THE WELLINGTON
THE UNIVERSAL PIPE

The Wellington is a storehouse of good smokes—clean, cool and steady. Three things about a Wellington make it so. First, the well catches all moisture and stray tobacco. Second, the top opening reads the smoke up—away from the smoker. And this—which is doubly important—the Wellington is a D.G. Pipe, of genuine French briar, guaranteed against cracking or burning through. All good dealers sell Wellingtons in all shapes and sizes—$1.00 and up.

CHAPTER XXI.
AN ART PATRON.

"Well, my dear Percy, what do you think of my dear young ward?"

Percy Levant raised his head and looked at him with a curious expression.

"Give me some wine," he said; then, after he had drunk a glass, he demanded, almost sternly, "Why did you not tell me?"

"Tell you what?" asked Mr. Spenser Churchill, with a chuckle. "I told you she was a charming young lady."

"And you wished me to think that you lied in saying so," retorted the other. "Why did you not tell me that she was as beautiful as—she is?"

Spenser Churchill chuckled again.

"My dear Percy, I thought that a little surprise would not come amiss. If I had told you that she was pretty—"

"Pretty!"

"Well, beautiful—lovely—you would not have believed me!"

"No, I should not," he said, curtly. "Don't say any more. I want to think! Great Heaven! she is like a dream! Stop! Don't talk, I say. I'm not equal to any of your smooth platitudes at present. Let me be in peace!"

Mr. Spenser Churchill laughed softly.

"Certainly, certainly, my dear Percy," he said. "Yes, I can understand your astonishment. This claret is very fine—"

"No more!" said Percy, rising and taking a step or two across the room, with his arms behind his head bent upon his breast again. "Let us go to them."

"I'm quite ready," said Spenser Churchill, smiling with intense enjoyment.

They went into the drawing-room.

Lady Despard was turning over the music, Doris was seated at the table.

"I am trying to find something for you to play, Mr. Levant," she said. "We are so eager to hear you play—Miss Marlowe and I."

He bowed, and his glance caught Doris's; but she only smiled.

"Will you not play or sing?" he asked.

"Oh, no," she said; "I should be afraid."

"Of me? It is I who should fear, for I shall have a musician for a critic."

"No," she said, quietly; "I am not a musician. You will have some tea presently?" and she raised her eyes to his with the calm politeness of perfect self-possession and good-breeding.

CHAPTER XXII.
TWO SONG BIRDS.

Percy Levant bowed and went to the piano, and Mr. Spenser Churchill walked across the drawing-room and took a seat immediately beside Doris.

"I hope you like my young friend?" he said, in his softest voice, and glancing affectionately towards him as he stood by the piano talking to Lady Despard.

"I have seen so little of him," said Doris; "but he is very agreeable."

"Yes, Ah, my poor Percy!" he sighed. "Poor boy! He has suffered so much—so much! There should be sympathy between you two, my dear young lady, for he has known what it is to lose his dearest. I should move your heart if I were to tell you what sorrow and trouble have fallen to my poor young friend's lot, and win your admiration and esteem for him if I recounted the many difficulties he has had to encounter. It has been a hard world for him—a hard life—poor fellow! I do so hope you and Lady Despard will like him."

Doris remained silent; but the softly spoken words had something of the effect the speaker intended, and she looked towards the young man with increased interest.

"I think, with the exception of myself, he has scarcely a friend in the world," said Spenser Churchill, sipping his tea and sighing. "I am counting so much on you and Lady Despard's sympathy, my dear Miss Marlowe! A word of encouragement from such kind hearts—as yours will go far to console him for the cruel disappointments he has endured. Ah! he is going to sing, I see. Now you will see if I spoke too highly of his voice and abilities."

And the Worst is Yet to Come—

Percy Levant was certainly going to sing, but he seemed somehow loth to begin. For a few minutes his fingers strayed over the keys irresolutely, then he struck a chord and commenced.

He had chosen not an elaborate specimen of the flowery school, but a simple Brittany ballad, and he sang it exquisitely. Doris, as she listened to the long-drawn notes that seemed to float on elder wings through the room, felt a singular sensation at her heart. It was as if this stranger had defined the trouble of her young life, and had put "it into" music. With tightly compressed lips she sat fighting back the tears that threatened to flood her eyes, her hands closely clasped in her lap, her eyes fixed on the ground, unconscious that Mr. Spenser Churchill's eyes were covertly fixed on her with a keen watchfulness.

The last notes of the song died away, and Lady Despard's soft, languid voice poured out her praise.

"Oh! but that is very, very beautiful, Mr. Levant; and you have a lovely voice! How kind of you to come and sing to us! And I am so grateful to Mr. Churchill for bringing you!"

He had risen and bowed to Lady Despard; but his dark eyes looked beyond her, and sought Doris's face.

Her lips trembled, but she forced a smile. Taking it as a request, he returned to the piano and sang again.

Lady Despard was in raptures; but he prevented her asking for another song by going across to Doris.

"Lady Despard will not play; will you?" he said. "You are not afraid now?"

"Yes, more than afraid," she said, with a smile.

"Will you sing with me? Here is a duet," he said, quietly, his eyes downcast.

"Do, dear!" said Lady Despard. "Miss Marlowe sings like a professional, Mr. Levant."

Doris rose reluctantly, and he led her to the piano.

Mr. Spenser went and sat beside Lady Despard, and began to talk to her in an earnest but softly persuasive tone. The two voices at the piano rose and fell in harmony, and seemed to act as an accompaniment to his.

"Isn't it beautiful?" said Lady Despard. "Their singing together is simply delicious!"

"And if your ladyship assents to my proposal, they can sing together as often as you please!" he murmured, insinuatingly.

She laughed and nodded.

"That's true. Oh, yes, just as you like. I'm sure he is most interesting, and such a perfect gentleman!"

"Ah, yes," said Mr. Spenser Churchill. "I would not have brought him to you if he had been anything less. And it is settled, then?"

"Yes," nodded her ladyship.

He rose at once and looked at his watch.

"I will make all arrangements," he said, in a low voice. "Say nothing to him to-night."

The two men said good-night, and Percy Levant found himself outside, his brain in a whirl, his heart beating wildly.

"Well, may one ask your highness what you think of my ward now?" said Spenser Churchill, softly.

Percy Levant thrust his hands in his pockets.

"Has she been ill, or is it trouble that makes her look like that?" he asked, in a grave, thoughtful tone.

"Trouble," said Spenser Churchill. "Poor girl! Yes, she has been ill, too; but she is better, and the change will completely set her up, I hope."

"Change?"

"Yes," he purred. "She and Lady Despard go to Italy next week," and he smiled as he struck the blow and saw Percy wince.

"To Italy next week!" He turned upon him. "What are you scheming? What are you doing? Why did you take me to see her to-night, if—Do you think I am made of stone; that, like yourself, I've no heart? To Italy!"

"Yes," murmured Spenser Churchill, "and I have arranged that you shall go with them—"

Percy Levant started again, and, stopping, confronted him with a pale, eager face.

"What?"

"Yes, exactly! You are to go with them—as what shall we say?—friendly cavalier, courier, what you will—anything will serve as an excuse. What do you say? Perhaps, after all, you regret your bargain! If so, say so, and I'll release you."

Percy Levant caught him by the shoulder and held him in a savage grip.

"You—you devil!" he said, fiercely, almost wildly. "You know that I cannot! If I had not seen her I might have had the strength; but now—"

He withdrew his hand, and, almost thrusting the other man away from him, strode on.

CHAPTER XXIII.
A SAD HOME-COMING.

Lord Cecil Neville was a man of his word. He had pledged himself to remain in Ireland until the mission he had undertaken was completed, and he meant keeping his word, though his life depended on it. And it seemed to him that more than his life, his happiness, hung in the balance. He had written again and again to Doris, and had received no answer from her with a keen watchfulness. That they had reached her was evident from the fact that none were returned through the post to him. To all his passionate attempts for an explanation of her silence not one word came from her.

Life had gone fairly smoothly for Viscount Neville up to this, and his hot, impetuous nature—inherited from his mother's side of the family—found it difficult to endure the suspense. Many men would have broken their word and returned post-haste to England and Barton, but a pledge was a solemn thing to Cecil Neville, and, like a soldier on duty, he stuck to his post.

It is not necessary to speak in detail of what he accomplished in Ireland, but this much may be said: that he found the people in the right and the agent in the wrong, and that that agent had a bad time of it. It may be added that Lord Neville succeeded in a few short weeks in winning more hearts among the marquis's tenants than all the Stoyles for centuries had been able to do, and that before many days had passed "the young lord," as he was called, was regarded as a friend and protector, and many a faltering voice called down a blessing on his head, and implored him to remain in "the old country." The Irish are a warm-hearted people, quick to resent an injury, but equally quick in their gratitude for a benefit. This handsome young nobleman, who had relieved them from their oppressor and done his best to better their hard lot, received his reward in the shape of an affectionate gratitude which he should remember and cherish all his life through.

