CHAPTER XXXVIII
RETRIBUTION.

Doris said not a word, but stood staring at the paper with dry eyes and that awful feeling of being smothered which crushes pain for a time but to lend it additional force afterwards.

Lady Despard put her arm round her.

"Doris! Doris! my dear, my dear!" she murmured. "Don't give way! While there's life there's hope. We can't tell what may have happened. I have reason to hope, to think—" She stopped and sprang—actually sprang—to the door, and throwing it open, said, hurriedly, "Come in; oh, come in!"

The next moment a tall figure, with a sunburnt face and one arm in a sling, entered, and after a glance, one anxious glance, at the white face, rushed forward and caught Doris to him with his sound arm. Lady Despard waited until this happened, then glided out.

They sat up very late that night, and Lady Despard's boudoir was so dimly lit that as she reclined on her couch she could not see, or pretended not to see, that Doris, as she sat at the marquise's feet, had got his hand fast locked in hers, almost as if she dreaded lest he should vanish as suddenly as he had come. And every now and then she, glancing fearfully at Lady Despard, laid the brown hand against her cheeks, and near, very near, to her lips.

There was not much talking, for Lady Despard was merciful, but at last she looked up.

"And now, my dear Othello, if you can—and will deign to recount some of our adventures, Desdemona and your humble servant will be gratified. Though I have known since yesterday that you had escaped, I haven't any of the details, and I will confess to a faint and lazy kind of curiosity. Touching that interesting wound now, which I do trust will soon be all right, for it would be awkward—"

She stopped and glanced at Doris with provoking archness.

"Yes, tell us," murmured Doris. "Lord Cecil—he shall be Cecil for us to the end—looked suddenly grave, and hesitated."

"Yes, I want to tell you, and I must," he said. "Not about myself so much as—" He stopped. "Did you see the list of the killed? Did they give a list of names?"

"No," said Lady Despard; "it was all surmise." "Why do you ask that?" "Because—" He stopped again. "Doris!"—and he laid his hand on her head, soothingly—"there was another person whom you know in this awful business besides myself. Can you guess his name?"

Doris shook her head apprehensively. Lady Despard leaned forward. "He was—he became a fast and devoted friend of mine, Doris. But for him I should not be here, dearest. He came out with the hospital, and I saw him first beside my bed. He pulled me through the fever." He stopped again, and Doris held her face low down, out of the lamp-light. "We were great friends after that, and when our detachment was ordered to the interior he volunteered. I tried to dissuade him. There was no reason that he should go; but he insisted, and— On the evening of the fight he stood by the guns with the rest, and with the rest fought like a lion. Once or twice I found a moment to speak to him, for he was always near me. When the last struggle came, I joined in the rush—that's the only word for it—and saw a couple of the Dakotas making for me. One I cut down, the other gave me this—he pointed to his arm—"and would have settled me—hush, dearest, don't cry—but this friend was near me still, and he threw himself between us."

He stopped and drew a long breath. "I don't remember any more till I came to, and, crawling about, came up on him. He was alive, just alive, but he knew me. I—I took his head on my knees and bent down. Doris, my darling, Doris, my dearest. Hush! hush! Tell her that her love saved me from worse than this, Cecil," he said. "Tell her that I died with her name on my lips. Be good to her, Cecil; be good to—Doris!"

Lady Despard was crying audibly. "You know, dear, who it was that saved my life," said Cecil, in a low voice. "It was Percy Levant."

And he drew her head upon his breast, and kissed her with protecting tenderness, as if he were responding to the dead man's solemn injunction.

When the marquise and marchioness returned from their long—but for them not too long—honeymoon, society, deeming it incumbent upon itself to bestow an impressive welcome on two of its most distinguished members, gave a ball in honour of the young, and, as the journals put it, "romantic couple."

It was a very grand affair, and the Morning Post next morning devoted a column and a half to its description and a list of the high and mighty and famous guests and stated, rather emphatically, that the most beautiful woman in the room was the young lady in whose honour the entertainment was given. It went into newspaper raptures over her manner, her smile, her dress, and, lastly, her jewels, which, as it said, consisted of a suit of magnificent diamonds—the Stoyie diamonds—and postically declared that their brilliance was only outshone by the wearer's eyes.

They were very beautiful, as a matter of fact, and no other jewels in the magnificent assemblage could compare with them, excepting perhaps, a suite of pearls set in antique silver, which was worn by—Lady Grace Peyton.

Twice in the course of the evening Doris and she met each other, and on both occasions, while Doris, with the meekness which, somehow, always distinguishes the injured innocents, turned her head aside, Lady Grace stared at her rival with a bold, defiant flash of her handsome eyes.

"I think," said Lady Despard, as she stood for a moment in a corner with Doris. "I think that for cool, brazen impudence, Grace Peyton excels all the world. Most women—all other women—having done what she has done, and knowing that we know what she has done—would have buried themselves in some German watering-place for the rest of their lives. But, oh, no! she not only thinks fit to put in an appearance here to-night, but actually—actually flaunts that set of pearls which she got by fraud—stole, if anyone ever stole anything in this world—from your husband. The whole set!"

"No, not the whole set," murmured Doris, softly, as she looked at Lady Grace gliding through a waltz. "I have the ring."

"You have? Why, I have never seen it. The ring?"

"No, you never saw it," said Doris, a warm flush rising to her lovely face. "I don't wear it on my finger, dear, but—here," and she touched her heart. "She is welcome to all the rest while I have that—and—him!" she added, turning to her husband as he came up to them.

For Her Sake;

The Murder in Furness Wood.

CHAPTER IV.
They listened to me, and my influence would have prevailed but that, shortly afterward the Duke of Stone came on to the platform. He shook hands with most of the gentlemen present, but not with myself; and from that moment I could see that I lost caste. I could hardly blame the people; the Duke is a popular man, and to be unknown to him is simply to be nobody. You understand, Lady Scarsdale?

"I both understand and sympathise," she replied, warmly. "The Duke is one of the kindest-hearted men living. You acknowledge that the Duke and Duchess must 'draw the line' somewhere. But to every rule there is an exception; and I am quite sure that, when the matter is laid before them, they will see it in its right light. Excuse me if I ask another question. Have you no friends or relative who could procure for you the introduction into society that you need?"

"No," he replied; "I have not a friend or relative who could be of use to me in that respect."

"I hope," said Lady Scarsdale, with great cordiality, "you will never say that after to-night. I shall be only too pleased to offer my services for your daughter's sake. I shall make it my especial business to lay this matter before the Duchess; and I am quite sure of one thing. The Duke and Duchess may draw the line somewhere rigidly; but, if they knew you and Miss Cameron they would never draw it at either of you."

The flattering words were spoken in the sweetest of voices, with the sweetest of smiles, and in Lady Scarsdale's best manner.

Peter Cameron was more than delighted; he had never perhaps been so happy. Here was this fashionable lady, a friend of the powerful Duchess, a visitor at Stonedale, taking the greatest possible interest in himself and his daughter. Great ladies whom he had previously met had eagerly sought subscriptions to charities, and had been glad to utilize his influence in various ways; but none of them had ever seemed in the least degree interested in himself or his daughter personally. Lady Scarsdale seemed to him the very embodiment of worldly wisdom; she understood matters at once. She looked very handsome, too, in the brilliant moonlight, as she said, with something like a sigh:

"These are difficult times in which we live. Money alone is useless; good birth alone is useless. The right thing is a happy combination of both; but so few people possess it." She almost longed to tell the millionaire that the bane of her life was the want of money. "You may reply upon me, Mr. Cameron," she added, as they turned to re-enter the house. "I think Miss Cameron simply one of the loveliest girls I have ever met. Properly introduced, I am convinced she will make quite a sensation."

"Do you really think so?" he asked delightedly.

"I do indeed," she replied; "and I may tell you that I am considered an excellent judge. If your daughter is what I may call properly launched in society, her success will be assured."

"You are so kind, Lady Scarsdale, so gracious, that I am almost emboldened to ask if you could help me," Peter Cameron said hesitatingly.

"If I can I will," she promised; "you may be quite sure of that. But we will discuss the matter at greater length another time. How long has your daughter left school?"

"Two years," answered Mr. Cameron.

"And since then—pardon me, it is the fault of your good nature if I presume—since then has she had the advantage of living with a perfectly trained woman of the world?"

"No; she has lived alone with me," he said, feeling for the first time somewhat ashamed of the fact. But he added hastily, "Lady Colwyn has almost taken charge of her."

Lady Scarsdale broke into a musical laugh.

"Lady Colwyn is a kind, motherly woman," she remarked; "but she knows no more of the training required by a fashionable young lady of these days than I know how to fashion the manners of a Chinese. She is a hundred years behind the age. How strange it is! I shall believe for the future in my own insight; for it struck me, when I saw Miss Cameron, that she lacked the most essential of all training—that of a woman of the world. She is so unconventional!"

"Is that a fault?" asked Peter Cameron.

Her ladyship raised her eyebrows in surprise.

"A fault, my dear Mr. Cameron!" she replied. "It is an unpardonable one in the eyes of society."

"Why, Lady Colwyn told me Diana's greatest charm was her freedom from all affectation and conventionality!"

A shrug of the shoulders was more expressive than any words.

"I can only say that Lady Colwyn is a most excellent and amiable woman, but behind the age."

Would any man or woman in this city refuse to give some small help to a little orphan child who has neither father or mother to provide for him? NOT ONE.

On Sunday next the unselfish Sisters of Belvidere Orphanage are asking the Catholic people of St. John's to help a little in the upkeep of who must have food to eat and clothes to wear --- the bare necessities of life. But a few close friends of the Institution who know of the reticence of those good ladies and their dislike of publicity, have jointly arranged to extend this appeal to no matter what class or creed, who would deem it a pleasure to do something for those helpless little orphans!

Could any father or mother, remembering the sheltering care given to their own dear ones, refuse to give an extra dollar to the upkeep of these little ones?

If he who "gives to the poor, lends to the Lord," won't you fathers and mothers who love your own little tots, please remember kindly the Belvidere Orphans on Sunday next.

Please give them all that you can spare!

THE PRAYERS OF LISPING LITTLE LIPS WILL BE YOUR REWARD.

4. Thou shalt use no large-patterned wall papers against which to hang thy pictures. The one will kill the other.
5. Thou shalt have no centerpiece or cornerpieces upon thy ceiling, but only a very nearly plain expanse of light color.
6. Thou shalt have thy fill of bright tints, and delicate designs for bedrooms and boudoirs, but for drawing-rooms, dining-rooms, libraries and halls, thou shalt be compelled to use less frivolous papers.
7. Thou shalt, when the ceiling is not too high, run the paper of the side wall up to the ceiling, putting the border just below the angle.
8. Thou shalt not panel the walls of a small room, except it be above a mantelpiece, a sideboard or a bookcase, where a bit of tapestry, a mirror or a picture may be held in place by strips of moulding.
9. Thou shalt use attention-compelling cut out borders, or conventionally designed strips for divisions between walls and ceiling.
10. Thou shalt remember at all times that thy wall paper is but a background against which to show thy pictures, thy furniture, and thy friends.

THE BOLSHEVIST PROGRAMME.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 24. Leon Trotsky, the Bolshevist Minister of War and Marine, speaking at Petrograd recently, gave a detailed programme of Bolshevist military operations, saying among other things that "it is not in Finland that an immense world combat against capitalism can be fought, but in Great Britain and America, and above all in the Far East."

