How to Pay That Mortgage

If you live you will pay off your indebtedness. Suppose you do not live? There's the rub! The mortgage lives on.

Suppose you make a contract with the Ontario Mutual Life Assurance Company, one of the oldest and strongest moneyed institutions in this country, to pay the mortgage if you die before liquidating it, and return to you a tidy sum of money if you live?

C. E. German is the general agent-he will be glad to tell you more about it.

By Great Britain, With Germany Assenting.

Mr. Balfour Declines to Discuss the Matter.

Russia to Summon a Peace Conference Soon.

The Impassioned Statement of Madame Dreytus-France Talks of War-Mr. Carnegie's Latest Purchase.

London, Sept. 3 .- It is reported on the stock exchange that the Anglo-German alliance, or understanding, relates to the British purchase of Delagoa Bay, with Germany assenting. As a result Kaffir and Portuguese securities are booming.

The Daily Mail says this morning: We learn that Mr. Balfour and the German ambassador, Count Von Hatzfeldt, signed on Wednesday a document, preliminary to a treaty, which will give Germany a free hand in Asia Minor and allow England to lease Delagoa Bay from Portugal at a cost between £2,000,000 and £5,000,000. Germany will, as a further connection, support Great Britain's claim for the abolition of the mixed triounal in Egypt. Lord Salisbury a copy of the treaty. Mr. Baifour, when questioned on the subject yesterday, absolutely declined to alscuss the reports in circulation regarding an Angio-German alliance.

In financial circles, where the reports orginated, a tendency is shown to support Portugese stocks, which have been very firm, and South African shares have also improved, on the prospect of the settlement of the long vexed Delagoa Bay difficulty.

STIFLING INQUIRY

No Reopening of the Dreyfus Case Ordered-Stifling Inquiry-Talk of War.

Rome, Sept. 3 .-- It is asserted on high authority that the Italian military attache in Paris, Col. Panzzardi, the writer of two or three documents-the ones dated March and April, 1890-upon which M. Cavaignac said he relied when questioning the guilt of Dreyfus in the Chamber of Deputies a few weeks ago, will not be allowed to publish and Dreyfus revelations. Paris, Sept. 3 .- A member of the Chamber of Deputies had an interview with the minister for war, M. Cavaignac, on the recent developments in the Dreyfus case. The minister reiterated that he was convinced of the guilt of the prisoner. But he added that at the same time he was determined to punish all who had been derelict in their duty. The deputy afterwards declared that so long as M. Cavaignac was minister for war there would be no revision of the Drevfus case. The report put in circulation by a news agency that a revision of the Dreyfus case had been decided upon, appears to be premature.

The most pessimistic feelings exist is the common belief that Great Britain and Russia are on the eve of war, and that the consequences of the Dreyfus scandal will involve France in war with Germany. The government is doing its best to stem the rising tide of agitation by a studied quiescence, which scandalizes the Journal des Debats and other papers; but it may succeed in getting over the crisis. Faure ignores the reproaches of the press and remains at Havre.

London, Sept. 3.-M. de Blowitz, Paris correspondent of the Times, telegraphs that he has obtained the views of a "distinguished German on the Dreyfus situation." This individual admitted that Germany, by speaking DISCREDITED.

Romantic Career of Judge Mackey of New York.

His Wife the Daughter of a West Virginian Who Does Not Know Her Whereabouts.

Tangled Web of Circumstantial Evidence That Leads to the Belief That Judge Mackey Is a Bigamist.

"Truth is stranger than fiction," and the recent escapades of an old man who registers at hotels as Judge Thomas Jefferson Mackey, of New York (or Chicago sometimes), is an excellent proof of the truth of this adage.

On Monday last there alighted from the Chicago, express an old man, who has to all appearances about reached the allotted space of threescore years and ten, in company with a tall, well-latter place he went to Chicago, in ordeveloped young lady of dark com- der to secure two important witnesses plexion, and dark eyes, upon whose head, in a picturesque roll, was wound to annul the marriage with a bountiful supply of jet black hair. No particular attention was paid to the couple then, but on going to the Grigg House the clerk was somewhat struck when the old man deliberately and beautifully wrote the words, "T. J. Mackey and wife, Chicago."

The couple had dinner at the Grigg, and then set out to find a boardinghouse. They found pleasant quarters at Mrs. Green's, 398 Queen's avenue, to which the curious and loving couple went in the afternoon. In that haven of rest and quiet there was a newspaper man, and the unusual conduct of the "judge" and his "wife" were soon the objects of annoying and suspicious scrutiny, and the chief topic of conversation. Just how the facts became known is best kept secret. At any rate, after the first night of Judge Mackey's stay, sleep is said to have been out of the question. The young woman and the old man did not love one another so devotedly that they were above those little love-spats which the boarders thought were boisterous enough for a bar-room. On one occasion, when the ocean of their undying love was perturbed. and the young lady threatened to leave her old hubby, he pleaded with her to remain, and then dared her to leave. Gossip and rumors of all kinds were rife as to who they were and where they came from. To find this out was a task. The old man followed the lady like a turnkey would a prisoner, seldom or never losing sight of her. At times she would pet him with all the fondness of a dutiful daughter, at other times scold and threaten him. Mrs. Green, the landlady, gave Mackey notice to leave, and the woman aded with Mrs. Green to help her to escape from the man, who was an object of terror to her. Mrs. Green declined, and it is alleged that Mrs. Mackey took this opportunity of confiding her troubles to her.

She said her name was Miss Katherine Porterfield, of Charleston, West Virginia, and that the judge to whom she was married was a bigamist, as ne had wedded Sarah Curtis, who was still living. She also said the Chicago police were after him. Mrs. Green washed her hands of the whole affair, and the "cooing couple" left the house. On Wednesday the judge engaged room and board at Mrs. Doupe's, 456 Talbot street. Here, as on Queen's avenue, the old man watched her as a cat would a mouse. Mrs. Mackey had left Mrs. Green's with reluctance and after going to Mrs. Doupe's paid Mrs. Green a visit or two. On one occasion Mrs. Mackey said that she was a prisoner and wanted to get away from him, that Mackey would allow her no liberty and gave her no money. The story of the young-old couple found its way to the press, and then she and Mackey were ordered to leave 'wife" of talking, and, with a fierce ook on that cowed her into submission, demanded an explanation. She pleaded with him, and denied that she had said anything. They left the house

Mackey, on her way out, told the girls that she would "get away from him The Advertiser reporter searched for the curious couple, and located them at the corner of Dundas and Richmond streets, where they rode on a Springbank car to the Grigg House. They did not sit together, and, to say the least, the young lady looked rather abashed. At the Grigg House the "Judge" registered as T. J. Mackey and wife, of New York.

together, with four trunks, and Mrs.

A card was sent to Judge Mackey, and he invited the reporter to his room, where his young wife sat in deep thought. "You're a journalist?" was the judge's salutation. "Yes, judge," the representative replied, "and you doubtless are aware of the object of my visit. Have you seen the newspaper story concerning yourself and wife' The judge introduced his wife to the reporter, and an interview lasting from The reporter asked Mr. Mackey for a statement, as to the accuracy of the

"But you wan have so many libel suits," put in his wife, as she smiled and her eyes glistened with a naughty little twinkle.

The judge started to make a statement, but his wife protested against an interview. The judge, however, persuaded her, not by any argument, but by a look and demeanor that showed great authority. The reporter could not understand it. One moment she was holding his hand, the next scolding him for attempting to say somehing about her, and a moment later fondly smoothing his brow with her soft white hands, which looked as though they were strangers to work The judge told his disconnected story which was repeatedly interrupted by objections and protests from his wife He said he had been judge of the supreme court of South Carolina for 15 years and retired in 1886. He had trayeled extensively in Europe and Asia-While on a tour in 1886 his first wife, Mrs. Lloyd, of Charlestown, West Virginia, had instituted proceeding and secured a divorce on the ground of infidelity, and as he was not able to file a protest, the divorce was granted. his lawful wife. "I have not lived with her since. The statements that have been made about my unproper treat-ment of my wife are false," he said. "My wife does not drink and never takes liquor (nothwithstanding the fact that she sipped ale at the very oment). She is a devoted and a loving wife to me and I'll stand by her.' In no house in this city had they ever quarreled, he said. He entered into an explanation that he suffered from rheumatism, and had come here to be theated at the sulphur baths, and that Dr. Drake had treated him for the lame shoulder. Mrs. Mackey would allow no reference to herself to be made, and more than once told the judge they had better part, because she was unhappy, and would go to her brother, Charles Porterfield, of the Edgar Publishing Company, New York.

"Are you a prisoner?" he demanded,

"and don't you love me as a devoted wife should?" Some mysterious power seemed overcome her just when the judge willed, and she agreed to everything he said.

His wife, he said was the daughter of Col. Porterfield, of the Charlestown Bank, West Virginia. She was a high-born lady, intelligent, highly educated and cultured.

The reporter agreed with him to a certain extent, but thought the education of her tastes had been sadly ne-

He had married Katherine on July 19 last, had gone to Washington and as he intended to institute proceedings Curtis on the ground above mentioned. From there they came to London.

At this point the wife said: "Oh, judge, I will leave you. I'll place myself under this gentleman's protection, and I will go. I will go," she shrieked, in a rather hysterical voice. "You won't leave me," he pleaded, and the same occult influence again brought her to submission, and she "No, dear Judge," and stroked his gray hair. Turning to the reporter, the young woman smiled and said: "You'll deny all those things, won't you?" Then the judge chimed in and said: "You have seen her smile and how cheerfully she talks. She doesn't look like a prisoner, does she? A New York reporter had the impertinence to suggest that I had hypnotized her, and called her a girl-wife. She is no girl-I am 60 and she is 29. Why, she's been in society 10 years." "Yes, say that," smiled Mrs. Mackey.

The Judge—They talk as though a woman of 29 couldn't love a man of 60. That story is a piece of scandal. He then told the reporter that he had assurances from the girl's father that no action would be taken against him for bigamy for 60 days after the mar-"Will you let me go to my brother's, in New York, judge?" she asked.

"Yes, you shall go to Charles Porter field's. Northport, Long Island, the illegality of that marriage is established in the courts.' Judge Mackey says he was a confederate captain under Gen. Lee, and that his family is connected with the Washingtons by marriage. He claims to have written several legal works. The reporter volunteered to find her a home among kind friends if the girl ing his hand in hers she said, I had better go, don't you, judge? But the judge didn't. The reporter bid them good-bye very willingly, as there was anything but

The judge called her "Dear Catherine," and she said something which sounded like an order to keep away, when the judge said, "Katherine, ducky, shall I shoot myself, shall I blow my brains out. guess I will."

