 CHRIST CHURCH HARVEST HOME

Special Services Conducted by Rev. Canon Brown Draw Large Congregations.

Graceful Decorations and De lightful Music Contributed to the Success of the Festival.

Harvest home services were duly bserved in Christ Church yesterday. Rev. Canon Brown, of Ingersoll, preached both morning and evening to large congregations. In the evenng especially the church was crowded to the doors and the service was especially good.

The church was very tastefully decorated for the occasion, the work of Mrs. Heyward, Mrs. Bray and Miss Kate Mercer, members of the Ladies

Rev. Mr. Brown, who is a very able preacher, gave two excellent ermons. In the morning he spoke on the Harvest Home, and in the evening he chose as his text Paul's message to Timothy, "Fight the good fight of faith."

good fight of faith."

The message applies to us all alike, said he, as we are all soldiers and we are all engaged in the struggle of life. Timothy was a young man, just starting out in life, so that this message applies chiefly to young men who have the world before them. Timothy was brought up rightly and will set he had temperations the same Timothy was brought up rightly and well yet he had temptations the same as the young men of to-day have, to live for pleasure and money. His life is a good example for every young man to follow.

It is every man's duty to love God and serve him. We should all be fighting the fight of faith under the preser of Christ and we should be of Christ, and we should completely under His orders. Lastly, re should be consistent soldiers and arve him under difficulties as well

The music by the choir was of a pecial nature and was excellently rendered.

In the morning, besides the regular service, an anthem, "Praise waiteth for Thee" was given, and Miss Lucy McKellar sang a solo. In the evening Miss McKellar sang, an anthem, "Hear my Prayer," was given by the choir and a male quartet sang "Jesus Lover of My Soul." The music was under the direction of J. W. Wilson, the leader of the choir, to whom much praise is due. He is a most capable conductor.

THE TEACHER'S POSITION. Hon. Richard Harcourt's Plans For Improving it.

Windsor, Oct. 19 .- Hon. Richard Harcourt, Minister of Education, dis coursed very entertainingly Friday afternoon while in Windsor on the fo ture of school teaching in the Province He is decidedly in favor of the male teacher in the schools. While admitting that the woman teacher is probably a fixture, he would limit her to the primary and junior work. Mr. Harcourt is also very much in favor of professionalizing teaching in the Province. He believes that the standard should be raised in order that a better class of teachers may be secured for work in the schools. He is decidedly against the practice of people going into the teaching profession for a few years in order to make sufficient money to enter some other business or profession, and he thinks that if the standard is raised and other restrictions made these temporary teachers will be kept out of the field. As a beginning in this direction he proposes to raise the standard of the normal schools and to lengthen the terms in these schools from five months to one year. ably a fixture, he would limit her to-

A British Minister as Mediator the Far East.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 19 .- A newspaper published at Port Dalny is au thority for the report that the Brit ish Minister to Japan, Sir Claude Mac Donald, has undertaken to mediate between Russia and Japan, and, having secured Japan's consent to certain proposals, is now negotiating with Russia. These proposals are that Russia shall restore Manchuria to China, and that the principal Manchuria towns be opened to foreign trade; Russia is to withdraw all her troops from Manchuria with the exception of the railway guards; she is to renounce her forest concessions on both sides of the Yalu River, as well as the Yongampho concessions, and the whole country south of the Yalu is to be admitted as belonging to the sphere of Japan.

EXPELLING FOREIGNERS. Russians Adopt New and More Stringent Measures.

London, Oct. 19.—Russian corres pondents of The Times say that a new Imperial decree has been issued dealing with the question of the expulsion of foreigners from Russian territory. The most important regulation provides that foreigners who have rendered themselves liable to expulsion shall be presented with an intimation to that effect, and specifying the term of grace which is to be accorded them. If they do not leave the country voluntarily after its receipt they will be sent to the border under escort. For foreigners who are forced to return to Russia owing to refusals of their Governments owing to refusals of their Governments to permit them to reside in their own country, and also for those willfully re-turning to Russia, a special system of settlement has been instituted. They will be permitted to live in certain dis-tricts to be defined at triennial intertricts to be defined at triennial intervals. They must register in the peasant and artisan class, and will not be

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

USING THE MAIL BAGS FOR CAMPAIGN LITERATURE.

Sir William Mulock's ' Attempt to Call the Opposition Down-Mr. Borden's View on the Fast'Atlan

Ottawa, Oct. 19 .- In the House o Commons on Saturday soon after the conclusion of prayers, Mr. R L. Borden was on the floor, and talk ing upon the subject of a fast Atlantic service. The occasion of his remarks was a motion to go into supply, and the burden of his complaint was that two-thirds of the Canadian mail matter was sent via the American route, because by that means it was delivered in two-thirds the time it would take by the Canadian line. The average length of the voyages of the Canadian mail steamers was nine and a half, ten and eleven days, being practically the same as it was forty years ago. That the Government had been lax in its efforts to secure a service such as the need of the country demanded was shown by the fact that it was only in March of this year new tenders were obtained. It was stated those tenders were not sat-isfacto. As to that he could not say, but the Government did not appear to have conducted the negotiations, which it was understood are pending, with that energy and promptness which the importance of the occasion and the pressing needs of the situation demanded. Therefore, he moved that, instead of going into supply, the House places upon record the fact that it affirmed the belief that great advantages would result to Canada as well as the mother country from the establishment of a fast steamship service between the two countries, and expresses its regret that no effective steps have been taken for the purpose by the present Administration.

Sir Wilfrid Läurier, who was cheere on rising to reply, said that all through this session there had been an under-current of Opposition comment on the lavish expenditure. This had culminated in Mr. Borden's speech at the banquet tendered him, in which the complaint was a feature. At the same time, there was not a debate for weeks past him members of the Opposition past but members of the Opposition had urged that more money be spent on some particular object. Now the leader of the Opposition came forleader of the Opposition came forward with a proposition for a fast Atfantic service, at a cost of $1,500,000 per annum. The effort of the Bowell Government in 1806 to secure a fast line was not the first. The proposal went back to 1889, when the Government offered a subsidy of $500,000 a year, but no one came forward to take advantage of it. Though the Government had nothing tangible to present at this moment, the project had not been abandoned, and could not be abandoned until it was carried out to a satisfactory conclusion. There was reason to believe that at an early date they would day the supply at Montreal was exhausted. This diversion of bags was an illegitimate and scandalous transaction. (Hear, hear.) If the honmember to whom the bags were addressed (Mr. Taylor) would remove the contents and return the bags business could go on, but it was now a gross abuse of the privileges of Parliament. Tons and tons and carloads and trainloads of bags of material were sent here post-free, franked and sent on. The postmaster at Ottawa had complained that they had so blocked his premises that he was unable to carry on the legitimate work of the office, and the mail cars on the trains were unable to accommodate them all.

in the postoffice, or which complaint had been made, was, he had been credibly informed, that the staff of the department was inadequate to handle the matter.