The absentee landlord, the man who screws the last penny from the tenant, and spends it in Paris or London, has been the curse of the country; and it was because Lord Neville saw this, and owned it freely, that the people trusted him.

Often, when he had returned from a day's inspection of the estate, and had relieved the oppressed, he wondered what the marquis would say when he heard what his ambassador had done! Often when, tortured by an anxiety respecting Doris's silence, he spent the night pacing up and down his room, he vowed that when they were married they would come and live among these people, who had welcomed him so readily, and so gratefully recognised his efforts on their behalf.

But for the constant hard work, the incessant travelling, Lord Neville would have suffered more than he did; for, as the days wore on and no news of Doris reached him, he began to imagine all sorts of terrible things. One night he dreamed that she was dead, and woke trembling and shaking, half-persuaded that he had heard her voice calling to him.

All day her image haunted him, and he found himself pulling up his horse, and sitting staring vacantly before him, recalling her last words, her shy, passionate kiss; and then he would dash forward and try and persuade himself that his letters had, in some way, miscarried, and that all would be well.

Bolshevists Defeated By Anglo-Russians.

Britain to Develop Safer Types of Aircraft—New Aerial Record.

GIVEN WARNING.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14. Warning that there would be a radical change in the policy of the United States Government regarding Mexico, Carranza Government continued to fail to protect Americans in that country, was contained in a note to the Mexican Foreign office, July 22.

BOLSHEVIST DEFEAT.

LONDON, Aug. 14. (Reuter Despatch.)—The following communique has been issued of Anglo-Russian operations under date of Aug. 10: "We attacked the Bolshevists on the Dvina with complete success. All our objectives were carried. Six enemy battalions were destroyed and counted. Twelve field guns were captured. Our line on the Dvina has been advanced twelve miles to Chulivno and Borek. Our casualties were not heavy."

PRIZES OFFERED.

LONDON, Aug. 14. The British Government will offer prizes amounting to £84,000 for airplane competition in order to develop safer types of machines, Major General J. E. S. Seely of the Air Ministry announced in the House of Commons today. The prizes will be distributed among three classes of aircraft—small airplanes, large airplanes and seaplanes.

A NEW RECORD.

PARIS, Aug. 14. A new world's altitude record of 30,000 feet is said to have been established for an airplane with passenger today by Lieut. Weythe, pilot and mechanic, according to the newspaper Auto. The flight, which took 23 minutes was made at Villacoublay near here. The aviator's instruments showed that they experienced a temperature of more than 25 degrees Fahrenheit below zero, the official figures on the ascent will be made public later.

ACTED WISELY.

CHICAGO, Aug. 14. Delegates representing 25,000 car repairers employed by Chicago railroads by a rising vote today decided to call off the strike and return to work. The action was taken at a mass meeting of the delegates called to consent on the question of the strike.

A VERDICT FOR FOED.

MOUNT CLEMENS, MICHIGAN, Aug. 14. A jury to-night awarded Henry Ford six cents damages for calling him an anarchist.

RIGHT AND PROPER.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 14. Recommendation that Moses Charitonoff, radical Socialist, editor of the Working People, which was banned by the censor last October, be deported to Russia, was made this afternoon by the Board of Enquiry. In announcing the decision of the Board, Magistrate R. M. Noble, Chairman, declared that Canada was not ready for the activities of radicals of Charitonoff's kind. Further evidence and arguments will be presented later.

TRAM MEN WANT DISPUTE SETTLED.

LONDON, Aug. 14. A demand for a speedy settlement of their wage dispute which was construed as being in the nature of an ultimatum was made today by locomotive engineers and firemen upon Sir Auckland Geddes British Minister of Reconstruction. About sixty three thousand men are involved.

PURCHASED AT HIGH PRICE.

LONDON, Aug. 14. (Reuter's.)—Commander Kenworthy asked in the House of Commons today whether the former Canadian Pacific Railway Liner, The Princess Margaret, has been purchased this year for approximately 460,000 pounds for use as a mine layer and extensively refitted, and whether she was recently used in the Baltic transporting Russian counter revolutionary troops under Prince Lieven through mined waters, and whether a less expensive vessel could be used in this work. Hon. Mr. McNamara replied that the vessel was chartered in England in the early days of the war and was refitted for mine laying. The vessel was purchased for 495,500 pounds. On the occasion referred to she had followed a route known to be clear of mines, her use for this purpose obviated the diversion of vessels from essential services as she was already in the waters referred to.

AN AGREEMENT IN SIGHT.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14. The trend toward an agreement in the reservations in the Peace Treaty reached a stage today where the group of Republican Senators advocating reservations received assurances which they accepted as guaranteeing Democratic assent to their programme.

LEAVING BUDAPEST.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 14. Roumanian troops are about to leave Budapest in consequence of a note sent to Roumania by the Peace Conference, according to a wireless despatch received here from Vienna quoting the newspapers of that city.

REPATRIATED.

LONDON, Aug. 14. Repatriation to Germany of Field Marshal Liman Von Sanders who assisted in the command of the Turkish Army during war has been granted by the Allies a German wireless despatch received here says.

MUNITION DUMP EXPLODED.

COLOGNE, Aug. 14. A British munition dump at Kalk, an eastern suburb of this city, exploded this morning killing 14 workers and injuring many in the vicinity.

NEW GERMAN CONSTITUTION.

BERLIN, Aug. 13. The new German constitution was promulgated today. President Eilbert appointed Premier Bauer imperial chancellor and issued a decree that all public officials and all members of defence forces shall immediately take oath under the new constitution. The national assembly will henceforth bear the title of Reichstag, while the federal council, the Bundsrath will replace the federal committee.

NOTHING WHITE ABOUT IT.

LONDON, Aug. 14. In the Commons today Hon. Walter E. Guinness, Unionist member for Suffolk asked Andrew Bonar Law to give a day's discussion over the present position of black races, but his request was refused. The questioner responded by asking whether it would not be a graceful act of reciprocity to place at the disposal of the United States the benefit of British experience in governing negroes, in return for discussion of Irish affairs in United States Senate.

SERIOUS MATTER FOR ARMENIA.

PARIS, Aug. 14. The Peace Conference is awaiting anxiously the decision of Great Britain as to the withdrawal of British troops from the Caucasus who is expected will begin to move homeward to-morrow. Colonel William Haskell, U. S. A., Allied High Commissioner in Armenia has telegraphed the supreme council that Armenia undoubtedly will starve and its people exterminated if British soldiers are not retained there until others are sent. The supreme council however is unable to provide troops.

ARMENIAN PROTECTION.

LONDON, Aug. 14. (Reuter's.)—Several questions were asked in the House of Commons today regarding the withdrawal of troops from Trans Caucasia thus leaving the Armenians unprotected from the Turks. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., emphasized there would be universal horror if the Armenians were again handed over to their old masters the Turks. Hon. Cecil Harmsworth promised to convey this sentiment to the Peace Conference. Lord Robert Cecil asked, do the Government realize our obligation to the Armenians are fully as strong as to General Denikine? Hon. Mr. Harmsworth replied, these considerations are in the minds of the members of the Government.

NO RECOGNITION YET.

LONDON, Aug. 14. (Reuter's.)—Hon. Cecil Harmsworth in reply to a question in the House of Commons today stated that the Allies had not yet granted recognition to the new Hungarian Government.

A LONG SESSION.

LONDON, Aug. 14. After disposing of the profiteering bill by which the Government will be empowered to take drastic action in lowering the high cost of living, the House of Commons, which sat all night, took up the transport bill this morning. Some of these amendments were not accepted by the lower House of Parliament. After being in continuous session for seventeen hours, the House rose shortly after 9 o'clock this morning.

Every Saturday evening after 7 o'clock. Choice Ends of Beef, Mutton, Lamb, Pork will be sold at cost. ELLIS & CO., LTD., 203 Water Street.—no 29.

The World's Greatest Violinist.

