

IMAGE EVALUATION
TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic Sciences
Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET
WEBSTER, N.Y. 14580
(716) 872-4503

15 28
18 22 20 25

CIHM/ICMH
Microfiche Series.

CIHM/ICMH Collection de microfiches.

Canadian Institute for Historical Microreproductions / Institut canadien de microreproductions historiques

11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21
22
23 24
25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35 36 37 38 39 40 41 42 43 44 45 46 47 48 49
50

© 1985

Technical and Bibliographic Notes/Notes techniques et bibliographiques

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming, are checked below.

L'Institut a microfilmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.

- | | |
|--|--|
| <input type="checkbox"/> Coloured covers/
Couverture de couleur | <input type="checkbox"/> Coloured pages/
Pages de couleur |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Covers damaged/
Couverture endommagée | <input type="checkbox"/> Pages damaged/
Pages endommagées |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Covers restored and/or laminated/
Couverture restaurée et/ou pelliculée | <input type="checkbox"/> Pages restored and/or laminated/
Pages restaurées et/ou pelliculées |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Cover title missing/
Le titre de couverture manque | <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Pages discoloured, stained or foxed/
Pages décolorées, tachetées ou piquées |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Coloured maps/
Cartes géographiques en couleur | <input type="checkbox"/> Pages detached/
Pages détachées |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Coloured ink (i.e. other than blue or black)/
Encre de couleur (i.e. autre que bleue ou noire) | <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Showthrough/
Transparence |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Coloured plates and/or illustrations/
Planches et/ou illustrations en couleur | <input type="checkbox"/> Quality of print varies/
Qualité inégale de l'impression |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Bound with other material/
Relié avec d'autres documents | <input type="checkbox"/> Includes supplementary material/
Comprend du matériel supplémentaire |
| <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Tight binding may cause shadows or distortion along interior margin/
La reliure serrée peut causer de l'ombre ou de la distortion le long de la marge intérieure | <input type="checkbox"/> Only edition available/
Seule édition disponible |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Blank leaves added during restoration may appear within the text. Whenever possible, these have been omitted from filming/
Il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutées
lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans le texte, mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont
pas été filmées. | <input type="checkbox"/> Pages wholly or partially obscured by errata slips, tissues, etc., have been refilmed to ensure the best possible image/
Les pages totalement ou partiellement obscurcies par un feuillet d'errata, une pelure, etc., ont été filmées à nouveau de façon à obtenir la meilleure image possible. |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Additional comments:/
Commentaires supplémentaires: | |

This item is filmed at the reduction ratio checked below/
Ce document est filmé au taux de réduction indiqué ci-dessous.

10X	12X	14X	16X	18X	20X	22X	24X	26X	28X	30X	32X
						✓

The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

Harold Campbell Vaughan Memorial Library
Acadia University

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche sheet contain the symbol → (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ∇ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

Harold Campbell Vaughan Memorial Library
Acadia University

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole → signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ∇ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

errata
to pelure,

on à

15

W

THE NARRATIVE

OF

LIEUTENANT GENERAL

SIR HENRY CLINTON, K. B.

[PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.]

N

SIR

PART O

N

Particul

A

COPIES

LO

REA

Printed for J

THE

8461
1948
7/2/19
N A R A T I V E

TO

GENERAL

SIR HENRY GILBERT

THE

THE NARRATIVE
OF
LIEUTENANT-GENERAL
SIR HENRY CLINTON, K. B.
RELATIVE TO HIS CONDUCT DURING

PART OF HIS COMMAND OF THE KING'S TROOPS IN NORTH AMERICA;

Particularly to that which respects the unfortunate Issue of the Campaign in 1781.

WITH AN APPENDIX,

CONTAINING

COPIES and EXTRACTS of those Parts of his Correspondence with

LORD GEORGE GERMAIN,
EARL CORNWALLIS,
REAR ADMIRAL GRAVES, &c.

Which are referred to therein.

SIXTH EDITION.

LONDON:

Printed for J. DEBRET (Successor to Mr. ALMON) opposite Burlington-house, Piccadilly, 1783.

1c CWK

THE UNITED STATES

OF

POSTAL SERVICE

MR. HENRY CLINTON, JR.

RECEIVED

POST OFFICE

NEW YORK

POST OFFICE NEW YORK

NEW YORK

NEW YORK

NEW YORK

NEW YORK

NEW YORK

NEW YORK

NEW YORK

A-RB E241
.46 C52

NEW YORK

NEW YORK

NEW YORK

NEW YORK

N
SIR
B cond zeal
of th when of fe erron
it; a quen

lc
cwk

THE NARRATIVE
OF
LIEUTENANT-GENERAL
SIR HENRY CLINTON, &c.

BEING conscioꝛs, that during my command in North America, my whole conduct was actuated by the most ardent zeal for the King's service, and the interests of the public, I was exceedingly mortified, when I returned to England, after a service of seven years in that country, to find that erroneous opinions had gone forth respecting it; and that many persons had, in consequence, admitted impressions to my prejudice.

B

dice.

~~die.~~ Anxious, therefore, to explain what had been misinterpreted or misrepresented, (as indeed might well be expected, from the publication of Lord C.'s letter of the 20th of October, without being accompanied by my answer to it) I had proposed taking an opportunity, in the House of Commons, of saying a few words on such parts of my conduct as seemed not to be sufficiently understood: and I flatter myself I should have been able to make it appear, that I acted up to the utmost of my powers, from the beginning to the end of my command; and that none of the misfortunes of the very unfortunate campaign of 1781 can, with the smallest degree of justice, be imputed to me.

But I arrived here so late in the session, that I was advised to defer it; and it was judged that the gracious reception I had just met with from my Sovereign rendered an immediate explanation unnecessary. I was not, however, apprised to what degree the public prejudice had been excited against me, else I should probably have been induced to have taken an earlier opportunity of offering to Parliament what I have to say on the subject. But the late change in public affairs, furnishing so much more important matter for their deliberation, deprived me of the opportunity I thought I should have had: and, as by the present recess it is probable that I may not be able to execute my intentions before a late period, when perhaps peculiar circumstances might force me through delicacy to decline it, I beg leave to lay before the public the following plain Narrative, which will, I trust, remove prejudice and error.
 2 not,

I have much to regret that, when this business was discussed in the House of Lords last session of Parliament, the whole of my correspondence, with the late American Minister, Lieutenant General Earl Cornwallis, and the Admirals commanding on the West-India and American stations; was not produced, or at least such parts thereof as, being necessary to explain my conduct, might have appeared consistently with state policy. Because the letters which compose that correspondence, being written to the moment as events happened, are certainly the most faithful records of my actions and intentions; and are consequently the clearest, fairest, and most unexceptionable testimonies I can adduce in their support. I hope, therefore, I shall stand exculpated from the necessity of the case, for any impropriety there may be in my annexing hereto such of them as I may judge most requisite for that purpose. Three of them indeed will, I presume, be found very material, (Appendix, No. IX.) as they contain my answers and observations upon Lord Cornwallis's letters of the 20th of October and 2d of December, on the subject of the unforpaign in-am sorry

the

public, v
held from

Altho that any reduced that of r
to a hap
the camp
ferently
self it w joined ex ginning

* " I an
the very un pen's,) I hope is, a and exerci
general A

the unfortunate conclusion of the last campaign in the Chesapeak; — which latter I am sorry to observe, were given to the public, while mine in answer were withheld from it; — I hope without design.

Although I never dared promise myself that any exertions of mine, with my very reduced force (nearly one-third less than that of my predecessor) could bring the war to a happy conclusion; yet I confess that the campaign of 1781 terminated very differently from what I once flattered myself it would; as may appear, by the subjoined extracts of letters, written in the beginning of that year, * and which were trans-

* “ I am most exceedingly concerned, my Lord, at the very unfortunate affair of the 17th of January, (Cowpen’s,) I confess I dread the consequences. But my hope is, as it ever will be, in your Lordship’s abilities and exertions. I have much to lament, that Brigadier-general Arnold’s projected move in favour of your transmitted to the Minister. I was led, however, into these hopes, more by the apparent distresses of the enemy than any material successes we had met with.

Lordship’s

The plan I had formed for the campaign of 1781, (upon the expectation of a reinforcement Lordship's operations will have been stopt by the appearance of the French ships. Discontent runs high in Connecticut, &c. In short, my Lord, there seems little wanting to give a mortal stab to rebellion, but a proper reinforcement and a permanent superiority at sea for the next campaign; without which any enterprise depending on water movements must certainly run great risk. Until Colonel Bruce arrives, I am uncertain what reinforcements are intended for this army. The Minister has however assured me, that every possible exertion will be made." — Letter from Sir Henry Clinton to Lord Cornwallis, March 5, 1781.

"I cannot sufficiently express my extreme joy at reading Washington's letter. It is such a description of distress, as may serve to convince, that with a tolerable reinforcement from Europe, to enable your Excellency to determine on an offensive campaign, the year 1781

may

reinforcement dies — an tion should

what I mi
the small
at New-Y

and solid district w they were judged it

even from the enemy
to the Mi particular (Appendi a preferen pendix, M

may, probabl
in America Letter from Parsmouth,

reinforcement from Europe — from the West-Indies — and from the Southward (after operation should cease in that quarter) — added to what I might be able to spare at the time from the small force under my immediate command at New-York, was calculated to make a fair and solid effort in favour of our friends — in a district where I had some reason to believe they were numerous and hearty; and where I judged it might be made with little danger, even from a temporary naval superiority of the enemy. This plan had been suggested to the Minister in the year 1780, and more particularly explained to him in 1781; (Appendix, No. XI.) notwithstanding which a preference was given to another, (Appendix, No. I.) which seemed to be forced may probably prove the glorious period to your command in America, by putting an end to the rebellion." — Letter from Major-general Phillips to Sir H. Clinton, Portsmouth, Virginia, April 16, 1781.

(Appendix,

(Appendix, No. II.) upon me by Lord Cornwallis's quitting the Carolinas, where I had left him in command, and marching into Virginia; a measure, I must say, determined upon without my approbation, and very contrary to my wishes and intentions.—The Minister directed me to support Lord Cornwallis and solid operation in Virginia; the danger of which, without a covering fleet, I had constantly represented to him. He repeatedly and positively promised me a covering fleet; * and when the Admiral

* Extracts from Lord George Germain's letters to Sir Henry Clinton:

April 4, 1781. "The lateness of the season will, I imagine, prevent Mons. De Grasse's undertaking any thing against the King's possessions in the West-Indies. But it is probable, as soon as he has thrown supplies into the several islands, he will proceed to North America, and join the French forces at Rhode-Island, and endeavour to revive the expiring cause of rebellion. But as
Sir

Adm
ment

Sir G
he wil
five h
jury b

Ma bring before force
your v

Jul
will,

execu
three peft t opera

lieve,
and S

preve
opera

Jul
long prife

Admiral arrived with the naval reinforcement from the West-Indies, he was clearly
of

Sir George Rodney's force is little inferior to his, and he will be watchful of his motions, I am not apprehensive he will give him time to do you any material injury before he comes to your succour."

May 2, 1781. " And as Sir George Rodney will bring you three more regiments from the Leeward Islands before the hurricane months, the augmentation of your force must, I should think, be equal to the utmost of your wishes.

July 7, 1781. " The arrival of the reinforcement will, I hope, enable you to proceed immediately in the execution of your purpose, without waiting for the three regiments from the West Indies; for I do not expect they will join you before the season for offensive operations there is over; when, I have reason to believe, the French fleet will push for North America, and Sir George Rodney will certainly follow them, to prevent them from giving you any interruption in your operations.

