Special Sale for One Week at Weiler Bros. Read advt. on inside page.

Mr. J. F. Eckel of Hanover was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Adam Fink.

Mrs. (Dr.) T. A. Carpenter is spending this week with friends in Toronto.

Dr. E. E. Clapp of Walkerton was a visitor to Mildmay last Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ras of Paisley, accompanied by their son and daughter, spent Sunday with Mrs. Cora A. Fink.

Johnston's Liquid Floor Polishing Wax, with complete polishing outfit for sale at Schuett's furniture store. Attractive price.

Mr. and Mrs. Wiedner and baby of Toronto and Miss Lind of Arkwright visited at Mr. John Kaufman's on Sunday.

The Mildmay streets are ready for their annual application of road oil. The dry weather and high winds are raising lots of dust.

We are sorry to report the serious illness of Mr. J. R. Aitchison, editor of the Clifford Express, and municipal clerk of that village.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lobsinger, Mr. George Lobsinger and Mr. E. Zettler of Kitchener were guests at Mr. Peter Lobsinger's on Sunday.

Liesemer & Kalbfleisch, Ford agents, and Ford touring car this week to John Harper, and a used touring car to Andrew M. Schuur.

On Tuesday afternoon, sparks from a C. P. R. locomotive set fire to and completely destroyed a farm house between Gorrie and Wroxeter.

Mr. J. P. Phelan spent the first part of this week with his father at Guelph, who is very critically ill, having sustained a paralytic stroke last week.

Mr. R. Kuntz of Carrick has all previous records broken in the matter of large hen eggs. He found one this week that measured 8 1/2 by 6 1/2 inches.

Mr. and Mrs. Washburn and Mr. J. G. Leach of Kitchener and Mr. Edward Lobsinger of Preston were guests at Mr. August Lobsinger's over Sunday.

Several Carrick fishing parties visited Sauble Falls last week in quest of a supply of fish. The run of suckers this year is said to have been very light.

Miss Mary McGavin, who has been living in Saskatchewan for the past fifteen years, is here on an extended visit to her sister, Mrs. C. Waack of Carrick.

Full wheat and some of the spring crops appear to be making satisfactory progress. The weather has been rather backward, but there is a fair amount of growth.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hessebauer and daughter, Miss Margaret, and sons, Milton and Wilfred, of Kitchener, and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Bean and family of Listowel spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Fink.

Mr. Conrad M. Hossfeld of the 15th concession, one of Carrick's most prosperous and progressive farmers, has purchased a 15-30 McCormick Deering tractor from C. J. Koenig of Mildmay. The machine was delivered on Tuesday.

Mrs. Mary Schmidt of this village was given a pleasant surprise on Monday evening, when a number of her friends here tendered her a miscellaneous shower, prior to her marriage on Tuesday. The event took place at the home of Mr. Jacob Bilger.

Mr. Chas. Eckel, of Belmont, Man. who is visiting his mother at Williamsford, called on old friends here this week. Charlie served an apprenticeship in a general store here, after which he entered the Royal Bank. He is now conducting a grocery business at Belmont, and doing a prosperous trade.

Our Carlsruhe correspondent made reference last week to a popular complaint, when he spoke of the loose stone nuisance on the Carrick roads. Steps are being taken, however, to remove all the stones from the road surface and in a week or so there should be no ground for complaint on that score.

BORN

STRAUSS—In Carrick, on April 28, to Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Strauss, a son.

SCHNELL—At Aberdeens, Sask., on April 17th, to Mr. and Mrs. D. Schnell (nee C. Lenz) a son—stillborn.

Home Made Cheese—Choice home made cheese on hand. Weiler Bros.

Mr. Jos. Buckel purposes taking up residence again in this village very shortly.

Revs. Pietsch and Dahms assisted Rev. K. Gretzinger at the evening service last Sunday.

H. B. Miller has leased John Joyn's ashery lots on Absalom street, west, for pasture purposes.

It is a good plan to let everyone air his views. But for some views airing is not enough; fumigation would be better.

The presentation of the play "Aunt Susan's Visit" will be the best thing of the season. Town Hall Mildmay, May 14th.

The Mildmay business men have not yet come to an agreement in the matter of observing the weekly half holiday during the summer months.

Don't miss the Ford motion picture demonstration in the Town Hall next Tuesday evening. Admission free, and all are cordially invited.

The Hanover Post of last week contained the following notice to dog-owners: "The dog-by-law comes into force May 1 after which all dogs must be tied up or kept on a leash." We know not a few who would like to see Mildmay dogs treated similar if not worse.

Hurt by Fall.
 Mildred, the six year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Scheller of Carrick, who was severely injured by a fall from the roof of the barn, is now making a good recovery under Dr. Carpenter's care. She suffered with concussion of the brain for a time, and her condition was very serious.

Alfalfa Roots Go Deep.
 Frank Lobsinger started last week on the job of excavating for the foundation of a new barn on his premises. The new building will be erected in a place where alfalfa has been growing for some years, and Mr. Lobsinger was amazed to see the roots extending down a distance of five feet into the ground.

"Aunt Susan's Visit."
 This amusing and highly entertaining play will be presented by the young people of the United Church in the town hall, Mildmay, on Thursday evening, May 14th. The Campbell Orchestra of Walkerton, which made such a hit here last fall, has been engaged to assist in the program. Watch for posters and further announcements.

Ulrich—Schmidt.
 A pretty wedding was solemnized in the Galt R. C. Church on Monday, April 27th, at 9 o'clock, when Miss Sue M., daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Cooper of Galt, was united in wedlock to Mr. Isidore Ulrich of Detroit, fourth son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ignatius Ulrich of Mildmay. After a wedding trip to Ottawa and other eastern points, Mr. and Mrs. Ulrich will take up residence in Detroit.

Kreller—Schmidt.
 A quiet wedding took place at high noon on Tuesday of this week, when Miss Mary Schmidt of this village, was united in matrimony to Mr. Charles Kreller, a highly-respected and prosperous young farmer of Howick. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents here, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Miller, was conducted by Rev. K. Gretzinger in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. The Gazette joins with their many friends in extending congratulations and best wishes.

Successful Social Evening.
 The regular social evening held in the Parish Hall by the Young Ladies Sodality of the Sacred Heart Church on Monday evening took the form of a grand masquerade. About one hundred ladies were present, fifty being in costume. The program opened with a grand march to music supplied by Miss M. Schurter. The costumes were extremely original, pretty and ingenious and the judges had great difficulty in awarding the prizes. The prize winners were:—Best dressed lady—Miss Emma Lobsinger; Most striking costume—Miss Marie Heisz; Best dressed couple—Mrs. O'Brien and Mrs. Schmatz. The lucky number waltz in which fifteen couples competed, was won by Misses Rita Weiler and Helen Sauer. A fine program of songs, recitations, choruses and piano duets, was followed by a bun contest, which excited great amusement, and was won by Miss Helen Sauer. The hall was very tastefully decorated with Japanese lanterns. Misses M. Schurter, Florence Sauer and Kathleen Herringer, who had the program in hand, deserve the greatest credit for the success of the affair.

Notice—Weiler Bros. for some Specials. Read their advt. on inside page.

Eggs Took a Decided Drop.
 A Wingham truck containing a load of eggs, made too short a turn on Amon street on Wednesday afternoon, and dumped several cases of good eggs out on to the road. About twenty dozen of the best fruit were destroyed.

Western Pigs Arrived.
 Darling & Kaufman have received their carload of Western feeding pigs, and are selling them to the farmers here. The last shipment made a lot of money for the farmers who bought them, and this lot will do the same. This firm also has a good breeding sow for sale.

Paint Demonstration.
 J. F. Schuett will have a paint demonstration at the furniture store on Friday and Saturday, May 15 and 16, to give the public new ideas and suggestions on decorating their homes, and how to do their own painting and staining with the famous Canada Paint Co. Paints and varnishes.

New Mill Is Ready.
 Schwalm's new mill is now all ready to be put into operation. The machinery has all been placed into position, and the new powerful boiler and engine have been tried out and tested. The being arrived this week, and the new mill will be in full operation the beginning of next week.

Bad Explosion at Teeswater.
 A bad explosion took place on Tuesday afternoon of this week in Brown's garage at Teeswater. The floor of the office was being cleaned, preparatory to being oiled, and a cloth dampened with gasoline was being used to remove the stains. The friction produced in the cleaning process, caused a terrible explosion, which blew out the front plate glass windows, and did a lot of damage in the building. Miss Hall, the bookkeeper, also received painful, but not serious, burns.

Electors' Assent Not Required.
 The Mildmay Council has given an order to the Bickle Fire Engines, Limited, for a Type 12 engine for the local fire department. Debentures will be issued to pay for same, but it will not be necessary to submit the matter to a vote of the ratepayers, the Statute, giving municipal councils the right to purchase fire equipment at a cost not exceeding $5000, if the by-law is carried by a two-thirds vote of the Council. The engine should be ready for shipment to Mildmay early in June.

Schiestel—Schmidt.
 A very pretty wedding was solemnized quietly in St. Joachim's R. C. Church, Edmonton, Alta., on Tuesday, April 14th, 1925, when Miss Cecelia, eldest daughter of the late Mr. U. Schmidt and Mrs. U. Schmidt, was united in marriage to Mr. Edward Schiestel, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Schiestel, of Hayter, Alta. The bride was attired in a navy blue ensemble suit, a peach coloured French blouse, a hat of grey, with satin slippers to match. The couple was unattended.

