"ECHOES of the Past;

The Recompense of Love!"

CHAPTER X.

The subject was Clive's favorite one the housing of the poor, one on which he never failed to grow eloquent; for he spoke from his heart; and to-night he was, perhaps, more eloquent than usual; for his remembrance of Paradise Gardens and the terrible sights he had seen there in company with Quilton was still fresh and keen.

Clive was a born orator, and responded with fervour to the spirit which he evoked in his audience; the clear, deep, and marvelously flexible voice rang through the small hall, and yet was sometimes so low—as when he told the story of the box-making family in their noisome den—that it stole upon the breathless silence like a whisper fraught with tremulous significance. And as low, but as significant, was often the applause, the deep-throated response; though at every trifling phrase, every soaring sentence, a roar of applause rang out and set the gas flares swaying.

Mina hung upon his words; every one was precious to her, thrilled through her. She had never imagined, much less heard, anything like it; and her hero became almost a divinity to her. Her eyes were charmed to his face, which seemed to dazzle her. She watched his lips as if to anticipate the words that passed them, now with the force of a tremendous torrent, now with the soft music of a brook. She was in a kind of dream, held in thrall by a spell which she wished might last forever; not once while he was speaking did she remove her gaze from his face, yet, notwithstanding, she could see the rapt faces of those around her, could watch their flaming eyes, was conscious of their parted lips through which their breath came jerkily.

No wonder they were awed, that they gazed at him open-eyed, open-mouthed. How they, too, must admire and worship him, the grand gentleman who was fighting their battles for them, who was sacrificing himself for them, pleading, struggling for them as if he were one of themselves.

The speech was drawing to a close—she felt that, with a pang—and her eyes wandered toward the door for an instant; she would steal away before the crowd began to leave. But two men had come near her and stood close by her side and between her and the door. One was a thick-set, extremely ugly man with a big round head covered by short, bristling hair; his chin was stubby, and his shirt-band failed to hide a dingy collar and a still more dingy shirt-front. He wore gold spectacles, through which his mean, restless eyes flashed in a furtive fashion. He had the unwashed appearance of the low-class foreigner, and he spoke to the other man—a younger man with a weak face and receding chin, to which attention was called by a vital scarlet tie—in broken English, with a strong accent partly German and partly Polish.

"Well, my boy, what you tink of it, hein?" he asked, with a covert sneer. "Fine, fine!" responded the youth. "That's the way to talk, isn't it? He's what I call a speaker, if you like, eh, Koshki?"

Koshki shrugged his shoulders. "It is very veil ash far ash it go; but it ish not strong enough. Our frent ish too mealy-mouthed, he—what you call it?—minces matters. He in! and for a goot reason! He ish aristocrat himself; he has the loaves and fishes. You comprehend? It is all talk, talk, with these aristocrats that pretend to be the frents of the people. And there is the goot ov talk? Ze world is full of talk. It is deets, deets, not words, ve down-trodden working men vant. Ze time is past for vords; we have vaited too long, we are tired of vaiting. This is all very vell." He jerked his bullet-head toward the platform. "But what is the use of it? The oppressors do not mind, zey laugh; zey laugh. Zey say, 'Let zem talk, it keeps zem quiet.' See! But presently zey will not laugh; presently—" he glanced round him, but every one seemed intently listening to the speaker on the platform, especially intent and absorbent seeing the girl who leaned against the wall near them, and lowering his voice he went on in a guttural whisper—"presently a blow—a blow, my frent!—will be struck which will make zem laugh the other side of zeyr mouths. You comprehend, Johnson?"

Johnson nodded, but looked vaguely up at the fat face and small, furtive eyes.

"Zen shall we see what our frent zere is made of; we shall zee whether he can do something more than talk."

"You mean?" said the youth, looking vaguely alarmed.

"I mean zat ve 'ave made our preparations, zat ve are only vaiting till the proper hour shall strike. And zey vait to know whether our fine talker zere vill join us. If so, vell and goot; if not—it vill be the vorse for him!"

He shrugged his shoulders and smiled a particularly unpleasant smile which revealed his yellow fangs for a moment; then with a manner as furtive as his glance, insinuated himself through the crowd to where a small knot of men, some as foreign and disreputable-looking as himself, were standing at the other end of the room.

Mina had heard every word, and at every word her heart beat with apprehension; for he had been threatening Mr. Clive. She watched the man, as he whispered to the group he had joined, with a mixture of loathing and indignation and vague terror; then she smiled with scorn of her fear, as if that dirty German could harm her hero.

With a peroration that roused the audience to a frenzy of enthusiasm, Clive arrived at the finish; a shower of applause and cheering burst on his last words. The chairman, a genuine working man, proposed a vote of thanks—carried with ringing cheers and the audience began to make for the doors. Mina felt that it would be better to wait until the first crush had passed, and she pressed against the wall with her head bent, trying to escape notice. Clive had stepped down from the platform and was talking to some of the men.

She saw that he was pale—it seemed to her that he looked tired—and once she noticed that his eyes wandered from the face of the man who was speaking to him and looked round absently. She trembled as they came her way; but he did not see her; and presently she moved towards the doors; but there was still a crush there, and she was compelled to wait. It was as she was standing there that Clive saw her. He started, said quickly to the men around him, "Excuse me!" and hurried to her side.

She heard him speak her name in a low voice, a thrill ran through her, and she turned her head slowly and caught her breath. He drew her arm within his, the crowd made way for them, cheering and waving their hats, as he and Mina passed through, and, with her arm still in his, they gained the street. He did not speak until they had turned the corner into quietude, then, smiling down at her, he said:

"Why, Miss Mina, how did you happen to be at the hall to-night? And alone, too?"

She did not reply at once; the voice of the platform was still ringing in her ears; but this other voice, so low, so friendly, was a different, a sweeter music, and she was loath to lose it—besides, her heart was beating against his arm so loudly that she could hardly speak; and when she did so the words came flutteringly.

"It was by chance," she said. "I was passing and heard—" She stopped.

"Curiosity, thy name is woman!" he said laughingly. "But you must have been a very brave little woman to make your way into that crowded den. I don't think it was very wise. And how are Elisha and Tibby? You are looking pale—" He broke off without waiting for her reply. "You are working at the schools? You are not working too hard, Miss Mina?"

He called her "Miss" Mina now, but she remembered with a secret joy that he had called her Mina when he had come to her in the hall.

"Oh, no, no!" she said. "Yes, I am at the classes." She fought for courage, for composure. "I want to thank you. It is you who make it possible for me to go to them, it is you—" Her voice broke, for all her efforts to control it.

"You mean that I was fortunate enough to get Elisha some pupils?" he said, as if the thing were nothing. "There's not much in that to deserve your thanks. Elisha's pupils have 'ause for gratitude, not he or you."

She shook her head. "It is you," he said in a low voice. "You have done so much for us—but you don't want me to thank you. That is why 'ou did not give your address"

He colored and nodded. "Partly, Miss Mina. But you see 'omme propose—"

"But God sends us a way," she responded.

He did not start, but he looked at her with swift appreciation of her intelligence; and his eyes scanned her face curiously. Few though the weeks had been since he had seen her, she had progressed. Unconsciously she had caught the cultivated one of the head mistress, she spoke like a lady—indeed, more correctly than some of the ladies of his acquaintance.

"You are learning French?" he said invitingly.

"Yes," she replied.

"And what else?" His eyes dwelt upon her, took in the simple details of her dress of blue serge with its neat and spotless collar and cuffs and daintily neat hat with its plain trimming of silk, the gray well-worn, but well-fitting, gloves; and, perforce, he called the street-singer with her shawl thrown round her face. A few weeks; it might have been years!

Vigorol A SPRING TONIC.

The latest medicine on the market is the Great French Tonic VIGOROL. Every home should have it. VIGOROL tones the whole system. Run-down men and women can be made strong and healthy. It tones you at once. That tired, dragging, sleepy feeling is removed, and you become bright and cheerful. The blood is purified, pimples and blotches are removed and a clear skin is the result, and life becomes worth while. Do you need toning up? Well, then get a bottle of VIGOROL at all drug stores.

and I get on very slowly; and Latin—that is easier."

He smiled down at her with raised brows. "So you find Latin easy? Why, you are a veritable blue-stocking! And you make me feel ashamed of my schoolboy days. I had to be flogged into my Latin, by Jove!"

She glanced up at him and smiled incredulously.

"And the music? I suppose that has gone to the wall. What with German and French and Latin—and English composition—"

"Yes, there is English composition," he said naively.

"Quite so. Of course! And algebra and conic sections, to say nothing of ree-hand drawing." No wonder there was no time for music.

"Oh, but there is," she said, her one echoing his light one. "I practice three hours a day; and I am having singing-lessons from an old friend of Elisha's—and, oh, how glad Elisha will be when he hears that I have seen you and tried to thank you."

"That's all right," he said.

They had paused for a moment in the quiet and deserted street; the light from a gas-lamp fell upon her eager, upturned face, and its beauty mote him, so that he looked at her with sudden gravity, a sudden frown.

"But perhaps I ought not," she said timidly, anxiously.

"If you mean that I am sorry that I have met with you again, you are wrong, my child," he said, the frown deepening, so that she shrank a little from him. "I have thought of you very often—" He was recalled to a sense of his words by the sudden odor that burned in her cheeks, the self-frightened expression in the gray eyes.

"But we've met and you've thanked me very prettily," he said in a lighter one. "And now tell me all about yourself—about Elisha and Tibby—" he corrected quickly.

She could talk fluently enough about them, and Clive listened to her eager account of Elisha's success as a teacher, and all that it meant to her; but all the while he was listening to the sweet, girlish voice he was thinking of the girl herself, of the marvelous progress she had made, the subtle change in her manner, the natural self-confidence—now that she was speaking of the others—the beauty of the upturned face, the deep, liquid eyes. And over him stole a sense of peace, wistful yet full of subtle pleasure that was half pain; he feeling that might come to the man who has found a rose growing in the wilderness, a lily by the dusty wayside. Such a flower, so rare in such a place, the man might long to pluck and place in his bosom to still the vague aching of his heart.

He woke with a start as her voice spoke.

