E. V. Buchanan Defends Public Utility Estimates For 1922

ASSAILS THOSE WHO CRITICIZE DEPARTMENT

Debentures Issued by Body Never a Burden to People.

UTILITY SELF-SUPPORTING

Many Misrepresentations Have Been Made, He Claims.

"Colossal misrepresentation of facts" characterizes the opinion expressed Saturday by E. V. Buchanan, general manager of the public utilities commission, commenting upon the complaints registered Friday by those who seemingly are opposed to the commission's appeal for aid.

At the last regular session of the public utilities commisson, upon the request of the city, estimates for 1922 were furnished, as follows: Electrical department, $125,000, and waterworks department a similar amount. That the city council will refuse to authorize the issuance of debentures for this sum has been the opinion of two or three of the aldermen, who are reported as having said, "It is time to call a halt on this thing."

"The public utilities is a self-supporting body of the city of London," commented the general manager Saturday. "It is a revenue-producing body. It is really a peculiar circumstance when people clamor for increased and adequate water supply that you find them bitterly criticising when you ask for the necessary finances to carry on.

"We'll say for instance that the city council refuses to authorize the expenditure for the additional 1,500-kilowatt transformer. The citizens would have no room for an outcry if we should find it necessary to curtail their service at some future date. The same with the water. In the middle of summer we might find it necessary to turn the water off. If we haven't the supply we wouldn't be able to do anything else.

"It has been said that the well drilling that we are now undertaking will cost a mill on the dollar. That is a direct misrepresentation. The entire sum has been credited to one year, while it is known that the same is to be spread over a period of twenty years.

"Debentures issued for a body like the public utilities is never regarded as a debt. This department is a revenue-producer, and the city is not taxed. It has been asked why have we not collected the $100,000 from the provincial commission. If the latter will present us with a check for that sum we will certainly be enabled to cut our estimates in practically half."

"A first-class contract," agreed Ald. George Wenige Saturday when discussing the agreement between the public utilities commission and the Ohio Well Drilling Company of Massillon, Ohio. "I have nothing against a contract of that nature. That's just how an agreement should be entered into. The city is well protected."

Ald. Wenige, however, is of the opinion that London might better seek its future water supply from the lake. "We are bound to exhaust our supply eventually. No person should overlook the fact that the city is not going to remain stationary. We are not going to stop at the 60,000 mark by any means. We are going to grow and we should be prepared."

The councillor questioned also why the commission has not attempted to collect the sum of $100,000 due it from the provincial commission. "I want to see them make a definite move in that direction," he volunteered. "It is a legitimate debt and should not be left too long. Any financial expert will tell you that the individual businessman who fails to collect his debts invariably fails in the end. Should the commission receive this $100,000 it would mean a difference of practically two mills."

IRISH DELEGATION ON WAY TO ENGLAND

To Meet British Representatives in London Tuesday.

Dublin, Oct. 8.—A large crowd gave a hearty send-off in the Westland Railroad station here this morning to the Irish peace delegates, who will meet the representatives of the British Government in London on Tuesday next in a further effort to solve the Irish problem. All the plenipotentiaries were in the departing party with the exception of Michael Collins, finance minister in the dail cabinet, who was detained by family reasons. He will leave for London on Monday.

Before leaving, Arthur Griffith, Sinn Fein foreign minister, said he had no statement to make. The delegates were cheered as the train left the station.

Although the names of the Sinn Fein delegates have not formally been announced, it is understood they comprise Mr. Griffiths, Mr. Collins, Robert C. Barton, who has been a leading figure in the negotiations, Eamonn J. Duggan, Sinn Fein member of the British Parliament, and George Gavan Duffy, a representative of the Sinn Fein abroad. These men were designated to meet the British representatives at Inverness on Sept. 20, the invitation to which was cancelled by Prime Minister Lloyd George because Eamonn de Valera, the Irish republican leader, declared that the Sinn Fein delegates would negotiate only as representatives of a sovereign state.

DR. CLARK REFUSES TO ACCEPT NOMINATION

Lacombe, Alta., Oct. 8.—By Canadian Press.—The Liberals of Red Deer riding, in a convention held at Lacombe today, nominated Dr. Michael Clark, formerly member for the riding and until recently first lieutenant of the Progressives. Dr. Clark was not at the meeting, and when informed by telephone of the action of the convention he declined to accept, but said that he had always been a Liberal, was sympathetic to the Liberal leader and believed that a strong Liberal Government was needed at Ottawa.

The nomination of Dr. Clark was far from unanimous, the voting being 52 for him to 27 for A. D. McKenzie of Penhold. In the discussion, Dr. Clark was described by one delegate as "a political comedian and a public man who could not be trusted."

20,461 PERSONS MAY VOTE AT CIVIC ELECTIONS

Women Number 5,055, While Male Voters Total 15,406.

MORE PROPERTY OWNERS

Wards One and Two Show Increases in Numbers of Voters.

The number of persons entitled to vote at the municipal election on Dec. 5 totals 20,461. Of these 15,406 are men and 5,055 women.

Compared with last year, the total shows an increase of 226, there being 33 less men voters and 259 more women voters.

The outstanding feature of the figures dealing with the voters list as compiled by City Clerk Baker is the increase in the number of persons, who as property-owners are entitled to vote and the decrease in the number of tenants. This indicates that the movement to "own your own home" has taken a firm hold in the city during the past year.

Many Buy Homes.

This year, the property-owners total 12,895, and tenants, 6,531. Last year there were 12,186 property-owners and 7,073 tenants. The property-owners increased 709 and the tenants' total dropped 542.

BRANDS STATEMENT OF PREMIER AN ILLUSION

London Times Assails Hughes' Stand On Washington Conference.

London, Oct. 7.—The London Times in an editorial tonight brands as "an entire misconception" Premier Hughes's statement in the Australian House of Representatives on Thursday, in which he is quoted as having said that efforts to secure dominion representation at the Washington conference were stopped when only "the United States slammed the door in our face."

The paper declares that the United States never rejected any proposal to have dominion representatives at the conference, adding that the British Government, at a time when it did not fully realize the nature of the Washington proposals, suggested a preliminary conference which the dominion premiers might attend on their way home from the imperial conference.

Great satisfaction is expressed by the Times at the increasing evidence of growing interest in the conference. The inclusion of an Australian representative, it says, is the most welcome indication we have yet seen that the British Government is awakening to the sense of the broader possibilities of the conference at Washington.

NICARAGUAN TROOPS SAVE CITY OF LEON

Managua, Nicaragua, Oct. 8.—Timely action by the Nicaraguan Government in sending troops to the Honduran frontier averted a contemplated attack on Leon, the largest city in Nicaragua by the insurgents, it is declared here. General Masis, minister of public works in 1909 and 1910, is in personal command of the Government forces, which have captured many of the rebels.

General Lobos, leader of the revolutionary bands, is negotiating for a surrender. The Government has stipulated it will spare him and his followers if he delivers up all arms in their possession, reveals the plans of revolutionists and ceases his expedition.

Crash Awakens Hotel Guests

WINDSOR BUILDING COLLAPSES

Windsor, Oct. 8.—Guests at the Crawford House were awakened by a roar and a rumble about 7:30 this morning when a section of the old building near the corner of Ferry street and Medbury Lane fell into the street. Nobody was hurt, as the rooms in the section that collapsed had not been occupied for a week, as the part of the building which fell had been taken over by contractors, who were preparing to tear it down.

According to E. M. Doumani, proprietor, men had been working in the part of the building near the corner of Ferry and Medbury lane for several days, removing heavy fixtures. He attributes the collapse to the strain caused by the moving of heavy fixtures, aided by a strong west wind. No damage was caused as way was being made for a large addition to the hotel.

According to F. X. Menard, the clerk who was on duty at the time, there was no warning before the old section of the building collapsed. Guests, awakened by the noise, rushd from their rooms in other sections of the building, but returned and dressed when informed by the clerk and porters that there was no danger. A few of the more timid made their way to the street by means of the fire escapes in the rear of the building.

WEST RUSSIA FALLS INTO FULL ANARCHY

Famine, Communist Suspicion of Lenine Brings Chaos.

Reval, via London, Oct. 7.—The indirect effect of the famine, the direct effects of Bolshevist misgovernment and the want of confidence caused among fanatical Communists by the return of Nikolai Lenine, Soviett premier to so-called "capatalistic principles" have all together produced a state of anarchy in the western provinces of Russia.

The symptons are seen in the formation of robber bands, the looting of provision trains and the great loss of prestige by the Reds among the general population. A certain amount of nationalist feeling also is noticeable among the Ukranian insurgents.

The Moscow Soviet is extremely disturbed by the state of things and, as usual, is trying to combat the rising tide by propaganda, force of arms and wholesale executions. The Bolshevist propaganda takes an ingenious line, asserting that the Poles and the French are at the root of all the trouble and that Warsaw is subsiding Boris Savinkoff, the "White" Russian chief whose bands, the Savinkoviki declare, are raiding Russian territory from across the Polish frontier.

The Soviet also charges that through the Rumanian Government Simon Petlura, whose bands are now reported to be hurrying towards the Rumanian frontier, is being subsidized. These accusations are reported for what they are worth. A message from the Moscow foreign office just received by The New York Herald correspondent here declares that many documents found on prisoners prove indisputably that the Polish general staff is supplying Savinkoff with money and arms.

Competent observers believe, however, that the train wrecking which is being done in Russia is the work of famine refugees, it being held that the insurgents and peasants are not affected by any foreign influence and are only anxious to get food. Moscow says that all the trains which were wrecked contained food from America and England, but this is believed to be Bolshevist propaganda for foreign consumption, since no American or English supplies, and very few supplies of any kind for Russia, are sent through Poland.

The plain fact of the matter is that all the Russian provinces along the Polish-Rumanian border are falling into a state of anarchy, and the Reds are taking an extremely grave view of the situation.

Leon Trotzky, Bolshevist minister of war, when he was in Odessa recently reorganizing the Red army and making truculent speeches, speaking before the Zhitomir Soviet, said: "I want peace. Whatever comes to us in the name of peace will be received with honor. Whatever comes in the name of war will be crushed."

40 KILLED IN BIG ST. LAZARE DISASTER

Two More Bodies Recovered When Wreckage Cleared.

Paris, Oct. 8.—The death list in the St. Lazare tunnel disaster probably will approximate 40. Two burned bodies were recovered today when the last of the wreckage was removed. One of these was identified, the other is believed to be that of a woman.

The bodies recovered number 30, and 10 persons are missing. Some of them may possibly have been saved, but they have not communicated with the police.

There remain a number of arms, legs and parts of burned bodies found which may have belonged to the burned bodies, but they are thought to be all that was left of the missing persons. Identification in several instances was made by documents which had not been burned, although the bodies were charred beyond recognition.

HAPPY OMEN SAYS MACKENZIE KING

Charlottetown, P. E. I., Oct. 8.—Canadian Press staff correspondent.—In 1896 Sir Wilfrid Laurier, leader of the Liberal party, was in Charlottetown to address a series of Prince Edward Island meetings when the date of the general election was made known to him by telegram from Ottawa. Last night Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, leader of the Liberal party, was in Charlottetown when he received a telegram from Ottawa apprising him of the announcement that the general election was to be held on December 6 of this year.

"It is a happy omen for victory," declared Mr. King. In 1896 conditions were very similar to those which prevail today. There had been somewhat similar changes of prime ministrs, and business was at a low ebb after several years of Conservative rule. Then came the elections with the dfeat of the Tupper the elections with the defeat of the Tupper of prosperity under the Laurier-Fielding tariff policy."

GAS CO. OFFERED ITS SUPPLY AT 45 CENTS

Ald. W. A. Wilson is busy this morning denying the statement that has been credited to him to the effect that the Progressive Gas Company was offered 65 cents for its gas supply. The alderman says that he did not make that claim, but he did claim that he had made the assertion that he accused the gas company of offering their gas supply at 45 cents, and that this was not denied. Mr. Wilson says that he understands that a Buffalo firm offered the Progressive people 45 cents, and offered to take all the gas produced. To London the offer was 50 cents, but the city in any case could not take more than one million feet.

No move to renew negotiations with the company has been made as yet.

GIANTS PRIMED FOR 4TH GAME VICTORY TODAY

Eight Runs in Seventh Inning Yesterday Was New World Series Record.

WEATHER THREATENING

Huggins Confident Yank Triumph Will Put Pennant "On Ice."

BULLETIN.

New York, Oct. 8.—By 11:30 o'clock the heavy skies had taken on the grimness of football weather. Prospects for a cheery afternoon at the Polo Grounds seemed poor.

New York, Oct. 8.—Their batting sights clear and set for sharp-shooting, the New York Giants were determined today to bombard the Yankee twirling section and gain an even footing in the world's series. They hammered four Yankee pitchers for a world's series record of 20 hits yesterday, and won the third game 13 to 5, after dropping the first two without a score.

The weather at 8 o'clock this morning was partly cloudy, with official forecasts predicting rain. The sun was making an effort to clear away the threatening clouds, however, and it looked an even chance that the rain might hold off.

Manager McGraw intimated he would send Phil Douglas, the spit-baller, to the mound in an effort to hold the Yankee sluggers while his men march to their second victory. Phil hurled a great game in the opening contest against Mays. Harry Harper, the Hackensack, N. J., southpaw, is most likely to oppose Phil, and if the Jerseyite is in form the fourth game of the series may develop another pitchers' battle.

Dopesters Twisted.

All the dope issued previous to the series by the so-called experts has materialized, but it turned out they said Giants where they should have said Yankees and vice versa.

They predicted the Giants would show the greatest dash, speed and resourcefulness, while the Yankees would win their games by terrific batting.

In the first two games the Yankees won by dash and resourcefulness, and in the third the Giants punched their way to triumph.

But McGraw's men are content to win, be it by dash or punch, while the Yankees, with one game to the good, still are optimistic.

Huggins probably will not call on Shawkey, Quinn or Collins again in this series, as the Giants got to them hard yesterday. If Harper comes through today he believes the series will be on ice for the Americans, with Mays and Hoyt in reserve for the needed two games. If Harper fails, Huggins will have to rely on his two aces for an "iron man" stunt.

Behind the bat yesterday Snyder performed well for the Giants. He wielded the stick with precision, too, and he will be sent into the game again. Wallie Schang will perform for the Yankees as usual.

Babe Ruth Injured.

Suffering from an abscess on his arm as a result of his base-stealing in the second game, Babe Ruth may be compelled to watch the fourth contest from the bench.

"Chick" Fewster will take his place in the event that Babe is unable to play. Ruth, who still lacks a series home run, may get a chance to pinch-hit, however, if the occasion warrants.

"My greatest desire right now," said the Babe, "is to crown my world's series play with a home run into the stands. I'd die easy if I could do it."

Yesterday's game, as a result of the ineffective pitching of the Yankee twirlers, saw a number of world's series records smashed. Those eight hits in the seventh inning made one record, the eight runs another, and the twelve men who batted still another. Young's two hits in the seventh inning, one a double, the other a triple, also made history. The time required to play the nine innings—2 hours and 40 minutes—added a few lines to the records.

Twenty Hits a Record.

Twenty hits for one team in one game never were recorded before in a world's series. Burns garnered four of them, three singles and a triple. Frisch, besides drawing three free passes, hit safely twice; Young walked twice, then made a triple and a double in the same inning. Emil Meusel collected a double, and two singles, Snyder four singles, and Jess Barnes two; Rawlings got two and Bancroft one. Kelly and Pitcher Toney were the only Giants who failed to connect at least once.

Today being a half holiday for business people in New York, a record crowd is expected to pack the Polo Grounds.

The probable batting order:

Giants.	Yankees.
Burns, c. f.	Miller, c. f.
Bancroft, s. s.	Peckinpaugh, s. s.
Frisch, 3 b.	Ruth or
Young, r. f.	Fewster, l. f.
Kelly, 1 b.	R. Meusel, r. f.
E. Meusel, l. f.	Pipp, 1 b.
Rawlings, 2 b.	Ward, 2 b.
Snyder, c.	McNally, 3 b.
Douglas, p.	Schang, c.
	Harper or
	Mays, p.

The umpires have been assigned as follows: Chill at the plate; Rigler at first; Moriarity at second; Quigley at third.

WESTERN ATTENDANCE RECORDS ARE SMASHED

Dean Fox of the Western University stated to The Advertiser Saturday that all records for attendance at the Western are being broken. It is impossible yet to obtain anything like complete figures, but this year's classes will contain approximately 700 to 750 students.

"We have 320 students here now," said the dean. "This is 100 more than last year. There is a full first-year class at the Middle School. Our showing has in every way been most satisfactory. Unless Queen's University has a big increase this year, we will have approximately two-thirds of that university's attendance."

The rush of students is taxing the capacity of the present buildings, and is entailing a great deal of work in arranging for the classes.

BUYERS PAYING $5.50 A BARREL FOR APPLES

The 50 per cent apple crop of Western Ontario is being rapidly snapped up by apple buyers, according to Fruit Inspector George Connor, who is in close touch with the situation.

"The crop this year is nothing to rave about," stated Mr. Connor to The Advertiser Saturday. "I find that the buyers are loading cars f.o.b. at $5.50 per barrel for No. 1 stuff, and $5 for No. 2. This will mean that the retailer will get from $6 up for first-class apples and up to $6 for No. 2 quality."

Many of the cars are billed for Western Canada.

FRENCH PREMIER WILL OUTLINE FOREIGN POLICY

Paris, Oct. 8.—Premier Briand, accompanied by several members of his cabinet, left for St. Nazaire this morning, and tomorrow in that city will deliver an address outlining the Government's foreign policy. He has been for a considerable time preparing his speech and it was indicated today he might, incidentally, reply to criticisms voiced last Sunday by former Premier Clemenceau regarding the execution of the Versailles treaty.

ERNEST CASSEL LEAVES $30,000,000 ESTATE

London, Oct. 8.—Sir Ernest Cassel, the financier, who died here recently, left an estate valued at $30,000,000, according to his will, which was probated yesterday. This estate is liable to a duty at the maximum rate of 40 per cent, and the public treasury will benefit to the extent of $12,000,000.

The largest part of the estate was bequeathed to two grandchildren, after whom the chief beneficiary is a sister. Large legacies were left to other relatives, while employees and friends also were remembered. The preliminary announcement of the contents of the will mentions no bequest to charities, but if all trusts mentioned in the document ultimately fail, the whole residuary estate will go to London hospitals.

ROADS LEADING FROM DETROIT UNDER GUARD

Heavily Armed Police Search For Four Bandits.

NO ARRESTS MADE YET

Quartet Got Away With Haul Estimated at $20,000 to $100,000.

[Exclusive Staff Special.]

Detroit, Oct. 8.—Every road in Michigan leading from Detroit Saturday is being guarded by heavily-armed police watching for the four highwaymen who held up and robbed the Windsor mail messenger of his load of mail late last night. So far not a trace of them has been found.

There is no way of knowing the value of the loot, but it is variously estimated at from $20,000 to $100,000. Since United States funds have been commanding a premium in Canada, Windsor banks have been sending large packages of American currency over the river nightly, and the mail from Windsor last night was about the usual size.

Well Executed.

The hold-up was well planned, and it is evident that the thugs had an intimate knowledge of the value of the mail and the route usually taken by W. R. McCaulei[illegible] 70-year-old messenger. It is also evident that they had picked a spot for the clean-up.

Many Looked On.

In a twinkling the load of mail was dumped from the wagon into the machine and in another twinkling the car was out of sight. Many pedestrians looked on, but so quickly did the thugs move that it was all over before anyone realized what was going on.

Toledo, Oct. 8.—All night the road from Detroit was guarded by fifteen police armed with shotguns and high-powered rifles in the hope of capturing the Detroit mail thieves.

D'ANNUNZIO IS BUSY MANUFACTURING WORDS

Gardone, Italy, Oct. 8.—Commander Gabriele d'Annunzio has become a coiner of words. Aside from having a special D'Annunzio dictionary compiled and published by some enterprising Italian publishers to assist his readers in knowing the meaning of words not found in the ordinary dictionaries, the premier Italian poet and adventurer lets very few weeks pass without promulgating some new addition to the Italian vocabulary.

Arts Freshmen of Western U. Duly Initiated by Seniors

Fly paper collars and caps, black, green and vermilion paint and hair cuts of unique design featured the initiation of the Arts students of the Western University Saturday morning. The Freshies were warned that it would be wise to wear old clothes today and on Monday, and those who did so escaped damage to good suits. They were given little opportunity to fight en masse, as the seniors waited for them, and picked them off, one by one, as they entered the college. Some of the more husky Freshies put up a game battle, and handled half a dozen men, but in the end, numbers told, and they were forced to the ground.

The first step in the initiation was to tie the hands of each luckless Freshman behind him. Then his shoes and stockings were removed and gorgeous stripes of red and green painted on his legs. His face was then treated to a camouflage effect of vermillion, black and dull green. After a fly paper cap had been fastened firmly in his hair and a fly paper collar similarly affixed about his neck, he was carried to the main steps of the university, where he was asked to either make a speech or sing a song.

At this point many of the Freshies decided to put up a battle, and those who did had their feet tickled, much to the amusement of the large crowd of seniors present. Later they had their hair clipped in various fantastic designs, and then, after they made their little speech or sang a song releases were in order.

In the meantime another bunch of seniors had been busy distributing the shoes and stockings of the Freshies over a dozen blocks. After being freed the Freshies were informed of these proceedings, and they started to trudge over many blocks trying to locate shoes and stockings.

"Gee, but it's cold walking about ten blocks barefoot a day like today," said one Freshie to The Advertiser.

Many of the first-year men failed to put in an appearance today. The seniors threaten that they will get more severe treatment next week as a result.

This is only the second year that initiations of this nature have been permitted in the Arts department, and Saturday's affair was much more livelier than that of last year.

Seeks Meanest Man in London; Kills Pet of Market Square

Market Clerk Charles Maker is on the trail of the meanest man in London. Be it known that Mr. Maker, Weigh Scales Clerk James Dean, J. B. Cox and Chancey Smith have constituted themselves daddies-in-chief to one hundred or more pigeons who pick up a living on the Market Square.

The pigeons are very tame, and look upon all men as their friends, but one unfortunate bird who came too close to a surly individual on Saturday morning paid for his friendliness with his life.

Mr. Pigeon hopped close to the man and was in the act of picking up a few grains of oats, when he was struck viciously on the head with a cane. He toppled in the mud, tried to rise, quivered a few times, and then the spark of life vanished.

The man, looking neither to right nor left, stooped down, picked up a bunch of still warm fluff, tucked it under his arm, and rapidly made his way from the market.

A farmer who noticed the cruel act immediately informed Mr. Maker, and gave him a good description of the culprit. The market clerk and his fellow-daddies will watch out for him, and when they catch him he will get a rattling good hiding, they state, and hope the man chokes on his Sunday pigeon pie.

Widow's Lawn Is Laid Waste By City Pick and Shovel Gang

On a certain street not far beyond the river in South London, there lives a woman who has a grievous complaint against the city.

A few years ago, when her husband died, the woman was left alone, but there remained to her a pretty little home surrounded with a beautiful lawn, shrubs and beds of rare plants.

The woman was very proud of her home. With her own hand she cared for the flowers, and though she was no longer young, she as a rule mowed and trimmed the lawn unassisted.

Recently the city saw fit to lay water mains on the street, and from these mains smaller pipes were run into some of the houses. The widow's home was one of the last to be treated in this way.

In the belief that the work was expedient, the woman did not protest when a gang of men dug a deep hole on the inside of the sidewalk, in the very middle of the lawn. As they removed the sods carefully, she believed that when the holes were refilled within a few hours the damaged lawns would be repaired easily.

To her surprise, however, when the hole had been excavated and two great piles of earth had been spread over half of the lawn, the workmen picked up their tools and departed. She protested at them leaving, but their foremen claimed that they had been [illegible] to another part of [illegible]

That occurred five weeks ago. The two great piles of earth, trampled by children and beaten and scattered by several rains, still remain as ugly sores, despite her many protests. The once verdant lawn beneath has turned brown, and no matter what is done now she believes its beauty can never be restored.

Laborites Desire Immediate Discussion of Labor Problems

London, Oct. 8. — The pressure of the unemployment problem is steadily increasing, and intense anxiety is being manifested by labor organizations, manufacturers and the public, regarding the plan which the Government is formulating to deal with it.

A joint conference of labor leaders yesterday accepted the premier's invitation to advise with the cabinet next week on the question, but the Laborites revealed in an exchange of communications with Mr. Lloyd George their desire to begin discussions immediately. They consented merely to examine the Government's proposal, explicitly disassociating themselves from responsibility for the policy to be adopted by the Government.

Ben Tillett, Labor member of Parliament, and organizer of the Dockers' Union, of which for many years he has been general secretary, in a manifesto last night declared: "Bankruptcy stares us in the face. This winter will be the testing time for working class organizations. Every form of government is in a state of panic or ruin, and whether it will be an imperial or national Government disaster depends on the administration, but whatever the chaos of accumulated debts, labor and industry will have to meet their impost."

He urges the co-operation of all trade unions to compel Government assistance.

DOCTORS SHOWN NEW METHOD IN BRAIN SURGERY

Dr. W. E. Dandy, Celebrated Surgeon, Illustrates Instructive Address.

SLEEPING SICKNESS

Its Characteristics Discussed Before Western Ontario Medical Academy.

New but radical methods of diagnosing tumors of the brain were unfolded to over 200 members of the Western Ontario Medical Academy in session in Western University Medical School, Friday afternoon by Dr. Walter E. Dandy, brain surgeon of Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore. Dr. Dandy, by means of lantern slides disclosed his new method, designated pneumography, which consists of injecting air into the spaces of the human brain, and then taking X-ray photographs of the patient's head.

With a tumor present, the air is prevented from filling all the brain spaces, and is revealed by the photo. By this means the definite location of the tumor is determined, thus greatly facilitating removal and reducing mortality. Dr. Dandy is a pioneer in this work, which has won him international fame, and Western Ontario doctors are fortunate in being enabled to hear him deliver a paper on the subject.

Sleeping Sickness.

Dr. Charles Neu, of Indianapolis, Ind., one of the best-known neurologists in the Middle West, and a graduate of Western University Medical School, delivered an interesting paper on encephalitis lethargica, which is known to the laity as sleeping sickness. Dr. Neu reviewed the general characteristics of this disease, of which a few residents of this district have fallen victims, and also outlined post mortem finding on patients who have succumbed to it, in the State of Indiana.

A significant feature of his address was the fact that he indicated a relation between sleeping sickness and influenza, the former disease having a tendency to follow the latter. While he declined to commit himself, Dr. Neu mentioned the names that several leading medical authorities consider that these two diseases are linked together.

No Part Immune.

Dr. Neu declared sleeping sickness to be contagious and important in the field of general hygiene and sanitation. It has been designated by many names and there is no part of the nervous system immune to its attacks. He cited the general symptoms and brought out the fact that contrary to common belief it is often characterized by sleeplessness on the part of the patient. January, February and March are the favorite months in which this disease manifests itself, by sudden attacks.

He emphasized the fact that some victims are observed to sleep continually, with the attacks similar to ordinary sleep, except that the patient is drowsy all day, trying in vain to keep awake. These periods continue until the victim proceeds from stupor to coma. Dr. Neu declared that in cases where stupor is observed early in the disease, recovery is more certain than when it manifests itself later.

Recovery Slow.

Recovery is very slow, with no definite promises for attending physician or patient to become encouraged. Electricity and massage are two methods of treatment.

Dr. Neu stated that the organism causing sleeping sickness has not yet been isolated, but is believed to be a filterable virus. He stated further that in France, following the influenza epidemic of 1890, sleeping sickness was observed. Similarly it appeared after the influenza epidemic in Canada and United States. Authorities disagree on the relationship of these two diseases.

Dr. Neu practiced medicine in London about fifteen years ago, and his classmates in attendance at the meeting Friday expressed regret that he went to the United States to attain fame, declaring that Canada suffered, while the State of Indiana gained by his step.

Decries Practice.

The third speaker of the session was Dr. Russell G. MacRoberts, associate physician of the Neurological Institute of New York City, a graduate of Western University and native Londoner. Dr. MacRoberts read an interesting paper on "Fits and Fallacies," pointing out misconceptions held by practitioners with regard to the treatment of epileptic fits. He decried the practice of operating on epileptic victims, urging conservatism in such treatment.

"Epileptics are dieted, purged, disinfected, analysed, circumcized and sterilized," he declared, "every sort of conceivable activity is being indulged in and advocated for the cure of epilepsy. This paper is an attempt, by a brief consideration of some of the more popular misconceptions, to clear up somewhat the confusion concerning the very interesting but much-abused problem of convulsions, which must surround the general practitioner under whose care most epileptics are, excepting those in the big cities."

Not Incurable.

"It is not an incurable disorder. At the Neurological Institute we find that practically all epileptics of the class who live at home and are able to visit the hospital derive great benefit from treatment."

Following the above addresses members of the academy present engaged in a spirited discussion on the various new points raised by the speakers. Clinics were also held on several patients suffering nervous diseases, expert opinions on their respective conditions being obtained from the visiting specialists. Friday's meeting, which is the first of many to be held in London by the Western Ontario Academy of Medicine this year, was reported to be the most successful and best-attended in the history of the organization.

Dr. F. W. Hughes, president of the academy, in his opening address, urged Western Ontario doctors to organize in the interests of the profession.

FAN TRONGS HEAR MAGNAVOX AT ALLEN

Forget Rain As They Learn How Giants Won Victory.

Rain in proverbial bucketfuls greeted London baseball enthusiasts Friday morning and continued unabated throughout the day. It was far too disagreeable in the afternoon for even your 100 per cent "Babe" Ruth or "Muggsy" McGraw admirer to weather it for long in the open awaiting word from the Polo Grounds that the Giant sluggers had taken the measure of the doughty Yankees in the third game of the world series.

It was not even what one would term comfortable at the New York ball yard itself, but several hundred "ball and movie" fans can testify that it was real cozy in the Allen Theatre, where, as the guests of the London Advertiser and the theatre management, they received the result of the big game, detail by detail, just as they have been accustomed to do in front of The Advertiser office, since the series opened.

Magnavox Undampened.

No. The Magnavox was not confined to the club house by reason of wet grounds. Far from it. Just such a contingency had been foreseen, and through the co-operation of the management of the Allen Theatre, it was arranged that in event of inclement weather for Friday's game the results would be made known in the theatre by means of the Magnavox.

As the time for the game drew near and it was conceded that the weather would not permit outside announcements, the Magnovox was removed to the Allen just as New York warned by Canadian Press service wire that Shea was feeding the Giants with "sizzling" grounders in batting practice. A few "old stagers" had already shown up to "weather it out" in front of the newspaper office, no matter how much J. Pluvius contemplated turning lose.

But there was no necessity to wait around in the rain.

Tickets For the Asking.

It simply wasn't being done by the best of fans.

The big game was not the only attraction of the theatre, as neither the story of "The Sky Pilot" or its author, Ralph Connor (Dr. Gordon), need any introduction to Londoners, whether they be movie patrons or not. It is but a few days since Dr. Gordon himself was in the city, when he delivered several addresses.

On the other hand, there are few, if any, lovers of good books who have not read his story, "The Sky-Pilot."

It's a Canadian picture by a Canadian author.

Today, weather permitting, the Advertiser's sporting editor and the Magnavox will together strive to give London fans details of the fourth game play by play at The Advertiser office on Dundas street at 2 o'clock.

Evidence regarding the estimated monetary losses that would ensue as well as the effect upon the operation of the various plants were the supply of natural gas, now used, shut off, was given by the representatives of several local industries at a meeting called by Mayor George Crawford, and held in the council chamber, city hall. As a result of the testimony submitted the chief magistrate announced that he would allow the concerns represented to continue the use of gas until Commissioner R. B. Harkness is able to come here and personally consider the situation.

FIXING OF DATE KINDLES MANY POLITICAL FIRES

Federal Polling Will Clash With That in Municipal Contest.