Rev. Father Tavenier conducted the matrimonial ceremony. The groom's gift to the bride was a Heintzman Upright piano. After the ceremony a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served at the Corona Hotel, Edmonton. We extend to the happy couple our warmest congratulations, and wish them a long, happy, wedded life.

An inquest was held last Friday when the boy, Harold, sobbed out the story of how he had killed his half-crazed father with an axe, in order to save his mother who was being beaten into unconsciousness. A coroner's jury which met in this little northern town on Friday to inquire into the circumstances surrounding the death of Edward Franklin Braun, returned a verdict of "justifiable homicide." The verdict may automatically cut off any further proceedings that might have been taken against the boy, and although no official statement was issued by the attorney-general's department it was said unofficially that a murder charge would not be laid against the boy.

The 13-year-old boy gave no sign of emotion, but two big tears rolled down his cheeks, and with the remark of "Gee, won't mamma be glad I don't have to go to jail," he walked out of the room straight into the arms of his mother.

AN ALBERTA TRAGEDY

Edward F. Braun, a former Carrick man, killed by his 13-year-old son.

Edward Franklin Braun, youngest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Louis Braun of Mildmay, who lived on a farm fourteen miles from Didsbury, Alberta, was killed by his son, Harold, on Sunday, April 15th. It appears that deceased and his wife had been living peaceably together for some years. Two years ago Mr. Braun was thrown from a horse, and had his head injured. Since that time he has been very high tempered and morose, and he was subject to spells when he lost control of himself. It was no doubt during one of these spells that he started to pummel his wife.

The Didsbury, Alta., Pioneer reports as follows:—A terrible sequel to family disorders that have existed for some years culminated on Sunday afternoon in 13-year-old Harold Braun killing his father, E. F. Braun of Westcott, by hitting him two or three times in the back of the head with a small axe.

It appears that Mr. Braun who was known to have frenzied fits of bad temper coupled with a morose disposition at times, attacked his wife on Sunday afternoon after some days of quarrelling and the two boys, Earl, 9 years old, and Harold, 13 years of age, succeeded in getting the attention of the father and allowing the mother to escape. The father then ordered the boys to take a team and water them, and while they were away they heard more trouble at the home.

They ran back to the house and found the father had the mother on the ground and was beating her viciously. The oldest lad, Harold, picked up a small axe lying nearby and hit his father in the back of the head to make him leave mother alone. The boys then got their mother away and they all went to a nearby neighbors residence.

Dr. W. G. Evans was immediately called out to attend the mother and he found her badly bruised and injured, both eyes being closed and the face badly swollen and one arm and shoulder in a very bad shape. After relieving Mrs. Braun, Dr. Evans asked to be taken over to the home farm to see Mr. Braun and see if he could pacify him, but on the way over the boy told the Doctor what he had done. When they arrived they went to the spot where the trouble happened and found Braun still lying there but he was dead.

An inquest was held last Friday when the boy, Harold, sobbed out the story of how he had killed his half-crazed father with an axe, in order to save his mother who was being beaten into unconsciousness. A coroner's jury which met in this little northern town on Friday to inquire into the circumstances surrounding the death of Edward Franklin Braun, returned a verdict of "justifiable homicide." The verdict may automatically cut off any further proceedings that might have been taken against the boy, and although no official statement was issued by the attorney-general's department it was said unofficially that a murder charge would not be laid against the boy.

The 13-year-old boy gave no sign of emotion, but two big tears rolled down his cheeks, and with the remark of "Gee, won't mamma be glad I don't have to go to jail," he walked out of the room straight into the arms of his mother.

MINERALS FOR YOUNG STOCK

BY CHARLES A. MATTHEWS.

Animal nutrition studies indicate that a deficiency of certain mineral elements in the feed of pregnant females is largely responsible for various ailments among the young of our farm animals.

This is said to be particularly true in sections around the Great Lakes. There it often happens that the young of horses, cattle, hogs and sheep are born dead, or weak and hairless or nearly hairless, as a result of goitre. Goitre also occasionally develops in the young after birth.

This is attributable to a deficiency of iodine in the feed or drinking water of the dam during pregnancy, or of the young during earliest development.

The minerals in which the ordinary feed is most likely to be deficient are calcium, phosphorus, sodium, chlorine, and iodine. Nonleguminous forage is particularly apt to be deficient in these minerals, especially when grown on acid soils.

Forage and pasture crops grown on lime soils are generally found to contain calcium and phosphorus in quantities sufficient for normal requirements. Leguminous roughage also usually contains satisfactory quantities of both calcium and phosphorus. Fortunately, any or all of the minerals required for best results may be easily supplied as supplements to the farm ration.

Calcium may be supplied in the form of high-grade ground limestone, bone meal, steamed bone meal, spent bone black, wood ashes, ground rock phosphate, acid phosphate, or slaked lime. Of these, high-grade ground lime and steamed bone meal are regarded as the most desirable sources of calcium.

The bone meals and rock and acid phosphates are also sources of phosphorus, steamed bone meal being the form most preferred.

WHEN TO USE IODIDE.

Common salt will supply all the needs for both sodium and chlorine. Iodine may be supplied in the form of either potassium iodide or sodium iodide, the latter form being the cheaper.

Where the ration contains leguminous roughage, tankage, or other feed rich in calcium, there is usually no need for supplying additional calcium, and the same holds true for phosphorus where wheat bran, wheat middlings, soy beans, rice polish, cottonseed meal, tankage or skim milk are fed.

Mature animals, or meat animals, usually do not require mineral supplements. It is the young, growing animal, the pregnant or lactating female and the laying hen that require a greater concentration of minerals in the ration.

Mineral mixtures are easily made up and need not be expensive. All should contain common salt and a calcium supplement. The following are suggested:

A mixture of equal parts of ground limestone and salt, or of wood ashes and salt will furnish calcium but will be deficient in phosphorus. A mixture of equal parts of steamed bone meal and salt will supply both calcium and phosphorus.

For hogs a mixture composed of 45 parts of ground limestone, 45 parts of steamed bone meal and 10 parts of tankage is said to give excellent results. Hogs that are not on green pasture should always have free access to some simple mineral mixture, or an addition of about 2 pounds of minerals to 100 pounds of dry concentrates.

Iodide is not recommended as an ingredient of mineral mixtures for general use. It is not definitely known just how much iodide is required to prevent goitre in regions where it occurs. A dose of 2 grains of potassium or sodium iodide daily per head for cows, ewes, mares and sows throughout the gestation period is recommended.

Larger quantities may be poisonous, so care should be exercised in administering iodide. A tablespoonful of a mixture composed of 1 ounce of iodide dissolved in 1 gallon of water will contain about 2 grains of iodide. This quantity may be sprinkled over or mixed with the feed.

The Perennial Border.

Many owners of homes who hesitate to grow flowers on account of the time it would seem to take would find the labor problem largely solved by the growing of perennials. Modern perennials include many of the finest flowers we have and have great decorative value for the homes. Perennials may be grown as the individual plants, but they are better adapted for border planting, along a fence or wall or beside a planting of shrubs and trees which go as a background. A position of full sunshine is necessary for lustrous growth. In no case should a herbaceous border be planted in the center of a small lawn. It may flank a walk at the side of a lawn with very good effect. Perennials like many forms of garden plants, require well drained good soil. That is to say, where one may expect a satisfactory crop of potatoes, perennials will usually do well. In preparing for a perennial border, well rotted manure should be deeply dug in. As the plants are to remain where planted for several years, a good supply of manure is needed from the beginning to assure fine bloom year after year. Bone meal lasts well in the soil and should be freely used when preparing for a perennial border. The width of the border will depend largely on the breadth of the lawn. It may vary from three to twelve feet.

The planting of the border is important. The tallest growing kinds of plants should be used for the back. In very wide grounds shrubs may occupy the position next the fence that is to be screened. The first line of perennials should not be closer than eighteen inches from the fence or shrubby background. The plants should be arranged in groups of three, each group set four or five feet apart, and the individual plants in each clump about twenty inches apart. Line No. 2 should be composed of plants of intermediate height and should stand not nearer than two feet from Line No. 1 in the rear. The clumps here should be planted opposite the vacancies in the back row. Line No. 3 still farther forward, should consist of several dwarf varieties. The arrangement should be similar but correspondingly closer in order that the ground may be fairly well covered when the plants have made their full growth. Line No. 4, which should form the front edge of the border, should be about fifteen inches from Line No. 3, and nine inches from the grass or the walk which it skirts. This row should consist of edging plants of quite dwarf nature, arranged in clumps of considerable size. In the planting it is not necessary to adhere to a straight line for the different rows. These should be sufficiently irregular as to take away all appearance of rows in the border.