RAILWAYMEN IN ENGLAND MAY STRIKE TO-DAY.

LONDON, Sept. 24. Another railway strike in Great Britain over the question of wages appeared to-day as a possibility through to-day's developments in the negotiations between representatives of the men and the Government. The executive body of railway men this morning sent an ultimatum to the Government, rejecting the standardization offer made by the latter, and intimating that unless a favorable reply was received by noon on Thursday, the men would be ordered to cease work.

RELEASING MAIL.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 24. The British Government has decided to release at once a great quantity of package mail held up in England during the war. This was announced to-day by the State Department.

PRINCE OF WALES PRIZE.

VICTORIA, B. C., Sept. 24. Last night, following the official dinner at Government House, the Prince of Wales was informed of the $50,000 prize which Norman A. Yarrow, of Victoria, is offering for the first non-stop airship flight across the Pacific Ocean, from Vancouver Island to Japan. His Royal Highness, on being informed, immediately signified his desire to be associated with the proposal, and the offer of Mr. Yarrow and his friends will now be known as the Prince of Wales' Prize.

REGARDING ALIENS.

OTTAWA, ONT., Sept. 24. Believing that injustice has been done their fellow countrymen, the Ukrainian and Poles, of Ottawa, urged the Government to try to release the seventeen aliens who were arrested in Ottawa and interned without trial in May, 1918, and who have since been prisoners in Kapekasking Camp. Hon. C. J. Doherty, replying to the delegation, said he was impressed with the representations made by the delegation and would take the matter into serious consideration. He added that he would take the matter up with the Immigration Department.

WILL MEET TO-DAY.

LONDON, Sept. 24. Following a conference between Sir Eric Geddes, the new Minister of Transportation, and Premier Lloyd George, it was announced that Sir Eric would meet the leaders of the railwaymen, Thursday morning.

A MISUNDERSTANDING.

LONDON, Sept. 24. The Government has sent a communication to the officers of the National Union of Railwaymen, declaring that there has been a misunderstanding, and agreeing to further negotiations. It is understood this action followed a meeting this afternoon of the entire cabinet at which was considered an ultimatum by the railwaymen, threatening to strike on Friday at noon.

THE FIGHTING TRIO

Higgins, Vinnicombe and Fox the Choice for St. John's East.

Most Inspiring Meeting in History of District --- Monster Audience Acclaim Popular Selection --- Tremendous Ovation Accorded Prime Minister --- The Premier's Liberal District Holds to its Traditions --- True Blue Higgins, Popular Vinnicombe and Eloquent Fox the Winning Team --- No Reform Candidates Need Apply.

Last night's meeting of the Liberal Progressive Party in the C.C.C. Hall for the selection of candidates for the District of St. John's East, was a revelation. Intended at the outset only as a committee meeting, the multitudes present warranted the change from committee to general, and consequently it was changed in- to such. The speaker, C.C.C. Hall was thronged and the lowest estimate of 700 voters is a conservative one. All classes were represented—not a man from either was absent, and had it not been for several steamers in port discharging cargoes, the working men's attendance would have increased the gathering to at least a thousand. St. John's East always enjoyed the reputation of being enthusiastic wherever addressed by Liberal candidates but last night it certainly smashed all previous records. Never before in its political history, did it present such a united front against a common enemy—in this instance the Squires-Coaker combination—or evidence such stern resolution to send back to the House of Assembly the candidates of the popular and progressive party. Influential men, of both the Liberal and People's Party were present, all having mutually made up their mind that the Liberal Progressive Party, led by Sir Michael Cashin, is the real heir of the one-time powerful Liberal organization that swept the country in a succession of victories.

The gathering was a magnificent testimony to the district's desire for clean, honest government, and its espousal of the cause of the Liberal Progressive Party is a sure index of Newfoundland obtaining "government by the people, for the people, and of the people." St. John's East has ever been faithful to Liberalism, and its endorsement of the Liberal candidates, Messrs. Higgins, Vinnicombe and Fox sets the standard for the ideal successors of that powerful cause. As Liberals they are ready and willing to follow the banner of Sir Michael Cashin, himself a Liberal of 27 years' political standing, and one who because of his association with such great Liberal chieftains as the late Sir William Whiteway and Sir Robert Bond, is eminently fitted to carry on the policy which the lamented death of the one and the regretted retirement of the other, stopped for a while, but which is now to be continued.

Shortly after 8 o'clock the meeting was called to order by Hon. W. J. Higgins, who asked that a Chairman and Secretary be appointed. On motion of Mr. Roland Morris, son of Deputy Mayor I. C. Morris, seconded by Mr. W. E. Brophy, a prominent young business man of Holytown, Mr. Arthur Hiscock was appointed Chairman, and on the latter's motion, Mr. Jonas Barter was selected as Secretary by acclamation. The purpose of the meeting, which was to nominate three candidates in the interests of the Liberal Progressive Party for the District of St. John's East, was announced by the Chairman, who on looking round, he said, was reminded of a gathering in the British Hall six years ago, similarly called and constituted. Many faces in the gathering were familiar and he felt the response given then in support of the men nominated to represent the district would be duplicated at the present meeting. As on the previous occasion he wished to ask that the coming campaign be conducted on clean lines and devoid of personalities, because on winning along these lines there would be greater pride in being victorious, as Messrs. Higgins, Vinnicombe and Fox were bound to be. His remarks were received with hearty applause, and he then called for the nomination of those considered best fitted to represent the "old and important district of St. John's East in the interests of the Liberal Progressive Party. The proposer of Messrs. Higgins, Vinnicombe and Fox was Mr. Jas. P. Crotty, whose activities as a Liberal in the past are known to all in the district. Now, he said, that the old Liberal Party has been replaced by one led by Hon. Sir M. P. Cashin, and which lived nearer to the ideals which the title Liberal stands for than any other bunch using that name, he had no hesitation whatever in supporting it. It dated only a short time back and should not be confounded with other administrations. He paid a tribute to the manner in which the business of the district had been carried on by only one representative, Hon. W. J. Higgins, during the last few years, and had great pleasure in nominating him and his colleagues. He trusted and firmly believed the Liberal Progressive Party would be recognized and supported as it should and would be. Judging by what had been done since Sir M. P. Cashin had taken up the leadership a few months ago, the Party was the one for St. John's East and was bound to win. The nomination was seconded in a brief but enthusiastic address by Mr. A. Snow, a leading fisherman of Quidi Vidi, who was present in uniform, having only quite recently returned from the front and who is still suffering from the injuries received while playing his part in the big game, as he has always played it at home, both as an ordinary citizen and sportsman, notably on the pond. The gathering was then asked by the Chairman to show its approval of the nomination by standing, whereupon the assembly rose as one man and at the call of ex-Serjt. J. Robinson, a prominent member of the G.W.V.A., cheered till the rafters shook. Three cheers and a tiger were again given at the call of the Chairman, who then asked Hon. Mr. Higgins to address the meeting.

In opening the leader of the East End team Hon. W. J. Higgins, took the opportunity to express his pleasure and sincere appreciation at the honor conferred on him and his colleagues in being nominated. Six years ago he had gone to the district and the electors had done him the honor of making him their representative. In the interim, Mr. John Dwyer, a man of sterling worth and a true representative of the best district in the country, had been called to his reward. To his memory he paid a high tribute. The Hon. Mr. Kent stood for all that the Liberal Progressive Party represents and his name would linger in the district for many years to come. He could sincerely say he was deeply sensible of the work Mr. Kent had done and his colleagues had done and as the only survivor of the trio elected a few years ago, was not ashamed to stand and be nominated by Mr. Crotty, who had been actively opposed to him at that time. He was further proud to be seconded by Mr. Snow, a fisherman of Quidi Vidi, who had returned from service in behalf of the Empire, wounded, after doing a man's job. Surely this was a good augury of what was to follow. This was really the christening of the child, the Liberal Progressive Party, born the previous night at the meeting of the West End Committee in the T. A. Armoury. It had grown to be a lusty boy overnight. The organizing meeting had grown to be practically a public one over a child 24 hours old, and as the meeting indicated, this child would prove the healthiest ever reared in St. John's East. The father of it, Sir M. P. Cashin, is the type of man we all feel we can give a chance to. All had assembled under his leadership to form the new Party and all shades of opinion had been brought together because the man in charge was the one found stroke to win. The makeup of the crew did not matter so much, all depends on the stroke, and Sir M. P. Cashin is the man who can stroke to victory. It was a happy augury that the name selected was one that appealed to all. This Party does not talk of reforms but of the principles of Liberalism, of the policy of "Whiteway and progress" and had taken up the motto on a new trip for Cashin and advancement. He appreciated fully the honor of being nominated to lead a team which would go through to victory because it was able to. He was privileged to be associated with Messrs. Vinnicombe and Fox, who were too well known to need any introduction from him and to be one of the youngest team to face any district. By the time they were through, however, they would roll up a vote that would stand as a record for years, a vote that would show how the electors had come out and shown how they valued the traditions of their district. He predicted a bumper vote both in and outside the city, and a substantial majority for himself and colleagues. In introducing Messrs. Vinnicombe and Fox, he referred to the associations of both and of their families with the district, his remarks calling forth hearty cheers. He would touch upon the Party programme, as it was to be made known by the leader in a few days, but was assured it would meet with the approval of all. It was one that was to be expected from such a leader, in whom the attendance indicated widespread confidence. It was only fair to remember that Sir M. P. Cashin had only started to form his party a few months ago and that he could not, therefore, be held responsible for deeds of administrations in years past. St. John's East could take him by his character and the respect shown him in his native district which had returned him for 27 consecutive years to the Legislature. If he was good enough for Ferryland for such a period, he was worthy of a trial here. Continuing, Mr. Higgins said there is no division as to principles in the Liberal Progressive Party, which is under only one leader and not party under several, as are their opponents. He looked forward to this one reason for confidence in the result of the election. As far as the campaign was concerned, no personal word would be said against opponents, as all had a right to their opinions, he had colleagues who would conduct the fight in a manner worthy of themselves, their supporters and the district. The Party was under the unquestioned leadership of Sir Michael Cashin, who was a man of high standing and whose name was a happy augury, as so sure as the sun shines the house divided against itself must fall. The Party must be judged by its manifesto and taking the record of the leader, it was such as must justify confidence in him by all. Again take the record of the Party since its formation a few months ago and watch how it is shaping. State servants who deserved better pay have received an increase, and this is but an instance typical of the courage and bigness of the man who is of the type that all realize will be needed in the future. In scathing terms Mr. Higgins dealt with the worn-out cries of blue ruin and the catch cries, which are but an insult to the intelligence of the electorate. The Progressive Party appeals to the reason and common sense of the voters, and does not expect their support through a call to prejudices. They want the votes of the people not because of the personnel of the party or team, but because they can put forward arguments and policy that will appeal to reason, and prove that the Liberal Progressive Party is the one most likely to do the best for the country. He appealed for the straight ticket vote, and expected himself and colleagues to get them on the merits of their policy. Continuing, he dealt with the cries raised at every election time as to the country being headed for the rocks of disaster and showed that such had always been proven false, and then went on to show that except for the irreparable loss of our brightest manhood, Newfoundland was better fitted to face the ensuing problems than any other country engaged in the great struggle. Never was there greater prosperity in the country, and in Sir M. P. Cashin we have the man to grapple with adversity if it arises. He compared the conditions of 20 years ago to those existing at present, and showed that whereas in the past we depended on practically one industry, the fishery, our future prosperity lies in developing our other resources, if we are all to live here, our hope for ourselves and children is in greater opportunities for work. Sir M. P. Cashin is not the one to bank at progress, and will give the country and people the chance to advance in every way. For himself and colleagues he promised to work in a way worthy of those on the East End Committee, and live up to the best traditions of the district. The watchword, he said, would be: "The Straight Ticket and a clean fight," because the fight was for a clean party and leader who had nothing to be ashamed of in any way. As Mr. Higgins took his seat, cheers were given for him, his colleagues and the Party, the applause lasting several minutes.