July 14, 1781. " The purpose of the enemy was long known here, and Sir George Rodney has been apprised of it, and will certainly not lose sight of Monf.

of opinion himself, and of course convinced me, that he had brought that covering fleet. (Appendix, No. III.) Therefore, as Admiral Graves's squadron was acknowledged to be superior to that under Monsieur de Barras, De Grasse. The very proper step you took of transmitting him copies of the letters you had intercepted, must confirm him in the resolution he had taken in consequence of the former intelligence. But as in a matter of so great moment, no precaution should be omitted, or possible contingency unguarded against, extracts of the intercepted letters will be sent to him from hence, and precise instructions given to him to proceed directly to North America, whenever Monf. De Grasse quits the Lewards Islands."
I could

July 24, 1781. "And I trust, that as Sir George Rodney knows De Grasse's destination, and the French acknowledge his ships sail better than theirs, that he will get before him, and be in readiness to receive him when he comes upon the coast."

September 25, 1781. "I trust, before the end of August, Sir Samuel Hood will have been with you, and that after his junction with Admiral Graves our superiority at sea will be preserved."

I could not but suppose that the arrival of Admiral Digby (hourly expected) would give us a most decisive naval superiority.— And here, perhaps, it may not be improper to remark, that though the Minister directs me, by his letters of the 2d of May, and 6th of June, to adopt solid operation in Virginia, he signifies to me his Majesty's approbation of my own plan, in a subsequent letter of the 14th of July, telling me at the same time, that “ he has not the least doubt Lord Cornwallis will have fully seen the reasonableness of it, and has executed it with his wonted ardor, intrepidity, and success.”

Under these circumstances, and with these assurances, I never could have the most distant idea that Mr. Washington had the least hopes of a superior French fleet in the Chesapeake; and I consequently never could suppose that he would venture to go there. But if he should, I was satisfied from the reasons already stated, that I should be able to meet him there with every advantage on my side, by having the command of the waters of that bay — without which he could not possibly feed his army. This opinion has been also since confirmed by a letter from him to Count De Grasse, dated 26th of September, 1781, (No. IV. Appendix) wherein he tells him, if he quits the Chesapeak, the enemy will certainly get possession of it, and he must disband his army.

Had my correspondence been produced, it would have appeared from it, and the returns accompanying it, that instead of seventeen, twenty, nay twenty-four thousand men, which it has been reported I had at New York, (after the very ample reinforcements, as the Minister acknowledges, (No. V. Appendix) which I had sent to the southward) I had not 12,000 effectives, and of these not above 9300 fit for duty, regulars and Provincials. But had I had twice

twice after islands mitted
has b juncti neral
highla
I cou
their
at lea assem
any p
if I h Wass Virgi
as I not unde Ston prop vifea

twice that number, I do not know that, after leaving sufficient garrisons in the islands and posts depending (which it is admitted by all would take 6000) I could, as has been insinuated, have prevented the junction between Mons. Rochambeau and General Washington, which was made in the highlands, at least 50 miles from me; or that I could have made any direct move against their army when joined (consisting then of at least 11,000 men, exclusive of militia, assembled on either side the Hudson) with any prospect of solid advantage from it. Or if I had as many reasons to believe that Mr. Washington would move his army into Virginia without a covering French fleet, as I had to think he would not; I could not have prevented his passing the Hudson under cover of his forts at Verplanks and Stoney Points. Nor (supposing I had boats properly manned) would it have been advisable to have landed at Elizabeth town, in the face of works which he might easily have occupied (as they were only seven miles from his camp at Chatham) without subjecting my army to be beat, en detail. Nor could I, when informed of his march towards the Delaware, have passed an army in time to have made any impresson upon him before he crossed that river. But with my reduced force, any attempt of the sort would have been madness and folly in the extreme.

in

With what might possibly be spared from such a force, nothing could be attempted except against detachments from Mr. Washington's army, or (when reinforced in a small degree) against such of its distant magazines as might occasionally happen to be unguarded. Two of the latter offered, one against Philadelphia, which I certainly should have attempted in July, had Lord Cornwallis spared me any part of 3000 men; but as his Lordship seemed to think he could could eligible force

this d portan
discove
French
Rochar Rhode White
and ste under that t harbou retire t formati
also tha
a great few in that th under
us. F knowle

could not hold the stations we both thought eligible, if he spared me any part of the force with him, I was obliged to relinquish this design. The other, much more important, was against Rhode Island. I had discovered by intercepted letters from all the French Admirals and Generals, that Count Rochambeau's army had marched from Rhode Island to join Mr. Washington at the White Plains; that their battering train and stores for siege were left at Providence under little more than a militia guard; and that their fleet remained in Rhode Island harbour with orders, as soon as repaired, to retire to Boston for security. By private information, which I had at that time, I found also that the works at Rhode Island were in a great measure dismantled, and had only a few invalids and militia to guard them, and that they were both there and at Providence under great apprehensions of a visit from us. From other motives as well as my own knowledge of these posts, I had the strongest reason reason to expect the fullest success to an attempt against them, and I therefore immediately proposed to Admiral Graves a joint expedition for that purpose; which he readily consented to. It was accordingly agreed between us, that it should be undertaken as soon as he could assemble his fleet, and a small reinforcement (which I hourly expected) should arrive from Europe. The reinforcement joined me on the 11th of August, and the Admiral (who had sailed on a cruise) having returned to the coast on the 16th, I immediately renewed my proposal, (Appendix, No. VI.) The Admiral informed me in answer, that he was under the necessity of sending the Robuste to the yard to be refitted, and that he should take the opportunity while that was doing of shifting a mast or two in the Prudente; and when those repairs were accomplished, he would give me timely notice, (Appendix, No. VII.) The ships were not ready on the 28th; Sir Samuel Hood, however, arriving on t troop Admir

that place
that M 25th, Admir
was l import war.
surpri
perior cided
a cour nimou
the or was t Altho
of Ea
witho

on that day, I immediately ordered the troops to be embarked; and going to the Admirals on Long Island, I proposed to them that the expedition should instantly take place: but receiving intelligence that evening that Monsieur de Barras had sailed on the 25th, it was of course stopped. Thus, to the Admirals great mortification and my own, was lost an opportunity of making the most important attempt that had offered the whole war. And early in September, to my great surprise, (for I still considered our fleet as superior) hearing that Mr. Washington was decidedly marching to the southward, I called a council of all the general officers, who unanimously concurred with me in opinion, that the only way to succour Earl Cornwallis was to go to him in the Chesapeak.

Although I had every reason to disapprove of Earl Cornwallis's march into Virginia, without consulting me, (at the risk of engaging me in dangerous operations, for which I was not prepared) yet, as I supposed he acted with at least the approbation of the Minister, I left him as free as air, when he arrived there, to plan and execute according to his discretion; only recommending to him, in case he had none of his own, the plan I had offered to the Minister; which, notwithstanding the opinion given in the letter of July 14, before quoted,* I did not, however, find his Lordship the least inclined to adopt.

D

gaging

* Extract from Lord George Germain's letter to Sir Henry Clinton, July 14, 1781. — "It is with the most unfeigned pleasure I obey his Majesty's commands, in expressing to you his royal approbation of the plan you have adopted for prosecuting the war in the provinces south of the Delaware, and of the succours you have furnished, and the instructions you have given for carrying it into execution. The copies of the very important correspondence which so fortunately fell into your hands, (inclosed in your dispatch) shew the rebel affairs to be almost desperate, and that nothing but the success

adopt ceive dange forced
And
give th

cess of f
and acti pleased object to but that the ampl Chesapea
mand, to
you. I you the me; and
you in th
for distre provinces
when he June, will not the lea
his wonte

adopt. And that letter, which I did not receive till September, found me deeply and dangerously engaged in the operation he had forced me into.

And here, perhaps, it may be proper to give the reasons which induced me to recommend

D 2

cess of some extraordinary enterprize can give vigour and activity to their cause; and I confess I am well pleased that they have fixed upon New York as the object to be attempted, as I have not the least doubt but that the troops you had remaining with you, after the ample reinforcements you so judiciously sent to the Chesapeak, would be fully sufficient, under your command, to repel any force the enemy could bring against you. I cannot close this letter, without repeating to you the very great satisfaction your dispatch has given me; and my most entire and hearty coincidence with you in the plan you have proposed to Lord Cornwallis, for distressing the rebels, and recovering the southern provinces to the King's obedience. And as his Lordship, when he received your letters of the 8th and 11th of June, will have fully seen the reasonableness of it, I have not the least doubt but his Lordship has executed it with his wonted ardor, intrepidity, and success."

mend to Lord Cornwallis to secure a naval station for large ships, if one could be found that was capable of being fortified and maintained against a temporary superiority of the enemy at sea, agreeable to the instructions which I had before given to General Phillips, and which were of course to be now considered as such to his Lordship, (Appendix, No. X.)

Although I ought not to have apprehended that the enemy could have had a superiority at sea, after the assurances I had received from the Minister, I yet always wished to guard against even a possibility of it. Finding, therefore, by Lord Cornwallis's letters, that on his arrival in the Chesapeak, he had no plan of his own to propose, and that he did not incline to follow the one I had offered to his consideration, I recommended the taking a respectable defensive station either at Williamsburg, or York (the latter of which his Lordship had informed me in a letter, dated 26th of May, he was inclined, from the reports which had been made to him, to think well of as a naval station and place of arms) and left his Lordship at liberty to keep all the troops he had in Virginia, amounting to about seven thousand men. But thinking that he might well spare three thousand, I desired he would keep all that were necessary for a respectable defensive, and desultory water movements, and send me of three thousand men all he could. His Lordship misconceiving my intentions, (as will, I trust, be manifest to whoever reads our correspondence) and considering my call for three thousand men as unconditional, tells me that he could not, with the remainder, keep York and Gloucester; and that he should, therefore, repass James-river, and go to the station at Portsmouth; which resolution, I confess, surpris'd me, as he had a little before, in the letter above quoted, represented that post as unhealthy, and requiring an army to defend it. On receipt of his Lordship's letter, I immediately consulted the Admiral, who was of opinion, that a naval station for large ships was absolutely necessary, and recommended Hampton-road. Therefore, in my letter of the 11th of July, I directed his Lordship to examine and fortify Old Point Comfort, which the Admiral and I thought would cover that road, and in which there had been a fort for that purpose for fifty years, though probably then in ruins. But his Lordship informing me, in his letter of the 27th of July, that it was the opinion of the captains of the navy, the engineers, and himself, that any works erected on Old Point Comfort, " might be easily destroyed by a fleet, and would not answer the purpose; and that therefore, according to the spirit of my orders,

as

“ orders, he should seize York and Gloucester, as the only harbour in which he could hope to be able to give effectual protection to line of battle ships ;” I supposed his Lordship had entirely approved of those posts; and that after examining them with the officers of the King’s ships and his engineer, he would let me know if he should see reason to alter his opinion; and consequently I did not object to the choice he had made; nor indeed had I ever cause to do so, before I saw his letter of the 11th of October, which I did not receive until the 16th, the day before he offered to capitulate, when for the first time I found his Lordship thought unfavourably of them. For on the 16th of August, his Lordship told me that he should apply to the Commodore for a ship to send me a state of things at York, and bring him back my commands; by which I was of course to understand that his Lordship would send me his own and the Commodore’s opinion panion of York and Gloucester, after his engineer had made a most exact survey, which he told me he was employed in, and of which I expected a copy, as his Lordship had before sent me of the one taken of Old Point Comfort. But not receiving these from his Lordship, I naturally concluded that the post of York and Gloucester was such as his Lordship and the Commodore approved; especially, as his Lordship, in his letter of the 22d of August, was pleased to say, “the engineer has finished his survey and examination of this place, (York) and has proposed his plan for fortifying it; which appearing judicious, I have approved, and directed to be executed.” And in the same letter it was farther implied, that through the exertion of the troops, the works would probably be tolerably complete in about six weeks from that period: and from his saying also in the same letter, “I will not venture to “ take

“ take any step that might retard the estab-“ blishing this post. But I request that your “ Excellency will please to decide whether “ it is most important for your plans, that a “ detachment of a thousand or twelve hun“ dred men (which I think I can spare from “ every other purpose but that of labour) “ should be sent to you from hence, or that the “ whole of the troops here should continue “ to be employed in expediting the works,”) I I naturally concluded that his Lordship had not only sufficient to complete his works by the time he mentioned, but that he could spare that number from the defence of them afterwards. His Lordship's letter of the 29th of September moreover told me, “ I have no “ doubt, if relief arrives in any reasonable “ time, that both York and Gloucester will “ be in possession of his Majesty's troops ;”
and again, that of the 3d of October, “ My “ works are in a better state of defence than

“ we had reason to hope.” In short, I think his Lordship appears to have implied in all his letters, (except that of the 17th of September, the day he heard from Lieutenant Conway of the navy, that Monf. De Grasse, by the junction of Monsieur de Barras, had thirty-five or thirty-six sail of the line) that he could hold out as long as his provisions lasted — which was, by his Lordship’s own calculation, to the end of October at least.