In the choosing of plants questions to be considered are hardiness, time of flowering, duration of flowering and color. There are endless kinds and varieties of perennial plants from which to choose. Mr. H. J. Moore, a well-known landscape horticulturist, has recommended to the Ontario Horticultural Societies a suitable list, having reference to colors, hardiness and time of flowering, as follows: Anchusa varieties, dropmore and opal; colors, gentian blue and opal; height five feet; season of flowering, July-August. Campanulas (the bell-flowers), latifolia varieties, violet purple, chiefly blue, five feet and less, June-August. Delphinium moerheimii, white, four feet, July. Aconitum fischeri (the aconite), clear blue, three and a half feet, September. Aquilegia (the columbine), various, two feet, May-June. Michaelmas daisies, purple, two-three feet, autumn. Heuchera muscquetaria, brilliant scarlet, one and a half feet, June-August. Iris, variety canary yellow, two feet, May. Iris pumila, blue, nine inches, April-May. Hepatica, single red and double red, six-nine inches, April. Arabis (rock cress) alba, single and double, white, nine inches to one foot, April-May. Phlox subulata-varieties, mauve and other shades, six inches, May-July. Dianthus (pinkies), Mrs. Sinkins, white, nine inches, June-July. Helleborus niger, "Christmas rose," snow white, one foot, November-December. Campanula carpathica, blue, one foot, June-August. C. Carpathica alba, white, one foot, June-August.

Practically all of these plants can be grown from seed, when a year must be lost before bloom is secured. The seed is sown in rows as is the seed of annual flowers, transplanted and cultivated during the first year in readiness for planting out in the border in the autumn. The plants, on the other hand, may be secured from the grower ready for planting in the fall or spring. The perennial border after planting cannot be left to take care of itself. It must be hoed and raked from time to time similar to any other garden crop. If the cultivation is done sufficiently frequently to keep the soil loose on top, there will be no difficulty from weeds. Nor left for many years without replanting. Some of the plants will be much more aggressive than others and will have a tendency to crowd out those that are less vigorous. From time to time, therefore, the border should be taken up, the plants divided, the ground refertilized, and pieces of the larger clumps returned to the border. This replanting affords an excellent opportunity for changing the plan and introducing new varieties.—Can. Hort. Council.

The Foster Mother of the World.

The cow is a most wonderful laboratory. She takes the grasses of the field and roughage of the farm and converts them into the most perfect food for man. In that food there is a mysterious something which scientists have found essential to the highest health of the human race, and which can be found nowhere else. Men have sought for centuries the fabled Fountain of Youth. The nearest approach to that fountain which has yet been discovered is the udder of the cow. Without her milk children languish, the vigor of the adult declines, and the vitality of the human race runs low.—F. O. Lowden.

One lamp, the mother's love, amid the stars shall lift its pure flame unchanged, and before the throne of God burn through eternity.—N. P. W.

Henry Disston, of Toronto, has just completed what are claimed to be the two largest saws ever made in the British Empire, measuring 108½ inches in diameter.

Plums From Stones.

Growers of plums will find a deal of valuable information in the recently published bulletin on "Plum Culture," by the Dominion Horticulturist, which can be obtained by applying to the Publications Branch of the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa. Of special interest is a chapter on "Seeding Varieties," which indicates that no part of the country need be without plums of some kind and which can be easily cultivated. After remarking that while many fine kinds of plums are grown in Canada, there is always a possibility of getting something better, the bulletin goes on to say that in the colder parts of the province there is excellent opportunity for developing hardier and improved sorts. All that is probably necessary is to grow seedlings from the stones of the most successful kinds grown in the vicinity or nearest thereto. Stones should be saved from the largest plums from the most productive tree of the variety of which seedlings are desired. If possible these stones should be planted immediately after the fruit becomes ripe and should not be allowed to become dry. Stones can be kept over winter in boxes mixed with moist, but not wet sand. The process to pursue, which is called stratification, is to place a layer of sand about an inch in thickness along the bottom of the box, cover this with stones, then place another layer of sand, put more stones on top, and continue until the box is filled, and bury the box outside where there is good drainage or keep in the cellar. The stones should be planted not more than one inch deep and the soil should be kept thoroughly cultivated during the summer. The next spring or the one following, the young trees should be planted about ten feet apart and left to fruit, which they will do in from three to six years.

Plant Trees for Poultry. Fruit trees for use on the poultry farm are a wise investment. They furnish necessary shade and often produce fruit of considerable quality with less spraying than is needed in the commercial orchard. Large apple trees are quite an asset on the range of the young stock. They furnish fine fresh air roosting places until time to place the pullets in the laying houses.

One of the least expensive portions of the dairy cow's diet is water. It should, therefore, be furnished in abundance at all times, kept pure and clean.

Happy is the man or woman who has some one to believe in him or her.

EAST INDIA TIP CAT

Every town-bred Canadian boy knows how to play the time-honored game syle "tip cat." In England, also, this famous sidewalk pastime is vastly popular, and the historians of sport pretend to trace its history back to early Saxon times. Few people, however, are aware that tip cat is indulged in so far East as India, or that the dusky urchins of Bombay and Madras are positive adepts at the game.

In India tip cat is known as "gullidanda"—that is, cat stick. The little Hindus or Mahometans scoop out a small hole in the ground. This hole is known as "gurchi," the cat or peg being "gulli," and the stick to strike with "danda." Players arrange their turns by a Hindoo version of the familiar "cony meeny miny mo." Player No. 1 takes the "danda" and strikes the "gulli" (made exactly like our cat) as far as it will go. The opposite player fetches the "gulli," and endeavors to throw it back into the hole, or "gorch." If he does not succeed, player No. 1 scores a point and has another chance with the danda. On the other hand, if he hops the peg into the gurchi, player No. 1 is put out, and the next in order takes his place.

But tip cat is not the only game a knowledge of which our boys share with the lads of India. In the bazaars and public places of all the big cities from Simla to Ceylon, the youthful Hindoo and Mahometan enters enthusiastically into the excitement of hop scotch. They call it "ekaria duk-

Grace for Gardens.

Lord God in Paradise,
Look upon our sowing,
Bless the little gardens
And the good green growing!
Give us sun,
Give us rain,
Bless the orchards
And the grain!

Lord God in Paradise,
Over my brown field is seen,
Trembling and adventuring,
A miracle of green,
As you know,
To keep it safe
And make it grow!

Lord God in Paradise,
For the wonder of the seed,
Wondering we praise you while
We tell You of our need.
—Louise Driscoll.

Move the Colony House.

One of the most common losses in brooding chicks during the spring is from soil infection, resulting from coccidiosis, worms and digestive disorders of numerous kinds.

It has only been within the last few years that the successful poultryman has appreciated the wisdom of changing the range each year and brooding his chicks on clean ground. This is an excellent practice and good as far as it goes, but it will pay all poultrymen to brood in colony houses, using colony brooder stoves, and then at least once or possibly twice during the brooding season move the colony houses to a new clean spot on the range.

When the youngsters are little they are confined close to the house, and throughout their brooding and growing period they have a tendency to roam around the house rather than roam long distances. It is no wonder then that the soil immediately adjacent to the brooder house becomes quickly contaminated.

It is not easy nor possible to cleanse this ground when the chicks are running on it.

It is very easy, however, to hitch onto the colony house with a team of horses or a tractor and move it forty feet in any direction, simply placing it on a new piece of ground which has not been intensively cropped.

Farm records show that dairy herds in which a portion of the cows freshen in the fall give larger net returns than the herds kept under similar conditions except that the cows freshen in the spring.

Greatness comes only by growth.

RHUBARB WITH VARIATIONS

Rhubarb, that good spring fruit our grandmothers set such store by, is one of the most valuable of plants for its spring tonic effects. Few housewives realize its possibilities as a dessert; they assign it to the saucepan without any attempt at further improvement, unless it is the making of a simple pie. The following ways will help to vary its use:

Boiled Rhubarb Pudding—To half a pound of chopped rhubarb add half a cup of finely chopped suet, five cups of sifted flour, two teaspoons of baking powder, one cup of sugar and enough milk to make a stiff batter; tie in a floured cloth and boil three and a half hours. Serve with hard sauce.

Rhubarb Dumplings—Stew rhubarb which has been cut into inch lengths in a little more than half its weight in sugar and just enough water to keep from burning. (It forms plenty of juice when it begins cooking.) Make a batter of two cups of flour, half a teaspoon of salt, two teaspoons of baking powder, a scant cup of sweet milk, and drop this into the boiling rhubarb by spoonful. Serve hot either with or without cream.

Rhubarb Betty—Place a layer of cooked rhubarb in a well buttered baking dish, then a layer of bread crumbs (either white or brown bread), sprinkle with brown sugar and cinnamon, and repeat until the dish is full. Bake in a moderate oven until brown and serve with plain or whipped cream.

Rhubarb Shortcake—Make a shortcake as for strawberries or peaches, but use for the filling the following mixture: Rhubarb which has been stewed and sweetened to taste and mixed with chopped citron or candied orange peel. Garnish the top with whipped cream.

Rhubarb Jelly—Cook one pound of chopped rhubarb in a cup of water and one of sugar until tender. Have ready one tablespoon of gelatine soaked in half a cup of cold water, to which has been added either four tablespoons of lemon or orange juice and some of the grated rind of which ever fruit is used. Combine and pour into a wet mold. Serve when firm with whipped or plain cream or a thin custard.

Rhubarb Tartis—Cook half-inch lengths of rhubarb, without peeling (if very young), and without adding water. Sweeten to taste and flavor with grated orange peel. Add to each cup of rhubarb the beaten yolk of an egg. Cook until thick and fill into pastry shells. Put a spoon of stiffly beaten and sweetened whites on the top of each tart and set in a moderate oven to brown.

Rhubarb Ice Cream—To three pints of chopped rhubarb add enough water to cover and cook until tender. Put in two cups of sugar and stir until dissolved, then strain through a fine sieve. When almost cold add one pint of cream and more sugar if desired, then freeze.

