Better a Peasant Than a Peer.

CHAPTER III.
But Mrs. Brown, warned by the absent look on her lodger's face that he is not listening, stops short, removes an imaginary speck of dust from the sideboard, and makes good her exit, fully convinced that her mysterious lodger is a struggling artist, who has come to Newton Regis in search of pupils.

Left to himself, the mysterious individual draws his chair nearer to the fire, and relights his pipe, totally neglecting the roasting muffins which Mrs. Brown has provided, and, staring at the glowing coals, smokes for some time moodily; then he gets up, and, dragging a portfolio from a corner, sits it, and slowly turns over a number of sketches. Presently he comes to a rough, but masterly sketch of a woman's head. This he takes out, and, propping it on the table, looks fixedly at it, his hands thrust into his pockets.

It is worth looking at, for it is the portrait of a woman of rare beauty—face almost perfectly oval, with the sweep of eyes, and the most golden of lids hair.

He looks at it long and fixedly; then he takes it up and slowly tears it across, and tosses it into the fire.

"So vanishes," he mutters, watching the fierce flames as they swallow up the paper. "The dream and the hope of a life. Let those prate of woman's love and woman's nobleness who may, my faith in them is as these ashes—vanished. Whatever folly may beguile and deceive me, that baneful will-o'-the-wisp, woman's love, is powerless henceforth to lead me astray. From this hour I stand impregnable and invulnerable—I have done with you."

And with a grim intensity he thrusts the ashes of the exquisite portrait into the depths of the consuming fire.

CHAPTER IV.
A GOOD SAMARITAN.

When Jeanne wakes next morning, King Frost rules supreme over Newton Regis; the casement windows are covered with a delicate filigree of ice; the roads are like iron, and the old chestnut tree, whose leaves brush her windows in summer time, is covered with white. The moment she is dressed, Jeanne drags a bonnet-box from the wardrobe, and disentsombed her skates, and view them with a vague blankness. For Jeanne speaks the simple truth when she hints at the anger which attended small articles at the Gate House. Mrs. Dostrell was an excellent woman, a genius at cookery, and amiable to a fault; but, like most geniuses when pushed, she was fertile in resources, and the most incongruous articles were made to do duty in sudden shifts.

So it continually came to pass that the dinner napkins were used as dust-covers, the hall chairs for impromptu ladders, portions of the best tea services for jam-pots, and Hal's skates had served to prop up the beer barrel. And if such unconsidered trifles escaped Aunt Dostrell, there was Uncle Dostrell to seize upon them as materials for his countless experiments.

Even now, as Jeanne runs down the stairs, there is a strong smell of fuming acids, mingling with the odor of the bacon and sausages, and Uncle Dostrell himself emerges from his laboratory with pieces of cotton-wool tangled in his buttons, and a shining mass of steel filings in his gray hair.

Uncle Dostrell's experiments never got any further than experiments, never produce anything more useful than a sulphurous smoke, and, unfortunately, are attended, like most chemical experiments, by atrocious smells.

"Well, Jeanne, my dear," he says, smiling through his dazed, preoccupied eyes. "Got your skates ready?—freezing, I suppose. Strange arrangement of straps. I've often wondered why they couldn't invent something simpler; if you'll let me have them after breakfast, I'll see if I can't fix a spring instead."

But Jeanne, made wary by experi-

ture; the thorn is gone, but the pain is left behind, and, with a wall, he falls back, and, holding up the leg, regards it dolefully.

"Why, you can't walk!" says Jeanne; "your poor foot's so swollen, isn't it? Well, never mind; I must carry you. Where do you live? Why, you are one of the Park dogs."

Master Terrier does not deny it, and whines for Jeanne to take him up, which she is about to do, when a man's voice, directly behind her, says:

"What is the matter?"

Jeanne starts—not so much at the unexpected sound of a human voice, but because she recognizes it, and turns her head.

Behind her, on the path, stands her victim of the preceding evening, his six feet looking gigantic on the path above, his dark eyes regarding her with grave amusement.

Either he does not recognize her or does not choose to exhibit such recognition, and Jeanne, with a wild hope of getting rid of him, says, quietly:

"Nothing, thank you; at least, it's a thorn in his foot."

"Mind how you handle him, then," says the quiet voice. "Dogs in pain bite sometimes."

"No, they don't—never, scarcely," retorts Jeanne, with quiet indignation. "I'm not afraid of him."

"All right," he says, coolly. "But hadn't you better let me take the thorn out?"

"I've taken it out," replied Jeanne, "but he can't walk."

"Let him try," says the stranger.

"He has, and he can't," says Jeanne, decisively. "His foot is quite swollen, poor fellow!"

The stranger jumps into the ditch, and bends down.

"It is swollen," he says. "Didn't you discover it at once?"

"No," says Jeanne. "It isn't my dog; I found him here; he was crying. I am going to carry him home."

The stranger looks at her skates and her muff, both lying on the path, and with great alacrity, says:

"Allow me to do so; you are already loaded, and he is no light weight for you."

"I can manage it," says Jeanne.

And she picks up the terrier and reaches for her skates; but when she has secured them, there is the muff, and by the time she has got that, one skate has fallen, the dog howls, and the stranger nods, as if he knew how it would be.

"I did not like to contradict you," he says, "but you see you can't carry him. Allow me."

Jeanne hesitates for a moment; then, with evident reluctance, motions to the skates.

"The dog's the heaviest," he remarks, quietly.

"I'll carry him," says Jeanne.

His bow, takes up the skates, and gives her his hand up the ditch.

to his feet with a bark of grateful entreaty, clings to her skates tenaciously, and laughs a "No, thank you, uncle! I know! you'll file them all away, and dissolve them, as you did the brooch you were going to regild."

"Tut, tut!" says the old gentleman, smiling. "You'll never appreciate science, Jeanne."

"Not while it devours everything that comes within its reach. But come along, uncle, don't go back, breakfast is ready. And oh, uncle, I want five shillings for Hal's new skates."

"Eh, certainly, my dear," says the old man, fumbling in his pockets promptly, but he brings out nothing in the shape of money, save a shilling and a half-penny, reposing among bits of quartz, and zinc, and copper, and Jeanne, laughing at his rueful face, drags him into the breakfast-room.

"Never mind, uncle, I'll get it out of aunt. Wait; let me pick these pieces of cotton off your coat—that's it; now come on," and the old man, keeping passive in the hands of the young girl, is led to his seat.

Aunt Dostrell is just as practical as her brother is theoretical, and is already serving out the ham and eggs with the air of a matron at the Foundling Hospital. She looks up sharply as Jeanne enters.

"I was just going to send up to you, Jeanne; I didn't expect to see you down. Your boots, Jane tells me, are wet through and through, and your shawl saturated with melted snow. Where did you go last night?—and Hal's boots are just the same."