Joseph Joachim, the most illustrious violinist of his age, was born in 1831, at Killsee, near Presburg. A Jew, of Hungarian nationality, a fiddle must have been the dearest thing to his young hands. At eight years of age he appeared at the Pesth Casino, in 1839, and a discerning journalist hailed him at once as Paganini's successor, "a living marvel to see and hear." As a boy of eleven, he became the friend of Mendelssohn, "the revered benefactor of my earlier days." When in 1844 the boy came to England, Mendelssohn filled his wallet with introductions to notable folk, and on the benefit night of the poet Bunn, the playbill announced: "Master Joachim, the celebrated Hungarian boy, will make his first appearance before an English public." In 1852 he led the Court orchestra of the King of Hanover, and for the next forty years his home was in Berlin, where he held office as director and conductor of the Royal Academy of Music. The 60th anniversary of his appearance was celebrated in Queen's Hall, where the "master," surrounded by a great and sympathetic audience, played them the concerto of Beethoven, which he had played sixty years before to the Philharmonic Society. He married, in 1863 (while at the Court of Hanover), Amalia Weiss, then a leading singer in opera, and six children were born to them. The alliance, however, was an unhappy one, and for years they lived apart; but when, in 1889, Frau Joachim lay dying at Berlin, her husband hastened to her side, and they were reconciled before the end. Doctor Joachim died at the age of 76 on August 15, 1907.

New Relief For Constipation, "LES FRUITS"

Physicians agree that with the modern habits of living, constipation is likely to be always with us. They also agree that the constant use of any drug for the relief of constipation is exceedingly unwise—unwise for two reasons. First, a drug constantly used loses its effect and requires a constantly increased dose. Second, because the constant use of any drug is bad anyway.

So the cry is constantly going up from the constipated, "What can we do?" It will be interesting to a great many to know that an answer has been found in the re-discovery of a method which was used with great success by our Forefathers, and in Arabia far back in the twelfth century. The food is called "Les Fruits" because it is composed entirely of figs, dates, prunes, raisins and the leaves of each with the substitution of the Alexandria leaf for the raisin leaf. The taste is pleasant, if not to say delicious, and the effect is exceedingly satisfactory. Try it and be convinced.

The Wanderers, with their "dud" team on, gave the Cubs the fright of their lives last night when Hall, holding them for six hitless innings, Burton managed to hit one right to the shortstop's toes. The evening was so uneventful in his territory up to this period that Laird Orr was hardly prepared for such an unexpected happening, and after booting and juggling the ball several times, finally succeeded in making a wild peg to first. Then Britt and Hartnett both smashed Claudi's offerings to deep centre. This started the fireworks, and before the Cubs planned to terra firma again, the Hartnett crew had showed 5 runs across the plate. Graham Balfour, who was attired like the sheriff of Lone Gulch, was the white hope of his team when, with a man on second and third and one run necessary to tie up the score, he stepped up to the plate. He proved to be a veritable "Casey at the Bat," however, when after letting two sweet ones pass him which were not his style, vainly smote the ozone at Hall's inshoot. Smith, with his peculiar slow ball, seemed to fool most of the Cubs' batters, and he was heading for a couple of clever and daring plays only to find his baseman asleep at the switch. Herb Power made his first appearance for the season attired in a Wanderer uniform, and succeeded in pulling down a nice fly after his two years' active service with the American forces, but he seems to have lost his batting eye, for his usual two baggers were conspicuous by their absence. Hall got in good work for six innings, having 15 strikeouts to his credit, but the Wanderers found him the seventh and lammed him for four hits.

NEXT GAME.
The next game will be played on Tuesday evening, when the B.L.S. will try conclusions with the Cubs. After this clash only the final game of the series—Wanderers vs Red Lions—remains, which, if the Hartnett crew succeed in winning, will necessitate a play-off with the Cubs for the championship.

Bill:—"Yes, I was up to the big game, so I just dropped in here for a 'kiss and a cup of tea' as they say. Nabel:—"Awfully glad you did; but the tea isn't quite ready yet."

THE BURGLAR.
"I told you so!" said Abner Strong, who runs the general store; "I always knew that kid was wrong and crooked to the core. His folks all thought he was so smart when he was playing ball and bragged about his early start. The praise he got, and all."

"He's in St. John's on some dern club, the 'Telegram' from that place. Says yesterday that he got d'ub and went and stole a base. I don't know what them buses cost. Or why he stole the same, but when they seen that base was lost, they knew just who to blame."

The finest strop for a razor is the fleshy part of your hand below the little finger. For eight years I have used no other for razor blades. If it is a safety razor blade grasp it between the thumb and first finger of the right hand and strike finger nail and blade at the same time on the fleshy part of the left hand. If you will do it slowly at first the motion becomes automatic. I put a little vaseline on the cutting edge. This keeps the blades constantly in first class condition.—John W. ### Lady Beatty in Hard Luck.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—An income of $200,000 a year is supposed to insure one from fear of the wolf at the door, but not if one lives in England, and owns property in the U. S. Here is what happens in the case of Lady Ethel Beatty, wife of Admiral Sir David Beatty, of the British Navy and daughter of the late Marshal Field.
The British Government takes 50 per cent of her income on the ground that she is a British subject, being married to a Briton. And the United States takes 60 per cent. because her property is in America.
Her income is known to be between $200,000 and $300,000 a year, because it is only on incomes of that amount that 60 per cent. is levied.
Say, then, that Lady Beatty draws $200,000 a year from her property. The British Government takes $100,000, the American Government takes $120,000, and her income is $20,000 less than nothing at all. If her income amounts to $280,000, the British Government takes $140,000, the American Government takes $168,000, and Lady Beatty pays $28,000 more than she gets.

"Every American living in England faces the same condition," said Arthur Huerley, of the Northern Trust Company, which handles Lady Beatty's finances. "There is no way under the laws of either England or America by which she can escape the penalty."
"We have treaties with most countries whereby if one pays part of the tax in one country it cannot be duplicated in the other; but with England, Japan, Australia and New Zealand there is no such treaty, and the full tax is collected in both countries."

She Sells Correct Time.

Selling time is the very unusual business of Miss Belleville, an English spinster. It is a strange incident that turned her to such a vocation. At the death of her father she found, among the many things she had inherited from him, a very valuable clock. Her father had been an expert watchmaker, and he had built and regulated this clock to keep time like a chronometer.
It is an unusual timepiece, the hour-hand making its journey around the face but once every day, the numerals running from I to XXIII.
Accurate as Greenwich.
The clock became the exponent of accuracy. It was regarded by the residents of Miss Belleville's home town as accurate even as Greenwich Observatory. Which is situated not far from her home.
For many years the people of the little town set their clocks and watches by the Belleville timepiece, and when Miss Belleville became its owner she turned it to profitable account by charging a small fee for this service. The clock produces quite an income. If every man who stops in front of a jeweler's chronometer every day to regulate his watch should pay five cents, it is easy to figure what an income this would mean.

Household Notes.

Bacon is much more crisp and evenly done when cooked in the oven and it does not require turning.
Sliced banana added to the white of an egg and beaten stiff makes a good substitute for whipped cream.
Bread crumbs will keep better when put into a glass jar with a piece of cheesecloth tied tightly over the top.
Refrigerator doors should always be latched tight. If they are half closed, ice is wasted and the refrigerator is not so cold.

Royalty's Clubs.

KINGS DON'T OFTEN USE THEM.
The Prince of Wales has lately been made a member of the Savage Club. He has also permitted himself to be elected to the Plymouth Yacht Club, and—as is hoped—he spends a part of his time at his pretty house, Tor Royal on the Moor, fifteen miles from Plymouth, he may perhaps make practical use of the latter club.
The King's father, as well as King Edward, were both members of the Savage. King Edward was a most clubbable man, and during his long tenure of the title of Prince of Wales, was frequently seen in the various London Clubs to which he belonged. He, however, like his son, our present king, gave up his clubs on coming to the throne, though in a few cases they both allowed their names to be retained upon the lists.
The last king to use his clubs after he ascended the throne was George IV.

Of all London clubs the one that is pre-eminently the Royal Club is the Marlborough. Its membership is only five hundred, and in King Edward's time it was an unwritten but strictly observed rule that no one should be admitted unless he was known and approved by His Majesty—or rather by His Royal Highness.
In the writing-room is the small table which King Edward always used, and which is preserved just as it was in his day.
The Army and Navy, better known as "The Rag," is one of the handsomest club buildings in London, has 2,400 members, and was under the patronage of King Edward. Napoleon III, in his earlier days, before he became Emperor, was a member of this club, and so was the late Tsar of Russia.

Peculiarities of Sleep.

A person absolutely without sleep for nine days will die. Sufferers from insomnia sometimes maintain that they have gone for weeks without sleeping, but it has been proved that they actually sleep without being aware of it. At a certain point sleep is inevitable, no matter what the bodily condition, the alternative being death.
A method of taming wild elephants is said to be that of depriving the animals of sleep when first caught. In a few days they become practically spiritless and harmless. The brain of the elephant is held to be more highly developed than that of any other wild animal; but, of course, as compared with a human brain, can be easily fatigued by new impression, and so made dependent on sleep.
The wild elephant in his native jungle is said to sleep very little—a further point of the theory of the universal ratio of sleep to intelligence.