But he didn't all the same. He ordered "ice water" and spoke of a "long The old man told his wife she had better have a drink, which she evidently took, as she remarked at the time, "If I took all there was in the bottle it would make me feel like a different

The Boys On Our Warships and How They Are Trained.

An Experience That Tends to Make Them Dignified, Self-Controlled Men Well Qualified to Make Their Way Either Afloat or Ashore.

Apprenticeship in the United States navy is capable of making either a man or a reprobate of a boy. He is given every inducement to become a good, solid man. whether for continuation as a member of a man-of-war's ship's company or for the earning of a livelihood ashore. The officers of the American navy give the apprentice boys considerably the better of it over the bluejackets who ship as such in all that concerns their interest and advancement. and the boy who during the period that he wears the apprentice's figure of eight knot on his mustering shirt goes wrong and becomes a rowdy and a sea lawyer has only his innate cussedness to blame for it.

The whole tendency of the apprentice's training aboard an American man-of-war makes for the conversion of the lad into a dignified, self controlled, able man, a matchless seaman and a tiptop gunner, to say nothing of the substantial equipment it furnishes him for lucrative employment should he elect upon the conclusion of his apprenticeship to settle down ashore. It is the old sailors, the men who have spent about an equal number of years in the merchant marine and in the United States navy, who possess the greatest power for good or evil in making or breaking American naval apprentices. The officers aft hold the lads with a strong rein when they have them under immediate instruction, but the boys live forward among the men, and they form their characters in the If the material is in them, it is bound to come out. The old time naval sailors can tell at a glance whether a just shipped boy or a boy fresh aboard a cruising man-ofwar from a training ship has the "makings" of a finished sailor and a good shipmate in his composition. If their careful inspection of such a boy convinces them. that the lad is worth their pains, they "go to work" on him from the very outset of his cruising career, season him with all of the practical ship and gun information that they themselves have picked up after years of experience, and thus supplement the technical education that the boy receives from the officers. The sailors who thus take a kindly interest in a boy who looks promising do not treat him with partiality, and he gets swatted about just as much as the apprentice who is a slug-

But the interest they exhibit in drilling sea lore into his mind and their pains in instructing him on every little valuable detail as the occasion arises plainly show that they have "got him in their minds." and observation proves that the boys who are thus picked out by the old timers up forward as being worth these efforts are the lads who get the warrant officers' blouses when their apprenticeship is over. Ask any warrant officer in the United States navy today about the struggle he had to finally attain the wearing of a sword from the wearing of a figure of eight knot, and he will begin to speak affectionately of two or three grumpy, savage old bos'n's mates or quartermasters to whom he claims he owes most of his success. It is a matter of pride with the old timers to thus boost a lad up the lad-

From his very first day on board either a training ship or a man-of-war proper the unfledged youngster is expected to hop right out of his boyhood and to assume to all intents and purposes the full status of a man. He lives among men that have ranged the world most of their lives; he works alongside of them, and almost as much work is expected from him as from the old timers; he puts up with the same amount of hardship, toes the same mark of discipline, is quite as responsible at the mast for derelictions and just as liable to a tour in the brig in double irons for misconduct as his older shipmates, who regard the circumnavigation of the globe as a bagatelle. The boy who at the outset of his naval life sheds a lonesome tear or two in his hammock, but who keeps up a brave front when in view of his shipmates, is the lad who may be always marked for a winner. It would be out of nature for a youngster of any sort of sensibilities whatsoever to plunge into man-of-war life, with all of its apparent rigidity at first sight, without being a bit taken aback and oppressed by the roughness of it all. The navy is composed, as a whole, fore and aft, of genuine masculine men and of deeply affectionate and unswervingly loyal men, too, when their esteem and confidence have been won, but in no environment is the parade of even the slightest suspicion of sentimentality more quickly frowned upon than upon the forward deck of a man-of-war. From the purely physical point of view apprenticeship in the navy is a fine thing for a lad. Nine out of ten naval apprentices when they attain their majorities are strapping, rugged, brawny men, capable of enduring any amount of hardship and possessing a quality of health and soundness that is bound to see them through many ups and downs ashore should they elect to quit the sea when they reach the age of 21, which not many of them do. by the way. Of course in order to get into the navy at all the apprentice must be sound of body, but many of the lads only get into the service by narrow margins, owing to their being undersized or of no very rugged character of physical make up. Once they get to work on the decks of a man-of-war, providing there is nothing latent and constitutional the matter with them, it is amazing to see how the lads begin to spread and grow. They are put through the most exacting exercises, quite aside from their daily bit of hosvy work-exercises that are designed to bring every muscle of the body into play-and the result is that they very soon begin to expand, and the steel gets into their muscles, there to remain as long as they live. When the apprentices emerge from their apprenticeship and ship over as full fledged bluejackets at the seaman gunner rate, they are given first call in the distribution of petty officer prizes and are, as stated, eligible for the promotion to the rank of warrant officers. For these reasons apprentices are never called upon during the service as boys to perform any menial tasks on shipboard. The whole idea of naval apprenticeship in the American navy is to inculcate uprightness, dignity and manliness into the lads, for upon the character of these boys the future of the forward ends of American men-of-war is known to depend .- Philadelphia Times While the wedding service is proceeding in Japan the bride kindles a torch, and the bridegroom lights a fire from it and Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 3 .- One safe hit, an attempted sacrifice which went safe, a short fly that fell between two fielders, made up the total hitting of the Toronto team in the second inter-city championship match here yesterday. The Eastern Leaguers could not touch Bradford. Two men were out in the sixth before Toronto had a man reach first, and then a base on balls did it.

In the seventh, a base on balls, a scratch bit by Casey, a sacrifice by Freeman that Bradford should have made a double play on, a long fly out by Gatins, and a safe hit by Taylor gave Toronto its only two runs of the game. Hamilton scored three in the first on a single by Hagerty, a twobagger by Elton, a three-bagger by Congalton, and Collins' long fly to center. Another two-bagger by Elton, followed by Congalton's second three-bagger, gave Hamilton another run in the sixth. The fielding was to be a sixth. the sixth. The fielding was magnificent on both sides. Dean's error in the ninth was the only one of the day, and it was followed by a beautiful double play that retired the side. The score:

Manila, Sept. 3.-Several shiploads of insurgent troops have invaded the southern islands with the view of seizing everything possible prior to the settlement of the peace conditions. Gen. Rios, the Spanish commander, with a flotilla of gunboats, is acting energetically, but the insurgents have captured the outlying islands of Rom-blom and Palawan, where they found treasure to the amount of $42,000. The prisoners captured have arrived here. Delegates from the Hong Kong insurgent junta are to have an interview with United States Consul Williams tonight, and it is thought this possibly may result in a settlement of the insurgent question.

RUDYARD KIPPLING AT CLOSE RANGE.

A small man, dressed to match his old pipe-and rather fond of cutting jokes at his own expense on both scores-with prominent spectacles and prominent chin, dark mustache, keen dark eyes, keen expression, quick movements, and astonishingly quick rejoinders in talking; the distinctive note of him was keenness altogether, but sympathetic keenness. Somehow one began with an idea that he would be a rather cocksure and self-confident person. He is, of course, quite young; far younger than he looks-it was those long, weary years of hard, unrecognized newspaper work in India that "knocked the youth out of him;" he is ridiculously young to be so famous and to have earned his fame by so much entirely solid work, political, or rather national, as well as literary. Nevertheless, as one enthusiast ex-pressed it, "he puts the best side on of any celebrity I ever met.' principal river, the Rio Paro, upon the takes his work hard. GREAT COTTON CROP.

The present year bids fair to be a phenomenal one in the United States in the matter of the development of its great industries. Cotton, one king of the staples, is showing an increase that is surprising in view of the organized restriction of cultivation by large growers in the last three years. The cotton year ends on August 31, and the weather conditions of the last two months make or unmake the crop. Conditions were most favorable in June, and this year they indicated a crop never before equaled in this country, amounting very closely to 11,000,000 bales, of full weight and average qual-

In the New England States unfavorable trade conditions have somewhat decreased the demand for the staple. but in Europe there is an increased activity in manufacturing, which greatly swells the outlet for product. over 10,600,000 bales received at the time of writing, more than 7,000,000 bales were exported to Europe. In the domestic market, northern mills took about 2,100,000 bales and southern mills over 850,000 bales. These exports are independent of China and Japan, whose orders show a steady annual increase.

No one need fear cholers or any summer complaint if they have a botthe of Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial ready for use. It corrects all looseness of the bowels promptly, and causes a healthy and natural action. This is a medicine adapted for the young and old, rich and poor, and is rapidly becoming the most popular medicine for cholera, dysentery, etc., in the market.

A Blue Ruin Preacher in Quebec.

Mr. Bergeron, M. P., almost the only Conservative of eminence remaining in the Dominion House of Commons from Quebec, addressed his constituency the the other day on the condition of the country. Mr. Bergeron must have been asleep since the summer of 1896, for he asserts that he can see nothing but ruin for the country, because the Liberals are in power. To preach that the Dominion would go to the dogs if safe prognostication while Mr. Bergeron's friends were at the helm. But It takes a rash politician like Mr. Bergeron to mount a platform and assert that the Canadian people are in a terrible condition of distress because a new and better condition of affairs has been established. Mr. Bergeron, like Sir Charles Tupper, is as one crying perous country the world over than Canada today. All the wailing of the disappointed nolitician, therefore, is in

The Difficulty of Being Honest.

There is what is called "a financial world," and, according to the testimony of those who live in it, it is not easy being honest there. Apropos of the recent revelations in Great Britain, a writer in the Westminster Review with "The Art of Blackmailing." article is really bigger than the title, as it deals with bribery as well as blackmail in the narrower sense. writer is a "financial journalist," and seems to have studied the subject this article, the press of the great, metropolis of the financial world may the "gutter press," whose agents do the blackmailing. These are despicable, uninfluential sheets, but they get hold at times of unpleasant facts, and business men sometimes find it worth while to purchase their silence or their flattery at a modest price. The law, however, as it now stands, affords protection against attacks of this kind. If a man's record is clean, he can use the law effectively against any one who would extort "blackmail"

But the same law that condemns the blackmailer should lay hold of the briber, and the "city magnate" who makes persistent efforts to currupt others, should be made a guest of the Government in that place where there is no turtle soup, and where men can think upon the world in the silence which is solitary and which may be

Two Great Men Contrasted.

