POETRY.

Trusting in God.

The little birds trust God, for they go singing
From Northern woods where autumn winds have blown,
With joyous faith their trackless pathway winging,
To summer lands of song, afar, unknown.

And if he cares for them through wintry weather,
And will not disappoint one little bird,
Will he not be as true a Heavenly Father
To every soul who trusts his Holy Word?

Let us go singing then, and not go sighing,
Since we are sure our times are in His hand,
Why should we weep, and fear, and call it dying?
'Tis only fitting to a summer-land!

Waiting.

I see the wrong that round me lies,
I feel the guilt within,
I hear with groan and travail cries
The world confess its sin;

Yet, in the maddening maze of things,
And tossed by storm and flood,
To one fixed stake my spirit clings,
I know that God is good;

And so beside the Silent Sea
I wait the muffled oar;
No harm from Him can come to me
On ocean or on shore.

I know not where His islands lift
Their fringed palms in air;
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond His love and care.

—Whittier.

LITERATURE.

If They Were Men.

WHAT SOME FAMOUS WOMEN WOULD LIKE AND WOULD NOT DO—SOME WOULD LIKE TO BE MEN—OTHERS ARE CONTENT TO REMAIN AS THEY ARE.

WHAT ELLA WHEELER WOULD DO.

Were I a man:—

I would never speak or write one disparaging or disrespectful word of any woman whom I did not know beyond the cavity of a doubt to be utterly unworthy. Even then I would only speak such words to warn others from her example.

I would aim to make my life worthy one good woman's admiration and respect.

I would be more gallant and kind to my wife than any other woman.

I would make the happiness of my home the chief ambition of my life.

I would deny myself some pleasures and luxuries in youth that I might not be dependent upon others for the necessities of life in old age.

I would give every man a helping hand as I went along the journey of life and expect no reward save in the increase of my self-respect and satisfaction.

I would take a great pride in controlling and mastering my passions and appetites, as I would in the control of my horses and my dog. And I would look well to it that none gained the mastery over me.

I would feel it a greater honor to be called a faithful husband and a wise father than to be known as "a sly dog" or "a great nasher" by my fellow men.

If I inherited wealth I would endeavor to make myself in bearing and in manners the equal of many who labor for a livelihood.

I would never imagine that the possession of a first-class tailor and an eyeglass could excuse a vile breath or an insolent air.

I would write no letters to any woman, save my wife, which all the world might not read.

In the employ of others, I would do double the duties imposed on me that I might the sooner have others in my employ.

I would rule in my business affairs and in my own household—not by force of physical strength, but by force of character.

And in my general association with women I would treat them as nearly as possible as I like other men to treat my sister or my wife.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

MRS MOULTON WOULD BE HAPPY.

I don't exactly know what I would do were I a man, but I know what I would be, and that is, happy.

From my point of view, a man is a fortunate creature, indeed. He has no dressmaker to tyrannise over, or no disapprover to meet at the last moment. He can simply go to a tailor, give his order, be measured and he is done with it. He need not go back again and again, and turn himself into an aching lay-figure for an hour at a time to have his draperies arranged.

Then, a man could get on with three suits of clothes—one for the morning wear, one for afternoon visits and a dress suit till it grows shabby at the seams without anyone saying: "Aren't you tired of the sight of that white brocade? Really, Mrs. — has worn it at least at six dinners this season."

And then, hats! If I were a man I should not have to confront myself discontentedly in the glass and choose anxiously between toques and capotes, flowers and feathers.

Happy? Yes, indeed! I could go alone to Delmonico's in New York, or to the Cafe Anglais in Paris, and no one would stare at me in wonder.

I could start off, if the fancy seized me, for Russia, Australia, or the pyramids, round the world if I liked, without waiting, as now I must, for a suitable companion who wants to go in the same direction.

I could go to the theatre without waiting to be taken, or bringing some amiable old lady to accompany me.