Rhubarb Salad—In some menus a fruit salad takes the place of dessert. To prepare such a salad from rhubarb, soak three tablespoons of powdered gelatine in half a cup of cold water until soft, then add two cups of boiling water and stir until the gelatine is dissolved. Stir in four tablespoons of lemon juice and half a cup of sugar.

Pour into a square granite pan to the depth of about an inch and set on the ice to harden. When it begins to congeal add a pint of chopped rhubarb, which has been steamed until tender and sweetened slightly, and one cup of chopped nuts. When cold and hardened cut into three-inch squares and serve on any kind of salad green with a mayonnaise dressing. A white salad dressing, excellent for this salad, is made by adding half the whipped white of an egg or half a cup of whipped cream to the usual mayonnaise mixture (made with lemon instead of vinegar).

Rhubarb Shrub—A delicious drink may be made with rhubarb. Cut into small pieces ten stalks of rhubarb, mix it with four ounces of chopped raisins and six cups of water and let simmer for an hour. Strain and add two tablespoons of lemon juice and serve with shaved ice.

Preservation of Eggs.

At the St. Anne de la Pocatiere, Dominion Experimental Station, Quebec Province, an experiment has been tried to ascertain the best method of storing eggs for winter use. The experiment included eggs stored in one-dozen cartons, without treatment; eggs wrapped in tissue paper and stored in one-dozen cartons; eggs dipped in boiling water and stored in one-dozen cartons; eggs dipped in boiling water and wrapped in tissue paper and stored in one-dozen cartons; eggs placed on small ends in earthen jars and covered with salt; eggs placed in earthen jars and covered with water glass solution and eggs placed in earthen jars and covered with lime water. The eggs stored were new laids, fertile, sound in shell and clean and were stored from July 15 to December 15, 1923. They were placed in a cellar on a cement floor, the temperature varying from 40 to 50 deg. F. This first experiment would indicate that the use of commercial water glass solution (obtainable at most drug stores) and lime water, which can be home-made, are the two best means of preserving eggs for a fairly long period. The contents of the eggs in the lime water were just as good as those in the water glass solution, there being some difference in the appearance of the shells. Salt gave poorer results, but can be used advantageously for short periods. Eggs wrapped in tissue paper followed in results, but those dipped in boiling water and unwrapped turned out poorer than any.

A FLATTERING AFTERNOON GOWN. Navy blue twill or heavy silk inter-pret this delightfully fresh afternoon gown. The side plaits give a width to the narrow silhouette which is always welcomed by the active miss and small woman. There is a freshness about the grey set-in front of contrasting material, while the plaited frill about the neck and sleeves is always youthful and flattering to the small woman. Very attractive is this model, No. 1040, made in brilliant-colored tissue or gingham. Hemstitching gives a pleasing trimming for the set-in front. The gathered frills are much more useful when the dress is made of wash materials. Cut in sizes 34 to 42 inches bust. Size 38 requires 4½ yards of 36-inch material.

HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS.

Write your name and address plainly, giving number and size of such patterns as you want. Enclose 20c in stamps or coin (coin preferred; wrap it carefully) for each number, and address your order to Pattern Dept., Wilson Publishing Co., 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto. Orders filled by return mail.

Rhubarb Custard.

For each egg use one cup of stewed rhubarb which has been put through a sieve. Add the rhubarb to the well beaten yolks, sweeten to taste, then beat in the whipped whites. Put the whole into a buttered baking dish and bake until firm and it shows signs of cracking. Serve when cold.

Blow up the stumps and stones, or you are likely to blow up when they hit one.

They Also Serve.

God doth not need
Either man's works or His own gifts;
Who best
Bears his mild yoke, they serve Him best;
His state
Is Kingly; thousands at His bidding speed,
And post o'er land and ocean without rest;
They also serve who only stand and wait. —Milton.

How She Knew.

A city-bred girl married a young farmer. As her husband came into the house one day, she exclaimed: "Oh, John, I found four ducks' eggs among the two dozen you brought in this morning."
"Ducks' eggs," said John. "How do you know they were ducks' eggs?"
"Why," she answered, "I put them in water and four of them floated."

Put Her Ring on the Hook.
"When a girl starts fishing for a proposal what should I do?"
"If you love her, put herring on her hook, of course."

The Automobile

REPAIRS MADE IN TIME SAVE EXPENSE.

While the whole fabric of our civilization is built on the faith one human being has in another, in the automobile realm of life there appears to be a severe strain on this faith on the part of the motorist toward the service station. The auto owner goes to his doctor, having faith that his prescription will help. But when his car gets sick he often fails to have confidence in the auto doctor's ability to rectify the trouble.

There are hardly any exceptions to the general rule that the man who owns an automobile has a car that will develop troubles of various kinds sooner or later. Although cars are being made better every year and troubles of all kinds should consequently become less and less, troubles do come. Unless the owner of the machine is an expert automobile mechanic himself, which he is not likely to be, he will do well to visit a reliable repair shop with confidence in the results. This is merely an application of common sense to a motoring experience. Even if he is a fairly competent mechanic, which most folks are not, he will often find it desirable to call on another expert automobile mechanic to get the advantage of his experience. He will do well to take the advice of the man whose business it is to know what is the matter with a car and what ought to be done to it to repair it correctly.

SEEK ADVICE OF EXPERT.

It is also important for the owner to seek the advice of an expert at the first indication of trouble instead of putting off this procedure until the machine has gone into a decline or until it has, in fact, reached a serious state of trouble. When such a policy is followed repair bills are not likely to be larger in the long run.

There is a tendency for an owner ignorantly to complain about the size of his repair bills and to condemn the repair shop owners as pirates. In spite of this feeling on the part of many, as a rule men who run repair shops do not charge excessively, nor do they try to do more work than is necessary. No business could flourish on such practices.

There are owners of a car who some times fail to appreciate the time and material involved in making even minor repairs or what a minor repair may lead to by way of other essential attention. I recall a man who drove his car into a repair shop and said that the engine occasionally ran irregularly. He thought the spark plugs needed cleaning. The mechanic cleaned the spark plugs. He cleaned and adjusted the distributor points and drained the carburetor and vacuum tank. He also tested the compression, and in so doing found a valve leaking. Consequently it was necessary for him to remove the cylinder head and grind the valves.

All of this seemed like a lot of work to the owner, but the mechanic operated on the basis of assuring himself that he had removed the cause of the trouble. His idea was to give the owner the satisfaction the mechanic knew he really desired. This is only one illustration of many which might be given to illustrate this point. A minor trouble may result in the necessity of entirely disassembling the engine. Of course, such unexpected labor involves considerable time and expense. Yet the servicing institution would not give the owner real service if he did not completely repair the car. The expense to the owner doubtless seems large at the time, whereas in the long run to have the complete job done represents an actual saving in the owner's money.

EFFECTIVE SERVICE.

There is increasingly in the automobile industry an appreciation of the need of giving motorists complete and efficient servicing facilities at the most reasonable prices possible. After a car has been properly designed, manufactured in quantity and economically distributed to the buyer, the next essential to the industry's prosperity and to the owner's satisfaction is effective servicing.

Take a prospective owner of car who realizes he can get expert service in all parts of the country on a particular make of machine. This fact is bound to have a bearing on his decision to purchase it. His logical conclusion is that a mechanic who devotes all his time to one kind of car will be more efficient on that particular make than a general mechanic who works on all kinds of machines.

While service stations are constantly improving their services and consequently their chances of securing and holding the good will of the motoring public, it should be said that the motorist's lack of faith in the service ability of some stations has not been without considerable reason. Numerous managers in this repair business have failed to appreciate the value of having trained experts in their employ. They can hardly expect car owners to have supreme confidence in their prescriptions unless they insist on employing only those technicians who by their experience and training are worthy of the respect of the automobilist.

Capt. Angus Buchanan, M.C., who recently arrived on this continent, was the first white man to cross the Sahara Desert by camel. He started out with 36 animals, but only one survived the 3,500-mile trip.

Tell-Tale Eyebrows.

What a lot of difference there is in the eyebrows of people! Some are bushy, others almost invisible. Some are straight, others curved. From the variations, it is possible to judge a good deal of the owner's character. A person whose eyebrows are strongly marked, with long hair of vigorous growth, is usually practical. Well-defined eyebrows denote a strong character—an individual with a good deal of personality. Eyebrows of fine, silky hair suggest that their owner is lacking in force and pushfulness.

Eyebrows that meet in the center, at the top of the nose, are usually a sign of quick temper. A person with bushy eyebrows will be amiable. Arched and finely-pencilled brows denote an artistic or imaginative temperament.

Eight Little Girls.

They sit like tulips in my class,
A scrubbed and shining seven,
Sundays at half-past three o'clock,
Learning the way to Heaven.
Their hands lie still in starched laps,
Like petals on the ground;
Always they watch me carefully
With eyes grown large and round,
To answer who climbed up a tree
When Christ was walking near,
Or ask why John the Baptist ate Things that were all so queer.

Then suddenly at four o'clock
The door bursts very wide,
And, lifting dark, unruly face,
My eighth lamb comes inside.
She says she couldn't be on time,
She kisses me instead
She blows like naughty wind across
My proper tulip bed.
They all begin to whisper now
No more with silence shod,
Over my all unanswered talk
She asks me: "Who made God?"

Curious that when I have forgot
My scrubbed and proper seven,
Still comes the thought of one dark face
Learning its way to Heaven!