Sir William Mulock—That is absolutely untrue. The staff is ample; it is lack of cars and train accommodation that constitutes the trouble.

Dr. Sproule replied hotly that he had a reputation to maintain, and he would put his reputation for veracity against that of the Postmaster-General against that of the Fostmaster-General may day. He was told that Government literature was not only being sent out under the frank, but that it was being addressed by civil servants while under pay by the country. The Opposition were paying for addressing literature out of their own scanty means.

They had sent it out because they had been led to believe an election was coming on. (Government laughter.)

Mr. Clancy challenged the Postmaster-General to interfere with the mai matter contained in the bags, and insisted that the department was bound to deliver it. He charged Sir Richard Cartwright with having improperly during recess, franked copies of his Massey Hall speech. It was humiliating that the Postmaster-General should be forced to confess to the world that the postal service was blocked because Canada's supply of mail bags had rur

This ended the debate, and the House at last got into Committee of Supply. On an item of $5,000 for expenses in connection with the public debt conversion, Mr. Fielding announced that, at his own request, Mr. J. M. Courtney, the Deputy Minister of Finance, would retire shortly, but his services would be partially retained in an advisory capacity. Loans of £8,000,000 were now maturing.

YOUNG LADY ASSAULTED. A Dastardly Crime in Ellice Town-

Stratford, Oct. 19.—News of an assault committed in broad daylight on Thank giving Day, on the nineteenyear-old daughter of Mr. James Stewart of Ellice, has just been received in the city. The young lady was gathering clothes off a line near the house, when mknown to her, a man approached from behind, blindfolded and gagged her simultaneously. The gagging was done by means of a piece of cotton which she was removing from the line, and her hands were pinioned behind her back. The man carried the girl to an outbuilding near by, where the assault was committed.

She was then left gagged and tied to the floor, and the man departed. In the course of half an hour the girl managed to free herself and ran to the BRITISH PRESS COMMENT.

SOME THINK THAT BRITAIN HAS CLIMBED DOWN

The Daily Telegraph Believes that Disagreement Would Have Been Bad For All Concerned.

London, Oct. 19.-The Canadian mmissioners on the Alaska bound ary tribunal are astonished at matter in connection with a private conference leaking out and being cables to New York. The Canadian commissioners and every official commected with the Canadian side of the case, though importuned on Satof the case, though importuned on Saturday to express an opinion, positively refused, as they declared the commissioners were solemnly pledged not to divulge the private proceedings. The leakage is attributed to the Americans Hon. Mr. Sitton, Mr. Aylesworth and Sir Louis Jette, interviewed by the Canadian Associated Press on Sunday evening, again refused to speak. A decision is expected to-day.

The Empress says the Alaska Bounday Commission furnishes a good occasion for sermons on the score of copybook maxims regarding the importance of thoroughness in all things.

portance of thoroughness in all things. If the decision goes against Britain it will not be the first time that Can-it will not be the first time that Canada has lost territory owing to the carelessness of British surveyors.

The London Mail says the rumored decision of the Alaska Boundary Commission must be received with some hesitation, as it proceeds from an admittedly American source, and bears every trace of partiality. If true we regard its action as the most serious blow to the progress of international blow to the progress of international arbitration that has been delivered in many years. We contend that not even by the United States themselves by the United States themselves was such an ignominous climb down on the part of the British commissioners expected. The sole concession made to Canada is an aggravation of the whole affair. Canada has been granted to Canada is an aggravation of the whole affair. Canada has been granted an entirely unnecessary waterway, and has cause indeed for complaint.

The Daily Telegraph, assuming the correctness of the despatch, says the failure of the commission to agree would have been a disaster to Great Britain and the United States, and a crushing blow would have been dealt to the policy, still in its frail and tender infancy, of referring differences of this character to judicial tribunals. No attempt can be made to reckon up the scores of either side. Unless the verdict is accepted in good faith by both sides the principle of arbitration will be assailed at its base. It is better for the empire and Canada that Great Britain and the United States should live on terms of cordial friendship than that in every frontier dispute Canada should get the better of the republic. The Pacific is not only an American but a Canadian ocean, and it is essential that the co-operation of all branches of the Anglo-Saxon race be exempt from jealousy in view of the tremendous problems there.

The Standard says:—Whether the American information is shrewd guesswork or not, the talk about a victory for the United States may prove not American information is shrewd, guess-work or not, the talk about a victory for the United States may prove not entirely justified. Each side, broadly speaking, gets in essence what it wanted, though Canada does not obtained access through the heads not obtained access through the heads of inlets already under American jurisdiction. The American statements are framed in an unjudicial way and are inaccurate geographically. A mere concession or loss of land along a partly imaginary range is of small import-ance to the Dominion so long as she gets a satisfactory waterway and her vessels are not subject to foreign tolls.

The Chronicle says if the decision on the Alaska boundary proves as reported it means a practical victory for the nited States all along United States all along the line. Canada's loss would be the territorial control of the Lynn Canal which gives access to Skagway, Dyea and the Chilkoot country. Canada would be injuriously affected in her privileges for the passage and coasting trade within the area indicated, and to and from the Pacific Ocean.

HIS HONOR JUDGE WOODS.

The Windsor Record says edi torially

The address delivered by Judge Woods, of Chatham, in St. John's church, Sandwich, on the occasion of the centenary of the church, has been published. It is printed in convenient form and illustrated. The subject matter, a brief resume of which was given by the Record at the time the address was delivered, will be of interest to the historically inclined of this locality: whether he be of the Anglican faith or not. To members of the church in Windsor, Sandwich or Walkerville, Judge Woods' brochure should prove of vital interest. He has gone to considerable pains in collecting data, much of which was to be found only by unearthing almost forgotten manuscripts. The work of compiling the pamphlet has been most carefully performed and the result is a chronicle that none other than he whose life and ancestry was largely contemporary with the history of the old sacred edifice and its environs could accomplish.

EXONERATED.

When General Sir Hector Macdonald, the hero of many battles, took his own life in a Paris hotel last March, the world promptly assumed that it was the deed of a guilty man whose sins had found him out. Cnarges of gross immorality had been brought against him. He had traveled from Ceylon to England to confer with the commander-in-chief on the subject, and was on his way back when, in his hotel at Paris, he read in the newspapers that the nature of the charges had been made public. Then he went to his room and shot himself.

"Of course," said the censorious world, "if he had been innocent he would have faced his accusers and put them to confusion. He killed himself because he realized that he was a ruined man, and preferred to die rather than endure the infamy in store for him as a convicted criminal.

But it seems that the world's judgment was wrong. A commission has been investigating the charges against Macdonald and it has issued its report summing up the results of its investigations. This report states that there is not visible the slightest particle of truth for the foundation of any charge of crime"; that "the late Sir Hector Macdonald has been cruelly assassinated by vife and standerous tongues," and that the stories to his discredit were invented and circulated by persons who were "prompted by feelings of spite and jealousy."