I could indulge a sudden fancy for a midnight stroll under the stars.

I could tell a woman I loved her. In short, I could live a free, natural, unfeathered life.

Men are ungrateful for their privileges, I think. I wonder they are not a thousand times happier than they are. To be sure, I never heard of one yet who wanted to be a woman.

LOUISE CHANDLER MOULTON.

FANNY DAVENPORT ON WOMEN.

Thousands of women continually wish they were men. For a woman not to feel or express the wish is the exception rather than the rule.

And from the standpoint of the perfect freedom and unrestraint accorded men in almost everything all women may wish to be of the opposite sex.

But from all other points I would wish to be just what I am, a woman! There is more real gratification and honor for a woman in making fame and competency than a man. Women are surrounded by almost every barrier that can shut out success. Hampered with laws and social rights of every description, she cannot reach her goal by the same broad avenues that are open to men.

Let a brother and a sister, equally talented, start out in life to make success in any profession. The brother walks out into the world, and is easily thrown into the acquaintance of superior men from whom he can imbibe the knowledge that means for him a help towards the end in view. Men encourage and assist him.

The acquaintance of some high-minded, noble woman, brilliant in her endowments, proves itself an education to the inner and finer attributes of his nature. All these are advantages denied the sister. Within the narrow confines allowed her sex, she cannot step forward with the same resolution as her brother without incurring criticism. She must be bounded by the most stringent laws—laws which are to-day the curse of self-advancing women.

Women must, to-day knock so long, so long and so often at the door of success that many weary and become discouraged before their cries are heard. She must be as of iron to withstand the condemnation of society and the world. Can she form attachments to the opposite sex—attachments, or acquaintances if you like, that cultivate her mind or brain? No; not unless she defies criticism. She must live largely within herself. She is a woman and therefore must she live in the solitude prescribed by social usages and codes, unless she deliberately kicks over tracks.

A dark picture? Ah, no! For proof ask to-day, any self-supporting, self-advancing woman! Ask her how hard success is earned.

Woman's scope for action is so small that I often marvel at the success she has achieved and influenced in the world. Thrice more to her credit, I say, then, is any success that she is able to make than if she were a man!

FANNY DAVENPORT.

"SHOULD" FROM "THE DUCHESS."

If I were a man: I should either be a doctor or a soldier. The courage that belongs to them makes these two the grandest professions in the world. True, they contradict each other: one kills and the other cures, yet both are noble.

I should not be in haste to marry. It's the one step in life that makes or mars, and to escape from it but two gates are open: Death and Disgrace.

I should consider 30 a good age for matrimony. Before that man is a mere boy; after that, for the next twenty years he is at his best if there is a best in him. At fifty, if unmarried, he must be regarded as a confirmed old bachelor, and had better remain so.

I should cultivate the society of women of the world. Fashionable women, women of good character and form, what ever has been or may be said against them, having a refined influence. They subdue the moral odor of the stable and help to check the growing inclination to irreverence in ordinary conversation that even decent men are prone to in this generation.

I should make it a point not to scold the servants. One should never deprive the woman one has married of the chief joy of her existence.

I should regard courage as the highest gift of God but I should not consider prowess in mere field sports as constituting that great gift. To conquer and slay the lower animals should not be taken as the end and aim of life. There must be something beyond it. To excel in moral courage, is to be able to defy society for a principle, is surely a greater triumph than to stand with one's foot upon the body of one's country's man.

If I were a man, I should count myself blessed indeed!

But Providence has ordered it otherwise, for I am

THE DUCHESS.

MRS FRANK LESLIE'S WISHES.

Most women who wish that they were men, are pining for what I, by a strange fatality already possess:

An outlet for energy.

A voice in the ear of the world.

An influence beyond the wall of their own homes.

If I had not these things I naturally should desire them very earnestly, and being a man or being a woman, should try to obtain them.

As it is, I desire a man's opportunities chiefly from a social point of view.

