THE CENTRE RIDING ELECTION.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

SIR.—In your issue of the 19th inst., I see an editorial reflecting on my conduct in reference to the late election in the Centre Riding of Wellington. I hope you will do me the justice to allow me a space in your widely circulated journal for the following remarks. I shall give as brief a statement as possible of what took place from the morning of the nomination to the close of the poll. After an election contest in over and the excitement that often leads men's minds astray is past, when they reflect on what has taken place they are more likely to come to a right decision than when their worst passions are aroused.

First, as to the difficulty that existed in the two Reform candidates in the field.
After the attempt to settle it by arbitration had failed, I think it was generally understood that another trial would be made on the morning of the nomination.

That morning when Mr. Dobbin's friends and mine met, we both agreed to leave ourselves in the hands of the party, and whatever decision they would come to we would abide by it. As some of the most influential men of the party were present, as also a number of the delegates that were at the Convention, I thought it was the only proper way to settle the difficulty to leave it to the party to say what I should do. And here I may say that I had neither directly nor indirectly asked any remuneration for my expenses whatever, so that could be no obstacle in the way of the party requiring me to retire. It is true I was offered $200 in Guelph to retire. If it had been decided on the morning of the nomination that I should retire, and money offered to me, I should have put it to some other purpose. I would never have it said that I took it for my own use. I understand that the meeting at Fergus agreed to refer the whole matter to a Committee, consisting of three supporters of each candidate. After a time it was found they could not agree. When Mr. Dobbin and I were called in, neither were willing to give way, but were willing to abide by the decision of our friends. We again left the room, and in a short time we were called in again, and the decision of these six gentlemen was read over to us, representing that they were unanimous that Mr. Dobbin should retire, and that I should keep the field. The general meeting agreed it as was Mr. Dobbin agreed to it and I submitted to it. But I must confess I did not like it, for Mr.
Dobbin was to receive $235. I thought he had made a good job of it. However, as I had left myself in the hands of the party, I was willing to abide by their decision, believing it to be the wish of the party, and that it would put an end to all the existing difficulties; and believing also that all parties were actuated by honorable motives in coming to the above settlement, I was willing to submit to any sacrifice. The money was paid over on the good faith that there was then left but one Reform candidate in the field. As Mr. Dobbin had no hand in coming to the above arrangement, and not knowing anything about how the above conclusion was come to —it being solely the action of the party —believing then that the difficulties were at end, and whatever might be said in reference to the Convention, by the above arrangement of the Reformers should have been transferred to me, for whatever difference of opinion existed as to the first choice of the Convention, it has never been disputed that I was the second choice.

When the nomination took place, the first thing I noticed was a few dissatisfied factionaries hunting up a candidate to be put in opposition to me. We again number of gentlemen that were too honourable to allow themselves to be made a handle of for their purpose, they at last found one in the person of J. S. Armstrong that was willing to be their tool. He was put in nomination against me, leaving two Reform candidates again in the field. The first thing I heard of afterwards was a flaming advertisement headed "Reformers to the rescue! Will you allow yourselves to be bought and sold by James Loghrin for the paltry sum of $235. Will you allow the Reform cause in the Centre Riding of Wellington to be decided by two men by a game of chance—the best three in five?" In whatever way these six men came to the above decision one thing is certain that I knew nothing of it until a few days afterwards I was told of it in Elora. I next found that they had their agents circulating every municipality in the Riding, circulating all the falsehoods and slanders that the envy of man or the malice of Satan could invent, such as regards my public and private character, have been informed that in the Township of Erin they must have had nearly one hundred men scattered over it, from the Elora Auctioneer to the Rev. Robert Brown, of Garrafrax. It is said they canvassed nearly every house, and that I was represented there as a Roman Catholic, a weak-kneed Reformer, a Conservative at heart with a Reformer's cloak over me, a man unworthy to be trusted in anything; that I had done all I could to keep the gravel road from going into Erin. In other parts of the Riding I was represented as an Orangeman when they thought that would suit their purpose. In every municipality there was nothing left that malice or envy could invent that was not circulated against me. This had the desired effect in all the municipalities in the Riding, except Erarnosa. There Armstrong and I have been known for nearly forty years, and all the lies and falsehoods that he or his party could circulate had not the effect of changing the people's minds that had known me for any length of time.

On the morning of the first polling day, on going to the polling places in the northern part of the Riding, I found it had been circulated that I would not get two dozen votes in Erin or Erarnosa, and that the people were all turned against me; that any that would vote for me would be throwing their votes away.
Then another report was circulated, that my case was hopeless, and that I was going to retire in favor of Armstrong.
Not knowing that these reports were in circulation until that day, I had no means of refuting them in so many of the poll I found that there were not the number of votes polled for me that I expected (more especially in Erin). From the representations made to me, I expected to get six or seven hundred votes in Erin alone. On Tuesday morning I went to Erin Village, one of the polling places, believing that there was something wrong, and I found that the Armstrong party had represented to the electors that I had retired in his favor, and that on the day previous they were advising my friends to keep back to the next day, as I would leave the field, and if they voted for me their votes would be lost. When I came back to Osgoode I found a letter before me, signed by two men, that no one there knew where they lived, stating that I had left the field, and that my friends were trying to secure Armstrong's election in Erarnosa. I found a letter had been sent there with Armstrong's son, to the same effect, signed by Robert Wood, of Erin Village. What can we think of men that will not only tell a falsehood, but will write a false statement, and put their name to it.