"Where are?" he asked, as if he were indeed waking from a dream.

She laughed softly. "We are nearly home—I mean at the Rents. It is round the next turning. Won't you come in and see Elisha?"

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

"When going to a seat near the wall, in any kind of an audience, should I face the people whom I am passing or should I turn my back to them?" was Jack's query.

"It is more convenient to turn one's back to the persons seated in passing them. It is also necessary to beg the pardon of the people so disturbed," said his older brother.

Smoking Concert at B.I.S. Rooms.

The most enjoyable affair of its kind witnessed here for a long time past. Such was the verdict of those who had the good fortune to attend the smoking concert held last night at the club rooms of the Benevolent Irish Society. The audience was large and enthusiastic and the programme of events varied and interesting. The opening item was an instrumental selection by the orchestra, as follows: Mr. T. P. Halley (piano), Mr. T. Power (violin), and Mr. Devereaux (mandolin). Next was an entertaining solo by Mr. J. Darcy entitled: "Tip From Somerset." Mr. Cairns delighted the audience with "A Little Bit of Heaven." Mr. Devereaux followed with selections on the Mandolin. Dr. C. Howlett sang "Von Tripitz Broom," which refers to the bottling up of the German navy. After a selection by the orchestra there was a brief interval. On resuming Mr. C. J. Fox delighted all present with "Sons of the Sea," while Mr. J. L. Slattery excelled in "Sands of the Desert" and an encore "If we only had old Ireland over here." Following a Horn solo and violin obligato: "O Dry Those Tears" by Messrs. Darcy and Power, respectively, Mr. T. H. O'Neill, whose name has become a theatrical word, appeared and was given a great ovation at the outset. His recitations were intangible. The musical monologues by Mr. Cameron, of the British Theatre, was the real rolicking comedy itself, especially when he showed "How Belgium put the kibosh on the Kaiser." As a finale Messrs. Huskins and Cairns, of the Nickel Theatre, gave a couple of duets. Mr. T. P. Halley, who with Messrs. J. Pippy and T. Power promoted the concert, acted as accompanist. The affair terminated with all present singing the National Anthem.

Florizel's Passengers.

By the Florizel yesterday afternoon there arrived from New York and Halifax the following saloon passengers—

J. L. McGregor, W. Smith, T. Coady, H. A. Herder, Dr. Carolyn Geisel, Miss Alice Geisel, E. Coupel, P. J. Hynde, L. McVicar, Miss G. Job, J. Stick, A. White, Jas. F. Powell, Miss Agnes Summers, J. Salvage Notes.

All our fishermen have returned from the Labrador but with very poor trips, we regret to say; highest catch being William Brown, schr. Three Brothers, with 250 qts.

Schr. Daisy, Capt. Job Steed, arrived Sunday night bringing the key of the Salvage Fleet. The Daisy experienced a rough trip, her foremast breaking below the deck and beating up his flying jib and and to make matters worse the vessel sprang a leak owing to heavy strain, and one of her pumps becoming clogged with salt making things look a bit unpleasant, however, through bull dog pluck, the captain brought the vessel through safely and was forced to discharge his salt Monday morning, although it was raining hard. Capt. Steed hauls for 200 qts. of Labrador.

Most of the Flat Island schooners have done very well according to reports. Capt. Wm. Samson and his son Arthur on way home with 500 qts. each and several other schooners with good trips, having secured their catches at Ryan's Bay and vicinity.

"ECHOES of the Past;

The Recomperse of Love!"

CHAPTER X.

The subject was Clive's favorite one the housing of the poor, one on which he never failed to grow eloquent; for he spoke from his heart; and to-night he was, perhaps, more eloquent than usual; for his remembrance of Paradise Gardens and the terrible sights he had seen there in company with Quilton was still fresh and keen.

Clive was a born orator, and responded with fervour to the spirit which he evoked in his audience; the clear, deep, and marvelously flexible voice rang through the small hall, and yet was sometimes so low—as when he told the story of the box-making family in their noisome den—that it stole upon the breathless silence like a whisper fraught with tremulous significance. And as low, but as significant, was often the applause, the deep-throated response; though at every trifling phrase, every moving sentence, a roar of applause rang out and set the gas flares swaying.

Mina hung upon his words; every one was precous to her, thrilled through her. She had never imagined, much less heard, anything like it; and her hero became almost a divinity to her. Her eyes were chained to his face, which seemed to dazzle her. She watched his lips as if to anticipate the words that passed them, now with the force of a tremendous torrent, now with the soft music of a brook. She was in a kind of dream, held in thrall by a spell which she wished might last forever; not once while he was speaking did she remove her gaze from his face, yet, notwithstanding, she could see the rapt faces of those around her, could watch their flaming eyes, was conscious of their parted lips through which their breath came jerkily.

No wonder they were awed, that they gazed at him open-eyed, open-mouthed. How they, too, must admire and worship him, the grand gentleman who was fighting their battles for them, who was sacrificing himself for them, pleading, struggling for them as if he were one of themselves.

The speech was drawing to a close—she felt that, with a pang—and her eyes wandered toward the door for an instant; she would steal away before the crowd began to leave. But two men had come near her and stood close by her side and between her and the door. One was a thick-set, extremely ugly man with a big round head covered by short, bristling hair; his chin was stubby, and his shirt-band failed to hide a dingy collar and a still more dingy shirt-front. He wore gold spectacles, through which his mean, restless eyes flashed in a furtive fashion. He had the unwashed appearance of the low-class forger, and he spoke to the other man—a younger man with a weak face and receding chin, to which attention was called by a vital scarlet tie—in broken English with a strong accent partly German and partly Polish.

"Well, my boy, what you tink of it, hein?" he asked, with a covert sneer. "Fine, fine!" responded the youth. "That's the way to talk, isn't it? He's what I call a speaker, if you like, eh, Koshki?"

Koshki shrugged his shoulders. "It is very vell ash far ash it go; but it-ish not strong enough. Our frenz ish too mealy-mouthed, he—what you call it?—minces matters. He in! and for a goot reason! He ish aristocrat himself; he has the loaves and fishes. You comprehend? It is all talk, talk, with these aristocrats that pretend to be the frenz of the people. And there is the goot ov talk? Ze world is full of talk. It is deets, deets, not words, ve down-trodden working men vant. Ze time is past for vords; we have vaited too long, we are tired of vaiting. This ish all very vell." He jerked his bullet-head toward the platform. "But what is the use of it? The oppressors do not mind, zey laugh; zey laugh. Zey say, 'Let zem talk, it keeps zem quiet.' See! But presently zey will not laugh; presently—" he glanced round him, but every one seemed intently listening to the speaker on the platform, especially intent and absorbent seemed the girl who leaned against the wall near them, and lowering his voice he went on in a guttural whisper—"Presently a blow—a blow, my frenz!—will be struck which will make zem laugh the other side of zey mouths. You comprehend, Johnson?"

Johnson nodded, but looked vacantly up at the fat face and small, furtive eyes.

"Zem shall we see what our frenz zere ish made of; we shall zee whether he can do something more than talk."

"You mean?" said the youth, looking vaguely alarmed.

"I mean zat ve 'ave made our preparations, zat ve are only vaiting till the proper hour shall strike. And ze vait to know whether our fine talker zere vill join us. If so, vell and goot; if not—it will be the vorse for him!"

He shrugged his shoulders and smiled a particularly unpleasant smile which revealed his yellow fangs for a moment; then with a manner as furtive as his glance, insinuated himself through the crowd to where a small knot of men, some as foreign and disreputable-looking as himself, were standing at the other end of the room.

Mina had heard every word, and at every word her heart beat with apprehension; for he had been threatening Mr. Clive. She watched the man, as he whispered to the group he had joined, with a mixture of loathing and indignation and vague terror; then she smiled with scorn of her fear, as if that dirty German could harm her here.

With a peroration that roused the audience to a frenzy of enthusiasm, Clive arrived at the finish; a shower of applause and cheering burst on his last words. The chairman, a genuine working man, proposed a vote of thanks—carried with ringing cheers and the audience began to make for the doors. Mina felt that it would be better to wait until the first crush had passed, and she pressed against the wall with her head bent, trying to escape notice. Clive had stepped down from the platform and was talking to some of the men.

She saw that he was pale—it seemed to her that he looked tired—and once she noticed that his eyes wandered from the face of the man who was speaking to him and looked round absently. She trembled as they came her way; but he did not see her; and presently she moved towards the doors; but there was still a crush there, and she was compelled to wait. It was as she was standing there that Clive saw her. He started, said quickly to the men around him, "Excuse me!" and hurried to her side.

She heard him speak her name in a low voice, a thrill ran through her, and she turned her head slowly and caught her breath. He drew her arm within his, the crowd made way for them, cheering and waving their hats, as he and Mina passed through, and, with her arm still in his, they gained the street. He did not speak until they had turned the corner into quietude, then, smiling down at her, he said:

"Why, Miss Mina, how did you happen to be at the hall to-night? And alone, too?"

She did not reply at once; the voice of the platform was still ringing in her ears; but this other voice, so low, so friendly, was a different, a sweeter music, and she was loath to lose it—besides, her heart was beating against his arm so loudly that she could hardly speak; and when she did so the words came fluttering.

"It was by chance," she said. "I was passing and heard—" She stopped.

"Curiosity, thy name is woman!" he said laughingly. "But you must have been a very brave little woman to make your way into that crowded den. I don't think it was very wise. And how are Elisha and Tibby? You are looking pale—" He broke off without waiting for her reply. "You are working at the schools? You are not working too hard, Miss Mina?"

He called her "Miss" Mina now, but she remembered with a secret joy that he had called her Mina when he had come to her in the hall.

"Oh, no, no!" she said. "Yes, I am at the classes." She fought for courage, for composure. "I want to thank you. It is you who make it possible for me to go to them, it is you—" Her voice broke, for all her efforts to control it.

"You mean that I was fortunate enough to get Elisha some pupils?" he said, as if the thing were nothing. "There's not much in that to deserve your thanks. Elisha's pupils have cause for gratitude, not he or you."

