A. WOMAN'S GOOD LOOKS

Depend on her general health and freedom from pain. Many a woman looks old before her time because of those irregularities which are essentially feminine. Starting from early womanhood, she suffers from frequently recurring derangements that upset her womanly health. If she be beautiful she grows into that soft glow of age without wrinkles and crow-foot about the eyes or the blue circles underneath. It is invariably the rule that such women suffer little, or not at all, from womanly derangements which sap the health and leave in the face the tell-tale story of pain and suffering. Dr. R. V. Pierce, the famous specialist in the diseases of women, found a prescription in his early practice that soothed the organism peculiar to womanhood—called the machinery, as it were, of the human system—and helped the woman to pass those painful periods that occur-lined and aged her face. This remedy became the well-known Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, that has benefited thousands of women and saved them from misery and suffering at different periods in life.

Mrs. HARRIET E. PIERCE, of 244 Bright Street, Saratoga, Ont., writes: "I am now a well woman after suffering for three years and doctoring with several different doctors, each one saying it was something different, and the last one, after putting me through a thorough examination, said I was suffering from a growth, which, in time, would result in cancer, and said I would not live more than two years if not operated upon right away. I became hopelessly discouraged but would not consent to the operation as I was too weak and too much afraid, but at last, through the advice of a friend, I tried Dr. Pierce's medicine, and after using two bottles of the Favorite Prescription I immediately felt a change. I also used two boxes of Healing Supportives and eight boxes of Lotion Tablets, and can safely praise the name of Dr. Pierce's medicines to all who suffer from any female disease, for these medicines have been claimed to be, and I hope will help others as they have helped me."

The Snake Scotched Justice Done.

CHAPTER V. (Continued.) "My dear Veronica, how—if I may say so—you have grown!" He still held her hand in his cold, thin one, and as she withdrew it, she said, with a laugh. "I have finished growing a long time ago, Mr. Denby." "At any rate, you have grown more beautiful," he said. "I can accept no contradiction of that fact."

She did not blush as she would have done some months before, but swept him a low courtesy, so full of grace and spirit that Talbot Denby's eyes flashed with an admiration which, however, did not stir his heart. "Thank you very much! If the compliment were as true as it is candid—"

"I never pay compliments," he said, with a slight frown; for he was not prepared for a retort from this girl who, after all, he told himself, was but a kind of upper servant. "I spoke the literal truth—as I usually do—"

"How difficult you must find it, and in what difficulties must so inconvenient a habit land you!" she retorted, with a smile, as she bent her beautiful head to fasten a bracelet which had come undone.

"Permit me!" he said; and he expected her to stammer a negative, as she would have done six months ago but she held out her white arm cool, and with perfect self-possession.

As he was fastening the bracelet a footman opened the door and the earl entered, leaning upon the arm of Welford his valet. His lordship paused a moment in the doorway and looked at the couple with a cynical, calculating smile.

"Ah, Talbot," he said, nodding, and holding out his hand with the gold-headed stick in it. Mr. Talbot Denby managed to shake one finger of it. "So you have come down. Does the House close to-night or is your absence spared by the whips?"

"Oh, I am not so indispensable sir," said Talbot. "The earl's perfect set of white teeth were revealed in a rather ghastly smile."

"By gad, I should think they were glad to get rid of you!" he said, in a broken-down system.

This is a condition for disease to which doctors give many names, but which few of them really understand. Its empty weakness—a break-down of the vital forces that sustain the system. No matter what may be its causes (for they are almost numberless), its symptoms are much the same: the more prominent being, a sense of lassitude or weariness, depression of spirits and want of energy for all the ordinary duties of life. Now, what is done absolutely essential in all such cases is increased vitality—vitality.

VITAL STRENGTH & ENERGY to throw off these morbid feelings, and experience proves that as night succeeds the day this may be more certainly secured by a course of the celebrated life-reviving tonic.

THERAPION No. 3 than by any other known combination. So sure as it is taken in accordance with the printed directions accompanying it, will the shattered health be restored.

THE EXPIRING LAMP OF LIFE LIGHTED UP AFRESH. and a new existence imparted in place of what had so lately seemed worn-out, "used up," and valueless. This wonderful, medicinal, purely vegetable and innocuous, is agreeable to the stomach for all constitutions and conditions, in either sex, and it is difficult to imagine a case of disease or derangement, whose main features are those of debility, that will not be speedily and permanently benefited by this never-failing recuperative essence, which is destined to cast into oblivion everything that had preceded it. It is a wide-spread and numerous class of human ailments.

THERAPION is sold by Chemists throughout the world. Price in England 2/6 and 4/6. Purchasers should see that the word "THERAPION" appears on British Government stamps in white letters on a red ground, affixed to every package by order of His Majesty's Home Office. Beware of cheap imitations which do not bear the name of Dr. Cassell's Homeopathic Remedies. Therapion may now also be obtained in Drages (Tasteful) form.

his thin, metallic voice. "Judging by that speech of yours the other night, I should imagine your party would be better pleased with your absence than your company." Denby smiled mirthlessly. "One must speak the truth sometimes, sir," he responded. "Must one? I daresay; though I thought politicians were never guilty of such banality. But no doubt you are right, and things are changed since I sat in the Bubble Shop."

"Dinner is served, miss," announced the butler, solemnly. "Give Veronica your arm," said the earl. "I will crawl in at my own pace." They went in and the meal proceeded; a stately and apparently interminable one of innumerable courses, of which the earl chose one—a dish of cutlets and plainly boiled potatoes. Mr. Talbot Denby, though he accepted plat after plat, only made a pretence of eating them, and Veronica was the only one of the three who did fair justice to the famous chef's efforts.

She sat silent for the greater part of the hour and a quarter, listening to the earl and Talbot at times, but— "Clas! and alas! for her pride!—most wondering whether he was displaying thinking of Ralph Farrington, and pointed and angry—no, that would be too absurd; a gamekeeper angry! because she had broken her promise. The two men talked "society" and politics. Now, you cannot talk "society" without talking scandal, and every now and then the earl glanced under his brows at the girl's beautiful face; but he need not have feared to the pure all things are pure, and besides, Veronica's mind was otherwise employed; she was thinking, as has been said, of the strange young man who apparently found it so difficult to remember the difference in station between a gamekeeper and the chatelaine of Lynne Court.