As to your editorial, you say that on Monday night, when all hopes of my election had vanished, I was pressed on all sides to retire; that no appeal would be listened to, either through personal feeling, spite or jealousy. It is true that two gentlemen did very modestly ask me to retire, and I fully believe they were sincere. One of them told me he intended voting for Armstrong at any rate. I must say that I thought it was not a very reasonable request, after all that I had done, in being willing to retire if the party wished; and when it was otherwise decided, that I advanced the money to satisfy Mr. Dobbin, (that I thought I had no right to do), but rather than be the means of breaking up the party I submitted to it. And then to come and ask me to retire, and sacrifice all to let Mr. Armstrong have a clear field; it was more than I could stand. Now, sir, I would ask any honorable, right minded man had I a right to retire for Armstrong after all I had done, after all the falsehoods that he and his party circulated against me, for his friends made no secret of it that they did not expect to elect him, but that they thought they would elect my election. Had the Reform party not supported Armstrong as they did, the result would have been very different.
If they did not want me, why not keep Mr. Dobbin in the field, for I hold it was using him badly to let him go and then take another in his place. But I shall say no more on this subject. I will leave the public to judge whether I was justified in the course I took or not. I hope you will excuse the length of these remarks, I had no idea they would extend to this length when I commenced.

Yours truly,
JAMES LOGHRIN,
Erarnosa, 23rd Sept., 1867.

Ladies' Benevolent Society's Entertain- ment.

The above entertainment was held last night in the Drill Shed. The attendance was but moderate, and not near so large as should have rewarded the charitable efforts of the Ladies' Benevolent Society. An elegant repast was spread for those who were willing to contribute thus indirectly to the assistance of the unfortunates who, without aid, must feel keenly the pains of cold and hunger during the severe season that has already premonished us of its approach. Fruits and fancy work were for sale at low prices, and the money paid for the purchase of these articles all went to the Benevolent Fund. Mrs. Newton exposed for sale a large, rich and beautiful cake, to be sold whole, if possible, if not, to be cut to suit purchasers. The Guelph Band contributed their part towards the pleasures of the evening by favoring the assembly frequently with some splendid pieces of music.

Local News. THE CENTRE RIDING ELECTION.

To the Editor of the Mercury. Sir,—In your issue of the 19th inst., I see an editorial reflecting on my conduct in reference to the late election in the Centre Riding of Wellington. I hope you will do me the justice to allow me a space in your widely circulated journal for the following remarks.

I shall give as brief a statement as possible of what took place from the morning of the nomination to the close of the poll. After an election contest is over, and the excitement that often leads men's minds astray is past, when they reflect on what has taken place they are more likely to come to a right decision than when their worst passions are aroused.

First, as to the difficulty that existed with two Reform candidates in the field. After the attempt to settle it by arbitration had failed, I think it was generally understood that another trial would be made on the morning of the nomination.

That morning when Mr. Dobbin's friends and mine met, we both agreed to leave ourselves in the hands of the party, and whatever decision they would come to we would abide by it. As some of the most influential men of the party were present, as also a number of the delegates that were at the Convention, I thought it was the only proper way to settle the difficulty to leave it to the party to say what should be done. And here I may say that I had neither directly nor indirectly asked any remuneration for my expenses whatever, so that could be no obstacle in the way of the party requiring me to retire.

It is true I was offered $200 in Guelph to retire. If it had been decided on the morning of the nomination that I should have retired, I should have done so. I would never have said that I took it for my own use. I understand that the meeting at Fergus agreed to refer the whole matter to a Committee, consisting of three supporters of each candidate. After a time it was found they could not agree. When Mr. Dobbin and I was called in, neither were willing to give way, but were willing to abide by the decision of our friends. We again left the room, and in a short time we were called in again, and the decision of these six gentlemen was read over to us, representing that they were unanimous in their opinion that Mr. Dobbin and I should keep the field. The general meeting adopted it as such, Mr. Dobbin agreed to it and I submitted to it. But I must confess I did not like it, for Mr. Dobbin was to receive $225. I thought he had made a good job of it. However, as I had left myself in the hands of the party, I was willing to abide by their decision, believing it to be the wish of the party, and that it would put an end to all the existing difficulties; and believing also that all parties were actuated by honorable motives in coming to the above settlement, I was willing to submit to any sacrifice that might be paid over to the good faith that there was then left but one Reform candidate in the field. As Mr. Dobbin and I had no hand in coming to the above arrangement, and not knowing anything about how the above conclusion was come to—it being solely the action of the party—believing then that the difficulties were at end, and whatever might be said in reference to the Convention, by the above arrangement the influence of Reformers should have been transferred to me, for whatever difference of opinion existed as to the first choice of the Convention, it has never been disputed that I was the second choice.