The great contrast of the present year was furnished by the passing away of two men, confessedly the two greatest men of the century in the sphere of politics. Gladstone and Bismarck were both great men, who did a great lifework, and endured to a good old age. There is no need to belittle one that we may give greater glory to the other, but it would be vain to deny the great contrast between the two men and their work. In fact, it is an instruct-Ive exercise to emphasize and develop this contrast. Gladstone's was in a moral sense a consecrated life; all through he knew nothing of the reckless, rollicking experience, the heavy beer-drinking and duel-fighting, which marked the early career of the burly German statesman. Bismarck was intensely German in his view of the world, while Gladstone was reproached with being, if anything, too cosmopol-Itan. It is true that Bismarck made no pretense of universal philanthropy, and declared with somewhat cynical frankness that he would not sacrifice a single soldier where German interests were not directly concerned. Gladstone's efforts for Italians and Bulgarians show the humane spirit of the man, which refused to be confined within national bounds.

The work of Bismarck was accomplished through blood and iron. Denmark, Austria and France felt in turn the weight of the German sword. The result was a united German Empire, united in name, if not in spirit. Gladstone's work was wrought through a series of peaceful, bloodless revolutions, which transformed Britain into a real democracy. The great English statesman was not a courtier any more than he was a demagogue, but he commanded the respect of his sovereign as well as the love of the people. The czar's horror of war.

strong man who ruled Germany so long had a painful close to his career. He rankled under the sense of wrong, and did and said things which would have been tolerated from no other man. Unfortunately, this sad quarrel threw its shadow over the grave. Though not belonging to his people, we regret it, and are glad that no such ill-feeling in any quarter marred "the passing of Gladstone." The motto of one life was that of unity; the other, liberty. These ought not to be regarded as contradictory, but as complimentary concep-

While Bismarck built upon a military basis the mighty fabric of the German Empire, Gladstone was charged-unfairly, as we think-with attempting to dismember the British Empire. We cannot now discuss the question of Home Rule for Ireland, but we certainly believe that the real union is a "union of hearts" based on mutual consideration. The union which is to last must give the largest possible measure of liberty. In fact, the great problem of politics is to reconcile unity and liberty, the claims of society and the rights of individuals. As to the effects of the policy of these two great statesmen, we can only mention two points, the treatment of Roman Catholics, and the handling of social problems. Gladstone, though strongly opposed to what he called "Vaticanism," made some of his greatest efforts and suffered some of his heaviest losses in seeking to render fuller justice to the Roman Catholic minority. Bismarck's treatment of the Catholics resulted in creating a solid "center party," which holds the balance of power, and is the most stable faction in German politics.

The remedial legislation with which Gladstone was so largely connected met the demands of Chartism, and robbed Socialism of its attractions, so that nowhere is Socialism politically so weak as in England. Bismarck's protective policy and coercive legislation have increased the Socialist party in Germany, so that, if represented according to its members, it would have about 100 deputies. Truly they were both great men-but their careers, how different!

Tobacco Growing at the Coast.

In the matter of tobacco growing, Western Ontario will have to look to its laurels. Since the duties were changed by the present Administration at Ottawa, there has been a great development in tobacco growing, not only in this Province, but in British Columbia. Of the tobacco grown in British Columbia, Dr. Fletcher, Dominion entomologist, who has recently returned from a trip to the Pacific coast, says that it is better than any other Canadian tobacco that he has ever seen or used. It is of a fine class, and is cultivated and manufactured extensively. In tobacco growing, therefore, as well as in fruit culture, the far West bids fair to be a formidable rival of the East. This is a great country, and to its natural resources there seems to be scarcely a limit.

Life in the Northern Zone.

His remarks recently at the launching of a new vessel for the trade between Canpriate. Some of the speakers had referred to the cold that sometimes prevails in Canada, as if it were a normal condition of affairs. Lord Strathcona rejoined that the cold weather which Canadians are called upon to endure is decidedly exhilerating. It is a dry cold, and one has to look at the thermometer offtimes to tell that it is freezing. The High Commissioner added that he had suffered more in the burgh on a cold, raw morning in March or April-than he ever did in North America. Those of our readers who have lived in both atmospheres can indorse the testimony of Lord Strathcona.

The Canadian climate is one in which the best of men and women, of live stock and of food products, is produced. What better testimony to its adaptability to the wants of the human race can be given? ### Military Drill in Schools

[Canadian Baptist.] Let us not be misunderstood. We are not inquiring into the morality of modern warfare or of military tactics. We are not denying that it is "sweet and glorious to die for one's country" upon occasion. We are not disputing desirability of having a small body of well-trained citizen soldiers, prepared to meet any band of marauders that might threaten us from within or without. We are merely questioning whether the military drill is the right kind of training for school children; whether the military ideals it sets up are the best ideals for the worship of the youthful imagination; whether the molives, sentiments and impulses which it appeals are those which it is desirable to foster in the breasts of our boys. Surely the subject is worthy of some serious thought on the part of parents at the beginning of the school

Roderick hu and Fitzjames. [Events, Ottawa.]

The report comes from British Columbia that Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper is going to follow in Joe Martin's footsteps and go in for local politics in the Pacific Province. He is to become leader of the Conservative party, while the Hon. Joseph will command the Liberals, and these two stalwarts are to graft Dominion issues on the present provincial system, and so run things as they are run down east. It is no longer to be a no-party fight, but an out-and-out political warfare with well marked lines. It is further stated Lieutenant-Governor McInnes will dissolve Parliament and let them at it at an early day, so that we are not likely to be kept long in suspense what will come of it. Sir Charles must take a dismal view of the prospects of his party in the Federal arena, when he is deserting to the provincial field. He has evidently sized up the situation, and come to the conclusion that there is no immediate hope of defeating the Laurier Government.

One of the many pathetic incidents of the late war is found in a paragraph of "Deaths Not Previously Reorted," and reads: "Harvey Atkins, Company I, Second Massachusetts, nostalgia, July 25." Trans-Atlantic Steamship Arrangments-Decision Affecting the C. P. B.

Grand Trunk Changes-Manager Hays Big Salary,

The inter-state commerce commission, in the Canadian Pacific passenrate case, has decided that the Canadian Pacific is not entitled to the differential passenger rates contended

A Montreal press dispatch says: Mr. Charles M. Hays, of the Grand Trunk system, has got $10,000 increase of sal-It is understood that Mr. Hays entered upon his work as general manager of the Grand Trunk at a salary of $25,000, and he gets $10,000 more as receiver of the Vermont Central, thus making, with the Grand Trunk's extra $10,000, a total salary of $45,000.

The Grand Trunk Railway Company completed its trans-Atlantic steamship arrangements for the coming winter. It is stated that a new steamship line will be run in connection with the G. T. R., which is making a strong bid for a large share of the western grain carrying trade by providing greater ocean facilities for transport of the great harvest of the west. The Allan, Elder-Dempster, Thomson and American also have connection with the Grand Trunk. A circular was issued Thursday by Mr. F. H. Fitzhugh, superintendent of the middle district of the Grand Trunk Railway, to the effect that Roadmaster J. Piper, of Toronto, would be transferred to the 20th district, which comprises the Brantford and Tilsonburg branches, and 21st district, comprising Harrisburg and Guelph. The inter-state commerce commission in the Canadian Pacific passenger rate case, decided that the Canadian Pacific is not entitled to the differential passenger rates contended for. The decision says: "The commission holds that the claim made in behalf of the American roads, that no Canadian road is entitled to a differential under any American line on any American business, is probably untenable, even from the standpoint of the American roads, as some Canadian roads, notably the Grand Trunk, work in close connection with American lines and the public interest in the reduced rates caused by competition is not to be igcommission, however states that it has no power to allow or disallow the differential in dispute but would consider it extremely for-tunate if the conclusions reached should be made the basis of an early

Reports of Canadian business this week show no change of importance. There are gradual improvements at most points, and the general tenor of the advices is favorable. While lumber shipments at St. John's continue small, there is a little improvement in the grocery and provision trade, though none in dry goods, with the hardware trade about the same. Collections are unsatisfactory. At Halifax business is about the average for the season, which is usually quiet, but more activity is expected towards the end of this month. Collections are fair. Toronto reports a large number of country dealers attending the exhibition and milinery openings, and in that trade and dry goods business has been unusually large, while fairly active in groceries, sugar and hardilton. Reports from the iron and steel trade are in a high degree favorable, the tonnage moving being unprecedentedly large, and the tone of prices firm at the advances recently scored. Business in steel is exceptionally large. The western crop situation remains practically unchanged, cash wheat being lower on a rather larger movement of spring wheat, but an active demand for export has furnished sus-taining power. Corn has been ruled by the weather in surplus producing states which is dry and hot, with a steadying effect in prices. The close of the cotton year finds the price of that staple slightly firmer on reports of damage by rain to the crop in the South Atlantic States. From other parts of the south, however, crop re-ports continue quite favorable, and a yield at least equal to that realized during the year just ended, 11,191,000 Sugar is higher. There is no room to doubt that the wheat crop, even though it may fall a shade below some estimates will prove the largest ever harvested, and although Beerbohm estimates Europe's crop at 232,000,000 bushels more than the last, that would be only about an average yield, while other evidence is less favorable. Foreign buying has been strong, so that Atlantic exports for the week have been 3,326,878 bushels. against 5,534,758 bushels last year, and Pacific exports, 458,881 bushels. against 258,651 bushels last year. But receipts at the west are increasing, and the rise has dropped 5 cents for spot though the September option is seven-

The improvement in the iron industry has not only continued, but becomes more impressive, because, after enormous buying of materials has satisfied the needs of great consumers for months to come, the demand for products is so great that both materials and products gradually advance in price. The wire nail works also report a better demand. The shipments of boots and shoes from the east in August have been larger than in any previous year. Leather is dull, without change in prices, and hides at Chicago

The woolen mills have rather better orders this week, but not enough as yet to warrant running nearly full force, with the price of wool held at the west much above eastern markets, and by those markets about 1 cent higher than the mills are bidding. In cotton manufacture there is better demand, with a sixteenth rise in print cloths.