Mr. N. J. Vinnicombe being introduced by the Chairman, took the floor amidst the wildest enthusiasm. The outburst was as generous as it was sincere, and a complete demonstration of the popularity of Mr. Vinnicombe. After the applause had subsided, Mr. Vinnicombe delivered a very practical and honest address. He explained his position as an opponent of the senior member of the ticket in the 1913 election. He was then a follower of Sir Robert Bond, but he was not prepared to see Sir Robert's position stolen by a usurper, who had styled his party the Liberal-Reform Association. What did we Liberals of the East End do, said Mr. Vinnicombe, that necessitated this scrap crew to make an attempt to reform us? It is an insult to the intelligence of the grand old Liberal voters of St. John's East, and one that we greatly resent. Why, said Mr. Vinnicombe, there is not a Liberal among the whole Squires-Coaker combination. The answer to this was the presence of hundreds of the Liberals who supported Kent, Shea and Dwyer in the last campaign, who would not be calumniated or bullied by the lightning change artists of the Squires-Coaker combine. He was a Liberal first, last and always, but there was not the slightest tinge of Liberalism in the gang that were posing as opponents of the Liberal Progressive Party. Someone had mentioned in the street during the day that he would be a poor friend of the workingman. But he wanted to point out that he was always their friend, and if there was any doubt about it, for his opponents, to make a canvas of the district and just see where he fitted in. Politics with him was a matter of sincere concern, and if he believed that the Liberal Progressive Party had not the interests of the people at heart, he would be one of their strongest opponents. In Sir Michael Cashin the country had a leader that was honest, sincere, and with a following behind him that represented the best intellect of the country. They were men of probity and high standing, representatives of every walk of life, fitted to assume the responsibility of carrying on the work of the country when only men of big and broad views should be at the head of public affairs. Personally he was in the fight to a finish. He would not slack up until the last ballot was polled, and he had no doubt that when the returning officer made his announcement, that Higgins, Vinnicombe and Fox would have the biggest majority ever recorded in St. John's East. In conclusion, he asked for a strict party vote. Personally, he did not believe, he stated, the fight was to defeat the Squires-Coaker combine and elect the Liberal Progressive Party.

Mr. C. J. Fox, an orator, who can thrill his audience, followed Mr. Vinnicombe, and spoke in part: I am sensible of the compliment that has been paid me in receiving nomination at your hands to-night; and I sincerely appreciate the honor that you have conferred on me. I accept nomination not merely because it represents the necessary initial step in the course that now lies before me, but because it means to me beginning public life under a leader I admire, with colleagues I respect, and in a district whose political traditions have been and will continue to be to me objects of veneration and affection. So firmly am I imbued with the latter idea that I can truthfully say that if political ambition ever stirred within me, it was never with the thought that I would enter the public life of this Colony otherwise than through the portals of St. John's East. Therefore, I stand before you this evening on the brink of whatever political career the future may hold for me, in the proud possession of three essentials, without which I would have never entered the present contest, namely, a leader to whom I may look up; colleagues upon whom I may depend, and a district whose lofty ideals may well serve as the highest incentives to the finest effort a man may put forth in his country's cause. And the complement to these vigorous forces is what?—the cooperation of a loyal and enthusiastic committee. And surely as we look around to-night we are safe in saying that our most bitter enemy must admit that within these walls we have found that committee. This brings me to the very pleasant duty of thanking you for your attendance this evening. Believe me, gentlemen, when I say that I am at a loss to adequately express my gratitude to you. This is the first time in my life that I have been prominently identified with a political meeting; and I must confess that I am deeply touched by the evidences of goodwill and support I see around me. Do you realize the magnificent spur it is to a man's endeavor to know that he has the support of his friends in the task to which he has set his hand? Do you realize the feeling of supreme confidence it gives a man to hear behind him as he marches, the tramp of loyal supporters? Do you realize the feeling of security it gives a man to know that surrounding him on all sides are men determined and enthusiastic in the cause that he is espousing? Do you realize the spirit of victory it engenders in a man to see extending on either side of him a solid phalanx of men indomitable in their resolution to win? Do you realize the deep and abiding sense of gratitude the recognition of these factors towards success awakens in a man towards those whose cooperation and assistance are thus made manifest? If you do, then, Sirs, you have some idea of my feelings towards you to-night. I can say no more, except once again to assure you of my heartfelt appreciation of your goodness. It is proper that I should tell you why I decided to enter politics, and in particular why I decided to join the administration of Sir Michael Cashin. In the first place, I regard it as a man's duty to do his share in the public service of his country. The part he may be called upon to play may be great or small dependent upon the abilities he possesses, and the opportunities he may have of exercising them. But provided he is of ordinary intelligence, is inspired by worthy motives, honestly feels that he can be of some assistance in the public interest according to the talents God has given him, and the call for his service comes, then, Sirs, I say that his covetousness of citizenship blinds him to no principle. If a man should think seriously and well before he disregards that duty and declines that honor, for honor 'tis on the principle that no greater tribute could be paid a man than to be asked to take part in the deliberations of the councils of his country. Upon the doctrine of service rests the foundation of our social structure. If it were otherwise and men were at liberty to seek their own individual, selfish pursuits, and shirk responsibility of public life, the machinery of government would stop, conditions become chaotic and human society cease to exist. But fortunately inbred in most men is the desire to justify their own existence and add their quota to the public service; and thus are honourable men induced to take up public life. It does not follow that because a man decides to enter public life, he thereby dubs himself a self-confessed egotist, boastful of his talents, but smugly content to allow his country to use them; or that he fondly imagines that he has a Heaven-sent mission to save his country and is heroically prepared to take up the task. No! There is nothing either egotistical or heroic about it. It is simply the decent desire of a decent man to fit into whatever niche of usefulness his country thinks that he can fill in the public interest. That, briefly, is my position. The opportunity came for me to enter public life, and I availed of it on principle. If the electorate before whom I shall presently appear, think that I can be of some use in the administration of the public affairs of this Colony, then I am ready—and, in fact, regard it as my duty—to place whatever abilities I may possess at the disposal of my country. I have no object beyond this: I aspire to serve. In the second place, why did I decide to join Sir Michael Cashin? Simply because I believed in him. I saw in him a man fitted and trained by ability and experience to form and control an administration that would work in the best interests of this country—a man in whom the people might repose the greatest confidence and the utmost trust. We are all aware of the upset the war has brought upon the world. Rightly or wrongly, we feel that a period of uncertainty is approaching, during which God alone knows what may happen. During the past few years this country has enjoyed a prosperity unexampled in its extent. It is true the war has caused us the irreparable loss of the flower of our country's manhood—a loss that no prosperity, however great, can compensate us for—a loss that will serve until the last pages of our history are sealed as a memorial to the sacrifice Newfoundland was called upon to make in the cause of Empire. But in lesser respects this country has escaped practically unscathed—an escape for which, when we consider the sufferings of other countries, we ought to be devoutly thankful. But the swing of the pendulum may soon be in the other direction. The days that are to come may bring with them tasks difficult to meet; and it is therefore incumbent upon us to provide our country with an administration competent in all respects to face whatever troubles the future may hold in store for us. In Sir Michael Cashin I believe we have the nucleus around which may be formed such an administration. I therefore decided to support him, placing my faith in his ability, his experience, his independence, and, above all else, in his personal integrity and honesty of purpose. I admit publicly to the personal allegiance I bear him—an allegiance to which I am prepared to subordinate all party affiliations—except my principles. In other words, I joined Sir Michael Cashin believing in his bonds, and on the assurance that he will inaugurate and carry through a policy that will have for its object the advancement of the best interests of this Colony; that in the execution

SUPPOSE THE ROPE DOES BREAK SOMETIMES!

RUTH CAMERON

I was absolutely astounded the other day to hear a woman whom I greatly admire, a woman who has given lavishly of her strength and time for the community's good, declare that she did not think much of the Boy Scout movement.

Of course, I asked what the reason was, and she told me a tale of some Boy Scouts with whom she had come into contact who had caused her personal inconvenience, and of some others who had gone about some business assigned to them in a very tactless manner.

"They don't live up to their vows," she said.

Of course, they don't.

How many Christians do you know who live up to one-quarter of the vows which being a Christian imposes upon them?

Do You Blame Christianity Or Human Nature?

But do you cease to think well of Christianity for that reason? Or do you think of what men would be without some guiding religion, some star of idealism to work towards, and blame not the religion, but the weakness of human nature?

Is this not one of our commonest of mistakes—to judge a movement or a cause, not by its ideals, not by the general sum of good which it manages to do—but by its workings in some particular case?

No one who has had anything to do with a boy from the age of five on, can help realizing what a splendid organization of forces toward good the Boy Scouts is.

He Can Tell His Father Things.

Think of the healthy interest in woodcraft it gives the town boy. Did you ever hear such a boy telling his father things about the woods and the way to build a fire that the latter never had a chance to learn and is glad to know? I have.

Think of the many times it diverts that restless boy force from mischief simply by opening channels of harmless interest and even of service for it to flow into. For every boy who does mischievous annoying things because he prefers them, I suppose there are a hundred who get into mischief because they must do something and they don't happen to have anything else to do (Page Mr. S.—he can tell you all about the subject of idle hands).

The Ultimate Miracle.

And, miracle of miracles, I even know a small boy of nine who grudgingly admits there must be some sense to washing your face (he can't see just what it is) because the Boy Scout manual commends it!

I could mention more points, but surely anything after that would be an anti-climax.

So please think of that whenever you start to condemn a movement because some exponent of it isn't all that he should be.

Remember that if any star pulls some thousand wagons a few feet upward and upward, it is not to be condemned because the ropes by which some of the wagons are hitched to it, sometimes break and let the wagons roll backwards into the ditch.

Always save the milk in a cocoon—drive nails through the cocoon eyes and let it out before cracking the nut. The milk is good for cocoon ice.

Tapleo jellied fruit can be made by cooking ½ cupful of tapioca in 1 pint of boiling water until transparent; then add any pretty fruit desired, cool and serve with cream.

Carlyle wrote a patient, crabbed, biting hand, sufficiently expressive of the character of the "dour" philosopher. A friend thus aptly describes it:

"Eccentric and spiteful little flourishes dart about his manuscript in various odd ways, some times evidently intended as a cross to a 't,' but constantly receding in an absurd fashion, as if attempting a calligraphical somersault and destroying the entire word from which they sprang. Some letters slope one way and some another some are halt, maimed and crippled, and all are blind." Carlyle used to enjoy a story told him by his London publishers. A Scotch compositor had just been added to the printing house staff, on the strength of a recommendation from the Edinburgh Review. His first copy was some of Carlyle's manuscript.

