On 279 Special Trains. C. G. Railways

Up to March 1st 757,400 Troops have travelled over Government Railways.

Thousands arrive each week at Halifax and are sent forward to Dispersal Areas.

Since the war began in 1914 up to March 1st, when S.S. Belgic disembarked her returned soldier passengers at Halifax 757,400 troops have been carried on special trains over the Canadian Government Railways.

The first train which carried troops over the Government Railways the year the war was declared was numbered one and all special troop trains to and from Halifax since that time have been numbered consecutively. The last train from the Belgic on Saturday was No. 1279. Each train averages about twelve cars with an average of 50 men to a car, which figures up a total of 767,400 men carried. Of course in addition to this thousands of soldiers have journeyed between Montreal and Halifax by regular trains during the past four years.

The movement of troops back to Canada is now approaching its greatest activity. Last Sunday 5000 arrived at Halifax by the transports Lapland and Belgic, and fifteen special trains were despatched westward inside of fourteen hours.

S. S. Megantic with soldiers and dependents arrived Wednesday and S.S. Adriatic is due Sunday. The movement of returning men is to be kept up actively all summer.

The process of disembarkation at Halifax is being carried on without a hitch, and there is a fine system of co-operation between the Military and the Railway officials.

At The Federal Capital.

The debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne has not yet been completed in the House of Commons, notwithstanding the brevity of the Governor General's pronouncement. After the address had been moved in excellent style and form by Dr. Whidden of Brandon, and seconded by Mr. McIntosh of Victoria, B. C., it was discussed by the House leader of the opposition, by the Prime Minister and several other members; but it was not completed, because the Prime Minister wished to have a resolution, approving of the Peace Treaty, passed upon by Parliament with as little delay as possible. The debate on the address was therefore adjourned indefinitely. It is rather unusual, no doubt, that other matters are considered concurrently with or previous to the adoption of the address in reply to the opening speech, but in this case, as pointed out by the Prime Minister, the importance of adopting at an early date the resolution approving of the peace treaty warranted this departure.

The Prime Minister's resolution requesting Parliament to approve of the Treaty of Peace was as follows: "Resolved, That it is expedient that Parliament do approve of the Treaty of Peace between the United States of America, the British Empire, France, Italy and Japan, and Poland, which was signed at Versailles on the twenty-eighth day of June, nineteen hundred and nineteen, a copy of which has been laid before Parliament, and which was signed on behalf of His Majesty, acting for Canada, by the plenipotentiaries therein named, and that this House do approve of the same."

Sir Robert Borden supported his resolution with a learned and illuminating address, outlining the most salient features on the 28th day of June of the present year. He briefly reviewed the circumstances leading up to the assembling of the conference. He recalled to the mind of his hearers the serious and awe-inspiring condition of world affairs produced by the titanic war, and intimated how much nearer disaster the allied nations had reached, during the early part of 1918, than was generally known. He described in brief the desolate and sad condition of Belgium and France, which had been overrun by the withering and destructive onward sweep of the enemy. Finally, as all realized with profound thankfulness, the enemy was vanquished, and the invader was driven back and forced to lay down his arms in humiliation. Then came the armistice, severe and onerous in its provisions, but not more so than, or as much so indeed, as the ruthless and bloodthirsty conduct of the enemy deserved. Then, in brief outline, he enumerated the steps leading up to the great conference at Versailles, the urgent request to himself and his cabinet colleagues to proceed, first to London to confer with the Prime Minister of Great Britain and other plenipotentiaries in the preparation of resolutions and memoranda for presentation to the conference at Versailles. It required no stretch of imagination, no extraordinary exercise of thought to convince anyone that this conference, from whatever viewpoint it might be considered, was by far the most memorable that ever assembled in the world's history. In the first place, the subjects for consideration were so tremendously important, so far-reaching in their influence, and so world-wide in their consequences, that every other conference of a kindred nature paled into insignificance by comparison. In a word, the plenipotentiaries who assembled at this memorable conference were brought thither to discuss conditions and initiate principles by which practically the whole civilized world was in future to be regulated.