From all these circumstances, I had flattered myself, that the works at York would have been tolerably complete by the 9th of October, the day Mr. Washington opened his batteries against them: and from the opinion given me by certain officers of rank, who had lately come from Lord Cornwallis at York, I was under no apprehensions for his Lordship before the latter end of that month; as I could not conceive that the enemy could possibly bring against him such

such a powerful battering train as would demolish his defences (such as I had reason to hope they would be) in so short a space of time as nine or ten days.

Although I never gave Lord Cornwallis assurances of the exertions of the navy before my letter of the 24th of September, when I did it in consequence of a council of war, composed of flag and general officers; I certainly never gave his Lordship the least reason to suppose they would not be made; as I always took it for granted, before Admiral Graves's letter to me of the 9th of September, that our fleet was superior to that of the enemy. Nor, indeed, did I know before I received Lord Cornwallis's letter of the 17th, (which was not until the 23d of September) that the enemy had thirty-six sail of the line, or that Monsieur de Barras had not already joined Monsieur de Grasse before the action of the 5th of September. But even against this superiority, great as it was, the Admirals were clearly of opinion, that a joint attempt should be made by us to succour the fleet and army in the Chesapeak. I certainly, therefore, never could have hinted to his Lordship that their exertions would not be made.

The whole of this matter then may, I think, be summed up as follows:

Lord Cornwallis's march into Virginia, without consulting his Commander in Chief, forced us into solid operation in that province. Being there, as his Lordship could not subsist his army without having a place of arms to cover his magazines, &c. &c. &c. it became absolutely necessary to fix on some healthy and respectable station, that could be made secure against a temporary superiority of the enemy at sea; and York and Gloucester seem to have been originally thought of by Lord Cornwallis, and approved by me for that purpose. But by his Lordship's misconceiving my orders, he quitted the Neck of York, and consequently relinrelinquished every idea of occupying those posts soon afterwards, the Admiral thinking a naval station for large ships absolutely necessary, and recommending Hampton Road, I directed Lord Cornwallis to examine and fortify Old Point Comfort in James River; but his Lordship not approving of that station, made choice of York and Gloucester.

I perfectly agree with Lord Cornwallis, that to abandon his posts, after he had once fixed himself, (although by doing so he might save part of his army) would have been disgraceful, nay, perhaps fatal to our future prospects of establishment in the Chesapeake, when such a measure should be authorised by a covering fleet. But even that misfortune, great as it may be represented, would have been preferable to the one which happened; and therefore I told his Lordship, in a conversation I had with him before I sent his letter of the 20th of October to be printed at New York, I had conceived hopes hopes, that between the time of the French fleet's arriving in the Chesapeak, and his receiving information from me that Sir Samuel Hood had joined Mr. Graves, which was not until the 13th of September, or between that time and the junction of Mr. Washington with the Marquis De la Fayette, when his Lordship heard from Lieutenant Conway of the navy, that the enemy were thirty-six sail of the line, he would have tried to escape with part of his army to the southward; a step which certainly would have been justifiable, although in the conversation alluded to, his Lordship did not seem to think it would, unless I had given him assurances that the navy could not attempt to succour him; which assurances, however, I certainly could not possibly have given him.

If, therefore, Lord Cornwallis's letter of the 20th of October, giving an account of the unfortunate conclusion of the campaign, by the surrender of York town, (Appendix,

No.

No. V
to im cester
in pro
I had ever
that till t
late;
rance
my l whic
till t
foeve
attac
Mr.
was fuad
are Lor part
an

No. VIII.) could ever have been understood to imply that the posts of York and Gloucester were not his Lordship's own choice, in preference to Old Point Comfort, which I had recommended to him; or that I had ever received information from his Lordship, that the ground at either was unfavourable, till the day before he had offered to capitulate; or that I had ever given him any assurances of the exertions of the navy, before my letter to him of the 24th of September, which he acknowledges he did not receive till the 29th; or that any assurances whatsoever given by me could have prevented his attacking the Marquis De la Fayette before Mr. Washington joined that General, which was on the 27th of September; I am persuaded it will appear that those implications are not founded on any orders I gave his Lordship, and cannot be supported by any part of our correspondence. And as I took an opportunity of telling his Lordship the same,

fame, in a letter I ſent him before he failed from New-York, dated the 2d and 10th of December (which letter, however, did not appear when this part of our correſpondence was produced before the Houſe of Lords) I cannot doubt his Lordſhip is convinced that what I therein aſſerted is right.

Lord Cornwallis was pleaſed to tell me that his letter of the 20th of October was written under great agitation of mind, and in a great hurry. No man could poſſibly feel for his Lordſhip, and his dreadful ſituation, more than I did. And I will venture to ſay, no man could be more anxious, or would have gone greater lengths to ſuccour him. Nor will this, I truſt, be doubted, when it is recollected that the propoſal firſt came from me for embarking ſix thouſand men for that purpoſe on board an inferior fleet of twenty-ſeven ſail of the line, including two fifties, to thirty-ſix; and thereby putting the fate of the American war on the joint exertions of the fleet and army, to relieve that noble Lord and his gallant corps.

I

of

I have to lament that these exertions could not have been made in time. All the Admirals seemed of opinion at the Council of War of the 24th September, that there was every reason to hope that the fleet would be ready to sail on the 5th of October. The troops intended for the expedition had been for some time in readiness to embark, and did actually do so early in October. It seemed also to be the general opinion of the Admirals, that the enemy, although superior in number, could not obstruct the channel to York-river, so as to prevent the passage of our fleet, much less both passages of the Chesapeak. Could the troops, which embarked under my immediate command, have been put on shore on the Gloucester side, a junction with the part of Lord Cornallis's corps on that side

F

was

was easy : but if they had been put on shore, even in James River, although a junction with his Lordship in York would have been scarcely practicable, it might have been made in some other part ; or at least such diversions might have been made by the troops under my command as might have saved part of his Lordship's corps.

I must, therefore, repeat that I lament, and ever shall, that those exertions could not have been made in time. Because, from the professional merit of the Admirals who were to conduct us, and from the zeal which appeared so conspicuous when I proposed the move to them ; and which, from their example was communicated to all ranks in the fleet ; and with which, it is to be presumed, those of the army kept fully equal pace ; I have every reason to think we should have had most complete success.

But

But at the same time that truth compels me to impute our misfortunes ultimately to the want of a covering fleet in the Chesapeake, I think it right to declare, that, as a land officer, I do not feel myself a competent judge of the propriety and practicability or naval operations. Nor can I, as a servant of the State, entrusted with an important, but partial command, presume to enter into the counsels of Ministers; who, from a more elevated station, survey and balance the whole system of the campaign, and the general safety and welfare of the empire.*

F 2

Upon

* " I am, however, aware of the difficulties Administration must necessarily be exposed to, from the variety of important matters which demand its attention. And far be it from me, my Lord, to impute the delays I have experienced to any of the King's Ministers; but I cannot avoid lamenting that they do happen, and I tremble for the fatal consequences which may possibly some time or other ensue.—Sir Henry Clinton's letter to Lord George Germain, dated April 30, 1781.

But

Upon the whole, I am persuaded, that had I been left to my own plans, and a proper confidence had been earlier reposed in me, the campaign of 1781 would not probably have ended unfortunately. But though that apparent want of confidence was at last removed,* and the fullest approbation I could wish

* “ The uneasiness you express on a certain occasion, must have ceased long before this reaches you, and, I trust, in full time to prevent your resigning the command to Earl Cornwallis. The message I sent you by Lieutenant-colonel Bruce was taken in writing, to avoid any mistakes: for, as I was conscious of your having every reason to be satisfied with the protection shewn to you by the King, and with the constant desire of his Ministers to give you all possible support, I could not help regretting that there should have been the least appearance of that want of confidence between us, which might prejudice the public service. Your explanation upon that subject is perfectly satisfactory; and you may depend upon finding every attention on my part to those requisitions which you may have occasion to make. The variety of services now carrying on in different parts of the wi

my late Lo
nia,
ed.

wor
I h mu Min
lette
very
I fe
mifi clud
tra&

the v fome depar
with with State
Sir H

wish given to the operations I had projected, my knowledge of the change happened too late to extricate me from the consequences of Lord Cornwallis's ill-fated march into Virginia, and the orders they had probably occasioned. Foreseeing many of the evils which would result from this fatal move the instant I heard of it, I immediately at the time communicated my apprehensions to the American Minister. (Appendix, No. XII.) And as my letter to him of the 18th of July, 1781, speaks very fully on this and other matters, of which I fear the public has been hitherto equally misinformed, I shall take the liberty to conclude this Narrative with the following extract from it: (Appendix, No. XIII.)

“ I can

the world must account for the disappointments you sometimes suffer. But you may rest assured, that every department of Government is anxious to furnish you with the most effectual means of carrying on the war with honour to yourself, and with advantage to the State. — Extract from Lord George Germain's Letter to Sir Henry Clinton, dated July 7th, 1781.

“ I can say little more to your Lordship's sanguine hopes of the speedy reduction of the southern provinces, than to lament that the present state of the war there does not altogether promise so flattering an event. Many untoward incidents, of which your Lordship was not apprised, have thrown us too far back to be able to recover very soon, even what we have lately lost there. For if (as I have often before suggested) the good-will of the inhabitants is absolutely requisite to retain a country, after we have conquered it; I fear it will be some time before we can recover the confidence of those in Carolina, as their past sufferings will of course make them cautious of publicly forwarding the King's interests before there is the strongest certainty of his army being in a condition to support them. I shall, therefore, most cordially join with your Lordship, in condemning the bad policy of taking possession of places at one time, and abandoning doning them at another; and in the opinion that the war should be conducted upon a permanent and settled plan of conquest, by securing and preserving what has been recovered. But if these maxims have been, on any occasion, deviated from, in the just progress of the war; I must, in justice to myself declare, that it has never been warranted by my orders; except, only in the case of Rhode-island. This, I doubt not, will appear from the instructions I gave to General Leslie, and the other General Officers, whom I sent on expeditions to the Chesapeak. For if Lord Cornwallis made a desultory move into North Carolina, and, without a force sufficient to protect, or provisions to support them, invited by proclamation, the Loyalists to join him, and afterwards found it necessary to quit the friendly districts of that province, before he could have time to give them a fair trial, I am persuaded your Lordship will acknowledge

he

he did not act under my instructions :--- nor were his Lordship's retreat to Wilmington, and subsequent move from thence to Virginia, in consequence of my orders; on the contrary, as I foresaw all the unhappy consequences of them, I should certainly have endeavoured to have stopt him, could I have known his intentions in proper time. But though his Lordship's movements, (which it must be confessed have been as rapid as your Lordship expected) have not to my sincere concern been successfully decisive; I am convinced he is, as I hope we all are, impressed with the absolute necessity of vigorous exertions in the service of his country at the present crisis. If mine, however, have not been equal to my inclinations, I have little doubt they will be found to be at least equal to my powers.