"What!" he fairly shouted, "have you got that man here? I fed from Scotland to get away from him."—London News.

MANLINESS.

Stick through the heart of it, hammer and beat of it, play the game to the end.

Stand to the test of it, making the best of it, you have a name to defend.

Heart and soul go for it, you have a show for it, fight just as hard as you can.

But cherish no doubt of it. You can come out of it, failure or victor—a man.

Make a fair fight of it. Keep to the right of it, honestly battle to win. But don't let the prize of it, glitter and size of it, tempt you to shame or to sin.

Better by far to be short of the victory, better to lose to defeat.

Than falsely get hold of it, knowing the gold of it carries the name of a cheat.

Hold yourself high above cheering and money-love, want something more than a goal!

Treasure your name more than a victor's fame—nothing can pay for your soul.

Then if you're beaten down, failing to gain the crown, you can come homeward in pride.

Smiling and head-erect, owning your self-respect, knowing that truly you trod.

Magic Work in Salvage Task.

The salvage of 440 vessels and the recovery of property valued at $250,000,000, is the record in four years of the Admiralty department which, under Rear-Admiral Philpotts, has been conducting salvage operations in home and foreign waters. The department came into existence in the autumn of 1915, and finished its last contract this week. This was the salvaging of an American steamer at Penarth. From the beginning of October, 1915, to the end of November, 1918, British, allied and neutral vessels totalling 1,623,551 gross tons have been salvaged. Suggestions have appeared now and then that weird appliances were being employed in this salvage work, but only principles already existing, although vastly improved, have been used. The Admiralty rely wholly upon steamers with extraordinary pumps and a series of lifting lights, converted from hopper dredgers, which can support a strain of 2,000 tons with three-inch wires.

Chief Morning Star.

Cree Indian Thus Name Prince of Wales.

Banff, Alta., Sept. 17.—Within 24 hours, the Prince of Wales has taken active part in functions which illustrate vividly three distinct phases of Canadian life. Southern Alberta has supplied the prince with more varieties in entertainment than he found elsewhere on his Canadian tour.

Tuesday, as the Prince was riding a Mustang through a herd of cattle on the ranges near High River, he was coached by cow-punchers, who had found in him a man instead of a blase courtier, in the neck of herding great numbers of cattle in the round up.

Last evening found His Royal Highness participating in what was probably the biggest military ball Alberta ever had.

This morning the Prince stood in the midst of an Indian pow-wow attired in feather head dress to receive the rank of chief of all the Crees of Alberta. One hundred and fifty Indians of both sexes and all ages hailed their debonair prince as Chief Morning Star, with their mightiest cheers.

A Millionaire at Thirty-Seven.

Mr. Leonard J. Martin, the man who has bought, the Government's war stock of 40,000,000 yds. of linen for $4,000,000, is known in the City as "the lightning millionaire." His meteoric career provides a fine romance of "push and go." He is only thirty-seven, the son of a Truro outfitter, and began his career as an engineer in a tiny shop in Lewisham, making motor-boat machinery.

"But," he told me, "I was always ready to adapt myself to the changing conditions which I saw coming along. That is the only way to get on and make money."

With £2,000, which he made out of his little shop, he bought up derelict motor-bus company stock; he actually bought up forty "dead" companies, shipped his purchases to remote parts of the world, at profits which laid the foundation to his present huge fortune.

A CONTRAST.

For the past six or eight years, perhaps no man in the dominion has been subjected to such continuous attacks of vituperation at the hands of his enemies than has Capt. A. Kean, a mariner who has sailed over more salt water and brought in more seals than any other in Newfoundland. That such a man as Capt. Kean possesses more than ordinary ability goes without saying, and that he has always treated his men kindly and considerately is well established by the fact that many of his sealing crew have been with him Spring after Spring for the past quarter of a century.

In choosing his crews Capt. Kean made no distinction as to their possessing similar ideas on certain matters that he holds himself, but has invariably selected his men for their capability and worth, either at the seal or codfisheries, or in the coastal steamship service. When it comes to the prosecution of our marine industries he is ever willing to lend a helping hand to any person who is honest, industrious and competent. Nor is he one to condemn a man because he may have made a slight slip. On the contrary he has ever advised him for his good, and if it proved absolutely necessary, in the interests of business or of the general public to part with such a one, Capt. Kean endeavoured to find him employment, where a slight dereliction would injure no person but the man himself.

Capt. Kean has always been the friend of the fishermen, and it is to be regretted that Newfoundland has not more of the class of this sturdy type of independent mariners, who is what may be styled the via media between the merchant and the fisherman. How then can any genuine son of Terra Nova stand by and hear such a man maligned and vilified by such political ruffians as W. F. Coaker and his satellites and connections. What has the Wordy President ever done but to breed variance and distrust between supplier and supplied, until at the present moment there is almost a want of confidence among these two important features in our country's chief industries, that to say the least of it, materially damages the whole system of trade, and is the means of preventing many from getting the much needed supplies, which they otherwise would receive, were it not for the insidious and vicious doctrines enunciated and scattered broadcast by Coaker and his controlled organ The Evening Advocate.

To think that a political campaign can be fought without tissues of falsehoods and slanders being the chief weapons employed, is sufficient to disgust every right thinking person and, badly as we here in Newfoundland may look upon it, what must outsiders think of us, and above all what must the thousands of Newfoundlanders in the United States, Canada, and elsewhere think of us, when they peruse those villainous tirades, which they know full well are nothing but a manufacture of falsehood, malice and spleen.

Newfoundlanders should judge for themselves, at the moment, and ask themselves the question seriously: Who has done the most toward keeping up the prosperity of the Colony? Is it such men as Capt. Abram Kean and William Winsor, or is it W. F. Coaker, R. A. Squires, Dr. Alex. Campbell and the rest of the Squires-Coaker combination? No difficulty will be met in arriving at the correct answer. The successful fish and seal killers, who have been already mentioned, have done more towards the building up of Newfoundland in one year, than all the seed, breed and generations of the Opposition factions of Coaker and Squires have done in a hundred years, or will do in a hundred more.

The same may be said with regard to Hon. A. B. Morine. He has been accused of attacking a certain portion of our population in years gone by, through the public press, an attack with which he had no more to do than the man in the moon, and those who credited the accusation for a time were eventually convinced that such was not the case, and regretted that such a charge had been made and circulated, and an innocent person made to suffer for the crimes of others. There are many to-day who are aware that Mr. Morine is neither small-minded nor vindictive, and has conferred favors where others had rendered the consolation of remarking "that they would bear them in mind." When any man or body of men in this community want capable counsel to plead before the Court, the first man they employ is Alfred B. Morine, and he takes the case of a political opponent as blithely and uses his forensic powers so earnestly as he would for his best friend: for a Jew as for a Christian; for a poor man or woman over a dollar cause, as he would for a brief involving thousands.

It is not for the denizens of the "Star" Chamber or for the scribes of the Advocate to dictate the policy to be pursued by the people of the North. They are fully qualified to submit the question as to whom they will render support during the forthcoming election (the most important in our history) to an analytical test, and abide by the result. That the result of their analysis will show Kean, Winsor, Forbes, Stone, Hickman, Crosbie to have a greater stake in the country: that they will see justice done and employment given there can be no doubt. Nor will they throw away their rights by entrusting the future government of Newfoundland to the hands of such men of straw as form the Coaker-Squires stagnation party, whose one object is to seize the reins of government for their own personal aggrandizement and love of power.

Sure Winners.

If any hope was uppermost in the breast of the Squires-Coaker combination that they could win in St. John's East, that hope was eternally dissipated last night, when the forces of real Liberalism arrayed themselves for the coming fight. There can be—there is—no doubt whatever that the old Liberal district of St. John's East will not be true to its traditions, and nothing that can be said or done by the masquerading reformers can save them from sure and certain defeat. The strength of Higgins, the popularity of Vinnicombe and the eloquence of Fox are factors which cannot be overcome by any combination of men or parties. In Mr. Fox, the Liberal-Progressive Party have an orator, whose choice diction and classic phraseology at once stamps him as a coming parliamentarian, and if there is anything in a name, then the mantle of that great English statesman, Charles James Fox, has surely been cast upon the shoulders of his namesake—also C. J. The voters of St. John's East proved their appreciation of this new entrant into the political arena, at the great meeting last night. That they will follow this appreciation by a solid support of the three popular candidates cannot be gainsaid, and the premier Liberal district of Newfoundland, the ever faithful constituency, whose motto "semper fidelis" has never been sullied—St. John's East—will again rally to the Liberal colors and by a record vote place Higgins, Vinnicombe and Fox at the head of the poll, thus repudiating and discountenancing the "unholy alliance."

A Double Game.

Footie and Warren are, it is said, playing a game to knife the Hon. R. A. Squires, and that is the reason why Warren has consented to go to Fortune Bay, and Footie has partly agreed to go to Burin. Both are hoping that Squires will be defeated in whatever district he contests, and in that event Warren (if elected in Fortune Bay (which he won't) will be made leader. With the Squires-Coaker combination double crossing each other in this way, how can any of them be trusted? Electors must be constantly on guard to protect themselves from being drawn into the maze of conspiracies which seem to be an outcrop of the "unholy alliance."

"Briton" Boys Entering Sports Circle.

The sailors of H. M. Trainingship Briton, have decided to enter the local sport circle, and next summer will enter teams for soccer, rugby, cricket and possibly baseball. On the coming Saturday they will play a preliminary game with the C. E. I., which will be mainly for the purpose of trying out and seeing just how they stand. A Policeman Needed.

Residents of that portion of Governor Street extending from King's Rd. to Cochrane Street, are complaining of the conduct of a number of boys who make the nights hideous there with their noise and disturbance. White Wax From Coal.
Take a piece of hard, black shale dug from one of the Pumperston pits in Scotland, and lay it beside a glowing white paraffin wax candle. The more you look at the two, the more difficult it is to credit the fact that the candle can be made from the coal.
Yet this is only one of the many miracles which applied science accomplishes with comparative ease, and this is how it is done:
Shale is distilled—that is, heated in closed retorts—until it gives off oil. At the second distillation, this oil, known as "green oil," is pumped into a cooler and becomes a thick sticky liquid on top of which float solid crystals of wax.
The oil is run off and the wax is left behind.
But the wax is ugly, yellowy stuff, and in this condition is called par-

White Wax From Coal.

Take a piece of hard, black shale dug from one of the Pumpherton pits in Scotland, and lay it beside a gleaming white paraffin wax candle. The more you look at the two, the more difficult it is to credit the fact that the candle can be made from the coal.

Yet this is only one of the many miracles which applied science accomplishes with comparative ease, and this is how it is done:

Shale is distilled—that is, heated in closed retorts—until it gives off all. At the second distillation, this oil, known as "green oil," is pumped into a cooler and becomes a thick sticky liquid on top of which float solid crystals of wax.

The oil is run off and the wax is left behind.

But the wax is ugly, yellowish stuff, and in this condition is called par-

Neckties Made of Glass.

In these days of substitutes one must be prepared for surprises, although it would be difficult not to betray at least a passing interest in so novel a departure as a necktie made of glass.

Such a tie was recently shown to the writer by a member of a firm of glass makers.