She shook her head. "It is you," he said in a low voice. "You have done so much for us—but you don't want me to thank you. That is why you did not give your address."

He colored and nodded. "Partly, Miss Mina. But you see l'homme propose—"

"But God sends us a way," she responded.

He did not start, but he looked at her with swift appreciation of her intelligence; and his eyes scanned her face curiously. Few though the weeks had been since he had seen her, she had progressed. Unconsciously she had caught the cultivated one of the head mistress, she spoke like a lady—indeed, more correctly than some of the ladies of his acquaintance.

"You are learning French?" he said invitingly.

"Yes," she replied.

"And what else?" His eyes dwelt upon her, took in the simple details of her dress of blue serge with its neat and spotless collar and cuffs daintily neat hat with its plain trimming of silk, the gray well-worn, but well-fitting, gloves; and, perforce, recalled the street-singer with her shawl thrown round her face. A few weeks; it might have been years!

"German—but it is very difficult she felt that, with a pang—and her eyes wandered toward the door for an instant; she would steal away before the crowd began to leave. But two men had come near her and stood close by her side and between her and the door. and I get on very slowly; and Latin—that is easier."

He smiled down at her with raised brows. "So you find Latin easy? Why, you are a veritable blue-stocking! And you make me feel ashamed of my schoolboy days. I had to be flogged into my Latin, by Jove!"

She glanced up at him and smiled incredulously.

"And the music? I suppose that has gone to the wall. What with German and French and Latin—English composition—"

"Yes, there is English composition," he said naively.

"Quite so. Of course! And algebra and conic sections, to say nothing of free-hand drawing. No wonder there's no time for music."

"Oh, but there is," she said, her one echoing his light one. "I practice three hours a day; and I am having singing-lessons from an old friend of Elisha's—and, oh, how glad Elisha will be when he hears that I have been you and tried to thank you."

"That's all right," he said.

They had paused for a moment in the quiet and deserted street; the light from a gas-lamp fell upon her eager, upturned face, and its beauty mote him, so that he looked at her with sudden gravity, a sudden frown.

"But perhaps I ought not," she said timidly, anxiously.

"If you mean that I am sorry that have met with you again, you are wrong, my child," he said, the frown opening, so that she shrank a little from him. "I have thought of you very often—" He was recalled to a sense of his words by the sudden color that burned in her cheeks, the self-frightened expression in the gray eyes.

"But we've met and you've thanked me very prettily," he said in a lighter one. "And now tell me all about yourself—about Elisha and Tibby—" he corrected quickly.

She could talk fluently enough about them, and Clive listened to her eager account of Elisha's success as a teacher, and all that it meant to them all; but all the while he was listening to the sweet, girlish voice he was thinking of the girl herself, of the marvelous progress she had made, the subtle change in her manner, the natural self-confidence—now that she was speaking of the others—the beauty of the upturned face, the deep, liquid eyes. And over him stole a sense of peace, wistful yet full of subtle pleasure that was half pain; he feeling that might come to the man who has found a rose growing in the wilderness, a lily by the dusty wayside. Such a flower, so rare in such a place, the man might long to pluck and place in his bosom to still the vague aching of his heart.

He woke with a start as her voice stopped.

"Where are?" he asked, as if he were indeed waking from a dream.

She laughed softly. "We are nearly home—I mean at the Rents. It is round the next turning. Won't you come in and see Elisha?"

Smoking Concert at B.I.S. Rooms.

The most enjoyable affair of its kind witnessed here for a long time past. Such was the verdict of those who had the good fortune to attend the smoking concert held last night at the club rooms of the Benevolent Irish Society. The audience was large and enthusiastic and the programme of events varied and interesting. The opening item was an instrumental selection by the orchestra, as follows: Mr. T. P. Halley (piano), Mr. T. Power (violin), and Mr. Devereaux (mandolin). Next was an entertaining solo by Mr. J. Darcy entitled: "Up From Somers." Mr. Cairns delighted the audience with "A Little Bit of Heaven." Mr. Devereaux followed with selections on the Mandolin. Dr. C. Howlett sang "Von Tripitz Brook," which refers to the bottling up of the German navy. After a selection by the orchestra there was a brief interval. On resuming Mr. C. J. Fox delighted all present with "Sons of the Sea," while Mr. J. L. Slatery excelled in "Bands of the Desert." An encore "If we only had old Ireland over here." Following a Horn solo and violin obligato: "O Dry Those Tears" by Messrs. Darcy and Power, respectively. Mr. T. H. O'Neill, whose name has become a theatrical word, appeared and was given a great ovation at the outset. His recitations were inimitable. The musical monologues by Mr. Cameron, of the British Theatre, was the real rollicking comedy itself, especially when he showed "How Belgium put the kibosh on the Kaiser." As a finale Messrs. Huskins and Cairns, of the Nickel Theatre, gave a couple of duets. Mr. T. P. Halley, who with Messrs. J. Pippy and T. Power promoted the concert, acted as accompanist. The affair terminated with all present singing the National Anthem.

Florizel's Passengers.

By the Florizel yesterday afternoon there arrived from New York and Halifax the following saloon passengers—

Salvage Notes.

All our fishermen have returned from the Labrador but with very poor trips, we regret to say; highest catch being William Brown, schr. Three Brothers, with 250 qtls.

Schr. Daisy, Capt. Job Steed, arrived Sunday night bringing the key of the Salvage Fleet. The Daisy experienced a rough trip, her foremast breaking below the deck and heaving up his flying jib and to make matters worse the vessel sprang a leak owing to heavy strain, and one of her pumps becoming clogged with salt making things look a bit unpleasant, however, through bull dog pluck, the captain brought the vessel through safely and was forced to discharge his salt Monday morning, although it was raining hard. Capt. Steed hails for 200 qtls. of Labrador.

The Store That Pleases.

A Dardanelles Death Trap.

Hill 70 Stormed and Lost -- Splendid Gallantry of Our Yeomen -- Charge Uphill Against a Killing Fire.

(By E. Ashmead-Bartlett.)

Dardanelles, Aug. 23.
(Via Alexandria, Sept. 2.)

If we have failed in the great strategic scheme of getting astride the peninsula north of Anzac by seizing the hills round Anafarta and forcing the enemy to abandon his positions before Achi Baba and on the Killid Bahr salient, it has certainly not been through want of trying. The original plan just failed, as the most carefully laid plans will go wrong in war, because a corps failed to carry out the task assigned to it—namely, to push through with a rush when the enemy was completely surprised and had only a few battalions of picked troops to oppose our divisions.

The ground at Anafarta is very close and broken and rises gradually to the hills. It is essential to advance in very open order, and the men thus speedily become separated and out of touch with their officers and comrades. It requires troops highly trained in skirmishing and self-reliance, where every man will push on to the objective of his own accord without stopping for orders or to see if his comrades are following.

The first attempt to seize the hills round Anafarta, having definitely broken down on August 10, it was not until August 21 that the Army was in a position to make a frontal attack on the Turks in this quarter. The prizes which would reward success were great and fully justified a supreme effort. All hope of effecting a surprise had now vanished, and it was obvious that the position comprised within the sector stretching from Hill 70 to Hill 112, the line chosen for our assault, could only be taken by a frontal attack and sheer hard fighting.

Feverish Trench Digging.

Meanwhile the Turks had made full use of the time afforded them, and, according to their invariable practice, had dug themselves in up to their necks. Every dawn disclosed new trenches which had been dug in the night, and it was obvious from the manner in which they searched our beaches and camps with shell fire that several fresh batteries had been brought to this front. Opposite our trenches, in the open, the Turks had also dug two lines of immense strength and carefully loopholed.

Our immediate objective on the left was the capture of Hill 70, according to the map, or "Burnt Hill" among the troops, which lies in front of the main position and which has caused us so much trouble ever since the landing. Our centre and right were to advance from the ridge in front of Chocolate Hill, or Yilghin Burnu, as it is marked on the map, and from the trenches in the plain south of it, and after capturing the Turkish trenches in the low ground in their immediate front were to converge and assault the main objective, Hill 112.

For the supreme effort troops were massed along the line Hill 70 to Hill 112, and a division of Yeomanry without their horses were held in reserve behind Lala Baba. The disposition of our forces was as follows: One brigade was ordered to attack Hill 70, another brigade to attack Hill 112, with a third in reserve, while the divisions holding the trenches in the plain to the south were to rush the trenches in their front and then wheel northwards to converge on Hill 112 from the south.

In the bombardment which preceded, the battleships and cruisers concentrated on Hills 70 and 112, supported by field guns and heavy howitzers. Once again the enemy's trenches appeared to be swallowed up in clouds of earth and smoke, but the Turks showed no sign and not a man left his position. While this bombardment lasted the enemy's guns replied furiously, concentrating their fire chiefly on and behind Chocolate Hill, which was wreathed in bursting shrapnel. Very soon the shells set fire to the ditch and scrub, which, fanned by a breeze, burnt furiously, spreading with amazing rapidity and at times blotting out the positions in clouds of rolling smoke and flames.

The guns still thundered away at the trenches on top, but the Turkish infantry did not seem to care, many of them standing boldly up from cover in order to get a better view of the advancing lines of khaki figures. The rifle fire was deafening, and I do not think I have ever heard such a din as that produced by the ships' guns, field pieces, bursting shells, and thousands of rifles on any battlefield before. At 3.50 the two regiments made a final rush up the hill, one battalion from the west and another from the south.

Storming the Hill.

A great solid mass of khaki, with bayonets glistening amid the smoke and dust, seemed to emerge from the burnt scrub and surge towards the trenches on top. For a few minutes the artillery lengthened their fuses and shelled the reverse slopes, leaving the trench line clear. The Turks came out on top and fired furiously into the advancing lines. Some of them seemed to waver for a moment and abandon the crest, running down behind, but the majority stuck to their trenches determined to die where they stood.

Our men got high up the hill, but on the north side the battalion was brought to a standstill by machine guns and cross fire. On the south some of our men reached the top and jumped into the trenches, where they died fighting among the Turks at the point of the bayonet. In fact, at this southern angle a desperate hand-to-hand fight took place, and never have the enemy fought with greater courage and determination.

