PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

"Oh, Aunt Dinah, please don't be angry with me for my grandfather's doings! I am sorry he has foreclosed the mortgage, and I came to tell dear Mrs. Grant that I am ashamed of it all," cried the beauty so sweetly that the old woman's anger was at once dissipated, and with returning smiles, she ushered the visitor into the large, shabby parlor with its faded carpet and curtains, and took the card to her mistress.

Mrs. Grant was in her own cozy little sitting-room, lying dejectedly upon a sofa drawn near the glowing wood-fire in the grate, and she looked with a weary frown at the bit of postcard, exclaiming:

"Amber Laurens! Why, what does the girl want with me? I should think she would have better taste than to come to Bonnycastle now."

"Oh, miss, she told me that she was real sorry her granddaddy was so ugly by you, and she came to tell you so. An', missus, she am got on de beautifullest gown I eber see, all black and yellow silk, and de finest hat, black velvet wid yellow canary birds onto it, as natural as life! I sholy did like dem fine clothes!" admitted Aunt Dinah.

"But, Dinah, I do not feel well enough to see callers to-day. You must tell Miss Laurens to excuse me," murmured the lady, shrinking from a meeting with any of the household from Golden Willows.

"Oh, sho, now, missus, you can see her jes' as well as not, for you needn't go down to de parlor room at all. She can come to de settin'-room and talk ter yer, layin' dere so comfortable, dere now," urged Aunt Dinah, thinking that the call might divert the lady's melancholy thoughts.

"Oh, very well, Dinah; bring her in here, then. You will always have your way," sighed Mrs. Grant, and the old woman retreated, chuckling, and soon ushered the beautiful young visitor into the room of her mistress.

"Dear Mrs. Grant, will you pardon me for coming at this time? Oh, I could not help it! My heart ached for your trouble. I had to come and tell you how grieved and sorry I am and how ashamed of poor granddaddy, who is getting so old that he is too much under the influence of his lawyers. They have persuaded him to do this grasping thing, I know; but although I have begged and begged him not to do it, he will not listen to me. Oh, do say you will not blame me!" Mrs. Grant had risen in her latest manner to receive the unwelcome guest, but Amber's gushing outburst completely disarmed her hostility.

She took the outstretched hand and lightly kissed the inviting, upturned lips.

"You are very good, my dear girl," she said, falteringly, and made room for Amber on her sofa, though she realized in a moment how shabby her worn cashmere looked by the side of the visitor's rich striped silk.

Aunt Dinah withdrew, with a low chuckle of satisfaction, and Amber sat gazing with curious eyes at the mistress of Bonnycastle and thinking how much older she had grown since yesterday, when this crushing sorrow had fallen upon her. The way, dark hair was streaked with gray, the pretty face was pale, the dark eyes dim and shadowed from constant weeping.

"Oh, Mrs. Grant, how ill you look!" pursued Amber, tenderly. "It is a burning shame that granddaddy should have distressed you so, and I will never forgive him—never! I told him so only this morning, but he could not move his hard heart. We will outwit him yet, dear Mrs. Grant, for I have a plan—if you will only permit me to help you."

"You may dear Miss Laurens," exclaimed her mistress, doubtfully, but with a little thrill of hope.

"It would break her heart, she knows, to leave the dear old home, and she ought eagerly at every little gleam of hope."

"Please call the Amber—Miss Laurens sounds so distant. And Cecil always calls me Amber. We are great friends, you know," cried the girl, eagerly.

"Indeed?" returned the lady, with slight surprise. She thought, but did not say that it was Violet early in whom Cecil was so much interested.

"Oh, Mrs. Grant, you have not heard the news about Violet, I suppose? She eloped last night with a gentleman who has been visiting at Golden Willows—a Mr. Castello, of Chicago. Oh, how surprised you look! You thought she was Cecil's sweetheart, did you not? So did we all, but our Violet was always a sad flirt, and always preferred her latest lover. Mr. Castello was very rich, too, and that carried the day with Violet. So off they went to Washington last night and were married. Did not Cecil tell you?"