Everyone has seen the curious multi-colored centres which the glass marbles used by schoolboys often contain. These centres are composed of very fine glass threads, and it is the importance of the British oil works which centre between Glasgow and Edinburgh. Six large companies are at work there raising shale, and from this black, oily substance are made each year twenty million gallons of burning oil, five million gallons of asphalt, more than twenty million gallons of lubricating oil, and not less than twenty-five thousand tons of paraffin wax.

Motor spirit is also made in large quantities, and from the refuse, once thrown away, is now made fifty-four thousand tons yearly of sulphate of ammonia, one of the most valuable fertilizers known to the farmer.

Plant a few dry grapefruit seeds in a fern basket. You will soon have a pretty table plant.

A dish-washing mop saturated with crude oil and allowed to dry makes a good duster.

letter that are employed in the manufacture of glass neckties.

These ties, in fact, are nothing more than lengths of glass thread woven together; and as such they can be twisted and knotted and generally treated, like the ordinary everyday tie.

It was recently announced that collars made of paper would shortly be on the market. They are said to be much cooler and lighter than the perspiration-provoking linen or "soft" collar.

Paper can be put to various uses in the matter of providing substitutes for clothing. We are threatened with paper shirts; and a determined effort is being made to produce from the same source a suitable substitute for cloth. One wonders what would be the effect of a very shower on these garments.

Underclothing made from surplus supplies of the fabric used in covering the planes of flying-machines has already been put on the market; and the experiment looks like aiming a serious blow at the laundries, since it is stated that this material, being less porous than that usually worn, requires far less washing!

Botha on England.

"G.F.B." in the New York Tribune has this to say: I have not seen in any of the New York papers General Botha's interview with Reuter's Agency. He speaks not as an Englishman, but as a one-time enemy of England. We have talked about and kidded ourselves for so long now as to what we did in the war that we are much like the fly that sat upon the axle of a chariot wheel and said, "What a dust I do make." This is what Botha told the British: "I carry away with me also the conviction that of all the peoples in the Alliance the peoples of the British Empire have played a greater part than any other." Also: "This war was in my judgment primarily a French war. It was not a British war essentially. Nevertheless the British people made the war their own and so saved not only the French but civilization itself. Again: "The part played by Britain from the day war was declared until this hour is one that places her first among the nations of the earth. First in war and first in peace, we owe primarily to thank for the overthrow of Prussianism and the saving of the world, and she has come out of the terrible ordeal or sacrifice which she has suffered, with her prestige higher than ever it has been. As Britain led war, so she has led peace, and we look to her to secure its just fulfillment." And finally: "Which is the corner stone upon which our civilization must rest? This we hear from England's one time enemy.

of the public trust reposed in him he will be unamenable to any influences other than the consideration of the welfare of this country; and that if there are any evils in our body politic that he will honestly set to work to correct them. While he follows that path, I pledge him my undivided support. The day that he knowingly transgresses the principles which should ground true Government, that day I sever my connection with him. But knowing him as I do, I am of opinion that that day will never dawn. It is well, gentlemen, that we should thoroughly understand one another at the outset; and that you should thus know the principles upon which I entered public life and joined my present leader. Pending the publication of the Manifesto, it would be improper to comment on the policy the Government proposes to undertake—the consideration of that phase of the situation will come later. But a word as to the campaign may not be amiss. My ideas on a campaign are analogous to my ideas on politics generally, and that is that I am determined to finish as I began—with clean hands. Politics means nothing to me, if it is not clean politics; a campaign means nothing to me if it is not a clean campaign. I have too much at stake, I value my reputation too highly, and set too much store by my own self-respect and confidence of my friends to play a crooked game. Remember that "thrice is armed that hath his quarrel just," and if for no other reason the worthiness of our principles, the purity of our desires and the soundness, should disentitle us to use any but the fairest methods in the fight we are undertaking. But there are weightier reasons than those why we should inaugurate and carry through a clean campaign, and these are: the premier place this district occupies in the political world of Newfoundland and the effect its example may have on the other constituencies; the deference that we should pay to the intelligence of our electorate so that nought but the fairest arguments be placed before them; the recollection that we are walking in the footsteps of men whose memories we cherish and whose good deeds we seek to emulate; and lastly the duty we owe ourselves and our own innate feelings of decency and fair play to see that the standard we have set up is not lowered. We will fight hard, as hard as good men can fight; but when the struggle is over we want to be able with a clear conscience to grip our opponents by the hand, and whether we have won or lost, to say, "it is finished, and we played a gentleman's game." My learned colleagues have pointed out the necessity of advocating the straight-ticket vote. I endorse all that they have said. It is well to remember that every vote split is a vote lost—and every vote counts. My colleagues and I have no ambitious ideas about the result of the poll, except that all three be elected. We are in the fight shoulder to shoulder, and we respectfully say to the electorate that "no one on the team desires a vote that the other two cannot get; vote the straight-ticket or please do not vote at all." On this basis of equality are we in this campaign. I did not intend to speak to this length. If I have wearied you, I apologise. Allow me to renew my thanks for your nominating me and for your generous offer of co-operation and support. May I urge upon you the necessity of sparing no effort to make victory complete; and in the words of Mr. Higgins, assure you "that your endeavors will find their counterpart in the endeavors of the members of the Liberal-Progressive team for St. John's East."

A call from the audience for Sir Michael Cashin to speak, who is a voter in the East End, met with a spontaneous outburst of cheering and clapping, and never was a public man accorded such a reception in St. John's East. The applause lasted for several minutes, and when it subsided the Premier, in calm and measured terms, delivered a practical and common-sense address of more than half an hour's duration. He explained his position as Premier, which he said was brought about through no seeking of his own, but through political circumstances over which he had no control. His joining up with the Coaker forces in the National Government was in the interests of the Empire and the Colony, but when treachery was scented and a trap laid to get Supply and Ways and Means through the House, and then knife the men of the People's Party, who had played an honest and sincere part, there was nothing left but to break clear. The intention of the Coaker Party was—once Supply was through to prorogue the House and carry on the Government with a minority of members, and do what they liked. When this was frustrated, as senior member of the House, following the vote of want of confidence in the Lloyd Ministry, he was called upon to form a Government, and succeeded. What his Government had done since was on record, and he was not ashamed of it. After covering these matters he dealt at length with the attempt of Coaker to stampede the fishermen over the fixing of a price of fish, to be guaranteed by the Government. After reading extensively from the Coaker organ, Sir Michael set forth the facts of the Coaker trick as follows: Some little time ago Coaker wired him from Port Union that something should be done to protect the interests of the fish shippers, and that a standard price should be fixed by the Government for fish. In reply he had wired Coaker to come on to St. John's, meet the fish shippers of St. John's, and that the Government would discuss the matter with them in the Board of Trade Rooms. Coaker came to St. John's, and telephoned Sir Michael, who then made the same offer, with the proviso that if the matter could not be discussed at the Board of Trade Rooms with the fish shippers, to come to the Colonial Secretary's offices, where it would be taken up by the Government. Since then he had heard nothing of Mr. Coaker. In any case, said the Premier, to fix a price for fish by the Government is absurd. Last year Coaker appealed to the Government to fix the price at $12.00, and as all knew even Labrador fish sold for as high as $16.00 a quintal. Had the Government fixed the price as asked for by Coaker, the fishermen would be fished out of $4.00 a quintal and this enormous profit would have been added to the already large one the fish buyers had made. Coaker's idea of the Government guaranteeing a price for fish was to enable himself and others to buy promiscuously at $12.00 a quintal, then ship as they like at any price and come back to the Government and get the difference, and fill their own coffers at the expense of the revenue of the Colony and the detriment of the poor taxpayer. Such outrageous attempts to grab the revenues of the country were unique, said Sir Michael, but you voters better be careful, or some fine day you will be waking up with the public funds devoted to private sources, and probably your savings too. In the short space available to-day, full justice cannot be done the Premier's speech in this connection, and attention is drawn to the Escasoni exposure which appears in another column. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem, at 11 o'clock.

Laughing at Death.

(From the Hartford Courant.)
Maine newspapers tell of a resident of Lewiston, in that state, who, on Tuesday last, while eating from a violent thirst, drank a quart of spirits of nitre, and a pint of Jamaica ginger. Several things occurred immediately thereafter, but the death of the Lewiston man was not one of these things. He became very ill, and his skin turned green, but he recovered, and is now in condition to continue his experiments with drugs. The story suggests that physicians have not yet learned the possibilities of the human body, which they study so carefully, nor do they know what strange things it may accustom itself to, but they may realize that if the Lewiston man had spent six months in preparing for this internal bath of nitre and alcohol he might have swallowed a larger quantity without great inconvenience. Given due notice as to what is expected of it, the human interior will adapt itself to many drugs which, if introduced to it suddenly, prove fatal. We may assume that man learned to use opium to excess shortly after he discovered that a bitter gum oozed from the stalk of the poppy, and since then he has taken other liberties with his table of contents and has been not much the worse for it. Nicotine is a poison by all the rules of toxicology, but many a man thoroughly enjoys this form of poison. Arsenic is lethal, yet there are arsenic eaters. A few acids, sulphuric, nitric, muriatic and carbolic, are as yet not classed among the habit-forming drugs, and the man who swallows even a small quantity of any one of these will not call for more in this world, but there are many poisons to which man may render himself indifferent. There may be scientists who study this subject, but they have not covered the field as yet.

AMERICAN.

AGAINST RAILROAD ADVERTISING

Billboard and roadside advertising has been under criticism for many years. The weight of adverse criticism has increased and many advertisers have taken note of the trend of popular opinion, while public authorities and all persons interested in the sightliness of highways and the preservation of scenery have taken their stand against these forms of advertising. In Pennsylvania the state highway department is reported to have issued a general order to all of the country road superintendents directing that more than 10,000 miles of State roads "be stripped of advertising signs of every description."—Washington Star.

HIS IMMEDIATE WORRY.

It has been estimated by a British statistician that the British coal supply will give out in about 900 years, the German supply in about 1,400 years and America's store of fuel in about 2,000 years. But that doesn't worry the property owner whose bins are empty and who has just read of a coal shortage threatening us this winter.—New York Sun.

TOO MUCH STATE INTERVENTION.

We do not contend that modern conditions do not require a greater degree of state intervention than was necessary when the nation was young. But there is reason to believe that without realizing the consequences the American people are coming more and more to surrender their individual independence and lean on the State. Nowadays the American, instead of thinking what he can do for himself, thinks first of how he can get the State to do something for him. Consciously or not his ideal of the State that it should be a benevolent despot.—Chicago Tribune.

NO MILITARISM FOR AMERICA.

Every American who thinks anything about the future of his country should fight the plan of Secretary Baker to create a standing army of nearly 600,000 men. We cannot see the need for it if we are to return to

QUESTIONS TO BE ANSWERED.

We are importing more than we are exporting, consuming more than we are producing, buying more than we can pay for out of income; and this is what is damaging our credit. It brings us back to the old, old point; we must produce more, or consume less, or both. That is to say, there is no alternative but that we must all work very much harder, or accept the fact that, no matter what wages we receive, we must become very much poorer. But who is to begin working harder? Who is to induce the working man to put more energy into his daily job? Will he do it from patriotism alone, or is his patriotism soured by the over-prosperity of the rich? Will he sacrifice himself by working harder than he is compelled to do until the employer has made as full a sacrifice? Who has the most interest in restoring the credit of the country? These are the questions which capitalists as well as workers have got to face, or shall get no solution of this problem, or to get more work done till we are ingman is given a material inducement or is persuaded that there is an equality of sacrifice.—London Daily Chronicle.