For a few minutes it looked as if the hill was won, for our men were swarming all over it just below the crest and had actually occupied a section of the trench line on the south, but then the Turkish battery behind Hill 112 began to pour salvos of shrapnel into our tanks at a range of only 1,200 yards, which simply swept whole lines away and forced the survivors to retire further down the slopes to some feeble cover. Here they hung on for a few minutes, but the attack had spent its force and came back to the trenches they had so recently left.

The Attack Had Failed.

The attack had failed. Once more Hill 70 was left to the Turks, the wounded and the dead. Meanwhile the fighting had been just as severe on the right, for the troops of a division rushed from their trenches and stormed the first Turkish line under a fearful fire over ground without a particle of cover, the advance of the brigade from the ridge in front of Yilghin Burnu being held up until the right had accomplished its first task. Unfortunately it was found impossible to storm the second Turkish line in the flat, a deadly loopholed trench with overhead cover.

Unable to clear the Turks from the open our infantry wheeled to the north, according to the previous plan, to form for an assault on Hill 112, while a brigade advanced from the ridge in front of Yilghin Burnu, or, rather, they were driven off it to the south side by the terrible fire which had broken out, having been ignited by the bursting shells. The flames swept in a solid bank surmounted by rolling clouds of black smoke right across the hill, and the heat was terrific. A division wheeling towards the same objective were caught at short range by the enemy's second trench on their flank in the open plain, and it became obvious that it would be impossible to proceed with the advance on Hill 112 unless the trench line was taken. Throughout the afternoon the fighting in this quarter was intense and the rifle fire tremendous, but we could not gain another yard of ground.

Hill 70 Again.

Meanwhile orders were issued for another attack on Hill 70 by a battalion which had hitherto been held in reserve and a mounted division in reserve behind Lala Baba. This splendid body of troops, in action for the first time and led by men bearing some of the best-known names in England, moved out from under cover and proceeded to cross the Salt Lake in open order.

No sooner did they appear than the enemy concentrated a heavy shrapnel fire on the advancing lines, fully exposed as they were in the open. But the men, moving as if on parade, pressed steadily on, losing many, but never wavering, and formed up behind the infantry brigade in front of Hill 70.

It was now six o'clock, and once more the crest was furiously bombarded by every available gun, while the Turkish batteries concentrated on our trenches. The scene was majestic but awful, for the light was now rapidly waning and the whole horizon almost blotted out with enormous clouds of smoke and flames, as the trees, scrub, homesteads, and the very ground were set on fire. From different points, while the noise of the guns and the incessant roar from thousands of rifles rendered the scene a perfect inferno.

A little after six a battalion went forward and seized the southern slopes of the hill and began to dig themselves in preparatory to a further advance against the top. At this point the shell fire began to tell on the Turks, for many of them could be seen streaming from the northern knoll of the hill down the trench line, either because it had become untenable or they were preparing to meet the advance of our men.

Unstoppable Yeomanry.

For about an hour there was no change in the situation, and then the Yeomanry again moved forward in a solid mass, forming up under the lower western and northern slopes. It was now almost dark, and the attack seemed to hang fire, when suddenly the Yeomanry leapt to their feet and as a single man charged right up the hill. They were met by a withering fire which rose to a crescendo as they neared the northern crest, but nothing could stop them.

They charged at amazing speed without a single halt from the bottom to the top, losing many men and many of their chosen leaders, including gallant Sir John Milbanke. It was a stirring sight watched by thousands at the ever-gathering gloom. One moment they were below the crest, the next on top. A moment after many had disappeared inside the Turkish trenches, bayoneting all the defenders who had not fled in time, while others never stopped at the trench line but dashed in pursuit down the reverse slopes.

From a thousand lips a shout went up that Hill 70 was won. But night was now rapidly falling, the figures became blurred, then lost all shape, and finally disappeared from view. The battlefield had disappeared completely, and as one left Chocolate Hill one looked back on a vista of rolling clouds of smoke and huge fires from the midst of which the incessant roar of the rifle fire never for a moment ceased.

This was ominous, for although Hill 70 was in our hands, the question arose could we hold it throughout the night in the face of determined counter-attacks? In fact, all through the night the battle raged incessantly, but when morning broke Hill 70 was no longer in our possession.

Apparently the Turks were never driven off a knoll on the northern crest, from which they sniped us with machine guns and artillery fire, while those of the Yeomanry who had dashed down the reverse slopes in pursuit were counter-attacked and lost heavily, and had been obliged to retire. In the night it was decided it would be impossible to hold the hill in daylight, and the order was given for the troops to withdraw to their original positions.

Nothing, however, will lessen the glory of that final charge of England's yeomen. It was ended this great fight. However, the troops at Anzac achieved some successes, the Australian infantry finally driving the enemy from Hill 60, while our whole line was linked up with a trench line instead of isolated posts.

A Nurse Should be Quite Independent.

A nurse should never have to rely upon help from the servants or from the mistress of the house, for her duties are always immediate and urgent, and much of her work must be done after the household as a whole has retired. If she is provided with modern gas appliances she will be independent of all outside help and can do her work efficiently without any undue labour.

A Gas Fire needs practically no attention, and saves all grate-cleaning, fire-laying, coal-carrying and replenishing.

A Gas Water Heater gives abundant hot water at the shortest notice at any hour of the day or night. An inverted incandescent Gas mantle gives a steady brilliant light that is most restful to the eyes of the patient.

A Gas Cooker needs no preparation, provides heat for several purposes at once, and can easily be installed in a room near the sick room.

In all long cases especially gas appliances are essential for good nursing.

Doctors recommend and use Gas Fires. For further particulars and copy of Special War Number of "A Thousand and One Uses for Gas" (post free) apply to

Kitchener Prefers Volunteers.

In the early part of last month, Lord Kitchener in speaking of the need of men for the army said the response to the appeal for volunteers had been remarkable, but that there had recently been a falling-off, while the need for more and more men continued to be urgent. He also announced that a solution of this problem was being sought by the Cabinet, by many this was regarded as an intimation that a compulsory system would soon be introduced and those who had been carrying on a campaign for conscription rejoiced mightily. Even many who did not favour conscription were willing to accept it, if Kitchener called for it. The Trades Union Congress last month passed a resolution by 600 votes against 7 "to assist the Government as far as possible in the successful prosecution of the war." The Daily Mail's report of it says:—

McMurdo's Store News

FRIDAY, Oct. 1st, 1915.
When the weather begins to get cool, you will find in a Horlick's Malted Milk Shake something that will make you feel fit and keep out the cold. It's gentle stimulating power will be felt, and unlike alcoholic stimulants there is no come back, no reaction. The milk, malt, syrup, and chocolate or fruit juice, are real foods, and bring food to the tissues, adding to the fuel supply of the body, not merely burning up more rapidly the fuel already there. An egg added to the milk-shake increases considerably, of course, its food value. Price 10 and 15 cts. a glass.
Zylox Ointment is valuable as a general purpose Ointment as well as an application in cases of Salt Rheum, Eczema, psoriasis, Impetigo and other like skin troubles. For cuts, wounds, abscesses, suppuratory sores its value is substantive, and its effects rapid and well marked. Price 50c. a box.

Honor to the 1st
Nfld. Regiment.

To-morrow we hope that every person able to spare 5c. will be seen wearing the emblem of the 1st Newfoundland Regiment in honour of our boys who have had their first baptism of fire in the Dardanelles. We are proud of them, and grateful to them all, and our hearts especially go out to those who have the added honour of being wounded in fighting for these, their distant homes.
This they are doing for us; we must in return help to provide them with all they need in health and sickness. Buy the emblem from the members of the St. John Ambulance Nursing Divisions to-morrow, and so help the members of the W. P. A., in their efforts to provide our defenders with the most essential necessities. We cannot give too much.

A BIG SALE!

About two months ago a statement appeared in this paper that over "TEN THOUSAND" (10,000) bottles of STAFFORD'S LINIMENT had been sold since the beginning of the year 1915. Certain persons were heard to remark that they were not so sure about this statement. We will go farther now and offer $1,000 to the person or persons who can come in to our store on THEATRE HILLS and ask us to show them orders amounting to over FOURTEEN THOUSAND (14,000) since the beginning of THIS year and by our not being able to produce them, will gladly forfeit the above sum mentioned.

All you have to do is to come in and ask us. The reason for the big demand for STAFFORD'S LINIMENT is that it is superior to any other LINIMENT on the market at the present time. It has a unique record for relieving RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, NEURALGIA and all ACHES and PAINS, in fact no home should be without a bottle.
"STAFFORD'S LINIMENT" is sold everywhere, and always be sure that you obtain the bottle with the green wrapper on the outside and the RED LABEL inside.

Dr. Geisel's Lecture.

Dr. Geisel, of Battle Creek, Mich., lectured to a large and appreciative audience in the Grenfell Hall last night, taking her subject "Health and Humanity." Present amongst the large audience were Lady Horwood, Mrs. John Harvey, Mrs. John Browning, Mrs. W. G. Gosling and Mrs. W. C. Job, the committee with whom the lecturer will work during her stay in the city. In the absence of the Chairman of the Civic Commission, Rev. Dr. Jones presided. In introducing the speaker of the evening, the Rev. chairman dwelt on efficiency, pointing out that Health is one of the great channels by which that state is obtained. He then referred briefly to the ability and experience of Dr. Geisel, who was visiting St. John's through the kindness and interest in the common welfare of a philanthropic citizen. Dr. Geisel, in opening her discourse, referred to the stress of the present times, and spoke of our duty to God and King which demands the best that we can offer. She then outlined the means by which we may attain greatest efficiency, and emphasized the necessity of taking care of our health. Means to this end are faith in God, diet, exercise, fresh air, correct dress and rational remedies for diseases of the system. The lecturer then dealt with the excessive use of patent medicines and deplored the fact that such quantities of drugs are used with little if any effect in making the people healthier. She also dealt extensively with foods and their nutritive values, and gave many suggestions as to the best methods of their preparation. Referring to the value of fresh air she told of her personal struggle against consumption, and dwelt at length on the curative effect of oxygen on this dread disease. Exercise and clothing were also fully dealt with, and particular reference was made to the wearing of sweaters, which restricts the working of organs and muscles, thereby causing many ills. In conclusion she referred to the effect of alcohol on the human system and showed how it affected the race as regards efficiency. She then exhorted all present to seek all aids to victory in building up a strong healthy race and to eliminate all that is dangerous to that end. A vote of thanks, proposed by Dr. Remdell was carried by acclamation and tendered the lecturer by the Rev. Dr. Jones. This afternoon at 3 o'clock, Dr. Geisel will lecture in the Casino on "The Study of Blood," and at 8.30 p.m. on "Race Betterment," this evening on "Race Betterment."