The police have been following this man closely, and have traced him from Toronto to Smith's Falls, thence to Ottawa, and thence to Winnipeg. Three of his alleged victims are still awaiting justice upon him here in Toromo, but as far as can be learned, he has forgotten them while he basks in the smiles of what from all accounts appears to be his sixth. Besides the three in Toronto, there is said to be one in Bridgeport, Conn., one whom he deserted a week ago in

Smith's Falls, and a Miss Halliday, of Smith's Falls, whom he is thought to have taken with him to Winnipeg. The much-married man deserted his fourth wife in this city last November, and as far as can be learned went to Augusta, Maine. There he met a lady to whom he offered a section of his hand and heart, and they were married, leaving Augusta for Smith's Falls. Ont. At Smth's Falls he obtained work in one of the foundries, and represented himself as a railroad engineer and an Odd'ellow in good standing.

John McKechnie, Shawville, and being a prominent Oddfellow, the local Oddfellovs' Band went up and gave him and his wife a serenade, and were invited in and treated at Mr. McKechnies expense.

Recently he purchased a house on the irstallment plan, and made some small payments on it. At the time of his eaving Smith's Falls he owed a considerable sum to various merchants in

On Aug. 23 he went to Ottawa, and registered at the Brunswick as an agent for the C. P. R., and also for Mackenzie & Mann. He hired men for the main line of the C. P. R., and also agreed to give some very good positions to men to whom he took an especial fancy.

On the following evening, Wednesday, he left a number of friends, say-ing he had something very important to attend to. The "very important" matter was to get Miss Halliday, of Smith's Falls to go to Canon Pollard's residence and be married. The next day he told a friend a romantic story about a quarrel which had taken place in Peterboro, and which was now patched up for ever and ever. On Friday he received a telegram recalling him to the west, to which he responded, leaving his address as Hotel Brunswick, Winnipeg. His departure was regretted by a number of friends, with whom his pleasing address and genial manner had made him a favorite. He took his newly-made bride with him, followed by the best wishes of all with whom he had come in contact. The Winnipeg authorities have been communicated with.

Interesting Statistics Laid Before Conference,

Connexional Reports Presented-Proposal to Review Decisions of the Church's Court of Appeal Strongly

Toronto, Sept. 3.-The proceedings of the conference, apart from the superintendent's address, consisted of organization work, the appointment of a nominating committee, etc. Monday afternoon next was fixed for the discussion of the twentieth century $1,000,000 fund.

By the report of the statistical committee the membership of the church was placed at 280.537, an increase of 19,584 since 1894. The ministers in active work are 1,329, an increase of 141 in four years. Officers of general conference and professors in colleges, 491, against 444 in 1894. Total number of ministers on roll of church, 1,703, against 1,863 in 1894. The number received on trial for membership in 1894-95 was 21,297; in 1895-96, 25,630; 1896-97, 24,626; in 1897-98, 27,578, a total of 99,131, The total number of baptisms during the quadrennium was: Infants, 62,836; adults, 11,559; total, 74,398. During the quadrennium 80 ministers and 9 probationers had died. The number of local preachers was placed at 2,352, an increase of 57.

Conference spent yesterday afternoon and evening in the reception of connexional reports, but at the evening session a brisk discussion sprang up over a proposal by the nominating committee that a judicial committee be appointed to review the decisions of the church's court of appeals on questions of infractions of discipline and kindred cases, and report to the general conference. It was proposed that the committee should consist of Mr. J. M. A. Aikins, of Winnipeg; Judge Longworth, of Nova Scotia; Rev. Dr. Ryckman, of Brockville; Rev. J. S. Shorey, of Peterboro, and Mr. S.

F. Lazer, of Hamilton. The proposal was objected to on the ground that it was opposed to the spirit of British law. Rev. Dr. Sutherland argued that a legislative body should never be called on to interpret and pronounce upon the administration of its legislation. The clause was carried, and subsequently it was proposed to enlarge the committee. Mr. N. W. Rowell proposed that the motion lie on the table until he be able to move for its consideration. In moving his resolution he strongly indorsed the stand taken by Rev. Dr. Sutherland. that the conference should never be called upon to decide in the administration of its own law. Its functions were purely legislative. Mr. Rowell's motion was adopted, and it is likely that when the matter is considered it will be defeated. The conference then adjourned.

The number of memorials from the various local conferences of the church go into the hundreds. Among the important subjects they embrace are the status of women as members of quarterly boards and local conferences, and the proposal to abolish the time limit in the cases of clergymen occupying certain stations.

A POPULAR HOME WORK.

U. S. Officer Who Participated in 47 Successful Only When the Diamond Dyes Are Used.

> In thousands of happy and trifty nomes in the Dominion and in the colony of Newfoundland the work of rug and mat making is becoming very popular. Home-made rugs and mats are more highly esteemed just now than imported goods. This is not surprising when we remember the fact that the home articles are the best wearing and prettiest.

The Diamond Dyes have given a great impetus to the Fork of making home-made rugs and mats. In former times the troublesome part of the work was the dyeing. With the oldfashioned and poorly prepared dyes the dyeing operation was long and unsat-isfactory. The introduction of the Diamond Dyes with their special colors for wool, and for cotton and mixed goods, has been a boon to womankind.
Old and faded rags and yarns for mats and rugs can now be dyed any beautiful and brilliant shade with the Diamond Dyes-shades that are perfectly fast to sun and soap. If you wish to be at all times suc-cessful in dyeing for rug and mat making, we here utter a warning note against the use of adulterated package and soap grease dyes that only produce muddy and streaky colors that cannot possibly stand an ordinary washing. Ask for the Diamond Dyes, use them as per directions, and your success is sure

His Mother Is With Him and He Has a Swedish Sailor for His Man Friday -He Has Been There Four Years and Doesn't Want to Go Home-His Philosophy.

On Cedros Island, 350 miles south of San Diego, off the coast of Lower Cali- at bay. Fortunately for both sides, they fornia, a man is living the life of Robinson Crusoe, and he likes it so was sent down to the island to retain possession of it in the name of a mining company claiming a concession upon it. The life was pleasant to him, and after some months spent there he consented to remain. His mother, desiring to go down to the island, the lonely man consented to have her do so, and they have been there ever since, apparently without a desire to see civilization. They are heard from occasionally through the visits of passing schooners, and the report from the island invariably is that "Dr. Powers and his mother are well and happy, and don't care to leave the island. It is now almost four years since the couple chose that lonely spot for a home. The lonesomeness, they cay, soon passed away. Dr. Powers, it must be confessed, has a streak of laziness in his make-up.

"I take it easy," he told the skipper of the schooner Alta. "I have plenty of time on my hands, but I am not idle as much as you would think. There is wood to get for mother, helping her with the housework, the killing of a goat occasionally, the catching of fish, the repairs to our house, and so on. I ramble over the island, and get specimens of plants and flowers and trees. and pick up mineral specimens, too. The aspects of the sea are wonderful in variety and charm, and I watch and study them. We have books to read and nature to contemplate. It is the ideal life."

Judging from this it may be conjectured that Dr. Powers is somewhat of a philosopher, as well as a well-edu-cated man. The chances are that he is a natural philosopher-every lazy man is said to be. Perhaps he is right. At any rate, he declines every offer to transport him back to civilization, and his mother says that she, too, is perfectly contented. Some months ago a schooner was wrecked on the mainland opposite Cedros Island, and three of the crew. jumping into a small boat, rowed and sailed to Cedros, where they were car-ed for by Dr. Powers and his mother. The men were more dead than alive when they staggered from the boat upon the beach. They had been without water for two days, and without food for four days. One of the men was ill for six weeks. The others, hardy Swedes, rapidly recovered. A schooner going up from the guane islands to San Diego stopped for water, and one of the Swedes and the sick man eagerly took passage for home. The third man, known as Stuttering Pete, refused to leave the island. In the few weeks he had been there a spell had been woven around him by Dr. Powers that was too strong to break. While the sight of a sail in the offing brought a thrill of pleasure to his heart, the charms of Robinson Crusoe's life pleased him still better. He saw the sail fade away on the horizon without much regret. From that day to this Stuttering Pete, from all that can be learned, is as happy a castaway as was ever seen. He and Dr. Powers are companions, and enjoy their long walks over the island. They hunt goats on the precipitous sides of the mountains, and seek out the strange growths to be found in the mossy canyons and on the higher hills. Dr. Powers is more fortunate than Crusoe in one respect, and that is, he has communication with the mainland, infrequent though it be. A coasting steamer calls at the island about every six weeks and leaves provisions for the islanders. A store of illustrated papers and magazines, books and other reading matter is also left. Thus the trio live in comfort. "When we were there last week." said the purser of this steamer, "Dr. Powers rowed out to see us. He rarely visits our vessel, preferring to remain on the island. He has a fierce black beard, and his hair is very long. But otherwise his appearance is very civilized. He has none of the wild light that is seen in the eyes of men who have been cast away or marooned to starve, such as we saw in the crew of the Minna when we picked them up at Black Warrior Lagoon. Dr. Powers is very quiet, however, and seems to grow more retiring and taciturn every time we go to the island. He replies to questions pleasantly enough, but volunteer no information. "I was curious to know if he kept a garden to supply himself and his mother with fresh vegetables. No, he garden. They had canned vegetables, and when cooked nicely they were just that Dr. Powers is too lazy to hoe in a garden. He might have a very nice is plenty of water that could be diverted for irrigation, and the warm climate would make vegetables grow amazingly. But he prefers to climb the hills with Stuttering Pete, killing start out for a walk along the beach hunting for mussels. "I have not seen Mrs. Powers for some months. The last time I saw her was when I went ashore to see the home of the couple. It was a little cabin that had been built by the mining company for the superintendent. but now everything was deserted except by these three people. The house was quite comfortable inside. Mrs. Powers was cheerful as you please. She greeted us all kindly, and went bustling around apologizing for the scant luxury of her home, just as Mrs. Lecks or Mrs. Aleshine would have done. She thought no more of being alone on a desert island, with only her son and a Swedish sailor for company, than if she had been on a ranch five miles from town. Yet she is, year in and year out, almost entirely and for four years she has not seen one of her own sex.