Put Webbed Gloves On AND SWIM LIKE A DUCK.

How would you like to be able to swim as fast as a duck, and with a little effort, with webbed hands and feet to push your way through the water? It is not at all impossible, now that Dr. A. Kantor Zawadzki, of Honolulu, has invented his swimming glove. As can be imagined, the webbed gloves makes a veritable duck's foot out of human hand. When swimming, the gloved hand is spread out at each backward stroke and closed each time the hand is drawn forward. According to the inventor, a swimmer equipped with the duck-like hands can not only outdistance other swimmers but the hands enable him to stay up for hours with slight exertion.—Popular Science Monthly.

THE PEOPLE TO BLAME.

In the woman's rest room of a certain large city bank, there used to be several telephones which the customers of the bank were allowed to use free of charge. But the privilege has lately been withdrawn.

"I suppose that is on account of the higher cost of telephone service," I said to the matron in charge.

"No," she said, "not so much that, as because our customers took advantage of the privilege. They were all supposed to use the service in moderation, but there were some women who would spend an hour telephoning every time they came to work. So we really had to give it up."

"How often that happens! Because some abuse a privilege, others who would not abuse it, lost it.

Think of Deserting An Orphan.

Here's another example. As you doubtless know, a certain charitable society has given opportunity to many thousands of people to adopt French orphans by paying $3 a month for their support. But in the future, anyone who wishes to do this must have to pay the whole assessment—that is, $36—in advance. This is partly because so many people who had pledged the $3 a month didn't redeem their pledges.

Now there are a great many people who could pay the $3 a month but not the $36 in advance. And it means either that their money will go into a general fund and they cannot have an orphan of their own (bad, because they will be apt to lose interest) or that they will give the money up altogether. And part of the same for that rests on those who failed to redeem their pledges.

What "Smithy" Did For The Parole System.

Here's an example of the opposite. Many years ago a certain humane prison warden had in his care a prisoner whom the story calls Smithy for convenience sake. Smithy, who was one of the hardest cases in the

AN OLD MAN DISCUSSES MARRIED LIFE.

Lord we've had our little wrangles, an' we've had our little bouts, There's many a time, I reckon, that we've been on the outs; My tongue's a trifle hasty an' my temper's apt to fly.

An' Mother, let me tell you, has a sting in her reply. But I couldn't live without her, an' it's plain as plain can be That in fair or sunny weather mother needs a man like me.

I've banged a door an' muttered angry words beneath my breath. For at times when she was scoldin' mother's plagued me most to death. But we've always laughed it over, when we've both cooled down a bit.

An' never had a difference but a smile would settle it. An' if such a thing could happen, we could share life's joys an' tears An' live right on together for another thousand years.

Some men give up too easy in the game o' married life. They haven't got the courage to be worthy of a wife.

An' I've seen a lot o' women that have made their lives a mess. Coz, they couldn't bear the burdens that are mixed with happiness. So long as folks are human they'll have many faults that jar.

An' the way to live with people is to take them as they are.

We've been forty years together, good an' bad, an' rain an' shine, I've forgotten mother's faults now an' she never mentions mine. In the days when sorrow struck us an' we shared a common woe We just leaned upon each other, an' our weakness didn't show.

An' I learned how much I need her an' how tender she can be An' through it, maybe, mother saw the better side of me.

THE OLD MAN.

As man grows older in hoof and shoulder he has a frequent pain; his back is aching, his heart is breaking at every little strain. We should remember that a life's December is cheerless, cold and sad; and not act bearish, but help and cherish the poor old falling dad. The old man stumbles, and snarls and grumbles, but we should patient be; for time is sailing, and we'll be ailing, and weak, some day, as he. We're hale and hearty; Age is a party who seems afar, remote, but Time's a sprinter, and soon life's winter will come and get our goat. And when we tatter, and fuss and poutier, as weary old men will, may those around us not stab and wound us, but ease us down the hill. As hair grows whiter the wayworn brighter needs kindness all the time; if you remind him that love's behind him, you're all guilty of a crime. The flippant lady who's rude to daddy can be no friend of mine, though that same critter may fairly glitter where social lions shine.

The Super Stove.

If only the world lasts long enough, our inventors will discover cures for all our present trials and troubles.

One of the most astonishing productions which we are shortly to see is a stove that works something along the line of an alarm clock, and does your work for you while you shop, or visit, or go joy-riding.

This stove, which is an American invention, is worked by electricity, the heat being stored by the device used in the thermos bottles. Thus, all the heat is kept inside, and the outside of the stove is cool whether the current is turned on or off.

But the real beauty of the stoves this: Suppose you want to put in vegetables, according to the length of time required for cooking. While you are out, the clock turns the heat off at the required times, and by regulating the joint and the pudding clocks in the same way, all three dishes, requiring different times of cooking, will be ready and awaiting you simultaneously.

This sounds like a dream, but it is not. This wonderful stove, as a matter of fact, is already upon the American market.

The Middlesex Centurion

I had a chat at Lord's the other day with Elias Hendren, "Pat," to give him his popular nickname, in rare form with the bat this season. He has already scored two double centuries, and his average at the time of writing is well over a hundred. The Middlesex cricketer is a great footballer, too. He plays outside-left for Brentford, and had much to do with his club's remarkable success last season.

Quite a funny fellow is Hendren. A story he told me is worth repeating:—"It was the match of the season, and one of the umpires was the village butcher, who was very absent-minded. A wicket had fallen, and the incoming batsman took up his position and made the request to the butcher-umpire, who was talking to the bowler at the other end, 'Give me leg, please.' "Turning round rather quickly, the umpire remarked, 'Very sorry, sir; we've only got shoulder left.'"

The Prince's Visit.

With the peace celebrations concluded and the Prince of Wales come and gone almost, it seems, in a flash, St. John's returns again to normal and everyday conditions. But the impressions of the crowded days will remain fresh for long, and after that—"Hæc olim meminisse juvabit." Few memories will be more pleasant in the minds of Newfoundlanders. It was perhaps worth while enduring our unparalleled spring and early summer to have the weather make such generous and opportune amends. The brilliancy of the various and varied scenes (how brilliant, some hundreds of photograph albums even now probably bear witness!), the perfect working of every detail of the official programme, the beauty, surprising even to the artificers themselves, of the decorations, and the spontaneity of the real, hearty, Newfoundland welcome given the Royal visitor—all combined to make a pleasing and harmonious whole as rare as the great occasion itself. We think we can truly say that the Prince carries with him a most favourable impression of Newfoundland, and, let us be honestful enough to add, of its people; but not more favourable than the one he leaves behind. Unless we are mistaken, many of the same photograph albums we have mentioned contain lucky snapshots that their owners were fortunate enough, or bold enough, to secure, showing the Prince at every possible turn and from every possible angle. They will be prized and proud souvenirs, but they will be more: they will be an enduring record and proof of what all who saw and spoke with him could not fail to remark—a quiet dignity of bearing and behaviour worthy of an English prince, that was not lessened but enhanced by a charming modesty and ease of approach. To meet him was, not to forget but to be less conscious of his exalted rank, and to think only of the man and the gentleman, of the simple, manly character to which the Governor so happily alluded. From the large features and little incidents of his visit to this, both the oldest and nearest of Britain's dominions beyond the seas, it is plain that his journey through Canada and the States will prove not more a royal tour than a personal triumph. The best wishes of the people of Newfoundland go with him upon it.

The King's Reply.

The following reply to the message of the Regatta Committee has been received:
August 14th, 1919.
"To Governor, Newfoundland.
"Have received with much satisfaction message of Regatta Committee, for which please express my thanks. Am delighted at reports of successful visit of the Prince of Wales and of hearty welcome accorded him."

EARL OF DEVON SAILS.—S.S. Earl of Devon sails this evening on the Cook's Harbor service, taking a full freight.

Overheated Axle Snapped.

As a result of having no grease on it, the axle of a carriage snapped off close to the back wheel yesterday afternoon, when a party of four persons were driving toward Petty Harbor on a trouting expedition. Although the wheel fell away from the carriage, the carriage itself did not overturn, and consequently none of the occupants were thrown out. They unhitched the horse and hired a substitute carriage from a nearby farmer, whom they knew, and continued on their way.

The Coming Garden Party.