“ I shall now, my Lord beg leave to conclude with the strongest assurances, that no man can be more fervently desirous than I am

am to see an honourable end put to this most burthenfome war; and if I remain in the command, that no endeavours of mine shall be wanting to execute, in the fullest manner, the King's pleasure and commands. Of the 10,000 men I solicited, only 4000 were even promised; and no portion of these, except a few recruits, has yet joined this part of the army. Your Lordship's last letters, however, give me hopes, that three British battalions and two thousand six hundred German troops may be immediately expected. If all these arrive, I shall then be able, at a proper season, to reinforce the Chesapeak corps very considerably; and if a reinforcement does not likewise come to the French armament already here, such operations may be carried on as may perhaps produce some advantages in the course of the Winter. But if our reinforcement does not arrive, and the French should receive theirs, I think we shall have every thing to apprehend.

G

Before

Before I close, however, I beg leave to say a word or two in explanation of two observations, in the Commissioners of Accounts Seventh Report; in order to obviate any implied censure, they may be supposed to point against me as Commander in Chief of the army in North America.

The Commissioners are pleased to say, “ It appears that the number of the forces decreased every year, from 1778, but the issue for the extraordinary services of that army greatly increased, during the same period.”

And again, “ In the account of the issues to the officers in the four departments, we find that the warrants issued to the Quarter-master’s-general, since the 16th July, 1780, and to the Barrack-master’s-general since the 29th June, 1780, and to the Commissaries-general, since the 25th of May, 1778, have been all temporary, for sums on account; and that no final war“ rant

" rant has been granted since those several
 " periods. So that these sums have been " issued, without even the ceremony of a
 " quarterly abstract, and the confidential re" liance on the officer, that his vouchers are
 " forth-coming."

I arrived in London many days before the Commissioners of Accounts delivered in their Seventh Report to the House of Commons.
 Had those Gentlemen called upon me, as they did on Sir William Howe, and Lord Cornwallis ; had they examined certain officers of the different departments, who arrived in England at the time I did, and who announced themselves to them ; and had they read all the Reports of the different Boards of General Officers and Magistrates, that had been appointed by me at New York, to enquire into the expenditure of public money, (all which Reports had been sent to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury many months before) I am persuaded that their

Report would not have appeared on the table of the House of Commons in the shape it has done. For when they were informed (as they would have been by the means just stated) that all the rum purchased for the supply of the army during the whole period of my command, was paid for in America by my warrants, whereas before then it used to be paid for in England; that considerable sums of money were paid on my warrants for expences incurred during the command of my predecessor, which could not be brought to account sooner; that provisions to a very considerable amount were purchased in America, and paid for in America on my warrants, for the supply of the army, which might otherwise have been exposed to the greatest distress; all which together amounted to nearly 1,500,000l. and that the increase of posts, during my command, at Savannah, Charles-Town, Cape Fear, Portsmouth, Penobscot, &c. requiring each their respective establishment, added of course to the extraordinaries of my army; and that, besides these, and many others which I could enumerate, the peculiar circumstances of my command exposed me to many expences unknown to my predecessor; it is presumed, those Gentlemen would have admitted, that the increase of the issues for the extraordinary services of the army under my command, was accounted for. This matter, however, went, by my desire, through a very full and formal investigation, in August 1781, before a Board of General Officers and Magistrates (of which Lieutenant-general Robertson was President) under the title of a Comparative View of Expences incurred, from the 31st December, 1775, to the 16th of May, 1778 (the time of Sir William Howe's command and of what was paid by me, between the 26th of May 1778, and the 31st of December 1780. Which produced the following Report from that Board.

“ The

“ The great national expence in the “ first period of Sir William Howe’s com“ mand, arose from the whole navy, and “ a very numerous fleet of transports, be“ ing employed in attending the move“ ments of the army; no part of which “ appears in Sir William Howe’s warrants.

“ The expence of the Quarter-master-“ general, Barrack-master-general, and En“ gineer departments, were necessarily small, “ while the troops were on board ships, or “ had their supplies from transports.

“ During part of the first period, the “ great article of expence, rum, was pro“ vided for by a contract made in Eng“ land, and paid for there. Whereas, du“ ring the second period, the rum was pur“ chased by the Commissary-general, and “ paid for by the Commander in Chief’s “ warrants. A very large quantity of pro“ visions purchased also, during the latter “ period, swells the amount of the warrants.

“ But

“
“ in “ of “ tv “ pa “ li “ by T mitt
was coun
men.
acco
W allud
warr perio
above
to th had empl differ

“ But what destroys a possibility of drawing any just conclusion from a comparison of the amount of the warrants in these two periods, arises from this; that a great part of the expence incurred by Sir William Howe, was paid by warrants granted by Sir Henry Clinton.”

This Report having been regularly transmitted to the Treasury, I must suppose it was laid before the Commissioners of Accounts. Had it been read by those Gentlemen, it is presumable it would have, at least, accompanied theirs.

With regard to the second observation alluded to, respecting my not granting final warrants to certain departments from certain periods; if the Commissioners had read all the above papers, I think it would have occurred to them; that as a Commissary of Accounts had been commissioned, and was actually employed in auditing the accounts of the different departments, I could not, with pre-

propriety, grant final warrants to any of the departments upon their quarterly abstracts (as had been before practised) until their accounts had been first audited and certified by the Commissary.

As to the mode of supply which I found established, when I succeeded to the command of the army in North America, and which I understood had been approved by Government, I certainly could not, in prudence, have made any alterations or reduction in it, as long as I had offensive operation in view. The instant, however, that I received orders to place the army upon a strict defensive, I proposed such a reduction as could take place. And when I obtained his Majesty's permission to resign the command, I recommended it to General Robertson, who was appointed to succeed me.

“H. CLINTON.”

APPENDIX.

A P P E N D I X.

N U M B E R I.

Extract of a Letter from Lord George Germain to Sir Henry Clinton, dated May 2, 1781.

“CONCEIVING therefore so highly as I do of the importance of the Southern provinces, and of the vast advantages which must attend the prosecution of the war upon the present plan of extending our conquests from south to north; it was a great mortification to me to find, by your instructions to Major-General Phillips, that it appeared to be your intention that only a part of the troops he carried with him should remain in the Chesapeake;

ny of y ab-) und and found

com-
a, and ved by in prureduc-
opera-er, that upon a duction obtained
he com-eral Ro-ced me.

T O N.”

ENDIX.

peak ; and that he and General Arnold should return to New-York, leaving only a sufficient force to serve for garrisons in the posts they might establish in Virginia. Your ideas, therefore, of the importance of recovering that province appearing to be so different from mine, I thought it proper to ask the advice of his Majesty's other servants upon the subject ; and their opinions concurring entirely with mine, it has been submitted to the King ; and I am commanded by his Majesty to acquaint you that the recovery of the Southern Provinces and the prosecution of the war, by pushing our conquests from south to north, is to be considered as the chief and principal object for the employment of all the forces under your command, which can be spared from the defence of the places in his Majesty's possession, until it is accomplished, &c.

“ The three regiments from Ireland, and the British recruits that went with them, are,
I trust,

A P P E N D I X.

51

I trust, well on their way by this time to Charles-Town; and as Sir George Rodney will bring you three more regiments from the Leeward Islands before the hurricane months, the augmentation of your force must, I should think, be equal to the utmost of your wishes.

N U M B E R II.

Extract of a Letter from Lord George Germain to Sir Henry Clinton, dated June 6, 1781.

“ I SHALL therefore only observe in addition to all I have hitherto written upon the subject, that I am well pleased to find Lord Cornwallis's opinion entirely coincides with mine of the great importance of pushing the war on the side of Virginia with all the force that can be spared, until that province is reduced.”

H 2

NUMBER

NUMBER III.

Copy of a Letter from Rear-Admiral Sir S. Hood to Sir H. Clinton, dated off Cape Henry, August 25, 1781.

“S I R,

“HEREWITH you will receive a duplicate of the letter I had the honour to write you by Lieut. Delanoe of the Active brig, in case any misfortune should have befallen her in returning to New-York. I am now steering for Cape Henry, in order to examine the Chesapeake. From thence I shall proceed to the Capes of the Delaware; and not seeing, or hearing any thing of De Grasse, or any detachment of ships he might have sent upon this coast, shall then make the best of my way off Sandy Hook. This I have communicated to Rear-Admiral Graves, in order that he may determine my anchoring or not, as the King's service may require.

“ I have

“ I have the honour to send you my line of battle, by which you will see the number and force of his Majesty's squadron under my command; and, I trust, you will think it equal, fully to defeat any designs of the enemy, let De Grasse bring or send what ships he may, in aid to those under De Barras.

“ I have the honour to be, &c.

(Signed)

“ SAM. HOOD.”

N U M B E R I V .

Copy of a Letter from General Washington to Count De Grasse, dated Williamsburg, September 26, 1781.

“ I AM unable to describe to your Excellency the painful anxiety under which I have laboured since the reception of the letter you did me the honour to write me of the 23d instant. The motions of the naval force under your command, which your Excellency says may possibly happen, since the information communicated communicated to you by the Baron de Clozen, obliges me to point out the consequences that may follow; and warmly to urge a perseverance in the plan agreed upon between us. Permit me, in the first place, to repeat to your Excellency, that the attempt upon York, under the protection of your shipping, is as certain of success as a superior force and a superiority of measures can render any military operation; that the duration of the siege may be exactly ascertained; and that the capture of the British army is a matter so important in itself, and in its consequences, that it must greatly tend to bring an end to the war, and put our allied arms in certain possession of the most inestimable advantages.

“ If your Excellency quits the Bay, an access is open to relieve York, of which the enemy will instantly avail themselves. The consequences of this will be not only the disgrace of abandoning a design on which are founded the fairest hopes of the allied forces, after a prodigious expence, fatigue, and exertions; but the probable disbanding of the whole army; for the present seat of war being such as absolutely precludes the use of waggons, from the great number of large rivers which intersect the country; there will be a total want of provisions, unless this inconvenience is remedied by water carriage. This province has been so exhausted by the ravages of the enemy, and by the support already given to our forces, that subsistence must be drawn from a distance; and that can be done only by a fleet superior in the Bay.

“ I earnestly beg your Excellency would consider, that if, by moving your fleet from the situation agreed on, we lose the present opportunity, we shall never hereafter have it in our power to strike so decisive a stroke, that the British will labour without intermission to fortify a place so useful to their shipping; and that then the period of an honourable peace will be farther distant than ever.

“ The

“ The confidence I have in your Excellency’s manly spirit and naval talents leaves me no doubt that the consideration of the consequences that must follow your departure from the Bay will determine you to use all possible means for the good of the common cause. From the assurances of the most expert sailors, I am persuaded that your Excellency may take such a position in the Bay as to leave nothing to be apprehended from an attempt of the English fleet; that this position will at the same time facilitate the operations of the siege, secure the transportation of our provisions by water, and accelerate our approaches by landing our heavy artillery and warlike necessaries in York River almost close to our trenches.

“ The force said to have arrived under Admiral Digby, as the news comes from the British themselves, may not only be exaggerated, but perhaps absolutely false; but supposing it to be true, their whole force united cannot be such as to give them any hopes of success

cess i tion
we ag
cable,
adopt
to the land
our ar
off th
fight, ting i

“
pres
schem
if you the w
to reli preven
the Ba

“ T his flee main

cess in the attacking your fleet. If the position for your ships to lie at an anchor, which we agreed upon, has since appeared impracticable, there is still another measure may be adopted; which, though much inferior as to the security and facility it will give to our land operations, may still be of advantage to our affairs. The measure, I mean, is to cruise off the Bay, so as to keep the Capes always in sight, and to prevent any English vessels getting in.