A Cross-Word Puzzle.

Life itself is the largest of cross-word puzzles, and the prizes, like the visits of angels, often seem few and misconstructed. Our best intentions are signs miscarry. Where we had looked for perceptive comprehension and fortitude we meet, with a bewildering rebuff. But all the time we must read a meaning, spell out a riddle, discover and apply a definition, though moving in the dark from the first word, which was with God, unto the last.

Throughout our earthly days, what we call success and what we consider happiness depend a great deal on our putting the right words in the right places. Sometimes, written or spoken, language seems a hopeless mist, lamentably inadequate to meet the situation. On the other hand, there are fortunately constituted mortals for whom legions of words, at a summons, are ready to arise and obey the bidding, with felicity.

There is in most human beings the ineradicable spirit of curiosity, of exploration and of competition, which the ruffing craze for the cross-word puzzle serves to illustrate. We are piqued and spurred by problems set; we are put on our mettle by what at first sight seems insoluble. And our own course across the checkered field of life cannot by any means be laid without reference to the way that is taken by others, with which our own is interlaced.

Lewis Carroll in his immortal stories for children—"Alice in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking Glass"— found analogies at many points between chess or cards and the great game of life that we are bound to play. A wise man of England said very seriously that he found his wartime existence a jigsaw puzzle. There is a closer parallel between the current pastime and the conduct of our lives in their various contacts and implications, which establish the fact that none of us can live for himself alone.

Concerning Study Hour.

When study hour seems a bother Be calm, don't get into a pother. A world that never had a history Would be a most unpleasant mystery. How inconvenient it would be If one and two made aught but three. If nitrogen and oxygen Should fail to mix, alas, what then? Such funny facts! But none can doubt them. It's just as well to know about them.

Tombs of Distant Times.

The world's oldest stone buildings are reported to have been discovered near the famous pyramids of Sakkara, about fifteen miles south of Cairo. They are two royal tomb chapels of the third Egyptian dynasty, about 4000 B.C.

Built in a style differing in almost every respect from what is known as Egyptian architecture, the chapels are believed to have been the burial places of princesses or queens. Fragments of gravestones of royal princesses are said to have been found by archeologists who have been digging on the site.

be perennially good. At least, there is an annual fresh crop of them. The Earl of Meath, who has recently done the inevitable and written his memoirs, tells of an occasion when he was a member of a party on the royal yacht. The Queen was seated on deck. She noticed that the sailors were gathering in groups and talking and looking at her. She summoned the captain and asked what was the matter; was there a mutiny?
He replied: "No, ma'am, but your majesty is sitting just over the keel of rum, and this is the time when each sailor usually obtains a tot, and they cannot enjoy it unless your majesty moves."
So the queen moved.

FINED $20 AND COSTS

James Kirby, a Belmore farmer and auto dealer, appeared before Magistrate Macarty of Warton here yesterday on charge of assault laid by a lad named Lawrence McKay who had worked for Kirby.
There had been some dispute about McKay's wages and he had sued him in division court, getting judgement.
A balance of $6 and a motorcycle was coming to McKay on the division court judgement and he went to Kirby with an order for six dollars.
Instead of giving him the motorcycle and the $6, Kirby beat him up and made him pay $80. After hearing a lot of evidence from both sides and Kirby promising to make restitution to McKay, who is a youth of about 18, the Magistrate let Kirby off with a fine of $20 and costs of $27.50, making in all $47.50, besides the $12 restored to McKay. The Magistrate also ruled that half of the fine would go to McKay for damages.—Telescope.

VICTIM OF CONFIDENCE GAME

The old three-man game of matching pennies, with two working against one, was revived recently at Detroit, and Walter Pollack, 20 years old, fresh from a farm near Kincairdine, was the victim. Pollock met a stranger in the Michigan Central depot at Detroit, who, by some peculiar coincidence, was going to the same town. Pollack was eager to learn how to make some money at the stranger's suggestion and listened intently to an explanation of the penny-matching game. A third man turned up and they started to match. Pollack and the third man each lost $10, and the first man promised to return Pollack's share and half of the winnings. As the stranger stepped around the corner and promised to be back, Pollack grew suspicious and he called the police. Two men were arrested on a charge of larceny.

VOIGT-TODTZ

The marriage of Matilda (Til-die) Todtz, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Todtz, west of Walkerton, to Mr. William Voigt of Walkerton, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Voigt of Formosa, was solemnized in the Lutheran church here on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Gorman, Lutheran minister of North Brant, officiating. The bride, who was given away by her father, was becomingly attired in a suit of navy blue, with hat to match.
She was attended by her sister, Miss Hannah Todtz, while the groom was supported by Mr. Louis Hacking of Brant. The young couple will reside in Walkerton, where the groom is employed as teamster by Mr.
Alex. George, coal and wood dealer.

an action against the County of Grey for damages sustained three weeks ago when his car turned tur-hill, and he was severely injured.

The bad condition of the road at the time of the accident is, we believe, the cause of the action, the plaintiff claiming that had the road been in proper repair, the accident never would have occurred.

FEEDING OFFAL TO HOGS

In view of the fact that a complaint was laid against a Carrick farmer for allowing his hogs to eat the offal of a dead horse, the Board of Health calls attention to the following extracts from the Public Health Act:
Whenever any medical officer of health or sanitary inspector knows or has reason to believe that blood, offal or the meat of any dead animal which has not been previously boiled or steamed when fresh or becoming putrid or decomposed, or which, although boiled or steamed, is putrid or decomposed, has been or is being fed to hogs, he may seize and carry away the hogs, whether dead or alive, or otherwise detain them so as to prevent their removal.
The owner, or person in charge of,
or any person found feeding any blood, offal or meat to hogs shall incur a penalty of not less than $5 nor more than $50, and upon his conviction the medical officer of health shall order the hogs whether dead or alive, to be destroyed or so disposed of as to prevent them from being exposed for sale or used for food for man.
In every prosecution under this section, where it is proved that such blood, offal or decomposed meat was found upon the premises, the burden of proof that the same was not intended to be fed to hogs shall be upon the person charged.
Every butcher and other person selling meat shall on the request of the medical officer of health make affidavit as to the place at which the slaughter of his meat is carried on, and where it is without the limits of the municipality such place shall be open to inspection by the medical officer of health or by an inspector appointed by the council of the municipality in which the meat is offered for sale.

NEW MODELS

I bought my car in '17, some eight long years ago; then it was beautiful and green, and made a gorgeous show, and neighbors envied me, I ween, as I drove to and fro. Now my old boat is red with rust, it's been through winter's gales and summer rain and fog and dust, and sounds like kegs of nails; but still it has my perfect trust, when fouring hills and dales. Now models come out year by year, in shining paint arrayed; they make my poor old wain look queer and ancient and decayed, when agents at my door appear and stump me for a trade. But those bright boats some twelve months hence, will join the has been class, and no one, with a lick of sense, will cheer them as they pass; new models are in evidence, and old cars cut no grass.
I've seen so many fellows sigh and rail against their fate, because the motor cars they buy so soon are out of date; they're new in June and in July they for the junk man wait.
Oh, scores of men are driving boats equipped for years of wear, but later models get their goats and so they wail and swear, and folly of this sort denotes a head that needs repair. How happy is the thoughtful man who lives his rusty car, who points with pride to his sedan that hauls him near and far, who is not sighing for a van that glitters like a star. New models keep my neighbors broke, they're always "trading in" while my old bus, in wreaths of smoke, is kicking up a din, and I take rubles in a poke and salt them in my bin.—Walt Mason.

SCHOOL TEACHER OUTWITTED BY WAYWARD PUPIL

Schoolboy pranks are up-to-the-minute and have advanced with everything else, but a young public school pupil who appeared before Magistrate Watt this morning in juvenile court can claim the title for originality. His teacher, who was having considerable trouble with him intended to phone his mother at noon and tell her of his misbehavior. However when teacher lifted the receiver off the hook at noon to keep her promise, the instrument was dead—the wires outside the house had been cut—an idea, the young lad mentioned this morning that he had gleaned from a Sunday paper. His mother was also present and told the magistrate that she had been having trouble with the boy, whose veracity was not to be commended, and asked that something be done. The boy received a little taste of the police court strap, and was promised more if he continued his pranks.—Guelph Mercury.

ENGINEERS AND LAWYERS PREPARING FOR FRAY

Mud River Scheme Comes up for Final Hearing May 12th, When Referee Henderson Gives Decision

The action of Mr. Bannerman against the Municipalities which have drained their lands into the Teeswater River, thereby flooding his farm property bordering on the river, will come up for hearing on May 12th at Walkerton.

Preparatory to his hearing the defendant municipalities have engaged two engineers and six lawyers to defend their case, and it is expected many legal fine points will be brought into play on both sides.

On Tuesday this week, of the several townships met at Chepstowe and some surveying was done, for it is considered that Chepstowe is the strategic point in the scheme of the drainage system, for at this point there is a rocky formation which appears to be the "dam" that is holding the water back into the upper portion of the river.

There are so many angles to the whole scheme that it is a difficult matter to know which is correct. It has been suggested that the flooded area be purchased, but if this is done every farmer along the river who happens to get more or less of the spring flood will be after the same thing, and there is no telling how far this may go.

Then if the rock is blasted out at Chepstowe letting the flood down to Paisley and territory, they will be after us here for damages, and no one knows what that will be.