Meeting at the Shannon Munn Home at 7.30 last evening, the Ladies' and Gentlemen's Committee of the C. of E. Orphanage arranged for the Garden Party that takes place on next Wednesday afternoon. The event will be held at Shannon Munn Grounds this year, as they are roomier. Two large dancing galleries will be erected, while the usual stalls will also be in evidence. Teas and sports will constitute a large portion of the day's sport and a very enjoyable time is anticipated.

Man Bit Boy.

That cats and other feline animals are not the only ones that do biting, was evidenced last evening at about seven o'clock, when an old man, an inmate of the Poor Asylum, bit a youngster who lived nearby. The boy was tormenting the old man, who was naturally garrulous, and he suddenly turned on him and caught him with his teeth by the shoulder. As the boy had no coat on, wearing only a thin blouse, the bite was pretty bad, and bled copiously for some time. He did not again interfere with the old fellow.

A Curious Affair.

A strange thing happened at the Regatta on Wednesday last. A young man, seeing a well-stuffed purse on the grass, picked it up and was about to open it when a very old lady, poor in appearance, snatched the purse from his hand. He demanded it back from her, but she declared that it was hers. The finder asked her how much money was in the purse, and she told him $1,500. She then opened the purse before him and counted the money. The amount was exactly as she had stated, and he allowed her to keep it.

Why Remove Them?

No move has yet been made to remove the shields of wood that were nailed to the telegraph poles along Water St., for the reception of the Prince of Wales, and there seems to be no reason why there should be. The shields are certainly not in the way, and add to the look of the street. So why remove them? Of course the flags should be taken away as they will only make the shields look disreputable when they become dirty and discolored. If the shields are left they will serve admirably for future receptions or general gala occasions, requiring no more than a new coating of paint.

Will Play Cricket.

Arrangements for the holding of a cricket match between the Shamrock and Nondescript teams, are being made. If at all possible the game will be run off on the Pleasantville Grounds, but in the case of this being impossible, St. George's Field will be used. A good exhibition should result.

Councillors Resign.

Brought on through alleged neglect in inviting the full Board to meet the Prince of Wales at the King's Wharf at the time of the reception, Councillors Tait and Brownrigg tendered their resignations to the Council at last evening's meeting.

Ethie's Report.

SS. Ethie arrived at Humbermouth yesterday morning. Captain English reports having made all ports of call to Battle Hr., going and returning, and sent the following about the fishery:—

"Little improvement at some points on Labrador, about battle Harbor nothing doing. Grant at Blanc Sablon has 8,000 quintals landed. Whately at Bonne Esperance has 3,000 ashore and good prospects. Good fishery on the Newfoundland side of the Straits from Point Riche down; crews getting all the fish they can handle."

S. A. Congress.

The Salvation Army's Annual Congress for 1919 will be held from Aug. 22nd to the 26th, inclusive. On Sunday, August 24th at 3 p.m. in the Methodist College Hall, the Annual City Gathering will be held. His Excellency the Governor, Sir Alexander Harris has very kindly consented to take the chair. The Annual City Gathering is the one great meeting of the Congress, where friends and well wishers, from all the denominations, meet, thus showing their Christian charity and unity in the great cause. Commissioner W. J. Richards, Territorial Leader for Canada East and Newfoundland, who has just returned from France and Belgium, will be present. He will give an interesting lecture on the "World Wide Salvation Army."

Had Narrow Escape.

Mr. Joseph Judge, the well-known horseman, had a very narrow escape from severe injury, if not worse, last evening, when a horse he was riding fell and pinned his leg underneath. The animal was a new, spirited one, just imported, and Mr. Judge was making him accustomed to automobiles and other city vehicles. When on Duckworth Street, opposite the Crosbie Hotel, a motor car swept by, frightening the horse, which shied to one side, and slipped on the asphalt. Falling heavily to his side, he pinned Mr. Judge's leg, stirrup and all, underneath him. He quickly sprang up again, however, and bolted down the street, being stopped on Military Road, near St. Thomas's Church. Mr. Judge's leg was not broken, strange to say, but his foot was rather badly crushed by the stirrup, which penetrated the boot and inflicted an ugly wound. He had to be driven home.

Welcome Home.

Lieut. G. M. Johnson, son of Mr. Justice Johnson, arrived by the express this morning. He enlisted in Edinburgh in October, 1914, serving as a private with the Royal Scots and as lieutenant with the Cameron Highlanders in Belgium and France. In 1918 he served with Indian troops in Mesopotamia and Persia. He was attached to the Royal Nfld. Regiment in 1916.

Susu Sails.

S.S. Susu sailed at 10.30 this morning for the north taking full cargo and the following passengers: Miss Harriet, P. and Mrs. White, Sergt. Hefferon, P. Piccott, H. R. Luscombe, A. Butler, Miss J. Normore, W. Bemister, M. Thistle, G. House, Sergt. White, Mrs. Saunders, E. B. Saunders, Mrs. Grant and child, and seven second class.

Another Suggestion.

If the continuation of the Regatta be held on Wednesday, it would not be a bad idea to add another feature to the proceedings to make the afternoon more interesting than it would otherwise be. A couple of motor boat races should be run off, and special prizes put up. Dealers in Motor engines should be asked to cooperate and enter boats containing their engines. This would not only add greatly to the interest of the day, but would be an excellent way of demonstrating the various engines. There is lots of time between now and then, and those who are responsible should get busy.

The Chevrolet.

One does not have to think very hard to learn why Chevrolet cars are such favorites in every city in the world. Chevrolet success can be summed up in the words "Price" and "Quality."

Chevrolet cars are built in the largest of factories distributed throughout eight of the Principal cities of the United States and One in Canada. Were it not for the tremendous financial organization, viz., the General Motors Corporation with resources amounting to the Billion/Dollars mark, Chevrolet cars could not be marketed at the rate of 700 cars daily. At this rate of production, combined the every up to date facility and advantages of up to date machinery, as well as the best brains procurable in the Motor Car industry, it can be readily understood why you can buy in St. John's the "490" grey painted 5 passenger touring car, fully equipped with electric starter and electric lights for $1440.

The Baby Grand Chevrolet, selling at $2,050, is the most attractive purchase that one can make. This car is by far the best value with hundreds of dollars over any other car selling in St. John's. Call at the Chevrolet Service Station, Water St. West, and inspect the new models. We have just one "490" and one "Baby Grand" for immediate delivery. Phone 584. BERT HAYWARD. aug15.31.tu.f

Killed!

Killed, Killed! Hear the mothers as they cry
As the speed fiend rushes by
And the mangled form is dashed
To the threshold, limp and gashed
Let them die where they lie,
Ours is the car of joy.
And we speed,
Without heed.
Death is flying, swift and blind
Through our thoroughfares all day,
Like a wild and rushing wind
On its fierce, destructive way;
In its trail the women weep
And men's curses grow more deep,
Still the juggernauts they sweep
On their way.
Killed, Killed! In the noon's and morning's light;
Killed, Killed! hear it rising on the night.
Till the blood within us freezes
At recurring tragedies
Yet there are no remedies
In sight.
Killed, Killed! Let the reckless ones beware
Have a care,
Lest the mutterings in the air
Turn to deeds,
And the wrecker, he be wrecked
For his cold blooded neglect
And the terror that he spreads
As he speeds.—D.C.

Speaking of "Catgut."

Where's the cat farm from where we get our supply of catgut? The answer is: There isn't any cat farm. Cats' intestines can't be profitably utilized. If not cats, then what furnishes the raw material for musical instrument and tennis strings? The answer is: Sheep. Every part of the animal is utilized, even the soft and mellow tones of his bleating voice, which are preserved in the intestines that string the tuneful violin.

As soon as the sheep intestines are graded they are divided into narrow about eight yards in length. These are sent to the string factory, where they are thoroughly cleansed and chemically treated. It takes from twenty to twenty-four sheep to produce the strings for one tennis racket. A single violin string monopolizes the entrails of a whole sheep, however big.

From the time the raw material leaves the animal until it is made into strings, twelve or sixteen days are required in the manufacturing.

The intestines of some sheep are lighter in color than others, but the light or white strings do not possess any better tone quality or durability than the darker ones.

After the gut is split by running it over a safety-razor blade, the strands go through another machine which removes impurities. Following this they are repeatedly run through wringers on washtubs. From four to fifteen of these strands are used for one music string, being strung in plain collarless neck lines still predominate, though a few tiny hand-embroidered collars are seen.

Mr. James Moore.