VOTE TWICE IN TWO DAYS

Officials Declare Early Election Plan Will Not Get Fair Trial.

Ottawa's decision to hold the federal election on December 6 will mean that most Londoners will go to the polls on two days in succesion, December 5 to elect the 1922 municipal officers and December 6 to elect a representative to the 14th Parliament of Canada.

Likewise in November London will have two nomination days, one on Monday, November 21, for the municipal contest, and Tuesday, November 22, for the formal nominations for the Commons.

The concensus of opinion about the city is that the coming of the two elections at one time is going to interfere in a measure with both contests. It is believed that the municipal battle will suffer most. It is bound to prove trying to those who fathered the change in the municipal dates up to this year. The municipal contests have always been held on the first Monday of the new year. It was argued, as a result of this, that the last months of the old year found municipal enterprise abandoned. By adopting the Western plan of early December elections, it was thought that the old order of things would go by the wayside, with the added advantage of having the new aldermen present at the last meeting of the old council so as to be in a better position to pick up the reins where the others dropped them.

Not a Fair Trial.

"It will not be a fair trial this year. It is unfortunate that the two contests come so close," said one of the city officials.

Friday's announcement that the federal election contest is to be held on December 6 makes two contests in succession staged in the last month of the year, and the only ones held in December in the history of the Dominion.

On December 17, 1917, the electors of the Dominion chose the 13th Parliament of Canada, returning 153 Unionists or Government supporters and 82 Opposition members.

Previous federal elections from the time of Confederation have been as follows:

1867—August 7 to September 20; 1872—July 20 to October 12; 1874—January 22; 1878—Sept 17; 1882—June 20—1887—February 22; 1891—March 5; 1896—June 23; 1900—November 7; 1904—November 3; 1908—October 26; 1911—September 21; 1917—December 17 and 1921—December 6.

The thirteenth session of the Parliament of Canada will go down in history as one of great interest.

Two Premiers Preside.

It is the third Parliament to be handled by two premiers, first Sir Robert Borden and then Sir Arthur Meighen. The seventh Parliament was the most notable in this regard, having been presided over by three premiers, Hon. Sir J. J. Aboott, Hon. Sir J. Thompson and Hon. Sir M. Bowell. The eighth Parliament, like the thirteenth, had two premiers, Hon. Sir Charles Tupper for one session and then Sir Wilfrd Laurier.

Only Three Remain.

The present Parliament, however, will go down as being notable for its many cabinet ministers. When the war was on Sir Robert Borden increased his cabinet to 23 members, starting with 19 members, and gradually increasing it until 23 members composed the inner circle. And there have been changes galore since, with new ministers stepping in and others resigning. Today it will be found that of Borden's war ministers only Senator Lougheed, Mr. Meighen, Hon. C. C. Ballantyne remain, while the present Meighen cabinet contains but three other Borden aides, and they all went into office in the shake-up of 1919. They are Messrs. Drayton, Tolmie and Guthrie.

London Liberals Choice Pleased Date Is Certain

"We are pleased to have the date for the election confirmed," said C. R. Somerville, London's Liberal candidate, when informed by The Advertiser that Ottawa had announced that voting would take place on December 6, adding: "It places the matter now up to the electorate of the Dominion at a definite period, so that they can all work toward that goal."

Hopes Election Clean.

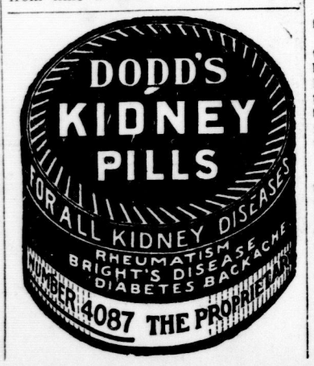

"It is to be hoped," continued Mr. Somerville, "that this election will be carried on with proper dignity by all parties concerned.

"Any person with common-sense knows that the people of Canada are not divided on party lines, with the representatives of all that is good on one side and all that is bad on the other. We have in past days been working side by side in the great cause of humanity, and now that we are dividing into the original parties, either side should have a greater respect for their political opponent than ever before."

Issue of Contest.

Mr. Somerville touched briefly on the issues of the contest, remarking that "the Conservative party is trying to make the issue entirely on the basis of the tariff. No speaker on the Liberal side has attempted to advance the cause of free trade, and no one would be foolish enough to do so with the present condition of the country."

"But," added Mr. Somerville, "there are other issues on which there is plenty of room for discussion, which will come later as meetings are held from time to time."

HOLD ART SUBJECTS IDEAL HOME WORK

County Teachers Claim Pupils Do Arithmetic by Proxy.

That a certain amount of home-work for children in senior classes of public schools is a good thing, was maintained at Friday afternoon's session of the East Middlesex Teachers' Institute, the question arising out of a conference led by Miss Shirley Luton and Miss Margaret Leitch.

It was felt, however, that this home-work should take some form, in which it was necessary for the child to complete the work himself, not have it done for him, as he might in the case of arithmetic. For this reason art was considered a splendid subject for home-work.

Another interesting discussion centered about the play life of the child, and was led by J. A. McLeish and Clifton Braithwaite. Both speakers thought that some day play would occupy its place in the public school curriculum with reading, writing and arithmetic. Regular attendance was another subject which came under discussion.

Confirm Nominations.

The acceptance of the report of the nominating committee makes A. G. Morris president of the institute for the coming year; Miss Limon, vice-president; Miss Frances Cleveland, secretary; John A. McNaughton, treasurer; Mr. Lewis, Mr. Doan and Miss Howlett, members of the executive; P. J. Thompson, librarian; Miss Ronald and Miss Helen Patterson, auditors.

Miss Blanche Silcox, the retiring president, was appointed delegate to the Ontario Education Association next year, and A. G. Morris and Miss Helen Patterson the delegates for the trip to Northern Ontario.

Suggestions for next year's program included an Oxford debate, a discussion on art in the graded public schools and on school management and punishment of pupils. The institute meeting closed at 4 p.m. Friday.

WESTERN MEDS '12 HOLD CLASS REUNION

Revisit Alma Mater For First Assembly Since Graduation.

Fourteen members of Class '12, Western University Medical School, held their first reunion since graduation in this city Friday. Following arrival here Friday morning, the visiting doctors visited the new medical school and registered, after which they inspected city hospitals. Luncheon was held in conjunction with the Western Ontario Academy of Medicine in the Tecumseh Hotel at noon.

At the concusion of this latter function the doctors adjourned to the new medical school, where they posed for a class photo, and then attended the session of the Western Ontario Academy of Medicine, which was addressed by Dr. Russell G. MacRoberts of New York City, one of their number.

In the evening a dinner party was held at the Tecumseh Hotel, where old times were recalled and student escapades were informally discussed. Absent members of the cass were included in the chats, and the class picture taken in 1912 was on display, many laughs resulting from comparisons of appearance nine years ago and now.

One Every Five Years.

The graduates present pledged loyalty to their alma mater, and decided to stage a similar reunion in London every five years.

Several other graduating classes of the Faculty of Medicine at Western are considering similar action, so that a reunion in London will likely be held annually. Class '12 have blazed the way with the first reunion of the medical school.

Doctors were present from Hamilton, Niagara Falls, St. Thomas, Windsor, Detroit, New York City and points in Western Ontario.

The committee in charge of arrangements for the reunion is as follows: Dr. J. A. Campbell, St. Thomas, chairman; Dr. N. F. Scram, London, vice-chairman; Dr. F. R. Clegg, London, secretary, and Dr. W. S. Downham, London, treasurer.

Two of the local barber shops have reduced their prices to those which were known only in the good ole' days, namely, haircut, 10 cents; shave, 5 cents. This came rather suddenly, as the prices previously were 35 and 15 cents. One tonsorial artist first reduced the price of haircuts to 25 cents, but the two others did him one better by reducing more. How long this will last is not known, but there is another barber who charges 15 cents for haircut and 10 cents for a shave.

INDUSTRIAL CONDITIONS IN BRANTFORD IMPROVED

One Civic Committee Has Exceeded Its Year's Appropriation.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 7.—Industrial conditions are brightening a little here. Announcement was made today that the Dominion Steel Products, Limited will shortly take on more men. There are 125 now employed. Negotiations are reported to be pending, which, if brought to fruition, will mean a resumption of normal work conditions.

The only civic committee which has gone over its spending allowance for the year is the buildings and grounds committee, which is reported officially to be $3,000 behind with work not done for which money was set aside in the estimates.

The engineering department, using day labor, has succeeded in laying the West Mill pavement for $6,000 less than estimated. The board of works will now recommend that the permanent paving plan be carried out as fully as possible, and that the asphalt plant be kept going until frost prevents further work, in order to keep the present gangs which are shifted weekly employed.

The court of inquiry into the disappearance of police court evidence was continued this afternoon, and after a two-hour session the police commission adjourned indefinitely. Lawyers for the defence, in the case of King vs. Riddolls et al., were called, and some police officers were recalled. It was shown for the first time that the missing evidence, a section of a liquor case, had actually reappeared at the afternoon session of the police court when the case first came up.

Wardsville

WARDSVILLE, Oct. 7.—The remains of Mrs. O'Haro, relict of the late John O'Haro, who had spent a great deal of her married life here, were brought here yesterday and laid to rest in the Catholic Cemetery. Since her nusband's death Mrs. O'Haro had made her home with a daughter, Mrs. O'Leary, who resides near Wallaceburg. She passed away in his 88th year. A largely attended funeral service was held in the Wallaceburg Catholic Church Wednesday morning. The late Mrs. O'Haro had many warm friends in this community.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church held their monthly meeting yesterday afternoon at the home of the president, Mrs. Willson Turk, with a good attendance. Plans were presented and adopted for this present year's work. At the close the hostess served a dainty lunch.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Husser wish to thank all their friends, both here and in other places where they have lived, for their kind sympathy and prayers during the serious illness of their youngest son, Carlyle, who is now making rapid progress toward complete recovery.

They also discussed the matter from all angles.

STOMACH SOUR, ACID, GASSY, UPSET! DON'T STAY SICK, HEADACHY, BILIOUS

That awful sourness, belching of acid and gases; that pain in pit of stomach, heartburn, nervousness, nausea, feeling of fullness, dizziness and sick headache, means your stomach is sour—liver, torpid, bowels—constipated. It isn't your stomach's fault—it isn't indigestion—it's biliousness and constipation. Try Cascarets; they sweeten the stomach, remove the fermenting food and gases; take bile from liver and carry off the constipated waste matter from the bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended. A Cascaret tonight straightens you out by morning.

CASCARETS WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP.

SHERLOCK HOLMES' GENESIS EXPLAINED

Sir Conan Doyle Tells How Name of Character Evolved.

London, Oct. 8.—Sir Conan Doyle gave an authoritative account of the origin of the name of "Sherlock Holmes" at the semi-annual convention dinner of the Still Film Company here this week. At the same time his "Speckled Band" was enjoying a hugely successful revival at the St. James Theatre. Simultaneously reports from Constantinople said the Turks were accusing the British Goverment of sending its famous detective to the Turkish capital, where he is well known in the films, just in time to discover a plot against a score of high British officers there.

Sir Conan said many persons had strange reasons for his use of the name "Sherlock Holmes," but the real reason was that he wanted to get away from Dickens's custom of calling every detective "Sharpe," or a similar name.

"Holmes was homely," he said, "and as for Sherlock—well, years ago I made thirty runs against a bowler by the name of Sherlock, and I always had a kindly feeling for that name.

Sir Conan also gave to William Gillette all the credit for the dramatization of "Sherlock Holmes." He revealed that Mr. Gillette, while touring America in the part of Sherlock Holmes, cabled to him:

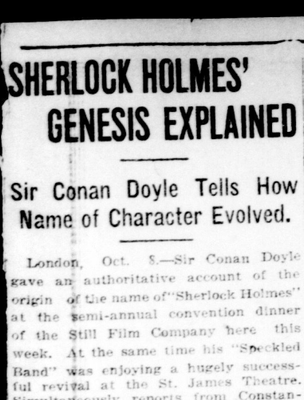

"May I marry Sherlock Holmes?"

Sir Conan replied:

"Marry him or murder him. Do anything you like."

Gas, Indigestion, Stomach Misery —"Diapepsin"

"Pape's Diapepsin" "really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous—and the joy is its harmlessness. A large sixty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin is worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the most efficient antacid and stomach regulator in the world.

CANADA, SOVIET TO BE FRIENDLY

Col. Mackie in Russian Trip Fostered Amity Between Reds and Dominion.

RIGA, Oct. 7. — Close relations between Russia and Canada are expected as the result of a visit just ended to the former country by Col. H. J. Mackie, a member of the Canadian Parliament for the North Renfrew district. Col. Mackie, who has just arrived at Riga en route to Canada, expects to sail on the Berengaria from Southampton on Saturday. He made a four-weeks' trip through Soviet Russia.

Upon his arrival in Canada he will report to the premier immediately on his observations and recommendations. Among his definite accomplishments are arrangements for the Soviet to purchase Canadian flour and seed grain, which is to be paid for in gold, and the sending of a group of Russian experts to Canada to investigate scientific farming, the wheat industry, soil analysis and lumbering.

Col. Mackie's trip was semi-official, it being consequent to Canada's decision to join England in a trade agreement with Russia, save in such clauses as relate to Afghanistan and Persia. He is optimistic as to the future of Russia and is enthusiastic concerning the sincerity of Messrs. Tchitcherin, Krassin and Litvinoff.

Col. Mackie visited the famine district of Kazan. In telling of his impressions, he said:

"It is impossible to picture conditions. The dead and those about to die are everywhere. Conditions will be worse in a few weeks, when winter sets in.

AGED CHOPIN PUPIL IN PITIABLE STATE

Once Famous Man Now Eking Out Miserable Existence.

Paris, Oct. 8.—In a shabby attic room six floors above the famous Rue de Dragon, once the center of clandestine pleasure of the noble and royalty of all Europe, the only surviving pupil of Chopin today is eking out a pitiable existence with one student and a borrowed piano. Once well known for the brilliance of his concerts, Charles Peru today at 91 has been forgotten by all save a few musical writers and the management of a piano company, who have agreed to leave the cheap instrument, which they rented to him years ago, with him as long as he lives.

Friends have tried to assist him, but the old man's pride is still strong, and he prefers his humble abode with his grandson to the charity which could be his for the asking. M. Peru's story throws a new light on the character of Chopin.

"A pale, generous, distinguished man, always thinking of his health—that is the Chopin I knew when he took me as a pupil 75 years ago," said M. Peru. "He lived miserably, and was absolutely incapable of keeping for a single day the money he had earned, but writers always spoke of him as elegantly gloved and carrying a cane. Hour after hour he would plan to get up, and, finally, prespiring and trembling, his visage worn, he would do so, only to collapse on the divan, with his eyes closed and his temples beating fiercely. He never changed to the day of his death, for he spoke unceasingly during his last hours, saying that he would soon recover and resume giving lessons to his favorite pupils."

CITY NEWS in BRIEF

ASKIN STREET MISSION CIRCLE.

—The Senior Mission Circle of Askin Street Church had a most successful crusade meeting in the schoolroom. There was a large attendance, and an offering at the door of over $25. The speaker of the evening was Miss Bertha Hodge, who interested her hearers with her stories of life among the very poor of China, to which mission field she returns this fall. The musical program was provided by pupils of Miss Belle Brown, who, with their teacher, received a warm welcome. Their solos were without exception well rendered and most suitable for the occasion. The contributing artists were: Misses Elsie Arthur, Grace Crouse, Muriel Atkinson, Gladys Gray and Eva Metcalfe. The program concluded with a fine missionary pageant, "Where the Need Is Greatest," repeated by request by the following members of the Junior Circle: Misses Verna Dobbyn, Marie Talbot, Helen Baker, Gertrude Wilson and Master Douglas Arbuckle. After the program a dainty lunch was served in the dining-room. Much credit is due the refreshment committee in charge of Mrs. Kilbourne, and to the decorating committee with Miss Gregory as convener, for the beautiful decorations and fine service.

GERMANY'S BIG GUNS DISAPPEAR

Search For "Big Rerthas" May Be Made by Allies.

Paris, Oct. 8.—The most mysterious problem growing out of the war has not yet been solved. What has become of the "Big Bertha" guns with which the Germans shelled Paris and which they intended to develop so as to send high explosives across the channel? Only one gun was found intact and a second partly dismantled, but Allied control officials have been informed that at least a dozen guns had been completed when the armistice stopped operations.

All demands for the details of their destruction, however, are being met with shrugs and stares af astonishment and the suggestion that they were probably broken up for scrap with other material—which the Allies know is untrue.

As tests are known to have been carried out on the sandy shores of the North Sea, the control commission is now considering sending a group of plain clothes investigators to patrol the long range sand dunes with the idea of ascertaining if the Germans have merely buried their long range weapons with their secret appliances until a good opportunity arises to use them effectively against their traditional enemy.

Quebec Has Deserted Liberals Four Times

OTTAWA, Oct. 8.—(By Canadian Press.)—In past years the present Liberal stronghold of Quebec gave Conservative majorities, and four times in its political history has discarded Liberalism for the beliefs of the opposite party.

Commencing in 1867, Quebec returned 45 Conservatives as against 20 Liberals, but from then on, and with only one lapse, continued to elect more and more Liberals, until at the present time any hope of a Conservative majority in the ancient province is regarded as entirely mythical. In the general elections of 1872, the second held in Canada, Quebec returned 38 Conservatives and 27 Liberals, but in 1878, the fourth general elections, dropped back to figures of 1867.

The fourth and last Conservative majority in Quebec was in 1882, when the Government of the day succeeded in electing 48 candidates, as against 17 Liberals. From then on the Liberals continued to produce majorities in Quebec, until the climax of 1917, when the Unionist Government returned three members while the Liberals rolled up 62.

Quebec Was Wayward.

While Quebec was wayward to the extent of four tours of duty under the Conservative banner, Ontario joined the Liberal ranks on only two occasions. First in 1872 Ontario rolled up a Liberal group of 59, compared with 38 Conservative representatives, and for the second and last time in 1874, when the returns showed 64 Liberals and 24 Conservatives.

Both parties have come within one vote of splitting both provinces, but on only one occasion in each. In 1874 the Conservatives took 32 seats out of Quebec, with the Liberals running one better, with 33 seats. When the Liberals secured power in 1896 the Conservatives held Ontario with 44 seats; 43 seats went to the Liberals, while the Independents captured five.

The officials returns of the general elections since 1867 show straight party fights until 1896, when in addition to the five Independents elected in Ontario one was elected in Manitoba and one in the Northwest Territories. Each succeeding election since that date has brought a few Independents into the House of Commons, but the number at no time exceeded eight until recent years, when crossing the floor to sit in "No Man's Land" became one of the features of parliamentary life. The eight peak was reached in 1900, but fell to two in 1911, when Ontario and Quebec each contributed one.

TO DISCUSS RELIGIOUS TRAINING IN SCHOOLS

Although often hinted at but never actually attempted, "Religious Training in the Schools" will provide the theme for a discussion at the annual convention of London teachers at the Normal School next week.

Edward Reid, superintendent of the First Presbyterian Sunday school, and a member of the local Religious Educational Council, will address the teachers on the importance of such an undertaking. As a representative of the council the speaker will endeavor to enlist the aid of the city teachers in an effort to have religious training become a part of the school curriculum.

It is acknowledged that some well-defined opinions on this subject are held by the teachers, and a warm debate is practically assured. Whether a resolution favorable to religious training will pass the convention is problematical.

Finn and Miss Welsh of the department of agriculture.

The school parade was a pleasing feature. School section 15 captured first, and No. 18 second place. It is expected that next year this fair will be a good rival to the township fair, every section taking great interest in its success.

WHOLESALE REDUCTION IN ASSESSMENT REFUSED

The court of revision is about through for the year. There are a couple of cases to be reported on by the department before the final wind-up.

There are going to be many disappointed folk, as the court has been quite firm in refusing to grant wholesale reductions in assessment, and for the most part the figures of the assessment officers have been confirmed.

Interest in the appeals centered in cases where huge sums were involved. These consisted of a number of the city's largest warehouses. In but one case was the appeal successful, the Howden Hardware getting a small cut of $2,500. The Garvey and Pocock warehouse appeals fell by the wayside.

What reductions were granted were for the most part on buildings, and in the case of business houses this will bring a consequent cut in the business assessment, as the latter is based on the value or assessment of the building.

The number of appeals heard this year by the court of revision total about the highest in the history of the city.

LIBERAL LEADER TELLS OF CANADA'S NEEDS

Sydney, N. S., Oct. 8.—By Canadian Press Staff Correspondent.—"If there is a country in the universe to which a protective tariff is as essential as the breath of life that country is Canada." These were the words of Right Hon. Arthur Meighen addressed to a meeting of approximately 2,000 persons gathered in the curling rink here tonight to hear Premier Meighen and his colleagues discuss the questions of the day.

"Only by an affirmative voice from this country, clear, ringing and decisive, that we intend to follow the protective policy, can we get back to normal employment conditions," the premier insisted. "Industries of Canada must be given a chance to compete with those of the United States."

GROUP OF OILS LEAD WALL STREET SALES

Recovery Is Experienced in Many Features.

New York, Oct. 8.—An expansion of the investment situation and the dull and professional tone of stocks were the divergent features of the week in the security market. Buying of Liberty bonds and Victory notes again assumed large volume at the year's record prices. This was supplemented by the ready sale of new private offerings, including loans to South America and Australia.

Trading in stocks was more professional than at any period since the reaction from September's advance. Pressure focused in several of the industrial issues, notably those whose dividend and general financial prospects are more or less uncertain.

There was a good but only moderate inquiry for rails, especially junior issues of the western and southern sections of the country. Prominent among these was New Orleans, Texas and Mexico, which rose almost ten points over last week's final price.

Domestic oils as a group led the market, their irregular advances, mainly under guidance of professional pools being ascribed to an increased demand for crude products, accompanied by an upward revision of prices.

The money market tended towards further east, due in part to an extension of lower discounts by federal reserve banks. Loans running into the coming year were made at slight concessions of high-class commercial paper, but call money ranged from 4½ down to 5½ per cent.

DANGER IS SEEN IN WET VICTORY

Vancouver Fears Restoration of Rum Bring Undesirables.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 7—This city stands as a community afraid of a peril whose magnitude it cannot comprehend.

In accordance with popular vote, the Province of British Columbia is being placed on the wet list as one of the two provinces in Canada where liquor may be sold legally for beverage purposes. Vancouver, directly across the line from Seattle, Wash., and, with its more than 200,00 people, the largest city in the province, is on the brink of something that causes forebodings in home, business establishment and club. Will the wet regime make for the incoming of a horde of undesirables from the United States and the middle western Canadian provines? Or, on the other hand, will the gouty rich flock here in such droves that business will be given a stimulus it has never known before. These are the questions Vancouver is asking.

Plain Beer Attracted Hordes.

Even under prohibition the sale of full-strength beer which was permitted here attracted large crowds of people from south of the boundary. On one Sunday this spring, when the sale hard stuff was still in the future, more than 2,000 tourist automobiles, filled with visitors, cleared across the line from Washington State.

In addition, a heavy traffic was reported on the owl trains and night boats from Seattle. It was one of the Sundays when more than the usual crowd came to taste of the pleasures of British Columbia scenery and beer.

But hooch, real hooch, what will that do to Vancouver?

This city has a four million dollar hotel, the Hotel Vancouver, which is pervaded by London-Hong Kong-Paris-Naples and New York atmosphere. Big game hunters from the Congo rub shoulders with gentlemen who have come from visits to De Valera, or American millionaires, to arrange for the shipment of supplies to the Sinn Fein forces in Ireland.

You can meet United States senators from the Southern States and communists from the shores of England in Vancouver.

The fact that Vancouver is the jumping-off place for the Orient brings a constant galaxy of wealth and fashion to this city.

Vancouver's peril, or fortune, which ever it may be, provides the principal subject of conversation, as the government liquor control board proceeds with the opening of its growing chain of liquor shops.

Liquor Permits Cost $5.

To buy liquor you must have a permit or license. A resident can buy a permit good for one year for $5. A non-resident can buy a permit for the same sum, but it is only good for two weeks. A man who wants a bottle badly, but who is without the necessary $5 for a permit, may buy an individual permit, good for only one purchase, by paying 50 cents.

Those who abhor liquor, but appreciate the merits of stout, ale and beer, can buy a special malt permit for $2, which entitles them to purchase these goods for one year.

The government is filling its shelves as rapidly as possible. Buyers have been sent to scour the markets of Europe, and new brands and vintages are daily making their appearance. A good quality of Scotch whiskey sells for $4 to $4.50, with other goods sold at a proportionate rate.

When the complete stocks are on hand there will be vermuth, rare wines from select vineyards in France and Spain, liqueurs such as epicures love, brandies that have not seen the light of day for fifty years, and the myriad of drinks that a good host can concoct from such materials.

But British Columbia citizens are not altogether satisfied with the prices. Four dollars and fifty cents is too much to charge for good Scotch, they claim, and as a result the private liquor importing houses are doing a good trade by cutting the government prices slightly.

British Columbia's desirability to those who hold that access to liquor and liberty go hand in hand is strengthened as the result of the recent action of the Prairie Provinces and Ontario in striking out by referendum the right to import liquors.

URGED TO END BOOING IN LONDON'S THEATRES

Actors Hear of Organized Rowdyism In Galleries.

London, Oct. 8.—As a result of repeated instances here of the booing of new plays, Andre Charlot urges the Actors' Association to restrict the first night galleries to persons holding tickets bearing the imprimatur of the Gallery First Nighters' Club. He thinks the disturbances are directly attributable to organized opposition, spite and rowdyism.

The First Nighters' Club does not approve of this suggestion, while other famous stage "stars," including Lady Tree, are against any restrictions being placed on the galleries.

But other actors insist that there is a strong society of booers here, that it is well organized and that its members do not work for love. They assert that a certain lift boy in a London hotel is the leader of this society. It was insinuated that these men are being hired to wreck productions through selfish spite.

On perhaps half a dozen occasions lately noises in the galleries has seriously interrupted a new play and virtually destroyed its dramatic effect.

CLEMENCEAU FOUND REST WITH DEAF HOST

Enjoyed Silence in Mediaeval Corsican Castle.

PARIS, Oct. 6. — Former Premier Clemenceau took his recent "silence cure" in a mediaeval castle 1,500 feet above the blue waters of the Mediterranean at Olivese, on the island of Corsica. Nicholas Pietri, the owner of the castle, a lifelong friend and newspaper associate of Clemenceau, is as deaf as the proverbial post.

"I have traveled a lot since the armistic," the former premier is reported to have said, "but in India, Egypt, the Soudan, everywhere I have been, I have had to talk too much. Now what I want is silence. I am certain to get that with Pietri. He is so deaf I won't be tempted to volunteer any small talk to him, and he is tactful in not asking questions, realizing the effort required for me to answer him is too much for my old lungs."

Despite Clemenceau's plea of weakness and his age—81 years—he looks as sturdy as the oaks surrounding the castle. There are those who insist the Tiger intends to re-enter the political arena, and that in the peace and quietness of the little island which gave birth ot Napoleon he has been preparing for a re-entry into public life that may be almost as startling as that of the little Corporal.

FOUND NICKELS "USELESS" AND SAVED 6,505 OF THEM

London, Oct. 3.—Tom Largely carried a peck measure when he went to the bank to make a deposit. The measure contained 6,505 buffalo nickels.

Largely started saving jitneys two years ago when he discovered that there was nothing on the market that could be purchased with a nickel.

PARIS WILL EXPEND MILLIONS ON CITY

Sites of Old Fortifications To Become Playgrounds.

Paris, Oct. 8. — Paris intends to spend 125,000,000 francs to beautify and modernize its parks and streets before the first of next January. But this is only the beginning, as plans already approved call for the expenditure of more than 10,000,000,000 francs of the last loan of 18,000,000,000 for various improvements. Naturally each arrondissement is fighting for the lion's share of the improvement funds, as once the work is started it will provide an easy solution for the city's unemployment problem, and it is even likely that the work will attract thousands from the smaller towns where the industrial crisis is menacing ordinary prosperity.

Hospital Improvements.

One of the biggest of these is the remodeling of the majority of the public hospitals, many of which are housed in buildings two centuries old, with the floors rotting away and often verminous, while little space is devoted to laboratories and operating rooms, such as are found in any Canadian city.

Experts already are drawing up plans for hospital changes as well as planning extensive anti-consumption and anti-venereal campaigns covering every quarter of the capital. Schools, markets and streets also will not be overlooked. In the schools the council intends to install immediately a modern system of inspection of the health of the pupils, while every school is to be supplied with shower baths and modern watered sewer systems.

Prefect Leullier personally is visiting sections of the city which have been allowed to become disgraceful, as far as sanitary measures are concerned, and has commenced his campaign for reviving the century old ordinance against throwing papers, fruit peelings and other objectionable refuse into the streets, with the probability that hundreds of offenders will face punishment for tossing useless autobus receipts on the boulevards.

Extension of City Limits.

In the public markets the council intends to increase immediately the use of refrigeration to prevent the waste of hundreds of tons of meats and vegetables weekly owing to the impossibility of keeping them fresh under existing conditions.

Proposals which were read at a recent session of the council's progress committee include the eventual extension of Paris far beyond the present boundaries, as the impossibility of obtaining houses and apartments is driving thousands to neighboring suburbs such as Montrouge, Fontenay, Sceaux, Nogent and St. Mande.

In order to develop this tendency it is likely that a part of the 10,000,000,000 francs will be set aside to subsidize the construction of homes, influential senators and deputies having expressed their willingness to obtain co-operation from the Government to the extent of any sum the Paris council is willing to contribute. The construction of homes in neighboring suburbs is considered a profitable investment, as once the territory now separating the suburbs from Paris is built up the limits of the city will be advanced in all directions so as to produce a metropolis estimated to have a population of 5,000,000, which will result in an increase in tax receipts by the city.

BIRD WAS PROBABLE CAUSE OF ACCIDENT

Sadi Lecointe's Plane May Have Struck a Partridge.

Paris, Oct. 7.—Was Sadi Lecointe's smash during the Deutsche Dela Murthe Cup race Saturday caused by an unlucky bird which got in the way of his machine, traveling at a speed of about 300 kilometers an hour? The question is being asked seriously in aviation circles here. This theory has been suggested by the fact that the wings of the winner's aeroplane were found after the race to be covered with blood splashes, and the remains of small birds which Kirsch struck while flying. It is thought possible that Lecointe's propeller may have hit a larger bird.

He was flying very low, and game was plentiful all over the course. The propeller, turning at the rate of 1,900 revolutions per minute, striking, say a partridge, while turning at that speed would be quite sufficient to cause it to splinter to bits.

Lecointe is reported to be doing well. An X-ray examination shows no fractures, so he has escaped with a sprained wrist, ankle and a severe shock.

Kirsch, interviewed after the race, said he was feeling splendid, and when asked whether he did not get cold feet after Lecointe's accident, replied, "No, they were burning." As a matter of fact, they were blistered by the intense heat of the motor.

Woodland Mausoleum

— The Beautiful —

THE Mausoleum in Woodland Cemetery is now completed in every detail, and you are invited to visit and inspect its marvelous beauty—granite exterior, marble walls and pillars, wonderful colored windows. No place in Ontario surpasses this palace for laying away the dead—an everlasting resting-place, free from all the horrors of the ground, which is abhorrent to many.

Everyone who recognizes his duty prepares for the inevitable while in health. People are more and more realizing this fact, instead of leaving to strangers or friends the selection of their resting-place.

It is well to realize that there is only a few months in the year when you can visit the resting-place of loved ones laid away in the cemetery, but you can visit the Mausoleum in any weather.

Honor your dead by providing a resting-place, which the ravages of time cannot destroy, where the beloved human form may be protected and maintained indefinitely.

The Mausoleum provides a permanent family record to which future generations can point with pride.

