English Boys to Learn Canadian Agriculture

THESE four prize winners of the competition held by the Daily Mail Young Farmers' Clubs of Great Britain, have been awarded a full summer course at the agricultural schools of Alberta by E. W. Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and will shortly tour the Eastern and Western provinces as the guests of the Company. The London Daily Mail plan of an interchange of visits between boys of the Colonies is a direct stimulus to British-Canadian immigration, particularly in turning the minds of English youth, agriculturally inclined, towards farming opportunities in Canada, and few schemes are calculated to have the lasting and far reaching effect of this one. CAPT. E. LANDY COMMANDS MELITA

Good Record in C. P. Service Brings Further Promotion—Here Tomorrow.

When the Canadian Pacific steamer Melita arrives in port tomorrow about noon she will be in charge of a new commander, a man who has a host of friends in the port and many others on the Atlantic seaboard—Captain Edwin Landy, of Dublin, Ireland. The command of the Melita is in the nature of a promotion for this veteran of the C. P. service, for which his record had admirably fitted him.

Commander Landy has been sailing into and out of St. John for many years and his happy, gentlemanly disposition and entertaining manner has endeared him to a large host of friends who will extend the hand of congratulation to him. He was last here as officer commanding the Bolingbroke, and previously he was in charge of the Pretoria and Monmouth. During the war he performed a conspicuous act of gallantry in bringing the Monmouth to port after she had been torpedoed by the Germans on her way to the French port with a valuable cargo.

Something New For Tonsillitis

Ontario Lady Adopts New Vaporizing Salve, Vicks

Miss Margaret Hooley of 96 Chesley Ave., London, Ont., says: "I am pleased to say Vicks Vaporub has done me a lot of good as I am subject to colds in winter. I also found it a great relief to my throat when I had tonsillitis. Also my mother finds it good for headaches. I would not be without it."

"They used to treat colds externally with tallow, goose grease and camphor. Recently, internal dosing has been the habit and people naturally doubt the value for a salve."

For this reason, Canada drug gists introduced Vicks Vaporub, the vaporizing salve for all cold troubles, last winter by giving away dozens of jars to responsible families and churches and schools.

The above report is just one of a great many received from enthusiastic Canadian families. With such testimonials and a positive money-back guarantee, every household ought to give Vicks a thorough trial as the home remedy for colds, coughs, sore throat, bronchitis, catarrh, neuralgia, cuts, burns, bruises and sores.

FAIL IN ATTEMPT TO KIDNAP GIRLS

Policeman Appears and Two of Band Captured as Their Car Speeds Off.

New York, April 14.—Two men seized two girls at eight o'clock Wednesday morning as they were on their way to work in a factory near Union avenue and Frost street, Brooklyn, when two men in a motor car, one of whom was sought to aid the victims, who were dragged across the sidewalk to the curb, where an automobile was waiting. While the shrieking girls struggled with their captors two other men in the car poked their weapons from windows and threatened all who approached.

As Policeman Joseph Horn of the Herbert Street Station ran up the car sped away, leaving the two men and the girls on the sidewalk. The man fled, with Horn firing his revolver in pursuit. At the third shot, at Frost street and Graham avenue, the fugitives surrendered.

Charges of assault made against them by magistrate O'Neill in the Bridge Plaza Court. Each was held in bail of $5,000 for examination on April 18.

They described themselves as Tony Carnevali, 92 Havemeyer street, Brooklyn, and Vincenzio Garafola of 188 Orchard street, Manhattan.

Katherine Saracina, sixteen, of 29 Havemeyer street, who lives within two blocks of the address given by Carnevali, and Pauline Minor, eighteen, of 120 Hoehling street, told the magistrate that they had never previously seen their assailants. Several women in the crowd, who had helped to calm the girls, accompanied them to the station and to court. A policeman was assigned to accompany them daily to and from work.

FINALLY KILLS HIMSELF

Carpenter Who Had Cut Off His Hand Jumps Under Train.

Trenton, N. J., April 14.—Some months ago Nicholas Hornor attempted to end his life. He chopped off his left hand with a hatchet and tried to fracture his skull with the tool. His act was attributed to dependency.

Since then he has been unable to work at his trade as a carpenter and this added to his depression. Wednesday he threw himself under a train and was killed. His wife and three children survive.

HANGED HERSELF

Winnipeg, April 13.—With her month old baby peacefully sleeping in his cot nearby, Mrs. Mike Labaty, of Transcona, Man., near this city, hanged herself from a bedpost in her home yesterday. Mrs. Labaty, according to her husband, had been greatly depressed over the loss of $1,200, their entire savings, which had been swept away in the collapse of the Dominion Ticket and Finance Corporation, a private banking institution, here recently.