When the nomination took place, the first thing I noticed was a few dissatisfied factionists hunting up a candidate to be put in opposition to me. After trying a number of gentlemen that were too honorable to allow themselves to be made a handle of for their purpose, they at last found one in the person of J. S. Armstrong, that was willing to be their tool. He was put in nomination against me, leaving two Reform candidates again in the field. The first thing I heard of afterwards was a flaming advertisement headed 'Reformers to the rescue! Will you allow yourselves to be bought and sold by James Loghrin for the pally sum of $225? Will you allow the Reform cause to be decided by a game of chance—the best three in five?' In whatever way these six men came to the above decision one thing is certain that I knew nothing of it until a few days afterwards I was told of it in Elora. I found that they had their agents through every municipality in the Riding, circulating all the falsehoods and slanders that the envy of man or the malice of Satan could invent, both as regards my public and private character. I have been informed that in the Township of Erin they must have had nearly one hundred men scattered over it, from the Elora Election to the Rev. Robert Brown, of Garfraxa. It is said they canvassed nearly every house, and that I was represented there as a Roman Catholic, a weak-kneed Reformer, a Conservative at heart with a Reformer's cloak over me, a man unworthy to be trusted in anything; that I had done all I could to keep the gravel road from going into Erin. In other parts of the Riding I was represented as an Orangeman when they thought that would suit their purpose. In every municipality there was nothing left that malice or envy could invent that was not circulated against me. This had the desired effect in all the municipalities in the Riding, except Eramosa. There Armstrong and I have been known for nearly forty years, and all the lies and falsehoods that lie or his party could circulate had not the effect of changing the people's minds that had known me for any length of time.

On the morning of the first polling day, on going to the polling places in the northern part of the Riding, I found it had been circulated that I would not get two dozen votes in Erin or Eramosa; that the people were all turned against me; that any that would vote for me would be throwing their votes away. Then another report was circulated, that my case was hopeless, and that I was going to retire in favor of Armstrong. Not knowing that these reports were in circulation until that day, I had no means of refuting them in so many different poll I found that there were not the number of votes polled for me that I expected (more especially in Erin). From the representations made to me, I expected to get six or seven hundred votes in Erin alone. On Tuesday morning I went to Erin Village, one of the polling places, believing that there was something wrong, and I found that the Armstrong party had represented to the electors that I had retired in his favor, and that on the day previous they were advising my friends to keep back to the next day, as I would leave the field, and if they voted for me their votes would be lost. When I came back to Opreing I found a letter before me, signed by two men, that no one there knew where they lived, stating that I had left the field, and that my friends were trying to secure Armstrong's election. When I came to the polling place in Eramosa, I found a letter had been sent there with Armstrong's son, to the same effect, signed by Robert Wood, of Erin Village. What can we think of men that will not only tell a falsehood, but will write a false statement, and put their name to it.

As to your editorial, you say that on Monday night, when all hopes of my election had vanished, I was pressed on all sides to retire; that no appeal would be listened to, either through personal feeling, spite or jealousy. It is true that two gentlemen did very modestly ask me to retire, and I fully believe they were sincere. One of them told me he intended voting for Armstrong at any rate. I must say that I thought it was a very reasonable request, after all that I had done, in being willing to retire if the party wished; and when it was otherwise decided, that I advanced the money to satisfy Mr. Dobbin (that I thought I had no right to do), but rather than be the means of breaking up the party I submitted to it. And then to come and ask me to retire, and sacrifice all to let Mr. Armstrong have a clear field, it was more than I could stand. Now, sir, I would ask any honorable, right-minded man had I a right to retire for Armstrong after all I had done, after all the falsehoods that he and his party circulated against me, for his friends made no secret of it that they did not expect to elect him, but that they thought they could defeat my election. Had the Reform party not supported Armstrong as they did, the result would have been very different. If they did not want me, why not keep Mr. Dobbin in the field, for I hold it was using him badly to let him go and then take another in his place. But I shall say no more on this subject. I will leave the public to judge whether I was justified in the course I took or not. I hope you will excuse the length of these remarks, I had no idea they would extend to this length when I commenced.

Yours truly, JAMES LOGHRIN. Eramosa, 23rd Sept., 1867.

Ladies' Benevolent Society's Entertainment. The above entertainment was held last night in the Drill Shed. The attendance was but moderate, and not near so large as should have rewarded the charitable efforts of the Ladies' Benevolent Society. An elegant repast was spread for those who were willing to contribute thus indirectly to the assistance of the unfortunates who, without aid, must feel keenly the pains of cold and hunger during the severe season that has already premonished us of its approach. Fruits and fancy work were for sale at low prices, and the money paid for the purchase of these articles all went to the Benevolent Fund. Mrs. Newton exposed for sale a large, rich and beautiful cake, to be sold whole, if possible, if not, to be cut to suit purchasers. The Guelph Band contributed their part towards the pleasures of the evening by favoring the assembly frequently with some splendid pieces of music.

POLICE COURT.—This morning a person giving his name as Wm. Thompson was obliged to put in an appearance before the Police Magistrate. It appears that he got off the 3.33 p.m. train yesterday. He mixed up in the company of some children who were playing on the streets, and by the use of childish management to coax a little girl of six years of age, daughter of Mr. Ridd, to accompany him, down over the Railway, a considerable distance. The child's father followed the fellow, brought him back, and delivered him to one of the constables. The case was adjourned till to-morrow morning, when two charges will be brought against Thompson, one for kidnapping, and a second for assault. If the first charge be sustained the second will not be pressed, otherwise it will. What his intentions were are not yet fully known. Until to-morrow he lies in gaol, when we will perhaps learn further particulars of his character.

ART EXHIBITION.—At a meeting of the Committee of the Mechanic's Institute held on Tuesday night last, it was resolved to hold an Arts exhibition, similar to that held two years ago, and committees for the various wards were appointed to solicit contributions. We believe it is intended to offer one or two prizes for pencil drawings, and to hold the exhibition as early as possible in October. We will give further particulars PRIZE FOR MELODEONS.—We learn by telegraph from Kingston that Messrs. Bell Wood & Co., melodeon and organ makers in Guelph, have been awarded the second prize for their melodeons exhibited. There were six competitors and nearly all of them being old and established makers from the cities, it is very creditable to our Guelph manufacturers that their work was of such excellence as to deserve the second prize.