Jeanne looks confused for a moment. Hal stares at his plate with an impatient grin struggling on his face. Jeanne has kept her mistake a profound secret even from Hal, has struggled to forget and wipe it from the tables of her own mind, but her heart beats apprehensively. Can the stranger have been mean enough to walk around and complain? The red flushes her face, then she puts on a bold front.

"The boots will dry, aunt. We were out in the snow yesterday afternoon. And, aunt, Hal wants five shillings for a pair of skates for the Park, you know."

"You can't buy skates in Newton Regis, Jeanne."

"Hal can walk over to Marly—"

"Hal will have to stay in this morning if he is going out this afternoon," says Aunt Dostrell, with mild firmness.

Hal looks the picture of despair, but Jeanne—generous Jeanne, half-boy at heart—comes to the rescue.

"Then I'll walk over, aunt," she says, and Aunt Dostrell, vanquished at all points, slowly and reluctantly produces two half-crowns while Hal nods gratefully across the table, and indulges in a quite, inoffensive dance on the tips of his toes.

Meals don't occupy much time at the Gate House. There is the remainder of the pig to be manipulated by Aunt Dostrell, and Uncle John is all anxiety to get back to his crucibles. Half-an-hour afterwards Jeanne is stepping briskly down the streets, her lithe figure clad in its serviceable blue serge, one streak of crimson across the skirt, her brown-gold hair rippling in its tight coils under her close little sealskin hat, her beautiful face bright and frank, her heart beating blithely under the influence of the crisp, frosty air.

Jeanne can walk blithely, and look frankly, for, as yet, she is in "maiden meditation fancy free." With Jeanne all is real as yet; she has not yet passed beyond the portals of the great temple of love. Love is to Jeanne as an unmeaning symbol of some deep mystery, of the very nature of which she is entirely ignorant. The library at the Gate House is small, and is absolutely deficient in works of imagination. Jeanne knows the few readable books by heart, but, although they have taught her something of the history of England, its language, and not a little of chemistry, they have taught her nothing of the divine passion, the absorbing element of a woman's life.

Jeanne and love have not, as yet, met, and the heart that beats so healthily and regularly within her bosom is that of a child, strong and fearless, true and noble, but a child's still. The greatest joy that Jeanne has yet experienced is a fair wind in the sails of the Nancy Bell, the blue sky above her, and the rushing water beneath the keel.

Jeanne is perfectly free from vanity. That she is beautiful no one has as yet told her, not even Mr. Bell, who worships her, but who would as soon dare to beard his bishop as to breathe a hint of his adoration to the frank, and sometimes pitilessly candid Jeanne. Poor Bell can only tremble in her presence, and lavish nervous, admiring and tender glances through his spectacles.

Newton Regis, generally, has not awakened to the fact that the girl who came among them a little, wee thing, is rapidly growing into a beautiful woman, and now, as she passes down the street, all who meet or see her give her a smiling greeting, some pausing on their way to look at her supple figure as it moves gracefully down the lane.

There is one ironmonger in Marly, who unearths from his extremely varied stock a pair of skates, which, luckily, are Hal's size, and with those on her arm and sundry other small purchases in her pocket, Jeanne turns toward home. There are not many young ladies who would venture a six miles' walk to join a skating party; but Jeanne's pedestrian powers are considerable, and Marly is half-way behind her when, just at the entrance to the wood through which runs the direct cut to Regis, she is brought to a halt by the low whine of a dog.

Between Jeanne and the animal creation is a sympathy vast and deep. That she has not a dog of her own is owing to the fact that no animal's life is worth a day's purchase at the Gate House, in consequence of the multifarious poisons, liquid and solid, which Uncle John leaves about the house and yard. Jeanne stops short and turns to the hedge instantly, and, guided by a long series of whines and suppressed howls, finds a small dog of the Manchester terrier breed lying in the frosty ditch by the wayside. At sight of Jeanne's pitying face, he, as is usual with his kind, falls over on his back, sticks his legs in the air and slowly wags his tail.

"Poor doggy!" says Jeanne, "what's the matter?"

The terrier weepingly explains in his own language, and Jeanne, who possibly understands him, quickly discovers that he has a thorn in his foot. Now a thorn in the foot is the one thing that utterly crushes a dog. No amount of licking will get rid of it, and, indeed, only makes matters worse. I think it was a thorn which Androcles extracted from the lion's foot. Like Androcles, Jeanne knows not fear. She goes down on her knees, tears off her gloves, and, deftly removes the cause of trouble. Master terrier watches the operation with intense anxiety and interest, and, on its conclusion, jumps into action, but his bark is too premature; the thorn is gone, but the pain is left behind, and, with a wall, he falls back, and, holding up the leg, regards it dolefully.

"Why, you can't walk!" says Jeanne; "your poor foot's so swollen, isn't it? Well, never mind; I must carry you. Where do you live? Why, you are one of the Park dogs."

Master Terrier does not deny it, and whines for Jeanne to take him up, which she is about to do, when a man's voice, directly behind her, says:

"What is the matter?"

Jeanne starts—not so much at the unexpected sound of a human voice, but because she recognizes it, and turns her head.

Behind her, on the path, stands her victim of the preceding evening, his six feet looking gigantic on the path above, his dark eyes regarding her with grave amusement.

Either he does not recognize her or does not choose to exhibit such recognition, and Jeanne, with a wild hope of getting rid of him, says, quietly:

"Nothing, thank you; at least, it's a thorn in his foot."

"Mind how you handle him, then," says the quiet voice. "Dogs in pain bite sometimes."

"No, they don't—never, scarcely," retorts Jeanne, with quiet indignation. "I'm not afraid of him."

"All right," he says, coolly. "But hadn't you better let me take the thorn out?"

"I've taken it out," replied Jeanne, "but he can't walk."

"Let him try," says the stranger.

"He has, and he can't," says Jeanne, decisively. "His foot is quite swollen, poor fellow!"

The stranger jumps into the ditch, and bends down.

"It is swollen," he says. "Didn't you discover it at once?"

"No," says Jeanne. "It isn't my dog; I found him here; he was crying. I am going to carry him home."

The stranger looks at her skates and her muff, both lying on the path, and with great alacrity, says:

"Allow me to do so; you are already loaded, and he is no light weight for you."

"I can manage it," says Jeanne.

And she picks up the terrier and reaches for her skates; but when she has secured them, there is the muff, and by the time she has got that, one skate has fallen, the dog howls, and the stranger nods, as if he knew how it would be.

"I did not like to contradict you," he says, "but you see you can't carry him. Allow me."

Jeanne hesitates for a moment; then, with evident reluctance, motions to the skates.

