the British army as a shoer and became much attached to the Canadian soldiers there. Hence his removal to Canada.

Not Dead Yet.

The Canadian Tories describe Great Britain as a decrepit nation on her knees begging Canada to come to her assistance with a dose of money. It is evident that her own government that her own government does not so regard her for the other day, when Italy threatened to force the Dardanelles in order to menace Constantinople, Great Britain said,—"Oh, no. You must not! Instead go at once and make peace with Turkey." and Italy stayed her hand against the Dardanelles and went and made peace. The old dog has got sharp teeth; but God help her on the day that the Tories of Canada have anything to do with her government, for, if that evil day comes, they will bleed her people white.