TO-DAY'S TELEGRAMS. Special Despatches to the Evening Mercury.

From New York. Special to the Guelph Mercury. New York, Sept. 25.—The game of base ball between the Mutuals of this city, and the Union club of Lansingburg, was interrupted by the storm, after four innings. The score stood 13 to 6 in favor of the Mutuals.

From Nashville. Nashville, Sept. 25.—A newspaper controversy between Major James D. Walker and Col. J. A. Smith, ex-federal officers, from Indiana, culminated yesterday in a pistol fight,—Walker was the attacking party, and received three wounds. It is thought he cannot survive. Smith is unhurt; he was arrested and bailed in the sum of $8000.

From Boston. Boston, Sept. 26.—The remains of Sir Frederick Bruce were sent home in the steamship China yesterday.

From Philadelphia. Philadelphia, Sept. 26.—In many of the streets whole rows of houses had the windows shattered by the storm yesterday.

From Reading. Reading, Pa., Sept. 26.—The storm was very violent here. The hail was noted for its size more than number, many were as large as eggs, and some measured eight inches and weighed 3 ounces. Extensive damage was done to window lights.

Cable News! OF TO-DAY. From Italy. Florence, Sept. 25th.—When it became known here that Garibaldi had been arrested, his partisans in this city were greatly exasperated, and appearing in the streets in crowds made a turbulent demonstration of sympathy for their leader. The proceedings finally developed into a riot, but the disturbance, though threatening, was suppressed by government. All the volunteers of Garibaldi who had gathered at various points on the Roman frontier have been compelled to disperse and retire by the Italian troops. King Victor Emmanuel has issued another proclamation, in which he says that the faith of the government, pledged in its treaties with foreign powers, exacted of it the painful duty of arresting Garibaldi, the acknowledged leader of the movement. In direct violation of these treaties, it is said the Italian government has offered to send Garibaldi to his home at Caprera, and relieve him of all constraint, if he will give his parole not to engage in further hostilities against the Roman States.

From Paris. Paris, Sept. 25.—The Monitor and all the journals of an official character this morning praise the decision and firmness of the King of Italy in preventing the lawless invasion of Rome and maintaining the faith of treaty obligations, and say the conduct of the Italian government in the matter affords another strong guarantee for the peace of Europe.

From Manchester. Manchester, Sept. 25.—The commission for trial of the rioters met here in December. The market races were continued. Knight of the Garter won the market biennial, and B. Handicap sweepstakes, Handover won the New Year's

LETTER FROM EUROPE.

Paris and the Exhibition.—Over the Alps—The Great St. Bernard—Switzerland and Italy—Avalanches and Glaciers—Mountain Scenery, &c., &c.

MUNICH, Aug. 19th, 1867.

Paris is full of life and gaiety. Always a gay city, this season it is more gay than ever, and the Parisians seem determined to make the most of their present opportunity in the way of offering innumerable inducements to strangers to expend their money with them.

Geneva is much the same as four years ago, it having increased but little. Its situation is a pleasant one, at the foot of the Lake, and within view of the Jura Mountains and Mount Blanc.

The scenery along the route to the great St. Bernard is by no means uninteresting though not nearly so fine as in many other parts of the country.

BRUTAL MURDER AND ROBBERY. A brutal murder was committed at Kingston on Sunday morning last of the night watchman of Morton's Distillery named Driscoll, an unmarried man of good reputation, who had been engaged in the distillery for a large number of years.

TOWARDS AOSTA [a dirty city, which was founded 400 years before Rome came under the despotic sway of Augustus] and for many miles along the vale of Aosta, the scenery is extremely beautiful and rich in all the glories of that which is picturesquely grand.

CHAMOUNI is pleasantly situated at the foot of Mont Blanc, and is a lovely resort to by English tourists, and few come here without crossing the Mer de Glace—an easy glacier excursion.

ARRIVAL OF THE HIMALAYA.—A despatch from Father Point this morning, states that Her Majesty's troopship Himalaya had passed there, inward bound, at that hour.

very acute angle. It appears it has been ascended twice; the last time was when the accident occurred. A few days after this accident a gentleman was killed by falling from a precipice.

THE VIEWS from the Rhone valley to Leukerbad are exceedingly romantic. On the one hand you look far below you down into the narrow glen, its sides covered with the densest foliage, along which a stream, born among the mountain snows, rushes as with loud defiance around the rocks which impede its progress.

CONCLUDED TO-MORROW.

BRUTAL MURDER AND ROBBERY. A brutal murder was committed at Kingston on Sunday morning last of the night watchman of Morton's Distillery named Driscoll, an unmarried man of good reputation, who had been engaged in the distillery for a large number of years.

THE POLICE were at once put in possession of the facts, and before long were on the trail of the prisoners.

THE PRISONERS were at once subjected to an examination, it was found that the keys of the distillery were gone, which left no doubt that the murder had been committed by some cold-blooded villain for the purpose of putting the watchman out of the way that they might more easily rob the safe.

GARIBALDI ARRESTED.