"The comfort of the lonely home, and the charm of a do-nothing life almost made me desire to stay on the island, too. It is a lotus-eater's life. There is no worry about it, no straining of nerves, no rivalry of pride or pocketbooks. On the island Stuttering Pete is joint king of the realm. On the mainland Stuttering Pete is an outcast sailor, to be cursed and cuffed by some blustering mate. That is the dif-

once, giving hints of his life on Cedros "It is more like Robinson Crusoe's life than you would think," he said. 'In fact, we have a copy of 'Robinson Crusoe' here, and have done many things mentioned in that book to advantage. I have enlarged a cave, as Crusoe did, for the protection of part of our supplies. While we do not live in fear of wild animals or wild men, we keep a good eye out, especially when guano pirates or goat-killing marauders come along the coast. We heard that at Guadalupe Island they had trouble with a crew of piratical goat-killers, and Stuttering Pete and I prepared to give them a warm reception if they showed up on our kingdom We rigged up a number of rifles on a place commanding the landing, so that each of us could be protected behind boulders and shoot two rifles each. We could have kept a good-sized crowd did not visit us. "The charm of this life grows upon me. I would not be a dweller in brick much that he won't come home. He is wails and grunting under the burden Dr. F. G. Powers, of San Diego. He of modern life for all the wealth there is to be found in New York. What do we get beyond our food and shelter? If I sleep well, enjoy health and a happy mind, I am better off than one living in a city, though he piles up millions. I do not see opera every night, but I enjoy a keen appetite and night, but I enjoy a keen appetite and find intellectual pleasure in contemplating the sea and land. Sometimes I find myself wrapt in thoughts far higher than I have power to express, which yield me the greatest enjoyment. If I were a poet I would not lack for a theme that might do much to change the hearts of men from them moneygetting madness.

"In the vastness of the night, with a storm on, the sea boiling and how!ing all around us, I see the tremendous forces that are little known to those living in cities. I believe I realize more clearly the paltriness of the jostling crowd. On the silent moonlit nights, with leagues of shining sea around me, I feel that even a selfisolated Crusoe may be as important in the scheme of things as a greasy, hog; gish millionaire. We are all too small to contemplate.' From which it appears that Dr. Powers spends much of his time in philosophy, when others thank he is merely lazy. The question that occurs is, What philosophy does Mrs. Powers apply to make herself contented?

"Papa, What Would You Take for Me?"

Many Speakers, Actors, Singers and Clergymen Suffer From Diarrhea. When They Appear in Public.

Can Be Prevented by Taking a Few Doses of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry

There are many people whom nervous excitement of any kind affects in a remarkable manner, causing diarrhea. I knew an estimable clergyman Cowan's who was afflicted every time he appeared in public. He could get nothing to check this distressing condition said, he didn't bother with keeping a of the bowels, until he tried Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. It acted like a charm in his case, and he as good as fresh. Now, the fact is, always carried a bottle of the remedy with him afterwards. Some men have had to retire from public life altopatch of green things growing. There gether on account of their trouble becoming chronic. There is no need of this, however, as Dr. Fowler's Strawberry can control and cure the severest cases. It is not a new or untried remedy, goats. When our steamer was sailing as it has a record of over forty years away we saw Dr. Powers and Pete of cures to its credit, and is recognized on all hands as the only reliable remedy ever offered to the public as a safe and certain cure for diarrhea, dysentery, colic, cramps, cholera, cholera morbus and summer complaint, whether of children or adults. The price of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is 25 cents a bottle, and we would warn you against accepting any substitute or imitation. Many of these are positively dangerous, and you are risking your life when you take them.

By F. S. Spence, Secretary of the Prohibition Alliance, in Methodist

The plebiscite to be taken on the approaching 29th of September will be one of the most important political events in the history of Canada. Upon its result will deend the immediate future of the prohibition reform. It will materially advance or seriously retard the coming of the time that is most assuredly ahead of us, when the ligor traffic will no longer have the protection and authorization of law.

It is just 70 years since, in 1828, the first Canadian total abstinence society was formed at Beaver River, in Nova Scotia, and there was begun a work that has almost revolutionized the habits of our people and has de-veloped into a mighty social and polit-

Laws have been enacted prohibiting the selling of liquor at certain times, in certain places, in certain quantities, certain people, and to certain people. These measures have done some good, but their usefulness has been limited by the defective nature of the prohibition imposed, and by the consequent difficulties found in enforcing them. Public opinion has, however, been steadily growing, and expressing itself more and more in a demand for the more comprehensive measure of the total prohibition of the manufacture, importation and sale of intoxicat-This total prohibition is the one legislative method of dealing with the drink evil that has not yet been tried.

The Canada temperance act has the same defect, and also permits manufacture and wholesale for consumption outside the territory under prohibition. It will be readily understood that such measures must be partial failures as far as abolition of the liquor traffic is concerned. It is surprising to find how much good they have accomplished in spite of these hindrances to their effectiveness. One illustration out of many may be cited.

The report of the royal commission shows that in the Province of New Brunswick there are nine counties under the Scott act and five counties under the license law. Tables are given howing the population and the criminal record of these two groups of coun-The group under prohibition had, in 1891, a population of 196,422; the group under license law had a population of 124,841. For the ten years named the total convictions for crime in the prohibition counties were 8,738, and for drunkenness alone 4,986. The convictions in the license counties were 14,102 for all crimes, and 8,612 for drunkenness. In other words, the 61 per cent of the population being under prohibition had 39 per cent of all the crime, and 37 per cent of all the drunkenness, while 39 per cent of the population being under license had 61 per cent of all the crime, and 63 per cent of all the drunkenness. Other examples equally forcible might be given. WHY A PLEBISCITE? If partial prohibition lessens drunkenness, it is certainly reasonable argue that total prohibition would be still more effective. This was readily recognized, and led to still more strenuous demands for a thorough-going law. The question has been considered many times by parliament and legislatures. Practical efforts to secure legorded at different times by disputes as whether the right to prohibit bekings to the Dominion, or to the re-epective provinces, or to both. Judiial decisions have, however, made it clear that whatever authority legislatures possess, the national parliament has power to enact total prohibition for the whole Dominion. The House of Commons has declared that such action would be the most "effective remhas avowed its determination to act in acoordance with this declaration as soon as public opinion is prepared to sustain stringent measures. Now, parliament asks the people to whether or not such a law is to be enacted. This is the meaning of the plebiscite to be

The danger of the situation is in the possibility of indifference on the part of the electors favorable to prohibition. A full vote would mean an overwhelming majority against the liquor traffic. The friends of temperance have not, however, control of money to employ agents, to hire conveyances, and to perfect the elaborate machinery that political parties bring into play at elections, even if they were disposed to adopt this method. The rank and file of the voters favorable to prohibition must make more than their usual voluntary electoral efforts, in order to secure a fair expression of their views through the ballot box.

The end to be obtained is worthy of such an effort. Notwithstanding the progress that has been made, the evil of intemperance is still working fearful havoc in our land. There is hardly a home that has not suffered in some way from the curse. Thousands of worse than widowed wives, thousands of worse than orphan children, thousands of blasted homes and broken hearts testify to the cruel tyranny of this nineteenth century despot. Christian civilization is the working out of the grand gospel truth of the responsibility of every man for the welfare of his fellows. It is meeting in a desperate conflict the sordid, grasping selfishness that really appertains to the heathen barbarisms of bygone days. The result will depend upon the zeal and activity of those who are professed adherents of the gospel truth. An earnest appeal is made to every man who has a vote, to every woman who has influence, to every Christian who seeks the triumph of benevolence and justice. Trusting in God and doing all your duty, go into this good fight with heart and soul and mind and strength, and above all, "Let every vote be poll-

It is proposed to replace license by prohibition.

Where prohibition has been tried what has been the practical result? We have a right to ask this when we are called upon to make what all admit to be a very costly as well as a very critical experiment. We should have to sacrifice seven millions of revenue. We should have to kill the capital invested in the trade, amounting, it seems, to fifty millions. We should have to throw out of work thousands of people directly or indi-rectly earning their bread by the busi-We should seriously have to injure the growers of barley, cider apples and grapes. We should have to pay for the additional police necessary to guard our immense frontier, and to coerce the less settled sections of the population, such as the mining adventurers of the west. We might possibly have to coerce Quebec. We should further imperil the interests of our country by proclaiming it to be under an ecclesiastical and ascetic rule, many, rightly or wrongly, abhor. Without setting material loss against moral gain, we are estitled to proof, before incurring so great a material loss, that we are sure of the moral gain, Prohibitionists themselves, regardless as they may be of worldly interests compared with the principle, would not wish to see the cause of temperance saddled with the memory of a ruinous

We all, it may be presumed, prefer liberty and the virtue which is freely formed. Temperance in its proper sense is self-restraint, and would cease to exist if abstinence were enforced by law. However, in desperate cases, desperate remedies must be applied. But is the case of Canada desperate? Is Canada a drunken country? Is it not, on the contrary, temperate, and increasingly so? Have not educa-tion, religion and the teachings of medical science been doing their work? Prof. Blaikie thought he was scoring a point for prohibition by complimenting Toronto on the freedom of its culars have been sent to newspapers streets from drunkenness. But Toronto was not under the Scott Act.
There have been false alarms. A temperance lecturer once said that there were 10,000 deaths in Canada annually from alcohol. Ten thousand would be more than half the male adult deaths the perioder. Even three thousand in the Dominion. Even three thousand or four thousand deaths from alcohol, the estimates of the Hon. George E. Foster and the Hon. G. W. Ross respectively, must be very far beyond the mark. THE SCOTT ACT

County after county adopted the act; county after county repealed it by majorities larger than those by which it had been passed finding as there was a large body. ed, finding, as there was a large body of evidence to show, that while the act stopped social conviviality, it in-creased secret indulgence; that it led to contraband traffic in liquor, to contempt of the law, to perjury, to the evils of the spy system, to disturbance of neighborly peace and good will Here was a genuine popular verdict founded on a practical trial of the sys-tem. Nor was it really reversed by the subsequent provincial plebiscite in favor of prohibition carried by a majority in the proportion of 19 to 11, while only 58 per cent of the vote was polled, and the balance might safely be set down as in the main opposed or indifferent. The enactment and the repeal of the Scott Act were legislation, approached by the voter with a full sense of responsibility. The plebiscite was not legislation; it was a mere fancy vote.

It may be said that the Scott Act was local, and that the area was not large enough to keep off contagion. But would the area of Canada be large enough to keep off contagion? Would not the taste be revived in every Canadian who crossed the line or went to England? Popular literature, such as works of Dickens, is full of the convivial use of liquor, and its influence, no law could annul. There would be little hope therefore of eradicating the desire in the long line of provinces stretching from the Atlantic to the Pa-

It is said that the repeal of the Scott Act was followed by an increase in drunkenness. This is not unlikely. Overstraining is naturally followed by a recoil. Puritan over-strictness was avenged by the outburst of licentiousness in the reign of Charles II.