If I were a man, I would try to understand women as very few men seem to try to do, I would study the complexity of their tastes, loves, dislikes, sensitiveness and intuitions, and try to raise my simpler and clumsier masculine perceptions to a level with what most men despise because they do not comprehend.

I would like to be a man for a little while that I might make love to at least two or three women in a way that would neither shock them with its coarseness nor starve them with its poverty. As it is now, most women deny themselves the expression of the best part of their love because they know it will be either a puzzle or a terror to their lovers. And what I would not do if I were a man would be ever to let go the curb rein of my own propensities.

I would never let any woman know me for just what I was by nature, but having discovered her ideal of me would try to live up to it, or rather copy it as best I could.

No man yet has ever been all that the woman who loves him tries to be live him. If I were a man I would take care that she never found out her mistake! But where is the man wise enough to do this?

MRS FRANK LESLIE.

SHE WOULD BE A MANLY MAN.

If I were a man I would devoutly wish I were a woman, and as that would not be possible, I would accept the inevitable, and do my best to be a manly man as well as a gentleman, I should reverence my mother above all other women and hold every woman sacred for her sake, and if I had a wife I should try to be as polite and attentive to her as if she were the wife of some other man.

MARY J. HOLMES.

KATE FIELD WOULD'N'T CHEAT WOMEN

Were I a man I'd do unto women as I'd be done by. I would not advise a woman to try real estate, and then sell it to her at three times its value. This is what happened to me at Atchison, Kan.

KATE FIELD.

FROM THE GALLANT GUEST'S WIDOW.

If I were a man, there is one little thing I should especially look to.

I would tell my wife something every day, not only by look or act, but in plain Saxon that would convey to her a daily remembrance of the love that was hers.

If my wife came to ask me if I loved her, I would not say:

"Haven't I told you dozens of times? Didn't I prove that I did by marrying you?"

There are just three little words that only take the fraction of a minute to say, can be said while a man is in the wildest sort of hurry to catch a suburban train, rush to a belated appointment, or tear out of the house to catch a passing car, which will brighten the wife's whole day, soften sorrow, lessen care, and make her eager to run to the door at night to welcome her husband, and tell the same thing to him again.

No deaf man is quicker to discover what words the lips frame than a dependent woman who sees "I love you" proclaimed from her husband's mouth in soundless words.

ELIZABETH BACON CUSTER.

MRS SPOFFORD'S CONTENT.

Having been always content with my lot as a woman, and thinking a woman's life in many ways preferable to a man's I have never given a thought as to what I would do if I were a man.

In fact, I cannot summon the application of a single thing that I cannot do as a woman with the one exception of voting. That I would do and take my part in directing the affairs of men, I would do justice to all, and without natural or social rights from none.

But when I would do all that as a woman, had I the opportunity.

After all, if any of us were men, I am inclined to think we would be likely to do as a man now does, and I think it is as impossible for a woman to say what she would do were she a man, as it is for a man to say what he would do were he a disembodied spirit.

HARRIET PRESOTT SPOFFORD.

Parental Prayers.

Surely, among all the prayers that go up to God, none are dearer or more prevailing than the intercessions of parents for their children. They are the hallowed breathings of the purest, tenderest love. Such prayers, if persistent, believing and importunate, may not say that God always answers in some way in the end? Monica, the mother of Augustine, prays for her son. For a time he goes deeper and deeper into sin, and it seems that the mother's supplications are unheard or unavailing. But she faints not; she will not give him up; she refuses to be disheartened. For many years her son wanders far from God, farther and farther; but she stays at her altar, undismayed, believing still, and pleading with renewed earnestness. At last, all her intercessions are answered in one hour, when Augustine falls down at Jesus' feet in submission, and instantly turns all the wealth of his now splendid life into the service of his now Master. —Presbyterian Observer.

Marking Clothes.