Thirty-two countries were represented by their plenipotentiaries at the council board of the world-famous Versailles Conference of the allied and associated countries there represented. The five foremost were United States, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan, Canada occupied at the conference the status of a secondary power as compared with the five principal nations already named. This important and proud position was not accorded to Canada without discussion, nor would our delegates have occupied this position if it had not been won from the assembled plenipotentiaries by the energy, wisdom and perseverance of Sir Robert Borden, Canada's distinguished Prime Minister. All through the discussion of the conference, at its numerous meetings, Canada's representatives held a position of equal importance with the plenipotentiaries of the other nations, and not a few of the important clauses and articles of the peace treaty and the covenant of the League of Nations were thought out and presented by Sir Robert Borden, and were adopted and incorporated in this most memorable of documents. As the Prime Minister intimated, in the course of his review of the conference, the treaty, including the covenant of the League of Nations, was probably not perfect; but the very fact that the representatives of thirty-two powers of different temperaments, of varied and not infrequently directly contrary interests and varied points of view, were able finally to unanimously agree upon a treaty binding upon all the signatories, is in itself a most marvellous event. It is, and should be, a source of pride for Canadians to think that in this the most memorable event of its kind, their representatives sat side by side, with equal power and influence, with the plenipotentiaries of all the other nations there represented. On behalf of the Canadian people and country two Canadian delegates, the only two then remaining at Versailles—Hon Messrs. Doherty and Sifton—signed that greatest of all treaties, binding our country in conjunction with all the other signatories to carry out the provisions of this world-famous compact. After all, why should Canada not occupy a position as important and advanced as that to which we have referred? Canada not entitled, in consequence of her energy, her marvellous contributions, and her great sacrifices in the memorable war, entitled to have a proportionate voice and vote in deciding the conditions imposed by the victorious allied nations on the blood-thirsty Hun invader, who had he been successful, would have had no mercy or consideration for the vanquished? The 60,000 brave and patriotic Canadian who gave up their lives in our country's cause would call back from their graves that their supreme sacrifice had been in vain if Canada could not have had a voice in settling the peace conditions proportionate to her contributions and sacrifices in the struggle.

The debate on this resolution is now going on, and some reference thereto will form the subject of future correspondence. For the present it seems appropriate to briefly refer to the leadership of the opposition Liberal party, as at present carried on in the House of Commons. As our readers are aware, a brand new leader of the Liberals of Canada was chosen at a great convention held in this city about a month ago; but it so happens that this new leader does not occupy a seat in Parliament; consequently he is unable to participate in the business of the present session. In view of these facts, it became necessary for our friends of the opposition, to make arrangements for House leadership during the session. As all know, at the last session, during the winter of 1919, Mr. D. D. McKenzie, M. P. for Cape Breton, was chosen temporary leader, after the death of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He, doubt-

Suffered from Constipation FOR TWO YEARS.

If the truth were only known you would find that over one-half of the life of man is caused by allowing the bowels to get into a constipated condition. When the bowels become constipated the stomach gets out of order, the liver does not work properly and then follows the violent sick headaches, the aches of the stomach, belching of acid, heartburn, water-brash, biliousness, etc.

Keep your bowels regular by using MILBURN'S LAXATIVE PILLS.
Mr. A. Roder, Hastings St. E., Vancouver, B.C., writes: "I desire to express my thanks for what MILBURN'S LAXATIVE PILLS have done for me. I had been suffering from constipation for two years, had had a bad cough and radishes. I tried all sorts of cures and remedies, but got no relief until I was advised to try your pills. I got great relief after the first few doses."