SEES NEED FOR PROTECTION.

If we allow our market to be flooded with foreign wares, or if we refuse to give our manufacturers any guarantee that this will not happen in the near future, our manufacturers cannot possibly flourish. Moreover the free importation of foreign goods will still further reduce our exchange and so increase the price of foodstuffs and raw materials imported. Therefore, from every point of view some permanent policy of protection is necessary. That the Government sees this necessity we can hardly doubt; whether or not they will face it is another question.—London Morning Post.

MERELY MARKING TIME.

Instead of gaining in the fight against phthisis, we are steadily losing ground. It is time we thought clearly on this matter. Consumption takes an appalling toll of our people. Medicine is united in asserting that by segregation of the sick it would be banished as certainly as leprosy. It is not likely that compulsory segregation, however carefully qualified by amenities, would be accepted in the present state of public opinion. But if there was accommodation even for those who realize the danger to themselves and their families of continuing their normal life, and who are willing and eager to take treatment, an enormous advance would be made. At present a small proportion of consumptives are given a brief sanatorium course and then sent home to make room for others. That course is adopted both with the fatal cause and with the slightly improved, with the result that both tend to infect those around them on their return. It is useless to pretend that we are dealing with consumption while this is the practice. No immediate remedy is possible, for no adequate accommodation can be got; but better even army huts than nothing as sanatoria. Something, too, may be done by the formation of village communities for the phthisical, devoted not to agriculture, which is an over-strenuous and even dangerous life for many town consumptives, but to light manual trades. We cannot, perhaps, hope for much real progress on these lines, but unless every effort is made even to mark time in the present emergency we shall awaken some day soon to find that we have lost ground in handling phthisis to an extent that will reduce the sanatorium provisions of the Health Insurance Act to a bitter farce.—Manchester Guardian.

CANADIAN.

A GROWTH IN STATUS.

Canada's new dignity and authority as a national unit in the Empire should be reflected always in her official representation overseas. The people of Great Britain realize Canada's growth out of the colony status, and they are prepared to appreciate the flower of Canadian culture and experience as the voice of the Dominion in the Mother Country. This testimony came from Mr. Percy Hurd, M. P., of London, in the course of a thoughtful address before the Canadian Club of Montreal this week. Canada's official representation at London has not always received the careful regard it deserves. The post has been considered sometimes as a convenience for political or partisan designs. It is more than that, as Mr. Hurd aptly points out. Its importance is above any but national considerations. In Great Britain to-day Canada's voice is heard and heeded, and the best interest of the Dominion can be served only by standardizing the London representation at a level to be consistently worthy of the country and the opportunity. A great part of the world looks on Canada through the London window. It is a matter of national concern that the Dominion appears always at her best. This cannot be left to good fortune, as in the past, because it is a first charge upon the intellectual resources of our people.—Montreal Star.

A Great Man Gone.

(From the Westminster Gazette.) The news of the sudden death of General Botha will come as a pang to the whole Empire. There are few men in the world whose death could leave such a gap, or create such obvious difficulties for those who have to take up the work which he leaves unfinished. General Botha was not only a great soldier in his own manner of fighting; he was a great statesman and a most powerful reconciling force in the Empire. His personal story was one of the romances of our history. Less than twenty years ago in arms against ourselves, he became by the force of circumstances and by his own genius the means of developing a great and loyal Colony, whose constancy has been tried by the strongest tests. We can scarcely estimate to-day how much we owe to the man who at the close of the Boer war accepted the consequences in so fine a spirit, and listed his own fortunes and the fortunes of the people he had led so bravely with those of the British Empire. Of General Botha we may say that, once having set his seal to the peace, he grasped the possibilities for South Africa which it opened up. He never allowed himself a regret, but set himself to the uniting of the peoples of South Africa, and the building up there of a noble and proud colony. His qualities were tested in the war by rebellion at home as well as by the expeditions which conquered the African colonies of Germany. In every aspect of the struggle he bore himself like the great man he was. To-day we can but console ourselves that, before his death he had laid deep and strong foundations upon which will be built the nobler African Empire of the future.

Do You Seek Better Tyres?

The thing you want most in a tyre is the thing The Goodyear Tyre & Rubber Companies try hardest to put there.

That is great mileage at small cost. The Goodyear Tyre & Rubber Companies do put it there, and make sure of it by guarding every step of manufacture with jealous care.

To start properly, The Goodyear Tyre & Rubber Companies own and operate their own rubber plantation in the East Indies, their own cotton plantation, and their own cotton mills.

To continue properly, The Goodyear Tyre & Rubber Companies insist that other materials they use shall conform to the same high Goodyear standard.

And they pursue in the same critical spirit every one of the processes of tyre-building—they watch and weigh, test and try, up to the moment of wheeling the completed product into the stockroom.

By fitting Goodyear's to your car, you will, we feel certain, enjoy better tyre service than ever before.

GOOD YEAR

The Creed We Learned in France.

(By a Soldier.)

A great many people, correspondents, investigators and others trained in the observation of humanity in bulk, have returned from Europe in the past year with various ideas, many of them strange and curious, as to just what we who served on the battlefields of France got out of the war in the way of religion.

Personally I don't believe that the soldier, as a unit, got religion as it is generally construed at all—that is, he did not "hit the savdust trail," nor did he publicly proclaim his redemption from the paths of sin in the good old camp-meeting style.

No man, however, could possibly have gone through that seething caldron "Over There" without acquiring something. However, to me it seemed that this something was a larger and broader Christianity—a sort of Brotherhood whose one and perhaps only law was the Golden Rule.

Creeds and doctrines were for the most part forgotten on the field. Protestant, Jew and Catholic lived or died side by side with no thought save of serving each as best he might, not only God and country, but also his fellow man. Under fire at the front they were united against one common foe. In the rear when danger was passed this same unity continued, but against many foes—against selfishness, blasphemy, drunkenness, social evils, and the like.

Men learned that to be a soldier in the true sense of the word it was not necessary to be a loud-swearing, licentious braggart, the embodiment of all un-Christianlike qualities; and a new standard was born on those fields of death and suffering. The man who had seen his companions fall, who had come near to the supreme sacrifice himself, was imbued with a different sort of spirit than that which has usually and unfortunately been attributed to the soldier.

Orders and regulations for our government were many, their enforcement was necessarily strict; and prompt punishment awaited the delinquent. No less prompt and infinitely more sure was the punishment afforded him who violated the higher order—the greatest command ever imposed upon man—"Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, even so do ye unto them."

The army held men of every nationality—of all races and tongues; many had probably never even heard or read this wonderful command, but evidences of its power and influence were everywhere. The deeds of personal heroism which were daily and oftentimes almost hourly occurrences—things such as the many rescues of wounded comrades in the face of deadly machine gun fire—all were but the expressions of belief in the universal doctrine proclaiming "man's brotherhood to man;" and, being such, were of much greater value to the illiterate and unlearned than any printed or spoken word.

For weeks at a time our only opportunity for open worship was at the burial service of some fallen comrade. The chaplains could but seldom assemble more than a score of men together for divine services, and under such conditions, it would seem but natural that, when the scattered units of a regiment were assembled, the response to "church call" would be meager. This was not the case, however. All who were not actually on guard or at work unflinchingly attended service. Those who at home in their comfortable, well-heated homes, with roofs over their heads and four walls to protect them from the elements, who on a showery Sabbath felt no desire and no sense of duty to attend their church, now stood reverently in the open shell-forn fields, more often than not in a never ceasing, cold drizzling rain, and found no discomfort too great, no hardship too difficult, to endure, that they might give thanks to Him who had guided them safely through the "valley of the shadow of death."

The public assemblage for worship with its attendant ritual was not so necessary for us: for each man day by day was living a Christian life in the finest sense of the word in that he was heedless of any danger, indifferent to any hardship or risk in the service of his fellow man. Even as we had a unity of command, so had we a unity of creed and race, each merged into the one, and that one pledged to God, country and true Christian brotherhood.

As our most famous chaplain once remarked, "There was scarcely any time for praying, what with dodging shells and reading one's shirt." But such time as there was for prayer was utilized by a far larger number of men than the casual observer realized; nor was there any self-consciousness such as we are all familiar with at home.

Contrary to many of our popular novelists, men did not drop down on their knees under fire and in times of great danger and pray to their Maker for relief and guidance; but a vast majority did sincerely, though silently, commune with God each night of their lives, commending themselves to Him and asking protection and strength.

Somehow the Church will reach these men—they have returned as earnest seekers for Truth—they have a real need—a real desire to learn—to know. But they will not accept a more narrow doctrine—a more conventional dogmatic religion, than they learned "Over There"—whose creed is the Golden Rule.

Why He Didn't Know.

Visitors to the Canadian War Memorials at the Toronto Exhibition on September 1, were electrified to see a stout woman turn suddenly upon a veteran, who was making his way slowly through the crowd at her side, and smite him violently upon the chest with her clenched fist, at the same time addressing him in language as vigorous and violent as her blow.

"Get out of my way, you big hummer! Ain't you got any place to stand but on my feet?" This, and much more, she said. The veteran staggered back as far as the crowd would permit, and eyed her with a look of utter bewilderment. Then suddenly he grinned. "I beg your pardon, lady," he said. "I didn't know I was standing on your foot. You see, I have an artificial leg."

Norman Oakes Says He Wasted Time and Money

Tanlac Did For Him What Health Resorts and Special Treatments Failed to do.

"During the past fifteen years I have been under treatment of some of the best specialists in this country, and have been to health resorts both in this country and the United States, but I never got any relief from my suffering until I commenced taking Tanlac," said Norman Oakes, a well-known employee of the John-Manville Co., who lives at 17 Morris Street, Halifax, the other day.

"I had the very best treatment money could buy," continued Mr. Oakes, "and spent hundreds of dollars going to mineral springs in different parts of the country, and it was just time and money thrown away, for I got no benefit whatever from any of it. I had a bad case of stomach trouble, and from the time this trouble first started fifteen years ago, my condition gradually grew worse. What I ate would sour on my stomach and cause gas to form so bad that I would be perfectly miserable for hours afterwards. Then, too, I often had the worst cramping of the stomach I ever heard of, and in fact I finally got to where I had a kind of an aching pain in my stomach nearly all the time. I didn't sleep much, either. Many nights I would hardly close my eyes, but would walk the floor until daylight. Very often I would have to lose several weeks at a time from my work, and I finally got in such a bad condition that I was hardly able to get about."

"Then I gave up my position of traveling, and came back to Halifax, and that was when I became interested in Tanlac. The thing that impressed me most about this medicine was the sincere and earnest statements that were being made about it by good people who lived right here in Halifax, and some of them I knew personally. I concluded that if so many were giving such strong endorsements of Tanlac that there must be something to it, so I commenced taking it. Well, as I said a while ago, it is the first, and only medicine that has done me any good at all, and since taking three or four bottles of it my troubles have disappeared, and I am as well and strong as I ever was in my life. I couldn't ask for a better appetite than I have now, and everything I eat agrees with me perfectly. I don't have a sign of stomach trouble of any kind, and just feel fine all the time. I have gained twelve pounds already, and am able to do as much hard work in a day as I ever did. To sum the whole matter up, Tanlac has done for me in a short time, what all the other medicines and treatments I took during all those years, failed to do, and a medicine that will do that for a man is just simply worth its weight in gold."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac Representative.