"No, he did not mention it. I suppose he thought it unimportant compared with our trouble!" Mrs. Grant answered proudly, treating the whole matter lightly, though her heart ached in secret for her poor boy, thus made the victim of a heartless jill.

Amber did not wish to wound her sensitive pride too deeply, so she made no further reference to the elopement and began, wheedlingly:

"Dear Mrs. Grant, my heart is almost broken over this affair. I cannot bear to have you and Cecil give up your old home and go away among strangers. It would be very cruel for you both."

"I will break my heart to go!" cried Mrs. Grant, choking back a sob that rose at Amber's sweet sympathy.

"It must not be. You shall remain at Bonnycastle!" cried the young girl, with a resolute air.

"Ah, my dear young girl, we are compelled to go! Cecil cannot raise the money to pay off the mortgage, and Judge Camden has sworn that unless he does so, we must give up the place in a week. Do not distress yourself, my sweet young friend, over our fate, for it is fixed, and I must cultivate resignation," sighed the unhappy lady.

"Perhaps if you would appeal in person to my grandfather," began Amber, but Mrs. Grant shook her head decisively.

"Never!" she replied, with flashing eyes, and lips curled in disdainful pride.

"How she despises the old gentleman!" Amber thought with secret amusement, then said, aloud, gently: "Perhaps you are right not to humiliate yourself to that old man. And, indeed, there is no need, for you can defy his power. I can help you to do it."

Mrs. Grant looked in unfeigned wonder at the beautiful creature whose face was so bright and spirited in the leaping flames of the firelight.

"My dear Amber, I do not understand you," she answered, with a helpless little sigh.

"I know you do not, dear Mrs. Grant, but I will soon make it clear to you. I did not intrude on you this morning to offer useless sympathy, but to give you real help. I have a little fortune of my own, quite independent of my grandfather, and I will lend you the money to pay off the mortgage on Bonnycastle and keep your home."

The startling words were spoken, and Mrs. Grant could not answer, from sheer surprise.

She had not known that either of the pieces of Judge Camden possessed a dollar in their own right, and she instantly decided that some of her father's relatives had left Amber a legacy. But her kindly sympathy, her generous offer of so large a sum struck her dumb.

Amber saw the effect of her words and smiled. Without waiting for a reply, she continued, eagerly: "Do not refuse my offer, Mrs. Grant, for it will make me very happy to enable you to pay off the mortgage and remain at Bonnycastle. And granddaddy need never know the truth. My money is under my own control, and I can convey it to you without his knowledge. Oh, how proud and glad I should be to do this small favor for you and your dear son!"

"This is very noble, very unexpected, and very—tempting—to me, dear Amber; but—but—I am sure it could not be right to accept. Cecil is very proud," Mrs. Grant sobbed, almost breaking down in her gratitude to the fair young girl, her eagerness to accept the offer, and her consciousness that Cecil was far too proud to accept this favor from Judge Camden's granddaughter.

Amber did not tell her that she had already spoken to Cecil on the subject. She answered, hopefully: "I cannot believe that Cecil would be so cruel as to let you leave Bonnycastle, if by any fair means he can retain it for you. I know he loves you very dearly, and would be willing to sacrifice his pride a little for your dear sake. May I stay with you, dear friend, till he comes, and we will plead with him together?"

"Yes, yes, dear Mrs. Grant, I will do so," replied the girl, with a smile.

"CHAPTER XXXI.
The two girls, Violet and Lena, spent the remaining hours of the night in the garret of the lonely old woodland cabin.

As there was no bed they could not sleep, but indeed the were so excited that they did not care to do so. They preferred to remain awake and discuss their plans for the future.

Although Violet was wild to communicate at once with Cecil Grant, she permitted Lena to persuade her that it would be unwise to attempt it yet.