Diamond Jubilee of The Queen-Mother

(Sarah A. Tooley, in London Chronicle) Mr. Gladstone, speaking on some special Royal occasion in the House of Commons, referred to the wife of the then Heir Apparent in this courtly phrase: "The Princess of Wales has permitted the nation to love her." The great statesman touched the right note, and it will be re-echoed throughout the country today, when Queen Alexandra celebrates the Diamond Jubilee of her arrival in this country for her marriage. On March 7, 1868, the Sea King's daughter landed on our shores a simply-bred, unsophisticated girl of nineteen, whose striking beauty had been so loudly trumpeted abroad that some disappointment might have been anticipated. This was felt by Mr. Justice McCarthy, but he has related that his first glimpse of the lovely face of the Princess Alexandra, as, sitting beside her princely lover, she made that never-to-be-forgotten progress through the cheering crowds of London, dispelled all doubts. He was, however, most deeply struck by the sweet and beautiful spirit which illumined the Princess' perfect features. Dickens had the same impression when, three days later, on March 10, he witnessed the Royal marriage in St. George's Chapel, Windsor. The trained eye of the great novelist saw in that radiant vision of bridal beauty moving along the nave to the altar, one destined, as he wrote, "to play her part nobly." Today we know how abundantly that prophecy has been fulfilled. Nobly she has played her part these sixty years. Picture upon picture striking beauty had been so loudly trumpeted abroad that some disappointment might have been anticipated. This was felt by Mr. Justice McCarthy, but he has related that his of, to her, strangers in a strange land. It took three hours for the company to pass the throne, and the Princess was fresh and smiling to the end. Again we see her erring at the old hall at Sandringham as the "squires' bride," and in the little village church she partook of her first English Communion on the Easter Day following her marriage. In the London season which succeeded she began her wonderful reign at Marlborough House, as Princess of Wales, leading society in place of the sorrowing Queen, and performing innumerable public duties with tact and charm, and always ready to respond to the call of the suffering and needy. She has lived before us, too, as a devoted wife and loving mother, creating a beautiful home life around her. Now, grandchildren and great-grandchildren brighten her widowed condition at Marlborough House and Sandringham, and is still as playful as of yore among the children. She retains her personal interest in the various institutions which have enjoyed her patronage, particularly the nursing services and the children's hospitals. Rose Day for the hospitals is her Majesty's special enthusiasm. Though past her 78th birthday, the Queen Mother retains great elasticity of mind and spirit, and keeps well informed regarding public events.

The Breaking Point

By Mary Roberts Rinehart

(Copyright 1922, by Mary Roberts Rinehart, Published by Arrangement With McCure's Magazine.)

(Continued From Yesterday.) It was not until he had completed his course and come home that he had realized that David was growing old. Even then he might have felt that, by the time David was compelled to relinquish his hold on his practice, he himself would be sufficiently established to take over the support of the household. But here there was interposed a new element, one he had not counted on. David was fiercely jealous of his practice; he thought that it might pass into new and alien hands to be bitter to him. To hand it down to his adopted son was one thing; to pass it over to some "young whipper-snapper" was another. Nor were David's motives selfish or unworthy. His patients were his friends. He had a sense of responsibility to them, and very little faith in the new modern methods. He thought there was a great deal of tomfoolery about them, and he viewed the gradual loss of faith in drugs during their first obstetric case together, he snorted.

"I've delivered about half the population of this town," he said, "and I've seen 'em make 'em breathe with my own bare hands. And I'm still here and so are they."

For by that time Dick had made his decision. He could not abandon David. For him then and thereafter the routine of a general practice in a suburb was his. The long hours, the varied responsibilities, the feeling he had sometimes that he was doing none of them well. But for compensation he had old David's content and greater leisure, and Lucy Crosby's unspoken gratitude and love.

Now and then he chafed a little, when he read some article in a medical journal by one of his fellow enthusiasts or when, in France, he saw men younger than himself obtaining as the experience in their several specialties that would enable them to reach wide fields at home. But mostly he was content, or at least resigned. He was building up the Livingstone practice, and his one anxiety was lest the time should come when more patients asked for Doctor Dick than for Doctor David. He did not want David hurt.