Jack Tar's Hardest Job.

Getting a commission in the Navy.

Compared with the vast personnel of officers in the Navy, the ranks of "Mates" to give them their official designation form but a very small band of brothers, for commissions are not easily won.

A candidate for a commission from the lower deck must of necessity be a thoroughly competent warrant or petty officer, not under twenty-five years of age, he must present an unimpeachable history certificate together with a strong recommendation from the captain of his present or last sea-going ship. Then the grind commences.

After emerging successfully through the educational test, an examination board is appointed where our friend is required to ably demonstrate before three or more examining officers that he has nothing or little to learn from them in the arts and wiles of seamanship in all its phases.

The Most Trying Ordeal.

This part over, the candidate has yet another ordeal to face, i.e., the Selection Board, consisting of a number of captains and commanders who decide upon the social fitness of the aspirants for commissioned rank.

It is indeed no easy task for a man to stand before a dazzling array of gold lace and deal successfully with the varied and searching questions put to him, history, literature, current topics, politics, and otherwise, are usually touched upon, besides hosts of other subjects, in order to ascertain the candidate's suitability to become a mess-mate of educated men.

Finally, the Admiralty make a selection from the list of successful entrants and in due course a number are promoted to the rank of Mate; they are then sent to the gunnery, torpedo and navigation schools for courses of study before going to sea; after spending three years in this capacity, their promotion to Lieutenant is gazetted, and from thence onwards their status and prospects are in every way identical with their blue-blooded brothers.

So when you see a young man resplendent in the blue and gold rig of a sub-lieut., but of rather more matured and graver features than the bay wh who entered the service via Dartmouth or Osborne College, just give him a quiet cheer in your mind, for he's worth it.

THE OTHER SHORE.

In that happy land we're nearing there's no graft or profiteering, you might raze the country over and you'd find no sign of war; and it seems to me surprising, yet the fact there's no disguising, that it's hard to find a fellow who is in a rush to go. When we've crossed the silent river, where no sunbeams ever glisten, if we have a goodly record we shall never know a tear; yet our hearts are bowed and grieving when we find it's time for leaving this old punk abandoned planet, this cheap, beastly, sinful sphere. Here we've fought our little battles, here we have our goods and chattels, here we've planted vines and figtrees, and we hate to leave them all; here we have our daily labors, here we know our next door neighbors, and it's bitter hard to leave them, even though the angels call. I believe in all the stories of elysian joys and glories, and I hope such goods to sample when I cross the Jordan wave; my sad life is full of worry, but I'm really in no hurry to approach the gates of jasper by a short cut through the grave. This old world's a tinhorn fizzle and our tears forever drizzle, and our groans are ever rising as we toil along the road; but, although I loathe and hate it, and with third class gold bricks rate it, I am in no shameful hurry to acquire a new abode.

Right of Press to Criticize Public Officials Sustained.

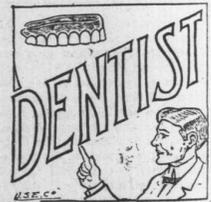

In the action for libel brought by ex-Congressman William S. Bennett against the Commercial Advertiser Association, publisher of the New York Globe, Justice Greenbaum of the Supreme Court rendered a decision in favor of the defendant which is of great importance to newspaper publishers.

In effect it sets forth that the press not only has the right but that it is the duty of newspapers to criticize public officials as to their fitness for office, or as to their conduct while in office. No libel can be established unless the charge of illegal conduct in office, or prior to taking office, is made when no such illegality of action occurred.

In citing this phase of the situation the jurist said: "It must be borne in mind that these comments or criticisms deal exclusively with the plaintiff's public official acts. Accusations against a public officer, whether they be specific or general, are not libelous, perse, when they are solely based upon official acts which he may lawfully do. There is abundant authority for this proposition."

Another striking and significant point brought out by the court appears in the following paragraph: "The value and force of a representative democratic government would be most seriously impaired if its officials, who are merely the servants of the people, may not be freely criticized concerning their official acts by those who indirectly employ them. The comment at times may be unwarranted, extreme or unjust, but if they be limited to acts which do not involve illegal action or criminality they are permissible comments." —Typesetting Journal.

Gower Street Scouts.

Fifty-three Scouts of the Gower St. Troop were present at the roll-call for the first drill in the C. L. B. Armoury last evening, making sixty in all with visitors from Cochrane St. and Wesley Troops. Patrols with every member present were the Bulldogs and Eagles. One only was absent from the following patrols: Lions, Beavers, Peacocks, Otters, and Hawks. Seven candidates were received, and two tenderfeet were sworn in. The programme for the evening consisted of squad drill and setting-up drill by Assistant Scoutmaster Francis and Signaller's drill by Assistant Scoutmaster Duncan. An exciting club-race wound up the evening's events, the troop being dismissed at nine sharp. These hours will be strictly adhered to, opening at 7.30 and closing at 9. A hike was announced for next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, also the programme for the regular meeting of the Troop next Wednesday, part of which will be drill with staves, every Scout to bring his staff. The fifteen best signallers will also be supplied with signal-flags for their drill next week. At the heating for the organization of the Wolf Cubs last Tuesday 23 boys from 9 to 11 years handed in their applications. Another meeting will be held next Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Gower St. Church basement, and if twenty-five boys are present a Wolf Cub Pack will be formed. The meetings of the Juniors will be held on Tuesday afternoons. They will not be admitted to the armoury in the evening. The first drill in the fine Armoury was a success, and the officers of the troop are grateful to the C. L. B. management for enabling the Scouts to use their building.

At the Majestic.

The first appearance of Sessue Hayakawa, the great Japanese actor, on the Majestic screen was hailed with delight by the patrons at last evening's show. He appeared in the masterpiece, "The White Man's Law," and from start to finish held the interest of everyone in the hall. In this picture Hayakawa takes the part of an Arab chief who has just returned from England, where he has spent four years at Oxford. Meanwhile, an English profligate, coming to the same place, meets the affianced sweetheart of the Chief, and begins to trifle with her affections. The girl is at first infatuated and actually becomes engaged to him, ignoring her true lover. However, in time and as the story progresses, the Englishman is seen to be a base scoundrel and the first lover and his sweetheart are united. The profligate commits suicide. To-night Mr. Carl Trapnell will sing.

An Enjoyable Dance.

Last night Miss Ruby Ayre gave a dance to a number of her friends at the well known resort of Smithville. The Ballroom was tastefully decorated in helle and white. The C. C. C. band under Capt. Bully furnished the latest music, in waltzes, fox trots, etc. The dancing was graceful and highly enjoyed by all who participated. The dining hall was decorated by the Messrs. Furlong to harmonize with the ballroom. Dancing was kept up till an early hour this morning, and was fittingly concluded by singing Auld Lang Syne.

WHO WOULD SUFFER?

LONDON, Sept. 24. Early in the afternoon, Minister Geddes replied to the railwaymen's ultimatum declaring that the action of the men's executive was unjustifiable, and in order to meet their demands freight rates would have to be advanced, probably 50 per cent. He declared that the increased pay demand would mean an additional permanent expenditure by the railroad companies, amounting to forty-five million pounds annually, as compared with the pre-war expenditure.

RATIFICATION VOTE CALLED.

PARIS, Sept. 24. Clemenceau is expected to go before the Chamber of Deputies this afternoon, and call for a vote ratifying the peace treaty with Germany. The Premier's demand, according to a forecast would be made after he had addressed the Chamber on the Treaty. No meeting of the Supreme Council of the Peace Conference was held today in consequence of engagements of the French members.

BOLSHEVIKS TAKE TOMSK.

LONDON, Sept. 24. Bolsheviki wireless message, received to-day from Moscow, says that Red troops, commanded by General Zudkoff, are reported to have occupied Tomsk, three hundred miles east of Omsk the All-Russian seat of the Government on the trans Siberian line.

NINE POINTS OF THE LAW.

PARIS, Sept. 24. "As a nation we consider the Fiume issue settled, because we have possession," said General Giuseppe "Papicco" Garibaldi to an Associated Press Representative here this morning. Garibaldi had just reached Paris from Rome, coming on what was said to be an important mission from which he would go to meet Gabriel D'Annunzio, the insurgent Italian leader in possession of Fiume.

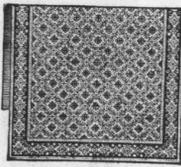

McMurdo's Store News.

THURSDAY, Sept. 25. Eye troubles are sometimes difficult to treat, but a slight eye trouble can often be cured before it becomes serious by the timely use of White Rose Eye Water, or by those who prefer on ointment, White Rose Eye Salve, which contains the same medicaments in a modified form. Either of these remedies may be used at the beginning of eye trouble with every expectation of immediate benefit and speedy cure. Price (Eye Water) 55c. a bottle; (Eye Salve) 20c. a box.

We would merely mention that the Mavis line of good—Perfume, Powder, and Talcum is attractive in every way, and its good reputation is likely to increase as time goes on. You should see these specialties.

FACTS YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT CONGOLEUM:

First, it is sanitary and easy to keep clean. There is no burlap in Congoleum, so water won't hurt it. A damp mop will keep the patterns clear and bright. Think of it! All you need is a damp mop.

Second, Congoleum is very durable. The surface is wear-resisting and absolutely sanitary. Then, too, it lies perfectly flat without any fastenings. No fastenings needed because the felt base has no tendency to curl or "kick up" at the edges.

We have sold a great many of those remnants to the housewives about town and have yet to hear a complaint.

MILLEY'S

Admiral Mayo's Story.

(From the Westminster Gazette.)
Admiral Mayo had a good story to tell at a friend's dinner table the other evening. "It's all very well to say that," he said, "but I know a case where a knowledge of it would have saved a man's life. The man was a German spy, disguised as a major of the Australian forces, he penetrated the Australian lines. His English was perfect, but not so his Australian slang. Australian slang, by the way, is the weirdest in the world. "Fair Dinkum" in that lingo means 'a real Australian.' Well, taken out and shot."

The German spy fraternized with the Australian officers, and all seemed to be going well when a blond giant gave him a searching look and said: "Say, look here, are you fair dinkum?" The German spy nodded, and smiled. "Yes," he said, "I am Ma-jor Fair Dinkum." Then he was these comments or criticisms exclusively with the plain official acts. Accusations of public officer, whether they are or general, are not libelous, when they are solely based on facts which he may lawfully do. There is abundant authority in support of this proposition.

striking and significant fact out by the court appears in the following paragraph:

Escasoni Trans- ation Exposed.

The Finance Minister Gives Particulars -- Coakers Demand for $1,225,000 Public Money -- Sir Michael Cashin Protects the People's Treasury.