The mistake made by the world was owing to its inability to appreciate the quality of a soldier's sense of honor. When poor Macdonald learned that the horrible charges against him were the theme of current gossip-that his name was being spoken with loathing by thousands of tongues and with ribaldry by thousands more-that even though he could establish his innocence, he could never outlive the shame of being put on his defence against such charges, is it any wonder that his despair was so great as to drive him to suicide? He had risen from the ranks, and his honor as an officer and a gentleman was his most preto be smirched even by the suspicion of crime on his part; he had "lost the immortal part of himself"-his reputation. Life, he felt, was not worth living, and in his frenzy he ended it.

It is easy to say that it would have been far wiser and braver in Sir Hector to have faced the charges and lived down the disgrace of them. He would perhaps have realized this, and lived, if he had thought over the situation for an hour or two. But it is hard for a man in a frenzy of despair to think out a problem coolly -and then, there was his service re-volver at hand, with its easy, quick solution of the problem.

And so one more is added to the roll of noble and heroic men and women who were "done to death with slanderous tongues," whom the world once spoke of with scorn, but whose names have gathered fresh luster from the pity which is awakened by the pathos and tragedy of their his

of us must often say to ourselves. "Which do I really want." It seems "Which do I really want." It seems sometimes almost impossible to have both in such a country as our England has become. In London anything approaching peace seems to be out of the question. Loneliness there is, murky solitude environed by noises from without. To me London is made tolerable only by gaicties, its sights, its splendid music its ies, its sights, its splendid music, its les, its signts, its splendid music, its lively restaurants, its theatres, its opportunities for meeting a thousand clever and interesting people. I like London for its personalities, and to me a retired life in London would be me a retired life in London would be one of the dreariest lives imaginable. When I am in London I love to be what is called, in the slang of the day, "well in it," and I find my pleasure in the fury of its life, in the bum of its opinions, in the swiftly passing pictures the monstrous bio-graph it presents to me. In London one gets people, but

If one settles down in an English ountry place, one generally makes a choice between peace and people, too, for English people in the countoo, for English people in the country are awfully busy and important about nothing or very little. They are for ever getting something up, they are for ever devising means of "bringing people together." In the country, charity is one of the chief amusements and is far more popular than "putting." I know a country town in which scarcely a week passes without its bazaar. There are generally a fair number to stare, and the stall holders have had their series of committee meetings "to get the stall holders have had their series of committee meetings "to get it all up," and so it has served its purpose. It has been the means of that dearly loved "social intercourse" which is the foe of peace in country places. People in the country "pop in" on one at all times and seasons, to say nothing of prodigious length. It is difficult not to be either a vertime or a curroudceon. length. It is difficult not to be either a vietim or a curmudgeon. I know a lady who, sick of London's interference with her life, betook herself to a country village in search of peace and quiot. She did not know her country. The raps at her door were incessant. The idle came upon her in droves. But she was a resolute woman. She bought a large cardboard, printed her name on its resolute woman. She bought a large cardboard, printed her name on it, wrote underneath, in huge, round hand, "Never at home!" and pinned it up on a stout post by her garden. gate. Since then she may have earned obloquy, but she says she has known peace. She has made her choice between peace and people, and she appears to be well satisfied.

People are often very good fun.

People are often very good fun, and l, like others, can find a great deal of pleasure in society, in chattering, flirting, laughing about nothing in particular dained trivial. ing in particular, doing trivial higs in a crowd, and generally being cheerfully absurd. A gay time can be a good time, but, to me, only when it comes rather seldom, as a will be found at the place of the reserved seat sale. Books of coupons for the entire course, $1.00. Single admissions to non-subscribers—children, 25c.; adults, 35c.; reserve, 50c holiday. I do not think most of us use people in the right way, as a conserved to the cause good in the right way, as a conserved to the cause good in many of us. Perpetual causes good in many of us. Perpetual causes good in the right way, as a conserved to the cause of the cause of the cause of the coupons of the coupons of the right way, as a conserved to the coupons of the right way, as a conserved to the coupons of th tual people-what do they cause tual people—what do they cause? The pale ennui which is the gout of the mind. How delightful a fortnight in Paris is! How frisky one enjoys the brightness and all the pleasant and gay things there are to do—for a fortnight! I do not believe the dweller in Paris can ever know the joy of Paris as the fortnighter—despised, of course, by the Parislan—knows it. And is some such way the country cousin enjoys.

nighter—despised, of course, by the Parisian—knows it. And is some such way the country ceusin enjoys his month in London.

People who love society are apt to say that anything else is "ghastly dull." People who do not love it are apt to inveigh against it furiously, and to speak of those who go into it with a bitter contempt, which is quite un-Christian and unwarrantable, and highly ridiculous too. Happy and sane is the man or woman who gives a reasonable tribute of time to poace and a reasonable tribute of time to people. It is not necessary to be always en evidence, nor is it necessary in all places to stick up a board with "Never at home" at the garden gate. What is necessary, in all the circumstances of life, is will-power, the power of saying "yee" and "ne" when you feel that they should be said. Some people go through life screaming "yee" at the top of their voices. They are mostly fools. Others do nothing but grow! "ne." They are less amiable than the fools, but hardly less foolish. The sensible and the happy have both affirmatives and negatives at command. They qualify their peace with people, and uncy never have the gout.

But they are rare birds in modern days, almost as rare as robin redbreasts on the property of Octave Mirbeau's Isidore Lechat.—Robert Ilickers, in London Queen.

"What am 1? you would say," exclaimed Madeline, passionately. "Oh, don't scruple to ask what questions you choose, Marjorie. I will enswer them all now. I am the daughter of one thief and the wife of another. I am not a thief myself—I have not fall en quite so low as that. But I am one of the gang—I have known their guilty plans-I have been accessory to them plans—I have been accessory to them all. The police have exempted 'ne from arrest simply because, as a wife, I was not bound to denounce my husband's crimes."

"A wife!" exclaimed Marjorie, in mazement, as soon as Madeline paused for breath.

"Yes, I am Edgar's wife—or was. God help me! I am his widow now!" "Then he is dead?" cried Marjorie, in horror.
"Yes, he is dead," said Madeline, resuming her stony calm. "He took poison before the police could touch him. He died, and I, who loved him so—ah, heaven! how I loved him!—I, even I, am thankful for it." Her head sank upon her bosom, and a dry, tearless sob convulsed her Marjorie put forth her hand, and

"My father"-and she shuddered as she spoke that word-"has been a thief ever since I was a little child. But I have not lived with him all my life. My mother and he had quarreled, and I lived with her until she died. Then I was sixteen, and my father fetched me to live with him. He told me he wanted me in his business and, little by little, I began to see what that business was.

"He was no common thief, Marjorle, there was a diabolical cunning and cleverness in all he did. I had been well educated—as, indeed, he himself was—and he wanted me to help him to get the entree into the great houses he meant to rob. This I would never do, and he was fearfully angry with me, for he had a frightful temper when roused, for all his bland, pleasant looks. He said he wanted a woman in the business, and when I kept resisting he planned a cruel thing to bring me to his will."