Again if the dredging scheme is started, which is estimated at $150,000 for dredging alone, what is to be done with the bridges? Will they have to be removed to get the big dredging machines through and then rebuilt again? What about the private bridges that many farmers have on their property? They will have to be removed and replaced as good as they were before. And then again there is the same danger of flooding other property north and west between this and the lake, and the whole scheme of dredging may have to be carried through all the way to the lake at Southampton.

The plaintiff has cause for complaint and apparently is entitled to damages. There is a well founded belief that the Referee will order the drain to be put through as the points of the law are nearly all in his favor. Others opposed to the scheme claim that the benefit to be derived does not warrant the expenditure of so large an amount.

Senator Donnelly who recently purchased bush lots in the swamp areas claims that the dredging will decrease the value of his particular lots. His idea has been to remove the larger timber and let the smaller trees grow. The Government has been advocating reforestation, and he wants protection, for if the dredging is done he claims his reforestation scheme is worthless.

Teeswater's share of the cost is estimated at $600 but it is contended that Teeswater should not be assessed. Messrs. J. Brown and W. H. Logan represent the village and lawyer Klein has been engaged in the interests of the village.

If the drain is ordered and the scheme is started it is predicted by many that the total cost will run about twice the estimate.—Teeswater News.

A lot of us think we are good because we pretend to be shocked at the sins of others.

Alex Symons and his 16-year-old daughter Hannah were seriously injured in a motor accident which occurred near Riverdale about eleven o'clock on Sunday night when a car driven by the former skidded and went over a steep embankment. Mr. Symons sustained severe cuts and injuries to his head and face, while Miss Symons also suffered serious injuries. The girl remained in an unconscious condition for five hours following the accident. The other occupants of the car escaped with slight injuries.

MOTORISTS MUST CARRY LICENSES TO DRIVE IN 1926

On and after January 1st, of next year automobile drivers will be required to carry operators' licenses under a bill passed by the legislature.

Under the new system, offenses against the highway traffic act will be endorsed on the driving license and the license may be suspended for any period not exceeding sixty days. The terms and conditions under which licenses will be issued are to be prescribed by the lieutenant-governor in council.

Drivers not in possession of operators' licenses will be subject to heavy penalties. For the first offence a fine of not less than $10 and not more than $50 will be imposed, and for the second offence the fine will be not less than $20 and not more than $100. For any subsequent violations the offender will be liable to imprisonment for any term not exceeding thirty days.

The new system will be similar to that in force in England, where driving licenses have always been obligatory. By licensing drivers it is possible to keep a much more careful check on offenders as their violations can be endorsed on the driving permit—no matter what car they were driving. At the present rests with the owner of the car, and convictions are recorded on the automobile license. With the new system it will be possible for the police to prosecute the actual driver whether he is the owner of the car or not.

Mountain-Grown Teas Best

The tea plant grows best in the pure cool atmosphere of a mountain tea garden. The higher the garden, the finer and more delicious the flavour of the tea. This is partly due to the clear sunshine on a high mountain side, partly to the more invigorating air, partly to the more frequent rainfall and perfect drainage. The largest and roughest leaf grown at an elevation of 7000 feet is much superior in flavour to the tiniest tip grown only 2000 feet above sea-level. All teas used in the "SALADA" blends are grown from 4000 feet to 7,500 feet elevation. The trademark "SALADA" is a guarantee of quality.

BAREE, SON OF KAZAN

James Oliver Curwood
A LOVE EPIC OF THE FAR NORTH

SYNOPSIS.
Baree, the young wolf-dog, wandering in the wilderness, came upon a colony of beavers. He tried to make friends with Enisk, their leader, but the little animals ran away from him, leaving Baree lonely and unhappy. He was attracted by the moaning of the moose and the yap-yap-yap of a fox but thrilled most at the wolf cry. It was the call of his own, summoning him to the chase, the hunt, the wild orgy of torn flesh and running blood.

For a quarter of an hour Baree watched him while he knocked fish out of the pool. When at last he stopped, there were twenty or thirty fish among the stones, some of them dead and others still flopping. From where he lay flattened out between two rocks, Baree could hear the crunching of flesh and bones as the bear devoured his dinner. It sounded good, and the fresh smell of fish filled him with a craving that had never been roused by crawfish or even partridge.

Twenty seconds after the last of Wakayoo had disappeared in a turn of the creek, Baree was under the broken balsam. He dragged out a fish that was still alive. He ate the whole of it, and it was delicious. Baree now found that Wakayoo had solved the food problem for him, and this day he did not return to the beaver pond, nor the next. The big bear was incessantly fishing up and down the creek, and day after day Baree continued his feasts.

For a week life continued to be exceedingly pleasant. And then came the break—the change that was destined to mean as much for Baree as that other day, long ago, had meant for Kazan, his father, when he killed the man-brute in the edge of the wilderness.

This change came on the day when, in trotting around a great rock near the waterfall, Baree found himself face to face with Pierrot the hunter and Nepeese, the star-eyed girl who had shot him in the edge of the clearing.

It was Nepeese whom he saw first. If it had been Pierrot he would have turned back quickly. But again the blood of his forbear was rousing strange tremblings within him. Was it like this that the first woman had looked to Kazan?

Baree stood still. Nepeese was not more than twenty feet from him. She sat on a rock, full in the early morning sun, and was brushing out her wonderful hair. Her lips parted. Her eyes shone in an instant like stars. One hand remained poised, weighted with the jet tresses. She recognized him. She saw the white star on his breast and the white tip on his ear, and under her breath she whispered "Uchi moosis!"—"The dog-pup!" It was the wild dog she had shot—and thought had died!

The evening before Pierrot and Nepeese had built a shelter of balsam behind the big rock, and on a small white pile of sand Pierrot was kneeling over a fire preparing breakfast while the Willow arranged her hair. He raised his head to speak to her, and saw Baree. In that instant the spell was broken. Baree saw the man-beast as he rose to his feet. Like a shot he was gone.

Scarcely swifter was he than Nepeese. "Depechez vous, mon pere!" she cried. "It is the dog-pup! Quick!" In the floating cloud of her hair she sped after Baree like the wind. Pierrot followed, and in going he caught up his rifle. It was difficult for him to catch up with the Willow. She was like a wild spirit, her little moccasined feet scarcely touching the sand as she ran up the long bar. It was wonderful to see the lithe swiftness of her, and that wonderful hair streaming out in the sun. Even now in this moment's excitement, it made Pierrot think of McTaggart, the Hudson's Bay Company's factor over at Lac Bain, and what he had said yesterday. Half the night Pierrot had lain awake, gritting his teeth at the thought of it; and this morning, before Baree ran upon them, he had looked at Nepeese more closely than ever before in his life. She was beautiful. She was lovelier even than Wyoia, her princess mother, who was dead.

Floating back to him there came an excited cry. "Hurry, Nootawe! He has turned into the blind canyon. He cannot escape us now." She was panting when he came up to her. The French blood in her cheeks glowed a vivid crimson in her cheeks and lips. Her white teeth gleamed like milk.

"In there!" And she pointed. They went in. Ahead of them Baree was running for his life. He sensed instinctively the fact that these wonderful two-legged beings he had looked upon were all-powerful. And they were after him! He could hear them. Nepeese was following almost as swiftly as he could run. Suddenly he turned into a cleft between two great rocks. Twenty feet in, his way was barred and he ran back. When he darted out, straight up the canyon, Nepeese was not a dozen yards behind him, and he saw Pierrot almost at her side. The Willow gave a cry. "Mana—mana—there he is!" She caught her breath, and darted into a cove of young balsams where Baree had disappeared. Like a great entangling web her loose hair impeded her in the brush, and with an encouraging cry to Pierrot she stopped to gather it over her shoulder as he ran past her. She lost only a moment or two, and was after him. Fifty yards ahead of her Pierrot gave a warning shout. Baree had turned. Almost in the same breath he was tearing over his back-trail, directly toward the Willow. He did not see her in time to stop or swerve aside, and Nepeese flung herself down in his path. For in instant or two they were together. Baree felt the smother of her hair, and the clutch of her hands. Then he squirmed away and darted again toward the blind end of the canyon.

Nepeese sprang to her feet. She was panting—and laughing. Pierrot came back wildly, and the Willow pointed beyond him. "I had him—and he didn't bite me, Nootawe!" That was the wonder of it. She had been reckless—and Baree had not bitten her! It was then, with her eyes shining at Pierrot, and the smile fading slowly from her lips, that she spoke softly the word "Baree," which in her tongue meant "the wild dog"—a little brother of the wolf.

In and out among the rocks Baree sought swiftly for a way of escape. In a moment more he had come to the "box," or cup of the canyon. This was a break in the wall, fifty or sixty feet wide, which opened into a natural prison about an acre in extent. It was a beautiful spot. On all sides but that leading into the coulee it was shut in by walls of rock. At the far end a waterfall broke down in a series of rippling cascades. The grass was thick underfoot, and strewn with flowers. In this trap Pierrot had got more than one fine haunch of venison.

Wakayoo's eyes on the dog-pup's head in the face of his rifle. He called to Nepeese as he saw Baree entering it, and together they climbed the slope.

Baree had almost reached the edge of the little prison-meadow when suddenly he stopped himself so quickly that he fell back on his haunches, and his heart jumped up into his throat.