"The dog's the heaviest," he remarks, quietly.

"I'll carry him," says Jeanne.

His bow, takes up the skates, and gives her his hand up the ditch.

An Appeal for the Blind.
Are you aware that there are about five hundred blind people in Newfoundland, the majority of whom are living in hopeless and helpless misery? About eighteen months ago, Mr. John Weil, a Newfoundland, and a blind man, who had been trained at the Institute for the Blind in Halifax and had become a member of the staff of that institution, decided to return to St. John's and endeavour to promote the establishment of an institution on similar lines in his native place. The Government agreed to support the plan, and at the last Session of the Legislature the sum of Twenty-five Thousand Dollars was voted, provided that Fifty Thousand Dollars was raised by public subscription for the erection of a building. Further, an annual grant of Ten Thousand Dollars was promised for the upkeep of the institution. There are a hundred and ninety-eight blind people in the country whose names and condition have been ascertained by correspondence, whom it is possible to train so that they may become useful, self-supporting and happy, who are waiting for admittance to such an institution. But since the inception of the plan a great change has taken place in the financial condition of the country, and the Directors have decided not to make an appeal at the present time for the larger scheme, but a sum of Five Thousand Dollars is wanted to pay expenses up to June 30th next. The Prime Minister has said that he will recommend that one third of the amount shall be paid from the public funds, and the Directors now appeals to the public for the balance required—Three Thousand, Three Hundred and Thirty-five Dollars.

Produce and Provisions.
(From Friday's Trade Review.)
CODFISH.—The total exports of dried salt codfish from Newfoundland this week amounted to 8,451 quintals. The shipments from the outports were 2,961 quintals by the schooner Winnifred Lee from Messrs. Patten & Forssey, Burin to Qbraltar for orders, and from St. John's 5,490 as follows:—1,707 quintals by the schooner Nellie Louise to Kingston, Jamaica, from Messrs. Job, Murray, and Baird, and 3,783 quintals by the S.S. Rosalind for New York from Messrs. Murray, Job, Balno Johnstone, Bowring, Goodridge, Harvey & Co. Smith and Shipman Co., Union Export Co. and the Kennedy Co.
COD OIL AND CODLIVER OIL.—The Cod Oil market is still very dull and there have been very few transactions during the week, beyond a shipment of 4,300 gallons by the S.S. Rosalind to New York. It is difficult to make sales of Codliver oil in the local market at a price that will give holders a margin of profit, and those who have stocks are keeping it stored for more favorable conditions, which are likely to occur before the Spring. A small shipment of 425 gallons was made by the S.S. Rosalind to New York this week.
LOBSTERS.—During the week 110 1/2 cases were shipped to New York, five of which were for Kingston, Jamaica. The demand is expected to improve early in the New Year. The local price has dropped to $15.00 and there is very little buying. It is estimated that there are now about 3,000 cases left unsold in all Nfld. The fact that so much money was lost by packers who led back their lobsters for better price this season, together with the high cost of outfit, will keep many packers out of the business this year.
PORK.—Latest American advices report that there has been evidence of some pressure in the Pork market on account of the weaker tone of feed costs in general. Financial arrangements are in progress, which are expected to have the effect of increasing the export of Hog products to the European countries, where food is badly needed. Any improvement in the export demand would, of course, stiffen the market very considerably in the United States and would be in due time, reflected in local pork prices.

BEEF.—The Beef market continues strong at last week's quotations. Trade, both at home and abroad, is exceptionally inactive and the demand is at its lowest point for the year, in the St. John's market, being now confined to the local city requirements as supplied by the shopkeepers. Boneless Beef in New York is very scarce and is quoted at the highest price for the season, which is largely due to the recent advances in Exchange. High grade cattle are in good demand, thus keeping the price of superior beef up to the high levels.
SUGAR.—As a guarantee has been furnished by the Food Control Board by public announcement in the papers, that the existing prices of sugar will hold till February 12th, the trade has no hesitation in buying their 25 bar-

Britain's Wealth.
A remarkable illustration of the colossal financial burden which the British people are bearing and have been bearing for the last six years is furnished by the fact that the House of Commons refused the other day to limit the Government to an expenditure for the year of $4,000,000,000. Before the war, an outlay of half this amount in a year would have been regarded as National madness, and the total expenditure of the State for the two and a quarter centuries preceding 1914, for war purposes, was less than it had been for the period of March 31st, 1914, and March 31st, 1920. The amount loaned abroad during the war period exceeded by $2,475,000,000 the amount borrowed abroad. The 46 million people of the British Isles raised entirely from their own resources, a net amount of $49,655,000,000, over $1,075 for each one of their number, while the total per capita subscription in Canada to the various Canadian War Loans was $263. The national wealth of Great Britain, or as some economists prefer to say, the national capital at the beginning of the war is estimated to have been $72,500,000,000. There has probably been no actual addition during the war. On the contrary, doubtless, there has been some depletion therein. However, measured by the paper pound sterling of to-day we may quite conservatively take $130,000,000,000 as the figure with which to compare the $40,350,000,000 to which the debt grew from the pre-war figure of $3,555,000,000; giving a ratio of say 33 1/2 per cent. of debt to wealth. The debt charge for interest and management is now about $1,800,000,000, comparing with $120,000,000 before the war. The present-day charge is about ten per cent. of the national income estimated to be $18,000,000,000.

Pattern 3423 is here portrayed. It is cut in 8 sizes: 16, 18 and 20 years. A 16 year size will require 4 1/2 yards of 36 inch material.
Serge, velveteen, taffeta, satin, broadcloth, duvetyne and charmeuse are attractive for this style. The width of the skirt at the lower edge is about 2 yards with platts extended.
A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 15c. in silver or stamps.
A NEW HOUSE DRESS IN "TIE ON" STYLE.
Pattern 3133 supplies this design. It is cut in 7 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. A medium size will require 5 1/2 yards of 36 inch material. The width of the dress at its lower edge is about 1 1/2 yard. Striped or checked gingham, seersucker, percale, madras, linen and lawn are suitable for this style.
A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 15c. in silver or stamps.

FEED.—The Feed market is lower, and Bran and Corn Meal in particular, show a decline that is particularly pleasing to those having milking cattle. Yellow Corn Meal and White Hominy are now selling at $3.50 to $3.75. A year ago these feeds were $2.00 per bag higher, but there is no indication of local milkmen reducing their price of milk to householders.

NOTES.—Owing to the continual advance in price of paper, wages, etc., we are compelled to advance the price of patterns to 15c. each.

C. T. JAMES, Editor

Monday, January 3, 1921.

Introspective.