To the older portion of our people, more especially in St. John's and Conception Bay, few men were better known and more highly respected than that prince of hospitality and enterprising business man, Mr. James Moore, for many years merchant at Barened, Conception Bay. We are pleased to learn that the venerable octogenarian (being about 84 years of age) is hale and hearty, and still actually engaged in business amongst our friends in the antipodes—the land of the Southern Cross. In the sixties, seventies and part of the eighties, of the past century, Mr. Moore carried on a prosperous business at Barened, having several vessels of his own engaged in the Labrador fishery and general trade of the country. His premises and dwelling house, etc., were amongst the most extensive and beautiful in Conception Bay, but owing to the continuance of commercial depression about thirty years ago, caused by bad fisheries, and more particularly by the loss of his premises by fire, with no insurance thereon, Mr. Moore decided to return to Old Ireland—the Land of his Birth, he being a native of the County Killkenny. Notwithstanding his great love and veneration for his native land, he found himself a stranger in his old home—"the land being still there, but his chums were gone." After a year or so in Ireland, having a brother in Australia, he decided to recoup his fortunes in the great Island of the future—Australia, to which so many of his countrymen were being during the penal days, and where some of those "convicts" and their descendants, notably Sir Charles Gavan Duffy, and the present Prime Minister of Queensland, Mr. Ryan, rose to the highest positions in the land. By his indomitable pluck, perseverance and business tact, Mr. Moore succeeded in attaining a successful career, and is now general agent for many large business concerns in that country. His son, Leo, was in the Australian forces during the great war, and saw much active service. Mrs. Moore (nee Miss Walker, of Brigus), aunt of Rev. Father Walker, P.P., of St. Brendan's, Bonavista Bay, is also enjoying good health. Mr. W. T. Cleary, for the past fifteen years residing in Sydney, C.B., who is at present in St. John's on a visit, has received many letters from the venerable gentleman, and both he and his good wife wish to be remembered to their numerous friends in Newfoundland. We think Mr. Moore was in the employ of the late Philip Hutchings (now G. Knowling), after first coming to Newfoundland. Judging from the information received we should not be surprised if our venerable friend will round off the century and the Evening Telegram sincerely hopes he will be spared to do so. Ad multos annos.

Gold Plated Teeth For Sheep Are Common in Scotland

The sheep of the western islands of Scotland are almost as stylish as the dogs that ride in automobiles on our own Fifth Avenue, in New York city. The canine aristocrats have occasional cavities in their teeth filled with gold, but the Scotch sheep have their entire set gold-plated before they enter any chance to decay. The gold-plating is due to the gold dust in the soil. As early as 1536 Hector Boece, Bishop of Aberdeen, speaks of the remarkable appearance of the sheep that roam "the golden mountain" in central Aberdeenshire. Their wool is yellow, their flesh is red, flecked, as it were, with saffron, and their teeth are the hue of gold, he says.

Sheriff Comes Out for Tanlac

"Money Couldn't Buy the Good It Has Done Me," He Says in Statement.

"Money could not buy the good Tanlac has done me, and I gladly recommend it for what it has done in my case," said Hon. Archie R. Anderson, of Houston, Texas, ex-sheriff of Harris county, recently. Mr. Anderson needs no introduction to the people of Texas, as he is unquestionably not only one of the best known, but one of the most popular men that ever held public office in "The Lone Star" state. After serving as deputy sheriff of Harris county for 12 years, Mr. Anderson was elected chief of police of the city of Houston. He had occupied this office only a short time when the sheriff of Harris county died. Mr. Anderson's friends then persuaded him to make the race for the unexpired term of sheriff, to which he was easily elected. He was honored with re-election seven different times, and served the people in this important office for 15 consecutive years. Four years ago Mr. Anderson demitted re-election and retired to private life. He cast his lot among the people of Houston and is a large property owner and foremost citizen of that interesting and prosperous city.

"I was in a run-down condition," continued Mr. Anderson, "and had no appetite at all. I could hardly sleep at night and never felt like getting up in the mornings. I was so tired. I had the worst form of indigestion, suffered all the time from gas on my stomach and was continually belching up undigested food. I had to take my coffee without sugar, as when I drank it with sugar I would just belch for hours. I would bloat and swell up like I was poisoned and suffered with neuralgic pains of the worst sort, and nothing seemed to help me only in a temporary way. I just can't tell you how I did suffer for the past four years and up to the time I began taking Tanlac, a few weeks ago.

"When I read the testimonials of some who had been relieved of troubles like mine I felt like I couldn't make a mistake by taking Tanlac and it has done even more for me than I had expected. I began to feel better after taking my first bottle and have just now started on my third and I'm a different man already. I sleep like a log now and eat just any and everything I want without the slightest discomfort afterwards. I am glad to endorse Tanlac because it does the work and I'm telling all my friends just what I'm telling you. I never felt better in my life than I do since taking Tanlac. I am willing for you to publish my statement and let every suffering person who may wish to benefit by my experience with this great medicine.

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Monnors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac Representative. —adv.

An Excellent Suggestion.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—As the Harbor Grace British Society is visiting us on Wednesday next, would it not be a good idea to run off our postponed Regatta in the afternoon of that day, charging some kind of an entrance fee? Or, of course, it might be left to the general public to contribute anything, which would, in any case, be placed to the credit of the widow of the late Mr. Peters. Why not?
Yours truly,
GEO. T. OLIVER.
City, Aug. 15, 1919.

The Matter of Nationality.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir.—A friend and I had an interesting argument last night, on the subject of nationality. The question we wanted to decide was, What is the nationality of a child born at sea? My friend held that it would be a native of the country represented by the flag that flew over the ship. I held that the child would be a native of the country to which it was nearest when born. Maybe you will give us the desired information?
Yours truly,
ARGUMENTATIVE.

At the Majestic.

The Majestic Theatre presents a strong bill to-night, when Clara Kimball Young, the versatile actress, will be featured in "The Marionettes," a picture that "proves that there are two main routes to a man's heart—his stomach and his jealousy." A young French girl, impersonated by Clara Young, who has spent most of her life in a convent, returns to her home and falls desperately in love with a young nobleman, who marries her for her money only. The natural result, of course, is unhappiness for both. The manner in which their happiness is restored to them by a mutual friend is very effective and at the same time highly original. Altogether "The Marionettes" is a strong picture, abounding in human interest and gripping situations, and cannot fail to hold the spectator from beginning to end. A special treat, in the shape of a Charlie Chaplin comedy also lies in store for Majestic patrons, and they are assured an enjoyable night.

Obituary.

Yesterday morning, at Regina, Elizabeth, daughter of the late Capt. Geo. Clarke, of Brigus, and wife of the Rev. Cater B. Oakley, of Brook, Sask. Mrs. Oakley passed away after a short illness following a serious operation. Dr. C. Roberts, formerly of this city, was in attendance. The deceased lady and Mr. Oakley have a large circle of friends both in this city and the outports, who will be sorry to hear of her passing.

The Out-at-Elbow Scribes of Fleet Street.

One of the most surprising revolutions that has occurred in recent years is the change that has come over the habits and personality of the members of the "Fourth Estate." As recently as twenty-five years ago the young newspaper journalists who are nowadays looked upon as being old and experienced in the mysteries of newspaper production at the mature age of twenty-five were as unknown as aeroplanes!

The era of the boy was only just beginning to dawn in Fleet Street, and the elderly, snuffy, but sensational and dignified scribes, who in those days were the pillars of the Press, looked down with pitying contempt upon any one who ascribed to position in newspaper land before he had arrived at the wrong side of forty.

Just as in the London Museum, you may gaze upon specimens of what were once familiar denizens of the streets, hansom cabs and a horse omnibus; so if you know the public houses that lie hidden away from the highway of Fleet Street in the numerous courts and bye streets that exist, you may, especially on a Friday night, when money is in evidence, meet some interesting survivals of this fast disappearing type.

In the bars of these little known hosteleries, where sawdust is still strewn and garish modern improvements are held in scorn by publicans and patrons alike, the dwindling remnants of the veterans of Fleet Street gather.

One thing that strikes you is the prevalence of the Scotch and Irish accents, which years of residence in the English capital has failed to eradicate. Trinity, Maynooth, Edinburgh, and Marischal Varieties in days gone by sent many a brilliant youth who was destined after enjoying for perhaps a few years some meteoric success, to have "those saddest words of tongue or pen, he might have been" for his motto, enter into the slough of despond and grind out a precarious living by writing stories, essays, and as a last resource, falling back on "film-ty", a source of income that the Press agencies have almost completely destroyed.

Of course, there were many English journalists in those distant days, but few became such pronounced characters as their Scotch and Irish confreres.

They were more reserved in their acquaintances and drink, and although less educated, were more gentlemanly in the conventional sense as regards their clothes and linen.

As a matter of fact, clean linen has never been a passion with the Fleet Street journalist since the days of his great prototype, Dr. Johnson. The old derelicts of Fleet Street as a class were the most improvident and good-natured of men.

