Violent Attacks by the Germans Have Been Shattered and Flung Back-Paris Official Bureau Reports Russian Movement as Perceptible.

PARIS, Oct. 22, 2.45 p.m.-The official announcement issued this afternoon by the French War Office says the positions occupied by the allies in Belgium and Northern France have been maintained in spite of the violent attacks of the enemy.

The text of the announcement follows: "On our left wing, German, forces in considerable strength have continued their violent attacks, paricularly in the vicinity of Dixmude, Warniton, Armentieres, Radinghom and La Basse; but the positions occupied by the allies have been maintained. "On the rest of the front, the enemy has delivered only partial attacks. These all have been repulsed, particularly at Fricourt, to the east of Albert; on the plateau to the west of Craonne; in the region of Sousain, in the Argonne district; at Four De Paris; southwest of Varennes; in the region of Malancourt, in the Woevre district; in the direction of Champlon, and .at a point southeast of St. Mihiel, in the forest of Ailly.

"We have made slight progress in the Argonne district and in the southern part of the Woevre, in the forest of Mortmare.

'Russia: The forward movement of the Russian forces has been positively announced. An important success in the region of Warsaw has driven back the enemy more than 13 kilometres-8 miles. The advances of the Russians at Ivangorod and to the south of Przemysl are equally perceptible.'

PARIS, Oct. 22 .- The latest depatches from the battle front in PARIS, Oct. 22.—The latest despatches from the battle front in France and Belgium told just enough to make the public eager for more. The allies position have been everywhere maintained against the onslaughts of the enemy, to-day's official statement of the war office was the object of hope on the part of the French.

Meanwhile the fighting forces, before resuming the contest, sought anew to discover the weak spot in the lines of one another. The maxim of Napoleon's memorial "do not attack in the front, the positions yow can obtain by turning," is apparently a manoeuvre to which the Germans are adhering in what appears to be a supreme effort.

In this battle of the north the allied armies, supported by an English squadron, have thus far successfully withstood repeated and fierce attacks of the enemy.

The fields of battle in Belgium, Flanders, Picardy, Champagne, Argonne, Lorraine, Vosges and as far as Alsace, continue to be the scenes of combats where the allies have made gains, but a real decisive result is yet awaited.

While the port officials have been uncommunicative regarding this time allowance, two reports have gained credence. One is that the repairs will be completed within a few days, when she must leave port and face her enemy lying in wait without; or interne here for the remainder of the war.

The Hisen appeared off the harbor late yesterday, fully coaled and provisioned, fourteen days out from Yokosuka, a naval depot near Yokohama. BORDEEAUX, via Paris, Oct 22—
President Poincare yesterday received Attorneys Michon, Pichon and Plista, counsel for two German soldiers, Bruggeman and Schruck, who were sentenced to death on a charge of pillaging. The lawyers asked the president to exercise his right of pardon in the case of the condemned men and based their request on the ground that the two soldiers acted on orders from General Von Der Marwitz and Lieutenant Von Stietenoren. The attorneys asserted that the officers should be prosecuted and condemned by default when, according to the law the sentence of the two soldiers would be commuted to one of imprisonment.

the most important fighting on the entire line in the western arena of the war is being continued with the utmost stubbornness, bu tas yet without any decisive result. The French War Office announces that the allied lines are holding in spite of the furious onslaughts of the enemy, while news despatches from London make the assertion that the developments generally are against the invaders.

British warships have played an important part in these operations, and there are indications that their activities are not yet at an end. The fighting is going o nnight and day, and the allies are said to be approaching close to the German positions before Lille.

No confirmation of the reported evacuation of Ostend has been received. The German garrison at Antwerp is said to have been reduced, and a German column of reinforcements, with two of the famous 16-inch guns is reported as having passed through Antwerp on its way to Bruges.

Bruges.

Outside of Belgium the fields of battle are numerous, Picardy, Champagne, the Argonne, the Woevre, Lorraine, the Vosges and Alsace being referred to as localities where fighting is taking place. In several of these districts the French officially are reported to have repulsed German attacks, which they describe as not so severe as in the Belgian field. The French say also that they have made progress in the Argonne and Woevre territory.

The house sheltering the headquarters of the German staff at Slype, on the Belgian coast, has been destroyed by shell fire from British warships, according to a despatch received in London from Dunkirk.

The latest Ge man casualty list under the captions of killed, wounded and missing gives the names of about 11,500 men.