Another year lies before us, another milestone has been passed and Time has added to His annual calendar the figures 1920. No person looking down the vista of the twelve months ahead can foretell, with accuracy, or in the light of omniscience, anything of the joys or sorrows, the reverses or successes, the fortunes or disasters of the Year of Our Lord, 1921, upon the threshold of which the world now stands. No man is gifted with such wisdom or range of vision that he can assert without doubt that such and such things will actually occur, unless it be those astronomical observers, who make certain tables of Zodiacal, Solar and Lunar changes and base certain observations on the mutations of the planets in their orbits. The year but recently tolled out by the bells of Christendom, opened with great promise for a world not wholly relieved of the pressure of war, but expectations were unfortunately unfulfilled. The beginning of the year upon which we now enter, does not hold out in a similar degree the promise of 1920. For that reason, perhaps, its passage and conclusion may witness more material results for prosperity and happiness everywhere.

We have done with 1920 in many ways, but its recession into the chamber of Time, does not release us from having to bear numerous of its obligations. The legacies left by the past twelve months are with us yet, and have to be adjusted and apportioned. The promises of 1920 have to be carried out in a manner compatible with their importance, for while the old year has died and a new one has been born, the impress of the dead has been left upon the living, and a thousand matters left over from the affairs of the past annual period will have to be straightened out and administered. The procession of years make up as it were, a kind of current account—it may be a series—the transactions of the preceding running into the succeeding, and practically never ending or being finally balanced. It might be said without risk of arousing a discussion on times and seasons, that to us—in Newfoundland at least—the years are, in a sense, inseparably connected with past, present and future, for the trade and commerce, the interests and ventures of one year invariably overlap and enter into those of the other, sometimes advantageously, sometimes the other side of being profitable. And that is where the knowledge and real acumen of the men engaged in the pursuits mentioned come into play. The uncertainties bring out every last bit of zeal and keenness possessed by them in an effort to meet and beat competitors and trade rivals, and come out on the right side of the accounts. And it is good that all must place reliance upon their natural abilities. Omniscient man would quickly come to naught, and his works to destruction.

For Newfoundland, then, who can prophesy that which lies ahead, that which is concealed within the boundaries of the coming three hundred and sixty-two days. The experiences of the past may—and must—assist in overcoming the difficulties and complications of the future; for there are bound to be many of these. No country can escape them. But there is no country so capable and resourceful as Newfoundland to meet and cope with whatever adverse situations that will arise. The past has proven that. The future will perfect it. Our business men have courage to engage in their usual enterprise, and courage to meet and cope successfully with financial upheavals. If to courage is allied unity on all sides, then there are two invincible forces arrayed side by side. And neither the one nor the other should be found lacking when required. But unity above all things. A solid, unbroken front presented to any peril that may approach. A solidification of opinion when anything inimical to the interests of the dominion, be it local or foreign, is far superior to threats and blusterings. In a national sense there should be but one sentiment—that of upholding the commercial honor and boosting the commercial fortunes of the land in which we live and are proud to acknowledge. Naturally there are bound to be differences of opinion on various matters, but these may all be discussed in a fair and equitable spirit, without that heat and ascendancy of passion which, alas, has been too characteristic. No one man can lay claim to exclusive loyalty, no body of men can, but a population—in unity—can be exclusively loyal to their country, and their country's good. If in such a spirit all agree to meet whatever may befall in 1921, half the battle will be won before it is joined, and therein let us hope that we shall pull through unscathed and without loss of prestige or national honor.

Notes and Comments.

Don't forget to write it.

May it be fraught with every happiness and prosperity.

When the League of Nations becomes the football of politics, it is time to call the game—Life.

Newfoundland deserves a better 1921 than 1920. Let all see that she gets it.

"How much coal are you burning this year?"
"Oh, about one out of every three pieces."

With the Fish Regulations about to be thrown into the discard, why not follow suit with the Food Control Board? Both together would make an unpleasant New Year gift.

'Life' says that the costume of a Native East Indian woman consists of a strip of cheese cloth eight yards long. A modern maiden thereupon rises to ask what becomes of the other seven and a half yards.

Outstripped. An exchange comments on the fact that in the elimination contest between fashion and modesty, fashion is winning by more than the proverbial neck.

In times of high prices, a little earning is a dangerous thing. Newfoundlanders have found it so.

Conundrum. Why are school teachers like a certain make of car? Because they give the most service (in Newfoundland) for the least money.

When a man gets fifty dollars a week, he tells his wife that he gets forty; his friends that he gets one hundred; but oh, you Income Tax Assessor.

The Herald.

With the suspension from publication on Friday last, New Year's Eve, and the retirement of Sir P. McGrath, its managing Editor, there passes from the arena of journalism one of the most powerful writers of current times. Having spent thirty years in the newspaper world, the retiring Editor had ample opportunities of knowing many men and witnessing many scenes, the knowledge thereby gained being ever turned to good advantage for the papers which he served. As a controlling power in political journalism he will be missed, but it is hoped that he will not permit his very vigorous pen to rust. The Herald itself was too well known to need any detailed reference. Its disappearance will be regretted, but perhaps like the Phoenix it may arise from its ashes, doubly powerful and influential, it not being altogether known yet whether its suspension is permanent or temporary. So far as can be learned negotiations are now in progress for its purchase, and it is quite possible that once more it will take its part in public matters, and discuss them as it ever did, without fear or favor. It was unfortunate that the official notice of the closing did not reach the Telegram on Friday last, in time for its publication to synchronize with that of the last issue of the Herald. We give it space beneath to-day, and whilst not saying Farewell, we offer the retiring editor and staff the greetings of the season, and, if not with the Herald, hope to hear of their again being made free of the fraternity of Journalists, with some other newspaper.

VALEDICTORY.

(From Friday's Herald.)
With this issue the HERALD suspends publication, possibly only for a period, or perhaps for all time. Whether it will resume under new management or be voluntarily liquidated will depend on negotiations now in progress, and which may eventually within the next month.

Since its establishment more than thirty years ago, first as the "Mercury" and later as the "Herald," this journal has played a most prominent part in the life of the Colony, and it is gratifying to those connected with it to find that if it disappears it will not be without regret by many that it withdraws from the newspaper arena. Its Managing Director and Editor, who completes to-day thirty years of what a distinguished professor once described as "brain worrying journalism," avails of the occasion to gratefully thank its readers and advertising patrons for the support given it in the past, and also those who have personally expressed their sorrow that the HERALD's daily record of events will no longer be available. He would also like to thank the Daily Star for the complimentary references in the editorial of Tuesday last, reprinted in the next column.

In ringing down the curtain to-day, both on the activities of the year 1920 and its own, the HERALD expresses the hope that the coming year may be marked by an increased prosperity and good fortune for Newfoundland and all those who dwell within it.