The noiseless servants at last placed the dessert on the table, the butler reverently carried in a bottle of the famous and priceless Lynne port in its wicker cradle, and Veronica with an almost audible sigh, of relief rose and went to the drawing-room. "We shall not be long," Talbot Denby said in his low, clear voice as he opened the door for her. "Perhaps we shall be fortunate enough to persuade you to play for us."

Veronica nodded and smiled as she remembered the cold and condescending way in which he had dismissed her on his last visit.

"I will both play and sing for you," she said, graciously. "Dancing would be rather out of place, wouldn't it?"

Talbot went back to his place at the table. The earl had sunk lower in his chair, and regarded him with an upward glance of cynical anticipation.

"How much is it, Talbot?" he asked in his thin, half-mocking voice.

Mr. Talbot Denby forced a smile and bit his thin lip. "You always come to the point, sir," he said.

The earl passed his white, fleshless hand over his bloodless lips. "Time is too valuable to the old to be wasted," he said. "I am, of course aware that you wouldn't have honoured us"—Talbot noted the "us"—"without an object. And the object is generally money!"

Mr. Denby crossed his legs and smiled with an affectation of ease. "To be frank as yourself, sir—my balance at the bank is rather low," he said.

The earl toyed with his wine-glass. "Yes? Let me see. I allowed you five thousand a year. Not a meagre sum, Talbot!"

"No, sir, by no means; but you have no idea how the expense of a man in my position run up—"

"Oh, yes, I have," retorted the earl, if any such speech in so cold and impassive a voice could be called a retort. "You forget that I played the game myself; and on a much smaller sum. I—wonder—what you do with your money? You do not keep an establishment. No, you are not that sort of man. I—excuse me—I sometimes wish you were. But it would interfere with your political career, I suppose. Yes, I wonder what you do with it? Pardon my curiosity! I admit that I have no right to express it. My privilege is to supply the future Earl of Lynborough with sufficient money to enable him to live up to his position. How much do you want, Talbot? That is really the only question."

Talbot Denby inwardly writhed under the cold cynicism, the almost sardonic indifference. "My expenses have been very heavy lately. I am afraid I shall have to ask for a couple of thousand, sir."

"Certainly, certainly! Why not?" said the earl, with ominous cheerfulness. "I'll give you a cheque before you go. When is that? To-morrow, I suppose."

"Yes; I have to speak to-morrow night. Just so, Veronica shall make out the cheque in the morning. Oh, by the way, speaking of Veronica, Talbot, I ought to tell you that I made my will the other day and that I have left her all my fortune, indeed, every penny I can leave her."

His eyes, narrowed to points, rested like gimlets upon his nephew's face but Talbot Denby did not move a muscle, though his face grew white as lead, especially about the nostrils.

"Really, sir?" he murmured. "Yes, really," said the earl, smiling at the effect which his keen eyes saw that he had produced. "Why not? She has proved herself faithful and devoted; she is of my kin. And you will not want the money; the rent roll has improved of recent years; there will be enough for you. I have saved money out of the income, and there is no reason why you also should not."

Talbot's lids almost covered his eyes; the organ he called his heart was thumping like an engine dragging a weight too heavy for it, the room seemed to spin round. He had always counted on the earl's, so to speak private fortune; and to be told suddenly that it was to go to the girl this kind of superior housekeeper!

Fight the Fly Before He is Born.

The war on the house fly should be waged from all sides and with every sort of device available, while the only effective and permanent way of dealing with the little pest is by cutting off all its food supplies and abolishing all its breeding places, a good deal of immediate progress in the campaign can be made by instituting a wholesale campaign among the population. Any reduction in their numbers means, of course, a corresponding reduction in their dirt-and-disease-carrying power. But it must be remembered that the sudden death method is only a temporary one. The enemy will become as numerous and as strong as ever unless more far-reaching and thorough-going methods are adopted. The realization of this fact, however, is likely to be one of the results of a 'swat-the-fly' campaign, and perhaps on the whole it is the most important result. In various places in the United States great havoc has been wrought amongst the flies in the last year or two as the result of organized campaigns encouraged by the health authorities. A Montreal citizen while visiting a certain town in Connecticut a few days ago, observed that although the windows of the hotel dining-room were wide open there were no flies in the place. He was informed that this was due to the campaign which had been carried on there, one of the chief features of which was the offering of a reward of ten cents for every hundred dead flies that anyone secured. Needless to say all the able-bodied boys and girls in the town became extremely active and earned a good deal of pocket money. And the result was a great decrease in the number of flies, and was entirely beneficial to the town as a whole.

The most deadly war that is being waged on the fly, however, is probably in Kansas, where the whole state is 'under arms'. The campaign was begun last year, and is being continued this year. In practically every city and town the people are busy trapping or 'swatting' flies. Large fly-traps are made and placed in different sections of the town, and there have been literally hundreds of bushels of flies destroyed in this manner.

In three of the largest cities of Kansas contests were held in writing essays on the house fly. A great deal of literature was also distributed broadcast over the state, and great public interest was aroused in the question. The campaign was instrumental in reducing the number of breeding places for flies. This was especially true of the city of Topeka, and there have been fewer flies there than ever before. Probably the chief reason for the reduction in the number of flies in that city was the adoption of a modern system of collecting garbage and the abolishing of a splendid new incinerator. Manure from stables is also collected and the worst breeding places for flies are thus abolished.—Montreal Witness.

SUFFERED EVERYTHING

For Years, Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Canadian women are continually writing us such letters as the two following, which are heartfelt expressions of gratitude for restored health: Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never found any medicine to compare with it. I suffered dreadfully for years until I began taking your medicine. I also recommend it for nervousness and indigestion." — Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ont.