In the eastern arena of the war, both sides claim progress, but not in the same localities. Paris says officially that the Russians in the vicinity of Warsan have driven the enemy hack for a distance of 8 miles and back for a distance of 8 miles, and the Petrograd war office declares that Russian troops have saved Warsaw from a German bembardment. There has been hand-to-hand fighting in the vicinity of Blonie and Prouschkoff, in Russian Poland. The fighting south of Przemysl, according to this same authority, has been going on for six davs with heavy losses on the part of the Austrians.

"Telegraphic and telephonic communication with Lisbon has been cut. A number of unexpleded bombs have been found on the acil ways."

A revolutionary outbreak in Portugal was reported yesterday. The cutbreak occurred at Braganza and Mafra, and was attributed to royalists, whose object was said to have been to prevent Portugal joining the allies. It was officially announced from Lisbon that the uprising was promptly put down.

day's review of the war situation in Europe, the Herald's military critic says:

"Fragmentary information concerning the action along the battle front in Belgium, indicates that while the German troops occupy many important positions, the junction petween the forces of Gen. Von Kluck, and the considerable force from northeast Flanders has been but imperfectly effected. Notwithstanding the fact that part of the operations have been carried forward under cover of early winter fogs, the allied general staff, whether by aerial reconnaissance, or from some other source, appears to have obtained inteligence regarding the region of the German weakness.

Consequently the daily advance of the allies front in spite of desperate opposition has been perceptible, and the great wedge of men and metal that is beir driven into the German defence, the portion of their line, where effective resistance is most difficult, is rapidly taking shape. The apex of this wedge has now reached Courtrai, some eighteen miles to the east of ypres, and furious onslaughts upon the line by Gen. Von Kluck's forces to the south and to the morth by the German Flanders army, have impeded the progress of the insidious thrust, out do not appear effectively to have stopped the manoeuvre.

The reasons for these obvious delays in concentration of tha German troops in order to stay the allied advance to the northest and the first place, the German general staff milght not have believed their place, the German general staff might not have believed their adversaries capable of initiating an offensive movement in force almost at the extreme left of their attenuated front. The allies therefore, appear to have a force in the field at least equal in numerical strength to that of the invaders.

Second, the protection by the British fleet of the extreme flank of the allies' line resting on the channel coast at Nieuport, has been of remarkable assistance. Most important of all, however, is the fact that behind the allied line is a network of excellent railways and highways, which were untouched in the earlier fighting in this region.

Several of these railroad lines radiate from Ypres, the cost of the German offensive scheme for a sweeping advance along the coast is probably due to the fact that the railway system under their control had not been in proper operation.

Before the commencement of hostilities this system was as perfect as that behind the allies front in northern France and southwestern Flanders, but much of it was wrecked in the retreat of the Franco-British forces before the overwhelming advance of the Germans early in the campaign.

WARSAW IS SAVED---TROOPS FROM SIBERIA TAKE MANY PRISONERS

"In engagements near Kozienica, the Causasian regiments also gave proof of extraordinary courage. For eight days these regiments were lighting on the left bank of the Vistula, in the marshes, where the trenches were constantly under water. Here they sustained the fires of the enemy's heavy antillery, but all the German attacks were repulsed.

"Several regiments suffered severe losses, and one regiment had three commanders seriously wounded, one after the other.

"The direction of the great battle going on to the south of Przemys!, which has been under way for six days, is in the hands of General Broussillen. The Austrian losses have been enormous. Many prisoners have been taken including both Austrians and Germans."

CONDEMNED BY DEFAULT.

BORDEEAUX, via Paris, Oct 22—
President Poincare yesterday received Attorneys Michon, Pichon and Plista, ccunsel for two German soldiers, Bruggeman and Schruck, who were sentenced to death on a charge of pillaging. The lawyers asked the president to exercise his right of pardon in the case of the condemned men and based their request on the ground that the two soldiers acted on orders from General Von Der Marwitz and Lieutenant Von Stietenoren. The attorneys asserted that the officers should be prosecuted and condemned by default when, according to the law the sentence of the two soldiers would be commuted to one of imprisonment.

portant part in these operations, and there are indications that their activities are not yet at an end. The fighting is going o nnight and day, and the allies are said to be approaching close to the German positions before Lille.

No confirmation of the reported evacuation of Ostend has been received. The German garrison at Antwerp is said to have been reduced, and a German column of reinforcements, with two of the famous 16-inch guns is reported as having passed through Antwerp on its way to Bruges.

Outside of Belgium the fields of battle are numerous, Picardy, Champagne, the Argonne, the Woevre, Lorraine, the Vosges and Alsace being referred to as localities where fighting is taking place. In several of these districts the French officially are reported to have repulsed German attacks, which they describe as not so severe as in the Belgian field. The French say also that they have made progress in the Argonne

The house sheltering the headquarters of the German staff at Slype, on the Belgian coast, has been destroyed by shell fire from British warships, according to a despatch received in London from Dunkirk.