It is of essential importance that clothes should be marked and numbered. This is often done with ink; but as some persons like to mark with silk, we shall describe the stitch. Two threads are to be taken each way of the cloth, and the needle must be passed three ways in order that the stitch may be complete. The first is aslant from the person toward the right hand; the second is downward toward you; and the third is the reverse of the first—that is, aslant from you toward the left hand. The needle is to be brought out at the corner of the stitch nearest to that you are about to make. The shapes of the letters or figures can be learned from an inspection of any common examples.

THE HOUSEHOLD.

RECIPTS.

RICE FRITTERS.—Three tablespoons of rice, four eggs, one teaspoon of cur- rants, sugar and nutmeg to suit the taste; boil rice gently until swelled; dredge currants with flour; beat eggs: mix all together thoroughly and fry.

HERMITS.—One cup of maple sugar, one-half cup each of butter and sour cream, one egg, one half teaspoonful of soda, one tablespoonful each of cloves cinnamon and nutmeg, and one cup of chopped raisins. Knead as little as possible. Bake like cookies.

CURRIED EGGS.—Heat a pint of milk; add to it two teaspoonfuls of curry powder, rubbed smooth in a little cold milk; let simmer, and thicken with a teaspoonful of corn starch rubbed with the sauce of butter; boil six eggs hard, cut them in slices and lay in the sauce; let them stand over the fire until heated.

MUTTON CHOPS LARDED.—Beat chops flat and lard them with salt pork. Put in a saucpan, sprinkle with minced onions, pepper and salt. Cover with soup stock and let simmer one hour; thicken the gravy with browned flour, add the juice of a lemon, one spoonful of mushroom catchup and a wine-glass of currant jelly. Lay the chops in a dish and pour the gravy over.

SERVING BANANAS.—To make a salad of bananas slice half a dozen and put in a dish with layers of as many oranges also sliced. Over all squeeze the juice of a lemon and sprinkle plentifully with powdered sugar. Serve very cold. Any delicate cake baked in layers and put together with layers of bananas sliced very thin will make a choice dessert. The cake should be served with sweetened whipped cream or it will be too dry to be palatable.

BOILED CHICKEN WITH OYSTERS.—Prepare the chicken as for roasting, adding chopped oysters to the stuffing. Put the fowl in a tin pail, tightly covered, and place the pail in a pot of cold water. Boil for 1½ or two hours, as required. Make a gravy from the liquor in the pail, adding to it some of the oysters. Take a half dozen of the largest oysters cooked until the edges curl and lay over the chicken. Put over it a little of the gravy, and serve the rest in a bowl.

DUCK WITH TURNIPS.—Place in a stewpan a tablespoonful of flour and two tablespoonfuls of butter; let the flour brown slightly, then put in a duck that has been stuffed with an onion dressing; turn it about in this flour and butter, then add half a pint of water and a gill of white wine, add pepper, nutmeg and savory, cover the stewpan closely and cook slowly. When the duck is about half done add two turnips cut into balls. When the duck is done, place it on a deep platter, skin the gravy well, add a little thickening, pour the gravy and turnips around the duck and serve with pieces of fried toast and currant jelly.

The Battle Steed.—"I feel this old horse," said the colonel. "I feel that he saved my life at Gettysburg."

"How?"

"He kicked me in the stomach before the battle so that I couldn't go on the field, and my substitute got shot in the neck."

THE ACADIAN

WOLFVILLE, N. S., APRIL 25, 1890.

The Proposed Dike Again.