Chesterville, Ont.—"I heard your medicines highly praised, and a year ago I began taking them for falling of womb and ovarian trouble. My left side pained me all the time and just before my periods which were irregular and painful it would be worse. To sit down caused me pain and suffering and I would be so nervous sometimes that I could not bear to see any one or hear any one speak. Little specks would float before my eyes and I was always constipated. I cannot say too much for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, for there are no medicines like them. I have taken them and I recommend them to all women. You may publish this testimonial." — Mrs. STEPHEN J. MARTIN, Chesterville, Ontario, Canada.

Are You a Snob?

BY RUTH CAMERON.

"If there is one thing on earth I hate," I heard a young person exclaim indignantly the other day. "It's a snob." The young person had just come into contact with a new rich friend who had used her wealth as a platform from which to look superciliously down upon some of her old friends. Hence the young person's venom against snobs.

Now I wonder what the snob hater would say if she knew that, in my eyes at least, she is very much of a snob. I think she would say, "The idea! Why, how could I be a snob even if I wanted to? I'm poor as a church mouse."

But she IS a snob just the same. You see there are many kinds of snobbery. The snobbery at which the young person became so indignant was that of wealth. Now I think she herself is an intellectual snob.

She has had unusual educational advantages and she certainly uses them as a platform from which to look superciliously down on those who have not been so fortunate. For instance, just the other day I heard her openly express her scorn of people who could enjoy a moving picture show in the presence of several people who do count that form of amusement among their pleasures. Again, she never sees anyone reading a popular novel without taking occasion to remark that she has no time for such reading, and referred casually to some classical work which SHE is enjoying. Tell me now, in the light of this intellectual snobbery, do you think the young person has any right to object because her wealthy friend often drags references to her wealth into the conversation?

I know another woman whom I should call a moral snob. She was born with a heritage of high principles and she has always led an exceptionally sheltered life. As a result she has a very high moral standard and is always ready to look down upon those who are less lofty minded. She will make no allowance for a heritage inferior to her own or for a pressure of temptations which she has never known. Upon anyone who does not accept her moral standard she looks down with snobbery that is just as blatant as that of the rich woman.

To look down upon someone else for not having what you are fortunate enough to possess—whether the possession is material, mental or moral—surely that is the meaning of snobbery.

And surely the man or woman who is guilty of intellectual or moral snobbery has greater reason to be ashamed because he or she has more reason to know better than the man or woman whose only advantage is that of wealth.

So let's be very, very careful before we condemn snobs that we are not condemning ourselves most heavily.

The Political Bee.

BY H. L. RANN.

The political bee is a sharp-toothed insect which crawls under a man's hat and puts up a loud buzzing just prior to a primary election.

After a man has been stung by this bee two or three times, he isn't good for anything except to hold some office with a salary which has hard work keeping up with his grocery bill.

The political bee seldom attacks anybody twice in the same place. It generally starts in the board of supervisors or works up by slow and easy stages to the governorship, when it becomes a violent and incurable disease and starts an insurgent movement in the direction of the White House.

Many a man has exchanged a good law practice and a clear conscience for the privilege of sitting on the committee for the Pacification of the Deceased Red Man and borrowing large fluent chunks of currency at his home bank.

The young man who can take the political bee firmly between the thumb and forefinger and step on its neck while clinging to some $80-a-month job, will never be turned out to grass in his old age by an ungrateful and irritated electorate.

This insect has a very debilitating effect upon patriots who are elected to the United States senate, as it renders them so deaf that they are unable to hear anything except the voice of the common people calling them to the pension office. Sometimes they can't even hear vox populi's demand for more action and less ozone.

The presidential bee is an expensive variety which never lets go until the old-age limit steps in. In its getting so that nobody entertains this bee nowadays without having sources of supply that would choke a geyser. When the political bee becomes firmly established in a man's head-gear, he will sacrifice all the comforts of home and an assured income for the chance to distribute onion sets among his constituents and associate with candidates for the post-office. When the buzzing ceases, all the average victim has left is a Prince Albert coat and the opportunity of being ginned all over again.

A Paris Chemist Has Discovered How to Grow Hair.

McMURDO HAS IT.

In Paris the ladies have entirely abandoned wearing hats, which is due entirely to this new discovery. It has been proven that Henna leaves contain the ingredients that will positively grow hair. That they contain this long-look-for article is proven every day.

The French are now placing on the market a preparation containing the extract from Henna leaves, which is having a phenomenal sale.

This preparation is called SALVIA and is being sold with a guarantee to cure dandruff and to grow hair in abundance. Being daintily perfumed, SALVIA makes a most pleasant dressing, and is sold by your druggist. A large, generous bottle can be purchased for 50 cents. McMURDO & Co., Wholesale Agent.

Sea Tramp Artist

FRANK BRANGWYN LEARNED HIS ART WHILE AFLOAT.

England's Most Celebrated Painter of Great Color Masses and Gorgeous Pageantry Found Designing Too Tame for Him and Went to Sea, Where He Filled His Notebook in Every Land.

There comes a tide in the holiday affairs of men which leads, not to fortune, but to temporary bankruptcy. Such a tide carried Frank Brangwyn out to sea, flooded him with adventures, and brought him home rejoicing, poor as could-be, but passing rich in experience and ideas and ambition. He had lived adventures of which W. W. Jacobs dreams and writes, and their humor and pathos, their laughter and their tears you see in his pictures.

It is one of the last marvels of the artistic world that this man, who spent some of the best and most impressive of his years, not in the ateliers of masters of his art, but careering about the ocean in shameful old sea-tramps, should, within the next twenty years, accomplish more than any other living artist to glorify British art throughout Europe and America. That he has done so is the bald truth.

Mr. Frank Brangwyn was born of Welsh parents in Bruges, where his father, who was an artist, added to his income by the making and sale of church tapestries. The boy's artistic spirit was born in the beautiful old Belgian city, but he was brought back to England to blossom into an artist, if artist he were to be. There was no hurry, no set purpose about his education, which was quite ordinary and commonplace, just that of any small tradesman's son, and it was left to the boy himself to fill in the blank spaces.