Harold Castello will be watching him very closely, and detection might follow on the slightest correspondence. "It is best to wait a while," she said.

For the same reason Violet's first intention of seeking her father's relatives was abandoned, since it was natural that suspicion should be directed toward them.

"Your best plan is to come home with me to my poor widowed mother, and remain awhile in hiding," advised Lena Lavare.

"But I have no money, dear Lena!" "That makes no difference, my friend, for we have a cozy little home of our own. Ah, would that I had never left it at the temptings of that black-hearted scoundrel who won my heart and betrayed my trust!" sighed Lena, with unavailing remorse.

"Tell me how it happened, please," cried Violet, with childish curiosity over a love affair.

The poor girl dashed the bitter tears from her brown eyes and answered: "It is a very simple story, dear Violet, though it ended so tragically."

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

To begin at the beginning, I made his acquaintance in a way that I am ashamed of now—by a street flirtation! Pretty young girls are often vain and thoughtless; I am afraid I was both, for I delighted in the admiring glances I met from gay young men upon the street. I forgot to tell you that my home is in Washington. My poor father was a druggist, and we had a neat little home of our own. I was the only child. Father and mother had married late in life, and they fairly doted on me, and gave me all the advantages they could afford. Ah, how good they were to me, and how poorly I repaid their love! I sighed for an unhappy and repentant girl.

But you have not yet told me, tenderly, and, choking back a sob, the girl continued:

"I was called very pretty, and I kept company with some very gay young girls in my own class of life. We delighted in dressing in our best and promenading on Pennsylvania avenue, where we were guilty of flirting in a way that makes me bitterly ashamed now, for I realize too late that no pure young girl who respects herself should stoop to court attention and admiration from strangers. But I was giddy and thoughtless, my companions the same, and thus I made the acquaintance of the man who wrecked my life. He was handsome, as you know, and a few chance meetings, and stolen glances completed the conquest of my silly heart. I permitted him to call on me at my home, and he told me that he lived in Chicago, and if I made a visit to the great World's Fair he would be pleased to escort me through its wonders. He would return home in a week and ardently wished I were going then, so that he might have the pleasure of my company.

"To hasten over this unpleasant story, I begged my parents to take me to the great fair, but they refused to do so, and desired me to put the notion out of my head. They also disapproved of my fine new lover, and made me drop his acquaintance.

"Smarting with resentment, I told Harold everything. A few secret meetings followed, then he persuaded me to elope with him. I agreed, and we were married, as I thought, by a Methodist minister and left for Chicago.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., SEPT. 30, 1895.

Editorial Notes.

The death of James E. Wells, M. A., LL. D., of Toronto, is announced. Dr. Wells was a graduate of Acadia College in the class of which Dr. T. H. Ross and Professor Jones were members.

A horrible railway accident occurred at Stellarton on Wednesday morning, by which six persons met their death. A special excursion train of seven coaches with passengers for the provincial fair, and a coal special carrying about sixty work, collided at Adams Cut in a sharp curve about a mile from the town.

There has been a considerable amount of indignation expressed, and justly, in consequence of the location of the polling booth in polling district No. 15. The district embraces all of Ward 8 outside the town of Wolfville, and extends as far west as the Deep Hollow road.

The provincial exhibition at Halifax has been the all absorbing topic during the past week. The weather has been about as bad as possible, but notwithstanding there has been a good attendance. A large number of Kings County people have attended, and exhibitors from this county have succeeded in winning a full share of the prizes.

In a few weeks now the election of municipal councillors will take place in the various wards of the county. These officers now hold office for a term of three years, and it is important that good men, in every sense, should be selected. The best men that we have should fit these important posts as if it were a matter of life and death.

The corn mill is now in operation. The corn mill is now in running order and busily at work turning out meal at the rate of from eighty to ninety barrels per day. The people of Wolfville have with interest watched the proceedings that have been going on for nearly a year now, and are glad to learn that the mill has become an established fact, and is likely to prove a success.