A few weeks ago we published an extract from a letter written by the Minister of Marine to Prof. Tufts in re the proposed Kingsport-Long Island dike. On Wednesday Prof. Tufts showed us a letter dated April 18th from the Deputy Minister of Marine which reads as follows:—"Referring to my letter of the 17th ult., in which I informed you that the chief engineer of the department of public works had reported against the construction of a dike from Kingsport to Long Island, I beg to inform you that the dike reported against related to one on the river Habitant or Canning river, while it appears that the dike you refer to extends from Kingsport to Long Island, and its erection is supposed to reclaim a larger portion of marsh land. This dike has not been reported against and no action has been taken in regard to it." From this it will be seen that the matter is yet undecided and that the Government does not appear to be very well acquainted with the situation as yet. We feel confident, however, that if the Government is made fully acquainted with the facts of the case they cannot but decide against the present project as they did against the proposed dam across the Canning river. If that dike could not be allowed because it would impede navigation, how much more should this be disallowed. In one case the dike would close the port of Canning, while in the other it would not only close Canning but Wolfville, Port Williams and other places as well. Besides the injury to navigation, the project in view if accomplished would affect the beautiful condition of the neighborhood in a very alarming manner. This should be a strong reason why it should not be allowed. We think our people should move earnestly in the matter and have the Government made fully acquainted with the disadvantages following the construction of the dike, and we believe that if they do this we may have very little fear of its receiving any encouragement from Ottawa.

The Elections.

In a recent issue we stated that the Provincial elections would probably take place about the middle of May. It appears that our conjecture was correct and this week the date of the election is announced officially by Government papers. The dates are as follows: nomination day, May 14th; election, May 21st. This will give very little time, but probably enough, and the campaign will no doubt be a very spirited one. In this county we have as yet heard nothing authentic as to who will be the candidates, but we may expect soon to have them announced. No matter who they may be we hope to see the election so far as this county at least is concerned carried on in a more honorable and respectable manner than is usually the case. It is no doubt well that at such time the acts of the Government should be freely discussed and the party platform should be fully understood by the electorate. However we see no reason why an election could not be carried on without such disgraceful personalities as are sometimes indulged in. We offer the free use of our columns to both sides for a fair and open discussion of party issues, provided anything of a personal nature is avoided.

Improvement Society Needed.

We would like to see our people manifest a little more interest in the appearance of our town. We do not mean by this that our people are careless as to the appearance of their dwellings and grounds, as in this respect Wolfville will we feel sure compare favorably with any town in the Province. What we mean is that our streets and public buildings and grounds do not receive the care and attention that they should. For some years past we have been endeavoring to arouse sufficient interest in this direction to have the old "Improvement Society" revived and again made a valuable factor in the improving of the appearance of our town. We believe that money laid out in improving and beautifying a town is money well spent and that owners of real estate, business men and all others reap sufficient benefit to more than repay them for the amount invested—besides having the satisfaction of having clean and neat surroundings. A few dollars expended in improving our streets, planting shade trees and other ways, would add much to the appearance of Wolfville and yield a hundred-fold profit.

The members of Acadia Lodge gave a very interesting and successful entertainment in their hall on Wednesday evening. The programme consisted of a dialogue, "We Are All Teetotalers," vocal and instrumental music, readings, &c., and was presented in a very pleasing manner. In addition to this ice cream and other refreshments were provided and the very creditable sum of $24 was realized.

Be Yourself.