Their virtues were their own, and their vices were engendered into them by the conditions under which they worked. Their great grievance always has been that they have had to give long credit to newspaper proprietors for work done, with the result that the habit of drinking and borrowing while waiting about has been fostered, until it became chronic. In consequence, to obtain money quickly, all sorts of ingenious subterfuges were devised by the old hands.

Some years ago a wealthy manufacturer bought a then large and flourishing business that was mainly devoted to boys' story papers. He was illiterate, but insisted on personally reading the stories submitted by the scribes who wrote for his establishment. Finding that these gentlemen were in the habit of loitering about the counting-house to borrow half-crowns, he inquired the reason, and discovered their explanation was that, after they wrote their stories, they had to wait from a fortnight to two months until they were published and paid for. Hence their impetuosity.

The business instincts of the proprietor at once asserted themselves. "I understand," he said curtly. "In future I'll read the stories myself and pay spot cash--that is, if you agree to take half the usual remuneration. I want two long serial stories at once. Who will write them?"

His offer was received with dismay by the majority of the contributors, but two 'blacklegs' amongst them, as trades unionists would term them, agreed to accept the offer.

It was hailed with acclamation by the proprietor, and within a few days they arrived with piles of typed manuscript. One story was called "Blue Garter: A Romance of the Days Now Gone," the other "The Lure of Gold." Both were read, pronounced splendid, and substantial cheques were at once forthcoming. When the first instalments of "Blue Garter" appeared, however, letters from readers poured in pointing out that the story was identical with Sir Walter Scott's "Red Gauntlet" in every respect save one, and that was whenever the name of "Red Gauntlet" appeared in the original, "Blue Garter" had been substituted for it. "The Lure of Gold" turned out to be Stevenson's "Treasure Island" without a single alteration. After this the proprietor in question engaged a competent editor. The subterfuges some of the old Fleet Streeters employ to obtain money are clever and amusing, although they do not strictly recommend themselves to the possessors of Non-conformist consciences.

In the days before the news agencies became powers in the land it was a common dodge for two men to invent a purely imaginary but sentimental item of news and "flimsy"--i.e., duplicate it on manifold paper--and send round all the daily papers from their respective addresses differently written versions of the same story.

This was done for the following reason. Two versions of the same story coming from different sources would be regarded as corroboration, and one of the two would be published and paid for, the confederates naturally sharing the spoils.

Only the other day I met an elderly man who said: "Things are bad. I must go to my sister in Ireland and die again. The first time I died, 25 years ago, over £80 was collected for my family. Someone circulated the report because I was not seen about for a month or so. Nine years ago a similar misfortune occurred. Quite a round sum was collected then. I think the time has now come when I must die again!"--London Life.

SHE SUFFERED FIVE YEARS

Finally Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Key West, Fla.—"For five years I suffered from irregularities, with terrible pains and an awful weakness in my back. The doctor gave me different medicines but they did me no good. A friend asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I found it to be the best medicine I ever tried because it made me well, and I can now do my housework. I am telling my friends about it."—Mrs. J. M. CAMUS, 726 Caroline St., Key West, Florida.

Many women at some period in their life suffer from ailments peculiar to their sex and which in most cases may be readily relieved by this famous root and herb medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, just as Mrs. Camus found it helped her after suffering for years and trying everything else in vain.

If you have any annoying symptoms you feel to understand, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The results of their 40 years experience in advising women on this subject is at your service.

Film Howlers.

WHEN THE PRODUCER IS CAUGHT NAPPING.

(From Pearson's Weekly.)

Have you ever watched a film actress on the screen hastily packing her suitcase preparatory to a sudden departure from the paternal roof?

With one comprehensive sweep she clears the silver from her dressing-table, then dives feverishly into the top drawer, extracts divers garments of a filmy nature and stuffs them into that "grip" on top of the apparently indispensable silver. Then follows a triumphant get-away.

The next scenes will probably show her disporting a variety of Lucille creations on a steam yacht, desert island or a New England "one horse" town. They were certainly not in that case she brought from New York. Prud'hem: Where did she get them from?

It is not very easy nowadays to catch the film producer napping, but there are some absurdities which crop up again and again in moving pictures, and which are beginning to make us "sort of tired."

We all know the world-famous violinist on the movies who hasn't the foggiest notion of how to hold his violin.

Motor Boat in Romance Scene.

Likewise the great painter whose canvases are the most hopeless daubs. The scenario writer is perfectly within his rights in trying to convince us that the character in question is a modern Rembrandt, but it's too bad of the producer to spoil everything by butting in and showing us specimens of his work.

Historical detail is another pitfall for the producer. A Civil War drama was recently exhibited showing an electric push-button near the framework of the door!

A pageant of Ancient Rome was once entirely spoiled by a glimpse of a motor boat fitting past a group of galleys, whilst a telegraph pole has been known to create havoc in the atmosphere of an eighteenth-century romance.

But one of the most outrageous cases of directorial absent-mindedness was in a picture with a Biblical subject, in which Joseph crosses the desert on a mule, and, on his arrival at his destination, seems not a bit surprised to find that it has grown into a camel!

On the whole, modern picture production is a triumph of careful detail, but you only have to hear some of the remarks passed in picture theatres to realise how observant the public has grown, and how quick in detecting little oversights that have even escaped the notice of the eagle-eyed director.

Wore the Wrong Pyjamas

For instance. A man behind me once commented on the fact that the monogram on the pocket of the hero's pyjamas didn't tally with the name he was wearing in the play. A woman is quick to notice if the heroine arrives at a garden party wearing a different hat from the one she was sporting when she stepped into her limousine.

Time is equally erratic on the movies. It is on record that a certain Papal dignitary visit the Holy Father in his sanctuary at twenty minutes past two, according to the clock shown in the play, and left, on completing his visit, at ten minutes past!

Probably the oldest of all picture grievances is based on the incontestable fact that water is wet, and that most movie folk emerge from the ocean with dry garments, if not with carefully brushed hair and a crease in their trousers.

If the curtains do not draw easily this can be remedied by rubbing the pole from end to end with paraffin; you will then find the rings slip along quite easily.

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, July 21st, 1919.

ROYAL GARDEN PARTY.

Last week's was the third of the series of Royal garden parties at Buckingham Palace and it was as interesting and characteristic as its forerunners. It was, indeed, more interesting, because, instead of only the comparatively small and rather dull block of the aristocratic and upper middle classes, it included also a large number of people who are interesting in their own right. One of the features of the party was the number of former and present lights of the stage. Sir Squire Bancroft, one of the most decorative figures in West London, was there, and also Sir John Hare, who in his time had played the part of many of the original aristocratic figures who walked the lawn beside him. The contemporary stage was represented monumentally by Oscar Asche and Lily Bratton. Charles Hawtree, urbane, alert, and quite imposing, gave many hints which were probably unobserved to the other guests on how a man of the world behaves on state occasions. Irene Vanbrugh and Lillian Braithwaite were delightful to see, setting an example in dress and movement. The gossips have it that there are now so many garden parties and so few duchesses that the latter have to be rationed for the parties, but, however that may be, there was largesse of duchesses and other grandees last week. There was also many well-known clerics, Members of Parliament, and members of the City Council. There was a notable subsidence in the representations of khaki. Blue was a favorite wear, the navy being present in strength. There was a number of "Wrens" (Women's Royal Naval Service) officers, who looked very notable. One wondered what the shade of Queen Victoria must have thought as she saw these martial figures in her favorite garden. It was a glorious summer afternoon, and summer frocks and sunshades were worn without fear and without reproach. A feature was the parasols, very gaily colored and eccentrically patterned. Seen from the aeroplane which circled over the Palace, the gardens must have seemed like one gigantic flower bed.

BRITISH TROOPS LEAVE SIBERIA.

Unless Colonel John Ward, the navies' Member of Parliament, precedes his battalion, he will not be back in England until close upon Christmas. He left this country with the 25th Middlesex Regiment just before Christmas, 1916, went through the Tyndareus episode of the Cape, subsequently proceeded to Hong Kong for garrison duty, and then took his unit to Siberia. I have just heard from Vladivostok that, after a journey of more than 3,000 miles in railway trucks, they have arrived back at that port from Omsk. The battalion hopes to reach Blyth once more in a few months, and they should receive a warm greeting.

FLEET AT SOUTHERN.