The widow of Richard Wagner some time ago authorized her husband's life-long friend, Houston Stewart Chamberlain, to write, with her assistance, two articles on "The Personal Side of Richard Wagner." Mr. Chamberlain undertook the work, and The Ladies Home Journal secured the material. The articles are singularly valuable in that they give a complete picture of the man in his home and daily life, and contain much new matter, while many of the illustrations and portraits have never been printed.

Empire Day.

The suggestion of Ontario's Hon. Minister of Education, in the Teacher's Educational Association, Halifax, concerning Empire Day, is certainly a good one. If there be a favorable agitation through the press and educational circles there is no doubt the suggestion will ere long be an accomplished fact.

Registration of Births, Marriages and Deaths. For a period of eleven years prior to confederation a statistical department for the registration of births, marriages and deaths existed in Nova Scotia.

not a very costly affair. It would have been better to have extended the system rather than cut it off. Such a department is useful, and would furnish valuable and needed information. It would be well indeed if each of our provinces enjoyed a system of registration similar to that which existed in Nova Scotia twenty-five years ago.

Literary Notes. The publishers of The Youth's Companion promise a number of attractive features for the four weeks of October. That of October 5th will contain an article on the Boston Seaway.

The decoration of Horticultural Hall is winning much admiration. Sept. 15th of this year secured the whole building for fruit and flowers, and he has certainly made a great improvement on last year's display.

Personal Mention. Contributions to this department will be gladly received. Mr. J. W. Caldwell returned from Toronto on Friday last.

Notes. I wish to inform my friends and the public that I will, if they desire it, call at their houses, test their eyes and fit spectacles or get them made to order if needed, correcting all errors of refraction, such as myopia, hypermetropia, astigmatism, presbyopia, &c.

Ladies' fall and winter jackets and Capes, American Tailor made—permanently the latest styles in all colors. See adv. of the GLASGOW HOUSE.

Local and Provincial.

The fall time table of the D. A. R. goes into effect on Monday next. We have not received particulars of changes.

Wolfville was visited yesterday by two minstrels, a man and boy, who with violin and harp dispensed sweet music on our streets.

J. D. CHAMBERS will open next week a full line of Autumn Millinery.

Dr. Keirstead occupied the pulpit of the Baptist church last Sunday, morning and evening. At the evening service he made a strong plea for Prohibition.

The service in the Baptist church next Sunday evening will be conducted by the Young People's Union. The subject will be "Mission Work in Wolfville."

Celebrated Jersey Hard Coal at COLDWELL & BONDERS.

The teaming held by the ladies of Gaspareau yesterday was a pleasant and successful affair. The day was favorable and the good things which were provided found a ready sale.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church, Hantsport, will hold a teaming and fancy sale in Mumford's building, opposite D. A. R. Station, on Thursday, Oct. 6th.

New Velvets and Velvetines opened this week at J. D. CHAMBERS.

The axe factory of Messrs. Blenkhorn & Sons at Canby was destroyed by fire on Friday morning last, a serious loss both to the enterprising proprietors and to the community.

A lot of Dress lengths and ends of Dress Goods at Bargain Prices. GLASGOW HOUSE.

S. B. Chute, of Berwick, has one thousand two hundred bushels of plums from one thousand trees. He also raised ten thousand quarts of strawberries, worth seven hundred dollars, and three hundred dollars worth of blackberries.

A few handsome Hats imported direct from Paris, are shown at J. D. CHAMBERS' Millinery Opening to-day and to-morrow. A fine selection of Suits and Walkers in the latest styles.

Miss Louise Wheatley Cowan, who at one of the late Mr. Scloway's special parties had every musical advantage possible, has come to reside permanently in Chicago. She sang last Sunday at the Second Presbyterian church, Mrs. Clark-Wilson still continuing her vacation. Miss Cowan has a clear soprano of marked sweetness, and a delightful personality which should make her a decided Chicago success.—Chicago paper.