ACROSS THE BORDER.

Massachusetts, the model state of the union, tried prohibition for a series of years, and gave it up, finding that the closing of the public places of sale multiplied the secret places; that more liquor and worse liquor was drunk, and that there was more drunkenness in Boston than ever. "The mere fact," says the report, "that the law seeks to prevent them from drinking, rouses the determination to drink in many. The fact that the place is secret takes Vermont, a rural state, without slums tried prohibition for 40 years, piled one repressive enactment upon another, heaped up penalties, gave the police power to enter any house without a warrant. The result as stated by Mr. Edward Johnston in the Popular Science Monthly for May, 1884, was that for all practical purposes the law was a dead letter. There were dramshops in the principal streets and no concealment of the lilegal traffic. Nobody dreamed of enforcing the law as the laws against burglary and larceny are enforced. Perjury and subornation of perjury, disregard and contempt of all law were practically fostered and encouraged.

In Iowa a correspondent of Harper's Weekly reported that prombition in discuss it as fellow-citizens having the spondent of the New York Nation conin places where he had been assured that drink could not be had for love motives. In Kansas, the state of Governor St. John, the chosen chief of prohibition, where the most stringent prohibition had been enacted, the result, according to Dr. Gardiner, was that the drug stores were little more than rum shops, and that their number was astonishing. In one town of 4,000 people, 15 of them were counted on the main street. Leavenworth, with a population of 23,-000, had 175 places where liquor was sold. In Kansas City the police collected in 1882 $45,000 in fines for illegal sale of liquor. There is a general tendency to convert prohibition, where it prevails, practically into license by taking the fees under the guise fines. In Tongawoxie, a small town in Kansas, where there was no saloon before prohibition, there were three or four afterwards. This is against the theory that prohibition works well in small places, though in large cities it works ill. At Topeka, in Kansas, there are no saloons. But there were none when prohibition was intro-duced, popular feeling being against them. A proof that it is popular feelis strong, rather than proing that hibitive law.

IN MAINE.

Maine is the banner state of prohibition. It had been trying the system for nearly half a century, time enough to kill the liquor traffic, if the liquor traffic was to be killed. Yet "Gail Hamilton," who knew the state well, said in the North American Re-"The actual result is that liquor is sold to all who wish to obtain it, in nearly every town in the state. Enforcement of the law seems to have little effect. For the past six years the city of Bangor has practically enjoyed free rum. In more than 100 a factor places liquor is sold, and no attempt has been made to enforce the law. In Bath, Lewiston, Augusta and other cities no real difficulty is experienced in procuring liquor. In Portland enforcement of the law has been faithfully attempted, yet the liquor traffic flourishes for all classes, from the highest to the lowest. . . In a journey last summer for hundreds of miles through the cities and through the scattered villages and hamlets of Maine, the almost universal testimony was 'you' get liquor enough for bad purposes in bad places, but you cannot get it for good purposes in good places." "What works against prohibition," the writer added, "is that opinion of many the most earnest total abstinthe original Maine ence men law state, after 30 years of prohibition is no more a temperance state than it was before prohibition was introduced." [From the Pall Mall Gazette.] The statement made in such quiet tones by the Yeomen of the Queen's Plate that "the contents of these two pantries are valued at about one and a half millions sterling," seems at a first glance round the two small rooms in question an almost incredible assertion. But when one is further told that between four and five tons of plate are frequently sent to London for ordinary use at an entertainment at Buckingham Palace the statement at once appears to come within the bounds of reason. And after a silver gilt dish weighing possibly twenty pounds is taken from a pile containing some dozens and put in the lis-tener's hands so that he may feel its longer a skeptic. The two pantries are about thirty by sixteen feet and sixteen feet square respectively. They are fitted with numerous electric lights. In deep recesses in the massive stone walls fit airtight plate glass cases with a light mahogany framework. These cases extend to a height of about nine or ten feet from the floor, in front of them stand plate glass counter cases, as in a jeweler's shop, and the space under these is fitted with glass inclosed cupboards. The center of each room is occupied by a great glass and mahogany case, thus leaving merely a pathway of some four or five feet in width for floor space. In the midst of such an embarras de richesse as the plate pantries contain, it is as well to first note some of the more historical treasures which are to be seen on every side. Here, for instance, is a trophy dating back from the spacious times of good Queen Bess. It is a magnificent silver gilt flagon, some three feet in height, of the shape of the old pilgrim's bottle, and was taken, as is set down in the castle records, from the ship of the admiral of the Spanish Armada in 1588. Well might Drake, Hawkins, Amyas Leigh and their fellows hunt the Spaniards so remorselessly when such trophies of their prowess were to be won. Not that a Spanish granmissed a few of even such pieces as at Windsor, although they are not so this, when we read from a contemporary chronicle that at the death of a Duc d'Albuquerque he was possessed of 1,400 dozens of silver plates, 500 large dishes and 700 small, with other things in proportion, including forty vases and ornamental pieces for decorating his buffet. In 1643, to meet the forced loans of Charles I., marked plate was accepted in lieu of money at the rate of 5 shillings per ounce, and for some years very little of consequence was manufactured to take the place of that manufactured to take the place of that With the restoration of Charles II. a new era of prosperity for the gold-smiths set in, and of this Windsor has some of the noblest specimens; but before all in point of interest is a little quaint pair of bellows made of enameled or painted wood with silver gilt handles and nozzle, once the property of Nell Gwyn. At sight of these one instinctively turns to his Pepys to read, under date of May 1, 1667, "and saw pretty Nelly standing at her lodgings door in Drury Lane in her smock sleeves and bodice, lookcurved design nearly covered with acanthus foliage. Near by is another fine pair, with the hall mark of 1670. Their base is formed of griffins and acanthus ornament; in front a boldly designed monogram, "C. R.," surmounted by a crown and eagle, with lions' heads at the sides. A fine vase on top of each is heavily decorated with foliage and At Windsor are also some firedogs of William HI. Charles II. and his queen's rooms in Whitehall Palace, and even those of the maids of honor, were furnished with silver toilet services, mirror frames and basins; and quite large pieces of furniture were made of the precious metal. Several good specimens of this period are still magnificent pieces that may yet be seen at Knole Park, Sevenoaks.

One solid silver table at Windsor is 2 feet 7 inches in height, and its top measures 4 feet by 2 feet 4 inches. The of the sister of Philip II. of Spain we find mention, among otther matters, of a silver balustrade 121 pounds in weight to be placed round her bed!

pattern, with an embossed border of flowers. And, now, perhaps, it is as well to destroy a long-cherished illusion. One is constantly hearing of the great gold services at Windsor. There are no such things. The so-called gold is mainly silver gilt. There are, of course, here closely does it resemble existing pieces and there a few vases, dishes, etc., pure gold, but they are comparatively cost, the weight of real gold plate would be so great as to render it practically useless. Take, for instance, the famous emperor's service, which is only used for crowned heads, and of which it has been jocularly said that it caning in tyle to his as the Nautilus cup its epergnes weigh, as it is, several hundredweight. Consider that we The gold! Even of the ordinary flat dishes, of which there are dozens, two or three are quite as many as one ordinary man richly embellished with gilding. Seven or eight of the plates, with their thick gadroon edges, again thereby showing the advantages to art | make one man's load; while the great of the old system by which the art- candelabra, if made in gold, would be practically immovable. As an example of the weight of gold plate, one has but to lift one of a pair of flower baskets presented to her Majesty on the occasion of her jubilee. Here we find an ornament not more than twelve inches by eight, with a plain twisted handle to imitate basketwork, which must weigh at least nine or ten pounds. A dinner plate of standard gold would reigning monarchs from the days of Queen Mary I. to the present day. Then there are Queen Mary's key, a beautise, and be worth for metal a lone

Now we will turn to the period popularly known as "Queen Anne," which, so far as plate is concerned, really overs the first half of the eighteenth century. Her Majesty's collection is very rich in specimens of this period. One very notable example is the large massive communion service formerly used by George III. The pieces of this service are of very plain design, and are more distinguished for size and weight than for elegance. Their decoration is mainly confined to engraved work, and the general appearance is of the Dutch style, which in the reign of William III. appeared as a reaction from the somewhat excessive decoration which Charles 11. imported from France, In specimens of the early Georgian period, both of British and foreign make, Windsor is particularly rich. Nothing could well be seen more legant in its simplicity than the small kettle which stands on the hight hand just as one enters the gold pantry. This piece is dated 1732. The kettle itself is of beautiful shape, with fluted sides and base, lightly decorated by the engraver. The tripod stand, within which is a spirit lamp, is of the most delicate chased and pierced work, and the whole design is finished by a light and tasteful triangular dish with curved and fluted sides standing on three scrollwork feet. I may also men- liams' Pink Pills for Pale Peop tion a number of epergnes, tureens, etc., made for Prince Frederick, son of George II., which are still among the royal plate. A very effective epergne of two tiers has around its base a design of the lion and unicorn supported by tritons, and bears fight branches containing four fruit dishes and four sugar casters. The upper part consists of a canopy upheld by eight caryatides which bear candelabra. The canopy is surmounted by four Prince of Wales' feathers. A very beautiful tureen ornamented with masks, fruits, etc., in repousse work, also bears the prince's feathers as a handle for the lid. This is certainly a more desirable specimen than its near neighbor, dated 1760, on which, for some reason best known to its maker, a good-sized cauliflower does duty for a top.

Before entirely leaving the early plate one ought to mention a handsome pair of flagons of about 1720. They are in shape of pilgrim's bottles, with chains attached to the covers, and bear the arms of George, Prince of Wales, afterward George IV., who evidently had them engraved at a later period. Their height is 2 feet 10 inches and width 18 inches.

Now we pass to the middle of the Georgian period, which is well represented at Windsor, notably by some a neighboring case. The Privy Purse expenses of Queen Mary give us a de-tailed list of the goldsmith's work in her possession. On the occasion of her fine pot-pourri vases, dated 1789, heav-ily embossed and chased with flowers, masks and cupids. Their height is about 20 inches and width 13 inches. A wedding she had a sideboard of nine stages of gold cups and silver dishes. salver with a center group of Venus rising from the sea and an appropriate Her successor, Queen Elizabeth, was border, is dated 1782, and a curious also a great patron of the silversmith's cup of ivery with silver git mounting and gold cover, is dated 1785. The ivart. Her courtiers were continually making her presents, and to her reign ory carving which represents the birth of Venus is presumably seventeenth may be ascribed most of the many beautiful examples of sugar casters which adorn the royal collection at Windsor. She herself presented a cupcentury Flemish.