"What was it?" questioned Mar-"He threw me into the company of How I loved him I could never tell you! think that never in this world has man been loved by woman as he was loved by me. Well, I married him—not quite a year ago. He swore he would break with the gang, reform, go abroad with me, and live an honest life. I believed him—and a week after the mar-riage he laughed and boasted of the ruse he had adopted to bind me to him! I remember his very words—they burnt themselves into my heart.

"'No! No! ,my pretty one,' he said. It is you I am going to reform. I am going to so train you that you shall be the queen and head of the cleverest and richest gang of thieves in Eng-

"He did not do that, Marjorie. Try as he might, he could not bend me to his will. I hated and dreaded their ais will. I hated and dreaded their vile pursuits too much for that, But I went on loving him—I couldn't help myself. I loved him even though I soon saw he had ceased to care for me. met with you. He had always said that a woman, young, and beautiful, and well-educated, would be invaluable to them; and it was his purpose to try to win you over. He showed you an advertisement which he pretended was his, and you believed him and came."
"Ah!" exclaimed Marjorie, in horror.

Who could have suspected that a man who looked and spoke as he did, could have been so vile!" "His pleasant countenance has been his capital always," said Madeline, bit-terly, "and he has traded on it to the uttermost. With a view to impressing you favorably, he has assumed the ap-pearance of great benevolence and piety; and this would have continued till he felt you were in his power.

"You were so young and so com-pletely friendless that he made sure of winning you over in the end. You were to be tricked, as I was, through your affections. Charles had orders to do everything in his power to make you fall in love with him." Again an involuntary exclamation burst from Marjorie's lips.

She saw the whole tile plot now from beginning to end. Her cheek crimsoned, and then again turned pale.

"I did all I could, Marjorle, to sava you from the snare," said Madeline, gazing on her very mournfully. "I dared not betray them, I dared not tell you the truth, but you remember how, whenever I could, I warned you against Charles. I hinted to you over and over again that he was unworthy of your love." "Yes, I remember," acknowledged Marjorie; "and I thank you. It was not your fault that I wouldn't take your warning. Oh, Madeline, if I had! if I only had!"

And then, unable to bear her misers with calmness, she gave way utterly, and broke into tears.

"Dear Marjorie, don't grieve for him. He isn't worth one thought from your pure heart. Forgive me, darling, that I didn't tell, you all the truth in time."

"I have only myself to blame," sobbed Marjorie. "You warned me enough, I ought to have believed you."

After a time she calmed herself, and turned to Madeline with gentle resolu-"Go on, Madeline, tell me all." "There is not much more to tell-not much that you can't guess at, or that you don't already know. Last week they made an attempt on 'Mortimer House. It failed, and they resolved to try again, so bold and desperate they were. They made the effort again: it failed; they were pursued, although they thought they had got clear away, and were followed here. In my heart I had felt sure that would be the end of it. Something within me seemed to prophecy it would come to this."

"Madeline, you were imploring some thing from—from Edgar in the draw-ing-room before you came to bed. I heard you by accident. What was it you were asking him, dear?"

"To give up the plan, not to go out to-night. I told him how full my heart was of the belief that it would end in something terrible. I intreated him, if not for myself, yet for the sake of his unborn child."

"His child!" exclaimed Marjorte, with a sudden burst of tender pity. "Oh. Madeline!" "Yes, Marjorie. I have that to look forward to. You may judge whether I look forward to it with joy. I hope my baby will die. Why should it live, poor innocent? A murderer's child!"
"Madeline!" said Marjorie, in a low, awe-struck whisper. "Was it he-vour husband-who killed my father?" To Be Continued.

Englishmen Cultivate Rabijis and Thus Combine Pleasure With Profit— Animals at 850 Each.

"I spend hours upon hours in here," said a London fancier just lately, during a chat in his rabbitry. And after all, when exhibition rabbits are daily changing hands at prices ranging from £3 to £30 apiece, there is no cause for surprise that men spend time-and money over their cultivation.

The British fanciers, seeing how matters stood, simply sat tight until the most fabulous prices were obtained, £25 being an ordinary figure! One fancier I know made over £1,-000 during the temporary boom.

But the boom died out, and we will confine ourselves only to present-day obtainable prices.

ANNIVERSARY SALE

DAY CELEBRATION.

Eight years ago on the 24th of October we opened our doors to the public in Chatham. All observing citizens will admit that while the city has made wonderful strides in that time in almost every way that leads to its betterment -granolithic walks, paved streets, municipal control of water and light, new industries, and enlarging old industries, improved appearance of all the business fronts on King Street, etc., yet comparing them all, this store can justly claim to have kept pace with the best of them. Eight years ago we occupied 1,820 sq. ft. of floor space, to-day our area is 14,160 sq ft., almost eight times greater. Then our staff numbered seven, to day we employ fifty-five regularly, besides additional help Saturdays, Do you agree with us that we should celebrate?

The above record is a good one, but we do not intend to remain passive, we intend the business to keep on growing, and the only way we know of doing it is by continually seeking to improve the general store service and keeping up the high standard we have established for selling the highest qualities at the lowest possible prices.

> We want to make Anniversary Week a Record-Breaker. We want more business than in any previous week.

Deputy Registrar McKeand has Narrow Escape - Dangerous Practice Which Should be Stopped

T. K. McKeand, Deputy Registrar, met with a very nasty accident on King street last evening about ten minutes to seven. He was on his way to church and was crossing King St. at the Garner House corner when he was run into by a horse and bugger.

Two young men, evidently farmers, Two young men, evidently farmers, were racing horses up and down the street. Mr. McKeand saw them coming towards him at a teriffic rate, and jumped to one sade to escape. In doing so he jumped in front of another rig which was coming from the other direction and which he did not notice, owing to the fact that it was quite dark around the corner at the time. He fortunately was not struck by the horse, but he was caught between the shaft and the front wheel. He was thrown to the pavement and

He was taken into the Garner House and Dr. Hall was called. While waiting for the doctor Mr. McKeand was taken with a faint, partly owing to the heated atmosphere in the reading room. He was later taken to his home and it was found that his injuries were not serious, although his shoulder and leg were badly bruised. He will be confined to his home for a short time.

George M. Swarthout was arraigned at the police court this morning on the charge of getting money under false pretenses. Albert Rumble and Joseph Phair paid Swarthout $275 for the patent right for Elgin County, entitling them to sell a burner attachment for coal oil stoves. The machine could also be used in cook stoves. Phair and Rumble allege that Ewarthout told them that the burner would only use a certain amount of oil per hour and that they are unable to use less than double the quantity in the hour.

Swarthout pleaded not guilty and was remanded till the 26th. O. L. Lewis appeared for defendant.

MORE WHISTLERISMS.

His Vitrolic Qualities and His Satanle, Laugh-Tooted His Own Horn-Feel-ed by His Own Pictures.