After ten years the strangeness of his situation had ceased to be strange. Always he meant some time to go back to Norada, and there to clear up certain things, but it was a long journey, and he had very little time. And, as the years went on, the past seemed unimportant compared with the present. He gave little thought to the future. Then, suddenly, his entire attention became focused on the future.

desirable that he should not identify himself with his past. The loss of memory of the period immediately preceding was complete, but, of course, gradually, the cloud began to lift over the earlier periods. It was there that suggestion was used, so that such memories as came back, were, well, he adapted them to fit what he was told. Again Doctor Lauer shot a swift glance at David, and looked away. "An interesting experiment," he commented. "It must have taken courage."

"You have said, I think, that every man has a breaking point." "Absolutely. All of us. We can go just so far. Where the balance is strong and very sound, and we can farther than when it is not. Some men, for instance, lead lives that would break you or me. Was there—was there such a history in this case?" "Yes," Doctor David's voice was reluctant. "The mind is a strange thing," went on the little man, musingly. "It has its own life, its own logic, its own sense, its own way of going off during sleep. Our sternest and often unconscious repressions pass them then, and emerge in the form of dreams. But of course you know all that. Dream symbolism. Does the person in this case dream? That would be interesting, perhaps important."

At age 30 he secured a $5,000 Twenty Pay Life Policy. At age 35 he received his first Dividend, which was added to the Policy. At age 50 he received notice that his Policy, with 20 years' Dividends, was fully paid for. At age 70 he withdrew the cash value for his personal use. For years he had $5,000 protection, and the cash value with dividends now amounted to $6,140. He had paid only $2,830 in premiums.

Have you a "Twenty Pay Life Policy?" A Policy on your life will do much towards carrying out your intentions—whether you live or die. Nothing can absolutely replace your life—but a policy will in some measure offset the financial loss which will come to those who now look to you for support. It may pay off the mortgage, supply food and clothing for your family, keep the children at school. It may be all that is left of your life work—to keep you in comfort in your old age. But—your Policy must be large enough. The Twenty Payment Life policy is selected by many for the following reasons: Premiums cease in twenty years—therefore your policy will be fully paid for before you reach later life—when your earning power will have declined. Cash values increase year by year, and after the third annual premium the policy cannot lapse as long as sufficient value exists. Dividends are paid during the twenty years and as long as the policy remains in force thereafter. After one year the policy is indisputable, and you may reside or travel in any part of the world, or engage in any occupation (except aviation) without affecting your insurance. A twenty pay life policy will provide an amount in event of death equal to twenty or thirty times the annual premium, and produce an estate of $2,000, $5,000, $10,000, or more as arranged. An Easy Savings Plan These active progressive years of life in which you are earning the most money are the years in which premiums can be most easily met. Twenty years is a convenient period and premiums spread over that length of time are moderate and easy to handle. If You Are Insurable—do not delay decision on this important matter—delays are dangerous. Canada Life JOHN MacKINNON, Manager, Canada Life Building, 60 Prince William Street, St. John.

Satan's Empire Falling

"MILLIONS NOW LIVING WILL NEVER DIE."

—Judge Rutherford.

SATAN'S wicked influence has long been felt in every part of the world. Together with his associate devils he incites people to hatred, strife, murder, and induces war and anarchy, wrecking homes and driving millions to insanity and suicide. Satan caused the fall of man, and established his

EMPIRE. His wicked influence has over-reached the denominational churches, causing many clergymen to forsake God and unite with profiteers and politicians to control mankind. But the end is here and his empire is FALLING, and Christ the rightful king, though invisible, is beginning to reign. Hence the distress of nations, of which Jesus spoke. These troubles will soon reach a climax and disappear, followed quickly by peace and prosperity, as Jesus assumes control.

New Church Service Keeps Family Group Together on Sunday

Chicago, April 14.—How the family automobile may become to the city church goes what the family farm wagon has always been to the rural worshipper, is being worked out at St. Mark's church, a down-town Episcopal parish in Minneapolis, the Rev. Phillips E. Osgood, rector of the parish, told the church club of Chicago in an address here. The Sunday school as a separate institution has been abolished in his church, Dr. Osgood said, and the parents and children are brought together for morning worship. Five months' trial has convinced him that the plan is a success. When parents and children assemble at eleven o'clock in the church, the regular service of morning prayer is conducted with some slight modifications to suit the changed programme. A five minute sermon for the children is then delivered, followed by the offertory, and then while a hymn is being sung the children retire to the parish house, where they have thirty minutes of class instruction. Meanwhile the regular sermon is preached for the edification of their elders. When the regular service is ended, the children are waiting for their parents, the family automobile is loaded, or the family group proceeds to street cars, and all return home ready for Sunday dinner. The chief object of this plan is to restore the family pew to its traditional position, continued Mr. Osgood. "We found that because of our situation on the edge of the down-town district, many of our parish children were not attending our school. But the difficulty was not so much that the children were going elsewhere for instruction as that the family unity in worship was sundered, or that ultimately we lost the entire family because parents so naturally follow their children. The great fault of the traditional Sunday school was that it trained children in church going. It could no more do this than a blackboard discipline could teach a child to swim. The only way to teach church going is by going to church. The only way to learn how to swim is to get into the water and swim." Mr. Osgood said the attendance of the children had been increased thirty per cent in the five months and that the regular attendance of parents at service had been well ahead of the same period for preceding years. "The presence of the children has vitalized the services," he added. "Formerly we were a rather staid downtown congregation, but that condition has changed." The plan has been supplemented by activities for the children starting at seven o'clock, so that parents who desire may attend adult Bible classes assembling at that hour. While the Bible classes are in session, children who care to do so may occupy themselves with map-making, estemporaneous dramatization of Bible stories, and similar