Crew of Euphrates Safe.

RESCUED BY S.S. GALILEO.

The safety of the crew of the S.S. Euphrates has been ascertained in a wireless message received at 10 o'clock last night by the Radio Station at Cape Race. The message reads:—"Taken all crew off trawler Euphrates in sinking condition Lat. 44.24 N. Long. 45.27 W. Dangerous to navigation. Inform St. John's Nfld. JONES, Master Galileo."

Since Tuesday last when the little steamer left Bell Island for St. John's there has been considerable anxiety as to her safety. She left port at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning last, and was caught in the S.E. snow storm that came up a couple of hours later, and was last seen by the Ingraham about 11 a.m. off Flatrock. It is apparent that when the weather became too thick, Capt. Dawe ran the Euphrates off the land in the height of the storm, and Tuesday night when the wind changed to S.W. and blew a gale the little steamer was unable to make back, probably through her engines getting out of order, and was blown further off to sea. Though no particulars are at hand it is evident that the crew were not taken off the steamer until yesterday afternoon as Captain Jones, of the Galileo, no doubt witnessed Cape Race as soon as he had rescued the mariners. The news that the crew of six men are safe on board a large steamer bound to New York will be a great relief to the wives and families of the men.

The S.S. Galileo is the second steamer of the Wilson line of the same name. The old Galileo was called the rescue boat of the Atlantic. In the year 1889 she towed the S.S. Tankerville, to this port, and the latter ship leaving here after having repairs effected rescued Captain Arthur Jackman and his crew off the S.S. Plover. The Tankerville was bound to Philadelphia and the Plover was coming from Sydney to St. John's. Captain Jackman and his crew had given up all hopes of rescue, their boats being smashed and the ship in a sinking condition when the rescue ship happened along.

R. C. Services.

On New Year's Day High Mass was celebrated at the R. C. Cathedral by Bishop Renout, Rev. Dr. Carter and Rev. Fr. Leamy being deacon and sub-deacon. Rev. Dr. Green was master of ceremonies. On Sunday High Mass was celebrated by His Grace the Archbishop, Rev. Dr. Greene being master of ceremonies. Immediately after the service, procession of the Blessed Sacrament was held in the church, the sacred Host afterwards was placed on the Altar of Repose when the forty hours adoration commenced. Pontifical responders were sung at night, Bishop Renout officiating. The sermon was preached by Monsignor McDermott. There were large congregations at all the services.

Wesley Church.

Fine Sermons; Excellent Music.
The New Year services were largely attended. In the morning Rev. W. B. Hugden, B.A., preached a very able sermon on "Bridge Building," taking as his basis Hebrews 5th Chap. 2nd verse: "Who hath opened up a new and living way"—referring to Him who bridged the great chasm between Divine justice and sinful men. At the evening service the anthems rendered on Christmas Day were repeated. The choir was present in full strength and put themselves heart and voice into a full hours work, which was interlarded with a forceful exhortation by the pastor from the words, Exodus 14th Chap. 15th verse: "Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." It was a most fitting address—speaking of the many problems confronting a nation and as citizens, he mentioned Columbus, Livingstone, Carey and Edison as great optimists who won out—Coming back to refer to the music, "While shepherds watched their flocks by night," composed by Roland Smart, went grandly, particularly the passage by the sopranos, "Thus spake the seraph and forthwith." The precision was splendid and harmony delightful. The congregation then sang heartily, "Standing at the portal of the opening year," followed by that very brilliant composition of Adolphe Adam, "O Holy Night." It was remarkably good in the chorus parts, "Fall on your knees, Oh hear the angel voices," and "Behold your King before Him lowly laid"; Mr. Chaplin taking the high and difficult tenor solo most effectively, while the alto blended in their part with much taste and expression. The last anthem, "Glory to God in the highest," can best be termed an outburst of holy song. Miss Bartlett took her solo with verve and sweetness. Her words, "The people that in darkness have seen a great light," were clearly enunciated and pleased the lady with strength and put some power into the allego part, "Break forth with joy." The skill of the organist behind his choir was the secret of the great success, coupled with careful practice. In recognition of Mr. Pratt's gratuitous and faithful services, the Official Board sent some valuable silverware to his home last week, which pleased Mr. Pratt very much. A.W.V.M.

Filthy Den Unearthed
WHEN POLICE RAID HOUSE IN DARDANELLES—CATS AND DOGS SLEEP WITH OCCUPANTS.

A scene that simply boggles description met the astonished gaze of the police who last week raided the McManus home, situated in the "Dardanelles," to search for stolen goods. If it were not for the fact that the story is vouchered for by Head Constable Byrne, himself, it would almost be unbelievable. Here, in a house which contained but two rooms, one 9 feet by 6 feet and the other 12 feet by 9 feet lived six people, four men and two women, and over a score of dogs and cats. The sleeping room is the smaller of the two and contained nothing but rags strewn over the floor. In this room on the table, slept the six so-called human occupants, surrounded by cats and dogs. When the police entered they cleared out all the dogs they could find before attempting to search for the stolen property. When, however, they began, very gingerly, to turn over the rags, every now and then another canine specimen would put in appearance until finally twenty-two of the animals of all shapes, sizes and colours were brought to light. In a tub under the table of the living room were found a dog and nine pups. This tub, by the way, was

A Souvenir of Twillingate.

We thank the Twillingate Sun for a copy of "Souvenir of Twillingate" published by that paper. This is a very interesting little journal, well printed and containing some very fine articles and illustrations, mainly of Twillingate. Amongst the varied contributions are articles by Rev. Canon Smith and Rev. Canon Lockyer. Considering the difficulties of publishing in the out-ports, we must congratulate the Twillingate Sun on the excellence of this little publication.

A Dainty Souvenir.

We thank the publisher of the Western Star, Mr. A. L. Barrett, for a dainty little souvenir in the shape of a pocket calendar and diary for 1921. This booklet is of convenient size for the waistcoat pocket, is very nicely bound and is printed on art paper, which altogether produces an excellent effect. The Western Star has our congratulations on the excellence of their little souvenir.

PETER O'MARA, The Druggist, THE REXALL STORE. The annual Band Concert of the C.L.B. Cadets held in the Methodist College Hall on New Year's night was attended by a capacity audience. The concert, which was under the patronage of H. E. the Governor, was probably the best ever given by the C.L.B. Band. The selections were all new and a great deal of painstaking care was given to them. Several items were encored by the audience, a thing which does not often happen at Band Concerts. To Captain A. Morris and every individual member of the Band great credit is due for the excellence of the performance. Captain Morris is especially deserving of praise because it is through the care and attention given by him that the Band has been brought to its present high standard. The band selections were interspersed with songs by some of our best known artists, all of which were highly appreciated by the audience, every performer being encored. The programme was as follows:

- (1) March—"Ye Men of Merry England." C. W. Hewitt—C. L. B. Band. (2) Song—Selected. Miss Mitchell. (3) Selection—"Chu Chin Chow." F. Horton—C. L. B. Band. (4) Song—"Take a pair of Sparkling Eyes." Made in Newfoundland.