The assembling of the British fleet at Southern, at the mouth of the Thames, will give the British public an opportunity during the next few days of visiting some of the most famous of His Majesty's ships, among others the Queen Elizabeth. Those who visit a British man-of-war are asked to remember that certain prescribed rules of etiquette must be observed. In the first place, before stepping from the gangway on to the quarter the hat should be raised, or, if in uniform, a salute given to the White Ensign flying astern. The White Ensign represents the "colors" of the Royal Navy. In the second place, if the captain is pacing his quarter deck, one must not rush up and shake him by the hand. On board his ship he is a very big man indeed. He may or may not notice one. Thirdly, if taken as a guest to the wardroom it is well not to forget the traditional hospitality of the navy. Cocktails should be consumed slowly, for the guest will never be allowed to hold an empty glass.

A SOLDIER'S VIEWS.

An old soldier who observed the London peace procession closely gives one or two professional notes about the units there. He says: "The Americans were a well-selected body of men, and had prepared for the procession like an American team for a sporting event. They wore steel helmets which made them very warlike, whereas the English wore caps, as if they had forgotten about being warlike. Their uniforms seemed to be all new, and we noticed how even the sleeves of their tunics were pressed—a thing unknown to British soldiers. The Czech-Slovaks looked a useful body of men, but most people did not identify them nor their flag, and the view around me was that they were the League of Nations. We were disappointed not to see the Indians, who had come in our hour of need and put up a good fight under conditions quite unnatural to them. But we were very glad to see the Canadians after all, although it was a small representation. The British army without Canada would not be the British army as we knew it. The Australians looked the great lads they are, although we had seen better marching. The Italian general with his sword salutes was very friendly, although they were a picturesque bunch from another sort of world, but there might have been a company of the big Chinese laborers who did so much hard work for us in France. The Serbians looked fighters all over, but they didn't look quite the desperate lot they are. The French were a fine business-like crowd with their long bayonets. We know all about them. As for our lot—the Englishmen and Scotsmen and Irishmen and Welshmen—they looked as good as the good fellows whose monument they saluted. You can't write about them. The navy was a great sight, but how they came to let us have a look at them I can't guess. They looked a very superior lot. I would like to have seen the other navies of the world walking behind them. The Lascars were a fine lot of fellows. The tanks were rather naughty. Leeds, I think, or maybe it was Newcastle, got out of line in the Mail, and had to come trotting up all of a tremble with excitement. But they wagged their guns all right at the King."

Do You Eat Snail?

In France where there is a big demand for snails—the daily consumption in Paris alone occasionally reaches fifty tons—the snail farms yield a handsome profit. As many as five hundred thousand "first quality" snails, the price of which in normal times averages a dollar eighty a thousand, can be reared on an acre of land.

They need only be fed once a day preferably in the evening, and though extremely voracious, are by no means fastidious. After a fall of rain, which seems to sharpen their appetite, a bed of one hundred thousand snails will soon demolish a barrow-load of cabbages. They are not fed only on green-stuffs, but on wine dregs or bran soaked in wine, a diet which is supposed to impart a special flavor.

French farmers find a frog pond even more profitable than a snail bed. Good plump frogs realize in the Paris markets from ten to fifty cents a dozen wholesale rate. Some people cook them whole, but as a rule only the frogs' saddles—that is, their hind and under parts—are eaten, these being meaty and delicate in flavor. England is one of the few countries where these delicacies are not appreciated. Frogs are gladly eaten in the United States and Canada, as well as all over the continent. One American firm does an annual turnover of one hundred thousand dollars in frogs; while, according to a report of the United States consul, the province of Quebec benefits to the tune of two hundred thousand dollars per annum by this commodity. One hotel in Toronto alone is said to consume about fifteen hundred pounds of frogs' saddles each season.

The Man Who Banished Corns

Blue-jay was invented by a scientist of distinction. By a man whose lifetime has been spent in the study of surgical dressings.

This is a master's method—correct, complete and efficient. And the millions of people who know it, never think of enduring a corn.

All in One

The first step is to stop the pain. This is done by removing all pressure—by the soft protecting ring marked A.

The next step is to gently cause the corn to disappear. This is done by the remarkable B & B Wax, which no corn can resist.

This bit of wax—marked B—is centered on the corn. It cannot spread. So, unlike old-time methods, it acts on the corn alone.

C is rubber-coated adhesive. This snugly wraps the application, protecting everything.

You apply this Blue-jay in a jiffy. The corn pain stops at once. The wrapping is comfortable, and you forget it.

In two days you remove it and the corn can be lifted out. Only rare corns need a second application.

This is the scientific way, the easy, sure and right way to end corns. You will never return to any wrong method when you try a Blue-jay once. Try it tonight!

AIR MAIL STAMPS.

The air post stamp has entered the sale room, and its fortunes there will be watched very closely by stamp collectors. Mr. Hawker was the first Atlantic air postman. He carried a small mail of about a hundred letters, each one of which was franked with the three-cent Newfoundland stamp duly overprinted to commemorate the occasion. The dramatic salving of the machine made the delivery of the mail possible after the soaked contents of the mailbag had been duly sorted by the General Post Office. These covers with the stamps are already highly prized, not only as mementoes of the event but also on account of their extreme rarity. One of these letters is to be sold in London. I have been shown stamps used for the mail brought over by Captain Alcock. These have an additional surcharge of a dollar on the face of the stamp. Then there are the mails brought over by the R-34. These include parcels and newspapers, but unlike the two previous deliveries they are franked with ordinary U.S.A. stamps. It is quite likely that we shall soon see the universal introduction of stamps for the carriage of mails by air routes. Such

A Diplomatic Failure.

An Oriental potentate was giving a fete, and before him, on a Louis Quinze table, lay a superb watch, the gift of the German Emperor.

"Suddenly the electric lights failed. For a full minute the room was in darkness. Then the lights went up again, and, alas! the splendid jeweled watch had disappeared.

"My good friends," said the host in suave, diplomatic tones, "lights will now be lowered again, and I will expect that the person who took my watch—in order to look at it—will put it back on the table."

In a profound silence the lights once more went out. There was a slight sound, as of metal against wood. The lights went up again, and the potentate discovered that, instead of the watch being returned, a gold cigarette case, the gift of Queen Victoria, had disappeared as well.

At the City Hall.

The Municipal Council held its regular weekly meeting last evening. The Mayor presided and all the Councillors attended. After reading of minutes, etc., the following business was discussed:

Hon. John Anderson, on behalf of the Co-Operative Building Association, asked if Council would permit its Engineer to confer with the Association's Engineer with regard to the lay-out of land for the building of workmen's houses. The Secretary will write Mr. Anderson.

H. Blatch wrote regarding his land near Scott Street, and asked if Council would decide before August 23, as his offer remained open only till that date.

Blackwood & Emerson, on behalf Mrs. C. R. Thompson, wrote regarding the opening of their client's land. A special meeting will be held to discuss these two matters.

The Nfd. Board of Fire Underwriters wrote re Brantford Roofing that it classes as first grade.

A. J. Kavanagh submitted plan of dwelling to be erected on Rocky Lane. Passed.

W. J. Duff asked if he would be permitted to build on Warberry Street. A reply will be sent him.

Mrs. Godden's plan of addition to house, 2411111 Avenue, passed.

Hop Wah, Casey Street, was given permission to put in a new shop-house to be built on Bon-

Street by W. J. Pike, was approved.

S. Cullen submitted plan of dwelling to be erected on Allandale Road; passed.

The City Engineer reported on road work, east and west ends, laying of services and sewer work generally, during the past week.

Regarding obstruction on New Gower Street, it was ordered that the party responsible be ordered to remove the same.

A requisition for 800 feet rubber hose was submitted, and tenders will be asked.

Councillor Brownrigg stated that he was sorry that he felt he had to resign his position as a Councillor, but he considered that he had not been treated with proper consideration at the reception of the Prince of Wales. In this respect he held the Mayor was not to blame.

Councillor Tait followed Councillor Brownrigg, and also resigned his position; he tendered the following letter to the Mayor which was read after he had retired from the meeting:

"I hereby resign my position as 'City Councillor as I can no longer 'serve under your administration.'"

All the Councillors took exception to the last sentence in Councillor Tait's letter and held that the Mayor was entirely blameless in this matter.

After passing the pay rolls and bills the meeting adjourned.

A Water-Cooling and Refreshing Pipe for the Fastidious Smoker

The smoker will welcome the appearance of a pipe which not only cools the smoke before it reaches the pipe stem but purifies it as well. Clarence J. Graham and Joseph A. Harris, of Chicago, Ill., are the inventors.

The secret of the cooling and purifying pipe is the bowl of water situated directly below the bowl which contains the tobacco. A metal tube extends from the tobacco bowl down into the water bowl. At the top of the water bowl is an outlet pipe. By puffing the pipe, smoke is drawn through the metal tube, down through the water and out of the outlet pipe through the stem. Thus all smoke passes through the bowl of water before it reaches the smoker's mouth.