We only have a limited number of Crypts or Compartments left in the Mausoleum, and those who purchase first naturally get choice of location. Price compares favorably with ground burial.

DECLARES EUROPE IS GRADUALLY STRANGLED BY VICIOUS CIRCLE

GIBBS CLAIMS U. S. CONFERENCE WORLD'S HOPE

Depreciation of German Mark Prohibits Buying From France and Britain.

LLOYD GEORGE'S PROBLEM

Racking His Brain To Find Solution For Unemployment Unrest.

BY SIR PHILLIP GIBBS.

[Special Cable to The Advertiser.]

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The coming winter will be, in my humble judgment, the most anxious time Europe has had since the armistice.

I am no prophet of woe and do not indulge in scare-mongering, but it is necessary to face realities though that has not been the habit of European statesmen, and it is impossible to disguise any longer the financially and industrially we are all going from bad to worse.

I can see no sign whatever of trade recovery, but, on the contrary, there is every prospect of increased distress.

What is the reason for this? Apart from all other factors in the world-wide chain of cause and effect, one dominating reason is the collapse of the German mark. Germany, whether we like it or not, and we don't, is the industrial center of the European system. If she goes rotten her disease affects every country in Europe instantly, and to be plain and blunt, she is going bad like Austria and like Poland in fever of false finance.

When I was in Germany recently I was amazed and impressed by the intense energy of the German people and their tremendous and successful efforts to recapture world trade, but my inquiries showed also that all this industrial output was based on cheap labor, cheap living, undercutting prices in all markets and a drastic restriction of all imports to enable them to pay off their enormous indemnities.

A Vicious Circle.

It was clear that if they increased their exports to the amount required to meet the reparations payments, other countries like Great Britain would be shut out from their old markets. It was also clear that payment of the indemnities in gold values would inevitably depreciate the value of the paper mark, thereby increasing Germany's financial distress while enabling her to undercut prices still more in foreign countries.

Both of these things have happened, and among other countries Great Britain is hard hit directly and indirectly. Germany, one of our biggest customers, no longer buys from us at 470 marks to the pound. At the same time she is underselling us everywhere.

But Poland cannot buy from Germany, and still less from us, with her mark at 21,000 to the pound.

So the vicious circle goes on, and each swing of it lowers the purchasing power of all nations and reduces the vitality of industrial life.

Europe is desperately in need of manufactured articles. In Germany men and women want underclothing made in England or the United States, but cannot afford to buy it. Poland shivers in rags. A great part of Russia starves to death in next to nakedness. Many countries cannot move goods for lack of rolling stock which the United States, Germany and Great Britain could easily provide, but paper money will not pay for rails.

The Shadow of Fear.

That is, among other things, Premier Lloyd George's trouble in facing the unemployed. His fertile brain is racking itself to formulate rosy plans for relief. Experts have provided him during the past week with many facts, figures, schemes and proposals. In his mind is the thought of these coming winter months and in his ears ring those words spoken to him by the London mayors:

"We are afraid."

They are afraid of the masses of men demanding, not softly, work and wages. They are afraid of forewarnings that many workshops are shutting up, and that taxation to provide for unemployment cannot be increased without dealing a deadly blow to industry itself. Wages are being cut ruthlessly in all grades, which does not sweeten the temper of the men.

Meanwhile it is likely that there will be a new crisis in the coal mines, because there must be immense reductions in the cost of output if British coal is to find a foreign market. It would be horrible and dangerous if there were another cessation of work by men already beaten into surrender, but still sullen.

Bad as all this is, it may have one hopeful result. European statesmen are beginning to realize that a new political philosophy is necessary if they are to save their countries from financial downfall, and that Central Europe must be rescued from ruin for the sake of all other peoples. This conviction has not been translated into immediate action, but there is a new spirit of conciliation at work here and there.

Signs of Hope.

France, for instance, is coming to see that a bankrupt Germany will not be to her advantage and for that reason has withdrawn her economic barriers between the Rhineland and the rest of Germany. France also has agreed to the League of Nations decision, not at first announced, but known privately, on the division of Upper Silesia, which gives the main industrial area to Germany and the agricultural districts to Poland, who under French influence will also accept this repudiation of her ambitious claims.

Even the Irish question is now very hopeful. The settlement, thank heaven, has been influenced by economic conditions which will form a considerable part of the discussion in the forthcoming conference. Both Ireland and England understand that a new conflict would be ruinous to both peoples, and that financial and commercial co-operation is necessary to cure the creeping paralysis of unemployment and decaying industry.

I have good information that Ulster leaders, apart from their people, are becoming conciliatory under the pressure of financial distress. These considerations are beginning to have a wonderfully educative effect upon politicians who seemed incapable of learning the elementary lessons of world finance as well as upon journalists who guide the policy of their papers.

Within the last week or so this new attitude of mind has been reflected in the awakening enthusiasm for the possibilities of the Washington conference for the limitation of armament.

It is idle to disguise the fact that for some time this conference excited only mild interest, but now, owing to the menace of increasing distress in Europe, it comes with a blinding light to many minds that here is the real chance for relieving all countries of immense burdens of taxation due to the cost of naval and military armament, and of arranging a pact of peace between the great powers to eliminate the worst forebodings of future conflict.

Cynics, of course, see nothing but self-interest in the attitude of European powers to the Washington proposals, especially in Great Britain's willingness to reduce her naval strength the same relative strength in sea in a way which would leave her with power.

France, not much interested in sea power, will, they say, resist the limitation of land armaments unless America and Great Britain guarantee military aid in case of German aggression or Russian attacks on Poland.

Business and Peace.

That is true, but it is also common sense as long as the present prospects of future conflict prevail. The Washington conference's big chance is to reduce the probable causes of future war and so make preparations for war futile.

With good-will and courage on all sides, that can be done to a large extent by an economic policy supported by the United States, Great Britain and France, with an extension of credits to Central Europe, depending on the peaceful development of industry. For when all is said and done, peace depends on economics and the security of trade.

There can be no lasting peace between nations driven by natural laws to seek food, land and raw materials across other people's frontiers. In my opinion, all questions relating to land armaments must be approached by way of Russia, Poland and Germany. If their future life were insured by workers' credits which would make their prosperity depend on peace, France and Poland would be relieved of future menace and would have no further excuse for standing armies.

But Russian good-will and political reform may only be brought about by a quick rescue of her starving millions, and I echo Nansen's cry of rebuke to world government who will not vote as much money as would build one battleship to save millions of persons from death.

Not in that way shall we bring Russia back to the brotherhood of nations or demobilize her red army.

England's part in the Washington conference will be shaped by the quality of her chief representative. That is still a secret, but in my belief Winston Churchill may be chosen in the absence of Lloyd George.

If that happens, Washington will have a man who, in spite of many failures and mistakes, and utter recklessness of action, and the spirit of a gambler for imperial stakes, has an immense imagination and a quick understanding of world facts.

After many adventures in reaction, his recent speeches show that he sees reality and light, and is ready to cut his losses and start on new and courageous lines.

Meanwhile it is necessary to let the plain people in Great Britain understand the vast importance to them of the Washington conference. In my small way as a journalist I am doing my best, and it is significant of awakening interest that one small pamphlet issued by the peace council has sold in a few days to the extent of 90,000 copies.

The man in the street is beginning to look forward to the Washington conference as his chance to be relieved from taxation and war.

Liver Pains

Pains under the shoulder tell of liver derangements. Other indications are sallow complexion, indigestion, constipation, biliousness and bilious headaches.

The quickest way to arouse the liver to healthful action is by use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Continued use will insure lasting relief, correct the whole digestive system and purify the blood.

Mrs. Wm. Barten, Hanover, Ont., writes:

"For some time I suffered from liver trouble. There was a hard, bearing-down feeling in my back which I could not get rid of. Some one advised me to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I did so, and found them excellent. The dragging feeling in my back disappeared and I felt much benefitted generally. I have great confidence in Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and always keep them on hand for general use."

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS MAY BE OVERCOME

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head and ear noises or are growing hard of hearing, go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.—Advt.

MASTON SENTENCED TO FIVE YEARS IN JAIL

Told Court There Is a Liquor-Stealing Ring Operating.

SIMCOE, Oct. 7.—On a charge of breaking and entering and the theft of $900 worth of liquor from the home of P. J. Brook on April 25, Fred Maston of Brantford was sentenced to five years in Kingston Penitentiary this afternoon by County Judge A. T. Bales. Steve Farrell, Brantford, who was jointly charged, was found not guilty after Maston, in the box, swore that Farrell was not present the night of the theft. Maston is now serving a three-year term in Kingston for attempting to enter a house in St. Catharines three months ago. Today's sentence will run concurrently with the Lincoln County court sentence. Masten's young bride, whom he married in St. Catharines while waiting to be transported to Kingston, was seen to sway against the prisoners' box when sentence was passed.

Concerned Over His Wife.

Maston took the sentence quietly, and seemed more concerned over his wife's condition than the extra two years which were added to his three-year stretch. Maston appeared in court in prison garb.

Evidence showed that four men raided the Brook cellar on April 25, prying open a steel door of the liquor vault in the cellar with a crowbar and knocking off the combination from the inside. The car was trailed by Mr. Brook and Constable Barber in a circuitous direction to a blind Indian trail near Mount Vernon station.

S. F. Heyd, K.C., Toronto, counsel for Farrell, informed the court that he anticipated further court action as a result of Maston's confessions of a liquor ring. The court ruled that the identity of the other two men concerned should not be revealed unless charges are preferred by the crown.

Ring of Liquor Thieves.

Maston's evidence was to the effect that a ring of liquor thieves is operating in Norfolk, South Brant and South Oxford, and that their former rendezvous was the old Indian trail near Mount Vernon station. The day of the Brook theft, according to Maston's confession, the $900 worth of liquor was transported in Farrell's car to the rendezvous, where it was taken from the cases and put into bags. While Maston and his unknown accomplice were at work another car brought in a carload of liquor which had been cached in a woods near Windham Centre, and later another car came in with a load. The empty cases found in the trail led to the arrest of Maston and Farrell, on the evidence of Meadows, a neighboring farmer. Crown Attorney E. B. Kelley refused to state whether an investigation would be made of Maston's story.

FINDS PARENTS SLAIN IN HOME

MONTREAL, Oct. 7.—Discovered by their daughter with their heads beaten to a pulp, probably by blows from an axe, the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Onofre Batura, an elderly couple residing at 385 Fourteenth avenue, Lachine, were found this afternoon in their home.

The motive of the double murder is given by provincial police as revenge, and a man, Stanilas Tomachuk, aged 40, is being held as a witness for the inquest. Tomachuk stated today that he lived in Toronto and arrived in Lachine this morning, but refuses to make any further statement in connection with the affair.

The woman's body was found in the cellar. Her hands had been tied behind her back and around her neck was a piece of wire with indications that she had been strangled.

ARREST TORONTO MAN FOR ITHACA ROBBERY

TORONTO, Oct. 7.—Wanted in Ithaca, N. Y., on a charge of robbing a bank and theft of $70,000 in cash and bonds, Carl Sharrow, motorman on the Toronto Street Railway, was arrested here and taken to Ithaca by Sheriff Skilling of that town.

Sharrow is charged jointly with his brother, now in Ithaca. He denied the charge and said he would waive extradition proceedings.

HYDRO EXTENSIONS PROCEEDING.

TORONTO, Oct. 7.—Work upon rural extensions of hydro is now actually in progress in the Townships of Nepean and Saltfleet, located in the Counties of Carleton and Wentworth respectively.

At several other points in the province materials are all at hand, and the building of the transmission lines will start at an early date. If the winter proves severe, it probably will check work on the greater part of projected extensions, since hauling of poles will be the only operation which could be economically pursued if the frost was deep in the ground.

Hope Lloyd George May Yet Attend Washington Arms Parley

LONDON, Oc. 7.—A hint that Lloyd George may yet be able to attend the forthcoming conference on the limitation of armaments and Far Eastern questions in Washington, was made in a semi-official statement to the press tonight. It was pointed out that the present position is that the British prime minister has notified the United States Government of his inability to attend, but that this is not necessarily his last word.

It is generally regarded that the United States Government is anxious for him to attend, and it is understood that considerable influence is being brought to bear upon him to induce a reconsideration of his decision.

This pressure was particularly marked during Mr. Lloyd George's stay at Gairlock, and it is understood that he found strong support at today's cabinet meeting from his ministerial colleagues.

It was stated that it is extremely probable that the prime minister will be prevailed on to go to Washington if developments in other directions make it at all possible.

Refusal Holds Still.

At the moment, however, his refusal holds good, and in the meantime the British delegates have not been elected. It is understood they will not be appointed until next week at the earliest.

Lloyd George left this evening for Chequers Court, his country home, and it is expected he will return to London on Sunday. The only information vouchsafed to the public concerning today's cabinet meeting was the appointment of the Government's delegates to the conference with Irish leaders, although it was understood the discussion embraced both the Irish and Washington conferences.

Leave For Chelsea.

The Sinn Fein plenipotentiaries, accompanied by Desmond Fitzgerald and four typists, will leave Dublin tomorrow morning, it was announced here tonight, and they will be given accommodations at Chelsea while attending the conference. It was reported that final informal conversations were held in the Mansion House at Dublin today before Lloyd George asked: "Ar you fishing?" Carli members of the Dail cabinet, and the plenipotentiaries. It is understood the Irish delegates will maintain constant communication with the Dublin headquarters during the conference.

Boys and girls need lots of play says speaker at teachers' convention in Stratford.

PLENTY OF PLAY IS NEED OF ALL KIDDIES

Alex. Donald Tells Oxford County Teachers' Convention.

WOODSTOCK, Oct. 7.—That school children should have play and lots of it was the keynote of an address by Alex. Donald, boys' secretary of the "Y," before the Oxford County School teachers at the concluding session this afternoon. Mr. Donald handed out many useful hints to the teachers on the form the play should take. He emphasized the point that all play should be under strict supervision of the teacher, and named a number of books that would be helpful in illustrating the carrying out of different games and sports.

S. K. Davidson of London, at the morning session, gave one of the best papers of the convention, his subject "Pictorial Perspective" proving to be one of the most interesting and helpful yet heard by the teachers.

The election of teachers resulted in Miss M. B. Topping of Woodstock being elected president; Mr. Smith, Tillsonburg, vice-president; M. Walton, Ingersoll, secretary-treasurer, and the management committee, Inspectors Cole and Patterson and Miss Addie Meggs of Drumbo.

At the conclusion of the regular sessions the local branch of the Men's Federation of Teachers met and elected R A. Thompson of Otterville president; George Berst, Woodstock, vice-president, and George Mather, secretary-treasurer; delegates to O. E. A., Toronto, Miss Topping and R. A. Thompson.

ASK FOR PERMISSION TO BUY BEER AND WINES

Citizens' Liberty League Wants O. T. A. Amended.

TORONTO, Oct. 7.—It is announced by the "Citizens' Liberty League for Moderation" that they have received a total of 186,000 signatures to their petition to the premier of this province, asking that the Ontario temperance act be amended to embrace a system of Government control for the sale of spirituous liquors, and for permission to purchase beer and wines under a system to be devised by the Government, and that a referendum be held on the direct question of Government control. The petition will be kept in circulation month by month until 700,000 signatures have been received.

CHEAP BREAD IN INGERSOLL.

INGERSOLL, Oct. 7.—Local bakers made a cut of one cent per loaf in the price of bread. It is now selling at ten cents and one baker stated that his customers would get the benefit should flour prices take a further slump. His prices, he said, would be governed by the flour market. The cut in price was welcomed especially in view of the fact that a few days ago, through the action of a new dealer, the price of milk dropped from 11 cents to 9 cents per quart.

Pardee, M.P., May Lead Liberal Party To Victory.

STRATFORD, Ont. 7.—Rumors apparently well authenticated continue to reach here to the effect that the leadership of the Liberal party in Ontario will pass shortly from the shoulders of H. H. Dewart, K.C., M.P., who has been the leader since the resignation of Hon. Wesley Rowell in 1917, to the shoulders of Fred F. Pardee, M.P.

It is understood, says reports from Toronto, that Mr. Dewart sent a letter of resignation to the Liberal members who are called together for the purpose. It is understood that he will retain his seat in the House.

RAILROAD EMPLOYEES REFUSE WAGE LIST

Find Many Reasons For Rejection of G. T. R. Offer.

ST. THOMAS, Oct. 7.—The Canadian Brotherhood of Railroad Employees in St. Thomas, chiefly Grand Trunk men, at a recent meeting rejected the proposed agreement relative to the revised wage schedule as proposed by the management of the Grand Trunk Railway.

The revised schedule would dispense with "time" and one-half for "overtime" and the annual vacations always allowed to monthly-paid employees, and the agreement puts all employees on an hourly basis. The schedule, too, would become retroactive to July 16, so that all employees receiving vacations since that date would have to lose the time.

A Beautiful Black Eye.

Herbert Dennis, a lad of 18 years, was charged today with assaulting Special Agent R. D. McGowan of the Grand Trunk, who has been on duty in the city and neighborhood for the past couple of weeks. Herbert had a bad cut on his face and Mr. McGowan, who did not appear, is said to be wearing one beautiful black eye. The hearing was adjourned for a week.

Another Kite-Flyer.

A check for $25 without funds to meet the paper was cashed by a lady assistant at the cafe of ex-Ald. Taylor recently. The payee gave his name as Forrest, but the police are unable to locate him. A young man, presumably the offender, was brought to the police department this morning and given the second degree, but convinced the officers he was not the party.

Wallacetown Fair Postponed.

Because of the incessant rains of today, the historic fair at Wallacetown has been postponed until tomorrow.

The information against William McCallum for non-support and desertion of his wife will be heard on Monday.

West Elgin Teachers.

The West Elgin Teachers' Institute elected officers at its meeting today, as follows: Honorary president, F. J. Voaden, Port Stanley; president, O White, principal of Elmdale School; vice-president, N. Stansell; secretary, Miss J. Lowe; treasurer, Inspector J. H. Taylor; executive committee, Miss T. McKillop, Sister Blanche of the separate school, Miss N. McGuire. Miss M. Ackford, Rodney, spoke on "Art in Ungraded Schools." "Literature With a Class" was the interesting topic of H. G. Martyn, B.A., Stratford Normal School. Miss Adkins, St. Thomas, gave an instructive talk on "The Teachers' Federation."

MUST ISSUE 235 ELECTION WRITS

OTTAWA, Oct. 7.—(By Canadian Press.)—With the announcement of the election date at December 6th, the nomination of Nov. 22, the political whirlpool here is steadying down to the usual campaign gait, with the scene of the most intense activity transferred to the office of Colonel O. M. Biggar, chief electoral officer. The whole staff of this officer is working tonight in order that tomorrow the election writs may be ready for the signature of the secretary of state and the affixing of the great seal of Canada. These writs will be on their way to the returning officers in 130 of the 235 constituencies throughout Canada by tomorrow evening. The five constituencies in which returning officers remain to be appointed, will, it is expected, be placed on the completed list before the first of the week. The constituencies without returning officers are North and South Waterloo in Ontario, Comox and Kootenay West, in British Columbia, and the Yukon.

REMOVE BAN ON ENGLISH ARTISTS

TORONTO, Oct. 7.—At the request of President Weber of the International Musicians' Union, local unions in Canada voted today on the question of permitting musicians from the British Isles to play in Canada. The Toronto union did not vote, but have already sent a communication to Mr. Weber to the effect that no objection would be offered to English musicians playing here, providing they took out regular membership cards.

The question arose in connection with the refusal of Mr. Weber to permit Mr. Cowlrick, director of an English musical revue, to conduct his organization in Canada. This action is said to have been taken because of the fact that about half a dozen applications were received at the same time, and it looked like a move to import musicians into Canada.

HUNT MISSING YOUTHS IN SHIPWRECK MYSTERY

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 7.—A sixteen-foot open boat named the "Vet" believed by the police to be that in which two Halifax youths, Arthur Sprague and J. H. Engle, started from that port on a cruise to Vancouver, B. C., was found half-submerged near Seconet Light, in Nerragansett Bay late today.

The craft contained some old clothing, a water jug and a pair of oars. No word concerning the little craft's occupants has been received here.

ANGLICANS SIFT JUSTICE OF OLD INDIAN TREATIES

Hon. Richard Harcourt Would Extend Educational Facilities To "Braves."

PLAN CHURCH WEEKLY

HAMILTON, Oct. 7.—The general synod of the Anglican Church of Canada resolved itself today into a great missionary body, the House of Bishops meeting with the lower house to deliberate on missionary matters, chief among which was a discussion of the report of the board of missions.

Hon. Richard Harcourt, Welland, in discussing Indian treaties, declared that not even a modicum of justice had been given these people who were so little able to care for themselves.

He argued that the primate look into these old treaties and consult with the premier, with the idea of getting larger grants for educational purposes among the Indians in the west.

He believed that an unanswerable argument could be made out for the extension of grants which would give the Indians wider educational opportunities.

With the authorization by the general synod tonight of the taking over of the Canadian Churchman and its operation under a joint board of directors representative of the present shareholders and of the general boards of the Church of England in Canada, the Anglican Church took the first step towards the establishing of a national church weekly designed to meet the needs of the communion throughout the Dominion. The decision was reached only after a heated four-hour debate and in the face of strong opposition.

Submitted to the joint session of the synod convened as the general board of the Missionary Society of the Church of England the proposal aroused a storm of protest. As the debate continued that section of the synod generally conceded to represent moderate high church opinion swung its support solidly behind the scheme with the result that a decision was reached without division.

BANDITS RAID TRUMBLE HOME

WINDSOR, Oct. 7.—Five masked men, armed with automatic revolvers, made an unsuccessful attempt early this morning to hold up and rob Mrs. Louise Trumble, widow of the late Beverley Trumble, who was shot and killed by Rev. J. O. L. Spracklin.

Bandits broke into the residence, 113 Sunset Avenue, Sandwich, while Mrs. Trumble was absent visiting friends. When she and her escort drove up in an automobile, the thugs were making a search of the house. Unaware of unwelcome visitors, Mrs. Trumble entered the front door and was at once covered with guns.

Noise of the automobile driven by Mrs. Trumble's escort must have frightened the bandits away, for they left without taking any booty, although Mrs. Trumble was preparing to hand over some of her jewelry. They made their getaway in an automobile bearing a Michigan license.

ASKS FOR BLOODHOUNDS TO FIND LOST HUSBAND

KENORA, Ont., Oct. 7.—Dr. Graham Chambers of Toronto is lost in the woods at Atikokan, Ont., according to a telegram received here today by the crown attorney from Mrs. Chambers, his wife. Mrs. Chambers asked if any bloodhounds are available to aid in the search for her husband, but none are available here.

Wallaceburg

WALLACEBURG, Oct. 7.—About 9:30 a.m. Thursday, the home of L. S. Jarvis, manager of the Bank of Montreal, was entered by a young bandit, who demanded Mrs. Jarvis to give him all her money at the point of a revolver. Mrs. Jarvis told the lad that she had not got much in the house, but if he waited she would fetch it. Instead of doing so, however, she quietly slipped out of the front door and phoned for assistance. The lad meanwhile took fright and made his escape across the railroad bridge and was lost sight of. Chief of Police McIntosh was soon on the scene and gave chase and located him in a shack about six miles from town. He arrested him and brought him back to Wallaceburg. The youth gave his name as Garfield Light, aged 22 years, living at Chatham. He came before the police magistrate shortly afterwards, and was remanded to jail for a week.

While Ross Moore was repairing a gas engine at the Dominion Sugar Company's plant the first finger of his right hand was caught in the slide and the bone badly splintered. It was found necessary to amputate the finger at the first joint.

INQUEST ADJOURNED.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 7.—At the inquest tonight into the death of the late Theodore McCann, killed in a railway crossing mishap last Saturday night, an adjournment was necessary. Dr. Secord, who had the case in hand, was unable to appear owing to illness.

DAN M'INTYRE MAY RUN IN EAST ELGIN

Popular Liberal Candidate in Many Big Political Fights.

ST. THOMAS, Oct. 7.—Dan McIntyre, South Yarmouth, may be the choice of the Liberal convention of East Elgin, which is down for Tuesday next at Aylmer. Mr. McIntyre has fought some memorable fights in the riding with the late Conservative member, A. A. "Andy" Brower, and as far back as 1896 was only a dozen votes behind "Andy."

Mr. McIntyre more than "also ran" in the big and unforgotten contests of 1899 and 1911.

He had always a loyal and enthusiastic following.

The St. Thomas Liberal Club was organized for the year tonight, and the following officers were elected: Honorary president, J. E. Nelson; president, John Reynolds; vice-president, W. Hill; treasurer, Ald. C. Walker. The appointment of secretary was left over until the next monthly meeting.

The financial and numerical condition of the club was never so satisfactory. The members will give the loyal support and services to Candidate William Tolmie, and are in first-class shape for the coming contest.

LONDON CANADA

Cleanliness a Protection Against Fire and Disease

London is on the eve of a city-wide "Clean-up" campaign.

By a royal proclamation next week throughout the Province of Ontario has been declared "Fire Prevention Week," and in every city, town and village unstinted efforts will be made to scure the co-operation of the citizens in fire prevention work.

Of a long list of suggestions made by the Fire Prevention League of Ontario, as invaluable aids in combating the fire menace, the first is "Clean Up." In the opinion of that association the only way to fight an evil is to get rid of the cause, and it has been proven by actual statistics that the majority of fires are directly traceable to rubbish heaps and debris.

During the next week every householder in London, every shopkeeper and manufacturer is urged to clear up the rubbish and waste materials, which in so many cases collect during the busy summer months. Every corner and nook, especially those under stairways should be thoroughly cleaned of accumulations before another week has passed.

It is expedient that the work should be done immediately because in another few weeks the winter will have come and the opportunity for a general clean-up will have passed.

It will be found that the work can be much more easily done during a city-wide organized drive, for in that time the garbage department will have special instructions to remove all manner of goods, which in other times the collectors would not move.

Other organizations, too, have lined up behind the movement. The local chamber of commerce has spent considerable money in some very effective publicity, and it has taken upon itself the duties of organizing and financing the campaign.

The fire department will give its assistance in spreading the gospel of cleanliness. The Boys' Work Board has promised its support and like last year will undoubtedly give splendid assistance to those unable to do their own cleaning. The school children also will be urged to assist in the very important work.

And one other thing. In addition to cleaning the debris away with a view to preventing fires, citizens are urged to clean up yards and lawns so that London may better maintain its name as "The City Beautiful," as well as its splendid standard of health.

Protect Your Wife and Children From the Fire Fiend's Menace

Homes Equipped With Hydro-Electric Ranges Are Safe From the Dangers of Overheating, Explosions or Suffocating Fumes

The shrieking of the fire sirens on the speeding trucks that thundered past a London workman meant the death-knell of his wife and three babes he had left, apparently safe, at home fifteen minutes before.

A simmering coal stove, under the sudden forced draft of a driving gale, sent the unguarded fire roaring, ignited the wainscoting, and death stalked hand and hand with the fire fiend.

It happens throughout the land every day; now it is the overheated coal or wood stove; again the explosion of a coal oil or gasoline burner, or suffocation from the leaking gas pipe or deadly open jet.

Guard Your Loved Ones by Installing An Electric Range

No risk of suffocation.
No danger of fire or explosion.
No matches. No flame.

Canadian Elections.

The date for the general election has been announced for December 6. This date has never been chosen before, the nearest approach to it being December 17, 1917. When the speed of compiling election returns today is considered, with presses standing in readiness to turn out extras by the tens of thousands a few hours after the voting has ceased, it comes like a glimpse into the far distant past to recall that in 1867 the elections were held from August 7 to September 20. In 1872 it also took from July 20 to October 12. With these two exceptions, the elections have been one-day affairs, and on the following dates:

1874	January 22
1878	September 17
1882	June 20
1887	February 22
1891	March 5
1896	June 23
1900	November 7
1904	November 3
1908	October 26
1911	September 21
1917	December 17
1921	December 6

In the House of 1867 the Conservatives had [illegible] members, and the Liberals 80. Other contests gave the following results:

1872, Conservatives, 103; Liberals, 97.
1874, Liberals, 133; Conservatives, 73.
1878, Conservatives, 137; Liberals, 69.
1882, Conservatives, 139; Liberals, 71.
1887, Conservatives, 122; Liberals, 93.
1891, Conservatives, 123; Liberals, 92.
1896, Independents, 7.
1900, Conservatives, 128; Liberals, 89.
1900, additional representation and Conservatives, 8.
Independents, 3.
1904, Conservatives, 133; Liberals, 139.
Independents, 3.
1908, Conservatives, 133; Liberals, 130.
Independents, 2.
1911, Government (Unionist), 153; Opposition, 82.

Only two of the most outstanding general elections, carrying with them the most striking results, were those when the Government of Sir John A. Macdonald was driven from power following the disclosures that was thrown on the Pacific Scandal, which passed into Canadian history under the heading of the Pacific Scandal. Of almost equal importance was his return to power, turning an adverse majority of 30 to a favorable one of 66. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's sweep in 1896 was another one of the outstanding elections. He was faced with a House of 123 Conservatives and 92 Liberals, and came back with 117 Liberals and 89 Conservatives.

Of more recent date, and still fresh in the minds of voters, is the contest of 1911, when on the reciprocity election the Liberals were overwhelmingly defeated, to the surprise of Conservatives fully as much as to Liberals.

The House just dissolved was composed as follows, the letters T., G. and O. standing for total representation, Government and Opposition.

	T.	G.	O.

Municipal Politics.

The Strathroy Age sketches the following picture of a session of the Strathroy Town Council: "Black storm clouds gathered and threatened to break during the lengthy discussion; sharp and caustic remarks flew across the table from one to another, but the mayor, after being repeatedly requested and urged to say he would sign the checks due the commission, finally brought about a calm by signifying his intention to do so. Quite a number of interested spectators were present, the majority of them departing after the board had settled down again to solid, sober business."

The Strathroy people who attended that session probably knew in advance that there was going to be some excitement. They suspected some of the members would have something pointed to say, and so they went.

Very good, but once the excitement was over and the council settled down to the transaction of business, the crowd signified their interest in municipal affairs by departing.

It was not interest that brought them to the council meeting—it was curiosity and the love of novel entertainment.

Strathroy is not alone in this respect—not for one minute. Any municipality in the country can furnish a parallel case.

Let some spectacular issue be brought to the front—let it be made more or less certain that brick-heaving is going to be indulged in, and the ratepayers become interested in municipal politics.

But let the council settle down to an intelligent discussion of civic business concerning matters where the good money of the ratepayers is at stake, where the fixing of their streets, the management of their debentures and sinking funds is considered—at once there is a gradual but increasing shuffling of feet, and the procession starts for the nearest and most convenient exit.

The following day, if there is any mention on the street of what took place at council, the emphasis is placed on the excitement or the personalities that took place. There is no mention at all of the honest work of some committee, composed of faithful aldermen or councillors who seek, week in and week out, to do the best possible thing for the ratepayers.

The situation is not new, but it is none the less regrettable. A healthy, sustained interest in municipal politics is as scarce as it is desirable.

A Discovery.

Two hundred and ninety baths have been unearthed in London. No, this does not refer to the Londonium of the ancient Romans, and has no connection with such imposing relics of antiquity as the baths of Caracala or Diocletian. Nor is it a "find" calculated to bring fame and a crop of honorary university degrees to some archaeological globe-trotter. The discovery is merely the result of a recent inspection by the waterworks department of London, Ont., conducted throughout the city.

Those who, on first hearing the news, conjured up visions of the city becoming the Mecca of curio hunters from all parts of the world, will, therefore, have their dreams rudely dispelled by the prosaic circumstances, but, nevertheless, will have a feeling of pride that two hundred and ninety London families have been keeping themselves clean by stealth and blush to find it fame.

Cleanliness, if our copybooks can be believed, is next to godliness, and it must be a source of great consolation to social uplifters of all creeds and colors to find that so much unobtrusive virtue has been, so to speak, hiding its light under a bathtub.