Garibaldi is a prisoner in the hands of Victor Emmanuel—a prisoner less perhaps on account of his own indiscretion than by the necessities of the King of Italy. The deep detestation which the former entertains to the temporal power of the Pope, together with his spirit of unslumbering activity impelled him to set on foot a movement which the latter did not dare to tolerate or wink at in his dominions. His treaty with Napoleon laid him under obligation to check any insurrection of the Italian people which might tend to endanger the sovereignty of him who holds court in the City of the Seven Hills; and accordingly when Garibaldi and his followers disregarded the warning proclamation which the king issued, he had to resort to a measure which the Garibaldians may consider extreme—that of arresting their leader. Thus Victor Emmanuel has maintained intact the faith which he pledged to Napoleon, maintained it perhaps less from a desire to prevent the old chief from consummating his darling scheme—the unification of Italy—than from a dread of the displeasure of France. With what willingness the king arrested the General, whether his public act was in accordance with his private feelings it were vain to enquire. A few years ago, when Garibaldi was in the zenith of his fame and glory, the decisive step would have tended rather to the further inflaming of the Italian mind, than to the quelling of insurrection. Even yet it would have been doubtful what might have been its effect upon the minds of his followers, upon Italy, upon Europe; but the intelligence has been received that Garibaldi has an offer of release on his parole, and satisfied that the king will not infringe the treaty with France, it is scarcely probable he will prefer confinement, to liberty and quiet. We await anxiously the final settlement of the outbreak. The affairs of European nations are so complicated, and vital so unsatisfactory, that the slightest military movement becomes at once of importance, since we know not how small a spark may set kingdoms and empires in a flame.

Provincial Exhibition.

THE SHOW YESTERDAY.

A large crowd attended the exhibition on Wednesday, and the road to and from the grounds was full from morning till night with passengers' vehicles of every description, from four horse coaches to lumber wagons. At the grounds there were some 25,000 tickets sold; last year on the second day of the exhibition, the Association sold 14,000. The throng in the building and grounds was very great, and in consequence of the crowded state of the building the judges on the musical instruments were unable to do any work until in closed. Many of the judges completed their labors yesterday, and the prizes were put on the prize articles. There were seven competitors for the Canada Company's prize for fall wheat. It was awarded to G. Jones, township of Murray, Northumberland. The wheat weighed over 63 pounds. It is a bright, plump berry, but not equal to some shown at previous exhibitions. One of the 'Souders' variety and was grown on high soil. The second prize was taken by Wm. S. Guess, of Loughborough. The show of grains altogether is inferior. The Prince of Wales prize for the best pen of Cotswold sheep was awarded to Mr. F. W. Stone.

SERIES OF ACCIDENTS.—The Dumfries Reporter gives a chapter of accidents, which occurred in and around Galt since the 14th inst. Summarily they are as follows: Mr. Wm. Thompson, of Mill Creek Dumfries, while splitting firewood about the date we have mentioned, chopped off three toes of his left foot. Mr. David Smith had his hand badly mangled by a cake-cutting machine in Murdoch's Bakery on Thursday afternoon last. Mr. Roger Robson, while attempting a planing machine on Saturday last had the fore finger of one hand caught by the growing match-head, and the bone torn away between the first and second joint. A man named John Ramsay was seriously injured on Monday forenoon in the Dumfries foundry, by the falling of a moulding box which he and another were moving with the crane. His hip joint was dislocated and his back seriously injured. His condition is critical. A team of horses with a wagon, attached to them by the driver off the lead of shingles they were drawing and injuring him very seriously, then running against a gig and upsetting it, and doing it and its occupant considerable injury. Lastly a young girl named Mary Stewart employed at the Collier Factory had the third finger of each hand crushed, and the tips nearly taken off by the cramping machine.

DEFEAT OF THE RAILWAY.—A vote of the members of the township of Minto on the law granting a bonus to the railway was taken on Tuesday the 24th inst. at the schoolhouse, in Harriston. The law was sustained; the vote was 24 for, and 64 against it.

LETTER FROM EUROPE.

Paris and the Exhibition—Over the Alps—The Great St. Bernard—Switzerland and Italy—Avalanches and Glaciers—Mountain Scenery, &c., &c.

Correspondence of the Mercury.

MUNICH, Aug. 19th, 1867.

Paris is full of life and gaiety. Always a gay city, this season it is more gay than ever, and the Parisians seem determined to make the most of their present opportunity in the way of offering innumerable inducements to strangers to expend their money with them, and also in the charges generally made. The Exposition is certainly a successful one. The collection of articles is not only enormous, but also generally superior; the machinery is well represented, and some of it gives proof of the highest mechanical genius. There is a Bible stand from which the Scriptures in many languages are distributed, and thus the Word of Life will be scattered over many lands. Geneva is much the same as four years ago, it having increased but little. Its situation is a pleasant one, at the foot of the Lake, and within view of the Jura Mountains and Mount Blanc. In its vicinity are a multitude of the most handsome villas. The sail up the lake is a very pleasant one, the scenery at the upper end being particularly lovely. The scenery along the route to the great St. Bernard is by no means uninteresting though not nearly so fine as in many other parts of the country. Near Martigny there is a wonderful rift in the mountain, whence issues a good sized stream. Above it in some places the rocks arch over almost meeting at the top, some hundreds of feet high. There are footbridges overhanging the stream, being suspended from iron rods let into the rock, so that there is a safe passage for a long distance into the gorge. For about five miles there is no carriage way to the Hospice, and enormous wastes of snow—the remains of huge avalanches—had to be crossed. The reception by the monks was full of hospitality and kindness. The Hospice was founded in the tenth century, and is at an elevation of 8000 feet above the level of the sea (on the Alps there are some passes 2000 feet higher), and here is the point of separation between the waters that flow into the Adriatic and the Mediterranean. Not far hence a temple of Jupiter once stood. The collection of what sometimes be intense; the thermometer has been known to fall as low as thirty, and never is it higher than twenty degrees. About twenty thousand persons pass up and down the Mount annually. In winter the crossing must be dangerous, many lives being lost at that season of the year, of which the number of houses and lodges, more or less decayed that are to be seen in various positions around the Morgue, give ample testimony. Four persons died in the Pass last winter. The loss of life would be much greater, but for the kind assistance of the Monks, (of whom twelve or fourteen reside here,) and of the dogs. It is said one of the dogs now dead saved fourteen lives—he it is known the name was Barry. Unfortunately most of the pure breed (which are a cross between the Newfoundland and Pyrenean) were killed by an avalanche. The slopes opposite the Hospice are covered with flowers in the height of summer; some were in bloom when I passed, and the Canada thistle flourishes within a few feet of the Hospice. 8,000 feet above the sea is the height spoken of above which dwells perpetual frost, but this depends upon the position. I have seen large tracts about this height literally blue and yellow with multitudes of flowers. A flower of the violet tribe seems to flourish at a great height. The woods are from beneath the mountains to an elevation of from 6000 to 7000 feet. The Alpine rose, which is sweet scented, blooms below this, and a varied host of flowers makes the valleys even more rich in loveliness. The scenery on the Italian side of the Pass is much finer than on the northern or Swiss side.