At the opening of the New Year. "Encourage Home Industries" is an appropriate motto. In the window of the Imperial Tobacco Co's. Coupon Store is displayed a variety of boots and shoes manufactured by the firm of Archibald Bros. of Harbor Grace, with the display in the sign: "Made in Newfoundland: No better made in any country."

The window is tastefully dressed, the work being done by Mr. E. J. Salt. The boots and shoes, particularly those for ladies wear, are indeed all that is claimed for them. The Trade Mark, "Made in Newfoundland" with such goods as displayed, would be a guarantee that our people when making purchases are receiving full value for their money.

Star Society Parade. The Star Society will hold their parade on Sunday next, attending services at St. Patrick's Church. During the past two weeks over 100 members joined the Society. Euphrates 350 Miles Off. It is likely that within a few days the Bell Island Steamship Company will replace the S.S. Galileo, 44.24 North, 45.27 West, is about 350 miles S.E. by South of St. John's and South of the Flemish Cap.

Old Ladies Entertained. On Thursday afternoon the ladies of the Time and Talents Club visited the Old Ladies' Home and entertained the inmates with a little concert, consisting of recitations, and a short sketch which was acted by Miss Mary Keegan and Mrs. Herbert Outerbridge. Afterwards tea was served by Mrs. Brehm. The old ladies appreciate very much the kind thought of the Time and Talents Club in giving up their time to come down and entertain them.

New Year's Eve Dance. A BRILLIANT SUCCESS. What was probably the most successful social event of the past year was the dance held on New Year's Eve in the C.C.C. Hall, for the purpose of ushering out the Old and celebrating the advent of the New Year in a fitting manner. In the brilliantly lit and splendidly decorated ballroom, the dancers glided to and fro to the strains of the very latest dance music, played by the incomparable jazzola orchestra. Suddenly, on the stroke of twelve, the lights were turned off, and the orchestra having struck up Auld Lang Syne, all joined hands, and lifting up their voices, made the walls re-echo to the joyous strains of that good old air. Next began a mad dance to the same tune, which lasted for about five minutes, after which the lights were again flashed on. In this manner was the New Year ushered in. Dancing was continued until nearly 2:30 a.m. when this decidedly successful dance came to an end. Great credit is due Mr. Hugh Anderson, the organizer of the dance, through whose efforts the affair was such a great success.

Hold-Ups Numerous

Thousands Relieved of Colds. They are hold-ups alright but very different from the dangerous affairs we read of in the papers. In the hold-ups we are talking about, people are not relieved of their money by highwaymen. No! But Buckley's Bronchitis Mixture is relieving them of their colds, hacking coughs, bronchitis, chronic asthma and similar ailments. One Montreal man—Herbert Corri—was about to start South in hope that he might get rid of chronic asthma. Before going, he tried Buckley's Mixture as a last resort, and it literally held him up. He didn't go South. To quote Mr. Corri, "The cough disappeared, the wheezing ceased, and all the discomforts disappeared as if by magic."

What it did for him and for thousands of sufferers, it can do for you. Even the first dose brings relief, and after a few doses the cough vanishes. Ask your druggist for Buckley's and refuse all substitutes. Sold everywhere at 75c. a bottle on a cash-iron, money-back basis if it fails to give relief. For sale as all Drug Stores or by mail from BUCKLEY LIMITED, 142 MUTUAL ST., TORONTO.

Pontius Pilate's Reservoir. Jerusalem, situated outside the valley of the Kedron, boasts of only one small spring, the Virgin's Fountain, so named because it is believed the Mother of Christ drew water from it. Ever since Solomon's day, the want of water has been felt in Jerusalem, and the British, since their occupation decided to repair and use the old reservoir, now known as Birket As-soub and lying a few miles to the south of Solomon's Pool. It was built by Pontius Pilate, and it was from here that he brought water to the city in the days of Christ. Pilate's old reservoir was repaired and enlarged, its capacity to-day being 5 million gallons. Galleries were built in various directions to tap the numerous surrounding springs, including those of Ain ed Dirweh, in which, it is said, Philip baptized the sinner. A powerful pumping plant was installed by which the water is pumped up to large reservoirs built on higher ground on the Hebron road, the water flowing from here by its own gravity in 1-foot iron pipe to twin pools on the hill west of the city, from whence it is conducted to various stand-pipes in and around Jerusalem. Pilate's acqueduct, ruins of which dot the landscape to-day, stretched for a distance of forty miles, though as the crow flies the Holy City lies but thirteen miles away. The British pipe line, however, is but fifteen miles in total length. As a result of this British enterprise the death rate in the city has dropped by one-half.

We noticed three men in particular who were hit by falling snow which covered them from head to foot.

The First Kimberley Diamond.

The first Kimberley diamond has been attributed to the fortuitous discovery of a native Bushman boy, but the man who made the diamond fields of Kimberley known to the world was Erasmus Stephanus Jacobs, now an old man living in penury. He was found late in life by the Kimberley correspondent of the Chicago "Evening Post," to whom he told his story. Our people, he said, were living on a farm at Dekalk, near Hopetown, and eighty-seven miles east of Kimberley. One day, in 1866, I saw something sparkling under a tree. It was a little stone, and I thought that it was pretty; so I took it home. For several weeks I used it with other stones to head to the floor, and since he must keep his head covered in the mosque, a turban or a fez or other harmless headgear is necessary. So hearily do the Turks hate the head covering of Europe that a common way to accuse a Turk of infidelity to Islam has been to nail a hat to his door.

Turks and the Fez.

The fez is fast disappearing in Turkey. For a hundred years it has been the characteristic Turkish headdress, and in the beginning was itself a reform, for it took the place of the turban, and the Sultan Mahmud II. who introduced it, was called "the infidel sultan." At one stage of the Mohammedan prayers—the true believer must touch his nose and forehead to the floor, and since he must keep his head covered in the mosque, a turban or a fez or other harmless headgear is necessary. So hearily do the Turks hate the head covering of Europe that a common way to accuse a Turk of infidelity to Islam has been to nail a hat to his door.

Just Folks. LOVE AND DUTY.

If you were eight or nine years old An' had to do as you were told, An' you had planned a certain day Your deadly enemies to play A game o' ball, an' then your Pa That mornin' said: "I notice, Ma, The lawn needs cuttin' an' the place Is new a neighborhood disgrace; This afternoon please see that son Stays home until the work is done," Could you put on your prettiest looks The way they do in story books An' say: "Yes sir, I will be glad To cut the lawn. It needs it bad."