The pity of it is that an edifying discovery of such magnitude should have been made by such a soulless body as the waterworks department. But sordid gain is responsible for much, and it is quite possible that the $1,700 which has been missed through this laudable desire of the hygienic conditions will be forthwith demanded.

Work and Play.

"All work and no play," as some philosopher has observed, "makes Jack a dull boy." But Inspector Patterson of Ingersoll is of the opinion that so far as school life is concerned the play end of the curriculum has the work department entirely beaten. Furthermore, he thinks that at school fairs there is a tendency to consider the judging of a dairy cow as of more importance than the judging of a poem.

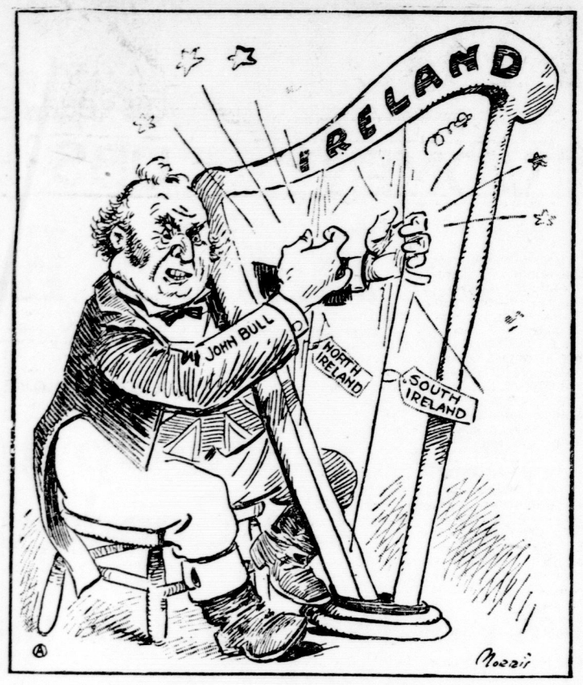

One way out of the difficulty might be to tincture the poetry with precepts on the desirability of preserving the purity of the milk supply and other useful lessons. Something like the following, for example:

Jack and Jill went up the hill
To fetch a pail of water;
The Holstein cow said, "Not just now!"
But the milkman quickly caught her.

This idea might be developed in other directions, and agricultural knowledge judicially combined with a fair amount of intellectual pabulum.

Another remedy which suggests itself in the counteracting of any tendency to give play undue prominence at the expense of the real work of the school might be to introduce a certain amount of recreation in the course of the lessons themselves, a sort of a development of the kindergarten system, calculated to eliminate the humdrum atmosphere that usually pervades a schoolroom. Some compromise of this nature might avert the danger of entirely losing sight of the serious side of school work.

Harmony or Bust.

France's Fear.

Marshal Foch says that consistent with the safety of France the army of the republic cannot be reduced to a strength below 500,000 men. He asserts that under the Versailles treaty 300 non-commissioned officers have been allowed to each German regiment, 200 of whom are serving as privates in every one of these regiments. According to the French general staff, this means that by the absorption of the veterans and the members of the gymnastic corps now in existence, the authorized army of Germany could inside a week be mobilized into a force of 1,000,000 men. Moreover, it is declared that the present German army has three times the number of transport vehicles per unit that it had in 1914.

One cannot conceive how the great minds of the world who drew up and approved of the treaty of Versailles permitted the Germans so many non-commissioned officers, as under the present arrangement they would be able, in the event of mobilization, to muster 200 of these to the division, just as they did at the beginning of the Great War. Surely this subtle move on the part of the Germans was never taken into account, and, if not, the Allies have been surely hoodwinked. Moreover, there is nothing to hinder the Germans from going much further, and training their entire force of 100,000 men to be officers and non-commissioned officers, with not a private in the whole bunch. In this way, a much larger force than 1,000,000 could be handled with efficiency in a very short time.

France has not forgotten the surprises and humiliations of 1870, and the cataclysm of 1914 is still fresh in her vision like a hideous nightmare. Is it any wonder that she is reluctant to beat her swords into plowshares until the teeth have been drawn from the war dragon across her frontier? It is such matters as these that Foch will submit to the Washington conference.

LITTLE 'TISERS

Mr. Meighen will be premier of Canada—until December 6.

If a man is poor he is considered as being shiftless and no good—if he gets rich he is branded as a grafter.

There's the deuce to pay around the house when the season for making dill pickles runs into the spell of fall housecleaning.

Political talk is becoming more pointe in both North and South Oxford. In the South the U.F.O. have no candidate in the field yet, and in the North the Liberals have not named their man. There has been some talk of a conference between these parties, but it seems rather unlikely that such will be the case. The Liberals in the North riding have several men in mind, and a strong candidate will no doubt be placed in the field at a convention which will be held shortly.

The Montreal Gazette, referring to the nomination of E. W. Beatty, president of the C. P. R., to the position of chancellor of McGill, says: "Mr. Beatty is an alumnus of Queen's. To that university he gave his first and ardent love, and in due course he was appointed, and still is, chancellor of that institution." To which the Toronto Globe replies that Mr. Beatty is a graduate of Toronto, and not of Queen's, which causes us to ask point blank: "Honest, now, Mr. Beatty, where did you go to school?"

The Guelph Herald fails to see where there can be any connection between the Farmer and Labor party, and states its belief as follows: "It is a matter for surprise that the Independent Labor party or any unit representing the workingmen, can be found allying itself, or claiming to ally itself, with such a movement as that to which the Farmers' party has committed itself. Their interests are, in so far as the chief issue of the election is concerned, diametrically opposite, and by no manner of devious twisting or turning can they be made to run parallel. The dividing line is the eight-hour question, upon which the agricultural community is totally at variance for good reasons."

NOAH'S POETRY

On Bein' the Boss.

In years when things was movin' fast and cash was stalkin' round, when clinkin' dimes and nickles was an ordinary sound—I used to think them there days before we felt a pinch, that bein' the boss around the place was one oustandin' cinch.

Why say we never worried much things seemed to hump along, with everything a-breakin' right and nothing ever going wrong.

His golf friends came in after lunch to coax him from the scene, to go and whack the little pill and clodhop on the green. He gave his orders right and left, by heck, it was a cinch, this job of bossin' on the works before we felt the pinch.

And I looked forward to the day when they would pussyfoot to me, and say "young man, this job of boss is henceforth handed unto thee."

Ah, then I would sit down in ease, a rift of wisdom on my brow, I'd keep an auto and a farm, a bacon hog, likewise a cow. My feet I'd plant upon the desk, my wealth would prosper inch by inch—oh bossin' the whole shootin'-match would be to me a pleasant cinch.

But things ain't so fresh just now as they was 'bout three months ago. I'm not so certain of the fun of bein' the boss around the show.

The boss ain't quittin' early now, he's sittin' tight around the place, they're stickin' grey hairs in his head and plantin' wrinkles on his face. There's papers piled upon the desk, enough to fill a good-sized cart, and he's figurin' this here thing and that, and squintin' hard upon a chart. He's sittin' there long after dark, and says we ain't a-goin' to bust, but he's puttin' on the pressure there and changin' off from may to must.

I used to think that bossin' job was one grand, easy, fat affair, but I ain't a-hankerin' for them now, to lead me forward to his chair.

—NOAH.

Read Your Character

[By Digby Phillips.]

5.—GREY AND BLUE EYES.

IN THE column which is headed by "Letters to the Editor," or some similar title, there appear from time to time controversies as to the constancy or loyalty of persons with blue or brown eyes in affairs of the heart.

The contestants in the literary arena are hitting a bit closer to the truth than many people would believe. Blue eyes and brown eyes do tell their stories about the little traits or tendencies of character. But it is more the story of temperament than of constancy in love.

The grey and the blue eyes are the heritages of the northern branches of the Caucasian race. They are the development of lands in which man has had to combat with the forces of Nature for his life. In short, they are the heritage of races in which action and aggressiveness have been the fitnesses to survive. The grey and blue eye indicate these things.

As we read them today, the blue eye and the grey eye are indicative of action, of energy, of impatience, and a certain sort of fiery combativeness. You'll find that, other things being equal, you can anger the blue-eyed person quite easily; but to balance this, you'll be able to make your peace with him, or her, more readily.

As a rule, too, they are less likely to become ultra-conservative in their opinions, their manners and their habits of thought.

If you're hunting for somebody to "start something," hunt around for blue or grey eyes, and the lighter the eyes the more likely you are to have achieved success in your search. Light eyes indicate, among other things, the pioneer spirit, the constant desire for new fields to conquer.

Tomorrow—The Broad Nose.

THE HEREDITY HANDICAP.

[London Express.]

The problem of heredity continues to occupy the scientists. Why are a parent's characteristics, like truth or a long nose, or a distaste for Mendelssohn's music, reproduced in children? Galton thinks that each parent on the average contributes one-quarter, each grandparent one-sixteenth, and each ancestor some formidable algebraic fraction to a child's characteristics; but even this theory is applicable only to the mass, not to the individual. Today the scientist, wrapping himself in a fog of "ifs" and "buts" and hypotheses, finds himself equally unable to explain the matter with any conviction. Maeterlinck has touched the fringe of the subject in the fairy play in which Tyltyl visits the Abode of his Ancestors, good, bad, and indifferent. All we clearly know is that we do strangely inherit family traits; in some families the long-nosed ancestor persists in his influence in others (less favored) the robber ancestor, or the ancestor who takes a knife to his relations, or his peas. And the unfairness of the heredity handicap—in itself enormous—is aggravated by the fact that no jury will, as the law stands, convict one's ancestors. Such is life.

"Am I My Brother's Keeper?"

[By Watchman.]

PROF. CARL BECKER of Cornell University, in his recent work on "The United States—an Experiment in Democracy," alludes to the rough and ready classification of Americans as crudely materialistic—"dollar chasers" whose one idea is to seek wealth and pursue it, rather than peace, which the Psalmist and St. Peter set up as the chief object of human endeavor.

Prof. Becker concedes that the main occupation of the Republic is "business," and the art by which they are pre-eminently distinguished is the art of making money. That has grown out of the fact, as in Canada that the pioneers of a new continent had to overcome prodigious physical obstacles and develop material resources. At the same time the task was conceived in no low and merely mercenary aim, but rather with an ideal optimism. People have made money easily and as freely spent it. It has not been just the money, but the making of money, the enterprise, the game, the adventure of big business, which has enlisted so much enthusiasm. It may easily be overdone, and once caught in the swim and current of it, the average captain of industry or finance needs to get his eye on a higher guilding star.

Ida M. Tarbell, in her flashlight magazine way, a few years ago made the people prick up their ears over the ruthless methods by the subordinates, if not the directing mind, of the great oil octopus as it was described. However, she gave expression to a corrective public conscience. To lambaste the magnates has been the popular pastime of a school of space writers who conveniently ignored the legitimate exercise of the faculty which some possess of turning things into money by means of foresight and executive ability. Just how the conquest of natural obstacles would have been achieved and great productive enterprises carried to successful completion without such working genius it is not easy to conceive. Certainly there is little evidence that the swash-buckling critics would have achieved much for mankind in that direction. Men cannot be reduced to any dead level of achievement, nor be kept there, and demonstrated ability rightly exercised merits compensation.

Signs are not wanting that people are thinking seriously in other terms than those of quantity—"the tallest building, the biggest city, the longest railroad, or the most millions—things which strike the material imagination." Thinkers are groping for a new measuring stick of life results. The great accumulators have been casting about for ways and means of distribution by private philanthropy to mitigate suffering and better human conditions. We are not quite in sight of an escape from the offices of mercy and relief, but the individual roots of these sores are to be cleansed, so as to reach and cure the cancer of vice and poverty. People are now considering as never before the realities of human relations which involve personal regeneration, adequate compensation for work done, co-operative effort and adjustment of differences by conference and arbitration, rather than by crude, savage and wasteful weapons.

In a fit of jealous envy Cain rose up and slew the more obedient Abel, and then put up the lying plea that he was not his brother's keeper. That has been the lame excuse of the perpetrators of violence and injustice all down the ages. But it was not accepted then, and never can be. The blood of thy brother cries out to Me from the ground, was the crushing verdict of Eternal Justice. And the haunting sentence, whether pronounced by human courts or not, pursues with unrelenting steps the fugitive from prison walls, and, sleeping or waking, sin lies crouching at his hiding door.

As the divine revelation progressed it came to the full and final disclosure of human brotherhood, in the person, work and words of the Redeemer. His teaching rises above all requiting or paying off of old scores with enemies in their own coin. The new ethic staggered the pagan moralists or even Jewish rabbis. In the Sermon on the Mount the doctrine was expanded that has taken mankind over 1,900 years to fully grasp and apply. At times one might think it was just beginning to dawn upon the Christian church itself. Some old prejudices die hard. At the recent Ecumenical Council in Old London a Southern States delegate was asked if he would accept an invitation to lunch with a colored bishop, but he shook his head: "No, sir; I must decline." Why? Our colored brethren have everything that a human being is entitled to except social equality He probably forgot that the Master ate with publicans and sinners; that the New Testament teaches that all nations are of one blood; that men cannot live to themselves, and that as one physical organ cannot prey upon another without deadly peril to the whole body, neither can one person or nation maltreat or rob another without menace to all—in short, that man is in a sense even broader and more emphatic than professional philanthropy, his brother's keeper.

DRASTIC LAWS IN QUEBEC CURTAIL ELECTION TACTICS

OTTAWA, Oct. 8.—(Canadian Press.)—There are many things in connection with the conduct of and procedure in elections which are changed considerably under the present Dominion election act from what they were formerly. Every precaution which could be taken by Parliament to insure "clean" and orderly elections was taken in amending the act during the last two sessions, and the result is a law which should provide against what was formerly considered, in many cases, unavoidable election evils.

One of the amendments which caused considerable comment in the country at the time it was passed, was that referring to campaign fund contributions. Clause 10 of the amended act has been made to read:

"No unincorporated company or association, and no incorporated company or association other than one incorporated for political purposes alone, shall directly or indirectly contribute, loan, advance, pay or promise or offer to pay any money or its equivalent to or for, or in aid of any candidate at an election, or to, or for, or in aid of any political party, committee or association, or to, or for, or in aid of any company incorporated for political purposes, or to, or for, or in furtherance of any political purpose whatever, or for the indemnification or reimbursement of any person for moneys so used."

An Indictable Offence.

Shareholders and officers of companies or associations violating the above section are declared guilty of an indictable offence—as also is "any person who asks or knowingly receives" any money or its equivalent in violation of this section.

At the time this clause was introduced in the House the claim was made that it was aimed at the political fund which it was stated was then being raised by the farmer organizations in the western provinces. The clause passed the Commons and Senate, however, with little opposition.

Another clause in the amended act makes it an offence for any person, not being an elector or a candidate and who resides outside of Canada, to canvass for votes or in any way endeavor to induce voters to vote for any of the candidates at an election.

The conveyance of electors to polls, etc., is also forbidden by the act. This is not a new amendment, but is one which was strengthened somewhat in the amending of the former act. It is not an offence under the act, however, for anyone being an elector, to pay his own fare to or from the polling station.

By another clause it is made an offence to pay or promise to pay the expenses, wages or other costs of an elector going to or from a polling station. Under the act provision is made that "every employer shall on polling day allow to every elector in his employ at least two additional hours other than the noon hour for voting, and no employer shall make any deduction from the pay of such elector, nor impose upon or exact from him any penalty by reason of his absence during such hours."

Protects Candidates.

For the protection of candidates in elections it is also made an indictable offence for any person during or before any election to make or publish any false statements of fact in relation to the personal character or conduct of any candidate for the purpose of affecting the return of that candidate to office.

For the keeping of order in and about polling stations, election officers, as is generally known, are given powers as peace officers to arrest or order the arrest of any person committing an offence under the act. It is not generally known, however, that the returning officer or his deputy may, during nomination day and polling day, require any person within half a mile of the place of nomination or polling "to deliver to him any firearm, sword, stave, bludgeon, or other offensive weapon in the hands or personal possession of such person, and the person so required shall forthwith o deliver." Nor may a stranger come armed into a polling division, nor a resident arm himself.

Banners Prohibited.

Other prohibitions in the act are against the use of banners, ribbons, favors, badges or labels to distinguish the political leanings of the wearer on election day, or within eight days of that date. There are also, of course, provisions against the selling or giving away of liquor on the day of voting, and also provisions against the treating of electors to meals, drink or amusements, and stringent provisions against bribery, giving or promising employment, and the demanding or receiving of bribes in any form.

Persons guilty of indictable offences under the act are liable on indictment or summary conviction to fines not exceeding $2,000, or to imprisonment for a term up to two years, with or without hard labor, or to both fine and imprisonment. Non-indictable offences under the act are punishable by a fine not exceeding $500, or one year in prison, or both fine and imprisonment. Persons found guilty of illegal or corrupt practices are also disqualified from voting, or candidature for a period of five years for an illegal practice, and seven years for a corrupt practice.

TO THE EDITOR

WANTS TREATMENT.

Editor, Advertiser:

Sir,—Will you give me a little space in your valuable paper? I was in the army for thirteen months (two enlistments), and was discharged both times, just before my battalion sailed for overseas, both times because my hearing was beginning to fail.

I went under two operations for my ears in 1918, and ever since it about drives me crazy sometimes, and it has ruined my hearing.

Last year I was at Kingston and Ottawa, and a doctor at Ottawa told me my hearing would come back if I had the right treatment, and the doctor at Kingston told me I had catarrh. Now, I have suffered with it, beginning in the army, and the S. C. R. says I am not entitled to treatment, and I have no money to treat myself, because I have been unable to work, or at least to hold a job for two years, and ever since I was discharged I have never been myself, and worse ever since the operation.

I have been to several doctors and to the hospital, and denied treatment, and God only knows that I would sell myself to get the right treatment to get rid of my trouble, and not only that, but my ear troubles are injuring my head, back and health. I was never troubled with my back before the operations. I suppose they will be saying that I am insane if I trouble them any more, and they will be bundling me off to the Ontario Hospital. I would like to know what that medical school is for, and the Institute of Public Health, if they don't turn out better doctors, or ones that have a heart at any rate. I could tell you more, but it would take up too much space.

BIRDS OF A FEATHER.

[Harper's Magazine.]

An eminent London judge who wrote a wretched hand once sent a note to a friend among the lawyers seated at the barristers' table.

Not being able to make anything of it, the friend scribbled something absolutely undecipherable upon a half sheet of note paper and passed it up to the judge. The great man looked somewhat annoyed at it, and when the court adjourned he asked his friend.

"What do you mean by this? I invited you to come and dine with me tonight."

"Yes," said the lawyer, "and I replied that I should be delighted to do so."

A LANDSCAPE.

[Richard Henry Horne.]

Thou see'st the dawn's grave orange hue,
With one pale streak like yellow sand,
And over that a vein of blue.

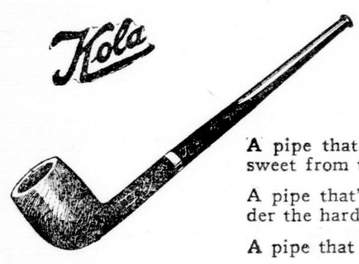

The air is cold above the woods;
All silent is the earth and sky,
Except with his own lonely moods
The blackbird holds a colloquy.

Over the broad hill creeps a beam,
Like hope that gilds a good man's brow;
And now ascends the nostril-stream
Of stalwart horses come to plow.

Ye rigid Plowmen, bear in mind
Your labor is for future hours;
Advance—spare not—nor look behind—
Plow deep and straight with all your powers.

CORNER-STONE TO BE LAID ON NOVEMBER 4

Lieut.-Governor and Mrs. Cockshutt Will Be Present.

Arrangements have been made for an official unveiling of the Children's Hospital corner-stone on November 4, when Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Harry Cockshutt will be present in the city to take their share in the ceremonies. The actual unveiling will be done by the lieutenant-governor, who will be presented with a silver trowel inscribed with the date of the ceremony.

It is understood that a special platform will be erected near the new building on Ottaway avenue, where the officials of the day will take their stand. A band will be in attendance, and everything carried out so as to make the event one to be long remembered in the city. The fact that the hospital is a war memorial will be emphasized on the occasion of the official unveiling of the corner-stone, and is also expected that historical data concerning the building and the raising of funds for the hospital will be sealed into the stone.

The committee to make arrangements for the unveiling ceremonies include Mrs. Arthur Smith, Mrs. F. J. Greenaway, Mrs. Cl. T. Campbell and Mrs. E. B. Smith.

XCIX.—The Stealthy Hand.

Mary, holding the glittering diamond in her hand, felt a queer, inexplicable premonition passing through her. Surely there was something sinister about this stone!

It carried trouble with it, she felt positive.

And yet she didn't want to disappoint her bridegroom by refusing his magnificent wedding gift.

"Thank you a thousand times, dear Dick," she said. "It's really quite too beautiful for me. I—I don't somehow go with diamonds. It's grand enough—"

"You silly little sweetheart! Nothing is half beautiful enough for you!" Dick gazed at her romantically.

"Don't dare to refuse my present, or I will never forgive you."

Mary smiled. She loved Dick's vehemence.

"Will you keep it for me, dear? I'm terrified that I should lose it. It really ought to be deposited in a bank or something safe—"

"I tell you what! I'll have it made into a wonderful ring for you—our engagement ring—the stone to be set on a slender platinum band. Would that please you, Mary?"

Mary felt a curious thrill of apprehension. She struggled hard against it. She did not want this glittering, splendid bauble. She only wanted Dick.

But, oh, she could not disappoint him!

"Anything that pleases you must please me, Dick!" she whispered fondly. She handed him the diamond. "Thank you a thousand times! And keep it for me in the meantime."

Dick took the diamond and slipped it into his pocketbook, placing the latter in his vest coat pocket.

Mary's eyes were on the waters of a little lake. Then suddenly she gave a frightened little cry.

"Dick! Dick! Look over there, behind that tree! That man who's hiding—look!"

"Jehosaphat!" said Dick, beneath his breath. "Blessed if that isn't Vandaveer's spying Cingalee again. If I catch the sneaking hound I'll beat the stuffing out of him!"

He ran across the grass towards the stealthy figure. But Kismet had vanished quite completely.

"The disappearing trick!" ejaculated Dick. "Perhaps he thinks he's in the jungle and is hanging to a branch up there. He always did remind me of a python, somehow."

"Come on! Let's go and have some tea," suggested Dick. He led Mary across the grass towards the driveway. "You must be starving, dear."

"Oh, Dick, do deposit that diamond in a bank or in a safety vault! That wretched Cingalee is tracking you!" cried Dick's young wife. "Let's go back and get rid of it!"

"Too late to deposit the thing in a bank," said Dick with nonchalance. "It's long after three o'clock, my child. No—I'll look after it myself. After we have had our tea I am going to take you home to the White Lodge, and then go to back to the Barley Mow. In fact, I'll stay there until the week is up, and then I'm going to claim you, and we'll have our honeymoon."

Thereafter Mary's thoughts were centered on the whereabouts of this gloricus honeymoon-to-be. And she forgot her troubling premonitions anent the diamond.

They had a cheerful tea in a Fifth avenue hotel, having hailed an empty taxi that drove them there in the least possible time.

When tea was over there was just sufficient margin left in which to catch their train. Nor could they find a seat together—so conversation flagged a little on the journey to the country.

But Mary and her new-made husband were ideally happy. For now indeed the knot was tied, and they "belonged" irrevocably.

Punctually at 8 o'clock Dick left his young wife at the front door of the White Lodge. The car that Carrington Bellairs had sent to meet Mary was a shade late in arriving at the country railway station, so Mary had jumped at the chance of walking to the house with Dick.

"Dick, dear," she said to him on parting, "I've a wretched premonition about the diamond. Won't you let me take care of it tonight? That would relieve my mind."

"You foolish little girl!" said Dick, reprovingly. "But, of course, the diamond is your own. Here, take it!" He handed it to Mary.

"I'm so afraid that harm will come to you through it," she said. "I'm less anxious about you when you aren't carrying this valuable around with you. It's not the diamond's safety that I'm speaking of—it's yours, Dick, dear!"

The placed the precious stone in her handbag, kissed Dick a prolonged good-night, and left him. She was radiant once more.

Three hours later Dick was sound asleep in bed. He was wrapped in happy dreams of Mary his girl-wife.

The Barley Mow was lying very quiet and peaceful. Dick was sleeping in an upper chamber of the place.

It was after midnight when a silent-footed Oriental figure climbed, catlike, through the bedroom window, and, carrying a heavy loaded stick, approached Dick's bed.

Dick stirred, sighed, turned a little. Nearer and nearer came the creeping figure.

With a groping hand the stranger touched Dick's neck, as though feeling for some valuable, Dick opened sleepy eyes.

"You brute!" He sprang up suddenly, wide awake and tense.

Alas! His movement was not quick enough for Kismet. That wily Oriental raised his loaded stick, and—with terrific impact—brought it down with all his force on Dick Calardin's head.

Tomorrow: "Mercy! Mercy!"

SENDS THANKS.

Dear Miss Grey,—I received a number of roots from Mrs. Reilly, and as she would not accept postage for them, I said I would send a mite to the Mail-Box hospital fund. I also received Sweet Mary roots from Black Bird. Thanks to the Mail-Box which makes these exchanges possible. I do think it is the finest thing. I enjoy the letters very much. It gives one an idea of other ways and methods of doing things. Besides, it just shows how very much alike we humans are, anyway.

In closing, may I ask for the directions for sachet bags and portiere beads, please? Will inclose addressed envelope and mite. Sincersly, AVON.

Am mailing you the sachet and portiere directions, and many thanks for the mite for our hospital fund.

Cynthia Grey's Mail-Box

[By Cynthia Grey.]

DO not worry! All worry is not preventable, but much of it can be avoided.

Most of our fears are never realized. If we meet our troubles day by day as they came, without worrying about them beforehand, we will have enough strength to overcome them.

Get away if possible from scenes which provoke worry; exercise in the open air; read good books of the lighter strain; find pleasant recreation or an interesting hobby.

Worry, nerves and "the blues" are all of the same class. Cheerful society, the cultivation of an optimistic attitude of mind are helpful aids to escape from worrying.

Excessive worry tires the nerves just as excessive work tires the muscles, and the result is an attack of nerves or "the blues."

But do not go to the other extreme and become so absolutely immune to worry that you can sit back and observe things going wrong, when it is your duty to be concerned about them. This would be going from "the frying pan into the fire."

A MERRY CHRISTMAS.

Dear Miss Grey,—I am inclosing the morning glory seeds which I promised for the Mail-Box. There are 28 packages, and I divided the seeds as evenly as I could, so that each one would get the same amount.

This is a lovely fall day, and a very acceptable one after all the rain we have had lately.

I must get busy, so will close, and wish you all a Merry Christmas, for it will soon be here. A PEST.

Thank you for sending us the morning glory seeds, and such neat little packages they were done up in.

Wants Seeds.

Dear Miss Grey,—This is my first visit to your Mail-Box. I read your page every day, and enjoy it.

I noticed in Tuesday's papepr that Aunt Rose sent in a large number of seeds. Could I have one package each of phlox, salpiglossis and dianthus pinks, and could I have the stocking-foot pattern, please?

Inclosed you will find dime for S. C. H. AUNT IDA.

The seeds are on the way to you, Aunt Ida, also the stocking-foot pattern. Many thanks for remembering our fund with a hospital mite.

GRANDFATHER'S CLOCK.

Dear Miss Grey,—Just a little note to inquire if anyone has the piece called "Grandfather's Clock" they would lend me. I would take great care of it and return it just as soon as I had it copied. Do you think I could get it? I have tried everywhere to buy it, but find it impossible to obtain. Hoping that someone will be kind enough to lend it to me, I am, ANOTHER READER.

I am quite sure if anyone has this piece they will send it to you.

WILL AUNT ROSE WRITE?

Dear Miss Grey,—As I was looking over the letters in today's paper where Aunt Rose has sent in such a wonderful lot of phlox and salpiglossis, also nicotine and pansies, as I have none of these except phlox, may I ask for a packet of each? and in return I am mailing you some of the seeds I promised.

I think it is lovely for the readers of the Mail-Box exchanging seeds, whereby we may all help one another. Many thanks for the seeds you forwarded me before.

This is one grand autumn, is it not, Miss Grey? But we are looking for Jack Frost any night now. How I love to watch the stars these lovely, clear, frosty nights I would just love to study astronomy. Are there any other readers so interested? Well, I must be going, as my letter is getting too long. PUSSY WILLOWS NO. 2.

P. S.—Am sending in another mite to help the fund along. Would like to hear from Aunt Rose if she will write first. My address is with Miss Grey.

Am mailing you all the seeds you asked for, except pansy. We have none of this variety in the Mail-Box. Thank you for the seeds and hospital mite.

Puppy Stories

By Vincent G. Perry.

THE WOLF DOG.
Part Nineteen.

Now, there dwelt not far from the city where the wolf dog and the old collie dog were stopping, a farmer who had been losing his chickens at night. Raising fine fowls and having them stolen was nothing to be laughed at, and of course the farmer became quite angry.

"I know what it is that is stealing your fowls," the farmer's son declared. "It is the fox that escaped from the fox farm. He is hiding in the little woods over there, and at night he visits your pen."

"I will wait for him with my shotgun, if that is the case," the farmer cried angrily. "I'll put a stop to his thieving."

"It would never do to kill that fox. He is a precious animal, and his coat is worth almost a fortune. His owners are offering a reward for his capture, but so far he has been too sly for them. Can't we set a trap for him?" suggested the farmer's son.

So it was that a trap was planned to be set outside the chicken house. It would never do to set a trap that would hurt the fox, for his owners wanted him back in good condition, and would be very angry if harm befell him; so a trap was set that would cage him up—and quite a clever affair it was too.

As it so happened, the wolf dog and the old mother collie were passing that way. They had gone right through the city without tasting a bite of food, for they had heeded the warning of the city dog, and had not run the risk of being poisoned.

"I'm so very hungry," said the collie.

"So am I," agreed the wolf dog. "Let's go and see if we can find a fowl in the farmyard."

It was quite dark by this time—and they crept up to the henhouse, where the trap had been set. Side by side they walked around the house, sniffing, without a thought of danger underfoot—for it was from the house they expected danger to come. Suddenly the ground seemed to open up, and they both fell into the trap that had been set. And there they were—prisoners!

WOMEN'S CLUBS

MUNICIPAL CHAPTER, I. O. D. E.

Col. W. G. Coles of the G. W. V. A. addressed a meeting of the executive of the Municipal Chapter, I. O. D. E., at Cronyn Hall yesterday afternoon, asking their co-operation in the selling of poppies for Armistice Day. Col. Coles suggested that if the members of the I. O. D. E. would assist in the selling of poppies a certain portion of the proceeds would be given in aid of the Children's Hospital. These poppies are to be sold during the few days preceding Armistice Day, so that everyone will have a scarlet flower to wear on that occasion.

SANATORIUM AID.

A very interesting meeting of the local Sanatorium Aid was held at the home of Mrs. Howard Higgins yesterday afternoon, when plans were made for the fall and winter work, these plans largely concerning the looking after tubercular families and the providing of Christmas cheer for them. The reports showed a very heavy summer's work, owing to the large number of people out of employment.

HOSPITAL CANVASS COMMITTEE.

Mrs. John Gemmell called another meeting of the Children's Hospital Canvass Committee for yesterday afternoon at Cronyn Hall, when plans were continued towards a more energetic canvass of the city in the near future. A beginning has already been made among the professional men of the city.

CLASS 27, DUNDAS CENTRE.

Class 27, Dundas Centre Methodist Sunday school, is planning as its service work for the year to look after any emergency calls for relief which may come to its notice. And instead of holding a bazaar or entertainment in order to raise money for this purpose the class has set aside the first Sunday in November on which its members will make a free-will offering to carry on this phase of the work. The regular monthly meeting of the class was held this week at the home of Mrs. Wm. Bailey, Hamilton road, the president, Mrs. John Adams, in the chair, and about 30 members present. After the meeting a social half hour was spent. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Sherlock, 770 Queen's avenue, on the first Tuesday in November.