Towards Aosta (a dirty city, which was founded 400 years before Rome came under the despotic sway of Augustus), and for many miles along the vale of Aosta, the scenery is extremely beautiful and rich in all the glories of that which is picturesquely grand. As the traveller pursues his way among groves of chestnuts and walnuts of stately growth, trellised vineyards of luxuriant vegetation, flourishing orchards, meadows made lovely with the hues of many flowers, ever near a river foaming and dashing in its rocky bed, he may look upward over fields of grain of deep green interspersed among the mountain forests, his eye taking a range of many miles on either hand, including within its range many a hamlet, a church spire, as well as silvery rill and noble waterfall. The rugged heights, beyond where dwells eternal snow, from Cornaz, which is very close to Mount Blanc, on the Italian side there is a very fine route to Chamouni by a number of passes, some of which are always covered with snow. When I passed I had about eight hours travelling in snow. In one place great caution was required, as the snow sloped at a fearful angle towards a lake, the shallow part of which was edged over with the snow.

Chamouni is pleasantly situated at the foot of Mont Blanc, and is greatly resorted to by English tourists, and few come here without crossing the Mer de Glace—an easy glacier excursion. From the Breven, a mountain immediately opposite Mont Blanc there is a magnificent view, the point of observation being about 9,000 feet high. Mont Blanc is distinctly seen, and a long range of mountains, and a large portion of many glaciers, which have their outlet in the vale of Chamouni. The Mer de Glace is so called from its resemblance to the waves of the sea after a storm. Its appearance is very wonderful and from it are to be seen some majestic pinnacled mountains which seem to perforate the sky. The ice is very brilliant and of a deep blue color. I may remark, that the illusion with regard to distances in mountain views is very great. From the Breven, Mont Blanc (which is 200 feet higher than any of his fellows) looks as though it were only ten feet. Eight miles across from the Breven to it would appear to be about a mile, and its distance from the Dome de Geneve, which is two miles, seems to be about a chain. In the vale of Chamouni forty days' indulgence is offered to the Romanist on his repeating the following short petition before the image of the Virgin:—"O Mary conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to you!" From Chamouni there is a beautiful pass, twenty-four miles, to Martigny. The first part of the way there are magnificent views of mountain and glacier—the latter part as the road winds down the mountain among forests of fir and groves of deciduous trees of the richest growth and foliage, there are to be seen views of the valley, etc., which are full of loveliness and beauty. Zermatt, situated about 70 miles from Martigny has in its vicinity some of the finest mountain and glacier scenery in Switzerland. From here the Matterhorn is distinctly seen. This mountain has a form peculiar to itself, being very acute angle. It appears it has been ascended twice; the last time was when the accident occurred. A few days after this accident a gentleman was killed by falling from a precipice. About five hours' walk above Zermatt the view of mountain and glacier is most sublime. It is completely encircled with long chains of mountains, and from it I counted no less than twenty glaciers, some of them of enormous size, that is nearly twenty miles in length, and from half a mile to several miles wide; the depth is from fifty to one thousand feet. When the glaciers that have their outlet in the Zermatt valley advance, those whose outlet is in the Saas valley, which is on the other side of the mountain range that lies behind Zermatt recedes, and vice versa. The views from the Rhone valley to Leukerbad are exceedingly romantic. On the one hand you look far below you down into the narrow glen, its sides covered with the densest foliage, along which a stream, born among the mountain snows, rushes as with loud defiance around the rocks which impede its progress, to join with the Rhone; on the other hand you see mountains rugged and bare towering to an enormous height, and by moonlight appearing to hang over as though ready to overwhelm in sure destruction whatever might be within their far-reaching range. At Leukerbad are baths, which are very beneficial for some diseases. They are supplied by springs of more than 100 degrees Fahrenheit—90 to 99 degrees is the heat of the bath. Persons of both sexes and of all ages bathe promiscuously and you may see them sitting up to their necks, playing chess, etc., or with books or work on floating tables, or perchance taking breakfast. Eight hours a day in the water is the time allotted to the patient when able to bear it. The steamer pass is a wonderful piece of engineering, the road absolutely being built along a precipice, and much of the way gouged out of the rock; and at the summit, from a height of several thousand feet it looks as though you might throw a stone upon the town. The view is very grand all the way over the pass, and toward the Lake of Thun, we have a view of indescribable loveliness.