Pay $65,423,000 In Church Pensions

Pension funds of eighteen Protestant denominations in the United States amounted to $65,423,000, according to a statement issued by Dr. J. B. Hingley, chairman of the interdenominational secretaries' conference in charge of the church pension funds of Protestant churches. The amount is divided as follows: Northern Baptist, $9,000,000; Southern Baptist, $8,750,000; Congregational, $5,500,000; Disciples, $1,750,000; Lutheran, Augustana, $387,000; Lutheran, Missouri Synod, $2,500,000; Lutheran, Newburg, $600,000; Lutheran, United, $18,000,000; Methodist, Canadian, $2,500,000; Methodist Episcopal Church, $17,500,000; Methodist Episcopal Church, South, $2,000,000; Presbyterian Church, Northern, $8,105,000; Presbyterian Church, Southern, $1,400,000; Freshly Reformed Church in America (Dutch), $898,000; United Brethren, $10,000,000. The number of pensioners of the Methodist Episcopal Church is constantly increasing declared Dr. Hingley.

FRANCE'S NEW ARMY.

(Washington Post.) Though the actual reduction in numbers is only about 100,000 men, the "blood tax"—that is to say, the actual period of service with the colors being reduced by half—will be a great relief to the French population, especially the agricultural section. Every French peasant hated to see his son go off to barracks for three long years just as he was beginning to be really of use on the farm. In addition there will be less chance of the peasant conscript acquiring a distaste for country life. Eighteen months' life in a city barracks, especially if the Government gives liberal furloughs at harvest time, is less likely to turn a country lad into a city one than three years' service.

JAPANESE GOOD FAITH.

(Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

The willingness of Japan to cancel the Lansing-Ishii agreement is one more proof of the good faith of the Japanese Government in its protestations of eagerness to conform with Occidental sentiment in regard to China.

It should go far to quiet those who still enjoy being scared at the "Japanese peril." It restores the "open door" unequivocally and unconditionally, provides for China's right to work out her own destiny without foreign interference, and gives the capital of all nations equal opportunity for proper investment in China's development.

BLUNT NAVAL REFUSAL.

Admiral Meux Declines to Give Up Temple Bar

London, March 23.—(By Mail)—At the meeting of the City of London Corporation yesterday, Colonel Whitaker, chairman of the city lands committee, canvassed Mr. Meux, who asked what progress had been made in connection with the suggestion that Temple Bar might be returned to the city, and come into possession of the Fleet, the Hon. Sir Hedworth Meux, who had come into possession of Temple Bar under the will of the late Lady Meux, but each time had received a somewhat blunt naval rebuff. In these circumstances, the committee could hold out no hope that the city would regain possession of the Old Bar, and he asked that the reference to them might be discharged. This was agreed to.

Temple Bar was rebuilt from the design of Sir Christopher Wren in 1670, and was destroyed in 1780. It was removed in 1878 and its stones, all carefully numbered, were for a time, placed on vacant land on the Embankment. When this land was required for building purposes, the corporation accepted an offer by Sir Henry Meux, the brewer, to remove the stones and re-erect it as an entrance lodge to his estate, Theobalds Park, Chestnut, where it has ever since remained. The present idea was to get it back and erect it as a gate to the gardens of the Temple.

THE LACE CURTAIN TEST.

(Windsor Border Cities Star)

The Ontario Government is going to get three carloads of Alberta coal, taken from different fields, to test its value as a fuel. The Alberta mine owners pay the costs, and representatives of the Alberta Mines Department will accompany the shipments.

But the real determining factor is, what Alberta coal will do to lace curtains. Women do not like smoky, dirty fuel. As they have to wash the curtains and spend most of their time at home, they have the best right to say what kind of fuel shall be burned. Will Alberta coal pass the lace curtain test? If it will, the rest ought to be easy.