This he sought to do by helping his father in his business to design tapestries, and by going voluntarily to the South Kensington Museum to study and copy the old masters there.

It was an ideal experience and Ladies of Culture and Refinement Use Salvia Hair Tonic. It Makes the Hair Beautiful.

At last a remedy has been discovered that will positively destroy this pest.

That Dandruff is caused by germs is accepted by every sensible person. Dandruff is the root of all hair evils.

SALVIA will kill the Dandruff germs and remove Dandruff in ten days, or money back.

McMurdo & Co. guarantees it. It will grow hair, stop itching scalp, falling hair, and make the hair thick and abundant. It prevents hair from turning gray, and adds life and lustre.

SALVIA is a hair dressing that has become the favorite with women of taste and culture, who know the social value of beautiful hair. A large, generous bottle costs only 50c., at leading druggists everywhere, and in St. John's by McMURDO & Co. The word "SALVIA" (Latin for sage) is on every bottle, and sold at all first-class Drug Stores.

Rough on the Scotsman.

"Twas in the good old days, when the "cat" was used freely. Scene—Quarter deck of H. M. S. Hardship. Pat Murphy and Jock McLean had been ordered to receive ten strokes each of the "cat." When the time came for their punishment, the captain considering their previous good character, said that if they wished to wear anything to protect their backs a little they could do so. The Scotsman replied that he would like to have a strip of canvas on his back. The request was granted, and then Pat, on being asked what he would like, exclaimed, "Shure sir, if it is all the same to you, I would like to have the Scotsman on my back."

Responsibility of Prime Minister.

While the Governor should not escape censure for the decision he gave on the Coaker Memorials, the major portion of the blame must be cast upon his chief adviser, the Prime Minister.

A perusal of the correspondence is sufficient to convince a reader that the Prime Minister obtained full cognizance of the facts which were set out in them. He was therefore in a position to consider the question whether he was justified in retaining Mr. Morison as a member of the Ministry of which he was chief and for which he is responsible. The event has shown that the Prime Minister did not call for the resignation of Mr. Morison, and he must be held responsible for that gentleman's presence in the Ministry to-day. The event has shown this, but the published correspondence shows much more than this. It proves that the Prime Minister became an active defender of his colleague, and that he did not limit himself to the questions about which the Governor sought his advice, but that he volunteered his opinion unasked on the Orange Bay letter and endorsed strongly Mr. Morison's plea of forgetfulness of the law.

Here is what the Prime Minister wrote to the Governor in that connection:—
"As regards the implication in the letter of April 6, 1909, which Mr. Morison especially answers in a separate communication dated the 20th April, and which is enclosed, although Your Excellency has not called upon me to give any opinion, I desire merely to say, in addition to what Mr. Morison has stated, that it would be perfectly ridiculous to form such a deduction or conclusion as is attempted in this case by Mr. Coaker, because, had the Attorney General remembered what the law was, he would not be likely to advise his clients to break the law and render themselves liable to such a severe penalty as that provided for in section 28, namely, a fine of $20 for every tree cut."

Mr. Morison had summed up his defence on this matter as follows:—

"In other words my remembrance of the law was that the holder of a license might cut logs on adjacent Crown Lands, but was debarred from purchasing them. In this I was in error and

Glassware!

Fruit and Cake Stands.

JOHN B. AYRE.

If I had turned up the law as it is contained in Section 28 of the Crown Lands Act, 1903, I would have seen my mistake at once."

Here we have the Minister practically pleading I thought there was a penalty against purchasing Crown lands but no penalty against appropriating them. Yet he who made this plea was a member of the Ministry whose bounden duty it was to protect and conserve the Crown domain. The Governor has put on record that the original advice staggered him and we are not surprised. But we are surprised that Mr. Morison's plea did not stagger him much more.

We wonder how it came to pass that the Prime Minister could defend and retain as a colleague a Minister who advanced this plea. For it, in any way exculpates him or extenuates the vice of the original advice. It affords no answer to the charge that he wrote the words contained in the Orange Bay letter, and in no way lessens the gravity of the offence. Even if his memory of the penalty had been correct, his explanation is tantamount to an admission that he advised that a licensee could appropriate property not his own but belonging to the Crown, and he gave this advice whilst he was Minister of Justice and a member of the Government which had the trusteeship of this property.

How such an explanation could have secured the endorsement of the Prime Minister; how such a plea could have satisfied the Governor passes understanding. But it is a matter of record that the Prime Minister did endorse it. It is a matter of record that it did satisfy the Governor. It is a matter of notoriety that it did not secure the dismissal of Mr. Morison, and for its failure to do so, the Prime Minister is responsible and will have to answer at the bar of public opinion next election, and the Governor himself should not escape censure for his remarkable gullibility.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES DIPHTHERIA.

Let Us All
Be There.

There's a ring about the Mount Cashel Garden Party, says Mrs. Tucker, that arouses an interest in us all as soon as the day arrives for the annual fete. Just like the Regatta, it has some kind of a hidden attraction that forces you to put on your best legs and wend your way almost without preparation, for Mount Cashel holds a warm spot in our hearts since the days of Brother Slattery; his work will never die and his memory will ever remain green as long as Mount Cashel continues to perform the noble work of protecting and educating the orphan.

Other institutions devoted to charitable work call upon us for an annual subscription, and justly so, but Mt. Cashel has not fallen in line in this respect, depending to a larger extent upon the proceeds of its annual Garden Party. And while we may be justified in considering that we are doing a work of charity by helping along this event, still who is there that may attend this annual treat and doesn't feel that they haven't been well repaid.