One of the most glaring and dishonest attempts to take forcibly of the people's money from the treasury ever made in the history of this or any other country under the British flag, was exposed last night by Sir Michael Cashin at the Committee meeting of the East End Liberal-Progressive candidates. As usual the principal in the case was Coaker. The amount involved was $1,225,000, and the beneficiaries, if Sir Michael Cashin has sacrificed honor and honesty, were the shippers of a cargo of rotten fish sent on the S. S. Escasoni. When the story of the attempted hold-up was told to the 700 Committee men present, they were shocked. They simply held their breaths to think it was possible that any individual or number of individuals could even suggest such a thing, not say to carry it into operation. When Sir Michael explained the whole dishonest transaction, and how the gun was put up to his head, and how he defeated the designs of an unscrupulous clique, the hall simply shook with applause and cheering, and expressions of condemnation of the Coaker element, and of praise of the honest Michael Cashin could be heard on all sides. For the interest of the whole country, and particularly the voters, the story is told briefly by Sir Michael Cashin in given below. If any honest voter, who has the interests of his country at heart and a desire for clean government, can trust the Squire-Coaker combination after perusal of the exposure, then old Terra Nova is drifting fast into Bolshevism, and neither your hard earned savings, nor property nor the country's revenues are safe. Read what Sir Michael said in part:—

Last year a cargo of fish was shipped by the S. S. Escasoni for Europe. A number of fish buyers, including Mr. Coaker, were interested in the cargo, having agreed to make a joint shipment. In all, approximately 60,000 quintals of fish were on the ship. The fish was originally intended for disposal in Greece, but the quality of the article was found not fit for human consumption, according to the Greek buyers, and the shippers ordered the

he, was ever such an attempt made to get hold of the funds of the colony, the taxes that the fisherman and laborer had paid in duties on the food that he consumed and the clothing that he wore. The Opposition brings this exposure on themselves, continued Sir Michael, and the slogan that "The grafters must go," has been answered. They have gone and Terra Nova should be thankful. If the crew now seeking to gain control of public affairs by any misfortune should succeed, then I pity the poor honest fisherman and laborer and every other son of toil in Newfoundland. This hold-up that I have mentioned is only an illustration of what is likely to happen if Squires and Coaker get the handling of your finances."

Leslie Street Needs Attention.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Mr. Editor,—Will you kindly permit me space in the columns of the Evening Telegram to pass a few remarks re the condition of Leslie St. Now, Mr. Editor, here we could have one of the most beautiful Streets in the city, but seemingly we are a people, that have yet to learn the meaning of Beauty, therefore we cannot expect beautiful streets, but we do expect comfortable streets, and I may say, Leslie Street is anything but comfortable to pass over either on foot or by conveyance of any kind. I refer now to that portion from McKay St. up. It is one mass of large stones, which to walk over, resembles very much a beach. However, it only needs a good racking off, to make it comfortable to pass over, and now that the Municipal employees, are working in the vicinity of this street, it would only mean a few hours work for them to clean the whole street.

Those little things are the things that count, Mr. Mayor and Councilors, and it will only be folly to leave them until the eve of a Municipal election. Thanking you for space Mr. Editor, I remain,

Yours respectfully,
—A. P.

MAHONEY—BAKER.
A romance, which had its inception at Atlantic City on Labor Day, resulted in the marriage, Thursday afternoon, Sept. 11th, in Philadelphia, Pa., of Miss Mary F. Mahoney, of St. John's, Nfld., and J. J. Baker, of Pittsburgh, Pa., the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Fr. Marley, of St. John's Church, Philadelphia. The newly married couple came to this city, where they visited an aunt of the bride, who is a Sister at St. Joachim's Hospital. They are now on their way to the Adirondacks, where they will pass their honeymoon. The bride is a graduate of St. Mary's Hospital, Detroit, Mich., and for the last two years has been Superintendent of the Military Hospital at St. John's. Mr. Baker is in the construction business and is well known in that line around Pittsburgh, where he has been associated with the Koppers' Company for the last three years. They both were passing their vacations at Atlantic City when they met. Mr. and Mrs. Baker will make their home in Cleveland Ohio.

Irish Blood.

The Irish have faults, they have been criticized for their turbulence, and lack of coherence and stability in their efforts at government, but what America is not proud of the IRISH BLOOD THAT FLOWS IN HIS VEINS?

In fact the Irish appear to have performed greater feats abroad than at home. This letter may be due to internal conditions, or the lack of satisfactory home government. Certain it is that those of Irish blood, have played conspicuous parts in all civilized lands where the Irish have emigrated to and take foot.

Most Americans have some Irish blood in their veins and they never attempt to conceal the fact, rather do they blazon it abroad. They want it known that their ancestors came from the land where the harp of Erin, tunes its mellow notes, where the shamrock grows in wild profusion and where the age long fight for liberty is a part of the religion of the country. Where the grass grows greenest and the cheeks of the maidens glow brightest, where wit is proverbial and eloquence reaches its highest perfection.

In truth Ireland is a great country and its people are a great people and whatever the reasons for it, it is a pity that such a land and such a people have not been able to accomplish those great results that the resources of the country and the talents of the people entitle them to.

Irish soldiers are proverbial for their courage and resourcefulness, Irish statesmen are noted for their ability and magnetic personality, and Irish merchants are noted for their thrift and ingenuity—yet the country has not prospered on account of political divisions. It is highly regrettable that these conditions seem impossible of adjustment. There ought to be some way for the relations between England and Ireland to be harmonized, that there is a way if it can just be found. If the United States government was not so overwhelmed with problems of its own it might act as mediator and possibly find the way.
—Rome, Ga., Tribune-Herald.

Scotland "Has Her Freedom."

In view of the fact that the United States Foreign Relations Committee has received a plea for self-determination for Scotland, a telegram asserting that "Scotland does not require to appeal for self-determination; she has it," has been sent to Senator Lodge, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, from the office of Thos. R. Gibb, Royal Secretary of the Order of Scottish Clans. It was signed by A. G. Finlay of Portland, Orc., Royal Chief, and the other officers of the Royal Clan, comprising the Royal Executive Council. The telegram expressed the conviction of the Council that pleas for self-determination for Scotland, which have been presented to the Foreign Relations Committee, "do not represent the sentiment of the great majority of the Scottish people either at home or abroad."

The Famous Pastoral.

(From Cardinal Mercier's 1914 Message.)
"God will save Belgium, my brethren; you cannot doubt it.
"Nay, rather, He is saving her."
"At once we were conscious of our own patriotism. For down within us all is something deeper than personal interests, than personal kinships, than party feeling, and this is the need and the will to devote ourselves to that more general interest which Rome termed the public thing, Res Publica. And this profound will within us is patriotism."
"I do not require of you to renounce any of your national desires. On the contrary, I hold it as part of my episcopal office to instruct you as to your duty in face of the power that has invaded our soil and now occupies the greater part of our country. The authority of that power is no lawful authority. Therefore, in soul or conscience you owe it neither respect nor attachment nor obedience."
"The sole lawful authority in Belgium is that of our King, of our government, of the elected representatives of the nation. This authority alone has a right to our affection, our submission."
"Thus, the invader's acts of public administrations have in themselves no authority, but legitimate authority has tacitly ratified such of those acts as affect the general interest, and this ratification, and this only, gives them juridic value."

Saved From Death By a Miracle.

Saved by a miracle was the experience of William Gengross, a workman at the ferry dock at Winsor, on Aug. 29, when a sixteen-hundred-pound iron weight became detached from its support at the top of a pile-driver and started to slide down the grooved ways. Gengross, an experienced workman, stood squarely beneath the great mass of iron, wholly unconscious of danger, when a shout from the other men caused him to look up. There was not an instant's time in which to jump, and those who saw the man's danger involuntarily turned their heads away, expecting he would be crushed. Then the miracle occurred. A loop of chain that hung from one of the wooden uprights was caught by a vagrant gust of wind and swung between the uprights at the very instant the ton of iron dropped. The weight caught squarely in the loop and its momentum was checked so that although Gengross was struck as it reached the bottom, his injuries were not serious.

Orphans Feted on "Briton."

Boys and Girls of C. of E. Orphanage Entertained on Board H. M. Train Ingalph Briton by Commander Fenn and Sailor Boys—Children of Other Orphanages to Receive Similar Treat—Commander Fenn's Generosity Greatly Appreciated.

Through the laudable generosity of Commander Fenn, of H.M. Training Ship Briton, the young boys and girls of the Church of England Orphanage were entertained on board the old ship yesterday afternoon, and enjoyed themselves in a manner that will preclude their ever forgetting the event as long as all of them live.

Being driven to the ship by motor bus, the little ones were met at the door, (over which a sign of welcome had been painted) by the officers and men of the station, and immediately began to enjoy themselves without let or hindrance. The sailor boys went out of their way in their endeavours to make the children happy, and soon there sprang up an impromptu friendship between the men and the children, and they could be seen going round the enclosed ship arm in arm.

Many means of amusement had been arranged beforehand, and the orphans could have long runs on a suspended cable, to which was attached a chair, hung on a wheel which, when pushed, sent the chair and occupant spinning through the air to the other end, a distance of about eighty feet or more. There was a boxing match between the children, a ring having been put up, while many other side-shows were in evidence. Grabs for coins that were in the water charged with electricity could be made, and there was always a crowd around the pan of water. Music was supplied by a big Victrola. After tea, which came at five o'clock, a tug of war between the boys and girls was contested, the girls winning after a very strenuous struggle in which the sailors cheered (and sometimes gave the rope a sly hand) for the girls. The crowning act of the day was a ventriloquist display by Mr. Joseph Wheeler, of Reid's Electrical Dept., which kept all in roars of laughter. During the afternoon Lady Harris came aboard for a short while and was shown throughout the ship by the Commander.

It is the intention of Commander Fenn to extend the same treat to the children of the other orphanages and the practice will likely run through the winter. Nobody is more grateful to him and his officers than the children, who will remember them always with pleasant memories.

The Commander of the Briton has proven himself, in the short time he has been here, to be the most popular one aboard the Briton, and sailors and officers alike hold him in much esteem.

The Relief of Lucknow.

Perhaps one of the darkest pages in the history of the British Empire is contributed by the Indian Mutiny when our greatest and wealthiest possession was torn asunder by a huge revolt which was only quelled after desperate fighting and considerable bloodshed. It was not so much the life amongst our soldiers that makes the Mutiny such a sorrowful episode, for constant fighting in every corner of the globe has, more or less, inured us to heavy casualties; but it is the awful atrocities perpetrated by the savage mutineers on defenceless men and women and children that remains indelibly fixed in our memory. From the beginning of May, 1857, when the smouldering fires of rebellion burst into flame, the whole mutiny is one long, sad story of murder, rapine and treachery—officers shot in the back by their Sepoys on parade, civilians foully murdered in cold blood, and defenceless women and children outraged and butchered by men whom hatred had turned into wild beasts. What wonder, therefore, that the British soldiers, rendered furious by these atrocities, fought with a desperation never before or since equalled in any campaign. They had seen the corpses of women and children lying mutilated in the blazing sun mutely calling for vengeance, and it was with a feeling of revenge in their hearts that the white troops proceeded to quell the mutiny. Many of the officers and men had lost all they cared for in this world—their wives and infants—having been cruelly slaughtered—and these men fought as only fanatics fight. They were only too glad to throw away their lives on the battlefield provided they could account for one or more of the murderers before they died. In every town and station where there was troops, desperate fighting took place. At Cawnpore the English were hopelessly outnumbered, and were forced to capitulate to the notorious Nana Sahib, who having given his word that all lives would be spared treacherously slaughtered the women and children. To the lasting glory of the British officer and soldier, never was their bravery, coolness, and resource more magnificently displayed than during these terrible times, fighting against overwhelming odds, and holding out until relief came. After months of fighting the help so much needed came at last, and the British marched in great numbers on Lucknow, on September 25, 1857, and with the relief of Lucknow the terrible mutiny was quelled.