CAMPBELL BECHER CHAPTER.

This week's meeting of the Campbell Becher Chapter, I.O.D.E., held at the home of Mrs. O. I. Cuningham, was the launching of an excellent money-making scheme for the chapter—an attractive receipt-book, bound in oilcloth, containing favorite recipes, to be sold in aid of the Children's Hospital. Mrs. Jack Stevenson and Mrs. J. McLeod are the receipt book conveners. This chapter has now only $400 of its promised $2,500 for the hospital to make up. Mrs. F. J. Greenaway and Mrs. J. W. P. Jones were appointed the chapter's delegates to the Provincial Chapter meeting in Chatam on October 20.

GIRLS' CANADIAN CLUB.

Next Tuesday evening is the occasion of the first meeting of the Girls' Canadian Club for this season, when the speakers will be Col. Walter Brown of Western University on "Canadianism" and Mrs. Frank Leonard, president of the Women's Canadian Club on "The Federation of Canadian Clubs," recently held in Winnipeg. Mrs. C. B. King, president of the Y.W.C.A., and Miss G. Baldwin, president of the Girls' Canadian Club, will also speak briefly, welcoming any new members who may take this opportunity of joining the club. A reading by Miss Jean Walker and orchestral numbers under the direction of E. E. Warner are also included on the program, which will be brought to a close by the serving of refreshments.

FEDERATION NIGHT.

The first big federation banquet will be held at the Y. W. C. A., King street, next Thursday, when an address by some interesting speaker will be followed by an open forum. These federation banquets, held in connection with the United Industrial Clubs of the Y. W. C. A., will take place fortnightly throughout the season.

ST. ANDREW'S LADIES' AID.

The Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's Church is arranging to hold a rummage sale in the east end town hall on Friday and Saturday, October 14 and 15, when a splendid array of household effects and wearing apparel will be put on sale.

ORGANIC MATTER AND COMPOUNDS.

When food is burned either by body processes or by fire, it is changed into water, organic matter in the form of gaseous or volatile products, and ash residue. The organic matter is a mechanical mixture of compounds made up of carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen and sulphur, and it is composed of various individual organic compounds, that is, those chemical substances are variously combined into cellulose, or woody fibre, starch, sugar, albumin and fat. The amount of organic matter in food is determined by subtracting the ash and water content from a hundred. Organic matter is largely starch in some foods, as potatoes and rice, while in others, as wheat, cellulose predominates. The nature of the prevailing organic compound, as sugar, or starch, determines the nutritive value of the food.

For purposes of study, organic compounds are divided into classes on the basis of the element nitrogen. Those which contain it are called nitrogenous, the others, non-nitrogenous. The nitrogenous compounds are composed of the elements nitrogen, hydrogen, carbon, oxygen and sulphur, the others of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen. In vegetable foods the most are non-nitrogenous, there being usually from six to twelve parts non-nitrogenous to every one part nitrogenous; in animal foods, the most are nitrogenous.

Anyone who wishes to deal intelligently with food and understand what she reads in advertisements and food articles should make up her mind to learn these elementary food terms.

RECITAL HOUR PLEASES AT CONSERVATORY ANNEX

Miss Topley-Thomas of the London Conservatory of Music began her weekly recital hours last night at the new Conservatory Annex on Richmond street herself reading Lord Dunsany's "The Loot of Bombsharna," surely a fitting number for a very Irish program. The program also included a piano selection by Miss Dorothy Davis—a Norman Lee composition, which had its inspiration in one of Lord Dunsany's tales. Another pupil of Thomas Martin, Miss Laura Kirkwood, also appeared among the artists of last evening, and Miss Nettie Jones, a pupil of Miss Dorinda Abbot, was heard in a charming vocal number.

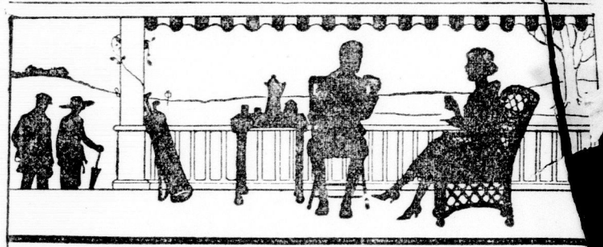

Three of Miss Thomas' pupils appeared in reading numbers—Miss Ruth Tanner, Miss Ruby Findlay and little Miss Francis Williams. The success of this first recital hour promises well for the others to come, every Friday evening.

FOR BUSINESS GIRLS.

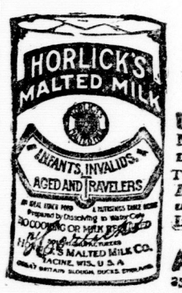

Dear Cynthia,—Would you kindly tell me if there is a place in the city under the management of the Salvation Army for business girls to live, room and board? If so, would you give the street and number? Thanking you in advance, PEARL.

The Salvation Army has a place of this nature on the corner of King and Clarence streets.

Giants Turn on Yanks With a 13-Run Bombardment That Banishes Three Hurlers

YANKS CRACK UNDER AVALANCHE OF HITS

Giants Even Up With Quartet in Fourth—Get Eight Runs in Seventh and Another in Eighth—Shawkey, Quinn and Collins Down in Order.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7—The Giants awoke from their two days of lethargy today and sprinkled the greensward at the Polo Grounds with such a shower of hits that the Yankees were swamped under a score of 13 to 5 in the third game of the world's series.

The National Leaguers had gone runless for twenty innings up to the third session of this afternoon's struggle. Then the outbreak of hitting started.

Stealing the Yankees' thunder, as the latter had stolen theirs in the previous games of the series, in speed and daring on bases, John McGraw's men, after spotting their American League opponents to a four-run lead, promptly cancelled this advantage, driving Bob Shawkey, who had started for Miller Huggins' team, of the mound in the third inning. Then, after the score had run along in a tie for three more innings, they broke out with an orgy of hitting against second-string Yankee pitchers in the "lucky seventh" putting over eight runs in this chapter and piling up a total of thirteen runs and twenty hits in their eight innings at bat.

Tickled the Fans.

Despite its one-sidedness, the game was the sort that tickles the fancy of the average baseball crowd, and today's throng, despite the artisan leanings of a goodly portion of it, was no exception. It was full of thrills, brilliant catches, daring base-running and, on the Giants' side, long-distance hitting.

The crowd, with perfect baseball weather to bring it out, was a record-breaker for the series. More than 36,000 filled the stands and bleachers, to make the series record for enthusiasm as well. The turn of the adherents came first, when they kicked up was as at let loose by the Giants' when their opportunity ar-

One of these was a catch in the second inning by Ward, the Yankees' second sack- h resulted in a double play. s George Burns, the Giants' cen- der, however, who turned in the markable feat of the game and the series. In the seventh in- he started with the crack of Quinn's bat against the ball and still on the run, hauled down the over his shoulder, close to the field fence. It was a marvellous of fielding and drew a big demon- on from the entire crowd.

Giants All Hit.

ll the Giants, with the exception of ey and Kelly, figured in the hitting. ey was taken from the game before had a chance to bat. Burns and yder divided the hitting honors, each taking four hits. Burns' hitting in- luded a double and a triple.

Young had a double and a triple, while "Irish" Meusel had two singles and a double. Babe Ruth had another colorless day, compared with some of his work during the season's campaign. In four times at the plate he struck out twice, made a single which scored two Yankee runs and drew a base on balls. Fewster running for him and scoring a run. It was said that the home run king was suffering from an infected arm. On the fielding side he had but one chance, capturing Bancroft's sacrifice fly.

The game, which ended so lop-sidedly, started out as if it might be another one like the pitchers' battle of yesterday.

Toney Started Well.

Toney, who started for the Giants, breezed along comfortably for two innings. The Yankees got to him in the third, however, and he was taken out with the bases full, none out and three runs in. Another run was scored by the Yankees before "Jess" Barnes, who relieved him, could retire the side.

Shawkey met his fate, like Toney, in this same inning. His wildness was responsible. After he had forced two runs over the plate by passing batters, Jack Quinn was called to the mound. Two of the Giants Shawkey left on the bases subsequently tallied, but there was no more scoring off Quinn until the tempestuous seventh. Meanwhile, Barnes was twirling a heady, steady game and holding the Yankees safe, as he did to the end.

Wide Open Here.

The game broke wide open in the Yankees' third inning. Schang drew a base on balls and reached third on Shawkey's single to right. Miller hit for a base, scoring Schang and moving Shawkey to second. Toney gave Peckinpaugh a base on balls and all corners were filled. Cheers of the Yankee fans rocked the stands as the home run king walked to the plate. Ruth slammed Toney's sixth pitch, and drove it to centre field for a single, sending home both Shawkey and Miller. Peckinpaugh took third. Here Toney was waved off the mound and Barnes was brought out of the bullpen. Ruth went out trying to steal. Bob Meusel walked and Peckinpaugh scored on Pipp's out. This ended the Yankees' scoring in the inning.

The four-run lead looked big to the Giants as they went to bat. Barnes, first up, poked a single to left. Burns went out on a fly to centre, but Captain Bancroft laced a single to right, Barnes stopping at second. Shawkey threw wide to Frisch, who walked, filling the bases. Shawkey appeared to lose control and passed Young, forcing home Barnes with the Giants' first run of the series. Shawkey then passed Kelly, forcing home Bancroft. Quinn replaced Shawkey at this juncture, with the bases still populated. Frisch scored while "Irish" Meusel was being retired at first, Young and Kelly moving up. Young came home with the tying run when Rawlings hit a grounder to Peckinpaugh, who could not handle the ball in time to throw out the Giants' second baser.

Snyder fouled out to Pipp and left the score tied in a knot until the Giants' hectic seventh inning.

Made Up Time.

The National League leaders made more runs and hits in the seventh inning than in the two previous games of the series. Frisch began the attack by slashing a single to centre and went to third on Young's two-bagger to right field. Kelly walked and the bases were swept the bases with a tremendous three-bagger to left centre. Collins then waved good-night to the crowd. Pitcher Rogers, his rescuer, threw out Kelly at first, ending the slaughter, to the great relief of the Yankee rooters, some of whom began to "ride" the American League champions. Twelve Giants were at bat in the inning, getting eight hits and two bases on balls, for a total of eight runs. One man, Young, was left on base.

Each team added a run to their totals in the eighth inning. Frank Baker, home run king of other days, was given a cheer when he batted for Pitcher Rogers in the Yankees' ninth, but the best he could do was to give "Irish" Meusel a long fly.

Attendance Increase.

The officials figures showed an attendance of 36,509, with gross receipts of $119,007, the latter again a new record. The advisory board's share of the receipts is $17,851.05; the players' share, $60,693.57, and the two clubs' share, $40,462.38.

Shawkey Struck His First Rough Weather In the Fourth Inning.

SHAWKEY.

HUGGINS took Shawkey out of the box in the fourth yesterday after the Giants had made two runs, due mostly to Shawkey's wildness. He contributed to the Yankees' run column in their half of the fourth inning, when he singled to right field. He went to second on Miller's single, and to third when Peck walked and scored on Ruth's single.

when "Irish" Meusel slammed a double to right, sending home Frisch and Young. Kelly stopped at third on the hit. Rawlings came through with a single to centre, scoring Kelly and Meusel.

Here Collins took up the pitching burden for the Yankees, but was unable to sweep back the attacking Giants. After Rawlings went out trying to steal, Snyder, Barnes and Burns hit out singles amid frenzied rooting. With the bases full, Bancroft lifted a sacrifice fly to Ruth, scoring Snyder. Frisch walked and the National League followers broke into tumultuous cheering as Young

MOTORCYCLE RACES ARE CALLED OFF

Track Too Heavy As Result of Rain To Get Speed.

G. A. Wenige, promoter of the motorcycle races, which were to have been held at Queen's Park this afternoon, announced last evening that the heavy rains of Friday morning and afternoon had put the track in such a condition that it would be impossible to hold the races as scheduled.

Mr. Wenige assured The Advertiser that they would be held in all probability on Saturday, October 22. It was first thought that they could be held next Saturday, but the Western University Field Day is scheduled for then at Queen's Park, and this would conflict.

The speed demons who had entered the races were notified of the postponement, and all signified their intentions of coming here when the new date had been set.

GIBBONS KNOCKS OUT TURNER.

Buffalo, Oct. 7.—Tommy Gibbons of St. Paul knocked out Clay Turner of New York after 30 seconds of fighting in their bout here tonight. There was only one blow struck, and it stretched Turner on the canvas for the knockout. The men are light heavyweights.

Huggins Had To Look Over the Payroll To Find a Pitcher

Ring Says Shawkey Was in the Navy During the War and Is Still At Sea—Everybody Went To Bat in the Seventh Except the President.

BY RING W. LARDNER.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—I walked out of this one in the seventh innings. Mr. Huggins had just begin calling on some of his anonymous pitchers, and it looked like they might get the side out before it was time to start tomorrow's game. The fans who were betting last night that the Giants wouldn't get a run in the series are now offering even money that they won't get more than 100. After the first two games McGraw's batters claimed that the reason they couldn't hit was on account of the background in centre field. The scenery was just the same today, but the boys ain't squawking no more.

When the game started the pitchers was Fred Toney and Bob Shawkey. Toney begun his big league career with the Cubs and we stopped at Evansville, Ind., on the spring trip and outside the Elks' Temple they was an iron hitching post built into the cement walk. One morning Fred picked up the hitching post and hit Heine Zimmerman over the head with it. That was just a prank on Fred's part and of course nobody was hurt. But playing with iron hitching posts and pitching world series ball games is two different things. When Fred had been in their a little over two innings, McGraw decided that he had had enough. The Yankees had four runs, but that wasn't enough.

Shawkey Still at Sea.

Bob Shawkey was in the navy during the war and seems to be still at sea. Barnes started the Giants' part of the third with a base hit. Burns flied out and Bancroft singled. Shawkey then passed Frisch to get Young, and Young to get Kelly. Then he passed Kelly to get Meusel, but just when his strategy might of begin to show results, Huggins took him out.

With an even start of four runs each, Jess Barnes and Jack Quinn set out to have a pitchers' battle, or as some call it, a duel of slab artists. This lasted till the Giants' half of the seventh inning, when everybody went to bat but President Stoneham and Judge McQuade. Frisch opened up with his seventh hit of the series. Ross Young, whose batting record up to this time was eight times up and two fouls, come to the plate with the intention of laying down a sacrifice. But Quinn pitched two balls and Ross thought the next one was bad too and left it go past, but Mr. Quigley called it a strike. This upset Ross and he slapped the next one to right field for a double. Up come Bill Lange's grandson, who you can always count on to walk, either to first base or the bench. This time he picked out first base. The next five gents made five bases, but only two of them was made off Quinn. You can't hit a man in thes hower bath. Rip Collins and Rogers was trotted out in rapid succession and as I was leaving the field, Manager Huggins sent to the office for the payroll to find out who else had been signed up on the theory that they could pitch.

Ring Had a Lunch.

When a man has set through two hours and wenty minutes of those kind of baseball you naturally feel weak, and imagine my delight when I run into Harry Stevens, the genial outdoor caterer, and he insisted on me coming into the press room for a little lunch. A waiter asked me what would i have, and I asked him what was they, and he recited the bill-of-fare from memory, which, as I recall it, was lobster salad, pork and beans and your choice of coffee or some of Jake Ruppert's product. Well, when I don't get no exercise I have to be careful what I put inside of me, so I told him not to bring me no ham. Mr. Stevens' layout reminds the newspaper boys of last year's spread in Brooklyn, only that the lobster, salmon, beef, turkey, tongue, chicken and beans wasn't in season across the bridge.

On the way out I was stopped by a man who looked like his name was Cohen, and he asked me didn't I want to buy the official 1921 series song, and it was only a dime, so I bought it and the name of it is "O You Babe Ruth," and they have got a picture of Babe on the cover that he could have them arrested for it. Here is the words to the song. "Out on the Polo Grounds they're playing, to see who the champions will be. The Yankees and Giants are there to do their best or die, with McGraw and Miller Huggins standing by." Chorus: "O you Babe Ruth, we're betting on you. Work you come through; then there is George Kelly, he can hit, too, made twenty-two. Art Nefh pitches them slow. But we don't care, Bambino, so long as you come through."

That is the words, and I haven't tried the tune yet, but it looks just as good as the words, and it will surprise me if the writers ain't heard of when they get out.

OLDEST CONVICT DIES IN PANKHURST PRISON

LONDON, Oct. 7.—John White, the oldest convict in Pankhurst Prison, is dead at the age of 81 years, after passing 70 years behind prison bars. He was last convicted in 1918 for housebreaking.

White was a man of violent temper, and on one occasion threw a pudding dish and its contents at a prison official, but could not be punished because of heart trouble from which he suffered.

He was powerful physically and was always a source of trouble to prison officials. He was convicted five times and sentenced for each conviction. He was a boy when he served his first prison term.

Injury Likely to Keep Ruth Out of World Series Contests

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Bable Ruth was suffering tonight from a severe abscess on his left arm, which his physician said made it doubtful if he could get into the game tomorrow, and may prevent him from playing for several days.

During Thursday's game Ruth stole second and then third, sliding into the latter bag and bruising his elbow. The sore became infected while he was playing. It caused him so much pain in today's game that he withdrew after getting a base on balls in the eighth inning, leaving Chick Fewster to run for him.

An examination of the injury was made tonight by Dr. George W. Smith.

"It is doubtful if Ruth will be able to play tomorrow," he said. "I am going to examine his arm again in the morning. The abscess is right at the elbow and very painful. Swinging at the ball would irritate it and cause him much pain."

"If the doctor says I can play I'll be the first player on the field," declared Ruth. "But I have a suspicion that the doctor is going to keep me out of the game. I'll be at the grounds, anyway, rooting for the boys to win."

Earl Smith, catcher for the Giants in Thursday's game, was fined $200 today by Judge K. M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, for "irregularities behind the plate." Judge Landis gave no further explanation of the reason for punishing the player.

During the game angry words passed between Smith and Bob Meusel, right fielder for the Yankees, when he came to bat. Later Meusel stole home. The Giants' catcher also had a verbal battle with Umpire Moriarty, who worked at the plate.

ONLY A FLOOD STOPS SOCCER

Hamilton Team Due This Afternoon At Tecumseh Park.

Rain will stop soccer, but it takes a great deal of it, so the game scheduled between Hamilton and District picked team and the L. and D. team this afternoon will be staged at Tecumseh Park unless the rain shows no sign of giving up the struggle.

It will probably be the last big exhibition game of the soccer season before the Cup Tie games get away. London has had some soccer bordering on the Connaught cup brand this summer. In fact, more good soccer has been crammed into this one season than was ever before seen in the city.

L. and D. Credit.

It has been first of all due to the organization of the London and District, and then to individual resources of clubs like Public Utilities and Grand Trunk, who brought teams here. The Utilities, in tackling the O. F. A. cup series, brought up against Toronto Scottish, Dominion champions ultimately, and succeeded in giving the Scots one of their two hardest games in the journey to the highest honors in Canadian football.

Hamilton and District will send a team here just as strong as the H. and D. team, which won the Plenty cup. The team chosen by the L. and D. represent the strongest choice in the association.

Noble, the local referee, is handling the game.

RECALLS 1891 FEUD OVER WATERMELON

Two Killed in Kentucky After Families Met in Streets.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 7. — Only one feud ever was the outgrowth of trouble over a watermelon, so far as is known. It occurred in the blue grass region, and not in the mountains, where most of the factional conflicts take place.

Only one of the main participants of the feud, a railroad man, is alive, and he is violently addicted to peace. A few days ago a big heavy-set stranger, with iron-grey hair, walked into a store at Georgetown, Scott County, twelve miles from Lexington, and bought a picture postal card. Looking across the street to the county jail, the stranger said:

"I was the first man ever to break that jail."

The storekeeper looked dubious, and the man said:

"I'm Milt Kendall."

In Georgetown, Kendall, a central figure in the famous Kendall-Jarvis feud of 1891, told of Georgetown's reign of terror. He described the shooting affray on August 27, 1891, in which John Jarvis and A. J. Montgomery were killed and "Bud" Jarvis and himself were wounded. He showed the wound that he received and the ball which remains in his arm today.

In a tone lacking any semblance of bitterness, he blamed the Jarvises along with the Kendalls for being hot-headed, and declared that he and his father and brothers had believed they were acting within their rights in defending themselves against threats and brandished weapons. "I am sorry the difficulties ever occurred," he confessed.

Kendall talked in a pleasant and even voice, without the slightest strain of harshness or braggadocio. By the very frankness of his statements he appeared as one fearless, yet humble.

Kendall's conversation recalled the horrible days that Georgetown endured in the latter part of August, 1891, when within the period of a few days three or four men were killed, a negro was hanged by a mob, and parts of the town were fired by outraged negroes. For several days scores of citizens, armed with rifles secured from the state armory, and headed by Sheriff J. M. Ford and the late Dr. John A. Lewis patrolled the streets of the city and guard it like a besieged fortress.

While the Kendall-Jarvis feud had no connection with the mobbing of Frank Dudley and the negro retaliation, it occurred simultaneously, and threw the city into terror. Citizens were not safe on the street, and one of the most prominent citizens was killed accidentally.

The Kendalls and Jarvises were neighbors in the community of Oxford, where Milt Kendall, Sen., had served as a magistrate for fourteen years and as Democratic county chairman. A dispute arose between the Jarvis and Kendall families when the Kendall watermelon patch was raided and the Jarvises were blamed by the Kendalls. Threats to kill passed between the two families, which included on one side Milt H. Kendall and his sons George H., Milt, Jun., "Popsy," John, Amos and R. B., and on the other side Mrs. Jarvis's sons, John, Dade and Burrell.

ADVISES PRINCE TO AVOID MONTMARTE

Shah of Persia Issues Warning To His Son.

Paris, Oct. 7.—"Harems and dancing girls if you will, but keep him away from Montmartre," were the final words of the shah to the small army of functionaries accompanying Persia's crown prince, Mohammed Hassan Hilza Waliahd, on a European tour. As a result Mohammed has been having a miserable time since he left Constantinople and Cairo, where some color was injected into the princely existence by visits to numerous harems, with an opportunity for picking out the nucleus for his own establishment when he starts for home.

But Mohammed's chief interest centers on seeing Paris, for the shah himself had dined once in certain highly popular and gay establishments just below the famous Butte, while Vichy society before the war looked forward to a long line of eccentric Persian entertainments.

But instead of music halls or dancing, whenever they are suggested, the present crown prince is politely told that the royal taste would better be satisfied by a ballet or opera—with an official escort always along. Or if he wants to pay an incognito visit to one of his uncle's old cronies the project is spoiled by the reminder that he has not yet paid an official visit to President Millerand or to some sub-chief in the department of roads and bridges who had once visited the Persian court.

The prince is reported to have tried twice staying out all night, but sleuths at the Majestic Hotel stopped him at the outer door and firmly took him back to the parlor of his luxurious suite, with instructions to remain in his proper place, as guarding a prince wasn't a job in which details could be overlooked.

Prince Mohammed's reply may have been inaccurately reported, but it was something to the effect that he would swap jobs with them for a night or two, with plenty of gold to boot, if the husky detectives would only let him have a glimpse of Paris at night and the Montmartre belles whose predecessors had so charmed earlier Parsian rulers.

CANADA-ENGLAND FLEET OF OIL BURNERS IS PLAN

Four-Day Schedule Is Speed Dominion Aims At.

London, Oct. 7.—A scheme for running a fleet of oil burning steamers between Canada and England on a four-day schedule is nearly completed, according to the Canadian Chamber of Commerce here. The vessels will make 26 knots and will carry 600 first class and 3,000 second-class passengers. The plan provides for eight ships of 50,000 tons each.

The service, as planned, will be confined to Canadian routes, but it is to be extended later to all parts of the empire, so that a journey from Liverpool to Sidney via alifax and across Canada by rail will be accomplished in 20 days, or two-thirds of the present time.

CONTINUE NET TOURNEY TODAY

Downpour Swamped Hunt Club Courts Yesterday.

Rain yesterday morning and afternoon prevented further play in the big Western Ontario championship tennis tournament on the courts of the London Hunt and Country Club. In fact, the rain had such an effect that officials of the tournament considered it wise to change the scene of conflict to the Thames Park courts. These courts are cement and if no further rain falls play will be commenced early this morning, beginning with the third round of the men's singles.

Probably Go To Monday.

The tournament will not likely be completed today, as only the third round of the men's singles and doubles, the second round of the mixed doubles have been completed. The ladies' singles event was to have been started yesterday morning at 11:30.

If no further rain falls the men's singles and doubles should be completed this afternoon.

COMPLETELY FREE OF CONSTIPATION

Tried for Years to Find Relief

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" GAVE IT

Chronic Constipation or insufficient action of the bowels is one of the great causes of disease. Some authorities even claim that Constipation cannot be permanently corrected. This is a great mistake, because here is the proof that constipation can be cured and the bowels made to act regularly and naturally.

Yarmouth, N. S.

"For years I was troubled with Constipation, and had to take laxatives and purgatives all the time. If I neglected to take these, the bowels would refuse to do their work.

About two years ago, a friend advised me to try 'Fruit-a-tives,' which I did. The first box helped me so much that I obtained further supplies of the remedy and continued the treatment. After using about eight boxes my bowels were able to perform their particular function without aid.

"The relief in my case has been lasting, as up to date I have never had any further trouble. I can recommend 'Fruit-a-tives' to all suffering as I did, and I am sure they will derive equal benefit."

A. W. FRANKLIN.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c, or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives, Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

GIRL HURLED TO DEATH ON LAST REFUSAL TO WED

Detroit River Dragged by Police in Effort To Recover Body.

FOREIGNER IS SUSPECT

DETROIT, Oct. 7.—The police were still dragging the Detroit River late Friday night for the body of a girl believed to be Gertrude Tietz, 14 years old, of 2652 Crane avenue, who disappeared from home Thursday and whose description tallies in many respects with that of a girl who was seized by a swarthy foreigner and thrown to her death over the railing of Belle Isle Bridge into the darkness of the stream below.

George Gineku, 7170 Jefferson avenue east, and Petey Carli, 1202 Woodward avenue, fishermen tending lines with two companions, gave police descriptions of the girl and the slayer which they are using in a city-wide hunt.

A murderous impulse, prompted by the girl's refusal to wed the man, is believed to have caused the killing. Gineku declared that the couple were in angry discussion when they passed his post in the center of the span between the draw and Belle Isle.

Gineki, nearer the pair than the others, heard the man shout: "If you don't marry me now, you never will," saw him clutch the girl violently and hurl the screaming figure into the stream below.

Her cries for help died before assistance arrived.

With Gineki and Carli were O. C. Kelly, 1657 Scott street; Joseph Porter, 3918 Sixteenth street, and Herbert Cook, 20 Montcalm street west. They agree on descriptions of the pair involved in the tragedy.

The man is said to be a little under six feet tall, weighing about 170 pounds. He was between 35 and 40 years old, had a dark suit and dark slouch hat. His hair was black, and he had a dark, bushy moustache. His complexion was swarthy. The girl wore a dark blue suit and a wide-brimmed hat.

A rumor that the man had himself jumped into the river between the draw and Jefferson avenue was discredited by police. Various theories were formed by investigators, one being that the man was the girl's father, and had become angered at her disobedience, but the fishermen's theory that the girl's refusal to wed her companion prompted the slaying is generally accepted.

Couple Pass Fishermen.

Police place particular credence in Carli's description. Carli had completed fixing his lines for the night, the bridge fishermen being accustomed to tie their lines and call early in the morning for their catch.

The man and girl passed him going north while he fixed his cord. Carli returned to his lines after starting once for the mainland. The couple also returned, going toward the island.

The stopped as they passed, and the man asked: "Are you fishing?" Carli replied that he was, and got a good look at his face and general appearance. He would recognize him if he saw him again, he believes. The girl did not speak when the pair stopped.

A moment later Carli, who had rejoined Kelly further up the bridge, saw the pair run by, the girl screaming. He did not see the girl thrown into the river, but heard the other fishermen describe the slaying.

FIXED ASSESSMENT IS GRANTED SILVERWOOD

Chatham City Council Approve $10,000 For Term of Years.

CHATHAM, Oct. 7.—The city council in special session this morning passed two bylaws. One was granting the Silverwood Company a fixed assessment of ten thousand dollars for a term of years as an inducement for the said company to locate here. The company proposes to establish an artifical ice plant in the city. The other bylaw was for the closing and sale of a section of Tecumseh road to the Dominion Sugar Company.

A notice was also authorized to be sent to the C. W. & L. E. Railway Company ordering them to put their tracks on St. Clair street north in proper condition, as it is proposed to pave that street next spring.

Washington Glad Canada Will Delegate Men To Arms Parley

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 7.—Gratification was manifested at the state department today at the announcement that the British delegation at the conference for the limitation of armaments and Far Eastern subjects would include representatives of the Dominion governments, but officials appeared surprised at the assertion attributed to Premier Hughes of Australia that the United States had "slammed the door," when an endeavor had been made to obtain separate representation for the dominions.

It was said to be incredible that such a declaration had been made by the Australian premier, as no communications on that subject between dominion governments and the United States Government had been exchanged, and could not properly have been sincere; such an interchange might be promptly resented by the British foreign office as a violation of diplomatic usage.

There has been an assumption at the state department that the British Government might naturally desire representation from the Dominion Governments and the inclusion of delegates from Melbourne and other overseas seats of government has caused no surprise.

The difference in the size of the British delegation resulting from such representation will have no effect upon the finding of the conference, since it is a meeting of Government delegations and not only a body in which the votes of the individual members will affect the results.

Melbourne

MELBOURNE, Oct. 7.—With ideal weather the Melbourne Fair proved to be one of the best ever held. Thousands of people flocked to the grounds to see the sights and visit their friends.

The vegetables and fruits were of splendid variety. Potatoes were superior to last year and did not look as though there would be a shortage. The apples were a splendid exhibit and of excellent quality.

The baking contest proved to all visitors that the ladies of this vicinity are excellent housewives. The first prize for best dinner was awarded to Mrs. Henry Mullins.

Among the prize-winners in bread-making were: Neil McLean, Dan Johnston, John Near; butter, Henry Mullins; Charles Millers, Wm. Lewis.

Ladies' work, Miss Black, Mrs. McCutcheon, Miss Mather, Mrs. Campbell, Miss Fisher, Miss Leach, Miss Hardy.

Horses—A. Fletcher, H. Fletcher, T. Hardy, A. Danedder, R. Alexander, B. C. Hoover, Ed. Andrews, D. McMillan, J. McPheddran, A. Stevenson, H. Mullens, J. Mullens, A. Johnston.

Sheep—D. Campbell, Johnston Bros.

Pigs—J. Scott.

Lady drivers—D. A. Campbell, John Coveny, N. McGugan.

Poultry—H. McArthur.

The Strathroy band furnished the music for the day, and every feature of the fair was a grand success. An accident to Mr. Harris, who was thrown from his cart while driving in one of the races, to some extent marred the occasion. One leg, and a rib were reported broken. The injured man was removed to his home at Lambeth. Later reports say that he is improving, although suffering greatly. The day closed with a dance in the Woodman Hall, about 300 being present. The Fisher orchestra furnished the music.

While practicing for the school field day Jennie Robinson fell, hurting her back to such an extent that it was necessary to take her to her home on a stretcher. No bones were broken but it will be necessary for her to remain in bed for a few days.

Sugar beets are coming in freely, the fine weather making the work of harvesting and hauling them comparatively easy. The quality of the beets is better than at first expected. The average yield will run from ten to fifteen tons per acre. The season is about three weeks earlier than previous years.

Work on the provincial highway is progressing favorably. The 3rd Concession, Camden, is now closed for a few days, holding up some of the farmers who were hauling beets. About half the amount of work planned for this fall is completed. Today the work is held up until more gravel is brought in by boat.