The latest Ge man easualty list under the captions of killed, wounded and missing gives the names of about 11,500 men.

In the eastern arena of the war, both sides claim progress, but not in the same localities. Paris says officially that the Russians in the vicinity of Warsaw have driven the enemy hack for a distance of a mile. back for a distance of 8 miles, and the Petrograd war office declares that Russian troops have saved Warsaw from a German bombardment. There has been hand-to-hand fighting in the vicinity of Blonie and Prouschkoff, in Russian Poland. day's review of the war situation in Europe, the Herald's military critic says:

"Fragmentary information concerning the action along the battle front in Belgium, indicates that while the German troops occupy many important positions, the junction between the forces of Gen. Von Kluck, and the considerable force from northeast Flanders has been but imperfectly effected. Notwithstanding the fact that part of the operations have been carried forward under cover of early winter fogs, the allied general staff, whether by aerial reconnaissance, or from some other source, appears to have obtained inteligence regarding the region of the German weakness.

Consequently the daily advance of the allies front in spite of desperate opposition has been perceptible, and the great wedge of men and metal that is beir driven into the German defence, the portion of their line, where effective resistance is most difficult, is rapidly taking shape. The apex of this wedge has now reached Courtrai, some eighteen miles to the east of Ypres, and furious onslaughts upon the line by Gen. Von Kluck's forces to the south and to the morth by the German Flanders army, have impeded the progress of the insidious thrust, out do not appear effectively to have stopped the manoeuvre.

The reasons for these obvious delays in concentration of the place, the German general staff might not have believed their adversaries capable of initiating an offensive movement in force almost at the extreme left of their attenuated front. The allies therefore, appear to have a force in the field at least equal in numerical strength to that of the inerical strength to that of the in-

Several of these railroad lines radiate from Ypres, the cost of the German offensive scheme for a sweeping advance along the coast is probably due to the fact that the railway system under their control had not been in proper operation.

Before the commencement of hostilities this system was as perfect as that behind the allies front in northern France and southwestern Flanders, but much of it was wrecked in the retreat of the Franco-British forces before the overwhelming advance of the Germans early in the campaign.

"Numerous parties of German prisoners are conumually arriving Among the latest batch is a general who had brought gifts to the troops from Emperor William."

"In engagements near Kozienica, the Causasian regiments also gave proof of extraordinary courage. For eight days these regiments were fighting on the left bank of the Vistula, in the marshes, where the trenches were constantly under water. Here they sustained the fires of the enemy's heavy aptillery, but all the German attacks were repulsed.

"Several regiments suffered severe losses, and one regiment had three commanders seriously wounded, one after the other.

"The direction of the great battle going on to the south of Przemysl, which has been under way for six days, is in the hands of General Broussilles. The Austrian losses have been enormous, Many prisoners have been taken, including both Austrians and Germans."

HE SHAMMED DEATH-FRENCH ORDERLY'S RUSE SAVES OFFICER

A representative of the "Matin" has seen and spoken with a wounded French officer who is now in Paris says the Paris correspondent of the Daily Telegraph. He is a young Breton, a lieutenant of the Dragoons, who received his wound—or rather, his wounds, one of which was dealt by a German lieutenant while he was lying half conscious on the field of battlem in a skirmish on the banks of the Meuse. He said that on August 8th his capitain ordered him to reconnotitre with several of his men in the neighborhood of Longuyan. When he reached Longuyan whe halted and visited the hospital, where a dozen brench wounded were lying.

One of them said to him: "Let me give you a piece of advice. If you are hit, sham dead, otherwise they will finish you off."

HARRISURG

[From Our Own Correspondent]

PARIS, Oct. 21.—Col. Rousset, the military critic, declares this morning that the German system of fortifications is excellent and furnishes a protecting curtain for heavy artillery and the insidious machine gun. "It is not chivalrous warfare," he wrote, "but it is practical. Our enemy fights not after the fashion of the lion, but like the fox, and we should make use of some of these ideas."

"By Saint Paul!" said he, "I never thought to find honorable advancement under the roof of an abbey, but perchance there may be some room for it ere you hale me to your prison."

The chapter-house was in an uproar. Never in the long and decorous history of the Abbey had such a scene been witnessed within its walls. The monks themselves seemed for an instant to be infected by this spirit of daring revolt. Their own lifelong fetters hung more loosely as they viewed this unheard-of defiance of authority. They broke from their seats on either side and huddled, half-scared, half-fascinated, in a large half-circle round the defiant captive, chattering, pointing, grimacing, a scandal for all time. Scourges should fall and penance be done for many a long week before the shadow of that day should pass from Waverley. But meanwhile there was no effort to bring them back to their rule. Everything was chaos and disorder. The Abbot had left his seat of justice and hurried angrily forward, to be engulfed and hustled in the crowd of his own monks like a sheep-dog who finds himself entangled amid a flock.