Private Ebsary Dead.

Yesterday afternoon Colonial Secretary Bennett received a message conveying the sad news of the death of Private E. Ebsary, of D Company of the Newfoundland Regiment, who had succumbed to spinal meningitis at the Canadian Expeditionary Hospital on September 23rd. Deceased was the 17 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Newman Ebsary, of the Southside, and brother of Company Sergeant Samuel Ebsary, one of the first who volunteered at the outbreak of the war. It seems particularly regrettable that after long preparation Private Ebsary should be denied of firing a shot for his King and Empire. Private Ebsary offered himself to fight for Right and Liberty, he played just as noble and as valiant a part as the soldier in the trench or the sailor on the ship of war and his name will be enrolled amongst those who have sacrificed their own lives for the sake of others. The Telegram joins in the widespread sympathy offered for the bereaved parents.

Lieut Col Franklin.

A story was current yesterday that Lieut-Colonel Franklin had been seriously wounded. This we are pleased to say is incorrect as the officer is still at his post of duty on the Western Front. Some time ago he was slightly injured in the face but his wounds, we understand, were only of a superficial nature, though no particulars as to how the wounds were received has yet reached the city.

Von Papen Has Decided to hit the Train for Mexico.

San Francisco, Sept. 25.—Captain Franz Von Papen, military attache of the German Embassy at Washington, and Prince Von Hatzfeldt who are visiting this city, will leave next Tuesday for Mexico, it was announced to-day. Both men maintain silence as to their destination and the object of their visit to the Southern Republic.
Capt. Von Papen denied to-day that the expression "Idiotic Yankees," contained in the letter entrusted to J.

F. J. Archibald, and intercepted by the British authorities, was intended to apply to the American people.

"The much discussed letter was to my wife," he said. "In passing, it may be said that publishing a man's letter to his wife is deemed bad form. The British authorities at Falmouth, found these letters on Mr. Archibald, they pounced with avidity on the two words, that have made all this trouble.
"They published only one excerpt of my letter, that changing its meaning entirely. My wife, or any one else reading the letter through would have gathered that the expression 'Idiotic Yankees' referred to the publishers of a New York newspaper.

"The newspaper had been calling us conspirators and other objectionable epithets. It grew specially vehement after a portfolio containing certain of our private papers had been stolen, from one of our men, on the train. In writing to my wife, I dealt with these publications."

Captain Von Papen, who insisted that his explanation be considered as an amicable discussion, not as an interview, said that he was here for a few days to visit the exposition and amuse himself.

Fall Opening of Supreme Court.

The fall session of the Supreme Court opened at 11 a.m. to-day. Present: the Full Bench. The Grand Jury are in attendance and are sworn as follows: James Crotty, foreman; William Dunn, Alexander Stewart, William H. Peters, Henry Gear, Walter Clouston, William V. Drayton, Michael Wadden, George Cooke, Isaac Perlin, Garrett Brownrigg, Arthur Wood, John C. Oke, George Snow, John Taylor, James Ryan, Patrick J. Shea, John G. Munn and William Campbell.

His Lordship the Chief Justice in addressing the Jury informed them that there were some criminal matters to engage their attention, but as the indictments are not ready they will be called upon later. To consider them. His Lordship then stated that he had been requested to remind them that in visiting the Penitentiary and the lock-up in the Court House building they were to remember that their visits were merely visits of inspection, and that the sole authority of the Crown was vested in the Superintendent of the Penitentiary and in the officers of the jail. He said that in visiting the former place, on no account were they to do or say anything that may tend in any way to disturb the discipline of the institution, nor were they in their presentation to make any reference to the release, desire for release, or sentence of any prisoner committed there by the Court and its Magistrates. After the Grand Jury had been informed that there was no business for them to consider at present, they thereupon retired.

The following causes were then presented to the Court:
Smith Co., Ltd., vs. George M. Barr.
On motion the hearing for this cause is set for Oct. 14th.
Francis F. Chaytor vs. Patrick Neville.
On motion the hearing of this cause is set for Oct. 11th.
Mary Ann Chafe, et al., vs. Job Bros. & Co., Ltd.
On motion of Morine, K.C., this motion is enlarged till Monday next, the 4th inst.
In the matter of the application of Thomas J. Freeman for a writ of mandamus directed to the Minister of Agriculture and Mines. This is an application on the part of Thomas J. Freeman for an order nisi for a writ of mandamus. Kent, K.C., for applicant, is heard in support of application and reads affidavit of Thomas J. Freeman. It is ordered that this motion be renewed to-morrow morning.
The Court adjourned until 11 a.m. to-morrow.

THE STINGY MAN.

His fame is dingy—the man who's stingy—men greet him with a frown; He's always pinching, the nickels clinching, the tightwad of the town. He's never willing to give a shilling when we pass around the hat, to give some pauper a meal that's proper, or heat some widow's flat. He lives to collar the large round dollar, with coin to dine and sup; he's tight as blazes; no honeyed phrases can make him loosen up." Yet some are saying, "He's good at paying his bills right up on time; he asks no credit—he seems to dread it—he owes no man a dime!" And some who blame him and try to shame him as one old tightwad dub, are cheerful fakers who owe the bakers and grocers for their grub. I hold it wiser to be a miser, and pinch coin till it bleeds, than one who wanders round and squanders the coin his butcher needs. I hold it cleaner to eat stale wiener and save three moldy cents, than be a glutton on stand-off mutton, like some half-fellow gents.

Our Shell Factory

A meeting of those interested in the formation of the Newfoundland Shell Co. Ltd., was held at the Board of Trade Rooms yesterday. The capital has been almost fully subscribed, and the work of preparing for the manufacture of shells will be taken up immediately. The plant will be in the West End of the city, the building formerly known as The Angel Engineering Works, having been engaged for the purpose. A portion of the required machinery will be made here, and the remainder will be imported. The new industry will be a boon to the foundry and wool factories, besides giving employment to upwards of 90 persons about 25 of whom will be skilled workmen.

Prohibition Meeting.

Under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., a successful prohibition meeting was held in the school room at Brookfield on Wednesday evening. Mr. I. C. Morris presided and gave an interesting speech, brimful of optimism on the prohibition question. Mr. Henry E. Cowan also spoke encouragingly of the outlook. Mrs. Howlands followed and gave a forceful address. Miss Benedict gave a temperance song while a collection was being taken up.

Chief at Shell Works.

Mr. W. A. Coughlan, Mining Engineer, son of Mr. James Coughlan, of the G. P. O., has recently been appointed Chief in charge of the shell works at Cowansville, Que. For some time past Mr. Coughlan has been Government Inspector of shells at Sherbrooke and Point Charles, and the news of his promotion will be welcomed by his many friends in the city.

One Man's Pleasure Another's Martyrdom.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Every one has heard that one man's food may be another man's poison. As a result we recognize that a taste for strawberries, damsons, plums or even baked beans, may not be universal. What we do not always recognize is that one man's pleasure may be another's martyrdom. I know of men who will find the keenest enjoyment in dangling a line over the end of a dock or the side of a boat, fishing for flounders. I know of other men who find fishing, at least in this A. B. C. form, insufferable boredom.

That Ungrateful Man.

One of my friends told me recently of a friend her husband brought for a week end to the place where they are spending the summer. "We took him automobiling in the morning and in the afternoon Bill took him out in his power canoe. It was a lovely day and Bill enjoyed every minute of it. Bill has such a capacity for enjoyment. But that friend of his seemed more dead than alive. Of course he pretended to be having a good time, but I could see that it was only pretence. I told Bill that I would never invite that man here again if I were he."

It so happened that I got "that man's" side of it afterward. He had rather looked forward to that week end. He visioned a nice cool Sunday spent roaming in the woods or lying in the hammock, a period of relaxation that to him spelt the acme of recreation.

And His Un-Thoughtful Host.

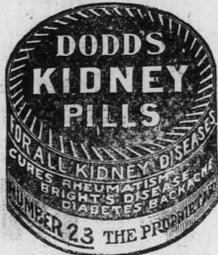

"Bill meant well, of course," he said, with a laugh. "Oh, I know it's a horrible thing to say, but he deserves it. I use an automobile all week long myself, in connection with my business. When Bill started to crank his machine, I announced that I was going to lie in the hammock. But I never had the chance. Bill and Mrs. Bill were set on my having a good time. To their mind tearing over the road on a pretence of enjoying the scenery (which I really never saw, Bill went so fast) was having a good time. I don't suppose it ever occurred to them that it wasn't mine.

"The afternoon in the power canoe was even worse. I'd never have gone near the place if I'd known Bill owned such a thing. I've got an unreasonable fear of the water, because I was once tipped out of the canoe and came very near being drowned. Every now and then I wake up in the throes of a nightmare in which I dream I'm drowning. I told all this to Bill, but he simply couldn't get my viewpoint—the insisted that canoeing was absolutely safe if one only knew how. It was rough and every time a wave hit us I shook in my shoes and said my prayers while Bill shouted, "Isn't this bully!" in my ears.

Even As You And I.

This is probably an extreme case. Still I think there are a great many people who are keen about some form of pleasure, and keener still to have other people share this with them. They simply cannot comprehend that there are people who do not care to ride in automobiles, or fish or play cards or do whatever else looms large in their eyes, as a yielder of pleasure.

To escape doing something you don't want to do, when someone with the best intentions in the world is set on having you do it, is difficult. Most people succumb, rather than act the boor. But they do it under internal protest, hoping that some day the kindly, enthusiastic Bills and Mrs. Bills will see the light.