Premier Veniot Says That Already There is a Certainty of Market for 35,000 Horse Power

New Brunswick Electric Power Commission to Be Empowered to Borrow an Additional $1,000,000 for the Work

Friederick, N. B., April 13.—The report abroad of the news that the Government of this province intended to develop hydro electric power at Grand Falls for the comfort of New Brunswick's citizens...

Willing to Withdraw. Mr. Hayes said he supposed that the government would make sure of its rights at Grand Falls before going ahead...

Prior to Mr. Veniot's explanation, Mr. Richards had declared that he was in favor of the principle of cheap power development but in order to avoid a "muddle" like that in St. John he thought the House ought to have more information.

When the former Premier took the floor after the present Prime Minister had finished, he said he was at this time going to offer only one justification for the development undertaken at Musquash...

He had declared on former occasions that the province would also have to have a reasonable guarantee of a market for at least 25,000 horse power.

Those whose interest had already been directed to the province as a possible location for industry might turn elsewhere unless they saw that the province was going ahead with something about its water power development policy.

It has been decided to build a permanent home for the New Brunswick Protestant Orchestra this year at a meeting of the ways and means committee which was held last night in the office of I. P. D. Tilly, secretary.

The Breaking Point

up and put a hand on David's shoulder.
Dick was whistling outside.
At the end of the second act Louis Bassett was standing at the back of the theatre, talking to the publicity man of "The Valley" company, Fred Gregory. He was calm and only slightly interested. By the end of the first act he had realized that the star was giving a fine performance, that she had even grown in power, and that his sentimental memory of her was considerably dearer than the reality.
Beside his robust physique, Gregory, the publicity man, sank into a magnificent. Even his pale spots, at which Bassett had shot a contemptuous glance, his highly expensive tailoring, failed to make him appear more than he was, a little, dapper man, with a pale cold eye and a rather too frequent smile. He hesitated, then added: "She's my sister. For business reasons, I don't publish the relationship."
Bassett glanced at him.
"That so? Well, I'm glad she decided to come back. She's too good to bury."
But if he expected Gregory to follow the lead, he was disappointed. His eyes, blank and expressionless, were wandering over the house. The curtain came down, and the lights flashed up. Gregory stirred and glanced casually at the reporter.
"It's going like a house afire," he said complacently. "This whole tour has been a triumph. She's the greatest there is, and they know it."
"Does she know it?" Bassett inquired.
"She doesn't throw any temperaments, if that's what you mean. She—"
He checked himself suddenly, and stood, clutching the railing, bent forward and staring into the audience. Bassett watched him, considerably surprised. It took a great deal to startle a theatrical publicity man, yet Gregory looked as though he had seen a ghost.
After a time Gregory straightened and moistened his dry lips.
"There's a man sitting down there—see here, the sixth row, next the aisle; there's a girl in a blue dress beside him. Do you know who he is?"
"Never saw him before."
"For perhaps two minutes Gregory continued to stare. Then he moved over to the side of the house, and braced against the wall, continued his close and anxious inspection. After a time he turned and passing behind the boxes, made his way into the wings. Bassett's curiosity was aroused: especially when, shortly after, Gregory reappeared, bringing with him a small man in an untidy suit, who was probably, Bassett surmised, the stage manager.
He saw the small man stare, not stand watching, and finally disappear, and Gregory resume his former position and attitude against the side wall. Throughout the last act Gregory did not once look at the stage. He continued his steady, unvarying study of the man in the sixth row seat next the aisle.
Bassett's training made him quick to sense a story. He was not sure, of course, but the situation appeared to him at least suggestive. He wandered out with the crowd, edging his way close to the man and girl who had focused Gregory's attention, and followed them into the street. He saw only a tall man, with a certain quiet distinction.