Miss Stirling defending her title today, was matched against Mrs. C. H. Vanderbeck, Philadelphia, and eastern champion.

The other semi-final match was between Miss Marion Hollins of New York and Miss Elaine Rosenthal of Chicago.

YOU HAVE A BEAUTILUL FACE BUT YOUR NOSE

BEFORE AFTER

IN THIS DAY AND AGE attention to your appearance is an absolute necessity if you expect to make the most out of life. Not only should you wish to appear as attractive as possible, for your own self-satisfaction, which is alone well worth your efforts, but you will find the world in general judging you greatly, if not wholly, by your "looks," therefore it pays to "look your best" at all times. Permit no one to see you looking otherwise; it will injure your welfare! Upon the impression you constantly make rests the failure or success of your life. Which is to be your ultimate destiny? My latest Nose-Shaper, "Trades Model 25," U. S. Patent, with six adjustable pressure regulators, and made of light polished metal, corrects now ill-shaped noses without operation, quickly, safely and permanently. Diseased cases accepted. Does not interfere with one's work, being worn at night.

For Continuous Hot Water Service In Your Home

Again leading all hydro municipalities —and that means the world—in the development of practical means of improving living conditions, through the use of electricity, the Public Utilities Commission of London today announces that—

You may now have installed in your home a perfected water heater that makes obsolete the coil in the furnace, the water-front in the kitchen range, or the so-called instantaneous heaters operated by high-priced gas.

At a reasonable cost, varying slightly according to the extent of wiring and piping charges necessary, you may have your tank equipped with a One-Horse Power Electric Heater.

The electric current for the heater does not pass through your meter. If you desire, you may leave the switch on night and day throughout the year. The charge for electricity is $3 per month, with a 10 per cent discount for prompt payment. In other words, a continuous supply of hot water in bath, kitchen or laundry for only $2.70 a month.

Larger heaters to provide for the extraordinary needs of large familes, apartment houses or institutions installed on correspondingly favorable terms.

Lloyd George To Meet Labor On Unemployment Question

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The vital question of unemployment was considered today by a joint conference of the joint general council of the Trades Union Congress, Labor party executive and Labor memmbers of Parliament, during a two-hour session. In answer to a request from Mr. Lloyd George, the Laborites replied that they would appoint a committee to meet the prime minister early next week to confer regarding practical measures for dealing with what is considered as the present "national emergency."

The cabinet also discussed the question at its afternoon session in an endeavor to put forward a plan which is now in its early stages.

The Laborites' reply to Mr. Lloyd George said a committee would be appointed to "explain our proposals and examine any made by the Government, but not as members of any joint committee including financiers and employers, as suggested by you. . . . Nor can our representatives be held responsible for the policy ultimately adopted by the Government."

Mr. Lloyd George replied in the afternoon that he would be glad to meet the committee "early next week." The conference then decided to send a further letter to the prime minister, which expressed surprise that he had failed to arrange an immediate meeting. The letter concluded:

"Our representatives have been appointed on the assumption that you probably would wish to meet them today, and the conference reassembled this afternoon in that belief."

What the Press Agents Say About the Shows

AT THE GRAND.

Today will be the last picture showing at the Grand Opera House for some weeks, for on Monday the first of a series of the biggest road attractions ever playing London comes to that theatre.

"The Son of Wallingford," the funny pageant picture which has pleased throngs all week, gets its last showing today. In addition, the management has booked as an extra attraction a Jimmy Aubrey comedy, "His Jonah Day."

Miss Lina Craine, soprano, will be heard in song recitals at all three performances today.

First Big Road Show.

The first of the big road attractions to come on Monday for a three-day stay, with matinee on Wednesday, is "French Leave," an irresistible comedy which comes direct from a five-months run in London. "French Leave" is one of the really big English companies which Trans-Canada Theatres has secured for a Canadian engagement. It has already played in Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa, in each of which cities it was accepted as one of the finest high class attractions ever seen in a Canadian theatre. The story in brief deals with the adventures of an English wife, who bamboozles a blustering old officer to give her husband leave of absence. The result is a series of complicated situations for all concerned, and in its finality there is produced one of the funniest comedies ever staged.

"French Leave" will be presented with the same big, notable cast which contributed so materially to its success in London, England. Walter Edwin, who heads the male characters, is one of England's funniest comedians, while Miss Surtees, the leading lady, is a London favorite. The people who have been asking that London should get some of the really big road attractions should have their desire filled by the companies booked for next week.

A GALSWORTHY PLAY.

William A. Brady, in association with the Reandean Company of London, will present "The Skin Game," John Galsworthy's internationally successful play, at the Grand for three days commencing Thursday next, and including a special matinee on Saturday, October 15.

The production is a duplicate of the one which was seen for over a year at St. Martin's Theatre, London, and the cast of English players has been selected by Basil Dean, the English manager, with the entire approval of Galsworthy himself.

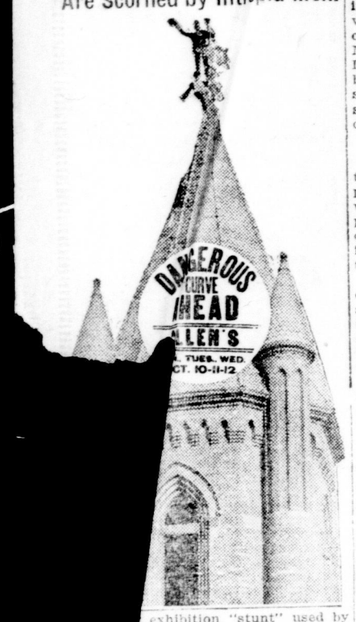

"The Skin Game" comes here after long and brilliantly successful engagements. In London it has recently concluded a year's engagement, and it comes here after having duplicated in New York the triumph it achieved on its orignal production in England.

Described by Galsworthy as a tragi-comedy, "The Skin Game" is a brilliantly written, intensely interesting, wholly human play of class conflict. Its appeal is universal, applicable alike to America, England or wherever men are striving to accomplish their ends, and the old order clashes with the new.

The feud between the Hillcrists and the Hornblowers, and its tragic consequences for all concerned, is dramatically disclosed by Galsworthy in a play which adds new lustre to one of the most famous names in contemporary English literature.

"The Skin Game" will be interpreted here by a distinguished cast, which includes Reginald Dance, Aileen Wyse, Audrey Cameron, Matthew Boulton, Stephanie d'Este, Russell Sedgwick, Francis Roberts, Arthur C. Crosby, Lister Williams, Walter Jackman, Frank Snell, Nora Nicholson, Lindon Lang and Uric Collins.

AT ALLEN'S.

"DANGEROUS CURVE AHEAD" SCREEN VERSION OF RUPERT HUGHES' POPULAR STORY, AT THE ALLEN MONDAY.

If you take your work at the office more seriously than the business of loving your wife—look out—"Dangercus Curve Ahead." "Dangerous Curve Ahead," the feature photoplay at the Allen Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, is an adaptation of Rupert Hughes' popular story of the same name, which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post a short time ago. The trials, problems and joys of engaged, newly-married and young married couples are humanly and truthfully portrayed in this delightful comedy-drama of married life.

"Dangerous Curve Ahead" is positively one of the most intense stories ever told, well acted, and containing several innovations that alone lift the picture from the commonplace. Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix head a very capable cast, and are ably supported by "Lefty" Flynn, of Yale athletic fame, James Neill, Edythe Chapman and Kate Lester.

Among the added attractions will be shown another grouch - dispelling "Snub" Pollard comedy, "Late Lodgers"; Allen News; Beatrice O'Leary, Canada's supreme soprano; Allen's concert orchestra. Baby show, Monday matinee. Be sure to bring the babies.

"GENERAL POST," BIG SPECIAL BRITISH PRODUCTION, AT THE ALLEN THURSDAY NEXT.

"General Post," the first of the big special British productions, which will be the feature attraction at the Allen the latter three days of next week, is a delightful story of "snobbery repentant." This popular play made a great hit when it was produced on the stage during the great world war. The story deals with the daughter of Sir Dennis Broughton, a wealthy and proud aristocrat, good-natured, but not brainy. He worshiped the family tree. So did his adored son, Alec. But so did not their daughter, Betty, a vivacious girl of high-strung nature, with a democratic, somehow or other in her gentle blood. Betty is in love with Edward Smith, a courteous, well-spoken, manly man, a tailor by trade—to the disgust and horror of her family, who hate her mingling with the "riff-raff." All this happened before the great war broke out, at the first of which Edward Smith enlists for active service, and through his valiant services receives a commission. Sir Dennys Broughton also enlists, but does not attain any rank, going to France as a private. The game takes a startling turn when young Broughton comes home in the company of his commanding officer, who is none other than Edward Smith, who has risen in the ranks to a colonel, also having on the Victoria Cross. This changes the attitude of Sir Dennys Broughton and his family, who now cater to the ex-tailor, and everything turns out happily, as every good story should, by the hero marrying the heroine. Among the added attractions will be shown another of those rip-roaring Booth Tarkington comedies, "The Skipper's Flirtation," Allen New, and a special musical program by Allen's Concert Orchestra.

FRANK MAYO, the hero of romance, in his latest picture, "The Shark Master," at the Patricia, next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

Grew Players Will Put On "Trail of Lonesome Pine."

Dear to the heart of thousands of booklovers and theatregoers throughout the United States and Canada is the "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," a story of life in the wilds; a story of love and intrigue; a story that grips the heart strings and creates lofty emotions. Not only has the story been done in prose, but a song, that was popular in every town and city in America, that was sold, played and sang probably as many times as any popular song ever produced, was written around it.

And this is the wonderful story, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," that the Wm. A. Grew players will produce at the Majestic Theatre all next week for Londoners.

And now that the reader has been told that this favorite old story will be portrayed in London at the Majestic by the Wm. A. Grew players it is hardly necessary to add anything more, because the combination of this gripping drama and the well-known ability of the Grew players will assure theatre patrons of a treat all next week and an afternoon or evening well spent any time they visit the theatre.

"Wedding Bells," which has been on the boards all this wek, has been a decided hit, and has been greeted by unusually large houses every night.

Additional players from New York have been recently added to the Grew players in this city, and it can be said without fear of contradiction that at the Majestic Theatre in London the class of productions being staged are on a par with those of any stock company playing anywhere in America.

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" will be produced every night next week, with special matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. On Monday night the usual offer of two seats for the price of one will hold good.

AT LOEW'S.

NITA NALDI NOTED ACTRESS IN FINE "LIFE" ROLE.

Nita Naldi, a well-known actress of stage and screen who scored a great success in support of John Barrymore, in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," a Paramount picture which has become a screen classic, has an excellent vamp role in William A. Brady's melodrama picture, "Life," released by Paramount, which will be the feature at the Loew Theatre next Monday. According to New York reviewers, her characterization is one of the outstanding features of this massive production.

Miss Naldi is seen as Muriel Barrisford, an adventuress, in the story. Muriel is extravagant, coldly calculating and lends herself to the audacious schemes of Ralph Stuyvestant, son of a wealthy broker, and her admirer, and of Thomas Burnett, a rascally member of the Stuyvestant firm, to fasten a crime on Billy Reid, the hero. Her portrayal of this unusually dramatic vamp role is said to reveal her as a thorough artist who has few if any superiors in her especial line of work.

In addition to "Life," the program will include a Mack Sennett Comedy. "Hard Knocks"; Loew's Screen Pictorial; Vaudeville, and special musical selections by Loew's Big Concert Orchestra.

LYTELL RETURNS TO TOIL OF ADAM—STAR OF "A TRIP TO PARADISE" HAS MANY FOLLOWERS IN TAKING UP GARDENING AT LOEW'S TODAY.

The Hollywood, Cal., motion picture colony has a reformer in its midst; a secret sort of reformer, who issues no propaganda, makes no speeches, denounces nobody, but goes quietly about his business of making converts—just by force of example. The reformer is Bert Lytell, the Metro star. And gradually he's leading many a wanderer back to the simple life.

Bert denies any intention of reforming anybody, but once a man starts setting an example, it's contagious; people just fall into line. Bert's particular line is gardening and his garden at Hollywood has become the principal object of his attention and affections. "It's rewarding as far as I'm concerned," he explained. "Just getting back to the soil seems to bring a new lease of life. And it's surprising what an exciting occupation gardening can be. If you concentrate and study your own garden, you get to know every little bud that's there, and, in their growth you find the whole miracle of life.

"I had never gone in for it before this season, but now I'm just beginning to find out what I've been missing all the time. Now I never miss a day."

Mr. Lytell's newest starring vehicle, "A Trip to Paradise," is a Maxwell Karger production, adapted by Benjamin F. Glazer from Molnar's Hungarian drama. The scenario is by June Mathis.

AT THE PATRICIA.

SCOTCH MINER IS SPORTSMAN, ATHLETE AND MARKSMAN.

Buck Jones, the popular motion picture star, who defies danger, fate, and, at times, the law of gravitation, comes to the Patricia Theatre next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, in his latest picture, "Get Your Man," a cleverly constructed vehicle for the intrepid Jones

In "Get Your Man" Bick's experiences extend from hair-raising incidents in a coal mine in Scotland to adventure in the Canadian Northwest, where the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police have won an enviable place in the world's hall of fame.

When we first see Buck, in the role of Jock McTier, he is a foreman of a coal mine. He is in love, but the paymaster of the mining company wins the girl. Jock disappears, but later turns up in Northwestern Canada, where he soon becomes a member of the Mounties.

The lawlessness of the early days in that section of the country, the experiences and indomitable courage of the Mounted Police, and the unusual development of an odd love affair constitute excellent material for a most alluring drama.

Jones not only depicts the quiet, hardy and determined Scotchman, but when he joins the Mounted Police his masterful ability as horseman and marksman is brought into play, and he fairly revels in the game of running down crime.

The story of "Get Your Man" is by Alan Sullivan, and the direction by George William Hill.

Take a Storage Tip From Nature

Centuries ago Nature stored heat-making qualities in the coal seams of America for the use of the American public today. She did not wait until this heat was needed; she stored it up against the hour of that need.

Wise householders follow her example and store their winter's coal early. Transportation from the mine to the bin functions better today than it can when cold weather comes.

Wet Fall Weather Caused Hike To Coal Yards of City

Did the cool weather of the past week force you to hike off to your favorite coal yard?

Many folks had such an experience, and many found that the coal was not forthcoming on a moment's notice, for they were not the only ones who were seeking a last-minute supply and they had to await their turn.

The weather situation today is such that those who have not a supply of coal in their coal bins or in their cellar are gambling with their own comfort and health.

The cool, wet and damp fall period is by far the most unpleasant of the whole year. It is a forerunner of the coal blasts of winter, and the very thought of it makes one feel much colder than they really are. For this reason it is just playing "safety first" to take it for granted that this weather is going to continue and rush in all the fuel possible, a whole winter's supply if it can be financed.

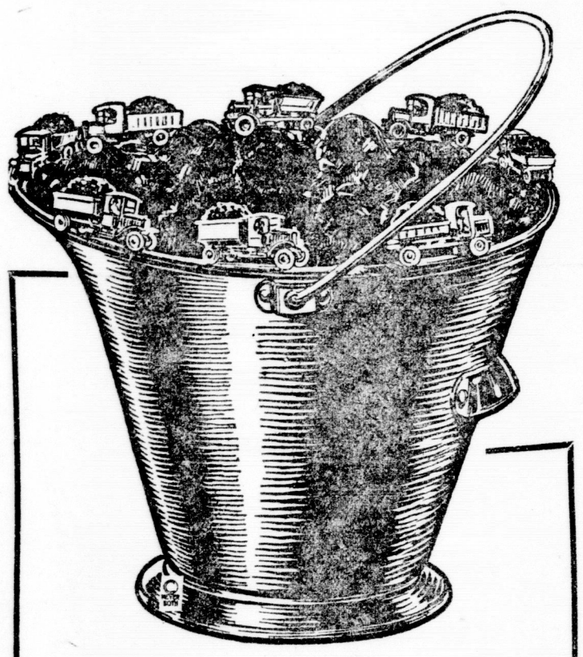

The coal dealers of London today are fairly well stocked as compared with other years, but the coal is going out fairly fast.

"We can deliver coal now and will be able to do so for same time," said one coal dealer. "But don't let the people believe that there is going to be an abundance of coal. There really may be a scarcity."

How come? may be the question.

Anything may happen. Certain it is, production at the mines is behind other years. This may be a factor. There may be a railroad strike. This menace still hangs on the horizon.

And the price will not go down. It is hardly likely that it will go up, unless the demand comes to the point of greatly exceeding the supply. So the dealers have not much to gain by pressing for early buying. They are considering the welfare of their customers only.

No Let-Up In Quality

The one factor which is guarded carefully and never allowed to vary is the high quality of the ANTHRACITE sold by the WILLIAM A. MARTIN COAL COMPANY.

The supply may vary according to mining and transportation conditions, but the quality, determined with scientific exactness, is always high.

Only an organization composed of experienced, capable men and women, who are carrying out with enthusiasm the plans and policies of the owner, and buying direct from the producers (nothing from brokers or commission men) could maintain a uniform high standard of quality, a constant supply for its customers, and a price never above $17.50 during the shortage last year. This is our record.

Mrs. Asquith's Summary of Career And Aspirations Bares Margot's Unfettered Childhood and Youth

Wife of the ex-Premier of Great Britain's Latest Book Gives Piquant Details of Her Meeting With a Real Man and Found Her Greatest Happiness in the Love of Children and Being Friend to Leaders of Men in All Lands.

First and foremost, exampling the Goddesses of Things-as-they-are-and-ought-not-to-be, we are confronted with Margot and the Asquithians.

It is easy to agree that the autobiography offends innate modesty, that it was written with an eye on the publisher's check and the subsequent royalties; that it is in many places—places unkind and flippant—frank to indecency, and, from the standpoint of good taste, a mistake. It is possible to go further in condemnation even than the gentleman himself. But some of the proofs upon which he bases his dictum seem to me to be ill-chosen.

As the very worst of these, he emphasizes Mrs. Asquith's own summary of her history and aspirations:

"An unfettered childhood, and triumphant youth; a bit of love-making, and a little abuse; a little fame, and more abuse; a real man, and great happiness; the love of children, and the seventh heaven; an early death, and a crowded memorial service."

It isn't the fact that she found her seventh heaven in the love of children, that strikes him; but her desire (which he has italicized) for a crowded memorial service. He comments "As she has sown, so shall she reap" (I can fancy M. A. Y. "Exactly!") "What vulgarity!—dare not be alone with herself even at the grave!" In a quoted passage, Asquith notes: "I felt his (Jowett) warnings much as a duck swimming would feel the cluckings of a hen on the bank."

The gentleman, who turns aside from his self-purpose to sarcastically remark that this apt illustration is "a thing hardly impossible for anyone to achieve if he might take time to consider if he were able to be anything but alone in the world." But the desire to be bravely companioned on the way there—to have the gathering include many of the famous and something of the interest of the Downing Street parties attractive and attractive—there is nothing very warm and human, and withal, rather touching in this—yes, and humble, too, if you look with an unprejudiced eye.

Margot does he always choose his confidences with discretion. The story told with pride about Mrs. Graham on page 53 rather discounts the horror related of Miss Tennant on page 54. (Though the gentleman's jaundiced mind seems to have missed the real point of the story.) After all, each recounts a moral mistake—out of which both fortunate ladies came scarthless.

The advice so generously given to the Prince of Wales is rather a backhanded compliment—though advice of an excellent one indeed! But in so long a list of appreciated Englishwomen, and so just an understanding of the stately homes of England and all they represent, it is a noticeable omission that there is no mention of the Queen; or of the royal family that has done so much to carry on the environment and tradition that the gentleman so heartily admires. Nothing in fact, but the homily that would place the Prince of Wales in the position of an advisory-bored!

As a representative man of fashion, the might of whose pen is interchangeable with that of his sword, the gentleman has chosen Col. Repington, author of "The First World War." A book, which, in its own field, is already reckoned by many as a text-book, and a classic.

Any man might envy—any woman fall in love with—the generous and handsome reflection "the glass" gives of this man of the world. That it may not be mistaken for anything but the outline of a whitened sepulchre, it is headed with this quotation from Anton Tchekov: "We have neither immediate duty, nor remote aims, and in our soul there is a great empty space."

And to prove the real character of the gallant colonel, the writer ignores all the solid reason with which the book is written, and quotes—only passages for the Peeping Toms.

The author states that Col. Repington "rendered this country very considerable services for which we must ever pay him the tribute of a profound gratitude—in only one military particular was his judgment ever in fault—never once did he consult his own leisure or convenience—persistently served this country, and this country's allies at every crisis in the war."

The gentleman's theory is that "the test of an idea is the way it works." "Are these people useful?" And again: "Are they happy?" he asks in tones of piercing scorn. For Col. Repington's own answer he quotes from the diaries:

"Lady Randolph and I agreed that if we began again at 17, we should do the same as we had done—only more so! Then we decided that we could not have done more so if we tried."

I should have said that (whatever one might say about selfishness) that man considered himself happy. I should have concluded, from the paragraph above, that he might have been considered useful. But the gentleman decides that these people are neither, and avers that "while they march at the head of things, they are, first and foremost, our enemies."

Isaiah was one of the earlier exponents of the megaphonic method for morality, along the highways of history.

"And in that day did the Lord of Hosts call to weeping and to mourning; and to baldness; and to girding with sack cloth?

"And behold! Joy and gladness, slaying oxen, and killing sheep; eating flesh, and drinking wine. 'Let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die. . . Rise up, ye women that are at ease; hear my voice, ye careless daughters; be troubled, ye careless ones. . . And it was revealed unto me by the Lord of Hosts, surely this iniquity shall not be purged from you till ye die.'"

It is, in fact, just what all the prophets, saints and sages, have been crying down the Ages. And though unheeded, they were almost invariably correct. Isaiah's language probably irritated those of his careless contemporaries who listened to it—but its magnificence has stood the test of time. It outdoes the modern manner.

KUBELIK PRIZES VIOLIN MORE SINCE SHIPWRECK

Coddles Stradivarius, Valued at $100,000, Like Baby.

London, Oct. 8.—Jan Kubelik, the violinist, after a shipwreck, prizes more highly than ever his famous Stradivarius. When asked to pose for the movies in the Hyde Park Hotel he assented, but set the stage carefully. He closed and locked the door, pulled down the windows so no damaging draughts could hit his precious instrument, and then he got his fiddle from a bolted cabinet and, handling it like a mother would a child, undressed it.

The instrument appeared in flannels which looked like pyjamas. The artist insists that the violin is his fortune aside from the value of $100,000 which he places on it. When the ship on which he was a passenger, the John Breydel, rammed and sunk another in the channel a few days ago, he attached his violin in all its wrappings to a life buoy.

Mme. Tetrazzini, who is singing here, also posed for the movies at the Savoy Hotel. She said it was the first time in her life that she has had this experience.

"WUXTRA."

If your liver has got sluggish or your blood is getting thin,
Take a waltz down to the 'Tiser when the baseball news comes in.
You don't need to travel to New York and hire a rooter box,
For the game is told in detail by a powerful "Magnavox,"
Which repeats the news correctly as it comes by dot and dash,
And when the last run's added, and the hot wire signals "Flash,"
It is then you see real team work crowned with well deserved success.

As every man leaps to his place to get the news to press,
The pressmen waiting for the "plates" yell, "Buddy, let 'em come."
And the waiting newsboys shout with glee when the press begins to hum.

And the kids yell, "Gimme 30," "Gimme 20," "Gimme 9,"
It is scarce nine minutes since the "flash," but o'er the traffic roar
The 'Tiser kids are shouting, "Wuxtra paper! Wuxtra, Sor?"

"Little Miss Melody" Is a Lovable Tale of Country

"Little Miss Melody" is the just-out story by Marian Keith (McClelland & Stewart), and a lovable story it is.

Janet was just eleven, and her father was the minister at Cherry Hill—a wandering shepherd when the story opens, for he had gone to seek health among the California poppies. Janet and her mother were left to entertain the "substitute," take care of him, and uphold his hands—ministering to the inner man with the help of Kirsty, who ruffled and ruled the family by turns, from her capacious kitchen.

Janet could not stand still long enough to uphold anything! And though nothing escaped being caught in the net cast by her roving eye; it generally went rolling off her slippery tongue again, whether the moment was auspicious or not.

The minister in Janet's household had need to be a circumspect sould. It was like living in a glass house!

And so unfolds the tale of the little Canadian village, with the world in miniature—growth, understanding, rivalry, heartburnings, happiness and citizenship—represented by the school, of which Janet (the "Silent Singer," but the audible actor) was so moving a spirit.

The earnest, humorous, generous, high-ideaied young minister; the eager little girl, full of love, impulse and (often misdirected) energy; the kind and clever, but preoccupied mother (who perhaps had the misfortune to be born grown-up); the girls of the village; the bright particular star, who returned at intervals to dazzle and delight them all; Old Watty; and the relations who run so true to type; the Kellys down the lane; Pepper; Blackie, and Tommy Duck; (I don't believe that he's a changeling—he's the real thing!) Possibly they are not "creations," certainly they are true pictures of the people in the hearty, healthy Canadian countryside, taking their natural way through these pages. Some may be plain—some dull—some cross-grained. But they are balanced by the generous, the humorous, the kind and the occasionally beautiful.

Mrs. MacGregor is doing a genuine service to this country in preserving this accurate picture of rural Canada, in all its homely, hopeful, happy, hard-working verity.

If the women and girls who are coming to this country could be given a course in these books before they emigrate, they would arrive with a far fuller and juster comprehension of what they are coming to than they can gather from the immigration literature at present supplied to them.

"Spoilers of the Valley," Typical Tale of the West

Eileen Pederstone, alone at night in the little bungalow on the hill above Vernock, was roused by a sharp summons at the door, and opened it fearlessly to admit a hunted and wounded man. The instinct of protection triumphing over fear and suspicion, caused her to hide him—in the woodbox!—and to turn his pursuers off his trail.

Escaping for the time being, but later caught and returned to the penitentiary, Philip Ralston receives his delayed release.

Embittered, but not permanently, and strong in the knowledge of his own release, he returns to Vernock, the town that holds the man who caused him to suffer in his stead, and the girl with whom he has fallen in love at first sight. Here—as a Blacksmith—he sets about his rehabilitation of soul and body.

Brenchfield, the man who ruined him, knows him, and determines to break him utterly. But Philip is not afraid. Trusting to Luck, and the right, and a bit of bluff, he defies Brenchfield to do his worst.

Eilen also soon becomes aware of his identity; but after the first shock she determines to give him all the help in her power. Her father is returned as Member representing his district in the Provincial House, and Eileen accompanies him to Victoria. The graft and "Partyism," as well as the fine points and high ideals that exist in Canadian politics, as well brought out, and the posibilities of the future are alluringly sketched. The problem of foreign labor is presented with no uncertain touch; and the Western social life and the under current of reckless rapaciousness thread in and out of an interesting, well-written modern romance. The underground exit for stolen goods, the wild chase after the thieves, the complicity of some of the pursuers, and the dramatic ending to the pursuit, make good reading. The "David and Jonathan" picture of Philip and Jim Langford, alias Captain Payne Plunkett, the writer of Penny Dreadfuls, and Aunt Christina, of Advice to the Lovelorn, is a delightful and amusing picture of friendship and fortune, presented in "Spoilers of the Valley" (McClelland & Stewart). The author, Robert Watson, is one of the rising Canadian writers, covering a better known and more believable field than that so industriously cultivated by James Oliver Curwood.

THE COMPLEAT EGOIST.

The Publisher's note tells us of "Vera," the latest book by "Elizabeth," of "German Garden" fame (S. B. Gundy, Toronto), that "no one else could have written it. You will have to read it yourself, for no one else could tell you what was in it."

"Hear, hear!" to the first sentence; the second considerably cramps the Reviewer's style. If I were to tell baldly—— but I won't. Told baldly, no one could begin to believe it. This is the story of a Compleat Egoist and an Innocent Heart. "Don't get excited—and don't get misled." No young girls are led astray from the straight and narrow; no young reputations are ruined. The same man marries (successively, not bigamously) two charming and attractive girls. The first wife never appears except as an entity—vanished yet present. The second realizes her more acutely than her husband ever did. The book is written with "Elizabeth's" intense insight, and all that subtle simplicity of language that distils for the reader the essence of Lucy's dear heart and burgeoning brain. The Author has the supreme faculty of translating the personality of the first person into the detachment of the third. And the delineation of "Aunt Dot" is a gem of the first water. All the same, it is a tragic and painful book. For Lucy there can be no outcome without lasting hurt. There is, of course, a useful lesson in it for the Compleat Egoist. But the C. E. will never see it. In which lies food for thought.

If you do not recognize yourself as closely related to Wemyss—does it follow that you are in reality his Twin Soul?

Marion Keith, London Authoress, Tells How Her Pen Name Was Selected On Impulse of Moment

Won Prize Offered in Orillia High School When a Girl For Best Story Dealing With an Incident in Canadian History—Continued Her Literary Efforts When She Took Up School Teaching—Speaks in Glowing Terms of Advertiser Book Page and All It Stands For.

[By Kathleen K. Bowker.]

Once upon a time there was a dear little girl who lived in a country village in the county of Simcoe. She was a busy little person, with observant brown eyes and an active brain beneath her cropped hair, for she was years ahead of the fashion, and wore hers short long before the rest of us thought about doing it that way. Perhaps that habit of "airing her thinks" was what made her thoughts grow in a peculiarly pleasant pattern. She caught the echo of the tune that the morning stars sang together—and it made her happy.

She had lots to do, between working at her lessons, and roving the hills and dales. For she was the youngest of a large family—and there is no one so busy as the one who is allowed to "run away and play." But in between times she wrote—and wrote—and wrote—oh, wonderful wild tales, patterned on Family Herald lines, with nobody below the rank of a duke in them. And in case the family would laugh at her (it's a way families have) she used to tuck the multitudinous manuscript under her mattress when she wasn't actually working on it. With the detachment of genius, she never realized what a bulge it made.

One day, the family, lisping in the famous words of the hook-and-eye advertisement, said, "See that hump?"—and flattened it by the simple method of removing the MSS. What they found so pleased them that they dared not take a chance of choking off the source at the spring. So back to the spring it went, with the mattress atop and they took a taste of serial daily, when they turned the beds. It was some time before the budding authoress realized that she had been discovered.

By-and-bye, having moved to Orillia by this time, a prize was offered in the high school for the best story on some incident in Canadian history. It was won by Esther Miller. The story was considered so good that it was published, and the little schoolgirl's fate was fixed.

Took Up Teaching.

Circumstances made it necessary that she should help to bolster the family bank account. So she went on, gathering knowledge by teaching others, studying life at first hand. Perhaps it was this that gave her so deep so sure, a sympathy with them.

That the primrose path of literature was not always in full flower is evidenced by the fact that when Esther and a cousin of like tastes disliked a man they were known to state in hushed voices of horror that he was "as bad as an editor"!

By-and-by however, in between school and work and play the first novel was actually written, and quickly accepted. But there was a lurking difficulty. What should be her pen-name?

"You see," she explained, when pressed about the matter, "at that time there was a series of stories running in the newspapers, written by Esther Miller—the kind of stories on which I had modeled my earliest efforts—the kind of stories I liked"—her eyes twinkled—"but not the kind of which my taste, or my parents, approved. It was clear I could not use my own name, and I simply could not invent one. When the book was almost off the press there was still no visible sign of its parentage. Then the publishers wired—they really must know—

"I was sitting in the schoolroom when I got the telegram, and still no inspiration came. But my little niece was playing in the room, so I just wrote her first two names—'Marian Keith'—on a postcard, and sent it off."

So that was the way in which "Duncan Polite" came to be mothered.

After that editors and publishers appeared in a new light.

Accurate Observation.