James A. McNeill Whistler, the American artist, who died in London recently, gave himself the credit of being "an adept at the gentle art of making enemies." He was almost always in hot water with somebody, making enemies." He was almost always in hot water with somebody, and was as fond as an old-fashioned Scotchman of getting into a lively lawsuit, enjoying litigation almost equally well whether he won or lost. Whistler was not particularly proud of being a native American, resembling in that respect William Waldorf Astor. A Frenchman ence sized him up as being "an American in his origin, an Englishanan in his manners and a Frenchman in his esprit." The critic added that about the man there constantly floats an indefinable fragrance of sulphur. Others have described the artist's laugh as satanic in its cynicism; and yet he felt disappointed and hurt if his companions failed to join in his mirth. He had the habit of buttonholing those to whom he talked, not figuratively merely, but actually, that they might not escape him until he had his say. It was well worth while though, to listen to him, for his wit was irresistible. The mere repetition of his mot did them injustice, for it was not the remarks themselves but the way in which they were made that made them funny. His personality was enriched by all sorts of mannerisms and stereotyped words and phrases.

isms and stereotyped words and phrases.

Artist-like, he spent a great deal of pains with his hair, which curled beautifully. But the remarkable feature of this part of his toilet was that, while he dyed nearly all of his hair a rich, glossy black, he left one tell tale lock with the whiteness of age.

Tooted His Own Horn.

Whistler had no false modesty about praising his own work. When about praising his own work. When struggling for recognition early in his career, he made it a point to laud his pictures so loudly and persistently that other folk finally began to take him at his own valuation, because no critic thought it worth while to say anything against tion, because no critic thought it worth while to say anything against the obscure young artist. This self-esteem served him all his life.

"Come now, this is all nonsense, you trying to do this," he said once to a fellow-painter who thought he had lit upon a promising bit of landscape to paint. "It is much too good a subject to be wasted upon you. You'd better let me see what I can do with it."

you. You'd better let me see what I can do with it."

In his struggling days he lived in the top of an old palace in Venice, starving on a diet of maccaroni and polenta, unable to sell any of his pictures except at starvation prices. It was only by dint of industriously crying up his own wares that he finally induced some to believe in him.

Dealing With Creditors. Dealing With Creditors.

Even in his days of prosperity, Whistler was perpetually in debt. He had no head for money matters. Here is the way he once tamed a London bailth who had a bill against him to

When the officer first appeared he wore his hat in the drawing-room and smoked and spat all over the house. Mr. Whistler soon settled that. He went out into the hall, armed himself with a cane and jauntily whacked his visitor's hat off. The ily whacked his visitor's hat off. The man was so surprised that he forgot to be angry. One morning, when Whistler was shaving, a message was brought to him that the bailing wished to speak with him.

"Very well; send him up." said Whistler, but he kept on shaving.
"Now, then, what do you want?" he continued, as the man appeared.

"I want my money, sir," was the reply.

"What money?" "My possession money, sir."
"What, haven't they given it to

"No, sir, it's you that has to give It to me.

"Oh, the deuce I have!" this with one of his fiendish laughs.
"Well, I think it's very hard, sir," snivelled the man. "I have my own family to keep and my own rent to pay."

"I'll tell you what I advise you to his caller out of the room; "you

Tilts in the Courts.

Some of Whistler's lawsuits became some of Whistler's lawsuits became famous. One in particular he enjoyed as a sweet morsel, although he lost it and was taxed heavily for the luxury. He received a commission from Sir William Eden to paint a portrait, and when the picture was about finished, but before it was delivered, Whistler received a "valentine" from Sir William enclosing a cheque for 100 guineas for the work. This so angered the artist, who placed a much higher valuation on the canvas, that he painted out the face and retained both picture and money. He even cashed the cheque in a great hurry rather than return it and accept a larger one, which his patron offered. Eden began suit, which Whistler fought viciously, but the plaintiff won, getting judgment not only for his 100 guineas, but heavy damages besides.

But Whistler sometimes was plaintiff blimself. He suit Deadte. famous. One in particular he only for his 100 guineas, but heavy damages besides.

But Whistler sometimes was plaintiff himself. He sued Ruskin for libel for calling him a cockney in a sovere art criticism, and got damages of one farthing (half a cent). He also quarried with DuMaurier for caricaturing him, as he thought, in the character of "Joe Sibley" in the novel "Trilby." He carried the controversy into the newspapers, until the novelist (who was also an artist) cut the objectionable character out of his book.

While Carlyle was still alive, Whistler painted his portrait as a labor of love, and when the great essaylst died he set a price upon it of only 400 guineas, a subscription having been circulated to buy the portrait. But when he learned that the paper-ungraciously disclaimed approval of himself, his art or his theories, he promptly raised the price to 1,000 guineas. The picture remains unsold to this day.

There has been expended for construction alone on Canadian canals, not including work planned but still unexecuted, a total of norse then $81,000,000. For the construction and enlargement of the water route from Lake Erie through the Welland Canal, Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence River more than $56,000. "There is no question that the people of the Dominion heartily sustain the policy which requires this heavy outlay, and that the practical results justify their contentment. During the three months of May, June and July of this year there were exported from Montreal 18, 040,214 bushels of grain, and from New York 16,341,519 bushels. At other Atlantic ports observers are drawing the conclusion from this comparison that the metropolis is destined to lose its supremacy, but they may derive less pleasure from that somewhat violent deduction when they have considered that, according to the latest Government statistics, the total exports from Atlantic ports for the fiscal year 1993 show a decline of $98,000,000 from the total exports. New York. 1903 show a decline of $98,000,000 from the total for 1901. Some of their loss is the gain of the Gulf ports, but no small part of it has accrued to our Northern neighbor

Presently there was the noise of sleigh bells, and a cutter drew up alongside of the platform. Carlisle glanced with interest at the slight figure that stepped out, and then, as the driver showed no disposition to aid her with a heavy satchel, he went out with a courteous offer of assistance. "Has the overland gone through yet?" she inquired eagerly. Carlisle gave a short laugh. "At last reports," he said easily, "the overland will pass through here about 8 o'clock, but my informant," with a nod in the direction of the anoring baggage master, "did not state whether it was last night's or tonight's that was expected." By this time she had removed her heavy wraps and veil, and Carlisle could see the look of disappointment

She gave a little laugh. "Do you know," she retorted, "that I may be married before I leave Denver?" His face fell. She was a singularly pretty girl. "I hope not," he said savagely. "Unless"— "Unless?" she repeated questioning-

"Never mind—now," he said. "Let's talk of my troubles. I am to be married because I am told that I must. I have a friend who married and moved to Denver. His wife insisted that I should visit them, and assured me that she would marry me off before I came away.

"That does not necessarily indicate that you must be married, does it?" she asked.

she asked.

He smiled faintly. "It is plain to be seen," he answered, "that you don't know Maude Daniels."

She was blust ing very curiously, but her voice was even as she remarked: "Possibly the fate may not appear to be so appalling when you have met your—shall I say fiancee? Do you know anything about her?"