probably. He wondered, half amused, whether the stage manager had told him of his inquiries, and whether if he had they might not fear him more than Clark himself. After all, they had nothing to fear from Clark, if this were Clark.
What they might see and dread knowing he had had a hint of a possible situation, was the revival of the old story she had tried so hard to live down. She was ambitious, and there are some types of publicity that are not assets in a stage career. There might be other reasons, too. That long retirement of hers, for instance. Had it been entirely grief?
He slowed down, absorbed in deep thought. It was a queer story. It might be even more queer than it seemed. Gregory had been frightened rather than startled. The man had even gone pale.
Motive, motive, that was the word. What motives lay behind action. Conscious or unconscious, every volitional act was the result of motive.
He wondered what she had done when Gregory had told her.
As a matter of fact, she had shown less anxiety than her brother. Still pale and shocked, he had gone directly to her dressing-room when the curtain was rung down, had tapped and gone in. She was sitting wearily in a chair, a cigarette between her fingers. Around was the usual litter of a stage dressing-room after the play, the long shelf beneath the mirror crowded with powders, rouge and pencils, a bunch of roses in the corner washstand basin, a great wardrobe trunk, and a maid covering with cheesecloth bags the evening's costumes.
"It's all right, I think, Fred," he said absently. "Go on out, Alice. I'll let you come back in a few minutes."
He waited until the door closed.
"What's the matter?" she asked "rather indifferently." "If it's more worrying in the company I don't want to hear it. I'm tired." Then she took a full look at him and sat up.
"Fred! What is it?"
He gave her the truth, brutally and at once.
"I think Judson Clark was in the house tonight."
"I don't believe it."
"Neither would I, if somebody told me," he agreed sullenly. "I saw him. Don't you suppose I know him? And if you don't believe me, call Saunders. I got him out front. He knows."
"Why not? I tell you, Bev, I was nearly crazy. I'm nearly crazy now."
"If he didn't know Clark was dead, he'd say it was Clark."
"She was worried by that time, but far more collected than he was. She sat, absently tapping the shelf with a nail file, and reflecting.
"All right," she said. "Suppose it is? What then? He has been in hiding for ten years. Why shouldn't he continue to hide? What would bring him out now? Unless he needed money."
"Was he shabby?"
"No," he said sulkily. "He was with a girl. He was dressed all right."
"You didn't see anything, except to Joe Saunders?"
"No, I'm not crazy to tell the world." "I'd better see Joe," she reflected. "Go and get him, Fred. And tell Alice she needn't wait."
She got up and moved about the room, putting things away and finding relief in movement, a still beautiful woman, with rather outstanding features and an easy carriage. Without her make-up the stage illusion of her youth was gone, and she showed the suffering and present strain. Just then she was uneasy and resentful, startled but not particularly alarmed. Her rest-

LIFE INSURANCE

Your Little Boy and Girl ---and Mine

"My little child climbed up into my lap the other evening, and in characteristic fashion said, 'How much do you love me, Daddy?'"
"Why, I love you so much I'd never let anything harm you, as long as I live."
"In childlike innocence, back came the response, 'Well, I hope you live as long as I do, Daddy.'"
"Like a dart the reply pierced through to my heart."
The future holds no cruel fate if the "guardian angel" of life insurance is placed over your children's lives to-day. Ere to-morrow it may be too late.

For some time he walked the deserted streets of the city, thinking and puzzling over the possibility of Gregory's being right. Sometime after midnight he went back to the office, and to the filing room. There for two hours, he sat reading closely old files of the paper, going through them methodically and making occasional brief notes in a memorandum book. Then, at two o'clock he put away the files, and lighted a cigar.
It was all there; the fabulous Clark fortune inherited by a boy who had gone mad about this same Beverly Carlyle, her marriage to her leading man, Howard Lucas, the subsequent killing of Lucas by Clark at his Wyoming ranch, and Clark's escape into the mountains. Immense wealth, gifts of ropes of pearls, the sensational details of Clark's infatuation, the drama of his escape, and the later certainty of his death in a mountain storm. The story had filled the newspapers of the time for weeks. Judson Clark had been famous, notorious, infamous and dead, all in less than two years. A shameful and somehow a pitiful story.
But if Judson Clark had died, the story still lived. Every so often it came up again. Three years before, he had been declared legally dead, and his vast estates, as provided by the will of old Elihu Clark, had gone to universities and hospitals, but now and then came a rumor. Jud Clark was alive. He was living in India; he had a cattle ranch in Venezuela. He had been seen on the streets of New Orleans.
Bassett ran over the situation in his mind.
First then, grant that Clark was still living, and had been in the theatre that night. It became necessary to grant other things. To grant, for instance, that Clark was capable of sitting with a girl beside him, through a performance by the woman for whom he had wrecked his life, of a play he had once known from the opening line to the tag. To grant that he could laugh and applaud, and at the drop of the curtain go calmly away, with such memories behind him as must be his. To grant, his sensational disappearance, found a new identity and a new place for himself, even, witness the girl, possible new lies.
At half-past two he closed his memorandum book, stuffed it into his pocket, and started for home. As he passed the Ardmore Hotel he looked up at its windows. Gregory would have told her