HARL MARICE. Be yourself. No matter what that self is be it. I hate to see a person trying to be somebody else. They never make a success of it, and in the end do not get to be anybody. Don't think you are better than others but try to be as good. When you are better it will be known. A good child never gets whipped at school, and a good man don't often hear that he is a rogue. Do not be deceitful. If you like a person say so. You needn't be afraid of hurting their feelings. When you write to them send your love, instead of your kind regards. Kind regards is cold stuff. It is like a "come over to tea some night" invitation. If you are a barber don't try to pass off for a tonsorial artist. Do you suppose I was a telegraph operator I won't let on I was a lightning maker? You must never let your feelings get above your work. Some people have an idea that some occupations are more respectable than others but it is a mistake. It is the people that make occupations respectable or low. Money if honestly earned, no matter how, will get you anything from a home to a friend. A $5 bill earned ploughing will buy just as many comforts as if it was got for writing a letter in a dingy law office. Look at the great men that have lived and then think one occupation better than another. Jeremy Taylor was a barber, and so was Turner the great landscape painter. Walter Scott was a lawyer and Andrew Jackson a tailor. Burns was a day laborer and Wm. Carey a shoemaker. So you see it is not a man's trade that raises or lowers him. Who wouldn't be a day laborer if he could sing like Burns, or the son of a clergyman if he could write like Addison or Goldsmith. Who wouldn't be called a brick layer for the sake of being a Hugh Miller, or a wood-chamber if he could be a Shakespeare, or a lord if he could be a Byron or a Bacon. You can't tell by looking at a man what he does for a living. The other day I met a couple of strangers. One dressed in the latest style, and he had such a patronizing way of speaking to you. Think I, "that is a great man. It is not Talmage, I think it is Spurgeon or John D. Rockefeller." The other was an unassuming man, and could listen to what was said to him. You wouldn't, though, think he was much, for his clothes hung loose on him and he never wore one during the half hour I talked with him. But I found out afterwards that he was a popular preacher of England, and that the other man traded watches for a living, spelled Tuesday without an "y," and always put in three capitals. To know people we must get acquainted with them, and to be ourselves we must know our selves. Now young man study yourself. Take an evening a week and sit down and try and make your own acquaintance. Study your dirt position and look over your talents. See what you are made for and go and learn that trade. Learn yourself thoroughly. See whether you would rather read Samuel Smiles' looks or the exploits of Jesse James. See if you can figure up how much bigger a snowstorm has to be to keep you home from a party than a prayer-meeting. See if you are just as kind to your mother as she is to you. See whether you like to talk about a person's good qualities or bad. Just see if you can't find out as much about yourself as you know about the other boys in the town. Know yourself, and if you are alright you will want to be yourself.

Halifax City Jottings.

MARINE NOTES. The schr. W. D. Richards, which capsize off the harbor last week, has not yet been towed in and is not likely to, now, as the continuous strong winds off shore have probably carried her well out to sea. Fortunately her crew were rescued soon after the accident, but the captain loses heavily, his share in the vessel being about 200 dollars. She hailed from Lunenburg. A large fleet of fishing vessels is now in port, fitting out for the bank fisheries. They come from the ports east and west of Halifax, the majority from Lunenburg and Shelburne. Many of them are fine specimens of novel architecture. Large deal shipments continue to be made from Richmond. Some thirty vessels in all are expected to load within a short time. Two vessels are loading potatoes from Kings county, and calcined plaster from Windsor for West Indies.

Railway Notes.

A special through train, with some 500 immigrants, who arrived from England per last mail steamer for Manitoba and North-West Territories, left here for Winnipeg on Monday. The previous mail steamer brought 1000. Changes are talked of in the running of the C. P. R. train between St John and Halifax, in order to give closer connection with western points. The American Express Co. has now completed arrangements for transporting its American traffic over the W. & A. Ry.; and has opened an office in the city for the transportation of a general express and forwarding business to all parts of the continent. A wild steer from Cornwallis made things lively at Richmond one day last week. After being let out of the car he took charge of the freight yard, sending the brakemen to the roofs of cars in short order. After charging right and left until he had cleared the yard, he undertook to face a moving engine.

Being a pilot engine with a running board in front, instead of a cow catcher, he got a good brace against it, but finding it was labor in vain he turned his attention to a brakeman who happened in sight. Having lifted him out of the way his majesty thought he would take a rest. A tail rope was procured, and after some difficulty he was lassoed by a brakeman, much to the satisfaction of the train men and employees generally.

CIVIC NOTES. The all prevailing topic just now in civic circles is the coming aldermanic contest for the different wards. But I'll stop now or there will be no space in your paper for anybody else.

Notes from Ottawa.