As I write this little reminder a fog hangs over the city, but I trust that the morn will be bright and charming and that the afternoon will see thousands crowding to Mount Cashel as in days gone by, and by their presence and the parting from their coin stimulate Brother Ennis and his noble, self-sacrificing aides to continue in their good work of caring for our orphan boys. When we have such an institution as Mount Cashel in our midst we are apt to think of it too lightly, but fancy for a moment what an institution closed its doors and the orphans who now enjoy its comforts and reap the benefits of its education were thrown on the public highway. The very sound of such a remark grates on our ears, but we can only bring the value of such an institution vividly before us by allowing ourselves to look on the dark side of the picture now and again.

Then let us put off any other engagement that we have made, there are other days, but Mount Cashel has only one day in the whole 365, then let us all be there.

Muscles Useless
Without Nerve Force

Perhaps you are not quite clear on the relation of the nerves to the rest of the body. Through the nerve fibres which extend through countless branches to every nook and corner of the human system is conveyed the motive power which operates the various organs. There could be no breathing, no beating of the heart, no flow of the digestive fluids, no action of any muscle or organ of the body without nerve force. Consequently, when the nervous system becomes exhausted there is complete collapse of the body, the different stages of which are described as nervous prostration, locomotor ataxia and paralysis. The time to use such restorative treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is when the headaches, sleeplessness, indigestion and other warning symptoms first appear. A few weeks' persistent treatment is then sufficient to revitalize the wasted nerve cells and restore health and vigor. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Gorging Is Suicide

In these words a prominent graduate of Harvard Medical School, E. B. Moras, M.D., calls attention to the habit of "overeating," which is resulting in the shortening of so many useful lives.

Every day you read of deaths of persons in middle life, caused by acute indigestion, peritonitis, appendicitis or Bright's disease. All of which result from overcrowding the digestive organs.

The liver gets sluggish, the bowels become constipated, and the whole system is poisoned by the fermenting waste matter.

You can overcome this poisoned condition by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Then turn over a new leaf and eat less, particularly of meats, pastry and highly-seasoned foods. One kidney-liver pill occasionally at bedtime will keep the liver and bowels active, and insure the healthful working of the organs of digestion. ## A Perilous Business.

Egg-hunting is the peculiar and profitable vocation pursued by the cliff climbers of the Yorkshire coast during the months of May and June—a fascinating, but, at the same time, a most perilous pursuit.

The precipitous cliffs in the vicinity of the dreaded Flamborough Head, on the East Coast, are the homes of tens of thousands of screaming sea-fowl. Fearless, swift of wing, hard as are the breezes of the North Sea, they live and breed, laying their eggs with only the bare rock for a nest in most cases.

Hereabouts the cliffs tower skyward to a height of 400 feet, and the ragged crests jut far out as they run upwards. This vast, natural sea-fowl farm is annually raided by the hardy East Coast fowler, who reaps a good harvest from the egg-laden cliffs. In the south of England the eggs of the sea-fowl are unknown delicacies, but in the northern counties they are accounted a great luxury, and find a ready market. Bird and eggs are more than plentiful on these Yorkshire cliffs; they abound in hundreds of thousands. The eggs of the guillemot and razorbill are most in demand, though those of the puffin and Kittiwake also fetch a good price. For a bird that seldom scales more than two pounds total weight, the egg of the guillemot is a remarkably heavy one, viz., four ounces. Occasionally, a double-yoked one of six ounces is discovered, but such a specimen never finds its way to market. It goes to join the celebrated Fley collection, which belongs to the veteran collector and naturalist, Mr. Joshua Fountain.

The men engaged in the fowling have their traditions and their own methods, which seem, for the most part, to have been handed down from father to son. Their work is very similar to that of Alpine guides, and they have many of the same risks to face; in fact, it is not too much to say that the venturesome cliff climbers literally take their lives in their hands when pursuing their dangerous vocation. The villages of Brompton, Buckton, and Flamborough, in Yorkshire, how long been the seat of this ancient industry, and owe not a little prosperity to its pursuit and to the money spent by the numerous visitors who go either for the day or stay in the villages for longer periods, attracted by the fascination of this hazardous pursuit.

Throughout the months of May and June this dizzy trade of egg-hunting is pursued by these tough Yorkshire "Tykes." Any day during these months they may be seen dangling in a breeches buoy at the end of a line over the face of chalk cliffs, which rise sheer 400 feet from the boiling surf below.

Hanging over this fearful abyss the men are entirely dependent upon the fidelity of their fellows above—there are four in a gang, three above and the man on the line—and on the strength of the rope. A thorough examination of the rope is, of course, made before each descent is begun but the cliffs abound with flint, in parts as sharp as the edge of a razor and strands at any moment may be severed. Happily, these plucky fellows possess nerves of steel—or rather, no nerves at all—and are as agile as monkeys, as sure-footed as the chamois, and show marvellous dexterity and resource as they swing themselves from one narrow ledge to another in the cliff face.

The climber wear round his waist a stout leather strap, to which is attached two pieces of webbing passing round the thighs from back to front. To this is fastened two iron eyelets through which the rope is knotted. An iron crowbar is driven into the top of the cliff, and a second rope fastened to it, the end of which hangs down the cliff, as a guide rope.

Gas is Coal With the Trouble Taken Out.

Gas is really nothing more than coal only with gas you have the coal less the dirt, ashes and smoke. These have been taken out by the Gas Company. The weight, too, has been taken out, for when you use gas you don't have to carry it up from the cellar in buckets, straining your back in the attempt. All of the drudgery has been removed. The gas company has taken everything out of the coal but the heat—and that's the one thing you want. This they deliver to you right to the burner of your range. You only have to turn a tap and strike a match in order to have it.

If your mind is half made up to buy a GAS RANGE, remove the remaining doubt by thinking of last summer and the many days when your kitchen was like a burning furnace. The gas range never overheats the kitchen. Phone the gas company, or call at their showrooms and get full particulars.—June 29, 30, 31, 12.

In passing over the cliff edge, the climber walks backwards down the steep slope which, in most cases, precedes the perpendicular portion of the cliff, and, at the extreme angle drives a small steel pulley with a spike attached into the earth or a crack in the rock. Over this he lays the rope which is attached to his body and, boldly leaning his full weight upon it, places his feet upon the rock, and practically walks backward down the face of the cliff. Whilst descending, the climber is held by one man only, who sits on the cliff top with his feet firmly planted in two holes dug for the purpose. This man wears round his waist a broad belt of strong, padded leather, round which is passed a rope, so that the weight falls upon his loins.