Suppose your currus were workin' fine An' you were captin of your boys, But you'd been taught that boys who hope Successfully with life to cope Must answer duty's clarion call With cheerfulness in spite of all, But you had gone to bed to dream Of "Allotop" that other team, An' then the very day you'd planned To play that game—you understand—Your Pa said, poinin' with his spoon: "You'll cut the grass this afternoon," Would you be dutiful, or say: "Gee Whiz, Pa, please, I can't to-day!"

An' then suppose the sky was blue An' there was not a cloud in view, But it was just the sort of day You'd prayed for, so that you could play, An' you'd told all your gang to be content to stare at the game at three, On top of that the day before You'd laughed an' jeered at Billy Moore.

Cor! he was called back home to do Some chores his mother told him to— To talk of duty's very well, But how'd you'd like to have to tell The boys: "I won't be there to play, I gotta cut the grass to-day."

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

Precious Stones.

The other day I stood looking in a window in which some beautiful jewels were displayed. A desire to possess some of the shining things swept over me and then as swiftly as it came, the surge of desire ebbed and I found myself thinking, "How can people make the sacrifice they will make just to be the owners of one of those bits of color and light."

True they are called precious stones but how much more precious are some of the things people give up for them!

An Ugly Ring.

I was thinking especially of a woman I know. She has several beautiful rings. She showed me a new one which she had long wanted and which her husband finally had given her on her birthday. It was a large diamond in one of the costly new settings. In itself it was beautiful. On her fingers I thought it ugly. Because she had ugly fingers! No, but because of what that ring brings before my eyes. It brings before my eyes a husband constantly driven, constantly harassed, by bills that eat up his money as fast as he can make it. It visualizes to me a delicate looking child, a child brought up in an apartment, in a city block because the wearer of the jewel cannot afford a house. How can a stone be more precious than a child's health or a husband's peace of mind? It does not seem possible to me.

But She Couldn't Afford to Pay Her Mother's Expenses.

Again I know a woman whose only daughter was married a couple of years ago and went to live in a city some hundreds of miles away. The mother has never been to visit her daughter. She cannot afford it. The daughter made her a brief visit last summer and on that occasion proudly displayed a beautiful pendant and a costly ring which her husband had given her. How could such things be more precious to her than a visit from her mother who before her marriage made every sacrifice for her happiness and who misses her daughter so that she has actually told on her health.

Of course it is not only for precious stones that people sacrifice the precious immaterial things, such as peace of mind and generosity. They make the same sort of sacrifice for such material possessions as a beautiful house, a machine, furniture, clothes. But in these cases it seems as if they got more real utility and enjoyment out of the mess of potage. Whereas when you come down to bed rock the reason they want to possess the gems is not for their own use or enjoyment but simply so that they may outshine and impress other people and possess something that others cannot have and may envy.

You Can Tell the Real Beauty Lover This Way.

You will remind me, of course, that it is possible to have a passionate admiration for the beauty of a beautiful gem.

True, but tell me this. How many people who pay huge sums to own some exquisite diamond would pay that much to enjoy that beauty if they could never display it to others? Of course I do not mean to imply that there is anything unworthy in buying or wanting to buy beautiful jewelry. The unworthiness comes only when you sacrifice something more worthwhile to the desire to impress others, whether that impression is made by a diamond or an automobile, or a house, that you cannot afford.

New Bantam Champion.

New York, Dec. 23.—Joe Lynch, of New York, won the bantamweight Championship of the World, from Pete Herman, of New Orleans, in a fifteen round battle at the Madison Square Garden last night, the judges having agreed on Lynch as the winner. The men weighed 116 pounds each, and Herman was 3 to 2 favorite, and he looks waxy.

Lynch's advantage of height and reach were apparent and excessive cautioning on the part of Herman cost him any chance that he might have had to hold on to his title.

In four of the rounds Herman had the better of the argument, but in only one of these had he any decided advantage over Lynch. Patsy Haley was the referee.

They felt each other out in the first round; Lynch shaded his opponent in the second, while in the third Lynch crossed his right hand to the jaw,

Lynch came up dancing in the 13th and Herman only landed once in the round.

In the 14th, Lynch swung his right to the head and then landed a solid left hook on the jaw. He planted several other hard blows about the face and body, and forced Herman to the ropes. In the last round, Lynch tried to feint Herman into a lead but Herman would not go in. Lynch hooked several times to the head, and they were in a harmless mix-up when the gong ended the round.

Herman and his manager will sail to England. He is matched to meet Jimmy Wilde in a 20-round bout in London on January 14.

Accident to Employee.

On Friday evening, whilst working in the railway yard, ex-Constable Quinlan, an employee of the Railway Commission, met with an accident which might have proved fatal. He was working underneath an engine, repairing the fender when another engine coming down the yard, crashed into the stationary locomotive and moved it several feet. With great presence of mind, Quinlan managed to hold on to the fender and escaped with only slight injuries. He was attended to by Dr. A. Tait after which he was able to walk home.

Duchess of Marlborough

Unhappy in Married Life, May Now Wed Frenchman.

Consuelo Vanderbilt, former Duchess of Marlborough, so they say, is to marry Jacques Balsan, a French sportsman, well known on the continent for his participation in ballooning, hunting and automobile events. It is true that she was in France for several months last year, and it is also equally true that her final decree of divorce has just been granted.

Last spring the duchess instituted a suit for the restitution of conjugal rights. Such a petition is the usual preliminary to a divorce in Great Britain. In May she filed a suit for divorce, which was granted in November.

Reports at that time stated that she was inconsolable, and it was shortly after her final desertion by the duke that she left Blenheim Castle, their country home, for a sojourn in France. The wedding of Consuelo, daughter of William Kissam Vanderbilt and his first wife, now Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, to the young Duke of Marlborough took place in St. Thomas's Church on November 6, 1895. It was the greatest social event in New York society. Miss Vanderbilt was given a dowry of $5,000,000 by her father, while her prospective husband was offered an annual income of $1,000,000 in addition. Miss Vanderbilt at that time was a tall and lithe girl of seventeen. She wore her beautiful black hair coiled in a knot at the back of her neck. Her dark eyes, with their highly arched brows, the reticent nose and the contour of her small face gave her a piquant beauty which had great charm. She had been educated entirely by private tutors, and spoke French, German and Italian fluently. She played the piano and was an expert in tennis and bicycling, which at that time was at the height of its popularity. The duke was twenty-four at the time of his marriage, and was usually very quiet and retiring, though a good conversationalist when occasion required.