less, did his best to carry out the wishes and behests of his fellow members of the House on the opposition side, and there is no doubt at all that Mr. D. D. McKenzie entertained high hopes that, when the choice of a permanent leader should take place, he would be selected as that leader; but "the best laid schemes of mice and men gang aft agley." Mr. D. D., in due course, had his name presented to the convention for the leadership in conjunction with Mr. Fielding, Mr. McKenzie King and Mr. Graham. In the course of the several votes that were taken, Mr. D. D.'s stock and prestige gradually sank, almost to the vanishing point. The fight was kept up more persistently between Mr. Fielding and Mr. McKenzie King. The latter, however, won out by some 34 votes. Now, then, we have this condition of things. The real leader sits benignly in the gallery, and the vicarious leadership is carried on by none other than Mr. D. D. McKenzie, whose ambitions were so markedly snuffed out in the convention. But another circumstance has arisen out of the shuffle for leadership. Mr. Fielding, who had been elected as a Unionist, and who during last session did some most expert trimming in order to get himself back again to the liberal party, to qualify himself to contest the convention for leadership. It is marvellous how he succeeded. He certainly acted like a political jumping jack, one time voting on one side, and then on another, but towards the end of the session voting entirely against the Government. It is a fact that, although he occupied a seat on the cross benches in what is termed "no man's land" of the greater part of the two first sessions of this Parliament, towards the end of last session he slipped over into the opposition benches. We know what has happened in the convention, as above described; but now Mr. D. D. McKenzie occupies the seat assigned to the real leader, recently occupied by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and Mr. Fielding occupies a seat beside him, so that they are apparently and evidently the joint deputy leaders, the vicarious executors of the mandates of the real leader, who smiles down upon them from the gallery right overhead. Mr. D. D. McKenzie last session was a leader pro tem; this session he is locum tenens of a leader, and Mr. Fielding seems to be his accredited deputy. So there you have the leadership of the Liberal party in the gallery and on the floor of the Commons Chamber. It is a marvellous trinity to be sure.

PAIN ACROSS KIDNEYS

Was So Bad Had To Go To Bed.

Women are the greatest sufferers from weak, sore, lame and aching backs, owing to the continual stooping, bending and lifting so necessary to perform their household duties.

On the first sign of any weakness of the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken, and thus prevent serious kidney troubles which are sure to follow if the back is neglected.
Miss Gladys M. Buckler, Tatamagouche, N.S., writes: "I feel it my duty to let you know what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for me. I suffered for years with a sore back. I was so bad I had to take to my bed sometimes with the pain across my kidneys. I went to two different doctors; they treated me, but I got very little relief. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised for sore back, so sent for two boxes, and before I had the first one taken I felt a change. I cannot recommend your medicine enough."
Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co. Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The adjourned debate on the resolution of the Prime Minister, Sir Robert Borden, to approve the Peace Treaty and the Covenant of the League of Nations was resumed in the House of Commons on Monday September 22nd.

A splendid and illuminating contribution to the debate was presented by Hon. Mr. Rowell, President of the Privy Council. From whatever point of view his discourse could be regarded it was a masterpiece, and was so regarded and pronounced by all his hearers.

This resolution would terminate on Thursday the 11th. Consequently, it was important that those desirous of participating in the discussion should be on hand and ready to take their turn as speakers.

As the discussion proceeded, and the ideas of members on the respective sides of the House found expression, it at once became manifest that the opposition, one and all, appeared determined that they would not give their adhesion to the approval of the Treaty.

No doubt great expectations were entertained of Mr. Fielding's participation in, and contribution to this most important of debates. He had been absent from the House for some days, not improbably preparing his thunder.

out any real meaning in consideration of the spirit and form of the Peace Treaty and the Covenant of the League of Nations. It was to the effect that any attempt to carry the resolution by means of her presence in the League of Nations, the authority of her parliament would in no way be impaired.

Hon. Mr. Doherty, Minister of Justice, who was leading the House in the absence of the Prime Minister, immediately assailed the untenable position assumed by Mr. Fielding. In sarcastic language he held Mr. Fielding up to the ridicule of the Government's attitude, as expressed in the Prime Minister's resolution.

The debate was continued during the evening of Thursday far into the night. No contribution of any consequence was made thereto. A number of speakers participated, almost all on the opposition side.

thirty-two against the amendment. After Mr. Speaker declared the amendment lost, he called the question on the main motion, but the opposition friends did not evidently desire to place themselves on record against the motion.

The front Government seats have in a great measure been denuded of their occupants for some days. To begin with, two members have no seats in Parliament, namely, Sir Henry Drayton, the new Finance Minister, who has not yet occupied a seat, and the Hon. Dr. Tolmie, who was a member until he accepted the office of Minister of Agriculture.