The egg-hunter keeps himself away from the face of the cliff with his feet, and signals by the hand line when he wishes to be drawn up or lowered. Every moment his life hangs literally by a thread, and the mere view of him swinging at such a dizzy height is too much for most folk to witness unmoved.

So accustomed is the climber to handling the eggs, that it is seldom one is broken. When gathered from the ledges the eggs are safely placed into a crossed haversack worn over the shoulders, packed into boxes when brought to the top, and then dispatched to London and other parts of the country as a delicacy, which, once tasted, is ever more desired.

The birds have so increased that five full crews, climbing regularly during May and June, make good wages, and in spite of this the birds are continually on the increase, the Special to Evening Telegram.

LONDON, July 30.
The judgment of the British Board of Trade Court of Inquiry into the Titanic disaster, was pronounced to-day. The Court finds that the collision of the Titanic with the iceberg was due to the excessive speed at which the ship was navigated; that a proper watch was not kept; that the ship's boats were "properly lowered," but the arrangements for manning them were insufficient; that the Leyland liner, Californian, might have reached the Titanic if she had attempted to do so; that the track followed was reasonably safe with proper vigilance, and that there was no discrimination against third class passengers in the saving of life. The Court also exonerates Bruce Ismay and Sir Cosmo Duff Gordon from any charges of improper conduct. The judgment recommends more watertight compartments in sea-going ships, provision of life-boats for all on board and more efficient drill of crew as well as the keeping of better lookout. The judgment does not consider binoculars as necessary as a rule; searchlights, however, might be excessive. The speed of twenty-two knots is regarded by the Court as excessive.

On Second Thought.

BY JAY E. HOUSE.

The man who can cook and make himself handy around the house might as well do it. He seldom is worth much down town. As a general proposition, no bald-headed man should wear a Windsor tie. But it may be said for the bald-headed men that very few of them want to.

As soon as a man begins to make money and achieve prominence, somebody starts the story that his mother died in the almshouse. Suggestion to wives: Unless you are prepared to compliment your husband it is far better to let him alone. A man has very little interest in anything which does not concern him personally.

The rule in politics is that the side that owns the steam roller uses it. If you are able to appear indifferent the man who wants to sell you his dog finally will give him to you.

If your ambition to gather it easily leads you into Wall street, do not complain if, in the process of being trimmed, you suffer some pain. And this goes for all the other get-rich-quick schemes.

Eph Wiley says out of the mysteries of life is involved in the case of the trained nurse who, after taking care of a man through a long illness, deliberately marries him.

A good many of us who are nimble enough as to tongue stutter in the head.

Gave Much Trouble.

Last evening a drunk who often appears in court, entered the premises of Mr. C. Lester, on Hamilton St. and created a disturbance. Const. Byssey was called, and in arresting the man had a fierce struggle with him. The prisoner was eventually overpowered, handcuffed and driven to the station.

STORE LOOTED.—Mr. Stephen Gease's store at Tilton was forced open last week and $26 stolen therefrom. The thief was later arrested.

Hairbrushes are best washed in cold water with plenty of ammonia in it.

BH ENGLISH PAINT

SAID THE MAN WHO BUILDS.—"Yes sir, I am going to use Brandram-Henderson, Limited, English Paint. You don't get so much good money for a new house and then paint with cheap paint. That would be absolutely wasteful, wouldn't it? I am building and painting for permanence—and B-H English Paint is the only paint I shall use. None but the best for mine. It wouldn't be fair to the house."

BOWRING BROS. LIMITED, ST. JOHN'S

C.L.B. Inspection

In the presence of hundreds of on-lookers, including friends and supporters of the Brigade, Avalon Battalion (C. L. B.) was inspected last evening by Colonel Gee, who is Secretary at the Brigade's Headquarters in England and who is here on a brief sojourn while en route to Canada on important brigade business.

The Battalion was under command of Lieut.-Col. Rendell, and there was a glibly number of ex-members present. The lads were put through the physical exercises by Major Warren; under Major Franklin, the manual exercises, and performed the general marching in command of Capt. Goodridge.

At the conclusion Colonel Gee came forward and expressed his surprise at the efficiency of the Brigade. He said the ease and precision with which the lads executed the different manoeuvres would do credit to the Home Brigade, and the Colonel congratulated the officers and boys alike on their prowess.

The Battalion's brass band was present during the evening and discoursed appropriate selections. At 11 o'clock the company dispersed.

Street Talk.

As I go waddling down the street, some forty-seven men I meet, and pass the time o' day, and sometimes when the day is gone I sit around and muse upon the tiresome things they say.

Their talk is all of candidates and caucuses and delegates and kindred stupid things; of tariffs, trusts and iron heels and Juggernauts with bloody wheels, of factions, cliques and rings. I get so tired of all this rot, when files are bad and days are hot, that I could run amuck; I wish, I wish two guys in ten would talk like sane, well-balanced men—talk like "there's no such luck! I wish some fellows would converse on Bacon's prose or Swinburne's verse, or Dr. Cook's exploits; would quit their viewing with alarm, and talk and talk about the Guinness farm, of checkers, golf or quots. When I attempt to brag a while about my steed, which trots a mile in less than half an hour, my auditors look bored and cry: "Why talk of horses when we lie beneath the Tyrant's power?" Why spiel of crowbats when we face the deepest national disgrace, demerition and the dumps? If Woodrow Taft elected is, to ruin this poor land will whiz in fifty-seven jumps!" And so it goes; I cannot talk of money, marbles, mint or chalk, or aught that's safe and sane; the dippy people won't discuss a thing but this election fuss, and they give me a pain.