WANTED.—Twenty tons of Salt Hay and Straw. Apply to W. C. ARCHIBALD, Wolfville.

DEAR ACADIAN.—Through the kindness of Mr. W. S. Wallace, I have placed in the window of his tailor shop a paper that was sent me a few years ago containing a photograph of the Royal British navy. Canada is one of England's best colonies, and in these times of war and rumors of war, that such a display of naval strength stands ready to protect us if occasion demands should fill every true Canadian with a feeling of patriotic pride and safety and of loyalty to the Mother Land. This was the fleet on Feb. 1st, 1896, but has been largely added to since then. It will be on show for a short time. Thanking you for space, Yours etc. C. S. FRENCH.

Wolfville, Sept. 28, 1898.

Everybody invited to our exhibition of Autumn Millinery to-day and to-morrow. If you have not received a special card, come just the same. Impossible to think of errands. Our styles are right and prices lower than ever. J. D. CHAMBERS.

On Deck Again!

Until further notice I shall carry on my business in the store opposite Hotel American lately vacated by Miss Baird. I shall have an almost entirely new stock and respectfully solicit a continuance of your patronage.

Yours truly,
A. W. STEWART.

The Plebiscite Returns.

The weather was favorable yesterday for the Prohibition plebiscite and a good vote was polled in town. Owing to our going to press last evening we are unable to give more than a very limited return for the evening. Up to our going to press the following returns were to hand: Wolfville—154 for, 10 against; 8 ballots spoiled; Grand Pre—114 for, 3 against; Gaspareau—103 for, 1 against; Port Williams—79 for, 2 against; Oakton—49 for, 2 against; Kentville, 161 for, 10 against; Canning—374 for, 3 against; Ward 9—116 for, 2 against. The returns though very incomplete show that Kings county has spoken loudly in favor of Prohibition.

A Safe for sale at a bargain. One of the latest patterns.

STARR, SON & FRANKLIN,
Church Street Items.

We learn that the bans of marriage have been published in the parish church of St. John, Cornwallis, between Cecil Henry Hooper, Esq., F. S. I., M. R. A. C., of Swanley, Kent, England, and Miss H. T. M. Axford, daughter of Rev. F. J. H. Axford, Rector of the parish. The ceremony is to take place in the parish church, on Oct. 4th, at two o'clock in the afternoon. No special invitations are being issued. After a short tour through part of the province the married couple purpose returning to the rectory, Cornwallis, at which a reception will be held for all friends who may wish to bid them farewell before their departure for England.

Boys' Suits, Reefers, Overcoats and Underwear, at J. D. CHAMBERS.

Mr. C. R. Higgins, who has been visiting his parents in Wolfville for a few weeks, returned to his present home in Oregon last week. Before his departure he was presented by Mr. R. W. Storms with a handsome gold watch chain in recognition of his rescue from drowning while bathing some years ago by Mr. Higgins.

To Let.—Three comfortable front rooms on Main street. Apply to J. W. VAUGHN.

Miss Louise Wheatley Cowan's musical takes place in College Hall on Friday evening of next week and promises to be one of the best events of the season. She will be assisted by Mrs. Woodworth, of Kentville, and the Wolfville Orchestra. Remember the date and don't make any other engagements.

Mr. A. W. Stewart has removed to the store recently vacated by Miss Baird, opposite the Hotel American, and is now prepared for business again. The new stand is an attractive one and he is making a good show.

Our Flannels are acknowledged to be the best value ever shown here. J. D. CHAMBERS.

BORN.

MENNER.—At Kentville, Sept. 23rd, to the wife of John Menner, D. A. Railway, a daughter.

Died.

MARTIN.—At Gaspareau, on the 23rd inst. Mrs. Martha A. widow of the late Jehiel Martin, aged 72 years. Our sister has been a consistent member of the church in this place all her days.

LANEY.—At Highbury, Sept. 24th, Eva Odessa Lane, aged 12 years and 7 days.