Then came "Silver Maple," "Treasure Valley," "Elizabeth of the Dale" and "The Bridegroom," each one beloved by a larger public. Only "The Bridegroom" was not the kind you publish with stiff board covers. He was the kind you publish with banns. And his public know well that he is neither stiff nor bored. Having the right outlook, and the right wife, he can even understand and appreciate the viewpoint of the lady who came sightseeing to London, and announced firmly: 'The one thing I insist upon seeing is Marian Keith's church."

Mrs. MacGregor is one of those fortunate women (perhaps her character had something to do with fashioning the fortune) whose life and work go hand in hand, and her lucky friends find that they can "have her both ways."

Possibly the choosing of her pen-name bore out something of what Marian Keith thinks of her own work.

"My work? It's such a very small step on the ladder of fame. I haven't the creative gift. Mrs. Montgomery, for instance, actually creates her characters; her 'Anne of Green Gables' is the most living person, evolved absolutely out of her own brain. I cannot do that. I take people that I know, put them in certain situations, and, using what I know of their thoughts, characters, reactions, decide what they would do in particular situations. Of course, I change them. The older woman may appear as a young girl, the spinster as a man; but I have a real personality from which to draw."

What price the gift of accurate observation?

But it savored a little of the magic methods of the powerful princesses of the fairy tales. How could I tell (I who sat there!) that I might not appear in Marian Keith's next volume as an "enfant terrible," aged two—or a savage old bachelor? Think of the intense interest!

After the wedding came a longer pause, and then "The End of the Rainbow"—a lovely, symbolical name to choose for the first book written after marriage.

"Orchard Glen" marked the end of the pre-war period. Those who knew Marian Keith during the war years knew that for the time she had leisure, no feeling, for writing books.

"But I love to write! I would write in various different styles if I could—perhaps. But if I can only write in one way, then I want to write that! I don't believe people can write if they do not love the actual labor of it. When I'm alone, or on a holiday, I want to write all day.

"I am so glad about this page. I think that we have a great need in this country of adequate criticism. It is what we lack most, especially in regard to Canadian literature. It generally receives over-praise—or abuse, the unkindness and indifference that kills, or the most fulsome flattery. Can't we enjoy our Canadian authors sensibly—within reason—and appreciate them the more fully for it?"

"We can try," I said. "For instance, I shall not compare you to Walter Pater, nor say that I think you outshine George Eliot."

But I could say ever so much more, if I had the space, about the enjoyments that are left.

Vest Pocket Versions

THE BRIMMING CUP. By Dorothy Canfield (Harcout, Brace & Co., N. Y.) Life in a nutshell. Miss Canfield remembers the heart of a child, as well as she can read that of a mother. A powerful story of human souls, in a simple modern setting. Is a masterly study of a woman standing at the parting of the ways, trying to choose between the love that is tested, and the love that is tempting. As for the mother's—which of them could help welcoming a book that sets forth their case so well, Altogether, a book of rare merit.

ROGUES AND CO. By A. R. Wylie. (Copp, Clark & Co., Toronto). Miss Wylie has written two fine novels, and some delectable short stories, and her admirers seized upon her latest publication with avidity. Ever bite an alleged chocolate, to find it filled with sawdust? This is it!

THE ROOF TREE. By Charles Neville Bucke. (S. B. Gundy, Toronto). The story of a love that was entangled with a veritable Tree of Life, and of the Blood Feuds that used to rack the mountaineers of "Virginny and Kaintuck." How cruel and how senseless—and how serious—those feuds were. But among the hill folk were some fair women and brave men. This tells (and tells well) how two of them worked for the healing of the Clan war.

MOONCALF. By Floyd Oell. (A. F. Knopf, New York). The story of a young American in young America. Much better written than "Main Street," and with a more hopeful view of the Small Town and its Small Souls.

THE THREE EYES. By Maurice le Blanc. (The Macaulay Co., New York). A story of love, mystery, and the supernatural, in a French setting.

MONTAGUE WYCHERLY. By L. Allen Harker. A charming, cheerful, wholesome tale of English life; and the love of clean, kindly people. Well told and comfortably printed. (Macmillan & Co., New York.)

ONE AFTER ANOTHER. By Stacey Aumonier. (Macmillan & Co., New York.) A "follow on" story, written by a Stylist. Interesting, but somewhat overrated.

THE HOUSE OF BALTHAZAR. By Wm. J. Locke. (Ryerson Press, Toronto.) This time Locke's hero is a middle-aged man whose passion for Solitude leads him to the center of an English moor, where he secludes himself with a Chinese attendant; eschews newspapers, and visitors, and "invites his soul." It takes a Bomb to break through, and let in news of the World War. The results are curious and fascinating. One of W. J. L.'s best.

THE PAGAN MADONNA. By Harold MacGrath. (S. B. Gundy, Toronto.) Humorous; unusual; dramatic; one of the best of the modern tales of Love and Adventure.

THE CUSTARD CUP. By Florence Livingston. (Doran & Co., New York.) A good laugh; a cosy feeling; a wonderful picture of a waif; lots of apt aphorisms. Every "woman born to worry as the fur flies upward" should read the chapter on the Fanged Moth. Certainly not a "cup that inebriates"—but equally certainly, it does cheer.

Birthday Honors

Miguel de Cervantes (who had a final name of Saavadra—did you know that?) was born "in Alcala, in Alcala," on the 9th of October, 1547; and died "in Old Madrid" in 1616.

Every schoolboy knows that he wrote "Don Quixote," which has been translated into all the languages of Europe. But it is not such universal knowledge that he was also—a Soldier—a Slave—a Businessman and a Benedict.

His parents, who were apparently honest, though certainly poor, wished him to choose a Profession. But the Muses claimed him for their own, and his teacher encouraged him. He wrote Elegies, Sonnets, Ballads, but as they did not serve to clothe and feed him properly, he went to Italy, became page to a Cardinal, and later a soldier of distinguished courage. He lost his left hand at the Battle of Lepanto, was later captured by a Corsair, and sold into slavery in Algiers. Seven years of servitude seemed only to strengthen his faculties; but in spite of bold plans for regaining his freedom, he did not succeed, being finally ransomed by his family and friends. Whether this strained relationships, encyclopedic history does not relate, but he retired into seclusion in Spain, and devoted his time to study and writing. The publication of a pastoral novel ("Galatea") brought him out into the world, where he soon married. Marriage demanding money, he began to write for the Stage, producing thirty dramas in ten years, of which his tragedy, "Nuncia," was perhaps the best. Not having the particular Stagey touch that appealed to the Spaniards, he "held a small office" at Saville for some years after giving up dramatic writing; and being possibly not overburdened with business, he found time to produce the first portion of the immortal "Don Quixote," in which, hoping to reform the taste and opinion of his countrymen, he ridiculed the flamboyant heroism that obsessed the Spaniards at that time.

"Notwithstanding its prosaic purpose and satirical aim, it is full of genuine poetry." oCldly received at first, it soon gained world-wide applause, the echoes of which haunt the reading public to this day. But the good fortune of the book did not extend to the Author. An unknown writer did him considerable harm by publishing a "Continuation" of Don Quixote, full of abuse of Cervantes. Though cut to the quick, he merely revenged (and justified) himself, by producing the remainder of his masterpiece himself.

During the intervening period he also wrote "Twelve Novels" (comparable to Bocaccio), "Journey to Parnassus," and another novel, published posthumously. He died on the same day as Shakespeare, and was buried without honors—or a tombstone.

And the World says: "An outstanding genius, who produced a Classic." I wonder how Madame Saavadra regarded him.

What's In a Book?

"THE INDISCRETIONS OF ARCHIE"

Archie was an Englishman.
Resembling a String-bean.
Discovering America
(And sev'ral states between).
Wherein he found a lot o' things
Columbus hadn't seen!

Arrived in little old New York
He stopped at an hotel
Whose owner thought it Paradise,
But Archie thought it—well,
The things he found amiss with it
He was not slow to tell!

Relations strained, he flitted south
And "married on" Lucille,
To find that "Poppa" owned the Pub.
That served him his first meal;
If Archie didn't mind it much,
You know how Poppa'd feel!

They camped in Poppa's hostelries,
To his intense chagrin.
But as they had no other means
He had to take them in.
Since Archie—Flower of the Field,
Could neither Toil nor Spin.

"Poppa" preferred relationship
With Archie, to be strained—
And strained?—until no particle
Of residue remained,
Said a "Companion of My Youth,
I feel I could be trained."

Viewed as a Relative, Pep thought
He'd like his Archie strained—
And strained—until no residue
Of him or his remained.
Quoth A.: "Companion of my Youth,
I think I could be trained!"

And his intention were so good!
He took a Poet's Song
And mixed it with a "Greenwich Girl"
And brought the two along.
To Poppa's Pub; and all went right
In spite of being wrong!

He set a "Nutsandpostum" boy
To "beat the world" on pie;
And gravied up a Meatless Home
(O! I'll not tell you why!)
His artless schemes were on the straight
Tho' starting out awry.

He thought to help a lady with
An insect in her eye;
A bulldog bounced him 'neath the bed
(No, I'll not tell you why!)
But he uncoiled the tangled snarl
No other could untie.

So if you want a jolly laugh
As gay as English chintz—
That has a diction all its own—
And lots of happy hints,

OF MOTHER EARTH—

In Manitoba, when the first of the warm spring winds are blowing, it is possible to walk eastwards across the bare brown prairies, where the snow still lingers in the hollows, and to search with eager eyes among the short, dry, winter-wilted herbage for the first signs of spring. And to see—nothing! Nothing but the brittle, brown, wind-swept grasses. Then to turn, to face the low light of the westering sun across the lift of the land—and to be aware that it is set with the buds of the wild crocus, thick and straight and sturdy as trusty little soldiers, in their coats of silvery grey-green fur. The Advance Guard of Spring, arriving by hundreds and thousands in extended order!

Sometimes they come too soon, and are snowed under, never perhaps to bloom that year. Sometimes the wet and freezing winds nip their pale-tinted petals. But certain as Death—or Taxes—or your Mother's love, are the prairie crocuses—untamed, thrifty and thriving, with an etheral color less splendid, but more exquisite, than that of the cultivated variety, and a faint, elusive fragrance.

We used to press and preserve them in a book.

WANDERING FEVER MENACING RUSSIA

Vast Nomadic Population Is Creating Chaotic Condition.

Moscow, Oct. 7.—(Via Riga, September 29.)—One of the strangest features of Russian life today is the wanderers—wandering children, wandering soldiers, wandering families, wandering villages, wandering tribes—driven from their homes by the war of revolution to move interminably across the vast Russian plains.

This ceaseless tide of migration has become not the least serious of the problems the Soviet Government is called upon to face. Normally it makes immense demand upon the overworked transportation system. Under the influence of such an abnormal condition as the Volga famine, it assumes the proportion of a national danger. For, unlike their nomadic ancestors, who wandered over the steppes in horse-drawn caravans, the modern Russian wanderers travel mostly by train. There are thousands, even tens of thousands of families who have left home save a freight car for three, four or five years, just changing one car for another when the first wears out or appears to be permanently sidetracked.

This migration was first caused by the German advance in 1915, when millions of the inhabitants of Poland swept eastward with the czar's retreating army. The German advance into the Ukraine and up through the Baltic provinces in 1917 and 1918 set moving a new wave of humanity. Wholesale abandonment of the front by the soldiers in the same period sent countless streams trickling across Russia. Each flow and ebb of counter-revolution fighting uprooted thousands more, until it seemed that the whole nation was on the move.

The new rights of the peasants, workers and soldiers after the Bolshevist revolution included free transport, and even the inhabitants of districts untouched by foreign or civil warfare went forth to enjoy the wholesale joy ride in trains, of which some had barely heard.

Realized Seriousness.

By the end of 1918 the Bolshevist rulers realized what the movement meant to transportation. Every railroad expert in the country pointed out the harm in thus tying up cars urgently needed for freight traffic at a time when repairs were long and difficult. Since then every effort has been made to check the migration and settle the wanderers on the land.

Gradually the majority did come to a halt, but hundreds of thousands remained without permanent homes. Thus the panic migration from the famine area in the early summer was a movement, not of the regular inhabitants, but of the population of Poles, White Russians, Galicians, etc., from Russia's western borders who settled in the Volga region after their flight before the Germans and now are trying to return to their former homes.

TOURISTS MISS ONLY LONDON NIGHT CRIER

Mistake Voice of Relic For Drunken Man's Call.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—A party of American tourists seeing old England were walking down Holborn when they heard a man's voice cry from the darkness:

"Twelve o'clock—twelve o'clock."

They walked on chuckling and one of them was heard to say "Drunk again," But the tourists missed one of the choicest bits of that romantic neighborhood—the night crier. There is only one left in London. He is Harry Dykes, watchman in Ely Place, where the chambers of Sir George Lewis and other celebrated solicitors and barristers are located.

Hallam Furs are an Economy

It used to be thought that furs were rather a luxury, but now the economical buyers have discovered that furs are a genuine economy as well as a necessity. A fur coat or set will last from five to fifteen years—to buy cloth coats to last this long would cost very much more than the furs in actual money. In addition to that, you always feel well dressed in furs, — always comfortable, — always warm.

Hallam Furs less than Half Price

You can obtain HALLAM furs this year at less than half the price that they were sold at last year. This is due partly to the drop in the price of raw skins, and to the fact that, as usual, I bought our furs at the very lowest ebb in the prices.

Why I Can Sell at Such Low Prices

In the first place, I buy the skins direct from the Trappers and Indians for cash, and am the largest cash buyer of furs in Canada. Then I sell direct to you for cash. This method saves you the various middlemen's profits, the fur dealer, the wholesaler and retailer, high store rent, sales clerks' salaries, bad accounts, etc.

Another big advantage is you can see the furs in your own home and can examine them at your leisure without being influenced by anxious sales clerks.

The coat and set illustrated in this advertisement are fair samples of HALLAM values, and will be sent you promptly on receipt of price.

If HALLAM furs do not please you in any way, you can simply send them back at my expense, and I will cheerfully return your money—you are not out one single cent.

You can be sure of satisfaction when you buy by mail from me. That is my guarantee.

Seasonable Pointers For Farmers

Few Mushrooms Are Deadly, And Many Are Delicious

The Best Way Is To Become Familiarized With Poisonous Ones and Follow a Process of Elimination To Know the Many Good To Eat.

The food value of mushrooms is not so great as that of many of our staple foods, such as meat, wheat, flour or beans, but it is about equivalent to that of our fresh vegetables. In addition, they give distinct and pleasing flavors to other food, and by furnishing the needed variety to our diet they become valuable as food accessories also. Further, if one knows wild mushrooms, this extra food and luxury may be obtained at the expense of a few minutes' walk on a cool morning, or a trip to the woods or parks on a holiday.

The term mushroom is applied to those large, woody or fleshy fungi which are found growing on the trunks of trees, on stumps or fallen logs, coming out of the leaf mold on the forest floor, or in the grass in yards, lawns, fields and pastures, or along the wayside. The plants may look like round balls, or shelves or brackets, or caps supported on slender stems, or branched and coral-like. In color they may vary from white through pink, red, yellow, blue, brown to nearly black, but never grass green.

Where Mushrooms Are Found.

Mushrooms may be found from the time the ground thaws out in the spring until it freezes up in the fall. They are most plentiful after prolonged wet weather, or after warm rains, when the days are warm and the nights fairly cool and damp. It is best to look for them on cool, dewy mornings, a day or two after warm, heavy rains. They grow in any place where there is plenty of decaying vegetable or animal material which is not too much disturbed by cultivation.

There are in Ontario at least 150 kinds of fleshy fungi, which are large enough to attract the attention of a person collecting mushrooms for table use. However, not all of these can be used, as some of them are poisonous. Four of these are deadly poisonous, and four are classed as mildly poisonous. When one is gathering mushrooms, one of the first questions he is asked is: "How do you tell mushrooms from toadstools?" This question implies that the inquirer thinks of mushrooms as edible and toadstools as poisonous. This question may be answered, however, by saying that mushrooms and toadstools are the same. There is no sharp line of distinction, and no simple test which can be applied to distinguish the edible from poisonous forms, but, perhaps, as the poisonous varieties are so few, the best plan will be to give a brief description of these, so that by a process of elimination the edible varieties may be collected with safety.

As previously stated, there are few poisonous mushrooms, but some of these are deadly poisonous and occur in considerable numbers. In Ontario the deadly poisonous kinds are all closely related, and a description of three common species will enable one to avoid all of them.

The Fly Agaric.

First of all there is the Fly Agaric. This fungus occurs in July and August in groves and open woods, or along roadsides near trees, usually preferring rather poor soil. It is called Fly Agaric because an infusion of the plant was at one time used as a fly poison. The plant is typically large and handsome. The cap is three to five inches broad, rounded when young, nearly flat when old; yellow or orange, or even bright red in color, and covered with numerous angular scales which are white or light yellow in color, and can easily be brushed off. As the cap becomes old it fades out, so that it may become nearly white, and the scales may be washed off by rain. The stalk is four to six inches long, about half an inch thick, usually white, but often yellowish in color, hollow in age. The bottom of the stalk is enlarged into a prominent bulk, which is more or less rough and shaggy or scaly. The lower part of the stalk above the bulb is also shaggy. The gills are white or slightly tinged with yellow, and do not become pink or brown as do those of many edible mushrooms. The ring is large, white, and firmly attached to the stalk.

The Deadly Agaric.

The Deadly Agaric is extremely poisonous, and there is no known antidote for the poison. The plant usually grows in the woods or along the borders of the woods, but has also been known to appear in lawns. It generally appears in July and August. It is quite variable in color, varying from pure white through yellowish to olive. Some place the white forms in a different species. The cap is from one and five-eighths to four inches broad, at first bell-shaped, finally nearly flat, fleshy, viscid or slimy when fresh, smooth, often with a few loose white scales. The color varies from white through yellow to olive green; the dark forms being more common in Ontario. The stalk is from two to eight inches long, a quarter to half an inch thick, hollow, white, or colored like the cap, but lighter in shade, becoming discolored in handling. It ends in an abrupt bulb which generally has a sharp rim standing up around it forming a sort of cup called the poison cup or volva. The poison cup is usually deeply buried in the soil, so that in order to find it is is necessary to dig the plant up. The gills are white and remain white, never becoming pink or brown. The ring is white, prominent, and is high up on the stalk, close to the cap. The ring is attached to the stalk, not loose, as in the smooth white mushroom or parasol mushroom.

The Destroying Angel.

The Destroying Angel is probably the cause of more cases of mushroom poisoning than any other. The plant is pretty, clean, pure white and attractive. It usually occurs in the woods, or near them, but may grow in lawns newly made from forest soil. It is generally found in June or July. The cap is one and five-eighths of an inch to four inches in diameter, at first bell-shaped, later becoming nearly flat; pure white, shining, viscid or slimy when fresh. The stalk is two to six inches long, a quarter to half an inch thick, pure white, hollow in age. The stalk ends in an abrupt bulb, with a free border closely surrounding the base of the stalk and forming the poison cup or volva. The poison cup is buried in the soil, so that in order to see it it is usually necessary to dig the plant up. For this reason wild mushrooms growing in the soil should always be dug, not pulled up or broken off. The gills are pure white and remain white, never becoming pink or brown. The ring is broad and high in the stalk, just under the cap. It is firmly attached to the stalk, and is not loose, as in the smooth white mushroom.

REMARKABLE TALE OF A JERSEY COW

THIS is not the cow that jumped over the moon, but it is an animal which was the hero (or rather heroine) of an incident almost fit to rank with that of the famous member of the bovine species that gave Luna such a rude shock. First of all, let us introduce this distinguished milk producer. She is a pure-bred Jersey owned by J. F. Crandell, of Wingham, and valued at $175.

One day recently, when Mr. Crandell went to extract his usual matutinal allowance of lacteal fluid from the hitherto faithful and never-failing bossy, he found her lying in the field in an apparently helpless condition, with her soft gazelle-like eyes turned up to the sky.

After first aid had been rendered the doctor was called and gave artificial respiration and medicines that, in the words of an eyewitness, "seemed not to take much effect." But this was no ordinary bovine physician, but a man of resource. He had ridden post haste to the scene on his bicycle and doubtless the vim and power of locomotion which a well-inflated tire gives to a wheel suggested to the vet that the tired feeling by which the animal seemed to be afflicted might be remedied by a bountiful supply of air. But how to do it? Here again we must quote the words of our veracious informant. "By some means unknown he took the bicycle pump and filled the udder of the animal with air as an experiment."

The experiment was a triumphant success and in about five hours the animal was not only able to sit up and take nourishment of a far more substantial nature than mere air, but was able to get around about as well as ever. She is now giving fifteen quarts of milk a day with as much butter fat as to satisfy the most exacting government official.

Strange to say the milk is not of the variety known as "aerated," and the butter is good solid stuff, but it has not yet been proved whether the cheese made from this animal's product may not be covered with those minute air bubbles which lend so much variety and picturesqueness to a Gruyere. Neither has this cow at any time since her strange adventure evinced any tendency to soar upwards like a dirigible balloon and to try to emulate the immortal feat of her moon-jumping ancestor. But she is but five years old and may yet go far in giving all concerned the surprise of their lives.

SOME TALL CORN IN HURON

THIS magnificent field of corn was grown by Mr. McBurney of East Wawanosh and is six acres in extent. The stalks measure from 14 to 16½ feet high and the cobs are from 12 to 21¼ inches in length, and about 4 inches in diameter at the thickest part. The variety is that which is known as Eureka Sweet.

Mr. McBurney would be interested to learn similar particulars regarding the corn crop in the Essex or St. Thomas districts, where the yield is usually so high. His corn was planted on May 24 and it was cut last week for ensilage, the harvesting being carried out with much difficulty owing to the abnormal size of the stalks.

The picture shows to some extent the height of the corn in comparison with that of full-grown men, the premier stalk, which is 16½ feet high, being that on the extreme left of the photo.

MOLE NOT SO BAD AS PAINTED

Branded by some gardeners as a pest, the mole, according to F. L. Washburn, zoologist with the St. Paul University's department of agriculture, belongs to a group of animals which as a rule eat only insects and closely allied forms of life and rarely if ever touch vegetables.

"Occasionally," Mr. Washburn says, "moles have been known to gnaw bulbs, and I have seen a mole in captivity run its snout through a pea pod and eat every pea. Sometimes they uproot plants in flower beds. However, the bulk of their food is animal matter—earth worms and, more particularly, white grubs which often do an immense amount of damage to corn fields, strawberry beds and lawns.

"Moles can be caught by using spear traps on lawns on newly-formed ridges. They can be poisoned by planting seed peas soaked in a sweet strychnine solution before planting. Such peas may also be planted along the row with others not poisoned. Very rarely can a mole be drowned by turning water from a hose into the burrow. Occasionally conditions are such that water will force them to the surface.

"Napthalene crystals placed in the burrow are said to drive them away. A steel trap properly set in the main burrow, which is about twelve inches below the surface, is generally effective."

NOT TOO LATE TO CLEAN UP GARDENS

Many farmers have already begun to fight against next year's insects by raking up and burning all stalks and leaves and other debris which, left undisturbed, will furnish snug quarters for the pests during the winter. Also there is nothing like fire to wipe out or hold in check various plant diseases that may have secured lodgment the past season. Cleaning up the vegetable garden and truck field is good business. Insects and diseases will always be with us so long as we leave old stumps and leaves around. Old weed patches around the edge of the fields should be mowed, raked and the weeds hauled off or burned.

HINTS FOR LURING HAMS AND BACON

While the old-fashioned hog killing days are beginning to be a thing of the past because of packer efficiency competition, the farmer during the winter months can profitably slaughter hogs and cure and smoke hams and bacons, using the brine cure, according to P. A. Anderson, assistant professor, and A. L. Harvey, instructor in the animal husbandry division of the University of Minnesota.

After trimming carefully the pieces intended for curing, the surfaces should be rubbed with salt and packed away for 24 hours, during which time the curing material is prepared.

The following materials should be used for every 100 pounds of meat; eight to ten pounds salt; two pounds cane or brown sugar; two ounces saltpetre; four gallons water. This mixture is boiled and the materials that rise to the surface are skimmed off. Cure for six or eight weeks and, after removing from brine, soak pieces in water for a few hours, after which the outside surfaces should be rubbed with a stiff brush. Before being smoked, the pieces should be suspended and allowed to drain.

WHAT ANIMALS SHOULD BE SOLD AT THIS TIME

Now Is the Season To Choose Stock To Carry Over For Winter.

Cool days and nights warn livestock growers that the grazing season for the year is nearing an end. It is time plans for housing and feeding farm animals were made. Most farmers who are growers of livestock find they have a surplus of animals on hand. In many instances, the question of which to keep and which to sell will have to be answered. Because of the impossibility to accurately predicting future market demands and prices, no one is qualified to offer information as to how profitable the feeding of the various types of livestock may be the coming winter, or even to say that a loss may not be sustained. A few practices can be followed, however, that have proved profitable in the past and are pretty sure to prove profitable through the winter.

1. Do not attempt to winter more livestock than you can provide with comfortable, sanitary shelter.

2. Do not attempt to winter more stock than you can feed liberally on good wholesome feed.

3. Cattle and sheep that are to be marketed off grass should be sold as soon as the pasture begins to fail, for if held through the cold fall months on poor pasture, they will shrink a great deal, lose their bloom and sell for less money than if marketed now while they are fresh and sappy.

4. In all cases where breeding herds are being maintained, the question of which animals to be sold should be determined by a vigorous process of culling. Sell the older females that are showing signs of having passed their period of greatest usefulness as breeders. Also dispose of all young females that are of undesirable type.

5. A general rule pretty safe to follow in the marketing of hogs is to sell when they weigh on an average between 200 and 250 pounds.

6. Whether it will pay to fatten cattle, sheep or hogs the coming winter is a question that is hard to answer. The purchasing of thin cattle, sheep or hogs in an open market and shipping them out to a farm to be fattened through a short feeding period is a risky enterprise at any time, because high freght rates, shinkage and other expenses make it necessary that a decided margin in selling price per pound over cost price be secured in order to allow of a profit. Whether or not this margin will be forthcoming this winter remains to be seen.

It will be sound practice, however, for the man who has cattle, sheep or hogs now, and also has feeds raised on his own farm suitable for fattening, to market the feed by fattening the stock. The freight on a ton of feed when converted into pork, beef or mutton is just about one-third the amount required in shipping the original crop. The price of livestock is low, but the price of grain and hay is still lower, and where other costs in fattening are kept at a minimum, the chances favor increasing the values of the crops by feeding them.—W. H. Peters, acting chief of the division of animal husbandry, University of Minnesota.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN

Everlasting flowers picked before frost and cured make fine bouquets for porches or often the living room.

Keep grass and rubbish away from apple and other tender bark trees if you want to discourage mice from girdling.

Celery may be set in boxes of sand or soil, which just covers the roots, watered well and placed in a dark cool place for winter storage.

Squash and pumpkins should be placed on shelves in a dry warm room. Often the furnace room is a good place. Do not pile more than one layer deep.

The Boston fern is the best house fern to use. It stands the variations of temperature and the dust best of any.

Grapes and raspberries winter best if laid on the ground just before it freezes and when there is no frost in the cane. Cover with earth to the depth of about two inches.

Take up a few hills of rhubarb before the ground freezes hard for winter forcing. Let it freeze out doors and than about December 1 put in a box of earth or sand in a warm dark place. Hold back some for successive plantings.

Western Ontario's Tobacco Crop For 1921 Totals 5,224 Acres

[Special to The Advertiser.]

CHATHAM, Oct. 7.—The Ontario tobacco crop for 1921, while not nearly as large as that of 1920, has one splendid point in its favor, that of being better looked after than the 1920 crop. The preliminary report states that in Essex County flue tobacco will reach an acreage of 1,890 acres; Burley will be about 1,900¼ acres, cigar tobacco, 24¼ acres, and other varieties 11¼ acres.

In Kent County the total grown is: Burley, 1,043 acres; snuff tobacco, 90 acres; other varieties, 11 acres. Elgin, 144¾, acres of Burley tobacco, and ¼ acre of cigar tobacco, the lowest yield on record. Norfolk, the yield is 27½ acres of Burley and only one acre of other varieties. Lambton has only ¾ acre of other varieties. Lincoln has 40 acres of cigar tobacco, and Middlesex, 41 acres of Burley tobacco.

The total acreage, therefore, for Western Ontario is 5,224½, which is considerably lower than previous years, and especially for 1919, when record crops brought record prices. Particularly notable feature about the 1921 crop is the small amount of snuff and cigar tobacco.

The small price now paid for tobacco, owing to an alleged glut on the market, has deterred many farmers from growing the "weed" this year. Some adventurous spirits have taken the bit in their teeth and have sown several acres in the hope that price conditions would improve. Holding such a probability in view they are now preparing to harvest their 1921 crop and look forward to the future with an anticipation not so black as a year ago.

BRUCE SCHOOL FAIRS PROVED BIG SUCCESS

The school fairs in Bruce County are winning greater favor year by year. Some thirteen fairs have taken place during the past three weeks, and almost perfect weather prevailed, with the exception of one or two fairs. It was only through the co-operation of the teachers, trustees, parents and the children that success was attained at almost every fair.

The school parades were the big feature at every fair, and they were considered excellent without question. The services of Capt. Victor McKechnie of Walkerton were secured as judge of parades and physical culture; at many fairs it was difficult to decide on those schools deserving first honors.

In the oratorical contest the girls won more premiums, and generally they were of exceptional merit.

Miss Havill of Walkerton, president of the Horticultural Society, judge of baking, sewing and flowers, states "that the fairs were better than usual this year."

It was particularly noticeable by those in charge that considerable interest is being taken by teacher, parent and child as to the proper methods of selection, preparation and exhibition of the various entries of the fair. The exhibits were of higher merit than formerly.

The sports were real fun from beginning to end. There was a race for every one who wished, and it was not uncommon to see 20 or 30 entered in a single event.

The Tiverton School Fair was held in connection with the Agricultural Fall Fair. Each were a great success. The school winning in the parade and physical culture was S. S. No. 5, Bruce, of which Miss Agnes McLaren is the teacher. Archie Montgomery of Tiverton School won out in the oratorical contest. The honors in the livestock classes went to George Ibbotson and Ernest Hutton of S. S. No. 11, Kincardine.

C. Lamont, B.S.A., agricultural representative and his able assistant, Fraser Ross, were in charge and are particularly well pleased with the success of the fairs.

ROTARIANS AND BOYS.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 7.—With a boy each as guest—their own son where possible, others where this was not—the Rotarians this evening had a very enjoyable banquet, followed by an address on the relation of father and son by Taylor Staten of Toronto.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT WEST ZORRA FAIR

EMBRO, Oct. 7.—Delightful weather drew large crowds to the Embro and West Zorra Fall Fair yesterday, a large number of visitors from the surrounding district being present. The gate receipts totalled $427. The showing of horses was not quite as large as in previous years, but the standard was high.

Very favorable comment was also passed on the excellent quality of the livestock exhibits. The exhibits of women's work in the palace was large and of splendid variety and quality.

The tug-of-war between teams captained by Wm. Campbell and Charles Clayton created much interest, owing to the closely-contested struggle. Mr. Campbell's team were winners of the $25 purse.

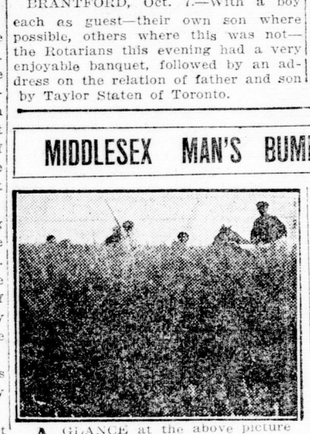

A very delightful musical program was provided during the day by the Ilderton Brass Band and Piper McDonald of London and his troupe of young dancers.

Winners in the lady driver contest were in order of merit: Mrs. Harold Butcher, Miss Sarah McCorquodale, Mrs. Logan, Thorndale.

Calf competition — Arthur Longbottom, Billy Patterson.

Carriage horses — Norman McLeod, Mr. Ratz, Tavistock; Wesley Kemp.