Only the sacrist stood clear. He had taken shelter behind the half-dozen archers, who looked with some approval and a good deal of indecision at this bold fugitive from justice.

"On him?" cried the sacrist. "Shall he defy the authority of the court, or shall one man hold six of you at bay? Close in upon him and seize him. You Baddlesmere, why de you hold back?"

The man in question, a tall bushybearded fellow, clad like the others in green jerkin and breeches with high brown boots, advanced slowly, sword in hand, agaist Nigel. His heart was not in the business, for these clerical courts were not popular, and everyone had a tender heart for the fallen fortunes of the house of Loring and wished well to its young heir.

"Come, young sir, you have caused scathe enough," said he. "Stand forth and give yourself up?"

"Come and fetch me, good fellow," said Nigel, with a dangerous smile.

The archer ran in. There was a rasp of steel

For years Detective Lieutenant Joseph Petrosino had pleaded with the Commissioner of Powriter and alarmist who saw an opportunity to turn out "yellow" and vari-hued read with avidity all pertaining to crime

Then came the series of murders, kidnappings and bomb explosions that made the authorities at Police Headquarters sit up and take notice. "Send for Petrosino and see what he has to say about this," was the first cry, and accordingly Petrosino dropped his work of guarding Italian immigrants as they stepped from steamships at the Battery, and reported to his superiors at Headquarters. These hurried summonses to Petrosino now were becoming of weekly occurrence. He tives. All these facts he carefully re- by Micelli, Casassa, "Joe" Diglio and Carknew what was required of him and he also knew the almost insurmountable barriers and the perils that confronted

From the day Petrosino was advanced from the grade of a roundsman to that of a detective his life was in constant danrecognized their most dreaded foc. He died as he had expected to So sure had he been of the futility of warding off the inevitable that when the end came the great detective was unarmed. Moreover, the chambers of the one revolver he had packed in his baggage were among his effects. Those fateful words. "They will get me sooner or later," which I heard him utter while describing the utter recklessness of the band he was trailing at the time, were vividly recalled to me the moment I learned of his mur-

In the diaries and other memoranda left by Petrosino I find but few entries bearing on his mission to Italy that resulted in his murder. But much time and thought was devoted to the need of establishing in New York city a squad of Italian detectives which alone was equipped to combat the Black Hand. Every recommendation made by him to this end was duly recorded in his diary,

But with the increasing frequency of Italian outrages throughout the city it was found expedient to bring Petrosino to Police Headquarters, so Micelli was sent to the Battery to take up the detective's work. On the day of the discovery of the body of the itinerant jeweller in a trunk, January 17, 1901, to be exact, Petrosino was told to take charge of the case. But in making their house to house canvass through Little Italy in search of clews to the murderer of the aged jeweller, Weissbard, Petrosino came into possession of facts which provided him with intimate knowledge of the various groups of Calabrian blackmailers that were firmly entrenched throughout the Italian section. Once more established at Headquarters to receive the Italians who were flocking there with complaints of blackmailing demands and threats, he had his hands full day and night. LONDON, Oct. 22.-Travellers from Antwerp, says the Rotterdam correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company, reports that on Tuesday night 10,000 German
Antwerp in a southerly direction.
Later a long file of carts bearing wounded, entered the town.
The garrison of Antwerp has been greatly reduced, and only a few policemen are on duty. Plundering in the suburbs is increasing The Germans are dealing very severely with plungerers when they are caught. Recently a man was detected forcing an entrance to a house and was shot.

The Germans are on the friendliest terms with the population. A big movement of troops is reported from Ghent. rom Antwerp, says the Rotter-

IBy Special Wire to the Courier] PARIS, Oct. 22.-11 a.m.-A Havas Agency despatch from Petrograd says:

"The Russian troops are manifesting great courage and energy in the defense of Warsaw, many times successfully repulsing heavy attacks and at the same time establishing more firmly the union of Poles and Slavs.

"Intercepted documents show that the Germans expected to cap ture Warsaw some time between October 15 and 17. The Siberian regiments brought up from the Praga district of Warsaw received a great ovation from the populace and distinguished themselves in night attacks in the forest of Molchidlovsk, taking many prisoners. The fighting in this district has been determined. The heaviest fighting is not a point south of Przemysl."