VIGILANCE COMMITTEES.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Slwash." The vigilance committee was an institution which flourished in California at a time when justice was not only blind, but was paralyzed in both arms and had a wooden leg. When gold was discovered in California in 1849, thousands of people arose from various places and hustled out to the coast. Some of these were estimable gentlemen and others were hyenas who had degenerated a good deal.

There was a great deal of free-hand murdering in California in those days and large numbers of alleged humans took pride in boring a hole through a total stranger in a workmanlike manner. In the course of time San Francisco acquired quite a number of citizens who felt dull and listless all day if they did not shoot a man before breakfast.

There was some government of course, but not enough to interfere with anyone's pleasure—about as much as there is in Terre Haute, Ind., during an election. The quick-tempered citizens with the convulsive trigger-fingers went on shooting people for breathing the air in their vicinity until something had to be done about it.

At this point a large number of citizens organized a scientific society. The object of the society was to discover whether a gunman and general desperado would remain healthy after being hung from a telegraph pole by the neck.

A large number of experiments were carried out with great enthusiasm. At length they were discontinued for two reasons. In the first place, the society came to the reluctant conclusion that hanging a desperado by the neck was invariably fatal. In the second place there were no desperadoes left to hang.

Vigilance societies are a little out of fashion now, but a modification of the old organization might be very useful in every American city which is cluttered up with inspectors who don't inspect. If Chicago had had a vigilance society poking around into conditions for the last few years and pointing out things with long bony forefingers the Eastland would probably have carried 500 people out into the lake last July in perfect safety.

British Trawler Sank the German Sub Near Bristol.

The sinking of a German U boat is described by Chief Engineer Vine of the Canadian Pacific Railway liner Milwaukee, a recent arrival in port. "It happened five weeks ago near my home port of Bristol," he said to The Star. "I had it from the chief engineer of a Leyland liner which was the vessel attacked. She had a cargo of mules and was unarmed. A submarine stopped the liner in the Bristol channel and started shelling her. The first shell killed fifteen mules. A Bucknell boat turned up, however, and the submarine decided to get her, too, as the Leyland had been abandoned by her crew.

"The minute the submarine veered round, things began to happen. There had been a small coasting trawler near at hand from the first and without us or the Germans noticing it, she had slowly drifted round the other side of the Leyland boat and then shot ahead with the submarine's broadside exposed.

"Down fell her sides and inside the outer shell of false work several businesslike guns appeared. The trawler was a fake, known as a submarine trap. "Her first shell clipped the conning tower clean off the German. The next shot picked up a deck gun and whirled it overboard. Two other shots hulled the sub as the crew were jumping into the sea. The Germans swam from the abandoned Leyland boat and were followed by the Leyland crew. The chief engineer, followed by the ship's apprentice, was the first to get back. The Germans showed fight and four of them were shot dead. The U boat was towed towards Bristol, but sank in deep water."

One of the most effective tricks adopted by the navy in sinking submarines is described by Mr. Vine, who got the details first hand. "Some months ago," said Mr. Vine, "a British patrol boat stopped a trawler flying the Norwegian flag and found her full up with petrol. Among the crew were some Germans. The vessel was clearly a supply ship for submarines. Instead of taking her into port, the British put guns on board and cruised slowly up and down the route the trawler had been taking. Three submarines were bagged that same day as they came up for fuel."

The Milwaukee almost succeeded in sinking a German submarine in the English Channel.

"When we sighted the submarine," said her officer, "our boat was turned round to let our gun astern get into action, but the German boat submerged just in time. It was curiously colored, being a mass of black, gray and white splotches."

Saw Hesperian.

Passing Ireland, the Milwaukee sighted the Hesperian and came within half a mile of the sinking liner. "There was a submarine there," said Mr. Vine. "for one of the four gunboats in attendance made us alter our course and zig-zag. A submarine had been sighted, they said, and was hanging around to give the Hesperian the finishing blow if possible."

Although many miles beyond the blockade zone, the Milwaukee had thus to adopt tactics used only in territorial waters.

No Indigestion Gas Or Stomach Misery In Five Minutes.

"Pape's Diapepsin" for sour, acid stomach, heartburn, dyspepsia.

"Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas, acid, or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest and most certain indigestion remedy in the whole world, and besides it is harmless. Millions of men and women now eat their favorite foods without fear—they know Pape's Diapepsin will save them from any stomach misery.

Please for your sake, get a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store and put your stomach right. Don't keep on being miserable—life is too short—you are not here long, so make your stay agreeable. Eat what you like and digest it; enjoy it, without dread of rebellion in the stomach.

Pape's Diapepsin belongs in your home anyway. Should one of the family eat something which don't agree with them, or in case of an attack of indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis or stomach derangement at daytime or during the night, it is handy to give the quickest, surest relief known.

Your Boys and Girls.

Where is the mother of yesterday who understood her boys' game of football, who encouraged him in his athletics and who was as enthusiastic as he along these lines? Where also could one find twenty years ago the woman who played tennis with her daughter, taught her to golf and swim as well as sew, and accompanied her to dances, not as staid chaperon, but as one who enjoyed dancing, too?

And yet this type of modern mother exists in hordes to-day. She is no curiosity, but a reality, who is gaining the companionship as well as the love of the children she has brought into the world. And who shall say that she has not made of motherhood a more humane, a more understanding profession than her dear old fashioned predecessors who rocked the cradle and darned socks?

DUMBA WILL BE NURSED ACROSS.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30. Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador, personally delivered to Acting Secretary Polk, of the State Department, to-day, a safe conduct under which Dr. Dumba, the Austrian Ambassador, may return to Vienna.

QUESTIONED IN THE COMMONS.

LONDON, Sept. 30. Asked by Thomas Ewing in the Commons to-day, for an assurance that the financial interests, backing German manufacturers in American banks under German control, would not be able to combine to evade conditions governing concessions regarding the exportation of German goods, Lord Robert Cecil, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, declared he could see no possibility of such evasion. The Under Secretary explained that the transactions for goods must have been completed before March 1st last. The stoppage of goods, which the purchaser is bound to take delivery of, on or before shipment, and, therefore, bound to pay for in any event, he pointed out, inflicted no injury upon Germany, but involved hardship on neutral purchasers only, and thus succeeded in doing a thing that Britain wished to avoid.

TELEGRAMS WILL BE DELAYED.

LONDON, Sept. 30. The Postmaster General announced to-day that pending further notice, all telegrams to neutral countries in Europe and to Russia by way of the great northern lines and for Serbia, would be subject to 48 hours' delay.

INCREASE IN FREIGHT RATES.

LONDON, Sept. 30. Commanding Greek steamers by the Greek Government has already affected the freight market. Rates from Cardiff to the Mediterranean have risen ten shillings per ton. It is estimated that quite fifty per cent. of the tonnage on this route is under the Greek flag. The withdrawal of Greek steamers will also accentuate the existing scarcity of tonnage for the United States and elsewhere.

CHANCELLOR MCKENNA'S STATEMENT.

LONDON, Sept. 30. Chancellor McKenna made a statement in the Commons to-day that English holders of the Anglo-French loan floated in the States, would be subject to income tax wherever they hold bonds, either here or in the United States.

REPLIES TO CHARGES.

LONDON, Sept. 30. Replying in the Commons to-day, to charges that heavy loss had been sustained through defective methods of shipment of oil (acid) from the United States, Dr. Christopher Addison, Parliamentary Secretary of Munitions, said that in the case of earlier shipments, a certain amount of loss was due to the kind of drums used. These drums were similar to those usually employed, he said, and had been passed by the American State Commission. The defects had long ago been remedied, he declared. Delay was in no way prejudicial to the suppliers of munitions, as the stocks on hand at the time were adequate. Nothing was paid to the owners of the ships for damage to vessels carrying the oil, but the Government had purchased two damaged ships. The oil, he added, was supplied by Bowring Bros. and C. T. Bowring & Co.

GENERAL OFFENSIVE CONTINUES.

PARIS, Sept. 30. (Official.) The general offensive movement on the western front continues. The French have captured an important defensive work of the Germans, south of Ripout. In Champagne the French troops have gained a footing at various points on the German second line of defences.

BELGIAN OFFICIAL.

FURTHER GAIN IN CHAMPAGNE.

PARIS, Sept. 30. Further gain of ground in Champagne to the north of Mesnil, is recorded in French official communication, to-night, which adds that on the Champagne front alone, since Sept. 25th, field guns and heavy pieces to the number of 131, have been captured by the French.

PARIS OFFICIAL.

PARIS, Sept. 30. Before Beuvraignes we exploded several mines, which shattered the German trenches. In Champagne we have gained ground to the north of Mesnil and more to the east, between Hill No. 190 to the north of Massiges and the road from Ville Sur Tourne to Cernay en Dornois. At the latter point we have taken additional prisoners. By a counter attack the enemy succeeded in recovering a footing in Ouvrage de la Delette. A second counter attack, of a very violent nature, in the same sector, was completely repulsed. The enemy suffered important losses. Clearing the former German positions permitted a more complete computation of the cannon captured. The number is much greater than was previously announced. The total field guns and heavy pieces captured from the enemy since September 25th, on the Champagne front alone, number 121.

STATE OF SIEGE IN MACEDONIA.

LONDON, Sept. 30. An Athens despatch says that Bills proclaiming a state of siege in Macedonia, and providing help for families of men called to the colors, and a credit of $30,000,000 to meet expenses of mobilization, were enthusiastically applauded and voted at the sitting of the Chamber to-day.

WANTS JOINT OCCUPATION.

PARIS, Sept. 30. The number of Austro-German troops concentrated on the Serbian frontier is estimated at 500,000. Of these, 350,000 are Germans. The correspondent at Petrograd of the Temps says that approval is given in influential quarters of the Russian capital, to the idea of the joint occupation of Macedonia by the Allies. It is said this would be an effective means of keeping Bulgaria and Serbia apart, and of defeating the efforts to bring Bulgaria into the war, while the Austro-German forces are invading Serbia.

NO INTENTION OF AN AGGRESSIVE ATTITUDE.