The discoveries of Pompeii and Her-culaneum caused a complete revolution in the plate designs of Europe. Everything was modeled in the classical style, and it is to this and the great school of art workers which sprang up under Louis Seize that Windsor owes most of its magnificent dinner vices. Here, in the epergnes, candelabra, etc., of the great services, you will find the graceful wreaths, medal-lion heads, scroll work and animal legs and supports so common with the Greek and Roman workers in bronze, and so beautifully adapted by the French furniture and metal workers, as also by our own Wedgwood, Adams, maintain the standard of design plate, and employed Flaxman, Stothard and others to design, and Rundell and Bridge to manufacture shields, vases, and other pieces, but without much success. Their productions are as a rule heavy and awkward looking. The great punch bowl or wine cooler, designed by Flaxman, is a stupendous example of what to avoid in plate, and certainly its ivory-handled ladle of modern manufacture is a far more graceful production. This bowl, by the way, has been given the credit of being the font in which H. R. H. the Prince of Wales was christined. Such is not the case; it was merely filled with mulled claret to be drunk at the christening. Some other Georgian errors in design are huge venison dishes, which each require two men to carry them, and which are warmed from beneath

Of modern silver Windsor has some very good specimens, if not in design, certainly in workmanship. A splendid piece is the rose-water fountain designed by H. R. H. the late Prince was manufactured in 1840, and has been in use for the same purpose ever

Of the truly beautiful Indian silver work, of which her Majesty possesses large stores, lack of space prevents me giving an account; but I must mention two most elegantly ashioned Burmese peacocks in the small pantry, and a curious relic in another part of the castle. This is a life-sized tiger's head formed by thick plates of solid gold laid over carved wood. The eyes and teeth are of rock crystal, the tongue is of solid gold, as are also the two massive paws on which the head rests. At one time there was attached to the tongue one of the finest rubies known to the world, but this has long since disappeared. This head was the center and largest of nine which surrounded the wonderful jeweled throne of Tippoo Sahib. Perched on the top of golden umbrella which surmounted the throne was a marvelous peacock, also to be seen at Windsor. His body is of gold, completely covered with uncut precious stones. The beak is composed of one emerald, holding a drop composed of a ruby and three pearls.

In conclusion I may mention that her Majesty's plate is conveyed from one to the other of the royal residences, in specially constructed pair-horse metallined vans, which are placed on railtrucks for convenience of tran-In olden days these vans traveled by road, and it says much for the highwayman's respect for royalty that no record exists of any attempted larceny

As Hensen was Germany's greatest master in mathematical astronomy, so was the venerable Argelander in the observational side of the science, says Professor Simon Newcomb in the September Atlantic. He was of the same age as the newly crowned Emperor, and the two were playmates at the time Germany was being overrun by the armies of Napoleon. He was held in least the same in love and respect by the entire generation of young astronomers, both Germans and foreigners, many of whom were proud to have him as their preceptor. Among these was Dr. B. A. Gould, who frequently related a story of the astronomer's wit. When with him as a student, he was beardless, and had a good head of hair. Returning some years later, he had become bald, but had made up for it by having a full long beard. He entered Argelander's study unannounced. The astronomer looked at him with some surprise, not at first recognizing him. "Do you not know me, Herr Profes-

The largest price ever asked and paid for a single pearl was £110,000, which was the value of the great Tavernier pearl. It was originally in the possession of an Arabian merchant, and Monsieur Tavernier traveled from Paris to Catifa with the express intention of purchasing the pearl.

Although he went prepared to pay any sum between £1,000 to £1(0,000, he concluded that he would be able to obtain it for about £25,000. His first offer was £10,-000, but after the deal had remained open for a few days this had risen to £75,000. Finally the transaction was closed with £110,000, and pearl experts state that it is a clear bargain at that price. It is the largest and most perfect gem of its kind known, and its luster is said to be unrivaled. It is exactly two inches in length and oval-

Arrangement of Flowers for the ness. It passes twice around the neck and then, by a twist of the wrist, its

I have seen great bunches of the most charming blossoms made almost hideous by the vases they were placed in. Many people feel this, but do not know just what to do. When they buy a vase they choose a pretty one, and in nine cases out of ten, when they take it home and arrange flowers in at, disappointment is the result. consequence of this I have heard the law laid down that flowers should be arranged only in plain glass vessels. and one who adheres to this rule would certainly be safe. Nothing could be more becoming to some flowers than an old-fashioned V-shaped champagne glass, flaring out at the rim. Two or three roses or a few sweet peas lightly arranged are perfect in this, and in a tall vase of this shape, that has of late years been so fashionable for long-stemmed roses, etc., tall garden lilies acquire a grace and dignity no other settings could give them. The little flare at the top allows the stalks to lean away from one another, and take natural poses.

Ferns are lovely, too, in this shape. Every lover of flowers ought to possess a small fish globe; the shape is good for many things. Peonies fall away from each other, and leave room for their foliage between, and look lovely in this shape. So also do roses and ferns with sweet peas. For violets, pansies and other small flowers in small bunches, a small round vase with a broad crinkly flare at the top is excellent. This flare supports the flowers well, and you need not crowd them together so much. An iris needs a tall, straight vase with a few sprays put into it with only its own leaves, and set where one can see it in silhouette, and, if possible, above the level of the eye. You do not want to look down into a bunch of iris; they lose half their characteristic grace and beauty There is some delicately tinted green glass that is most becoming to flowers, but most of it is too green, and there is one kind of glass that looks as if one were looking into water, and its decorations are little horizontal streaks of brown and bluish green, like ripples on the surface of water, and a few sprays of grass and water weeds, etc. It is quite expensive, but very lovely. and comes in nice shapes, and the flower stems look so cool and comfortable, quite as if they belonged

One great advantage in a glass vase is that one can see the stems, and that makes the flowers seem more natural and as if they were still growing.—E. Otis Williams, in Chicago Record.

Staircase Decoration.

It is becoming more and more common to line the staircase with pictures. On consideration, the idea is a good one from other points of view than the artistic. The climb, particularly of a long, unbroken staircase, is to many persons an affair of minutes, and it is not at all unpleasant to be cheered its length by some attractive pictures. In some houses there are series of photographs along the stair. those of celebrities being more often selected than the pictures of the friends of the family.

Where is the road to yesterday? Oh, tell in prose or rhyme; For I would trace my backward way To that enchanting clime.

And friends so kind and fair, Why should a day so bright and new All fade away in air?

Who knows the road to yesterday? Is every seeker blind? Say, does it cast no single ray To pilot those behind?

Oh, there's a road that leads our feet To hours more glad and bright; A road so short, a joy complete, A journey of a night!

Come, bid farewell to Yesterday! For in tomorrow's face The happiest days now flown away Shine with a sweeter grace.

—Charles H. Crandall.

The Accomplished Chickens. A small boy living in the country away from neighbors has for his play mates, chickens, a dog and a cat. This year minks have been stealing his chickens, to his great sorrow. He decided that if his chickens could fly they would be safe from these enemies. He began carrying them one by one to a second-story plazza, and, pushing them from the rail, compelled them to use their wings. In a month every chicken could fly, and seemed to enjoy it. The minks appear to be discouraged, for the chickens apply their accomplishment at just the right

Cats in a Palace.

In the May St. Nicholas there is an account of a fine Angora cat named Pussinella, owned by a little Italian girl. The article says:

The parents of Pussinella had been brought from Bagdad by the Prince of Naples to his mother, the good and beautiful Queen Marguerite of Italy. And a most original gift it was; for these two cats, though very beautiful, were as wild and ferocious as young tigers, and not at all disposed to take kindly to captivity, though their prison was a royal palace, and their keep er the gentlest and loveliest of women. When the cage in which they had traveled so far was opened they were nothing daunted at finding themselves at court, and right in the presence of royalty, but hissed and raised their backs, and showed their displeasure in the most decided way. The king and queen and many of the ladies even got down on their knees and made all sorts of overtures of peace; but it was of no use; the strangers were not to still growling and protesting, to the queen's own apartments, which were for the future to be their home. Now, you might certainly think they would be well content; but not so; they longed for the freedom of their native wilds. Perhaps there they were king and queen themselves, and had ruled right royally over a mighty kingdom. Who knows? In time they became accustomed to the queen, and submitted without protest to her presence. It is seldom that kindness and gentleness do not overcome the wildest heart. But with the king they were ever the same as at first. They always growled and snarled, and raised quite a rebellion against his coming into any room where they might be. After a while two little kittens came to make them feel more at home. Pussinella was one of these, and, as you see, first opened her eyes in the queen's own bedroom, surrounded by every mark of respect and royalty. Is it strange that her heart swelled with pride and coldness toward the less favored world; that the majestic wave of her tail showed a consciousness of superiority; that she demanded and accepted as simply her right the best to be had? Remember, she is only a cat; might not many a little boy or girl act in a way that was quite as unreasonable? Pussinella was the prettier of the two kittens; a little, soft, pure white ball, with long, silky hair, beautiful, big gray eyes, and a tail not like an ordinary cat-no, indeed! Pussinella's tail is as big as the end of a boa, and of a soft dove-color; and she has also one spot of the same pretty gray right in the middle of her back. This is about the size of a 50-cent piece; but when she was little, of course, the spot was little, and a source of great annoyance to vain Pussinella, who spent much time licking and licking with her little pink tongue, trying to wash off what she thought a blemish upon her beautiful white coat; but it stayed nevertheless, and it is a very pretty spot, indeed.

Pets of a Learned Man. Sir Henry Rawlinson, the great military authority on Persian inscriptions, wrote his Memoir" in a summer-house overhanging the Tigris, where the outside heat of 120 degrees was reduced to 90 degrees by the action of a water-wheel, which poured a continuous stream of water over the roof. For recreation while writing his book, Rawlinson indulged in petting wild animals. He had a tame leopard named Fahad which he brought to England and presented to the zoological gardens at Clifton, near Bristol. Whenever Rawlinson was in England he would visit Fahad. As soon as the beast heard his cry, "Fahad! Fahad!" it would rise from the floor of its cage, approach the bars, and then, rolling on the floor, extend its head to be scratched. Once the keeper, who did not know Sir Henry, on seeing him pat the leopard, exfenry, on seeing him pat the leopardiamed:

"Take your hand out of the cage. The animal is very savage and will bite you!"