MIDDLESEX MAN'S BUMPER CROP IN ALBERTA

A GLANCE at the above picture will give one a fair idea of the bumper crop of oats which has been raised at Kneehill, Alberta, by Ernest Witton, formerly of Caradoc Township, Ontario. This crop made the splendid average of 95 bushels per acre on newly broken land on a 60-acre field.

Mr. Witton moved from the county of Middlesex four years ago from his place near Strathroy, and this pleasing picture from the province of his adoption will be appreciated among his friends and Western Ontario readers generally. Mr. Witton does not state the variety of oats which has given him such satisfactory results, but it is apparently a safe one to grow.

It will be observed, if the illustration is closely referred to, that the people standing are literally "up to the neck" in the grain, and that the men on horseback appear to be swimming in the golden sea.

NATIONAL DRUG & CHEMICAL CO. OF CANADA, LIMITED, TORONTO

Newbury

NEWBURY, Oct. 7.—The Women's Missionary Society met at the manse on Thursday. The attendance was splendid. The meeting opened with usual devotional exercises. After the roll-call was answered Mrs. Farquharson gave an excellent Bible reading. Mrs. Forbes of Chatham, who was in China for a few years, doing missionary work with her son at Honan, gave an interesting talk. She learned the Chinese language when she was over seventy years of age. The leaders met at the close of the meeting to arrange for the men's banquet, October 12. A dainty lunch was served by the hostess.

The funeral of Mrs. Davis took place from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Connely. She was 86 years old. Rev. Farquharson conducted the services at the Cashmere Cemetery on the Longwoods road.

Any Corn Can Be Stopped Now, Any Moment, by a Touch

SCIENCE has solved the corn problem. One can now stop a corn ache instantly, and shortly remove the whole corn.

The method is gentle, scientific, sure. A famous chemist invented it. A surgical dressing house of world-wide fame produces it.

It is Blue-jay—the liquid or the plaster. A touch applies it. The pain stops at once. Soon the whole corn, however ancient, loosens and comes out.

It makes harsh treatments unnecessary. It makes paring ridiculous. It makes every corn ache a folly.

Your druggist has Blue-jay. Let it end your corn—tonight.

RED PIMPLES ITCHED TERRIBLY

On Chest, Face, Arms Burned Badly. Cuticura Heals.

"Ever since I can remember, my chest, face, and arms were filled with dry, red pimples. They were scattered all over me, and itched terribly at times, and I scratched them, causing them to fester and get sore. Sometimes they would dry up and form scales which burned and itched.

"Then I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I had used them two or three times when I felt better and I was healed with one box of Cuticura Ointment together with the Cuticura Soap." (Signed) Miss Bertha Russell, Manitoba, February [illegible].

Use Cuticura Soap and Ointment for all toilet purposes. They cleanse, Ointment to heal.

Soap 25c, Ointment 25 and 50. Sold throughout the Dominion. Canadian depot: Lymans, Limited, St. Paul St., Montreal. Cuticura Soap shaves without mug.

PLAN WAR MEMORIAL AT WHEATLEY SCHOOL

Daughters of Empire Will Seek Co-Operation of Community.

WHEATLEY, Oct. 7.—At a meeting of the Daughters of the Empire on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. W. R. Crewe, the question of a suitable memorial for the heroes from this community who served in the great world war was discussed. A large number attended, and the discussion was taken up energetically. Many plans have been brought up during the last year at the meetings, but until Monday evening nothing was presented that met with general approval. It was unanimously decided to erect a memorial in the new high school grounds and have all the names of those who served inscribed thereon. The Daughters of the Empire will ask the co-operation of everyone in the community to make this memorial a creditable remembrance to those who served so faithfully and well.

MAN HELD IN CHATHAM NOT ONE OF MURRELLS

CHATHAM, Oct. 7.—County Police Patrol Officer O'Neil arrested a man near Thamesville last night who answered in many points the description of one of the Murrells. He gave his name as Irvine C. Benson and was caught by a C. P. R. brakeman when he attempted to steal a ride on a freight train. He is being held pending a report from Toronto on his finger prints.

Provincial police officers who have seen the man, say he is not a Murrell, but await the finger print report with interest.

Conditions In United Kingdom Need Careful Attention Yet

The forthcoming number of the Weekly Bulletin of the Commercial Intelligence Service, dated October 3, reports that general business remains inactive in the United Kingdom, and such few signs of recovery as are visible refer to future prospects rather than to actual conditions. The returns of oversea trade for August show an increase of £8,000,00 in imports and £9,000,000 in exports over July, but these are attributable to relief caused by the terminatoin of the coal strike rather than to any revival of business. Otherwise the month's totals represent little more than half of the figures for the same month a year ago.

Regarding unemployment the 2,170,000 wholly unemployed and 988,000 on short time, which was reported on July 1, has been reduced to 1,527,000 and 400,000 respectively on September 2. An outstanding feature of the past month has been the demonstrations and disorder among the unemployed in their endeavor to secure relief from municipalities and the Government. The situation has determined the Government to open an investigation which will probably lead to the institution of relief works.

A universal agitation is in progress against the lack of proportion between the prices which retailers are demanding for food and other commodities in comparison with the manufacturers' and wholesale prices, which are now ruling; and as a number of influential journals are waging a campaign against the rapacity of the retailers, and publishing definite figures showing the wide margin between what prices are and what they might be, it seems probable that their crusade will force down prices to a level, which will eventually lead to a general revival in home trade.

United Kingdom Crops During August.

The long drought was broken during August, and though the rainfall was comparatively small, yet throughout the greater part of the country all grain was secured in good condition by the end of the month. Wheat was generally of good quality, with small amount of damage by smut. Winter oats and early spring crops of barley and oats are fairly satisfactory, but yields are light. Beans and peas are small crops. Potatoes are generally small. Root crops have improved greatly, but yields will be low. Apples are generally good, although smaller in size than usual. The yield of pears is small.

Taking the average crop to be 100, the probable yields per acre are represented by the following percentages: Wheat, 104; barley, 89; oats, 89; beans, 85; peas, 86; potatoes, 81; turnips and swedes, 70; mangels, 82, and hops, 89.

Market Conditions for Apples in France.

Importations have been the exception rather than the rule, and not only is there very little demand for barrel apples, but even a supply has been developed from home sources for the luxury requirements of Paris. Inquiry is being made, as to the possibility of getting together, in Canada, carload lots of the variety known as the Canadian Reinette, La Reinette du Canada.

Australian Commonwealth Trade Returns, 1920-21.

Preliminary trade returns of the overseas trade of Australia for the fiscal year ending July 30, 1921, show an extraordinary increase of £64,359,212 in the value of the imports and decrease of £17,898,391 in exports. Total imports were £163,333,504 and total exports £131,925,118.

Brazilian Market.

The market for August in Brazil has again been quiet, exports of coffee being small, shipping dull, and the bulk of the business being done with Europe. Fortunately, the general feeling amongst bankers, exchange brokers, and merchants, is that the market will remain firm and conditions gradually improve.

REJECT RENO DIVORCE PLEA IN BIGAMY CASE

Halifax Judge Convicts Former Windsor Resident.

HALIFAX, N. S., Oct. 7.—Frederick G. Richardson of Halifax, Reno, Nev., and Windsor, Ont., was found guilty of bigamy in the supreme court here this afternoon, Justice Wallace reserving sentence until his counsel could be heard. Evidence was submitted to the court to show that Richardson married in England in 1886, and lived there with his wife some eighteen years, after which he came to Canada alone. Correspondence between Richardson and his wife gradually ceased.

About ten years ago Richardson went to Reno, where he obtained a divorce. He returned to Halifax and went through a form of marriage here, but on account of complications did not return to Reno, as he had intended. In 1920 he went to Windsor, Ont.

Judge Wallace's judgment held that "the facts justify me in declining to regard the evidence of intention and of residence at Reno as conferring domiciliary jurisdiction upon the Reno court."

SATISFIED FLINT NOT IN SURFACE

TORONTO, Oct. 7.—The investigation opened by the department of highways into a complaint that flint used in surfacing on the provincial highway near Jordan, was causing serious damage to automobile tires, has convinced W. A. McLean, deputy minister, that the complaint was without foundation.

It was learned that the contractor—who owns a quarry in the district that produces a flinty stone—had not used any of it, but had used a stone from quarries at Dundas, which have been supplying material for use in many sections.

Hon. F. C. Biggs announced that a check for approximately $700,000 had been received by the provincial treasury from the Federal Government on account of good road construction in the province.

GERMANY'S JOBLESS PLACED AT 250,000

Unemployment Steadily Decreasing Despite Cry of Ruin.

BERLIN, Oct. 7.—Germany's dollar hysteria was temporarily checked when the quotation for the mark rose to 123 for the dollar. There was a runaway bull market, in which some stocks rose 300,400, and even 500 points.

Germany's "catastrophe propaganda" continues unabated, and, if anything, intensified, sending out the S O S in a particular effort to catch Uncle Sam's ear. A typical instance is afforded by the Deutsche Zeitung, which says:

"If help comes, it must come quickly; otherwise the mark catastrophe, which must bring Germany a new wave of higher prices and new domestic political dangers, will become an international catastrophe, the consequences of which for all countries cannot be foreseen."

While Germany has been crying catastrophe for months past, she is enjoying a steady, consistent decrease of unemployment and probably has the lowest unemployment rate among the world war belligerents. The August figures, just available, show only 108,000 men and women in Berlin receiving unemployment support, a decrease of 15,000 since the previous month. The number of unemployed in all Germany today is probably less than 250,000.

Incidentally, the Germans have just discovered that America, far from having waxed rich and profited hugely through the war, which has heretofore been a fixed idea here, has home troubles and economic problems. The published figure of 6,000,0000 unemployed in America and news dispatches of "auctions" have brought about this German awakening.

Using the head line, "Unemployment Misery in America," the Socialist Vorwarts says:

"Reports tell of great want among 6,000,000 unemployed in America, and, since the crisis in America is further aggravated by the sinking of Central European exchange as the result of the reparation payments, one can count on unemployment in America increasing."

For the first time since the revolution the official German foreign trade statistics have been made public. If they are trustworthy, they indicate that German commerce is not all rosy. The June imports were 6,400,000,000 paper marks, and the exports 5,400,000,000. The May imports were 5,400,000,000, and the exports 4,500,000,000. America must have had a big share of Germany's imports, for 71 per cent in June consisted of agricultural products, chiefly grain, cotton holding second place.

PRINCETON, Oct. 7.—On Sunday next the aMsons here will hold their annual church parade at 7 p.m. to St. Peter's Church, where special music will be given. The rector, Captain Rev. Bro. C. R. S. Petie, M.A., will address the brethren.

GOOD HEALTH AND GOOD SPIRITS

Depend Upon the Condition of the Blood—Keep It Rich, Red and Pure.

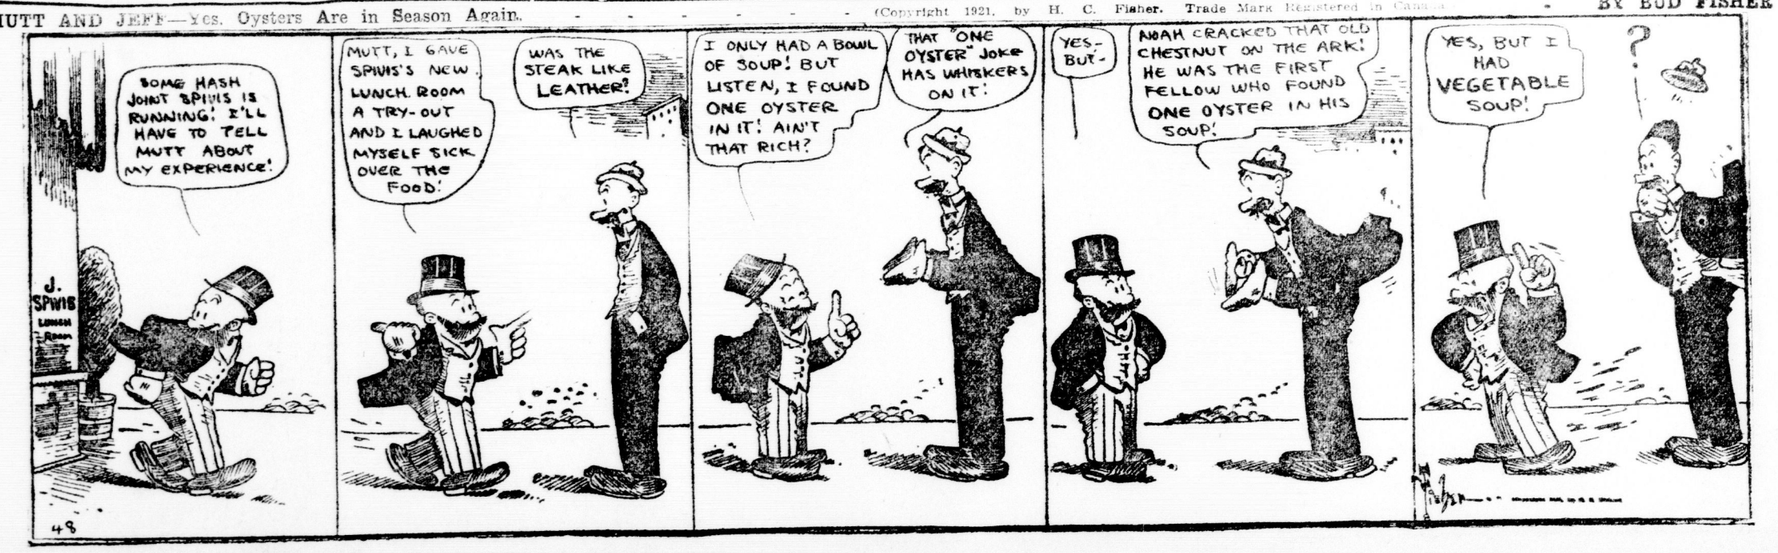

When a doctor tells you that you are anaemic, he simply means, in plain English, that your blood is weak and watery. But this condition is one that may easily pass into a hopeless decline if prompt steps are not taken to enrich the blood. Poor blood, weak, watery blood is the cause of headaches and backaches, loss of appetite, poor digestion, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness, irritability and many other troubles. To poor blood is due the pimples and blotches, the muddy complexion that disfigures so many faces. To have good health, a good complexion and a cheerful manner, the blood must be kept rich, red and pure. This is easily done through the use of a blood enriching tonic like Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The whole mission of this medicine is to help enrich the blood which reaches every nerve and every organ in the body, bringing with it health, strength and new activity. That is why people who occasionally use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills always feel bright, active and strong.

Mrs. E. E. Cook, Simcoe, Ont., gives strong testimony to the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills when the blood is in an anaemic condition. She says: "I have been a sufferer for some years from a rundown condition of the system. I suffered from pains in the back, twitching of the nerves and muscles, my appetite was good, I had indigestion and would get drowsy after eating. My hands and feet were almost always cold, and though I was constantly doctoring, the medicine I took did not help me. I had practically given up hope of good health, until a friend from Hamilton came to visit me, and urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It took some persuasion, but finally I consented to try them. I have reason to be grateful that I did, for after using seven boxes I felt like a new person. I have gained in weight, have a better color and my work is now a pleasure. For this condition my thanks are due Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I cannot praise them too highly."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Speculative Issues Chiefly Dominate Market Dealings.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The cleavage between artificial and actual conditions in the securities markets became more clearly defined today. Trading in stocks was rather perfunctory, while the investment inquiry assumed more impressive proportions.

Aside from the extensive transactions in Liberty bonds and Victory notes, with most of the former at new high prices for the year, announcement was made of the successful flotation of two foreign loans. The Rio de Janeiro and Queensland (Australia), offerings, each for $12,000,000, were quickly absorbed.

In the stock market dealings were dominated by speculative, chiefly secondary domestic oils. They were lifted one to three points, evidently under professional propulsion, on the further advance of prices made by producers of crude products.

Mexican and European oils also were better in the absence of pressure, although reports dealing unfavorably with some of the foreign-owned Mexican properties were once more actively circulated.

Standard rails and industrials participated only moderately in the general movement and miscellaneous issues, excepting motor specialties and utilities, were inclined to strengthen.

The list reacted before the close, however, call money's rise to 5½ per cent causing fresh selling of leaders, including Mexican Petroleum. Sales amounted to 535,000 shares.

Foreign exchanges were erratic, sterling holding its advance, French, Belgian and Italian rates easing variably, and most of the Eastern European remittances again weakening on the more disquieting conditions in these countries. Of the so-called neutral centres, Spanish, Swiss and Swedish bills were strong.

Railroad bonds of the minor or convertible types were active and higher. Mexican Government 4's and Chile Copper 6's were strongest of the foreign group. Total sales (par value) aggregated, $17,650,000.

Segregation Plan of Lehigh Valley Excites Market Interest.

[Reported by Jones, Easton, McCallum Co.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The news items of greatest interest in the market circles today were the segregation plan submitted by the Lehigh Valley, and the announcement from Washington that an agreement has been reached for some material changes in the tax bill.

During the first hour the trading was mixed. There was renewed selling of tobacco issues, and considerable pressure was brought to bear on Chandler Motor, but at the same time a good demand for oil stocks was in evidence, and the buying of some rails was noteworthy.

With business generally showing an improving tendency the ultimate move of importance will be upturn, but temporarily one may anticipate a continuance of such markets as have recently been experienced.

CHICAGO GRAIN HIT BY URGENT SELLING

Market Affected by Reports of Elevator Congestion.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—Urgent selling, based largely on reports of elevator congestion here and in the south and southwest, had a depressing effect on the wheat market today. Closing quotations were heavy at 3¼@4¼c net lower with December $1.09½@1.09¾ and May, $1.13¾@1.14. Corn last ¾@⅞c to 1c and oats 1⅝@2c. In provisions the outcome varied from unchanged figures to 35c decline.

It was during the last half of the session that the setback in the value of wheat took place. Earlier the tendency was chiefly in favor of higher prices, scattered speculative buying having developed on account of a halt in liquidation and short selling. Later, however, support was lacking, and with persistent offerings, especially from houses with northwestern connections, the market rapidly gave way. The bearish gossip current at this juncture included assertions that unless clearance from New Orleans soon increased it would be necessary to put a railroad embargo against that port because of probable exhaustion of available storage space there. Elevators here and in the southwest were also reported as about filled. Under such circumstances the finish was at the lowest prices yet this season.

Corn and oats declined with wheat. Wet weather was somewhat of a check on the downward slide of corn, but oats followed wheat to a new low price record for 1921.

In provisions, the effect of the weakness of grain more than counterbalanced higher quotations on hogs.

Cash quotations—Close:

Potatoes were plentiful and found a ready sale at $2 and $2.25 per bag.

Pears and apples were scarcer than they were last Saturday and were in active demand.

Honey was easier in price, selling at 85 cents to a $1 for five pounds.

Old fowl brought 14 to 20 cents a pound, according to size; ducks, wholesale, 18 to 20 cents a pound, live weight, and chickens, 18 to 22 cents, live weight.

BRAZILIAN MOVES HIGHER IN TORONTO

Advance Attributed To Favorable Earnings Statement.

TORONTO, Oct. 7.—Prices were firm on the Toronto Stock Exchange today, but trading was not heavy. The main movement in the local market occurred in Brazilian, but business in the afternoon session was exceedingly limited all around. Brazilian's move was no doubt based on the favorable earnings statement in the morning's papers. The continuation of increasing profits, month by month, by Brazilian gives courage to the patient stockholders, now, however, so fully offset by the long depression in Rio exchange. As long as Brazilian milreis are worth only 13c against par of 32c, the company is at a disadvantage in remitting funds in North America for equipment, coal and dividends. Today's trading in Brazilian made a total of 425 shares here and there was a gain of a point. Other tractions were inactive, but the interest in Montreal Power at Montreal overflowed to this market and resulted in a gain of ⅝-point. Spanish River had a smart rally in the forenoon session, advancing to 56½.

The paper companies are looking for a better business in the fall and winter and reports concerning purely pulp companies are now more encouraging. One company reports that there is now a demand for sulphite, but the market is not strong enough yet to produce a price at which a profit can be made. Companies which are patient are looking for an improvement in prices before long.

Other industrials acounted for scattered trading in small volume. Both issues of Canada Cement, Steel of Canada preferred and National Breweries, were stronger, while declines were made by Dominion Steel, Maple Leaf Milling preferred and Abitibi.

Total sales — Listed stocks, 1.045 shares; unlisted stocks, 1.198 shares; bonds and war loans, $108,200.

CLOSING GRAIN LETTER.

[Reported by Jones, Easton, McCallum Co., Limited.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 7. — Wheat — The activity in export wheat trade yesterday was not in evidence today, therefore, market was left without important demand, and very naturally felt the depressing load against the visible supply, also against greater or less volume consigned abroad. There is fair demand for choice milling wheat at the various markets, but a very inadequate demand for the lower grades of current arrivals and the elevator accumulations. This poor demand is illustrated by a big scarcity of elevator room in this market and at southwestern points. The load seems to be increasing, primary receipts today being heavy. A spasmodic and comparatively small foreign taking of wheat will not be sufficient to bring about higher prices. It will be necessary for a material broadening of exports outlet to advance prices; in fact, to hold price of present excessive supplies both at home and abroad.

Coarse Grains—Congestion of elevator space has necessitated the withdrawals of elevator buyers from the market. We are not ready to suggest the advisability of firmly holding the long side of market, but believe that further weakness must appear unless perchance some unforeseen demand appears.

URGES CHRISTIAN UNION AS A FOE TO SOCIALISM

Prussian Chancellor Offers Plan For Fatherland.

BERLIN, Oct. 7.—For the purpose of combatting socialist influences, Adam Stegerwald, Prussian chancellor and head of the Catholic Trade Union, which has 2,500,000 members, has just proposed a consolidated Christian union. He would make social Christianity the basis of solidarity, as was outlined in the platform of the Essen convention last year, and declares many Protestants would join the movement. He proposes enlarging by including labor, of which he is a leader, and which, he declares, "loves the Fatherland, disapproves class warfare and keeps religious faith."

Herr Stegerwald thinks such a union as he advocates is now possible, since Protestant Prussia, which the south German Catholic always feared, no longer exists. He estimates that such a grouping would give 120 Reichstag members, a fifth of the total number, and constitute a most important group.

MUMMIFYING SECRET CLAIMED BY PARISIAN

Doctor Believes His Fluid and Process Are Like Old Ones.

PARIS, Oct. 7.—After years passed in studying chemical traces in ancient Egyptian mummies, Dr. Edmond Bartha, of the Paris School of Practical Medicine, has announced the discovery of a new embalming fluid that he asserts will maintain o lifelike appearance in corpses for a period of between twenty and fifty years.

Dr. Bartha in demonstrating his discovery described how the same process and a fluid similar to his were undoubtedly used in the times of the Pharaohs, except that the incisions probably were through the carotid artery, as the mummies he had examined showed no trace of femoral incisions, as now practiced.

After a body has been embalmed for a week, he explained, the flesh and tissues harden, leaving the body as rigid as marble, and although time may destroy the color effects produced by Dr. Bartha's fluid, he is of the opinion that the long lost secret of mummifying the dead has at last bee discovered and will again be practiced generally in another decade.

DR. ROSE NOMINATED.

TWO KILLED AS TRAIN ENGINE HITS AUTO

Grimsby Man and Girl Victims of G. T. R. Flyer.

GRIMSBY, Ont., Oct. 7.—Andrew Yeager, 51 years old, and Hildreth Eckardt, 20 years old, both of Grimsby, are dead, and Lloyd Yeager, 20 years old, is lying in Hamilton Hospital in a serious condition, as a result of their automobile being struck by an eastbound Grand Trunk flyer.

The car, with Lloyd Yeager driving, was proceeding south over the level crossing, east of the town, and apparently did not hear the electric warning bell, or see the train.

The engine struck the rear end of the car on the right side, with such force that Mr. Yeager, Sr., was thrown out on the cowcatcher. His head was badly crushed and practically every bone in his body broken. He leaves one daughter besides the injured son and his widow.

Hildreth Eckardt was injured about the head and body and died almost instantly. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Eckardt, and one of famous family of Musical Eckardts.

Lloyd Yeager did not lose consciousness and was rushed to Hamilton Hospital by Dr. McLay on a westbound engine and caboose.

The engine threw the car against the crossing fence, smashing the posts off close to the ground and thence into the ditch.

The accident today brings the total number of Grimsby people killed on two level crossings here in eighteen years up to ten.

PROGRESSIVES OF MARQUETTE CHOSE CRERAR

Unanimous Support For Only Name Placed Before the Convention.

PROTECTION UNSOUND

Declares Mr. Crerar in Address At His Nomination Meeting.

SHOAL LAKE, Man., Oct. 7.—(By Canadian Press.)—By unanimous vote, the Progressive convention of Marquette today chose Hon. T. A. Crerar, leader of the National Progressive party, as their candidate in the forthcoming federal election. Mr. Crerar's was the only name submitted to the convention. Marquette is the county which elected Mr. Crerar in 1917.

Addressing the delegates to the convention and a public meeting later, Mr. Crerar took occasion to reply to some of the charges levelled against the Progressive body and against himself. As at Brandon, a couple of days ago, he claimed that the prime minister had placed no constructive policy before the people, and as at Brandon, he challenged the Government to lay bare the source of its campaign funds. Again he maintained that the tariff was an important but not the sole issue of the campaign. But here he pursued his argument further: "The prime minister," Mr. Crerar declared, "is making the welkin ring throughout the Maritime Provinces—he is ringing the charges up and down everywhere else—that if Progressives come into power, you will have free trade in the country, and everything will go to the bowwows. That, of course, is a gross misrepresentation of the facts.

"My position is this, and the position of the Progressive movement this, that the principle of protection is unsound as applied to the finance policy of this country. But I want to say this also, that, for the purpose of revenue for some years to come, at any rate, it will be necessary for us to raise a considerable amount of money from the customs tariff."

Mr. Crerar argued, however, that the primary purpose of a protective tariff was to keep goods out of the country, and that so far as it protected in this regard, a customs tariff did not raise any revenue.

When goods failed to enter a country they did not produce any customs revenue. Under the present tariff of 35 per cent—Mr. Crerar contended in illustration—woolen goods were practically prohibited from entry into Canada. If that rate were reduced to 17 or 15 per cent woolens would come in, revenue would be raised, the spirit of competition would be introduced into the woolen industry, and competition was the very life and breath of trade.

"Agriculture is the very foundation of our prosperity," he exclaimed. "If you are to have Canada prosperous, you must have agriculture prosperous." He cited instances of the way in which, he said, farmers were suffering under the present fiscal system. He mentioned the case of a Marquette farmer who bought a carload of cattle last fall, fed them and then had to sell them recently in Winnipeg for less than he gave for them."

EAST BRUCE P. S. TEACHERS IN SESSION

WALKERTON, Oct. 6.—The annual meeting of the East Bruce Teachers' Institute is being held in the public school here today and tomorrow. There is a good representation of teachers present.

The morning session was devoted largely to routine business. Addresses were given, one by H. Alton, principal of the Walkerton Public School, on "Practical Measures in Arithmetic," and Miss M. Widmeyer of Wiarton, vice-president of the institute, on "The Teachers' Northern Trip."

The afternoon meeting was opened by an address by the president, Miss Pollock of Chesley, and four very instructive papers by Miss M. C. McGregor, B. A., of the Walkerton High School staff, on "Some Aspects of the Teaching of History," H. G. Lockett, M.A., of Hamilton, on "The Forward Movement in Education," Stanley Sanderson, principal of the Chesley school, "Music in the Public Schools," and A. E. Smith, principal of the Wiarton school, "Entrance Geography."

Tonight Dr. Walter Jones, the celebrated Chautauqua lecturer, is giving his famous lecture, "The Red Horizon," to a crowded house at the town hall.

The marriage took place at Toronto yesterday afternoon of Mr. Armond Whitehead, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Whitehead of Walkerton, to Miss Eva Bundy, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Bundy, formerly of Walkerton. Mr. and Mrs. Whitehead will reside in Toronto, where the groom has a flourishing law practice.

Mrs. Monk of Elmwood, youngest daughter of Police Chief R. B. Ferguson, underwent a serious operation at the Bruce County Hospital this afternoon.

JURY FINDS MEHARG GUILTY OF MURDER

Return Verdict As Prisoner Collapses and Mother Sobs.

HAMILTON, Ont., Oct. 7.—Wilfrid Meharg, aged 22, was this afternoon found guilty of murdering Dr. E. J. Whitworth of Brinbrook on December 23 last, and sentence will be passed upon him by Chief Justice Mullock before the completion of the court.

When the foreman of the jury announced a verdict of "guilty" Meharg fell over on his side in the prisoner's box, and tottered when being removed from the courtroom.

A distressing sight was the presence of the father and mother of the prisoner in the courtroom during the summing-up, the mother sobbing and praying for her son's life.

Makes Forceful Plea.

T. J. Agar made a forceful plea for Meharg and reminded the jury that he was only one of five connected with the fatal hold-up and the others had got off with comparatively light sentences.

The judge, addressing the jury, said it was a sad sight to see the broken-hearted parents of the prisoner in court, but society must be protected and the jurors must base their findings on the evidence and not on sympathy.

Edward Dickenson, who was acquitted of the charge of murdering Dr. Whitworth, pleaded guilty to a charge of theft of money during the hold-up in which Dr. Whitworth was shot. He will be sentenced later.

Worked on Slender Clues.

The conviction of Meharg closes one of the most tragic murder trials in the history of Hamilton. Working on the fact that two men entered the Laidman store at Binbrook on December 23 and shot Dr. Whitworth, who was attending it, the police, with the aid of slender clues, were able to capture the two who entered the place and three others who were with them.

BELL PHONE ASKS FOR ITS INCREASE

OTTAWA, Oct. 7.—The Board of Railway commissioners may now proceed with the hearing of the new application of the Bell Telephone Company for a further increase in rates.

This is the position of the matter as the result of the decision of the Government, as announced by Sir James Lougheed, that any appeal from the decision of the board on the new application must be heard in entirety before the cabinet council. An adjournment of the application before the railway commission was taken recently to have this point settled.

Burford

BURFORD, Oct. 7.—The 28th annual exhibition of the South Brant Fair Association held here Tuesday and Wednesday was the most successful in its history. The day was clear and bright, although somewhat cool; the automobiles on the grounds were estimated at 1,500.

The attendance from Brantford would indicate that almost every car owner in the city was a visitor to the great event, as well as several hundred who came on a special train. Paris, Norwich, Scotland, Princeton, Drumbo, Woodstock and other near-by points were represented. More than the usual number of attractions were located on the midway.

The trials of speed proved an interesting feature of the afternoon, with R. J. Thomas officiating as starter, and resulted as follows:

SEEK MORE MEMBERS.

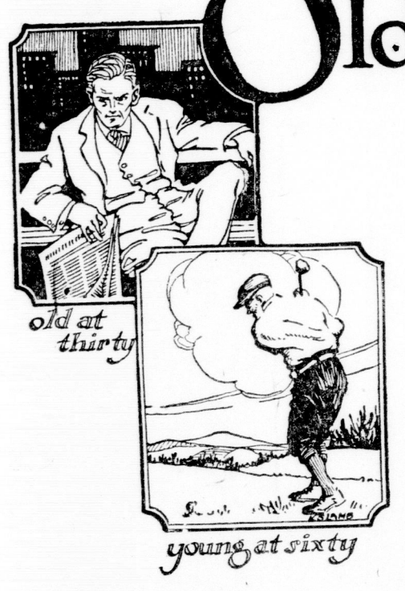

THEDFORD, Oct. 7.—The W. M. S. and Ladies' Aid of Knox Presbyterian Church met Thursday afternoon in the church with a good attendance. Mrs. B. Ross gave a splendid paper on China. It was decided that on October 20 the members of the W. M. S. put on a membership campaign and invite every lady to join the society. Miss G. Boyd sang a solo. The ladies also made arrangements for a tea-meeting on Tuesday evening, October 11.