Ten days after their marriage the duke carried the little great-granddaughter of the Staten Island ferryman to England. Blenheim Castle, the historic home of the Marlboroughs, had, in the meantime, been put in readiness to receive the new bride, the duke having sold many valuable paintings and pieces of statuary to pay the painters and decorators. The castle, which is a huge palace set in an elaborate park of twenty-five square miles, means a mint of money to keep it habitable for modern people.

The new duchess not only won popularity with her retainers, but society immediately made a pet of her. She was presented at court in due splendour, and when her first son was born, September 18, 1897, Queen Victoria sent a telegram of congratulations, and Prince Edward, late Edward VII, acted as godfather to the child. The second child of the Marlboroughs, Lord Ivor Spencer Churchill, was born October 15, 1898.

The young couple were apparently enjoying all the happiness predicted for them until the duke's willful and whimsical extravagance began to irritate his young wife. He tried to buy up all the Marlborough property, long sold for debts. He even tried to purchase Marlborough House, in London, long used as a residence for the Prince of Wales. Later he purchased a site in Curzon street from Lord Howe at three times its value, and began the construction of Sunderland House, which proved to be the straw which broke the camel's back.

Consuelo's $5,000,000 dowry had been expended in the rehabilitation of Blenheim Castle and in the lavish entertainments which had been given there. The duchess had given largely to charity and her popularity became so great that the pride of the duke

Is Zane Grey a Rival?

The most unique of publishers—Robert Jenkins—claims to have in Luke Alan a rival to Zane Grey. This we doubt, for it would be a particularly brilliant author to have Grey in his own territory. This, however, does not for a moment detract from the excellence of that Western yarn of "Blue Pats—Breed." Hitherto Westerns have been the monopoly of our friends the "Yanks," and it is a pleasure to see a British yarn of the cowboy West. The public will, we are sure, revel in the adventures of Blue Pete, Whiskers, the R.N.W.M.P., the Rustlers, and last, but not least, of Mira Stanton. To use the expression of Pete "Gor, avastie me, but it's a good yarn. Of course, for 'tis a Herbert Jenkins book.

Wedding Bells.

On New Year's Eve, at the Roman Catholic Cathedral, Right Rev. Monsignor McDermott, V.G., united in marriage Constable John McHugh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick McHugh of Placentia, with Miss Stella King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James King, also of Placentia. The bride was attended by Miss Clara Greene of Placentia, whilst Mr. Leo Shea of St. John's acted as bestman. The bride wore a navy blue costume and white fur and hat to match, and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and maiden hair fern. The bride is a well known and highly respected young lady of the Ancient Capital, whose parents come from one of the oldest families of that place; whilst the groom is probably one of the most popular of the younger men of the Force and stands high in the esteem of his superior officers. Only the immediate friends of the contracting parties were present and after the wedding the party drove to the residence of Mr. M. Codner, Fort Townsend, a relative of the bride, where supper was partaken of by the guests and the toasts customary to the occasion duly honoured. The presents received by the bride were numerous and varied, testifying to the esteem in which both parties are held by their many friends. The young couple left for Placentia on New Year's morning, where the honeymoon will be spent, and on their return to St. John's will take up residence here.

Quaker Minister Is Grateful to Tanlac

Rev. Parker Moon, Carthage, Missouri.

Nearly everybody in Southwest Missouri either knows or has heard of the Rev. Parker Moon, who for a full half century has devoted his life and talents to Sunday school and organization work for the Society of Friends or Quakers. He resides at 624 Howard avenue, Carthage, Mo. "Uncle Parker," as he is more familiarly known, came from fine old rugged Quaker stock and there is not a better known or more highly respected citizen in that part of the state. In referring to his remarkable restoration to health by Tanlac, he said: "About five years ago I suffered a general breakdown. My principal trouble was nervous indigestion. My appetite was very poor and my food seldom agreed with me, and I had to live on a very restricted diet. I suffered a great deal from headaches and dizzy spells; I had severe pains across the small of my back and was badly constipated most of the time. In fact, I was so weak and rundown I was not able to attend to my duties. "This condition made me very nervous and I could not sleep at night. Frequently I would be awake most all night and was in that condition more or less for five years. My physician said he could not do anything for me and suggested a change of climate. I then moved to Texas and went back and forth three times but did not get the relief I had hoped for. Finally, I got so bad off I was not able to get around with any degree of comfort. I was also told I had heart trouble. "I had read about Tanlac and, as it had been very highly recommended to me, I decided to try it. I got a bottle and had taken only a few doses until I could notice a marked improvement in my condition. I noticed especially that I was not troubled any more with sour stomach after eating, which was a great relief. "I kept on taking Tanlac until I fully regained my health. My appetite is splendid; I enjoy my meals and I do not find it necessary now to take any laxative medicines of any kind. I can sleep much better and am not nearly so nervous. "I take great pleasure in recommending Tanlac to anyone who needs a good system, for he who suffers with stomach trouble, I have recommended Tanlac to a great many of my friends and am pleased to reach others by giving this statement for publication. "Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Paradise by Mrs. Martin P. Byrne, in Upper Gables by Heber Andrews, in Portland by H. C. Haines, in St. Joseph, Salmonier, by Mrs. J. "The Crimson Alibi." Star of the Sea Association

A HUGE SUCCESS. "The Crimson Alibi" which was the attraction at the Casino on New Year's night was one of the most exciting dramatic offerings seen in a long while and afforded each member of the aggregation ample opportunity of proving its ability. Mr. Albert Patterson, the Company's versatile leading man played a rather unusual role, that of a dilettante detective who very curiously solves the mystery of the murder of Josiah Quincy. Miss Mary Newton played a most pleasing role and delighted her host of admirers. Mr. Frank Urban as usual added his bit of comedy to the piece. The remainder of the company played their respective roles exceptionally well. The play for to-night is entitled "Five O'Clock" and is brimful of pathos, startling climaxes and genuine humor. There is a warm humanity and a wholesome disrespect for the sham of aristocracy in this piece. The story revolves around Orville Stackwood who has been incarcerated in an institution for the weak-minded for thirteen years though he is perfectly sane and in fact a bright minded and clear headed young man. The daughter of the head of the hospital falls in love with him and secretly arranges for an examination as to his mental fitness. The remainder of the play is intensely exciting and should be seen to be appreciated.

The Cross Country Service.

French Schooner Safe.

A message has just been received stating that the French schooner Curieuse, reported last week as having been lost at Fogo, is safe. She left for Alicante on Dec. 24th with 3375 qts. of codfish for the N&L-Labrador Export Co. The report of the loss of the Curieuse no doubt originated through the fact that the Danish schooner Harriet ran ashore at Fogo Heat some short time ago, and became a total wreck and this gave rise to the reported loss of a French vessel.