"Do you think so?" said Sir Henry. "I don't think he'll bite me. Will you, Fahad?" and the beast answered by a purr and had?" and the beast answered by a purr and yould hardly let the hand be withdrawn. had been found when a kitten on the bank of the Tigris-its mother having been shot -and brought to Sir Henry. He alone fed it, and the lion when grown would follow him about like a dog. One hot day the lion moped and rejected its food. It pac edthe master's room and he, being very busy, called two servants to take the lion away. The lion would not go with them, but drew nearer its master, and at last sat down under his chair with his head be-

"Oh," said he, "if he won't go let him bide." wrote on... The lien sank from a sitting powas quiet for several hours save the scratching of the pen. When his work was over the master put down his hand to pat the pet. The lion was dead.—Youth's Com-

James Donnelly, Joseph Kelly and F. Mc-Geary are the London representatives.

PERFUME AND PREPARATION. [From London Truth.] Would you like to give out a perfume like the body of one who died in the odor of sanctity? Nothing is easier. If you want to smell like violets make a subcutaneous injection of essence of these flowers. You can vary your perfumed essence as you please. The perfume is scarcely noticeable unless one gets warm. This mode of scenting one's person was discovered accicalled suddenly to Russia. She had not time to lay in a provision of her favorite drug. But a complacent doctor promised to send it after her. He did so. But the Russian custom house would not let it pass. The paternal government of Russia forbids the importation of morphine unless by chemists. The morphinomaniac as a substitute tried essence of violets. She remembered that an infusion of violets is soporific. She made her subcutaneous injection with a Pravas syringe. She fell asleep, and to her great surprise awoke in a perspira-tion, smelling like a bed of violets.

ARMY HYGIENE IN HOT COUN-

TRIES. Overheating of the body, which is accompanied by perspiration, is dangerous unless the body is well covered. The too rapid evaporation of sweat chills the body, which in that state is more susceptible to diarrhea, dysentery, inflammation of the liver, fevers and other maladies. The use of light canvas is rational for outer garments, and for underclothing cotton Januel is best. At night warmer clothing is requisite, and a flannel belt must then be worn. For headgear, a light canvas helmet, with airholes, will be found most suitable. A large visor, lined with leather or green cloth, will protect the eyes. Fever is often taken through the eyes. The English authorities, recognizing this fact, supplied their mer with smoked glasses in Egypt. Before a march the feet ought to be washed in water with a dash of alcohol and then soaped, or, preferably, greased After a day's march, the feet must be washed, if feasible, in warm water, and put in light shoes or slippers.—Collier's Weekly.

Nervous Toronto Woman Walked e Floor During the Night for Hours a Time-She Makes a Statement. TORONTO, ONT .- "I was troubled ith nervousness. It was impossible for e to keep still and if the spells came ver me during the night I had to get up nd walk the floor for hours at a time. My blood was very poor and I was subject to bilious attacks. My feet would swell and I was not able to do my own housework. I treated with two of the best physicians here but only received relief for a time. I became discouraged. One day a friend called and advised me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I laughed at the advice but I was prevailed upon and procured one bottle. Before I used it all I began to feel better. I took several bot-tles and also several boxes of Hood's Pills. Now I can eat and drink heartily and sleep soundly. Hood's Sarsaparilla has entirely cured me and also strengthened me so that I now do all my own work. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all sufferers from nervousness, weakness or general debility." Mrs. H.

By Using the Great Natural Blood Cooler, Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets Ensure Perfect Digestion, and Perfect Digestion Gives Cool. Rich Blood-Cool, Rich Blood Means Perfect Health.

When a man is in the most deadly danger, the surest way to escape safely

When, as in these sultry days of midsummer, the blood's temperature rises far above its normal point, grave danger to health and life results.

The only way to escape this danger is to KEEP THE BLOOD COOL. A great many of us endeavor to do this by drinking what are called "cooling drinks," which, by causing a sudden change in the temperature, create a danger as grave as that they are supposed to prevent. Many others drink alcoholic liquors, which have the same effect as adding

There is one safe, sure, and simple way of cooling the blood. That is by using Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. This is the only natural way to cool the blood, and to keep it cool—for Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets make it cool at the fountain, thus insuring a cool stream.

If there should be any person who doubts this, a trial will speedily prove the truth of the claim. The person whose blood is overheated will have pimples on his face, neck or shoulders; or he may be tortured by boils, etc.

To test the wonderful virtue of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets, let him use them according to directions, for a few days, and the pimples or boils will speedily disappear. He will "feel bet-ter," too. His food will do him good. His appetite will become good, and his general health will improve.

But Was the Victim of Assassinatian -The Anglo-Saxon Agreement Believed To Be an Accomplished Fact.

Paris, Sept. 3.-Paris this morning is in a wild uproar over the latest rumor anent the death of Col. Henry. It is hinted, and hinted very strongly, that he did not commit suicide, but that he was the victim of an assassination. It is asserted by the police that they have not seen the razor with which it is alleged Col. Henry committed the deed. When the commissary of police asked for it he was told that it had been sent to the minister of war. The Eclar, referring to this matter, says: "The controversy has shown us long ago to what depths certain individuals can descend, so we were not surprised to read that the suicide of Col. Henry was perhaps a murder."

The Unpaid Soldiers and Civil Officials Would Like Some of the Money-Spain Calls 109,000 Men to Arms.

New York, Sept. 3 .-- A dispatch to the Herald from Havana says: Having successfully done everything in his power to convey the impression he was sailing to Spain, via New York, on the steamship Philadelphia, on Thursday, Gen. Pando instead secretly started direct for his native land about ten hours later on the French steamer Notre Dame du Salut, it is said, with 12,000,000 francs.

that very few persons here have any knowledge of it, and all the Havana newspapers announced Pando's departure on the Philadelphia. Before 8 o'clock in the morning, when few persons were about, Gen. Pando and the treasure were put aboard the Notre Dame du Salut, every effort be-ing made to avoid notice. Pando was ing made to avoid notice. no sooner aboard the ship than he sent for Capt. Hillard and intrusted 12,000,-000 francs to his safe-keeping, obtaining a receipt for it. Pando then locked himself in his state room and remained concealed until the ship left the harbor, about 7 o'clock in the evening.

There are many plausible reasons for Gen. Pando's conduct, though exactly which one moved him it is impossible to ascertain. Much depends on where the treasure he carried away came from, but whatever its source, when the army is seven months in arrears and the civil list four months, and while both cry out for pay, it is obvious that a dangerous amount of discontent will be stirred up if the knowledge of the transportation of any such amount becomes published.

Apropos to Pando's departure, persons here have long been asking what has become of three other high officers who left Cuba when Pando did, to procure vessels to run the blockade, each of these other three having carried away for the purpose 50,000 pesetas, of which report says nothing has been heard since. CALL FOR 109,000 MEN.

New York, Sept. 3.-The Spanish Government has published a decree calling to arms 109,000 men, out of whom 30,000 are for the colonies, the latter presumably for the Philippines.

CONVICTS IN SIBERIA. The most conclusive evidence as to what the life of the average convict really is is furnished upon the best of evidence by the convicts themselves, who certainly ought to know when and where they are well off. Not more than one-fourth of the exiles, when their time has expired elect to return to Russia, whether they are attracted by that love and attachment to home so strong in every human breast, so particularly strong in the Slav. The fact is that they have found life in Siberia pleasanter, the road to ease, a competency, and even to wealth less rugged, less crowded with competitors; so they become colonists, and of their own free will and choice remain in Siberia, throwing their fortunes in with the destinies of the new land; and I, knowing something of the conditions of life which obtain in Russia, think they do well.—From "The Convict System in Siberia," by Stephen from the mails, have been committed Bonsal, in Harper's for August.

pair of dark, bold, admiring eyes. Unheard by Maria, a gentleman had opened the drawing-room door. Finding the apartment empty, but perceiving a portion of a dark, well-known skirt in the conservatory beyond, he had advanced, and now, leaning advanced, and now, leaning against one of the glass doors, he, at his ease, contemplated the charming picture the Italian presented.

"Egad; she is lovely; that's a truth," he reflected. "If she were only backed strangers to the boys, but moved by up by a few thousands I shouldn't mind going in to win. She would well become the foot of your table, Granby, my boy; for you are not heir to a marquisate. Gad! how exquisite is the pose of her head, and what lashes! "I haven't slept all night long," she. "While passing between Albany and Buffalo one of the trainmen came to me and told me that there were two terribly sick soldiers in the car behind. I went back and found two boys in the common coach, wild with the delirium of fever. They had sat bolt upright in those hard seats for 24 hours, with no medical attendance and nothing to eat. Not a passenger in all that crowded coach had lifted a finger to help them, and I had to ask one man to get up whatever wit it may conceal, is lost case, so the poor boy could get a more comfortable position. His temperature was rapidly mounting to the danger point, so at Buffale we had him taken off the car and transferred to the hospital. The other boy was in delirium, too, but begged to be allowed to stay on the train, as he was anxious to get to his home in Iowa. By dint of persuasion, however, we managed to get him to the hospital. Besides these two, there were fully a dozen more poys on the train, all sick and huddled together like animals, literally crawling over each other in their feeble efforts to help one another. When I set to work to bathe their hands and faces, the curiosity of the passengers in the coach became aroused, and they would actually come and pull off their faces in order to see what the

THE COMMISSIONERS

Plan for Settling the Alaska Boundary Question

Adjourned Till the 20th Inst.-No Statement To Be Made Public at Present,

Quebec, Sept.3.-The arbitration commissioners discussed the question of boundary lines in Alaska. It is said an agreement has been reached that the settlement of the question will be left to an outside commission, to be composed of foreign arbitrators, or to three, composed of one member from the United States, one from Great Britain and Canada, and one from one of the foreign powers. There was a sitting of the international conference from 11 o'clock un-til 1 o'clock p.m. Then the commissioners adjourned their deliberations to the 20th inst. Mr. Dingley, interviewed after the adjournment, said that no statement would be made to the public until the close of the deliberations of the con-ference. He left at night for Portland. Mr. Dobell entertained the members of the international commission to dinner at his residence.

This week's proceedings as far as can be learned from the commissioners has been devoted to a general discussion of the questions to be submitand an exchange of views on the different subjects. Sir Wilfrid Laurier goes to Arthabaskaville and Gen. Foster goes to To-ronto to visit the exhibition.