(By Our Regular Correspondent.) OTTAWA, April 23.—For two full days has Parliament had its attention devoted to the management of the North-west mounted police, and to its commandant, Commissioner Herchmer, in particular. If the latter is half the man that the North west papers and newspapers make him out to be, and no one doubts the unanimous voice of these—then Herchmer is a tyrant in the land of the setting sun. Nicholas Flood Davin, M. P., made a very violent attack stating that Herchmer was unfit for the position he held. Mr Macdowall, M. P., stated that from the temperament of Herchmer he believed that he was unfit to command the police, and the sooner charged the better. Mr Sumerville, M. P., contended that Herchmer was tyrannical and unpopular in the North-west. Messrs Fisher, Watson and other M. P.'s condemned the ways of the leader of the police. A motion to enquire into his conduct was negatived on a division by 76 to 62.

Petitions have been presented to the House of Commons praying the House to adopt the necessary measures to secure such revision of the Constitution of Canada as will leave the several Provinces free to abolish separate schools supported by rates levied by process of law, and prevent the making of grants of public funds to denominational institutions of any kind.

The Equal Rights party had a demonstration last week in the capital. Addresses from the Equal Rights Association were presented to Dalton McCarthy, Q. C., M. P., Jno. Charlton, M. P., Col. O'Brien, M. P., and their associates in Parliament, endorsing their action on the Senate and dual language question. Very few deputations are in the capital this week, the tariff apparently getting a rest.

The railway muddle in Cape Breton has been settled as far as this session is concerned by Mr Pains' bill being washed overboard.

The election for the House of Commons vacancy in Ottawa city is causing some excitement. There will be an Equal Rights candidate and a split in the Conservative party, but there is no likelihood of a Liberal contest. Everything appears to be quiet on Nova Scotia railway matters. A great many bills will come in for the slaughter at the end of the session.

On the tariff question before the House Hon. Peter Mitchell took the floor in opposition to the changes in the tariff in particular, and the N. P. in general. He entered into a short historical sketch of Confederation and his share in bringing about this constitution, and how much Peter Mitchell did for the Dominion. He then drifted back to attack the duty on pork, flour and stereotype plates. Mr Kenny made a vigorous reply in defence of the tariff from a Maritime Province standpoint. Every member who went home for the Easter holidays came back to Parliament with a new speech on the tariff regulations.

Nothing has yet been definitely settled about the proposed demonstration in honor of the Duke of Connaught's visit to the capital. The capital is too much excited over politics just now to think of anything else.

Berwick Jottings.

No Surrender Lodge, I. O. G. T., Waterville, paid Longfellow Division, of this place, a fraternal visit on Friday evening, April 18th. The time passed very pleasantly in listening to readings, recitations, songs, farces etc. interspersed with instrumental music by A. A. Ellis and Miss Mabel Ellis. W. H. Snyder, on behalf of Longfellow Division, read a short address of welcome. During the evening refreshments were served and added greatly to the evening's enjoyment. The gathering broke up, hoping to meet again at some future date, by singing "God Save the Queen."

An interesting marriage ceremony took place at Aylesford yesterday. Mr Chute, of Bridgetown, overseer of the Aylesford Canning factory, and Miss L. Graves, of Aylesford, were the contracting parties. The marriage took place at the Baptist meeting house, Rev. Mr Perry being the officiating clergyman. The bride was given away by her brother George. Miss Aggie McIstyre acted as bridesmaid and Fred Harris accompanied the groom. A sumptuous repast took place at the bride's home at the conclusion of the ceremony. The happy couple took the 4 o'clock train for Halifax amidst showers of rice to spend their honeymoon.—The Herald, Thurs.

"Book of Wonders."

(LESLIE LORING DAVISON.)

With a Preface by Harl Marice.

Edited by Ben Zeene.

"It gives me great pleasure to say a few words in recommendation of the 'Book of Wonders.' The name is an appropriate one, although given to the story in his humorous way. It is a book of wonders. In reading its pleasing articles we regret that the author has gone, and that we will read no more. In his death Nova Scotia lost a promising writer. He was both a poet and a humorist. The editor has conferred a favor by publishing the book, and I feel certain that Nova Scotia readers will give it a welcome. Nova Scotians are always ready to acknowledge native talent wherever it appears."—HARL MARICE.