He shook his head: "Very little. Mrs. Daniels says she is a very lovely girl, amiable, cultured and all that sort of thing. She's a cousin of Mrs. Daniels, named Standish—Helen Standish. Pretty name, and they say she's as pretty as her name. It's not that I'm afraid of her, but a fellow does hate to have as her name. It's not that I'm afraid of her, but a fellow does hate to have it all cut and dried, don't you know." She nodded a grave assent. "I am very much in the same position," she began, but just then a whistle broke in on the conversation, and the sleepy baggage master rolled over. The train whistle was the one thing that would wake him.

"I forgot to tell you," he said to Car- York Weekly.

lisle, "that there was a Denver train through here about now. It's yester-day's train, but it will get in ahead of the other."

Twenty minutes later, Carlisle, lulled by the easy motion of the train, dropped off to sleep, his mind filled with visions of a petite figure crowned by a pretty oval face wreathed in gold-en hair. He had forgotten to ask her name, but he determined that her last name should be Carlisle in spite of Mrs. Daniels and Helen Standish.

The next morning his berth had been made up long before she made her ap-

"I want to ask you something," he said as he dropped into the seat beside her, in answer to the invitation in her eyes. "Last night I was willing to go eyes. "Last night I was willing to go to Denver and be married, but now I am hot. I want you to help me save myself from the fate that awaits me.
"There is a girl I love desperately."

"There is a girl I love desperately," he hurried on, and he noted with joy that her face clouded. "I am not a person of impulse, but I love her devotedly and always shall. I want you to marry me before I get to Denver, then I can face Mrs. Daniels. My old friend, Bishop Dayton, is on the train. He can vouch for me and will perform the service. Will you?"

"But how will my marrying you help you to win the girl you love?" she interposed.
"Because," he said impulsively, "you are the woman I love and shall love till death, God helping me." Then, some-how, he was holding her hand and looking very foolish, while in her eyes the ove light glowed through a merry twinkle.

The marriage was not difficult to arrange. The bishop occupied the state-room, and there they were married with the Pullman conductor and the train conductor for witnesses. Then the good old bishop got out his portfolio and prepared to fill out the marriage cartification. "My child," he said kindly, "it is strange, but I do not know your last name. What name shall I fill in here?" A tiny smile flitted over her face "Helen Standish," she said simply, and turned to her husband.

Carlisle looked aghast for a moment, then he broke into a hearty laugh. "I told you." he said, "that Maude Daniele always had her own way. I'm glad of it." And he kissed her.

An Accidental Translation. One day an American called on Georg Brandes, the Danish author, and in-formed him he had translated one of his books. Brandes thanked him and said that, as he himself spoke but indifferent English, although he could read it easily, he would prefer talking

"I don't understand Danish," was the unexpected reply.

"How strange when you read it so "I can't read it either," the American rejoined. "I thought you told me that you had translated my book," said the amazed author "So I have, as you see," replied the American and produced the volume.

"The fact is we were passing through Copenhagen, and my wife broke her leg, which necessitated our staying here for a couple of months; so I went to a bookseller's and, asking for the most popular book in Danish, received yours I took it home, and through the similarity of the language to German and English and with the help of a diction ary I translated it, but I didn't know a word of your language when I began."

"This book," Brandes added, "ha gone through several editions in Ameri ca, although it has mistakes and mean ings I never intended."

No wonder so many authors prefer not to be read at all to being read in translations.

The Weight of the Children. With regard to the standard of weight for growing children, that usually given by authorities in the matter is that at five years of age a child should weigh about as many pounds as it is inches high. As a rule, this will not be much ever or under forty pounds. Children who come of large families should weigh something more than that. The rate of increase should be about two pounds for every inch of growth, with a tendency for the weight to exceed this standard proportionately rather than to fall below it. When a child is rather heavier in proportion to its height than this standard it is a sign of good health. If the child is growing rapidly it should not be allowgrowing rapidly it should not be allow-ed to fall much below it without being made to rest more than has been the custom before. A deficiency of weight in proportion to height is always an unfavorable sign. Any interruption in the progress of increase of weight, es-pecially during the continuance of growth, must be a danger signal that should not be neglected by those inter-ested in the patient.—Westminster Re-

Mrs. L. C. Glover, Vice Pres. Milwaukee, Wis., Business Woman's Association, is another one of the million women who have been restored to health by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham: I was married for several years and no children blessed my home. The doctor said I had a complication of female troubles and I could not have any children unless I could be cured. He tried to cure me, but after experimenting for several months, my husband became disgusted, and one night when we noticed a testimonial of a woman who had been cured of similar trouble through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, he went out and bought a bottle for me. I used your medicine for three and one half months, improving steadily in health, and in twenty-two months a child came. I cannot fully express the joy and thankfulness that is in my heart. Our home is a different place now, as we have something to live for, and all the credit is due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Yours very sincerely, Mss. L. C. GLOVER, 614 Grove St., Milwaukee, Wis." Vice President, Milwaukee Business Woman's Ass'n.

THE "LITTLE FATHER" OF ALL THE RUSSIAS IS ITS HEAD.

Its Richness, Its Many Adherents, and Its Pilgrimages - Moscow Its Jerusalem-In What Respects It Differs From the Church of Rome, Whence It Emanated

The pilgrimage of the Czar and his tourt to the distant Province of Tamboff to assist in the canoniza-tion of the hermit Prakhoff Moshnin has gone almost unnoted by the out-side world, whose eyes have been focused on Rome and the new Pope, but as the manifestation of the spirit of a great church it is scarcely less remarkable than the coronation of Pius X. The Czar is the Pope of the Greek Catholic Church, which

While Popes have continued to reign in Rome, Constantinople has passed into the hands of the Mohammedans and the capital of the Greek Church has been removed to the far porth, where only savages the far north, where only cavages and wild beasts existed in the days of the church's foundation.

But though the Greek Church has not the history of the Church of Rome, the Czar through his synod directs the spiritual affairs of 87,000,000 persons.

Moscow, the Jerusalem of Russia, has more pilgrims than Mecca, more shrines than Rome and more wor-shipers than the holy cities of India. Its church buildings are among the most magnificent in the world. The Church of Our Saviour in Moscow

The pilgrims are largely peasants The pilgrims are largely peasants who travel in gangs of three or four, their baggage upon their backs and their shoes tied about their necks. You may see them at almost any time walking through the streets, crossing themselves before every church and occasionally stopping to mutter their prayers. At the shrines they are admitted one at a time to look upon the Madonna, which has a policeman on each side, after which they drop their money into the con-tribution box and pass quietly out into the open air.