BRUTAL MURDER AND ROBBERY.

A brutal murder was committed at Kingston on Sunday morning last of the night watchman of Morton's Distillery named Driscoll, an unmarried man of good reputation, who had been engaged in the distillery for a large number of years. His body, shockingly mangled, was found near his usual haunt, on Sunday morning about six o'clock by a Mrs. Finnigan, who was going down to the lake at that hour to draw a pail of water. Frightful cuts and contusions were found on various parts of the unfortunate man's head and chest. Mrs. Finnigan at once gave the alarm, and soon a number of the neighbours having collected the body was removed to the house of Mr. Hipson, not far from the distillery, where Driscoll had boarded for some time past. As soon as the body was subjected to an examination, it was found that the keys of the distillery were gone, which left no doubt that the murder had been committed by some cold-blooded villain for the purpose of putting the watchman out of the way that they might more easily rob the safe. The safe in the office of the distillery was at once examined, which was found open, the ground strewn with papers, and some $2,500 taken away. A heavy sledge, a chisel and a stout iron bar, all of which had undoubtedly been used in breaking into the safe, were found in its immediate neighbourhood.

The police were at once put in possession of the facts, and before long were on the trail of the prisoners. It was found they had crossed over to Cape Vincent, and gone from thence to Watertown, in New York State, they registered their names at the hotel as C. E. Ward, Wm. Howard and Edward Jones. The Watertown police were soon on their track and arrested them. They found in their possession $800 of money, a portion of the sum taken from the distillery. Blood stains were discovered on Adams' shirt, coat and trousers, and some spots on Howard's cap. The prisoners were at once surrendered by the Watertown authorities and brought to Kingston. The fourth supposed murderer was arrested on a steamer near Cape St. Vincent on Monday night. He gave his name as Meade, but on being taken to Kingston he was found to be Alex. Gemmill, son of A. J. Gemmill, a boot maker, and respectable citizen of Toronto. Gemmill on being brought up for examination turned Queen's evidence and gave full information of the murder and the concealment of the money. He says he was sitting on the steps outside the brewery when the watchman came along. Gemmill gave the alarm, and Allen [one of the others who gave a false name as above] came down with the bar with which he was opening the safe, and struck the watchman across the temple. He then jumped on the top of him to finish him, when Gemmill called out to not murder the man. He [Gemmill] then picked the watchman up and wiped off some blood. The four murderers then went up stairs, opened the safe, and were off in the boat in about 15 minutes. They got some $2,600. The Recorder, Police Magistrate and two policemen went with Gemmill to Long Island. They went a small way inland, and there he showed them an old rotten log, under which were three packages of money, amounting to $1,875. They brought it away, and then Gemmill went with them to the scene of the murder, and described it, and showed where some of the tools were thrown into the river. Jones, another of the ruffians, also gave full information against his comrades. All four are now safely lodged in Kingston jail. Gemmill in the course of his confession further stated that himself and companions were the same who perpetrated the safe robberies in Hamilton a short time since. After their operations there they went to Kingston, and have since been engaged in planning the robbery of the safe at the brewery, which enterprise will undoubtedly result in terminating their careers of villainy and murder. Another of the gang, who has given his name as Howard, to the authorities is rightly named Hart, and hails from Oawego. He is reported to be the brother of a notorious trio of sisters of the same name, who have followed a disreputable calling in Hamilton for some years.

A despatch from Kingston this (Thursday) morning says, Jones, one of the prisoners charged with the murder of Driscoll has also made a clean breast. Howard's real name is Childs; he is from London and was at one time an engine-driver on the Great Western railway. The examination is still in progress.

THURSDAY EVE. SEPTEMBER 26.

NORAH CUSHALEEN

OR THE
HAUNTED CASTLE.

'I'm a Scotchman, mem,' answered Andrew, modestly, 'I am Maister Hargreave's servant.'
'Oh!' exclaimed Mary. 'And your master—is he here?'
'Deed no, mem.' 'They has carried him awa.'

'Away! Oh! tell me where.'
'To Captain Jack's gang,' answered Terry. 'Maister Blantire wanted him out of the way till you and him were married, Miss Mary.'
'Oh!' she wildly exclaimed, clasping her hands, 'then he is lost! he is lost!'
'Praise the Virgin, I hope not,' said Terry. 'Me and Maister Donaldson are goin' up the mountains to try our best to get his honour out of their hands. You see I'm a little bit disgraced, and don't expect any one of the unchristian, sheivin' blackguards will know me. So just keep up the brave Irish spirit, Miss Mary, and we'll come down with a protector that will save yer purty self from that bad hearted man, Malvrin Blantire.'

'My certie, and he'll doe that,' put in Andrew with great emphasis. 'Only let Maister Hargreave win free, and he'll clear the oen of several folk, and gar them look ower their nose at the nearest. I forgive me for speakin' so freely, Miss, but yer faither himself, when he knew wha he is, will no object tae hae him for a son-in-law. In a respects, even accordin' tae yer faither's ain notions, he's a thousand times better than the scoundral that meant tae play ye sic a plisky the night.'
'Oh, you know of that,' cried Mary, as a strong shudder passed through her frame.
'We only heard by hearin' the vileans speakin' about it on the road, after they had been frightened wi' a ghost or something.'

'It was the spirit of your sister Norah,' said Mary, turning to Terry. 'Oh, I know who was the author of her ruin. It was he—he who would have forced me to be his wife. Her shadowy appearance saved me; for when he beheld the apparition, his guilty heart quailed, and he fled, his accomplices following in almost as great terror. Then I fainted.'