Full in his path stood Wakayoo, the huge black bear! Baree darted to one side and ran for the open meadow. Wakayoo did not stir as Baree sped past him—no more than if he had been a bird or rabbit. Then came another breath of air, heavy with the scent of man. This, at last, put life into him. He turned and began lumbering after Baree into the meadow trap. Baree, looking back, saw him coming—and thought it was pursuit. Nepeese and Pierrot came over the slope, and at the same instant they saw both Wakayoo and Baree.

Where they entered into the gray dip under the rock walls, Baree turned sharply to the right. Here was a great boulder, one end of it tilted up off the earth. It looked like a splendid hiding place, and Baree crawled under it.

But Wakayoo kept straight ahead into the meadow. From where he lay Baree could see what happened. Scarcely had he crawled under the rock when Nepeese and Pierrot appeared through the break in the dip, and stopped. The fact that they stopped thrilled Baree. They were afraid of Wakayoo! The big bear was two-thirds of the way across the meadow. The sun fell on him, so that his coat shone like black satin. Pierrot stood at him for a moment. He did not kill for the love of killing. Necessity made him a conservationist. But he saw that in spite of the lateness of the season, Wakayoo's coat was splendid—and he raised his rifle.

Baree saw this action. He saw, a moment later, something spit from the end of the gun, and then he heard that deafening crash that had come with his own hurt, when the Willow's bullet had burned through his skin. He turned his eyes swiftly to Wakayoo. The big bear had stumbled; he was on his knees; and then he struggled up and lumbered on.

The rose of the rifle came again, and forward the Willow looked down. Pierrot could not miss at that distance. Wakayoo made a splendid mark. It was slaughter; yet for Pierrot and Nepeese it was business—the business of the moment.

Baree was shivering. It was more from excitement than fear, for he had lost his own fear in the tragedy of these moments. A low whine rose in his throat as he looked at Wakayoo, who had risen again and faced his enemies—his jaws gaping, his head swinging slowly, his legs weakening under him as the blood poured through his torn lungs. Baree whined—because Wakayoo had fished for him, and because he knew that it was death that Wakayoo was facing now. There was a third shot—the last. Wakayoo sank down in his tracks. His big head dropped between his forepaws, and he lay motionless.

CHAPTER VIII.
As Nepeese gazed about the rock-walled end of the canyon, the prison in which they had driven Wakayoo and Baree, Pierrot looked up again from his skinning of the big black bear, and he muttered something that no one but himself could have heard. "No, it is not possible," he had said a moment before, but to Nepeese it was possible—the thought in his heart. It was a wonderful thought. It thrilled her to the depth of her wild, beautiful soul. It sent a glow into her eyes and a deeper glow of excitement into her cheeks and lips.

As she questioned the ragged edges of the little meadow for signs of the dog-pup, her thoughts flashed back swiftly. Two years ago they had buried her princess mother under the tall spruce near their cabin. That day Pierrot's sun had set for all time, and her own life was filled with a vast loneliness. There had been three at the graveside that afternoon as the sun went down—Pierrot, herself, and a dog, a great powerful husky with a white star on his breast and a white tipped ear. He had been her dead mother's pet from puppyhood—her bodyguard, with her always, even when his head rested on the side of her bed as she died. And that night of the day they buried her, the dog had disappeared. He had gone as quietly and as completely as her spirit. No one ever saw him after that. It was strange, and to Pierrot it was a miracle. Deep in his heart he was filled with the wonderful conviction that the dog had gone with his beloved Wyoia into heaven.

But Nepeese had spent three winters at the Missioner's school at Nelson House. She had learned a great deal about white people and the real God, and she knew that Pierrot's thought was impossible. She believed that her mother's husky was either dead or had joined the wolves. Probably he had gone to the wolves. So it was not possible that this youngster she and her father had pursued was of the flesh and blood of her mother's pet? It was more than possible. Baree had not moved an inch from under his rock. He lay like a thing stunned, his eyes fixed steadily on the scene of the tragedy out in the meadow.

Baree wanted to approach. It was like an invisible string tugging at his very heart. It was Kazan, and not Gray Wolf, calling to him back through the centuries, a "call" that was as old as the Egyptian pyramids and perhaps ten thousand years older. But against that desire Gray Wolf was pulling from out the black ages of the forests. The wolf held him quiet and motionless. Nepeese was looking about her. She was smiling. For a moment her face was turned toward him, and he saw the white shine of her teeth, and her beautiful eyes seemed glowing straight at him. And then, suddenly, she dropped on her knees and peered under the rock. Their eyes met. For at least half a minute there was not a sound. Nepeese did not move, and her breath came so softly that Baree could not hear it.

Then she said, almost in a whisper: "Baree! Baree! Upi Baree!" It was the first time Baree had heard his name, and there was something so soft and assuring in the sound of it that in spite of himself the dog in him responded to it in a whimper that just reached the Willow's ear. Slowly she stretched out an arm. It was bare and round and soft. He might have darted forward the length of his body and buried his fangs in it easily. But something held him back. He knew that it was

A PRACTICAL SUIT FOR THE GROWING BOY.

The growing boy needs practical clothing. An outfit for general use is the blouse waist and knickerbockers. The picture shows the knickers made from tweed and the waist from madras, or any washable material suitable for shirting. For the little boy or dark linen knickers and light or white waist is very suitable. The blouse is close-fitting and mannish. The cuffs, which are fastened with buttons and buttonholes, or buttonholes and cuff-links, are deep and turned back. The waistline is adjusted by using buttons and loops at the side seams. The knicker-bockers, roomy and well-fitting, with front opening and with or without side pockets, and one large pocket on right hip, completes this outfit, No. 1037. Cut in sizes 8 to 14 years; size 12 years requires 2 1/4 yards of 36-inch material for the blouse and 1 1/2 yards of 32-inch material for the knickerbockers.

"Buy only pure laundry soap — it's real economy" says Mrs. Experience

"Many women, I've found, choose their laundry soap merely because it is extra hard or because the bar is big and bulky—regardless of the soap's quality."

"As for myself, I always insist on Sunlight Soap, because I learned many years ago that it is more economical to use only pure laundry soap, and I believe that Sunlight is the only pure laundry bar soap made in Canada. Every bar of Sunlight carries a $5,000 Guarantee of Purity."

"And as every bit of Sunlight is pure cleansing soap, it cleans quickly with very little rubbing, and a little of it goes a long way. For washing clothes, dishes and general housework give me Sunlight every time. Sunlight doesn't make the hands rough and red, either." Lever Brothers Limited, Toronto, make Sunlight.

not an enemy; he knew that the dark eyes shining at him so wonderfully were not filled with the desire to harm—and the voice that came to him softly was like a strange and thrilling music. "Baree! Baree! Upi Baree!" Over and over again the Willow called to him like that while on her face she tried to draw herself a few inches farther under the rock. She could not reach him. There was still a foot between her hand and Baree, and she could not wedge herself in an inch more. And then she saw where on the other side of the rock there was a hollow, shut in by a stone. If she had removed the stone, and come in that way— She drew herself out and stood once more in the sunshine. Her heart thrilled. Pierrot was busy over his bear—and she would not call him. She made an effort to move the stone which closed in the hollow under the big boulder, but it was wedged in tightly. Then she began digging with a stick. Five minutes—and Nepeese could move the stone. She tugged at it. Inch by inch she dragged it out until at last it lay at her feet and the opening was ready for her body. She looked again toward Pierrot. He was still busy, and she laughed softly as she untied a big red-and-white Bay handkerchief from about her shoulders. With this she would massage Baree. She dropped on her hands and knees and then lowered herself flat on the ground and began crawling into the hollow under the boulder. Baree had moved. With the back of his head flattened against the rock he heard something which Nepeese had not heard; he had felt a slow and growing pressure, and from this pressure he had dragged himself slowly—and the pressure still followed. The mass of rock was setting! Nepeese did not see or hear or understand. She was calling to him more and more pleadingly: "Baree—Baree—Baree—" Her head and shoulders and both arms were under the rock now. The glow of her eyes was very close to Baree. He whined. The thrill of a great and impending danger stirred in his blood. And then— (To be continued.)

Surnames and Their Origin

DUNLAP
Variations—Dunleavy, Dunlevy, Dunlief, Donleavy, Don-Levi, Delap.
Racial Origin—Irish and Scottish.
Source—A given name.

This group of family names had its origin in the name of one of the ancient Irish clans, from which all of the foregoing variations have been derived in the process of Anglicizing the name.

The name Donleavy occurs as native to Scotland, and as the name of a sept in the Clan Buchanan. But while it may have originated from the same given name as the Irish family name its source is more or less clouded in obscurity, and the only thing certain is that it had an origin independent of connection with the Irish clan. The older form of the Scottish name is "MacDon Leavy".

The Irish clanmen were known as the "MacDunshleibhe" or "O'Dunshleibhe". The clan came into being some time in the eleventh century, under the leadership of a chieftain named "Eamharbh", who was the son of the famous "Eochaidh", brother of "Maolruanaidh". This "Maolruanaidh" was the forty-seventh king of "Ulidia" of Ulster, and was slain in the great battle with the Danes at Clontarf in 1047.

"Don-Levi" was the peculiar English translation of the name adopted by a branch of the clan, but it was never widespread.

PEPPER.
Racial Origin—English.
Source—An occupation.

As has been explained in a previous article, which told why the family name of Spicer does not happen to be "Grocer," many terms which were in common use in medieval days are either uncommon or obsolete to-day, and many words and terms which are usual to-day had not come into general use at the period when family names were being formed.