Well-groomed nails—today everyone must have them

Exquisite nails, soft even cuticle and a bewitching rose pearl lustre. What added charm they give. How quickly critical eyes fasten on ill-kept nails—roughened cuticle, unsightly hang-nails.
Now manicuring has become so easy that with just a few minutes each week you can simply and safely achieve this social necessity—perfectly groomed nails. Even the difficult cuticle can be kept soft and smooth.
Just dip the end of an orange stick wrapped in cotton in the little bottle of Cutex Cuticle Remover and work around the nail base. Wash the hands and the surplus cuticle will wipe away leaving a soft even rim. Do this once a week. Then every night smooth a little cream into the cuticle of each nail.
And for that last finishing touch to your nails, Cutex has recently perfected two marvelous polishes. The Cutex Powder Polish gives to your nails with just a few strokes of the hand a lovely rose tint and brilliance that lasts a week. The new Liquid Polish gives a brilliant lustre instantly without buffing.
Cutex Manicure Sets come in four sizes, at 60c, $1.00, $1.50 and $3.00. Or each of the Cutex items comes separately.

THE LEGISLATURE FINISHES SESSION

Prorogued at 2.30 O'clock This Morning—Many Bills Passed in the Closing Hours.

The Legislative Assembly of the Province of New Brunswick was prorogued at 2.30 this morning by Lieutenant-Governor W. F. Toad after a session lasting five weeks and two days.

An interesting resolution presented by Hon. Fred Macgregor and seconded by J. I. Peck, Conservative, Albert, was that the parliament of Canada be asked to amend the Railway Act to provide for the issuing of passes to members of the Legislatures of the various provinces which would enable them to travel in any part of Canada and not limit them to the province in which they belonged.

The resolution offered by the Premier and seconded by C. B. Richards, leader of the Opposition, calling for united maritime action in the matter of appointing a freight rate expert and urging upon the Federal Government the importance of giving immediate consideration to the Commons transportation committee's recommendations regarding reduced freight rates also passed.

Another lengthy bill was the act to consolidate the acts relating to provincial hospitals at St. John. Among other things it gives the Minister of Health the right of access to the hospital at all times and of consulting with the superintendent regarding any measure that may promote the recovery of the patients.

Another lengthy bill was the act to consolidate the acts relating to the rates and taxes act and another defining electoral districts were put over until next session.

"TIZ" FOR ACHING, SORE, TIRED FEET

Just take your shoes off and then put those weary, shoe-crinkled, aching, burning, corn-pestered, bunion-tortured feet of yours in a "TIZ" bath. Your feet will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "TIZ" bath.

When your feet feel like lumps of lead—all tired-out—just try "TIZ." It's grand—it's glorious. Your feet will dance with joy; also you will find all pain gone from corns, callouses and bunions.

There's nothing like "TIZ." It's the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and cause foot torture.

A few cents buys a box of "TIZ" at any drug or department store—don't wait. Ask how glad your feet get; how comfortable your shoes feel.

duced last evening by Hon. J. P. Byrne, attorney-general, which exempts from seizure or debt the kitchen utensils, beds, bedding and bedsteads of the family, necessary and ordinary wearing apparel of the debtor and his family, all necessary fuel and food for thirty days not exceeding in value forty dollars, one horse and set of harness, one cow, six sheep, one hog and ten hens, in all not exceeding in value the sum of $200 and food therefore for thirty days and finally, tools, agricultural implements and chattels ordinarily used in the debtor's occupation to the value of $150. The act is not retroactive.

SUFFERED SO FROM HEART AND NERVES LIFE WAS A BURDEN

Mr. A. H. Lee, Beausville, Ont., writes: "I am delighted to let you know what I have to say regarding the good Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills did me."

A short time ago I suffered with heart and nerve trouble, and was so bad I could not sleep, only about two hours each night. My heart was so bad I had spells when driving on the road and would faint away, and neighbors would carry me in from my wagon. I also took these pills in the night and during my daily work on the farm. My nerves were so bad I would jump out of bed, and was then compelled to walk the floor before they could settle down again, but after taking a few boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills I can honestly say I am a relieved man. I now feel in the best of health, in fact, the best I've been in for three years. I'm glad to let you know with pleasure where before life was a burden to me."

MOCK TRIAL ENJOYED.

A very amusing and well presented entertainment was given in the Sunday school room of the Carlton Methodist church last night under the auspices of the Young People's League.

The entertainment took the form of a mock trial in a breach of promise case. The plaintiff, Miss Lulu Doolittle, and the defendant, Tom Titmouse, were strictly anonymous. Hedy Bissett was the judge, Frank H. Gardiner was the counsel for the defense and William Sharp the counsel for the plaintiff.