Morwenna Here From Montreal

The Black Diamond Liner Morwenna, Capt. Holmes, six days from Montreal, via usual gulf ports, entered port at 8 o'clock this morning. After leaving Montreal a week ago a fine run was made to Charlottetown where the ship was delayed a day taking aboard hay, potatoes, etc. She got down to Sydney on Monday and left there at 8 p.m. Tuesday. From that port the weather was foggy. The Morwenna brought one-half cargo and thirty passengers, 20 of which are round trippers from Montreal.

Attempts Suicide.

Last evening Const. O'Flaherty and Crocker were called to an East End pier where a 20-year-old labourer named King was seen acting strangely. He was having contracted the "D. T.s" from the effects of an overdose of alcohol. He remonstrated violently with the officers and made several attempts to get over the head of the wharf into the water, and it was only after the greatest difficulty that the officers handcuffed him and prevented him from doing serious personal harm.

Seamen's Wages $25

Last night a largely attended meeting of the Seamen's Union took place. Mr. W. J. Higgins, Solicitor for the Union, was present and announced that in answer to a note sent to the local shipowners they had agreed to give $25 per month, an increase of over 20 per cent on the rate of wages heretofore given. It was decided after some discussion to accept this, and the crew of the Helen Steward, who were on strike, will resume duty. President Woods, of the Firemen's Union, addressed the meeting.

Inter Brigade Football.

CADETS WIN.

Despite the downpour of rain that prevailed last evening the Highlanders and C. C. C. contested in the semi-final Brigade football match for the season. The customary gathering of Brigade supporters were in evidence and a great deal of interest and excitement was manifested throughout. Although the ground was wet and the ball greasy making it difficult for good football, yet both teams displayed combination. In the early stage of the match honours were equally divided, but after a while the C. C. C. team proved themselves superior and succeeded in scoring three goals to their opponents' nil.

The final match for the championship between the Guards and Cadets does not take place until after the Regatta. A win or a draw will give the latter the trophy, but if the Guards win a play-off will be necessary to decide the championship holders.

FIREMEN'S MEETING.—The Firemen's Union met last night, the attendance being large. The meeting was addressed by the President and the reports were satisfactory. The convention subscribed $10 towards the Regatta Fund.

The New Arm.

The Aeroplane Is Quickly Proving Itself in Britain's Navy.

To the resourcefulness of the British naval officer there is no end. The hand of four unassuming, fearless, and keen officers who recently showed how the British Navy is studying the science of aerial flight all went out to locate the King's yacht as has been told in recent press despatches and all of them found it after thrusting their craft through dark masses of fog. Each machine was in the air for an hour or more; not one of them had a mishap. This, in summary form, is the story of the work of the airmen, but the performances were so exceptional, and the merit of them so high, that no bald summary should be sufficient reading for patriotic people.

Commander Samson was first on the scene. He piloted the Short hydro-aeroplane, and very few people in the crowd on the Nothe and on Weymouth front knew that he had started on his business.

They might well be excused for believing that even an intrepid naval officer would have hesitated before launching his craft into the misty atmosphere, when a wind which at times had a velocity of from twenty-five to thirty-five miles an hour might have carried him out of his course; and there were no landmarks to guide him. But the naval aviator is made of stern stuff, and long experience of battling with fogs afloat makes him willing to accept risks which would alarm airmen without sea service.

Commander Samson gave the order to "Let go" to his assistants on the dunes at the edge of Portland Roads. The hydro-aeroplane slid down the slipway into some broken water, which tested the stability of the floats as well as the skill of the navigator. Over the ruffled surface of the water, the boat on the tail deeper in the water than the buoyant skimmers beneath the biplanes; and then, at the will of the commander, the strange machine was lifted into space.

The aviator did not steer a direct course for the position in which he assumed the royal yacht to be. He went to the seaward side of the fleet, passing through thick patches of fog on the way. For some eight or nine miles only momentary glimpses of the land were secured, and, while the upper reaches of the air were clear—Commander Samson rose from 1,000 feet in Portland Roads to 1,500 feet in Weymouth Bay—the sea was frequently shut out from view.

From the moment of rising from the water till the royal yacht was sighted through a break in the fog, the hydro-aeroplane had attained a pace of fifty-five miles an hour, the wind, strong and unreliable at times, being of assistance. The fleet knew that Commander Samson intended to go aloft, and, as there are many things to learn in the new science, a fast destroyer was detailed to follow the amphibious craft, to keep her in sight if possible, and to put the navigator to the test of proving his powers of aliveness. It was a hopeless task for the destroyer.

Although commander and crew did their best there never was the slightest chance of tracking the hydro-aeroplane, which had the wings of the water-carried ship, and rapidly escaped. So when the aerial craft was round the royal yacht, her throbbing engines attracted the attention of everyone on deck, she was alone. Commander Samson circled the royal yacht and her escort, and then, steering west, his duty well and truly done.

How he got ashore no one on the land can say, for, strain their eyes as they would, the fog defeated them. The fact is, the hydro-aeroplane went up its slipway just after half-past eight, at the moment when the Victoria and Albert was being moored three miles away. She and the officers who directed her proved that if the new arm of the naval service is weak in numbers, those who compose it have no leeway to make up.

women who are generally disliked. Sometimes the reason is evident, sometimes it requires a close analysis to reveal it. Perhaps we have some of the same faults but are not willing to admit it.

Amongst these unpopular women is the inquisitive woman who has no real interest in our lives, but is imbued with an over-whelming curiosity which compels her to ask about the most intimate things. Nothing is too sacred for her idle curiosity. You never purchase anything but what she asks you point blank, "Where did you get it? How much did you pay for it?"

She does not hesitate to question you about your family relations. She asks point blank questions about any personal affairs. Nor can you evade an answer, for if you try to change the subject, she will revert to her question time and again until you finally must answer or offend her by saying that you do not care to tell her.

Another woman who is disliked is the one who is always telling her family troubles. She drags out the family skeleton and parades it before your eyes. She pours her tale of woe into your unwilling ears. She never is satisfied with her family or her surroundings, and seems to derive pleasure in thrusting her troubles upon her neighbors.