Why have we no such English family name as "Carpetmaker?" Because virtually the only floor covering used in those days was rushes or hay. Why is there no such family name as "Physician?" Because in those days the grocer was known rather as "leeches," and we have the family name of Leech or Leach.

We have no trade to-day which corresponds exactly to that from which the family name of Pepper was taken. If we were forming the name to-day from the name of the trade, we would have to call it Spicer or Spicegrinder, though the "spicer" of the Middle Ages corresponded to our modern grocer.

"Pepper" is really the older form of the family name. The peppers were the grinders and the sellers of pepper, specialists in that one article of trade. The repetition of the "er" syllable, however, became clumsy on the tongue, and the natural tendency was to shorten it to Pepper, though the reference was still to the trade and not to the article.

The Uses of Advertisement.

When Mark Twain was editor of a Missouri paper a reader wrote to him saying that he had found a spider in his copy of the current issue. "What," the editor please say if this was a sign of good luck? To this Mark Twain replied: "Finding a spider in your paper was neither good luck or bad luck for you. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant is not advertising, so that he can go to that store, spin his web across the door, and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."

BLEMISHES OF THE SKIN

Are Proof the Blood is in a Weak and Watery Condition.

One of the surest signs that the blood is out of order are the pimples and unsightly eruptions that break out on the face or body. The same condition is indicated by an attack of eczema or scrofula. You cannot get rid of these troubles by the use of purgative medicines, as so many people try to do. Purgatives merely gallop through the system and leave it still weaker. What is needed when the blood is shown to be out of order is a tonic which will restore its missing elements and leave the blood rich and red. For this purpose there is no other tonic can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, every dose of which helps enrich the blood, drives out impurities, and brings a new feeling of health and energy. Mrs. R. E. Bishop, Hawthorne Ave., Hamilton, Ont., tells for the benefit of others what these pills did for her. She says:—"I was suffering terribly from scrofula. I doctored with several doctors, but without success. My complexion was sallow, I had no strength, feeling very weak and languid. My neck was full of lumps called scrofula, and at times they were very painful. After trying several so-called blood medicines, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were recommended to me and I got half a dozen boxes. After taking them I found a decided improvement in my appearance, and to my joy the lumps were disappearing from my neck. I persevered in the treatment, and finally the only sign left of the trouble was a scar on my neck where one of the swellings broke. Since that time I have been in robust health and heartily recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to any suffering from impure blood. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont."

No Money Made With Poor Stock.

Breeders of live stock are facing problems to-day that require expert business-like handling. The high cost of feed, labor and heavy overhead expenses are matters the average farmer finds confronting him every day. Successful farmers have always realized the value of good breedings in live stock. Testimonials from these men are easily obtained and should convince the most skeptical that the only way to beat the labor situation, cost of feed, etc., is to keep only those animals that are bred to produce either milk or beef. The surveys conducted by Prof. Letch in the different counties all go to prove that where farmers are using pure bred sires in either beef or dairy herds, they are making greater incomes, with practically the same quantities of feed. When we consider that these figures were obtained from actual farmers, living under average farm conditions, we can hardly discredit them. Liberal feeding of inferior live stock, it was shown, was not as great a factor in increasing the labor income as was the use of pure bred sires. The pure bred sire has back of him generations of ancestors that were selected and bred with a specific purpose in view: either the production of beef or the production of milk. These characteristics are highly intensified in his offspring, even when only a grade female is used. The grade sire has back of him generations of ancestors, that, like "Topsy," just happened. The result is that you can expect nothing but are liable to get anything. Haphazard hit and miss breeding operations are the causes of low labor incomes and financial failures among Ontario farmers to-day. The remedy lies in the farmers' hands. Buy a good pure bred sire of the breed of stock you are interested in and you have made the first step toward success.

She Pitted the Lion.

Uncle had just returned home from an expedition into Africa after big game, says the Tattler; he was delighting all the family with stirring tales of adventure in the jungle. "One of my beaters was so savagely bitten by a lion once," he announced, "that he had to have his arm amputated." There was a short silence while the information sank in, and then the small daughter of the house said in a sympathetic voice: "What a pity, uncle; the poor lion might just as well have had it." Consult your conscience—and you may not have to consult your lawyer.

The Demon.

A Rhyme to Remember.
Lurking beside the portals of the soul,
Where fall the shadows of Life's darker days,
Couchant, there waits the Demon who betrays
My high resolves and shakes the will's control.

When purpose prompts to noble enterprise,
Or hails new duties for the soul to meet,
The Demon softly whispers of defeat,
And points to threat'ning omens in the skies.

Untrodden paths allure my feet to dare,
But as I set face forward to explore
The Demon joins my elbow at the door,
And hints of danger from some hidden snare.

A crisis faces me, demands the need
Of ready act and calmly alert mind;
The Demon, softly stealing from behind,
Grips me about and stays the hand of deed.

Then wheel I in the moment of despair
To face him, and he cringes 'neath my eye;
Hot anger follows fear—he turns to fly,
But ere he speeds I feel the Demon there.

His ghost may haunt me yet, but now I know
The craven spirit and his voice of lies;
I cannot fear the thing that I despise;
One act of manhood laid the traitor low!

Elections in San Marino.

Many citizens of San Marino, one of the smallest republics in the world, are unable to read or to write. The Secretary of the republic, talking with an American visitor, explained how they got round the difficulty on election day. "The vote is by ballot," he said, "and on the day of election there are present a number of little girls dressed in white. If a voter cannot read or write he selects a little girl who can, and she prepares his ballot for him. A little girl, signore, is the purest thing on earth, and she is sure to practice no deceit on the man who trusts her."

MADE HER BABY PLUMP AND WELL

Nothing makes a mother more grateful than a benefit conferred upon her child. Mothers everywhere who have used Baby's Own Tablets for their children speak in enthusiastic terms of them. For instance, Mrs. Zepherin Lavoie, Three Rivers, Que., writes:—"Baby's Own Tablets are a wonderful medicine for little ones. They never fail to regulate the baby's stomach and bowels, and make him plump and well. I always keep a box of the Tablets in the house and would advise all mothers to do likewise." Most of the ordinary ailments of childhood arise in the stomach and bowels, and can be quickly banished by Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets relieve constipation and indigestion, break up colds and simple fevers, expel worms, allay teething pains and promote healthful sleep. They are guaranteed to be free from injurious drugs and are safe even for the youngest and most delicate child. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BIG ELK KILLS DEER

"Billy," the Virginia deer, and the oldest and friendliest inmate of Dr. Jamieson's park at Wilder's Lake is no more. A pugnacious little fellow and full of fight, he squared up to the big buck elk a week ago Sunday but proved no match for his heavier opponent who struck him down so quickly that neither Dr. D. B. Jamieson or Mr. P. Gagnon, eyewitnesses, were fully aware of what had happened. He was so badly injured that he died on Friday. While harmless if left alone, the big elk will brood no interference and the public will do well to stay on their own side of the wire fence this coming summer. Only last week we reported the death of the yearling elk calf, also supposed to have been struck down by the older animal.—Durham Chronicle.

The greatest detective known is your conscience.

An idle dollar is still worth a hundred cents; an idle man is worth less than nothing.

Clerk—You want a good cigar, sir,—try this brand—you can't get better.

Customer—I had one of that brand last week—and you're quite right—I'm not better yet!

Lecturer—Yes, my friends, in China human life is considered of very little value. Indeed, if a wealthy Chinaman is condemned to death he can easily hire another to die for him. In fact, many poor fellows get their living by acting as substitutes.

The biggest fish ever landed with pole and line by a Mitchell fisherman fell to the lot of Mr. John McNairn. The catch was made near Lucan with the ordinary bamboo pole, line and snare. The fish weighed 8 1/2 pounds and was of the variety called mammoth "red fin" or sucker. Mr. McNairn and his prize arrived home at noon hour and the fish was exhibited at numerous places attracting a large number of citizens.

Why crack nuts? A fashionable confectionery shop asks the question and offers fresh nut meats already opened. It would be hard to find anything that shows more plainly the modern tendency to regard as work what our predecessors considered as a pleasure. Cracking nuts, like popping corn, is a social diversion. It needs a big wooden bowl, several flatirons, of the old-fashioned kind, as many hammers, and an open fire-place for background. The man who wouldn't rather crack nuts in that way than have them cracked for him is a filibert.

Young women of to-day cannot complain, as their mothers and grandmothers might justly have done, that they have few opportunities to earn a living. New occupations are opening to them all the time. Here, for example, is an advertisement that appeared recently in a metropolitan newspaper: "A Chemist—Young woman with a thorough college training wanted to assist in the care of albino rats in a biochemical research laboratory. Experience unnecessary." Keeper of the Albino Rats! A title that suggests something of the pomp of regal courts.

Receiving Charge Dismissed.
 Wm. Doerr, aged 18, of near Teeswater, appeared before Magistrate Macartney in the Walkerton police court on Wednesday afternoon of last week on a charge of receiving stolen goods knowing them to have been stolen, and which case arose out of the theft of certain articles from Dentinger & Beingsner's general store at Formosa, for which Stanley Benninger, aged 15, was convicted and let go on suspended sentence, resulted in Doerr being acquitted of the receiving charge. While admitting that he had received some of the goods, he denied knowing that they were stolen, and after hearing the evidence, the court found the accused not guilty, and dismissed the case.