'And we got ye lyin' in the chamber,' said Andrew, who thought it best that Mary should not for the present, at least, be undecieved as to the nature of the appearance that had terrified them all.—
'We got ye there,' he continued, 'and brought ye awa' without waitin' a moment, for the rascals were comin' back for ye. The'll ha' discovered yer absence by this time, and if ye are able tae walk we had better move, for fear they find us out.'

Thus admonished, Mary at once rose to her feet, declaring that she was quite recovered; and with a charming sweetness and earnestness, she gratefully thanked them for the invaluable service they had rendered her.
When they reached the beach, they found Hargreave's boat safely moored in the little creek in which it had been left, and entering it, they pulled out into the bay.
By this time Mary's resolution was taken. She would return at once to Kendal Castle, and demand her father's protection against such another outrage. Convinced now that Malvrin was the betrayer of Norah Cushaleen, she hoped that this discovery would induce her father to cease the attempt to force a union between herself and the betrayer of the wretched girl who, to escape the scorn of the world and her father's upbraidings, sought a grave for herself and the child in the dark depths of the pool.
On the other side of a promontory in the far-stretching bay was a little beach or landing place not far from Kendal Castle. Here was Mary put ashore and her companions insisted on accompanying her at least to the gate of the park. But she resolutely refused the escort.—
The morning light was now breaking over the landscape, and she was familiar with the way.
'No,' she heroically exclaimed. 'It is a thousand times more important that you speed on your brave and noble errand. And, oh! may heaven prosper you.'

'Ha'e ye ony word for Maister Hargreave?' asked Andrew, with a sly twinkle in his eye.
'Tell him—' Mary hesitated, and a blush overspread her countenance. 'Yes, tell him,' she resumed, 'that I will be true and constant, and will pray fervently for his return, and—'
She hesitated again and blushed still more deeply, her hands meanwhile being nervously employed in unfastening a ribbon on her bosom.
'This small piece of ribbon,' she continued, holding it out to Andrew, 'will give it to him as—a remembrance.'
'I'll do that,' said Andrew, as he took it from her.
She shook them both warmly by the hand, smiled sweetly through her bushes, turned away and was gone.
'She's a fine lassie,' said Andrew, 'a fine, bonnie guid lassie, and worthy o' being his wife.'

They pulled off again, and some hours later came ashore at a part of the bay, opposite the towering mountains of Skerryvoe

Business Education!

A practical business education has now become a necessity to every young man contemplating a business career. With such education young men are destined of this to regulate to success.
The business education the British American Commercial College of Toronto imparts, and it is a source of pride to the proprietors that their graduates are at the present time filling positions of honor and responsibility in some of the highest Mercantile Houses and Banking Institutions of our country. Stronger testimony to the thoroughness of this education could not be given than the following letter from J. G. Worts, Esq., President of the Board of Trade:

Toronto, Dec. 16, 1865.
Messrs. Musgrove & Wright.—Dear Sirs—
I cannot express too strongly my appreciation of your efforts to establish a model house of business. I consider that such a system as yours is of the greatest importance both to the employer and the employed, as it saves the former the time and labor of teaching every new hand, and the latter the waste of time involved in a long apprenticeship. Your admirable system of business is a complete remedy for this defect, and your great success in this department is made clearly manifest by the air of reality that your students display in their model transactions, and by their downheartedness when they fail to meet their engagements. I can testify to the excellence of your system from personal experience, having at the present time in the employment of the firm I belong to three young men who were educated at your institution. I wish you every success in your laudable enterprise.

I remain, dear Sirs, yours, &c., J. G. WORTS.

The first prize for Business Penmanship was awarded this Commercial College at the late Provincial Exhibition in Toronto. Graduates are examined and their diplomas signed by a Board of Examiners composed of practical business men. Graduates are also assisted in situations, if required.
A circular is regularly published, giving a detailed account of system, regulations, terms, &c., and may be had by enclosing stamp and address.

INDIA & CHINA TEA CO'Y.

Home Depot at London and Liverpool.
Canada Depot, 23 Hospital Street, Montreal.

THE India and China Tea Company beg to call the attention of the Canadian community to their direct imported Teas, which for purity and excellence will be found unequalled.
The Company have made arrangements whereby they have secured the entire produce of some of the best plantations in Assam and on the slopes of the Himalayas, and by judicious blending of these magnificent Teas with the best varieties of China produce, they are enabled to offer to the public Teas of quality and flavor highly unknown to the general consumer. These Teas are in high favor in England and France, and a single trial will prove their superiority.
The Company supply two qualities only, either Black, Green or Mixed. Their Black Teas will be found to possess great brightness and flavor, combined with colour and strength, and to be entirely different to the flat and vapid articles usually sold as Black Teas; while their Green Teas are equally free from the deleterious mineral powder so commonly used for coloring the leaf.

PRICES: Rich, full-flavoured Tea, for family use a real genuine and fine article 70 cents per lb. Finest quality procurable, one dollar per lb.
The above can be had either Black, Green or Mixed.
To be had in packets of Quarter Pound Half Pound, One Pound, and upwards, or in tin canisters of 5 lbs. and upwards, from the Company's Agents in all the chief towns of Canada.—N.B. All the packages are lined with tin foil paper, and the Tea will consequently retain its flavour any length of time.
Opaava.—All packages have the Company's trade-mark, without which none are genuine.