"When Leslie L. Davison went down to the grave, the best bright rays of intellect went out. Although he had not yet reached that age when the mind of man takes its predestined stand and shines forth in all its brightness, yet the morning beams had already begun to tell of the approaching noontide which, alas! never came. His mind was eminently of the poetic class—the class which receives a sermon from the dying leaf, learns a song from the robin, exults with nature, and feels itself to be 'part of the mighty universe around'; for the poet's soul rises with the storm, glows with the sunshine, and dwells with the shadow. His prose overflows with poetic diction and sparkles with genius—poetic genius."—E. B., in ACADIAN of December 6th, 1889.

On the death of Leslie L. Davison, the author of the 'Book of Wonders,' Nova Scotia certainly lost a brilliant writer. It was with real regret on my part that I read the concluding article in that very interesting series of articles which has been running in the ACADIAN during the summer months, entitled 'Book of Wonders,' contributed by Ben Zeene. Such articles as 'Dawn,' 'The Happy Hunting Grounds,' 'A Graveyard Vision,' 'His Last Hour,' and the poem in the concluding article, 'The Long Ago,' are really extraordinary. In reading them it is difficult to imagine that their author was but a boy of sixteen. The author of the series of articles tells us that he wrote a story, but does not give it to the public. Will Ben Zeene favor us with this story? Better still, why not collect his complete works and publish them in book form? I am sure every one who has read this series of articles would hail such a course with delight, and would be impatient for its publication."—READER, in ACADIAN of Sept. 27th, 1889.

Temperance Matters.

Edited by the Members of Wolfville Division Moderate Drinking.

Lou Beauchamp, in speaking of moderate drinking, says: "Remove every moderate drinker from our land and the temperance question is solved. When the last drunkard dies or reforms and the moderate drinker is no more, a drunkard will be a thing of the past."

How true the above words are. No boy in our land wishes to patronize the drunkard. The poor wretch, with his bloodshot eyes, red nose, beggarly appearance, he ignores. It is the man who seems to go unscathed, the finely dressed aristocratic drinker the youth patronizes. These moderate drinkers are not only harming themselves, but are injuring the community. These false lights, (these occasional drinkers), some even professing to be christians, attract young men, and show them the road to ruin.

Would that those men to whom the youth of our land look up to for guidance would lead the path that God intended they should, prepare the way for those in the rear, and by so doing be a blessing and not a curse to the community.

There are many moderate drinkers who have some growing up. These sons are following in the footsteps of their parents. The father may love his children, he may give to them many benefits, but he is greatly injuring them by setting such an example. No man wishes to see his son become a miserable drunkard, yet he points the way by which he may become one. If any of the readers of this column are in the habit of taking an occasional glass, I would say to you, "Let it alone." You are in great danger to become as have thousands of your kind, miserable drunkards. If you wish to reform the Lodge and the Division of this place will help you if you unite with them. Moderation is merely a false light; total abstinence is a brightly burning beacon of hope and promise. You can make no mistake in adopting it for life's talk-man. And to those who are free from this vice I would say, "Join with us in the noble endeavor to exterminate this damning traffic that is causing so much misery and harm in our community.

Drunkennes is the parent of eight-tenths of the crime and eight-tenths of the pauperism of our land.

What a great man says concerning the revenue obtained from the sale of strong drink. When Gladstone was Prime Minister of the United Kingdom of Great Britain, a body of brewers remonstrated with him on his attitude to their traffic, telling him how much the nation would lose should the revenue from strong drink be restricted. His answer contained a direct reply to those who believe strong drink to be the financial salvation of a country. "Gentlemen, you need not give yourselves any trouble about the revenue. The question of revenue must not stand in the way of needed reforms. Besides, with a sober population not wasting their earnings I will know where to obtain the revenue."