There are other famous shrines in the country at which the pilgrims worship. At Kiev there are hundreds of thousands of visitors a vear. The recent pilgrimage to the monastery of Saroff was one of the greatest of late years. The very earliest coinage that can properly be said to be "strictly Ame." can" was ordered by the original Viz-ginia company in the year 1612, only twe years after the founding of Jamestown. These coins were minted at Somers islands, now known as the Bermudas. For a period of more than a quarter of a century after this, how ever, tobacco and beaver skins were reckoned as lawful currency. In 1645 the assembly of Virginia met and de-clared that it "had maturely weighted and considered how advantageous quoine (coin) would be to this colony, and how much better it would be than a sole dependency upon tobacco and pelts." After this they provided for the coinage of copper coins of the do-nominations of twopence, threepence, sixpence and ninepence, but this reso lution was never carried into effect. The first coinage in America proper was the series of coins "struck" at Bos ton under the order of the general court of Massachusetts passed May 27 1652, the coins being three, six and twelve pence denominations, "in forme flatt and stamped on one side with the letters 'N. E.' and on the other the value of the piece."

Laughter as a Moral Power. Is laughter immoral? That is a very important objection urged against comedy from generation to generation. It is not only not immoral, but it is the preservation of morals to cultivate by use a faculty for all sorts of laughter It is the hallucination of prevalent evil which drives men to despair. Now evil always seems to be prevalent when you scrutinize it, for scrutiny involves confined attention to what lies immediately under the lens in the focused light. Being wherever we see, we surmise—nay, affirm—it to be everywhere. But were it really everywhere you and I could not be here to express such an opinion. Clearly the thing to do then is to belittle the evil by fair means and foul, to undignify it and so rob it of its horrors that we shall not lose wits or heart. By laughing at the evil we get rid of the false impression of its omnipotence, we get a little courage, and our despair turns a somersault up into glory from the swinging trapeze of faith.

The Wise Fox.
The Lion, the Ass and the Fox went hunting together, and it was agreed that whatever was taken should be shared between them. They caught a large fat Stag, which the Lion ordered the Ass to divide. The Ass took a deal of pains to divide the Stag into three pieces, which should be as nearly equal as possible. The Lion, enraged with him for what he considered a want of proper respect to his quality, flew upon him and tore him to pieces. He then called on the Fox to divide. The Fox, nibbling off a small portion for him-self, left the rest for the Lion's share. The Lion, highly pleased with this mark of respect, asked the Fox where he had learned such politeness and good breeding. "To tell the truth, sire," replied the Fox, "I was taught it by the Ass that lies dead there."-Æsop.

A Perpetual Sacred Fire. In the peninsula of Abeheron, for-merly belonging to Persia, but now a part of Russia, there is a perpetual or, rather, what the natives call an eternal sacred fire which is known to have been burning continually for more than 2,000 years. It rises from an irregular orifice of about twelve feet in depth and 120 feet square. The flames, which are constant, rise to a height of from six to eight feet, unaccompanied by smoke or disagreeable smell, waving back and forth with the wind like a field of golden grain.

Nature's Protection For the Ear. The membrane lining the canal of the ear contains a great number of little glands which secrete a waxy substance having an intensely bitter taste. The rpose of this is to prevent trance of insects and to keep the ear clean, as the layer of wax dries in scales, which rapidly fall away, thus removing with them any particle of dust or other foreign matters which may have found entrance to the ear.

Where Pa Came In. "What has your ma named the baby, May?" asked a neighbor of the little girl playing in the yard next door.
"Henry Arthur Algernon Judkins," said the tot proudly.
"Why, I thought you were going to name him after your father?"

"Well, so we did—Judkins," was the convincing reply.

Taking Things.

"I always take things as they come said the pickpocket as he dexterously relieved the man ahead of him of a watch and purse.

"And I take men as I find them,' added the policeman, clutching him gently but firmly by the arm.

"Casey, the conthractor, is gittin' or very peaceable wid his wife these days," remarked Mr. Rafferty.
"Peaceable," answered Mr. Dolan. ", should say so. They're so peaceable they ain't even sociable."

THE AMERICA'S CUP.

Canadian Account of the Win as Made in 1851. An interesting account of how the Americas Cup was won in 1851 is published by a Canadian contemporary: When the yacht Λmerica, it says, arrived in England in 1850-51 her owner, Stevens, published a chalher owner, Stevens, published a challenge to sail anything for £1,000 to £10,000, but he laid down so many stipulations that the challenge was not accepted. Then the Americans appeared to think they were being treated discourteously, and the Royal Yacht Squadron went out of its way to offer a cup, value £100, to be sailed for—open to all—without conditions or time allowance; course, round the Isla of Wight. Now this round the Isle of Wight. Now this is the cup that the Americans are pleased to call the Queen's Cup for some reason only known to them-selves. Possibly the hall mark on silver in England being a crown, the Yankees assumed that this must be Her Majesty's private totem. In 1851 five Queen's cups were given, not one bearing the slightest resem-blance to the Royal Yacht Squadron Cup. Aug. 22 was the eventful day. Cup. Aug. 22 was the eventful day. Fifteen yachts started, ranging from the barque Brilliant, 393 tons, to the cutter Aurora, 47 tons. Only five could be termed racers or ever won a prize. The five were the Freak, Volante, Arrow, Alarm and Aurora. The start was very peculiar. The fieet went one way—the Apperica another. "Bound the Isla LOTS FOR SALE-One and one-half America another, "Round the Isle of Wight," in yacht racing parlance, means round the Nab—and then right away. Round the Nab went the Britishers, but the Yankee, to the amusement of the spectators and the disgust of the officials, took no notice of the distant lightship, but headed straight for the corner of the headed straight for the corner of the island, scraped over Bembridge Ledge and then took a short line to Culver Cliff, thereby effecting a saving of from 11 to 13 miles. Off Bonchurch the Britishers caught up and the Freak and Volante got to windward of the America. Then a series of disasters occurred. The Arrow grounded off Ventnor, and the Alarm went to her assistance: off St. Lawwent to her assistance; off St. Lawwent to her assistance; off St. Law-rence the Freak fouled the Volants. Thus four of the five British racers were out of it. Passing the Needles the America was a long way ahead, but coming up the Solent the little Aurora gained rapidly and reached Cowes eight minutes behind the Am-erica. The Aurora sailed the course, the America had not and the Brite the America had not, and the Brit-ishers claimed the cup, but as the Squadron people had omitted to tell the Yankees that they must round the Nab, they saw no other way out of the difficulty but to hand the cup to the first yacht in. Mr. Charles Mair, the author of several volumes of verse, including "Tecumseh," and who for the past five years has been hiding his poetfe light under the bushel of department-al routine in the Immigration Office at Winnipeg, has been promoted to Lethbridge, and leaves shortly for that land of Mormons, coal mines and trigation ditches. In the United States, as has been said, they make their poets ambassadors, while we have a more economical method, we have a more economical method, and utilize their fine frenzy in describing to an intending settler the quality of the soil on Sec. 13, Township 6, Kange 10, or explaining to a Sheffield cutler what are the chances of obtaining work at his trade at Otaskwan, Alberta. One of the productions of Mr. Mair's which the West appreciates best is his "Open the Bay," and, though his hair is silvered, it is to be hoped Mr. Mair will live and flourish in the genial climate of Alberta long after his appeal has been heeded and his prophecy fulfilled, and Hudson Bay has become a highway for commerce. Mr. Mair is a genial, philosophic and optimistic soul, and he will be much missed by many friends in Winnipec. and utilize their fine frenzy in de-

Progress and Politoness.