A jolly group of cowboys waited at Bar-U ranch, near High River, Alberta, on the 16th, to watch the delivery of the morning cup of tea to the Royal Party housed in the guest cottage at the big ranch, hoping to get a glimpse of the Prince of Wales.

The New St. Dunstan's

Architectural Description

This morning the massive and beautiful St. Dunstan's Cathedral was dedicated. The building is of that purest Gothic style which, apparently more than any other, lends the ideal of a vivifying sermon to what was erstwhile silent stone.

It is, however, the interior of St. Dunstan's Cathedral that constitutes its artistic gem of the whole Dominion, and perhaps, the finest bit of ecclesiastical architecture on the whole American Continent.

On each side of the main Sanctuary are Chapels finished in marble, Green Vermont, Chocolate Tennessee, Black and Gold, Nile-green and Brachio-Violet predominating. One contains a very beautifully modelled and colored statue of Our Lady of Victories, the other a no less beautiful statue of The Sacred Heart.

The main piers in the nave of the Cathedral are finished in Skyros marble, the main shafts from these carrying up to the ceiling and supporting the vaulting. Moulded arches spring from the capitals of the piers along the full length of the nave carrying the clerestory.

Paonaya marble. The triforium admits of a passage way, along the full length of the nave, access being had to it from the choir gallery. The treatment of the clerestory is very effective, the large tracery windows with annular glass having niches on either side for statues. The whole effect is one of delicate tracery work in stone.

There are in all eight Shrines or Chapels in the Cathedral, three in the basement and five in the main church. There is a Shrine or Chapel in each transept, one dedicated to St. Joseph and one to St. Ann.

Directly behind the basement is a spacious assembly hall delegated for the meeting of the various religious societies. Beneath the assembly hall is located the immense steam heating plant, which is installed with the air live system. Immediately above the assembly hall, with a stairway leading to it and with two large entrances to the main Sanctuary is the main Sanctuary, a room fifty by forty, finished in oak and plaster of Paris.

This fine Cathedral, which is by no means the largest in Canada, is one of the finest, and has few if any equals on the Continent of North America. The artistic work was under the direction of Mr. Goddard, of New York, and the marble and stucco work was beautifully done by the firm of Nocenti, of New York and Chicago.

Oak. They resemble somewhat the stalls of the Old Royal Chapel of Edinburgh. The various Commission Ralls, the Pulpit and the Stations of the Cross are in colored marbles and are equalled by any Cathedral in Canada.

The floors of the whole church and vestibule, including the Sanctuary and side Chapel, are finished in Terrazo with pink Tennessee marble borders and panels, and the walls of the whole building have a dado of Green Vermont marble.

The electric fixtures are antique. They are in the form of very artistic lanterns much ornamented and are made of Rigoletto. The effect of the whole structure when lighted up is a dream of surpassing beauty.

The basement Chapel is large, having a seating capacity of 1200. It covers an area of 140 feet by 90 feet and is 18 feet high. The floor is of reinforced concrete, the ceiling is of Plaster of Paris over concrete, with artistically decorated columns and capitals.

There are two large entrances to the basement, two on Dorchester Street and one on Sydney Street. The building is lighted by electric, with alabaster globes producing a pleasing effect. There are two large Sacristies in the building, one behind the basement Chapel, which has served as the principal Sacristy up to the present time and has a large fireproof vault for the purpose of protecting the Sacred vessels.

Directly behind the basement is a spacious assembly hall delegated for the meeting of the various religious societies. Beneath the assembly hall is located the immense steam heating plant, which is installed with the air live system. Immediately above the assembly hall, with a stairway leading to it and with two large entrances to the main Sanctuary is the main Sanctuary, a room fifty by forty, finished in oak and plaster of Paris.

This fine Cathedral, which is by no means the largest in Canada, is one of the finest, and has few if any equals on the Continent of North America. The artistic work was under the direction of Mr. Goddard, of New York, and the marble and stucco work was beautifully done by the firm of Nocenti, of New York and Chicago.

An account of the dedicatory ceremonies will appear in next week's Herald.