Another unloved woman is the one who has thought for anyone but herself. She never can see but one side of a question and that is her own side. She wants to be the centre of attraction at all times and wants all the sympathy available. She is not willing to share the sympathy or admiration with anyone else. She never can bear to hear anyone else being praised.

Another uncomfortable woman is the one who is over-sensitive. Her friends are almost afraid to talk to her for fear of being misunderstood. She finds a slight where none was intended. A visit with a friend loses its joy in the after-thought, for the things that were said in a joke and meant that way, now take on a new meaning and, under the microscope of her sensitive soul, reveal an army of unkind allusions. Every thing is taken as a slight.

These, poor unpopular women wonder why they are disliked. Yet, they never try to turn the mirror inward to get the reflection of their own shortcomings—Dr. Edith B. Lowry in Woman's World for August.

Queer Schools.

There is in St. Petersburg an institution wherein young men are trained for service as police. The course of instruction provided is supplemental to the teaching afforded by the municipal authorities. Special study is given by pupils to the tools of various kinds employed by professional thieves. There is a class devoted solely to the study of forgery, with particular reference to the falsifying of signatures and visas on passports, a most important consideration in the performance of the duties of a Russian policeman.

A school for croupiers is conducted at Monte Carlo. During the summer months, in the club-room of the Tir-aux Pigeons and the Salle d'Escrime, in the Casino building, aspirants for the office of croupier learn the operation of gambling tables. Each pupil must from time to time, while others are impersonating players and making their respective wagers, conduct the game and learn how instantly to calculate and to pay out the winning stakes.

Generally, it is said, there are about sixty or seventy pupils in this school, and a six months' course is deemed sufficient to turn out finished croupiers.

Brussels has a school for the instruction of grave-diggers. This gruesome institution was founded by the directors of the Evere Cemetery. All candidates for appointment as sextons throughout Belgium must pass

The Really Nice Girl.

There is only one good and safe rule; a girl should not allow a man to kiss her or even to hold her hand unless they are engaged, and have the fullest intentions of marrying each other.

Looked at from the lowest level, it is good tactics for a girl to be reserved with a man. If he knows he can kiss her without being engaged to her, his respect for her falls.

A man likes best what he has to work to win; he doesn't want a woman to come even half way when he is wooing her; the more difficult the chase, the more he values her.

But carrying out a line of conduct from prudential motives in order to make oneself more valuable in a man's eyes should not be enough for the really nice girl. She must guard her body, because it is the temple of her mind and her character. To yield herself in the very slightest way to a man she is not going to marry is unworthy of her mind and character. Her own mind, her own character, are to be her long companions; they will be closer to her always than husband or children, parents or friends. To get the highest and best out of life she should refine, purify and develop these companions.—Maude Radford Warren in Woman's World for August.

Flying at 110 Miles an Hour.

The World's Youngest Aviator.

"M. Hanriot, may I introduce you to the Tit-Bits representative, who wishes to know something about your flying feats?" And the next moment the writer was shaking hands with the world's youngest aviator, Marcel Hanriot, known to his intimates as "Young Marcy," who, although only eighteen years of age, and has competed with such kings of the air as Latham, Chavez, and Vedriennes.

The introduction was brought about at Brooklands by a mutual friend, and it was indeed difficult to imagine as one chatted with this jovial, boyish-looking native of "La Bele France," full of fun and enthusiasm, that it was the same Hanriot whose aerial travels have extended through France, Switzerland, Italy, Spain, Turkey, Austria, Belgium and Southern Russia.

Fascination of Aviation.

"I am delighted to meet you," he said. "Would you like to go for a flight? No? You would rather talk? Ah," he continued, laughingly, "I am afraid I am a better flyer than talker. My forte seems to be aviation, and I really think the love of flying must have been born in me, so naturally did I take to it."

"It happened in this way. I had been studying at Chalons College to become an engineer, and at Christmas-time in 1909 went home to Rheims and found that my father had completed his famous monoplane, which is now included in both the French and Italian aerial fleets of warships. Needless to say, I was intensely interested, and, boy-like, of course, wanted to make a flight; but my father absolutely refused to allow me to do this.

A Foolish Feat.

"A few weeks later I did a very foolish thing. I persuaded one of my father's mechanics to help me to get one of the monoplanes out of the hangar, which I mounted, and this made my initial flight. Luckily, I met with no accident. My father, learning of the affair, made me promise never to attempt another flight until I was more experienced; but, seeing that my heart was set upon becoming an aviator, he promised to have me properly trained, and, ultimately, to my great joy, I secured my pilot's certificate."

Since that time Hanriot has taken prizes for splendid flights at meetings held at Rouen, Caen, Rheims, Lanark, Baie de la Seine, Dijon, Amsterdam, Chalons, and Lyons. He obtained his military brevet in three trials in April last at Rheims, at an altitude of 1,500 metres, the speed attained being seventy-five miles an hour. It might be mentioned, however, that Hanriot has attained the enormous speed of 110 miles an hour on one of his father's monoplanes, and although he has made as many as twenty-seven flights in one week, he has never yet met with the slightest accident.

His Lucky Mascot.

Perhaps it is because he always wears an amulet, given to him by a gipsy-woman whom he met at the Lanark meeting in 1910. This woman, having seen him flying for the first time, was lost in admiration at Marcel's daring and prowess, and insisted on examining his hand. She would take no fee, and gave him an amulet to wear, extracting from him the promise that he would never fly without it.

"And I never have," said Marcel.

"Last September, however, I nearly came to grief. I was flying through Southern France, trying to establish a long-distance record, when suddenly, while the machine was at a great height, my petrol ran short. As I realized this I noticed below a beautiful patch of green land, near a beautiful old building. I volplaned down to earth, but, to my embarrassment, found I had landed in the grounds of a nunnery. The young lady pupils in the convent, and the nuns as well, could not restrain their curiosity, and flocked round the uncanny-looking monoplane, asking all kinds of questions, and men from the neighboring village were permitted to enter the convent grounds in order to fill up my tanks with petrol."