Pregress and Politeness.

On two recent occasions, when school children were to the fore, attention was called by disinterested observers to their lack of courtesy, says The Globe.

The Governor-General, in addressing the children in the park on Empire Day, said: "With all the self-reliance that marks a new country like this, it would be well to remember the generous traditions and the courteous manners of the old country. There was sometimes a tendency to demonstrate self-reliance by a want of respect to fellow-men and to those in authority."

Mr. William Scott, Principal of the Normal School, speaking at the luncheon given by the directors of the Exhibition on "School Children's Day," contrasted the kind and court-sous ways of the boys and girls of Quebec with the rudeness, or at least bluntness, of those in Ontario. He had considerable experience in Quebec, and was inclined to think one reason for the difference is that the people there live in the past, while those of this Province are more democratic.

DECISION REACHED BY THE ALASKA TRIBUNAL.

May Give United States' More Territery Than Now Held Under Modus Vivendi-Ottawa is Without Official Notification of the Decision-Formal Announcement to be Made To-day.

Ottawa, Oct. 19.-The cablegram resterday from London announcing that a verbal decision had been reached by the Alaska tribunal adverse to all Canada's contentions, excepting those relating to the Portland Canal, is not officially confirmed here. In answer to inquiries it was stated that no official information had been received, and none was expected until the commission formally rendered judgment. Hence none of the Cabinet Ministers were prepared to discuss the subject or to say anything for publication. Nothing is said in the cablegram as to whether or not the judgment was unanimous. Upon that there is a keen desire for further information as well as to learn the details of the judgment. If the cabled report is correct, the United States retains Dyea and Skaguay and a substantial strip of coast, and Canada's contention that the southern line of demarcation runs from Cape Muzon north of Pearse and Wales Islands and up the Portland Canal, is sustained. ceived, and none was expected until London, Oct.19.—The Alaskan boun London, Oct.19.—The Alaskan boundary commission reached an agreement whereby all the American contentions are sustained, with the exception of those is relation to the Portland Canal, which Canada wins. All that now remains to be done is for the commissioners to affix their signatures to the decision and the map which will accompany it. On the map will be marked the boundary line definitely fixing the division of American and British territory, on such a basis that no American citizen will lose a foot of land he already believed he held, while the United States will get all the waterways to the rich Alaska territory with the exception of the Portland Canal, which gives Canada the one outlet she so much needed.

Let she so much needed.

The long standing dispute was settled only after a week of secret deliberation between the arbitrators. Up eration between the arbitrators. Of to noon there was a possibility that a disagreement might result and the whole proceedings fall to the ground. Lord Alverstone, though openly in-clined to believe in the justice of the American argument, that the United States was entitled to the heads of in-lets, as contained in question five, held out that Canada had established hei out that Canada had established here case in questions two and three, dealing with the Portland Canal.

After lunctron Senator Lodge, Secretary Root and Senator Turner agreed to cede these points and to start the American boundary line from the head of the Portland Canal, thus giving the Canadians that channel and some male Canadians that channel and some small islands on which there are only a few disused storehouses. This accomplished, the majority of the tribunal agreed to fix, with this exception, the entire boundary line as outlined in the American case.

boundary line as outlined in the American case.

Whether Mr. Aylesworth and Sir Louis Jette, the Canadian commissioners, will refuse to sign the decision, and make it unanimous, is not yet known. But it will not affect the validity of the agreement if a minority report is submitted.

NOVA SCOTIA EANK ROBBED. Thieves Crack the Safe at St. Andrew's, N.B. St. Andrew's, N. B., Oct. 19.-The Bank of Nova Scotia at this place was burglarized on Friday night or early Saturday. The safe was completely wrecked and all the money taken. The amount has not been learned, but it is thought it will run into the thou-sands. Horse blankets, robes and other heavy wrappings were swathed about the safe to deaden the noise. A neighboring blacksmith shop was entered and tools stolen. A C.P.R. hand car is missing also.

WEST HASTINGS LIBERALS. Strong Protest Against the Redistri bution Bill Amendment.

Belleville, Oct. 19.-The Belleville Ontario, the Liberal organ of this city, states that if the Government per sists in abiding by the amendment made to the redistribution bill, by which the first arrangement was changed, the West Hastings Reform Club will disband and sell its two billiard tables, and the two ridings of Hastings will be given to the Conservatives by acclamation at the next election. The above action, The Ontario says, was decided on at a largely attended meeting of the Reform Club last night. It is expected that this action will influence the Senate to make certain changes in the bill. sists in abiding by the amendmen ence the Senate to make certain changes in the bill.

MEAFORD'S MAYOR HONORED. Citizens' Address and Presentation to Dr. Hamill.

Meaford, Oct. 19 .- On Friday an at-home was given here by the citizens in honor of Mayor J. D. Hamill, D.D. S. Dr. Hamill was first elected Mayor of Meaford in January, 1897, and has since that date been continuously in office, having been elected from year to year by acclamation. During the evenyear by acclamation. During the even-ing the doctor was presented with an illuminated address and a purse con-taining $600. During his tenure of of-fice Meaford has become one of the leading grain ports on the Georgian Bay, and numerous manufacturing in-dustries have been established in the fown. It was in recognition of his ser-vices as Mayor that the presentation was made.

"More haste, less speed," and "has ten slowly," are proverbs born of ex-perience that some things can't be hurried without loss and waste. That its specially true of eating. The rail-way lunch habit, "fire minutes for re-freshments," is a habit most disas-trous to the health. You may hurry your eating. You can't hurry your digestion, and the neglect to allow proper time for this important function is the beginning of sorrows to many a busy man. When the tongue is foul, the head aches, then there are sour or bitter risings, undue fullness after eating, hot dlushes, rritability, nervousness, irresolution, cold extremities, and other annoying symptoms, be sure the stomach and organs, of digestion and nutrition have "broken down." Nothing will reestablish them in active healthy operation so quickly as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It strengthens the stomach, nourishes the nerves, purifies the blood and builds up the body. It is a strictly temperance sour or bitter risings, undue fullness body. It is a strictly temperance medicine, containing no alcohol of

ALL SAFETY RESCUED. Women's and Children's Refugee at 'Montreal Burned.

Montreal, Oct. 19 .- The Ladies' Benevolent Institution, on Bertelet street, was damaged to the extent of $5,000 early Saturday by fire and water. Fireface and neck, and had to be removed to the General Hospital. Firemen Pilotte to the General Hospital. Firemen Pilotte and Roberts of No. 6 received painful burns about the face and hands. The building at the time contained 128 children and 18 infirm old women, and great excirement prevalled.

When the alarm was first sounded, by commendable presence of mind, the officials were able to prevent a tunuit and to direct the immakes to a place of safety. Firemen from fourteen different stations responded to the call, and soon the fiames were under control. The origin of the fire is unknown. The place was fully insured.