When You Are Old

When you are old and gray and full of sleep, And nodding by the fire, take down this book And slowly read and dream of the soft look Your eyes had once, and of their shadows deep; How many loved your moments of glad grace, And loved your beauty with love false or true; But one man loved the pilgrim soul of you And loved the sorrows of your changing face. And bending down beside the glowing bars, Murnur, a little sadly, how love fled And paced upon the mountains overhead, And hid his face amid a cloud of stars. —William Butler Yeats

The Bishop Finds Two In One

The Gooleen National School was two long Irish miles from the town, and one afternoon in the fullness of time the bishop visited it and heard the children read, and examined the copy books, and made jokes, and revelled in his richest brogue, and altogether had a grand time. Through it all the schoolmistress felt that the bishop had something to say to her—something which would not be good to hear and that in this play with the children His Lordship was bracing himself up to a difficult and unpleasant duty.

He dismissed the classes an hour earlier than was proper, and then asked Ellen to give him her attention—he had something important to tell her. She prepared to listen with a sinking heart.

"In a certain town in my diocese," he began, in the grave and resonant voice of one who disposes on a weighty theme (his use of the full and lordly sounding "my" before "diocese," instead of the affectionate and vulgar little "me" which he so often affected, showed unusual seriousness), "in a certain town in my diocese there lived a man who was accused of theft, and tried in court for grand larceny."

The colour ebbed away from the girl's face, and her eyes dropped.

"In the same town there lived a woman whom he loved. Between them was promise of marriage, and there was on the woman's part a belief in the man's love of her; and on the man's part, of her faith and trust in him.

"But after the trial the woman showed the man that her faith in him was lost."

How stern the words sounded! "But ye've noticed—I mean, ye have noticed," sonorously, "that I said the man was accused. Nobody believed he was guilty, and though the woman showed loss of faith, there are some who do not believe she lost faith."

"Why then did she break the engagement between them? Nobody knows. I question whether she herself knows."

Here the old grey eyes, lost some of their sternness, and the voice that continued grew gentle:

"There is a curious-minded old priest who sometimes speculates about it in his own mind. Maybe the woman has not courage to be mother to children whose father was tried for felony—maybe he is not big enough for that. Or maybe she is resentful because the man did not confide in her, hurt in her vanity because he did not tell her any more than he told the rest of the world—maybe she is small enough for this."

Shame was in the drooped head; his Lordship's stiff old backbone eased a little. In his mind something had been raised from speculation to near-certainty.

"Ellen, most of the big things that we do or endure in life cannot be told to another. Most of us haven't self-knowledge enough to tell them right, for only the One above sees them as they really are."

The girl's face was uncomprehending.

"I'm talking like an old fool,"

All Stuffed Up

That's the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning. Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat.

No wonder catarrh causes headache, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, pollutes the breath, deranges the stomach and affects the appetite.

To cure catarrh, treatment must be constitutional—alterative and tonic. Hood's Sarsaparilla and purgative is the best. It has cured and built up many. Hood's Sarsaparilla and purgative is the best. It has cured and built up many.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures catarrh—it soothes and strengthens the mucous membrane and builds up the whole system.

thought his Lordship. "Or maybe I'm farther along life's road, and she can't rightly hear me yet."

His Lordship had gone a long way on that journey, and had climbed many heights in the going.

"See here," he amended, "every human soul has a right to keep its own secrets—to keep a door locked within. If the door is one that is opened to God, then that secret place becomes a holy of holies and a tower of strength to the one that holds it. No one, I think, can look at Aleck's face and doubt whether it is God or an enemy to God that possesses the secret citadel of his soul."

"But then he should tell me, shouldn't he? We two couldn't be one without confidence between us."

"That of course, was for you to decide. And you decided didn't you? And you let him see how you made up your mind. That's all over and done with now, and stale news. But the news I came to tell you today, Ellen, is something you have not heard before."

The words were ominous. "In the same town there lived another woman—one that I don't think you know. But she loved, and she loves the man you used to love."

Her face changed as he watched it. Something was roused in it like defence, resistance.

The bishop paused a little, for the old heart within was tender at the thought of the pain he would give—the blow would be high to kill.