“ Whatever plan you may adopt, I am to press your Excellency to persevere in the scheme so happily concerted between us; but if you should find insurmountable obstacles in the way; let me ultimately beg of you not to relinquish the last mentioned alternative of preventing all vessels from the enemy entering the Bay of Chesapeake.

“ The British Admiral may manœuvre his fleet, and endeavour to draw you from the main object we have in view; but I can never

I

never believe, that he will seriously wish to bring on a general action with a fleet, whose force, I will answer for it, is superior to the most exaggerated accounts we have of theirs. Passed experience has taught them not to hazard themselves with equal numbers; and has drawn from them, though unwillingly, the most respectful opinions of their enemy.

“ Permit me to add that the absence of your fleet from the Bay may frustrate our design upon the garrison at York. For in the present situation of matters, Lord Cornwallis might evacuate the place with the loss of his artillery, baggage, and a few men, sacrifices; which would be highly justifiable from the desire of saving the body of the army.

“ The Marquis de la Fayette, who does me the honour to carry this letter to your Excellency, will explain to you better than any other person, or than I can do by letter, many particulars of our present position. Your Excellency is acquainted with his candour and talents,

talen
I ha fear
fea.
in a

Extr
ter

17

“
your val f prote inter tirely plan milit

talents, which entitles him to your confidence. I have ordered him not to pass the Cape for fear of accident, in case you should be at sea. If this be so, he will inclose this dispatch in a letter from himself,

“ I have the honour, &c.

“ G. WASHINGTON.”

N U M B E R V.

Extract from Lord George Germain's Letter to Sir Henry Clinton, dated October 12, 1781.

“ I T is a great satisfaction to me to find your ideas of the importance of securing a naval station in the Chesapeake capable of giving protection to the King's ships, appointed to intercept the navigation of that Bay, so entirely coincided with my own ; and that the plan you had concerted for conducting the military operations in that quarter corresponds with what I had suggested in my former letters to you on that subject. I trust, therefore, that Lord Cornwallis will retain the whole of the troops you so very properly spared for the service in the Chesapeak; or if he has sent you any part, that you will return them to him. And as soon as the heats are abated, transport a strong detachment to Baltimore, &c.

“The provision you made for the southern service was certainly most ample. And I have always considered and spoke of it as a circumstance highly to your honour; and as an evidence of your being actuated by the purest zeal for the public service. And though I lament exceedingly that from a concurrence of untoward events, the success was not equal to the sanguine expectations I had entertained, I never imputed any part of the disappointment to a deficiency in your supplies.”

NUM-

Extr.

Re

17

“

the I

they lity

think

in a

have offer

temp

Capt

ment

Extr.

R

17

“

und

NUMBER VI.

Extract from Sir Henry Clinton's Letter to Rear Admiral Graves, dated August 16, 1781.

“ I CANNOT say I credit the reports of the French being upon the coast. Should they prove false, and there was little probability of their coming for a week or ten days, I think those could not be better employed than in a visit to Rhode-Island. The recruits I have lately received enable me to make this offer, whenever you think it prudent to attempt it. If you determine, I request that Captain Duncan may direct the water-movements of the army.”

Extract from Sir Henry Clinton's Letter to Rear-Admiral Graves, dated August 18, 1781.

“ WHENEVER, Sir, you think the fleet under your command is in number and state
2 equal equal to the undertaking, and you will give me twenty-four hours notice, every thing shall be immediately embarked ; and I shall with pleasure accompany you myself on it."

NUMBER VII.

Extracts from Rear-Admiral Graves's Letters to Sir H. Clinton, dated 18 and 21 August, 1781.

" IN answer to your proposition, I can only assure you by letter, what I had the honour to declare in person, that I am ready to concur with your Excellency in any enterprise where you found a probability of success ; and that I would risk the squadron whenever you thought it adviseable to risk the army.

" The Robuste is so leaky, I am forced to send her to the yard for reparation ; and I suspect that her guns and heavy furniture must be taken out to enable the shipwrights to examine examined Whilft

one of you w

Aug
will be ment
of her fident,
all the

"
timely possib
dron v
that a

Extra
H.

rob

"
your

examine as much of her bottom as possible. Whilst that is doing, the Prudent will change one of her masts, if not two. By this state you will see our naval capacity.

Aug. 21, 1781. How soon the Robuste will be ready is yet impossible to form a judgment upon, as we cannot yet learn the extent of her defects. The Prudent will, I am confident, be ready in much less time; and so will all the other ships, I have not a doubt.

“Your Excellency may rest assured that timely notice shall be given, and as early as possible to determine upon the day the squadron will be fit to act; for I would not wish that a single day should be lost.”

NUMBER VIII.

Extract from Lord Cornwallis's Letter to Sir H. Clinton. York Town, Virginia, 20 October, 1781.

“I HAVE the mortification to inform your Excellency, that I have been forced to give

give up the posts of York and Gloucester, and to surrender the troops under my command, by capitulation, on the 19th instant, as prisoners of war to the combined forces of America and France.

“ I never saw this post in a favourable light. But, when I found I was to be attacked in it, in so unprepared a state, by so powerful an army and artillery, nothing but the hopes of relief would have induced me to attempt its defence. For I would either have endeavoured to escape to New York, by rapid marches from the Gloucester side, immediately on the arrival of General Washington's troops at Williamsburg; or I would, notwithstanding the disparity of numbers, have attacked them in the open field, where it might have been just possible that Fortune would have favoured the gallantry of the handful of troops under my command. But, being assured by your Excellency's letters that every possible means would be tried, by the navy and army, to relieve us, I could not think myself at liberty to venture on either of those desperate attempts. Therefore, after remaining two days in a strong position, in front of this place, in hopes of being attacked, upon observing that the enemy were taking measures which could not fail of turning my left flank in a short time; and receiving, the second evening, your letter of the 24th September, informing me, that the relief would sail about the 5th of October, I withdrew within the works on the night of the 29th of September, hoping, by the labour and firmness of the troops, to protract the defence until you could arrive. Every thing was to be expected from the firmness of the troops. But every disadvantage attended their labour; as the works were to be continued under the enemy's fire; and our stock of entrenching-tools, which did not much exceed four hundred when we began to work, in the latter end of August, was now much diminished.
and

“ A successful defence, however, in our situation, was perhaps impossible; for the place could only be reckoned an intrenched camp, subject in most places to enfilade; and the ground in general so disadvantageous, that nothing but the necessity of fortifying it as a post to protect the navy could have induced any person to erect works upon it.”

Copy of a Letter from Sir Henry Clinton to Earl Cornwallis, dated November 30, 1781.

[This letter was not produced in the House of Lords.]

“ My Lord,

“ AFTER the conversation I had with your Lordship before I sent your letter to be published, in which we seemed so perfectly to agree, I must beg your Lordship's pardon for again troubling you on the subject. But being informed, perhaps officiously, that some people here suppose there are passages in that letter which convey an idea that you had been compelled by my orders to take the post of York, (though it was not your own preference;) that you had represented the defects of the ground; and were detained there contrary to your own judgment; and likewise that I had promised the exertions of the navy before my letter of the 24th of September: I am persuaded your Lordship will readily excuse my requesting a more formal avowal of your sentiments, lest I should have then mistaken them. Because, if that should unfortunately be the case, I may perhaps be under the necessity of taking measures to obviate your letter being viewed in the same light in England.
that

“ I have the honour, &c.

“ H. CLINTON.”

NUMBER IX.

Copy of Earl Cornwallis's Letter to Sir Henry Clinton, dated New York, 2d December, 1781.

[This Letter was read in the House of Lords.]

“SIR,

“YESTERDAY afternoon I was honoured with your Excellency's letter of the 30th of November.

“I do not recollect that any conversation passed between us the other day, before the publication of my letter, relative to my reasons for taking possession of the posts of York and Gloucester. But, in my answers to your dispatches, dated the 8th and 11th of July, directing me so positively to possess a harbour in the Chesapeake for line of battle ships, your Excellency will see, that, after finding that works on Point Comfort could not protect a naval force in Hampton Road, I thought that I acted in strict obedience to your orders by taking possession of those posts. I thought it unnecessary to enter into a minute detail of the disadvantages of the ground, either on my first examination of it in the month of June, or on my return to it in August; because, on the first occasion, as I have already had the honour of explaining to your Excellency, I did not, after seeing it, entertain for a moment an idea of occupying it, not thinking myself at liberty, by the instructions under which I then acted, to detain the greater part of the force in Virginia for the purpose of securing a harbour for ships of the line; and, on my return to it in August, I thought it then became my duty to make the best of it I could, having no other harbour to propose in its place.

“ In regard to the promise of the exertions of the navy previous to your letter of the 24th of September, I can only repeat what I had the honour of saying to your Excellency in the conversation to which you allude; that, without any particular engagement for the navy before that date, all your letters held out uniformly hopes of relief; and that I had no reason, from any of them, to suppose that you had lost sight of the possibility of effecting it. And that, under those hopes, after serious reflection, I did not think that it would have been justifiable in me to abandon those posts, with our numerous sick, artillery, stores, and shipping; or to risk an action, which, in all probability, would, in its consequences, have precipitated the loss of them.
the

“ My letter from York, dated the 20th of October, was written under great agitation of mind and in great hurry, being constantly interrupted by numbers of people coming upon business or ceremony. But my intention in writing that letter was to explain the motives that influenced my own conduct, and to nar-

rate

rate
that

Cop

C

of

[T

“

lette

stan

and

the

ters

refe

they

Lor

mon

rate the incidents that preceded the extremity that forced us to surrender.

“ I have the honour, &c.

“ CORNWALLIS.”

NUMBER IX.

Copy of a Letter from Sir Henry Clinton to Earl Cornwallis, dated New York, 2d and 10th of December, 1781.

[This Letter was not read in the House of Lords.]

“ My Lord,

“ AS your Lordship is pleased, in your letter of this day, to revert to the circumstance of your quitting Williamsburg Neck, and repassing the James River, so contrary to the intentions I wished to express in my letters of the 11th and 15th of June, and those referred to by them, and which I thought they would have clearly explained. Your Lordship will, I hope, forgive me, if I once more repeat that I am of opinion, if those letters letters had been properly understood by your Lordship, you would at least have hesitated before you adopted that measure. For I humbly presume it will appear, upon a re-perusal of them, that it was my desire to recommend to your Lordship the taking a healthy defensive station, either at Williamsburg or York; and, after keeping what troops you might want for the ample defence of such a post, and desultory movements by water, to send me such a proportion of the corps (mentioned in a list) as you could spare, taking them in the succession they are there placed. Your Lordship, on the contrary, understood these as conveying a positive order to send me three thousand men, (by which you say your force would have been reduced to about two thousand four hundred rank and file fit for duty; having, it is presumed, above 1500 sick;) and was pleased to tell me, in your answer, that you could not, consistent with my plans, make safe defensive posts posts at York and Gloucester, (both of which would be necessary for the protection of shipping ;) and that you should immediately re-pass James River, and take measures for complying with my requisition.

“ I own, my Lord, that my opinion of the obvious meaning of the letters referred to, continues still the same ; and I am exceedingly sorry to find, by the letter you have now honoured me with, that it differs so widely from your Lordship’s. It is plain, however, we cannot both be in the right.

“ My letter of the 11th of July directs your Lordship to fortify Old Point Comfort, in the mouth of James River, with the intention of securing Hampton Road, which the Admiral recommended as the best naval station, and requested I would occupy. But your Lordship’s letter of the 27th of July informs me, you had examined Old Point Comfort, with the officers of the navy, and the engineers, and that you were all of opinion, a post

L

there

there would not answer the purpose; and that you should, therefore, in compliance with the spirit of my orders, seize York and Gloucester, being the only harbour in which you could hope to be able to give effectual protection to line of battle ships. Supposing, therefore, of course, that your Lordship approved, in every respect, of York and Gloucester, from the preference you had thus given them to the port I had recommended, I did not oppose the choice you had made; having never received the least hint from your Lordship that the ground of York was unfavourable, or liable to be enfiladed till after you had capitulated.