ATHENS, Sept. 30. The Greek Chamber, at a special session to-day, ratified the action of the Government in decreeing general mobilization of the army, authorized a loan of $30,000,000. Premier Venizelos was greeted enthusiastically when he entered the building. He said in his address to the Chamber, that mobilization of the Greek forces was indispensable on account of Bulgaria's military measures. He stated, however, what Bulgaria had explained to Greece that her object in mobilizing was to maintain armed neutrality, and that she had no intention of adopting an aggressive attitude towards Greece or Serbia. "Notwithstanding Bulgarian explanation, the situation remains grave," the Premier said. The scene within the chamber, as the Premier announced the government policy was a striking one. Except for frequent outbursts of enthusiasm, impressive silence ruled the chamber. Premier Venizelos read his declaration. Besides defining the Greek policy of mobilization, he declared it to be the purpose of Greece to maintain all its obligations of supporting Serbia. Renewed assurance had been given that within the present month, he said Greece was ready to support Serbia if a casus foederis arose, but he sincerely hoped that casus foederis would not present itself. The chamber afterward passed a bill applying martial law to Saloniki, Florina, Seres and Kavala districts, as well as to Athens and Piraeus.

LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30. That wireless telephone communication from the Atlantic seaboard to Hawaii, a distance of 4,300 miles, is now an accomplished fact, was announced to-day at the offices of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. Exceeding even the success of the transmission of the human voice from Arlington to Hare Island, California, a distance of 2,500 miles, this was accomplished last night. It is stated that subsequent experiments resulted in successful telephone communication between Arlington and the Naval radio station at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

LONDON BUDGET.

LONDON, Sept. 30. While the Anglo-French troops in Artois apparently are now simply engaged in consolidating ground won and opposing German counter attacks the battle for the German second line of defence in Champagne, the collapse of which would acutely menace the greater part of the German position in the west, is proceeding with its greatest stubbornness. At several points the French troops have gained a footing on the second line. Some of them even went right through, but encountering German reserves, were unable to maintain their progress. According to the German account, these latter troops were captured or exterminated. The Germans, however, admit the loss of Hill No. 191, north of Massiges, where the French are not far from the railway triangle, the possession of which has been of the greatest advantage to the Germans, as one of the lines has been used for supplying the Argonne army. It is believed here that, besides the gain of ground both in Artois and Champagne, the improved position of the Allies generally, and the recent successful operations, must soon relieve the pressure on Russia, and perhaps prevent the Austro-Germans from sending any large force against Serbia. Already large reinforcements for the Germans are arriving in the western front. Their presence already has had the effect of slackening somewhat the Allies' offensive. But there is the possibility of the offensive breaking out on some other section on this front. In fact the correspondent of the Cologne Gazette at the German headquarters, announces that an attack was made east of Auberville, which, he says, was repulsed. Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, while he claims to have made some progress in his operations against Drinsk, is still a long way from that city. His troops southeast of Vilna, however, have had better success. They have broken through in the Russian position. His latest blow is against the Russian right. He intends to advance in a southeasterly direction to Minsk, and endeavor to cut off the Russians, retreating from Baranovich. In South Priest Marshes, where Field Marshal Von Mackensen and his troops are stuck, the Russians have been driven back across the Styx River, but along the Galician border they are still heavily hammering the Austro-German armies. In London it is felt that Bulgaria has now abandoned any aggressive action she might have intended against Serbia, but an Athens despatch says that the situation is still considered serious, and that Greece is going on with preparations for eventualities. The crisis in Sofia, which might have resulted in the formation of a Russophile cabinet, is said to have been averted, the King having refused to accept the resignation of Toncheff, the Minister of Finance, who has pro-German tendencies.

Lieut. H. Rendell Wounded.

Another officer of the Nfd. Regiment is reported wounded. This time it is Lieut. Herbert Rendell. Last evening, Dr. Herbert Rendell was handed a letter from Capt. A. Goodridge, A.D.C., enclosing an official message from Capt. Timewell, of the Record Office of the Nfd. Regiment in London, informing him that his son Herbert was wounded. A similar official message was sent to Mrs. Frederick Rendell about the wounding of Capt. W. F. Rendell. It may be that Lieut. Herbert is at the same institution as Capt. Rendell, though nothing has been received to indicate that he is there. We trust that the young officers will recover from their injuries speedily.

Mother! Don't Take Chances If Child's Tongue Is Coated

If cross, feverish, sick, bilious, clean little liver and bowels.

A laxative to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftentimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Amusements.

AT THE CRESCENT.

To-day's programme at the Crescent Picture Palace is a specially good one both entertaining and amusing. The two reel special feature: "Mr. Santa Claus" contains a most absorbing story of adventures and incidents photographed by the Vitagraph Company in the very best way. G. M. Anderson, the favourite cow boy actor, features in "Broncho Billy and the escaped Bandit." A most interesting story of a jewel robbery is told in "The Fragment of Ash" and some beautiful Norwegian scenery is shown in an educational film; while Billy Quirk and Constance Talmadge make lots of fun in "Billy's Wager." The usual extra pictures will be shown at the big Saturday matinee; send the children, the Crescent staff will take good care of them.

ALICE JOYCE AS THE WHITE GODDESS.

The Kalem Company will give the wonderful story: "The White Goddess" at the Nickel Theatre this evening. It is in three reels and Alice Joyce who plays the leading character gives a wonderful interpretation of the story. This picture has great success a couple of months ago when it was released. "The Hazards of Helen" will be continued. There will be a Vitagraf comedy entitled: "The Professor's Nightmare." By request the picture of the presentation of the colors to the Newfoundland Regiment will be put on. Messrs. Huskins and Cairns will be heard in new songs. At the bumper matinee for children to-morrow there will be extra pictures. Send the little ones early and let them have a good time.

THE GRAND COMPETITION TO-NIGHT.

At Rossley's East End Theatre. The excitement over the grand concert will reach its climax when Mr. Jack Rossley, just arrived from New York, steps on the stage to take full management of the contest. Numerous applications have been made by variety performers in the city and neighbourhood and patrons can be assured of a night's hearty enjoyment. The show will begin as usual at 7.30 and those desirous of attending should be at its doors early. There will be lots of fun and in addition to the competition the great Sarah Bernhardt feature and others of great interest. Ian MacKenzie, in Scottish song and story; Miss Rix Guerin in novelty songs and Mr. W. Wallace in new violin pieces will delight the audience. On Monday the great dramatic production, a three reel feature: "Madame Sans Gene" will be shown with Madame Rejane taking the principal part. She is another of the great French actresses and her every appearance in this great masterpiece will be followed with intense interest.

"OURS" IN THE WEST END.

Mr. Jack Rossley has just arrived home from New York and he has been able to arrange with the best studios there for a constant supply of the finest dramatic and humorous features in the picture world. There is thus a season's treat in store for "Ours" in the West End and Rossley's in the East End. Nothing so fine in photoplay productions has ever been shown in the city and they are sure to win the favour of all patrons. Fine singing, dainty movements by the clever little pupils of Mrs. Rossley and the feature films continue to attract large audiences.

WANT LORD HARDINGE TERM AS VICEROY TO BE EXTENDED.

LONDON, To-day.—Through Reuters's Ottawa Agency, a special despatch from Simla, India, says an impressive scene was enacted at the Council Chamber yesterday upon the presentation of a portrait of Lord Hardinge, Viceroy, given by Maharaja Kasimbazar. Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya presenting the portrait on behalf of the Maharaja paid an eloquent tribute to Lord Hardinge's Vice-royalty, urging a further extension of His Excellency's term of office until the end of the war, and applauding the Government's policy during his tenure of office. The Indians of Simla also entertained Lord Hardinge, Raja Sir Harnam Singh aluded to the Viceroy's keen desire to have the soldiers of India fight, side by side, with British soldiers in Europe. Lord Hardinge, he added, had given Indians aspirations, weight and dignity which they had never before attained. His name would be recorded in national history as one who had assisted towards the attainment by the people of India of their rights as citizens abroad and full constitutional development in their citizenship in India. Lord Hardinge, in the course of his reply, said his earnest desire had always been to contribute to the material welfare and development of his fellow Indian subjects, and he had endeavoured, he said, by thoughtful consideration of their needs and aspirations to draw them closer to the Government. The term of office of Lord Hardinge as Governor General of India will expire on November 23rd this year.

BALFOUR & GERMAN SUBMARINES

LONDON, To-day.—To the desire for absolute precision, Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, in the Commons yesterday afternoon gave reasons for not making public the figures of German submarine losses. Balfour expressed sympathy with the desire for such information, but said the difficulty of satisfying curiosity on the subject arose from the inevitable margin of doubt, which attaches to any attempt to estimate the numbers of the enemies' submarines destroyed and the consequent impossibility of giving accurate statistics. We have every gradation, he added, from absolute certainty, through practical assurance down to faint possibility. Facts like these are not fitted for statistical statements. Should the Admiralty confine itself to cases of absolute certainty, we undoubtedly would be understating the truth. If we included all cases of reasonable possibility we might be exaggerating. No defensible line can be drawn between these two degrees.

VOLUNTEERS vs. CONSCRIPTS. KITCHENER PREFERS VOLUNTEERS.

LONDON, To-day.—Labor Representatives Start Campaign to try and Fill Needs of the Army, the Navy and the Munition Works.
 At a conference of representatives of the chief Labor Organizations of the country, held after a meeting at which Premier Asquith and Earl Kitchener discussed the military situation with them, the belief was expressed that the number of men required for the Army, Navy and Munition work, in order to carry out the war successfully, could be obtained by the voluntary enlistment system. The Labor representatives decided to organize a special recruiting campaign "throughout the country. At the meeting at which the Premier and Earl Kitchener addressed the men, Kitchener expressed a preference for the continuation of the volunteer system. At the conference the Labor leaders suggested voluntary recruiting would be more successful, if the Government would state frankly, as far as was compatible with public interests, what already had been done by the voluntary means and what were the present and future needs, and would insist upon employers no longer preventing their men from enlisting. The campaign of Labor representatives to secure enlistments, will include meetings of workmen at industrial centres and systematic circulation through Trades Unions and other labor organizations of special recruiting literature, sending deputations to Labor Council and other organizations to explain the needs of the country. The conference included representatives of the Trade Union Congress, the Management Committee of the General Federation of the Trades Unions, the Executive Committee of the Labor Party and members of the Parliamentary Labor Party.