"Ellen, my dear, it will be hard for you to hear what I have to say, but better from me than another. This woman is the kind that can love through thick and thin—love with no thought for self, for the self is blended and merged with the one she cares for. She is brave enough to choose the man she believes in if the whole world should doubt him. She is wise enough to respect a man's rights to keep his own counsel, yet give him that unquestioning love and faith which is going for all his life to be a cup of strength to him. Yes, for this woman is going, very soon, to marry Aleck."

"Marry Aleck!" burst from the girl. She uttered a little cry, with a choke at the end, that held all the pain of irreparable loss. Her eyes were filled with misery, while she clasped her hands and moaned and rocked her body as in a suffering too great to be endured.

"Don't you want Aleck to be happy, Ellen?" asked His Lordship with a hint of severity.

"Don't you want him, my poor child, to have a wife that will be strong and loving, and true as steel—the right kind of helpmate for a good man?"

The longing, the longing in those poor, pain-filled eyes!

"If you are not the woman she is, you must still try to give him up to her without a grudge."

"I deserved it, I deserved it," the girl moaned, and all the loss and all the yearning of a woman bereft of her life's love was in her stricken face.

"Maybe you did, poor girl, maybe you did. But that you have missed this one big thing, Ellen, need not mean that you must miss everything in life that is big—aye, and that's good for the soul. The two that I shall marry will be fitly mated, it is right that they shall be made one. But you Ellen, can do a great thing, a noble thing, one that the angels might envy, if you will wish them joy."

The cruelty of these priests! Would he ask one who mounted the scaffold to his execution to wish them joy who climbed the sunny hills? Would he ask the soul condemned to outer darkness to wish them joy that walked the golden streets?

"Ellen, let me hear you say you wish them joy. Let good will for them be in your heart and on your lips, that no thought in your mind may be hurtful to them or to you."

He waited, full of faith. It was not the first time he had witnessed conquest of self. He watched a finer and a nobler womanhood struggle through the birth-pangs, heard it urge and steady the faltering voice.

"I do—God help me always to do it—I wish them joy."

"Now I'll tell you who the woman is."

But this was too much. Ellen began to sob, her fingers picked at her dress as the fingers of the dying pick at the bed covers.

"No—no—not yet! Don't tell me yet!" she implored.

To Be Continued.

Willie—"How do you like army life? Quite a number of new turns for a fellow to get used to, I suppose."

Gillis—"You bet. At night you turn in, and just as you are about to turn over, somebody turns up and says, 'Turn out!'"

HAD DYSENTERY

Was So Weak She Had To Go To Bed.

Mrs. Charles Buchanan, West Monkton, Ont., writes:—I took Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry when I had dysentery so bad I passed nothing but blood and water. I got medicine from our doctor, but it failed to help me. A friend of mine dropped into see me one afternoon. I was so weak I was in bed. She told me what "Dr. Fowler's" had done for her little boy, and she wrote home and got the bottle she always kept in her medicine chest, and believe me four doses helped me so I could get up and do my work. I took two more doses and I was as normal as I should be. I would not be without it now if it were five dollars a bottle. My husband has used it since I did, for diarrhoea and he got splendid results. You may publish this if you wish, as it may lead some other sufferer to a cure."

Announcement

For the information of our many patrons, in both town and country, we deem it necessary to announce that the Coal Business, successfully carried on in the past by the late Mr. Charles Lyons, will be continued by the Estate, under the old firm name of C. Lyons & Co.

By maintaining a high standard of service and by courteous and honest treatment of the public, this firm has, for a period of more than a quarter of a century, enjoyed a large and ever-increasing patronage; and in announcing our intention of "carrying on," we desire, most earnestly, to give expression to our appreciation thereof. We are deeply grateful to the firm's many patrons for their constant manifestation of confidence in it in the past, and we assure them that if they favor us with a similar evidence of their good-will in the future there shall be no economy of effort on our part to make our intercourse both pleasant and profitable to them.

As we possess almost unlimited facilities for supplying the coal trade, and as we are desirous of extending our already large business, we respectfully invite the patronage of new customers; and if we succeed in this increasing our present connection, we guarantee that we shall be indefatigable in our endeavor to justify the confidence of our new friends.

We again thank our patrons for their past generous patronage, and respectfully solicit a renewal of their esteemed custom.