“With respect to your Lordship’s having been influenced in your conduct, by the hopes of relief, (which you say was uniformly held out to you in all my letters) your Lordship cannot be insensible, that the possibility of effecting it must have entirely depended upon the exertions of the navy; which, as I was not authorised to promise before the 24th of September, I am persuaded your Lordship will readily acknowledge, that if your letter of the 20th October implies I had done so before that period, the implication cannot be supported by any thing I wrote previous to my letter of that date, which you received on the 29th.

not

“ As, therefore, my letters of the 2d and 6th of September, which promise only my own exertions, did not reach your Lordship before the 13th and 14th of that month, and you did not before then know of Sir Samuel Hood's arrival, or of Mr. Graves's having more than seven sail of the line to combat Monsieur De Grasse's force, which on the 29th of August you had heard consisted of at least twenty-five sail of the line; your Lordship consequently could have no hopes of relief before that time. And with respect to your escape to New-York, immediately on the arrival of General Washington's troops at

Williamsburg, which your letter of the 20th of October implies you were prevented from undertaking, by the receipt of mine of the 24th of September ; I must beg leave to observe, that if it had been ever practicable after the time your Lordship mentions (which I am free to own I do not think it was) it must have been between that period and the time of the enemy's force appearing before your lines. It may, therefore, be presumed, you could not have been prevented by any thing I said in that letter, as you did not receive it until after the latter event took place. But I readily admit, my Lord, that none of my letters could give you the least reason to suppose that an attempt would not be made to succour you.

“ Your Lordship will, I am persuaded, also forgive me, if I again take notice of the too positive manner in which you are pleased to speak of the opinion I gave you about the sailing of the fleet ; as my words were, “ there is

“ is e “ her my l shoul “ pos “ det “ an “ un “ a d W
 of w
 of, I
 to m
 that
 to th neral
 the f more guff
 sent,
 the a
 ever,

“ is every reason to hope we shall start from “ hence about the 5th of October.” And in my letter of the next day, for fear that should appear too positive, I say, “ It is sup“ posed the necessary repairs of the fleet will “ detain us here to the 5th of next month ;
“ and your Lordship must be sensible that “ unforeseen accidents may lengthen it out
“ a day or two longer.”

With regard to entrenching tools, the want of which your Lordship so much complains of, I can only say, that by the returns made to me by the Adjutant-general, it appears that two thousand five hundred had been sent to the Chesapeak by the Engineer, since General Arnold's expedition, inclusive; and that the first moment a requisition was made for more, (which was not before the 23d of August) I ordered an additional supply to be sent, which were prevented from going by the arrival of the French fleet. I own, however, that I was not at that time very uneasy

on

on this score, as I supposed it possible for your Lordship to have collected a sufficiency from the neighbouring plantations any time before the investiture was begun.

“ December 10. — I had wrote thus far, my Lord, immediately after the receipt of your Lordship’s letter of the 2d instant. But considering that it was possible you might not have adverted to the implications which your letter of the 20th of October may be thought to bear, from the great agitation of mind and hurry in which you tell me it was written, I was unwilling to give you at that time more trouble on the subject; — in the honest hope that your Lordship’s candour will induce you most formally to disavow your having any such intentions by writing that letter, in case you find, on your arrival in England, that the passages of it (which I have taken notice of) are understood as I suspect they may be. And I therefore intended to have sent this letter to a friend, to be delivered to you in the 2d

London
to do I am o
ship fl

(S)

“ P of you where • conve
• before
• to m
• posts to do it

“ It passed But wh mention
Old Poi
disappro

London; but upon considering your letter of the 2d instant, (which I have had more leisure to do since my public dispatches were closed) I am of opinion, that it is properer your Lordship should receive my answer to it here.

“ I have the honour, &c.

(Signed)

“ H. CLINTON.

“ P. S. Having forgot to speak to the part of your Lordship's letter of the 2d instant, where you say, ‘ I do not recollect that any conversation passed between us the other day, before the publication of my letter, relative to my reasons for taking possession of the posts of York and Gloucester,’ I beg leave to do it here.

“ It is true, my Lord, no conversation passed from your Lordship on that subject. But when, in the conversation alluded to, I mentioned that I had directed you to examine Old Point Comfort, and fortify it, but that, disapproving of that post, you had seized York, and

and that therefore York was your Lordship's preference; as you were pleased not to make me any answer, I took it for granted you agreed with me.

“ H. CLINTON.”

“ Lieutenant-general
“ Earl Cornwallis.”

NUMBER IX.

Extract of a Letter from Sir Henry Clinton to Lord George Germain, dated December 3, 1781.

[This Letter was not read in the House of Lords.]

“ YOUR Lordship will have received in my dispatch, No. 146, the copies of Lord Cornwallis's letter to me of the 20th of October, his capitulation for the posts of York and Gloucester, and the other papers which accompanied it. But your Lordship will perceive, that I declined making any remarks upon his letter until I saw his Lordship; knowing that my whole correspondence with him being in your Lordship's possession, every thing which wanted explanation could readily be cleared up. His Lordship having arrived here on the 19th ult. no, I have had several conversations with him; and I have now the honour to inclose for your Lordship's information, the copy of a letter I wrote to him on the subject, with his Lordship's answer.

be

“I perceive by Lord Cornwallis's letter of the 20th of October, that his opinion of the post of York is very unfavourable; and he since tells me, that he does not think the enemy will be able to make a strong one of it. Had his Lordship, however, not been so very decided in his sentiments of the post, all the accounts I had ever before received of the situation and defensibility of the ground would, I confess, have inclined me to have thought well of it.”

M

N U M.

NUMBER IX.

Copy of a Letter from Sir Henry Clinton to Lord George Germain, dated December 6, 1781.

[This Letter was not read in the House of Lords.]

“ My Lord,

“ I have so often had the honour of delivering the same sentiments to your Lordship, that I must beg your pardon for again troubling you with the repetition, that I have ever been of opinion that operation should not be undertaken in the Chesapeake, without having a naval superiority in these seas: and to the want of it, and perhaps to that alone, are we to impute our late misfortune in that quarter. Therefore, when I did myself the honour of sending you a copy of Lord Cornwallis's letter to me of the 20th of October, I did not think it necessary to trouble your Lordship with any remarks upon some passages of it, which might seem to imply, that his Lordship had been forced into a bad post by my orders, notwithstanding he had represented its defects, and had been induced to remain there contrary to his judgment, by the positive assurances I had given him of relief; especially as your Lordship was possessed of our correspondence, which could in the fullest manner invalidate every implication of that sort, and I wished to have an opportunity of speaking to Lord Cornwallis, before I said any thing on so delicate a subject.

“ Since Lord Cornwallis’s arrival here, I have had a good deal of conversation with his Lordship upon this business, by which, and by the answer he has sent me to a letter I wrote him thereon, (copies of which are inclosed) it appears, that his Lordship admits this was not the case. But as Lord Cornwallis’s disavowal is not so explicit and direct in his letter as I could wish, and I think justice to my character requires, I beg your Lordship’s attention to the following observations;

M 2

which

which I hope the anxiety I must naturally feel on this occasion, will plead my excuse for troubling you with; though they may not be necessary to vindicate me with your Lordship, who is already so competent to judge.

“ I am persuaded that it will appear by my letters to Lord Cornwallis of the 11th and 15th of June, and those referred to by them, that I recommended his taking a healthy, defensive station, either at Williamsburg, or York; and desired that, after keeping what troops he might want for its most ample defence and desultory movements by water, his Lordship would send me such a proportion of the corps (mentioned in a list,) as he could spare, taking them in the succession they are there placed. But his Lordship, on the contrary, understanding that these letters conveyed a positive order to send me three thousand men, (by which he says his force would have been reduced to about two

two the duty, h sick) to not, c defensi
which
of ship
repals compl therefo miscon
consul the su being Chesaf
quisite
to be his L mine James
positi

two thousand four hundred rank and file fit for duty, having probably at that time a numerous sick) told me in his answer, that he could not, consistent with my plans, make safe defensive posts at York and Gloucester, (both which would be necessary for the protection of shipping) and that he should immediately repair James River, and take measures for complying with my requisition. Finding, therefore, that his Lordship had so entirely misconceived my intentions, I immediately consulted with Rear-Admiral Graves upon the subject of his letter; and the Admiral being of opinion, that a naval station in Chesapeak for large ships was absolutely requisite, and that Hampton Road appeared to be the fittest for the purpose I desired his Lordship, at the Admiral's request, to examine Old Point Comfort, in the mouth of James River, and fortify it, upon the supposition that a work there would secure that harbour;

harbour; and if his Lordship thought a post at York necessary to cover Old Point Comfort, he was at liberty to take that also. This order was sent to Lord Cornwallis in my letter of the 11th of July, and his Lordship's answer to it is dated the 27th; wherein he informs me, that having examined Old Point Comfort, with the Captains of the King's ships and the Engineers, and being all of opinion a post there would not answer the purpose, he should in compliance with the spirit of my orders, seize York and Gloucester, being the only harbour in which he could hope to be able to give effectual protection to line of battle ships. Copies of these letters are inclosed for your Lordship to refer to; and I trust it will appear from them, that the post at York was in this instance entirely his Lordship's choice. But never having received an representation from his Lordship, by which I could have the least disadvan

the

stated i and, sup
ship ha commen
and Glo laying tain the sible, a Lordsh
ship ha bad on stand th tifying
well of “ W
been in
of relie formly Lordsh

the least conception he thought the ground disadvantageous and liable to enfilade, (as stated in his letter of the 20th of October,) and, supposing, from the preference his Lordship had thus given it to the one I had recommended, that he fully approved of York and Gloucester, I own I did not oppose his laying hold of them, as I could not entertain the smallest doubt of their being defensible, and such a post as I had told his Lordship I wanted. And, indeed, if his Lordship had not now informed me that it was a bad one, the eagerness with which I understand the French have since seized and are fortifying it, would incline me still to think well of it.

“ With respect to his Lordship having been influenced in his conduct by the hopes of relief, (which he is pleased to say I uniformly held out to him in all my letters) his Lordship could not be insensible that the possibility

IMAGE EVALUATION
TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic Sciences
Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET
WEBSTER, N.Y. 14580
(716) 872-4503

1.5 1.8 2.0 2.2 2.5
2.8 3.2 3.6 4.0

5.0 5.6 6.3 7.1 8.0
9.0 10.0

sibility of effecting it must have entirely depended upon the exertions of the fleet, which, as I was not authorized to promise him before the Council of War held on the 24th of September, I am persuaded that the implication in his Lordship's letter that I had done so before that period, cannot be supported (as indeed his Lordship now seems to acknowledge) by any thing I wrote to him, previous to my letter of that date, which he received on the 29th. As, therefore, my letters of the 2d and 6th of September, which promise only my own exertions, did not reach his Lordship before the 13th and 14th of that month, and he did not before then know of Sir S. Hood's arrival, or that Admiral Graves had more than seven sail of the line to combat Monsieur de Grasse's force, whose arrival, it appears from his Lordship's letters, he knew of on the 29th of August, and supposed it to be twenty-five sail of the line, his his Lordship consequently did not receive from me any hopes of relief before that time.