THE FIGHT AT HOOGE.

LONDON, To-day.—Relatives and friends of British soldiers who have taken part in the fierce fighting of the past few days in Northern France have begun to receive letters from the fortunate ones, who went unscathed in all attacks, while the casualty lists of those who met with disaster are being collected at the War Office and their relatives notified. A further consignment of wounded arrived at London at midnight. A picturesque story of fighting at Hooge was told by one of these men, a territorial with six wounds in one arm. Because we took trenches and did not hold them, he said, don't imagine there was anything amiss at Hooge. All is going well, and if there had been no such things as machine guns we would have gone straight thro' the whole German line, and now be on our way to Berlin. Those trenches which we gave up we can take again, and what is more we can hold them when we want to do so. We don't give up ground except on orders from superior officers, who sometimes decide the situation in adjoining parts of the line does not justify the retention of certain advanced positions. It is ridiculous to hear some people talk about our attack being a surprise to the Germans. It was so far from a surprise that the Germans had already brought up tremendous reinforcements against us on Saturday, including a small army of bomb throwers.

FRENCH LOSSES COMPARATIVELY SLIGHT.

PARIS, To-day.—The French losses in the recent offensive so costly to the Germans were relatively very slight, according to a statement made by persons in a position to know.

GERMANS REALIZE IMPORTANCE OF ALLIES' OFFENSIVE.

AMSTERDAM, To-day.—The fighting on the Western front occupied a large space in the German press. The Lokal Anzeiger says it cannot be denied that the new offensive of the enemy is of the greatest importance. The enemy obviously is making repeated efforts to gain at least a decisive success. How long he will be able to maintain his efforts is uncertain, but we must expect that heavy fighting will continue.

2.15 P.M.

GERMANS ADVANCING TWO MILES A DAY.

LONDON, To-day.—The Times' Petrograd correspondent points out that ever since the rupture of the Russian lines of the Bunajec, the Austro-Germans have been advancing at an average speed of two miles a day. This rate rather diminishes than increases as the enemy advances eastward, says the correspondent, and obviously it would require many months under the most favorable conditions to enable the Germans to reach Petrograd, Moscow or Kiev. He also expresses the opinion that the German guardsmen recently captured in France must belong to the reserve formations, inasmuch as the guards corps would hardly have had time to reach the western front from the east.

2.35 P.M.

GERMAN TAUNTS PAID IN GOOD COIN.

PARIS, To-day.—The French Capital is now thrilled by stories of fighting on the western front, related by soldiers wounded in desperate combats, which have resulted in important gains for the Allies. For several days the Germans have been getting singularly aggressive and insolent, said one of the men, who charged at Souchez. They shouted insults at us and flung into our trenches notes wrapped around pebbles. One of their favourite taunts was, "You are too cowardly to come over here; come on, if you are not too lazy."

FLOOD OF APPLICATIONS FOR LOAN.

NEW YORK, To-day.—A member of the syndicate which will manage the big bond issue, negotiated here by the Anglo-French loan commission, received to-day a flood of applications from banks and individuals for permission to participate in the underwriting.

73 GERMAN SUBS. DESTROYED.

NEW YORK, To-day.—More than seventy-three German submarines have been destroyed by the British, chiefly through the aid of electrical detectors, installed along the coast of England, Scotland and Ireland, according to Wm. Halliday, an American engineer, who arrived here to-day on the steamer St. Paul.

Great Money-Loss.

The two years that can be saved are in the grammar grades. The all-year schools in Newark save them. The all-year schools in Newark do in six years what the regular schools do in eight.
 And it is rather curious that they should be able to do this. The total number of working-weeks in their six years is only 288. The total number of working-weeks in the eight years of the regular schools is 320. That is a difference of 32. The boy who goes to the all-year school does 32 weeks less of studying during his grammar-school life than the boy who goes to the regular school. Yet the two boys accomplish the same amount of work.
 The explanation is found in the fact that the work in the all-year school is so continuous that "much less time has to be given to "reviews" and to "reorganizations" and to putting back into children's minds the things they have forgotten during vacations.
 And what does this plan mean to the tax-payer? Does it add to his burdens? Quite to the contrary. The school-plant is there. The faster you put the children through it, the more room will you have in it for more children. The day of enlarging your plant is postponed. And there are other savings, too, all based on the business proposition that if you work your plant continuously you can turn out your product at a lower cost per unit than if you work it only part-time.
 In the three years of 1912, 1913 and 1914 the savings to the taxpayers of Newark through the new method at their two all-year schools was $17,000.
 We have reported the facts; we are not educational experts, and we have no professional opinion about them. We note, however, that the all-year school idea has the support of the United States Commissioner of Education, Mr. Philander P. Claxton. And we note the fact that this summer Newark has opened two additional all-year schools and that it now has a total of 4,615 children submitting voluntarily to this crime against the good old summer time.—Everybody's Magazine for September.

No Law Covers Archibald Case.
 Washington, Sept. 25.—James F. J. Archibald, the American who acted as messenger for Dr. Constantin T. Dum-hu, Austro-Hungarian Ambassador here, will probably not be prosecuted by the Department of Justice. Examination of the papers relating to Archibald's activities has not been completed by the Department, but some officials say there is no statute covering the case. As a result of the incident, however, it was said that Congress would be urged to enact a law to cover such cases.

Fights Five Air Duels a Day.

British Aviator Beats off Four Germans, then Outwits Fifty—Battle Staged 9,000 Feet up.

British Headquarters, Sept. 20 (despatch to the London Daily Express).—Forty aeroplane fights in eighteen days is the record of the Royal Flying Corps with the British army in the field. During the first three weeks in September four enemy aeroplanes are known to have been destroyed and at least seven others sent hurriedly to earth and believed to have been destroyed.
 One pilot had five fights in one morning. He beat off the first four German machines that came up to grapple with him one after another, but when the fifth bore down upon him he had exhausted all his machine gun and revolver ammunition. The noise of the engine drowned the report of a revolver, and the German pilot who saw him go through the motions of aiming and firing did not realize that the weapon was useless. The German fired twenty or thirty rounds and then gave it up. The British aviator finished his reconnaissance in peace and came back to lunch.

One furious battle in the air, witnessed by thousands of soldiers and resulting in total destruction of a German aeroplane, took place on September 7. This machine had been particularly active in ranging the enemy's guns. It could be seen circling and signalling above some of our positions. A British aeroplane went out and gave battle at 9,000 feet above the German lines.
 It was a clear, bright day and the two aeroplanes were very distinctly seen as they darted across the sky and back again like angry birds, now climbing, now gliding, and all the while pelting each other with bullets. They gradually came lower and the troops on both sides watched the deadly struggle.
 Suddenly the German aeroplane was seen to dive erratically and come down at an increasing speed and at a tragic angle. "We cannot say positively that it was destroyed," said the officer who told me this incident, "but when last seen it was diving nose downward at 150 miles an hour about 200 feet from the ground."

Advocates Tax on Incomes

Of $2,500 and Above, to Replace Liquor Revenue When Prohibition is Carried.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Sir.—In view of the success of the prohibition campaign, I hope that our legislature will carefully consider the question of re-adjustment of taxation which is sure to arise. At the present time it is said that the amount of revenue derived from the importation and manufacture of potable spirits, ales and wines is from $370,000 to $380,000. This is over one-third of our total revenue, and may be roughly stated as twelve per cent to be lost to the revenue as at present arranged, and this amount will have to be extended over other goods to make up the deficiency. In other words the people who are now non-drinkers will have to shoulder a greater burden of taxation than formerly. It is argued that the consumption of spirits, &c., is confined almost wholly to St. John's, and if this is true, why should this extra heavy burden of twelve per cent be put upon the people in the outports? There are quite a number of people in St. John's who are non-drinkers, particularly among those who work in shops, stores and otherwise, for salaries which have, for some years, been inadequate for their support. These people, male and female, are now living from hand to mouth, and lately, owing to the increased taxation to meet war conditions, are sore pressed, and really cannot support life if they had to pay an extra twelve per cent. Now, Mr. Editor, it is only fair to the outport people, and the workers and others in St. John's who do not indulge in spirits, wines, ales, &c., that those who do should bear the greatest part of this taxation. There is one way that it can be done, and that is by putting an income tax on all incomes of $2,500 and over, grading rate of taxation, from a minimum of fifty cents in the dollar on $2,500, increasing by five cents on the next $500 or $3,000 and so on. It is high time now that those who can afford to pay the taxes should do so, and that some relief ought to be given to the men and women to whom starvation salaries are doled out.

The man who can afford to pay tobacco factories to close down, and to advance the price of bread by shutting up competing bakeries, are the men that should pay extra taxes. The men who are making their fortunes by such means are working against the poor man by forming trusts which greatly increase the cost of Tobacco and Bread, the one the poor man's luxury, and the other the fisherman's necessity.

Yours truly,
JUNIAS.

Assault Case.

On Saturday last an American seaman named Lloyd Collins, was arraigned before Mr. Wells, J.P., at Little Bay, charged with assault and battery on a Norwegian seaman. Both seamen were on the pit-prop steamer Carisbrook, which went ashore near Little Bay. On the same day the assault took place. It appears that the Norwegian was struck on the head with an iron scraper and had to be brought to hospital for treatment. On Saturday last he was recovered sufficiently to attend court. The defendant was told by the presiding Justice of the Peace that it was optional for him either to be tried summarily or before the Supreme Court. The accused was given a few days to decide.

SOLDIER SERIOUSLY ILL.—Mr. J. J. Murphy, of the Reid Nfld. Co., has to-day been notified by the Colonial Secretary, that his son Private Walter T. Murphy, of the Nfld. Regiment is dangerously ill in Egypt. It is presumed that he has been ill for some time and was left behind at Cairo, when our boys left there for the Dardanelles. Another brother Michael is serving with the regiment. Much anxiety is being felt by Mr. and Mrs. Murphy, and they have the sympathy of the community.