“ With regard to his Lordship’s escape to New York, immediately on the arrival of General Washington’s troops at Williamsburg, which his letter of the 20th of October implies he was prevented from undertaking by the receipt of mine of the 24th of Sept. I cannot help being of opinion, that a retreat, after Mr. Washington joined, was impracticable, and that it was at no time to be effected to the northward, for reasons which I gave his Lordship. But had it been ever possible, after the time his Lordship mentions, it must, I think, have been between that period and the time of the enemy’s force presenting itself before the lines of York; and it is consequently presumable, his Lordship was not prevented by any thing I said in that letter, as he acknowledges he did not receive it until after the latter event took place. But I readily admit, my Lord, that none of my letters could give his Lordship the least reason to suppose that an attempt would not be made to succour him, though, I must confess, I think his Lordship speaks in his letter rather too positively of the opinion I gave in mine, as to the time of the fleet's sailing. My words being, 'There is every reason to hope we shall start from hence about the 5th of October.' And lest even that should be thought positive, I the next day told him, 'that unforeseen accidents may lengthen it out a day or two longer.'

“ The complaint his Lordship makes of the want of intrenching tools, I can only answer, by saying, that it appears from the Adjutant-general's returns to me, that two thousand five hundred had been sent by the engineer to the Chesapeak with the different expeditions, since the one commanded by General Arnold inclusive; and the first moment a requisition was made for more, (which was not before his Lordship's letter of the 22d of August) I ordered an additional supply to be sent, which were prevented from going by the arrival of the French fleet. But I must own, my Lord, that I was not then very uneasy on this score, as I flattered myself it was possible for his Lordship to have collected what he wanted from the neighbouring plantations any time before the investiture was begun.

“ No man, my Lord, can feel more sensibly than I did for the unhappy situation of Lord Cornwallis and his gallant army, whose meritorious conduct, spirit, and zeal, on all occasions, must heighten our anxiety and concern for their present fate; and therefore as his Lordship is pleased to tell me that his letter of the 20th of October was written under great agitation of mind and in great hurry, which might possibly have prevented his adverting to the implications which it may be thought to bear, I cannot, at present, wish to give his Lordship more trouble on the subject, although his answer of the 2d instant is not so explicitly satisfactory as I expected it would have been; for, if the passages in that letter, which I have taken notice of, should be understood in Europe in any respect to my prejudice, I cannot doubt his Lordship will have candour enough most formally to disavow his having any such intentions. But if his Lordship, contrary to my expectation, shall not be inclined to do so, I must be obliged, though reluctantly, most earnestly to request your Lordship to render me that justice, (which I am persuaded you think I deserve) by publishing this letter.

“ I have the honour, &c.

“ H. CLINTON.”

N U M-

NUMBER X.

Extract from Sir H. Clinton's Instructions to Major-General Phillips, dated March 10, 1781.

“IF the Admiral disapproving of Portsmouth, and requiring a fortified station for large ships in the Chesapeak, should propose York Town, or Old Point Comfort, if possession of either can be acquired and maintained without great risk or loss, you are at liberty to take possession thereof. But if the objections are such as you think forcible, you must, after stating those objections, decline it till solid operations take place in the Chesapeak.”

Extract

Extract from the Substance of Conversations held with General Phillips, sent to that General Officer for his Guidance.

“ BUT if the heights of York, and those on the Gloucester side, cannot be so well and so soon fortified as to render that post hors d'insult before the enemy can move a force, &c. against it, it may not be adviseable to attempt it. In that case something may possibly be done at Old Point Comfort to cover large ships lying in Hampton road, which is reckoned a good one. If neither can be secured, we must content ourselves with keeping the Chesapeak, with frigates and other armed vessels, which will always find security against a superior naval force in Elizabeth River.”

NUM-

NUMBER XI.

Extract from Sir Henry Clinton's Letters to Lord George Germain.

OCTOBER 30, 1780. " I shall in a few days send to Charles-town all the recruits belonging to the southern army, which will be about eight hundred. And then, including the corps under General Leslie, Lord Cornwallis will have full 11306 effective rank and file under his orders.

April 5th, 1781. " After the reduction of Charles-town, Lord Cornwallis informed me, that he thought the force I left with him fully competent to the defence of South, and most probably the reduction of North Carolina. I had, therefore, at that time no other intention (threatened as we were, by the expected arrival of a French fleet and army in Rhode-Island) than to send an expedition into Chesapeak, merely by way of making a diversion diversion in his Lordship's favour, until more solid operation might take place. Which I was in hopes that adequate reinforcements from Europe would have enabled me to undertake early in the present year. Events, however, notwithstanding the very glorious exertions which were made at Camden, altered Lord Cornwallis's situation so much as to make it necessary for him to call the corps I had sent to Chesapeak with General Leslie, (and which I had put under his Lordship's orders) to a nearer co-operation. Being, therefore, still desirous to secure a post in that Bay to cover the King's frigates which might be acting there; and at the same time wishing to give Lord Cornwallis every assistance in my power; I sent thither another detachment, under the orders of Brigadier-general Arnold; which, though not so considerable as the former, met with the fullest success, and will, I doubt not, have greatly aided the movements of the army in Carolina.

lina. General Washington having detached a body of troops to the southward, and the French having embarked in their fleet another from their army at Rhode-island, with an apparent intention of interrupting our operations in Virginia, and the Carolinas; I was induced to send to the Chesapeak another expedition (drawn principally from the elite of my army) under Major-general Phillips. All these several detachments, your Lordship will perceive are acting, either with or in favour of Lord Cornwallis. But, as General Washington's letter to Mr. Harrison (a copy of which your Lordship will see amongst the intercepted letters inclosed) intimates, that there will be opposed to his Lordship, above two thousand Continentals more than General Green had with him before; I am led to hope, that when his Lordship has established himself in North-Carolina, a very considerable portion of his army may be spared to assist in carrying into execution

O

execution such farther operations as Lord Cornwallis may have to propose; or the whole or such part as shall be found practicable of those I had designed, and accordingly explained to Major-general Phillips, in some conversations I had with him before his departure.

“ If an attempt upon the forts in the highlands shall not, on mature deliberation, be thought adviseable, and nothing else offers in this quarter; I shall probably reinforce Major-general Phillips, and direct him to carry on such operations as may most effectually favour those of Lord Cornwallis, until some plan can be determined on for the campaign. For, until I know his Lordship's success, the force he can, in consequence of it, spare from the Carolinas, and the certainty of the arrival of the six regiments intended to reinforce us, it will be impossible to decide finally upon it. Your Lordship will, however, see by the inclosed opinions, what were the operations I had had planned for the ensuing campaign, upon the supposition, that Lord Cornwallis succeeded in the Carolinas, and was able to spare a considerable force from thence. With the ten thousand men I requested, I should not have had a doubt of success. But in my present reduced state and prospects I dare not flatter myself with any. And if the French should still be reinforced, your Lordship will, I am persuaded, judge our situation to be even critical. For, with regard to our efforts in the Chesapeak, your Lordship knows how much their success and even the safety of the armament there, will depend upon our having a decided naval superiority in these seas. And I, therefore, cannot doubt that every precaution will be taken, to give me, at least, timely notice of the contrary being likely to happen; as my ignorance of such an event might be most fatal in its consequences.

“ The reinforcement I asked for was only what I judged to be barely adequate to the services required; and I most sincerely wish it had been possible to have sent it in the full extent of numbers, and in the time I requested. However, the present reduced state of General Washington, the little probability there is, I hope, of an augmentation to the French armament, and the certainty there is, I likewise hope, of the six British regiments and one thousand recruits joining me in a short time, together, with the expectation I have of Lord Cornwallis’s success in Carolina enabling him to send me a considerable reinforcement from thence, render the appearances of my situation less critical. And I shall, therefore, only add, my Lord, that while the King does me the honour to trust me with the command of this army, I will employ it to the utmost of my poor abilities, for the promoting his service;—taking the liberty, however, to present

(as

(as I think it my duty) what advantages may be obtained by an additional force, and what evils may be apprehended from the want of a sufficient one.

April 30, 1781. " Your Lordship will have seen in the paper I had the honour to send you in my last dispatch, what force I judged would be requisite for this service. Not less, my Lord, than 10,000 men rank and file, fit for duty; indeed I wish they could be more. But the inclosed returns will shew your Lordship, that after leaving these posts to their present garrisons, and leaving 1000 men in the post in Elizabeth River (supposing it may not be found necessary to occupy another station) I shall not have quite 5000 men for it, unless the three battalions expected from the West Indies arrive in proper time and condition for service, or Lord Cornwallis should be able to spare from his defensive in Carolina (when he determines upon it) a considerable part of the army under his immediate command; which, however, his Lordship's letter of the 10th instant, gives me no hopes of, or indeed that he will even spare me the three regiments coming from Ireland.
of

“ With these five thousand, however, my Lord, I may possibly determine to risk, even by desultory movements, the trial of this experiment, should I find the report given me of our friends in that country properly founded. If it succeeds as fully as our sanguine friends would persuade us to hope, we may possibly be able to maintain ourselves there with a small force; but if we are in a situation to give the experiment a fair trial, and it then fails, I shall, I confess, have little hopes afterwards of re-establishing order on this continent; which I am free to own I think can never be effected without the cordial assistance of numerous friends, &c.”

Inclosed

In
extra for G
“
ton l
of o ratio place whic
imm Lord
from have ceive
have sidera
the o serve of his tain a Euro

Inclosed in the above letter the following extracts from Sir Henry Clinton's letters to Major General Phillips.

April 26, 1781.

“ Lord Cornwallis's arrival at Wilmington has considerably changed the complexion of our affairs to the southward ; and all operations to the northward must probably give place to those in favour of his Lordship, which at present appear to require more immediate attention. I know nothing of his Lordship's situation, but what I have learnt from his letter to me of the 10th, which you have read. I had great hopes, before I received this letter, that his Lordship would have been in a condition to spare me a considerable part of his army from Carolina for the operations in Chesapeak ; but you will observe from it, that instead of sending any part of his present force thither, he proposes to detain a part of the reinforcement coming from Europe for his more southern operations, even though though they should be defensive. I shall, therefore, take the opinions of the general officers near me, upon the present state of our affairs, and afterwards send you such a reinforcement from this army, as we may judge can be done with tolerable security to this post, at least while we remain superior at sea.

April 30, 1781. To the same. " If Lord Cornwallis proposes no operation to you soon (that is, before the month of June) and you see none that will operate for him directly, I think the best indirect one in his favour will be what you and General Arnold have proposed to me in No. 10 of your joint letter of the 18th instant. The only risk you run is from a temporary superiority of the enemy at sea; it is, however, an important move, and ought, in my opinion, to be tried, even with some risk. Give me timely information of your intended move, and if possible I will follow you into — with such a small reinforcement as I can at the time spare.

" If

“ If the next packet does not satisfy me in — I shall probably retire and leave the command to Lord Cornwallis ; to whom it will be my advice to try the only experiment that in my opinion can operate, if the one in Carolina has failed. For as to Virginia, I know none which can reduce that province in one campaign.

“ As you seemed to think, before you received Lord Cornwallis’s letter, that all direct operation in favour of his Lordship would cease by the end of May, &c, pray let me receive General Arnold’s, and your opinion as soon as possible ; I confess I am not sanguine ; but if the experiment can be tried without any other risk than from the enemy’s superiority at sea, I should wish to do it.

“ Should Lord Cornwallis determine on a defensive in the Carolinas, he surely cannot want any of the European reinforcement, and will, of course, send it to you, and all such other as shall arrive ; thus reinforced, if

P

after

“ If

after leaving a sufficient garrison in Elizabeth River, you can proceed to — I think we shall be in force to give this a fair trial; and I may leave you in the command there, unless things should take a more favourable turn in the Carolinas, and Lord Cornwallis's presence there be no longer necessary. For until they do, I should imagine he will not quit them.

N. B. These two letters, with other dispatches, fell into Lord Cornwallis's hands on General Phillips's death, and were opened by his Lordship; and the expedition therein proposed recommended to his consideration.

N U M B E R XII.

Extracts from Sir Henry Clinton's Letters to Lord George Germain.

May 20, 1781.

“ BUT should Lord Cornwallis persist in his intention of joining Major-general Phillips, as mentioned in his letter to that General

neral

neral Officer, I shall be under some apprehensions for every part of South Carolina, except Charles-town, and even for Georgia, unless the speedy arrival of the reinforcement expected from Europe, may enable the officer, commanding in South Carolina, to take post in force in some healthy station in the back country.

“ May 22. Notwithstanding the purport of these letters, I am yet in hopes, from Lord Cornwallis’s letter to me of the 24th, that his Lordship will not persist in attempting a junction with Major-general Phillips, as I am apprehensive it may be attended with some risk, not only to his own corps, but to that of General Phillips, should that General Officer not have been joined in time by the reinforcement I have sent him. And I even have my doubts whether his Lordship’s march to the northward will draw after him, as he expects, the rebel General Green; who, I fear, will endeavour either to invest Camden, or, by stationing himself between that place and Charles-town, render Lord Rawdon's situation very hazardous. I am therefore induced to flatter myself, that Lord Cornwallis, when he hears of Lord Rawdon's success against Green, will rather march into South Carolina, either by the direct route of Cross Creek and Camden, or by that of George-town; or even by embarkation, though he should be obliged to leave his cavalry behind until vessels can be sent for them, than attempt the proposed junction with General Phillips in the way he mentions; which I must freely own appears to me, for the reasons I have stated, not only dangerous to both corps in the attempt, but replete with the worst consequences to our southern Provinces in their present state."

NUMBER XIII.

Extracts from Sir Henry Clinton's Letters to Lord George Germain.

July 18, 1781. "The extracts from my correspondence with Earl Cornwallis, which I have had the honour to transmit from time to time to your Lordship, will shew, that I left in Carolina a very fair proportion of my army, and such as his Lordship thought sufficient to secure South, and recover North Carolina. With what was left for me to act with in this quarter, I took the field immediately upon my arrival here. General Leslie's expedition to the Chesapeak took place afterwards; and some unfortunate events in Carolina calling for still farther reinforcement and co-operation, soon reduced this part of my army to a defensive, almost as low in numbers as Sir William Howe left me in 1777. If our

have

have not answered your Lordship's expectations, it cannot, I am certain, be imputed either to the smallness of the numbers I left there, or the tardiness or scantiness with which I have since supplied the exigencies of that service. Though I am strongly impressed with the importance of recovering Virginia, I fear the entire reduction of so populous a province is not to be expected from an operation solely there; unless our friends in it were more numerous, and were heartily inclined to assist us not only in conquering, but in keeping it.

July 25. "No man, my Lord, laments more sincerely than I do, the long continuance of the westerly winds, which prevented the sailing of the Warwick's convoy; and I hope your Lordship will pardon me for again repeating, that had the reinforcement failed as early as was promised, and the three battalions not been detained in the West Indies, I should perhaps perhaps by this time have made such movements as would have obliged the enemy to be apprehensive for their own possessions, instead of meditating the attack which they now threaten against this post."

August 9. "I am entirely of your Lordship's sentiments with respect to Lord Cornwallis having done as much in North Carolina as could have been effected with his force. But I have to lament the causes which reduced it so low in number; and that his Lordship was induced to persist in his plan, after it became obvious that he was not able to establish himself there, and support and arm the Loyalists, which were the objects of his march into the heart of that province."

From Lord Cornwallis's former letters, I had every reason to suppose he thought himself in sufficient strength to command the success he hoped for. Had his Lordship, however, upon Lieutenant-colonel Tarleton's misfortune, called upon me for a reinforcement, or

or had I even known it in time, I am persuaded your Lordship will do me the justice to acknowledge, that it was absolutely out of my power to assist him more than I did; especially when it is considered, that at this moment his Lordship has acting with him, and in the different posts under his command, nineteen British, eight German, and fourteen Provincial battalions, besides detachments from four British battalions, and Iagers, artillery and cavalry; whilst in my present threatened situation, I have (through my earnest desire to support his operations) left myself only eight British, eleven German, and four Provincial battalions, besides artillery and cavalry, for those in this quarter.

THE END.

Print

C

Docu

befor

the A

A ne

Si

his. C

Troc

A

actio

VISO

Squa

Lord

Pric

B

coun

new

with

A

teers

Briti

A

subje

lunt

A

Pric

A

men

And

A

Civ

on S

T

at a fem

give

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Printed for J. DEBRETT, (Successor to Mr. ALMON) opposite Burlington-House, Piccadilly.

GEN. BURGOYNE'S STATE of his EXPEDITION from CANADA, with all the authentic Documents, and many Circumstances not made public before. Written by Himself. Illustrated with six Plans of the Action, the Country, &c. finely engraved and coloured. A new Edition, in Octavo. Price 6s. in Boards.

SIR WILLIAM HOWE'S NARRATIVE, relative to his Conduct during his late Command of the King's Troops in North America. Third Edition. Price 3s.

A Candid and Impartial NARRATIVE of the Transactions of the Fleet under the Command of LORD VISCOUNT HOWE, from the Arrival of the Toulon Squadron, on the Coast of America, to the Time of his Lordship's Departure for England. Second Edition. Price 1s. 6d.

BLAKE'S REMARKS on Commodore Johnstone's Account of his Engagement with Monsieur de Suffrein, a new Edition; to which is prefixed a Plan of the Harbour, with the Soundings, &c. drawn on the Spot. Price 1s.

A LETTER to the First Belfast Company of Volunteers, in the Province of Ulster. By a Member of the British Parliament. Third Edition. Price 1s. 6d.

A LETTER to Lord Viscount Beauchamp, upon the subject of his Letter to the First Belfast Company of Volunteers in the Province of Ulster. Price 1s.

A WORD at PARTING; to the Earl of Shelburne
Price 1s.

AN INQUIRY into the Manners, Taste, and Amusements, of the two last Centuries in England. By John Andrews, LL. D. Price 2s. 6d. sewed.

AN ANSWER to the Disquisition on Government and Civil Liberty, in a Letter to the Author of Disquisitions on Several Subjects. Price 1s.

THE SPEECH of the Right Hon. Charles James Fox, at a General Meeting of the Electors of Westminster assembled in Westminster-Hall, July 17, 1782, in which are given the Reasons for withdrawing Himself from the Cabinet;

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

binet; also an Account of all the Proceedings on that Day. Taken in Short Hand, by Mr. Blanchard. Illustrated with an elegant and correct Likeness of the Right Hon. Mr. Fox. Price 1s.

A LETTER to the Earl of Shelburne, on the Subject of Mr. Secretary Townshend's Letter to the Chairman of the India Company. Price 6d.

A Collection of STATE PAPERS, relative to the First Acknowledgement of the Independency of the United States of North America, by their High Mightinesses the States General of the United Netherlands. Price 2s.

A SERIOUS ADDRESS to the Electors of Great Britain, on the Subject of Short Parliaments, and an equal Representation. Price 6d.

The REMEMBRANCER, or Impartial Repository of Public Events. Published monthly, Price 1s. each number.

The War in America suggested the utility of a periodical Collection of the best Accounts of every important public Transaction. The Plan of this Work is, to select from all the public Prints, the best Account of every material public Event; and at the end of every Volume, to give a copious Index. The Work commenced in June 1775. Every authentic Paper, whether published in England or America, by the British Ministry, or the American Congress; the Letters of the several commanding Officers; Addresses, Resolutions, of the various Committees, Conventions, the Continental Congress, &c. &c. are all carefully inserted in it; together, with many interesting Papers upon other Subjects. The Price of the sixteen Volumes, half bound and lettered, is 5l. 5s.

The PARLIAMENTARY REGISTER, No. I. and II. of the present Session, and 59th and 60th from the last General Election, containing a complete History of the Proceedings of both Houses of Parliament, to the Christmas Recess. This Work contains all Letters, Papers, &c. laid upon the Table of either House for the Perusal of the

the M length Bills,

Th
ber 1
bound Th
in 8 v

A
on the price
LU

A FOR
tion,
A
the I Repe
&c.

A
for t Tabl

A
of th Janu
Fleet

C

Ame
Payn
the I Ame

T
the Bill

A Intro
price

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

the Members; all remarkable and interesting Evidence at length, and authentic; Papers of Accounts, Protests, Bills, Petitions, &c. &c.

Of whom may be had,

The last Parliament, from the General Election, in November 1774, to the Dissolution in 1780, in 17 vol. half-bound and lettered, price Six Guineas.

The First and Second Sessions of the present Parliament, in 8 vol. half-bound and lettered, price 3l. 2s.

A SERIOUS ADDRESS to the People of England, on the intended REFORMATION of PARLIAMENT, price 1s.

LUCUBRATIONS during a short Recess, by ———, Esq. Member of Parliament for the County of ———; a new Edition, price 1s. 6d.

A REVIEW of Mrs. SIDDONS and Mrs. CRAWFORD, in the Character of BELVIDERA; third Edition, price 1s. 6d.

ADDRESS to the Right Hon. Henry Grattan, from the Independent Dublin Volunteers, relative to the simple Repeal and the recent Interference of the Earl of Mansfield, &c. &c. price 1s.

A LETTER to RICHARD HILL, Esq. Member for the County of Salop: Author of the Sky-Rocket, Tables Turned, &c. by a Freeholder, price 1s.

A SEAMAN'S REMARKS on the BRITISH Ships of the Line, from the 1st of January 1756, to the 1st of January 1782, with some occasional Observations on the Fleets of the House of Bourbon, price 6d.

COMMON SENSE; addressed to the Inhabitants of America, on a Variety of interesting Subjects. By Thomas Payne, M. A. of the University of Pennsylvania, author of the Letter to the Abbé Raynal, on the Affairs of North America.

The EARL of ABINGDON'S Two late Speeches in the HOUSE of LORDS, with his Lordship's celebrated Bill on the Occasion, price 6d.

An ESSAY on the NATURE of a LOAN, being an Introduction to the Knowledge of the Public Accounts, price 6d.

On

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

On the DEBT of the NATION, compared with its Revenue; and the Impossibility of carrying on the War without public Oeconomy, price 2s.

ORIGINAL Minutes of the Governor General and Council of Bengal; on the Appointment, recommended and carried by Mr. Hastings in October 1780, of Sir Elijah Impey, to be Judge of Sudder Dewanny Adawlet, price 1s.

A LETTER to the Right Hon. Charles Jenkinson, on the present critical Situation of Public Affairs, and the Conduct of the Interior Cabinet. Fourth Edition. Price 2s.

AN ADDRESS to the Interior Cabinet. By the Author of the above. Price 2s.

THE REVOLUTION of 1782, impartially considered. Second Edition. Price 1s. 6d.

* * The above Three Tracts being all written by the same Author, and uniformly printed, may be had complete in Boards. Price 6s.

A COMPANION to the ROYAL KALENDAR, for the Year 1783; being a List of all the Changes in Administration, from the Accession of the present King, in October 1760, to the present Time.

To which is prefixed, A List of the late and present House of Commons, shewing the Changes made in the Members of Parliament, by the General Election in September 1780; with the Names of the Candidates where the Elections were contested, the Numbers polled, and the Decisions since made by the Select Committees. Also relates when each City and Borough first sent Representatives to Parliament; the Right of Election in each Place, and the supposed Number of Voters. The Thirty-second Edition. Price 1s.

* * This Companion is printed in the same size as the Royal Kalendar, and they may always be had Bound together, with or without an Almanack.

with its
the War

eral and ded and r Elijah
rice 1s.
nson, on
and the Price 2s.
the Au-

y confi-

n by the complete

NDAR,
s in Ad-King, in present

e in the n in Sep-es where
and the Alto the presenta-
h Place,
y-second

ze as the ound to-

76