The clerk of the court was Clarence Beattie and the court crier was Roy Thompson. There were eight witnesses for the plaintiff and seven for the defense. The mock trial was one of the most popular entertainments that had been given by the league and realized about $88 for the funds of the organization.

The Trousseau

WHAT a commotion there is in the home when daughter is having her trousseau made, and what excitement as the great day approaches!

How anxious mother is that every little detail shall be looked after, and how solicitous of her daughter's welfare during these last days in the old home!

But this is a trying time on the nervous system. Is the daughter's health in suitable condition in order that she may assume the cares and responsibilities of married life?

She has a responsibility to her partner in life, as well as her own future welfare and happiness to consider.

Most mothers are familiar with the splendid restorative and rebuilding influence of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and see that their daughters have the benefit of this treatment when they get tired, nervous and rundown in health.

The nerve food is so natural and gentle in action and so thoroughly dependable as a reconstructive agent that it has come to be looked upon as a necessity in most homes.

Particularly at this season of the year we all seem to need the help of a tonic treatment to enrich the blood and build up the nervous system.

School Girls, Too

After months of nervous strain at study and examinations school girls need just such assistance as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food can give them, in order to maintain health and strength.

BUTTER FOR NEW ZEALAND IN THE CITY MARKET

A considerable amount of New Zealand butter has found its way into the city market and, in spite of the long distance it has traveled and the cost of freight hauling, it is selling for the same price as the local butter of the same class. Part of the supply came by way of New York and the rest was from a Canadian packing company. It was thought that the latter also came by way of New York, however. The butter is first-class creamery butter and in excellent condition after its long time on the road. It is packed in boxes of fifty-six pounds each. One of the local dealers said that there was not a large quantity being brought in because of the impending drop in butter prices when the new local supplies would commence to come in quantities. The winter storage of local creamery butter was about exhausted, he said, but the fresh supply would begin to arrive soon and prices would probably drop somewhat. The New Zealand butter, he said, was remarkably good, being dryer than our home product. It had only about six per cent of moisture as compared with fourteen per cent. in the Canadian butter.

Lloyd George Coming To Canada In Fall Is News at Sand Point

J. O. McCarthy, of Toronto, Home From England With Promise of Noted Welshman to Come in September if Home Affairs Permit.

That Rt. Hon. Lloyd George will in all probability visit Canada early in September was the pleasing as well as surprising news given out this morning by J. O. McCarthy, former controller of Toronto, who arrived here on the Canadian Pacific steamship Montclare. Mr. McCarthy made a flying visit to Sand Point for the first time and while in the latter country visited Lloyd George at his new country residence in Surrey County. Mr. McCarthy's prime reason in going to the Old Country was to invite the former premier to come to Canada to attend the world Brotherhood congress, which is to be held in Toronto in September.

SOUNDED NOTE OF CANADIAN ENTHUSIASM

Hon. Fred Magee Stirred the Legislature With Inspiring Words.

"Why don't the speeches of Canadian members of parliament ring with praises of their country like they do in the United States? I tell you, Mr. Speaker and honorable gentlemen, we are neglectful of this serious matter of our Canadianism in the Legislature at public places. There are also too many naked flagpoles in our land, we are not showing as broad and enthusiastic a spirit of Canadianism as we might."

What was said in more knowledge of our Dominion and its resolution is one way to bring it about. "Whilst not perhaps the absolute verbatim report of Hon. Fred Magee's pointed remarks in the Legislature at Fredericton yesterday afternoon this paragraph conveys the import of a patriotic flurry that for ten minutes electrified the rather dull atmosphere of the chamber, hushed as it was during the most mechanical process of rushing through a thick packet of bills. The House was in committee as a whole, the bills were of a private nature and as the saying goes the lid was off—no party lines, just personal opinion held sway."

Members looked up from their desks as the vigorous young member for Westmorland launched suddenly into this spirited declaration. As his face flushed and voice gradually rose to an impassioned pitch he sat erect and interrupted with volleys of applause, giving him a regular salvo as he took the floor. It was a tingling surprise, indeed a very enjoyable job to the House, and Government and Opposition alike joined to enter into the enthusiasm of the Honorable Fred with gusto.

From the whole thing started over Hon. Mr. Magee's innocent understanding of the Premier's misused use of the word "ridiculous" and other momentous things in the history of their country, was taken advantage of by patriotic speakers; congressmen and public men generally were well informed as to the potentialities of their land, its wonderful resources, its progress. This inspiring material was kept before the people continually and was of unfounded benefit. American public men of high and low degree at least knew their United States thoroughly.

Therefore, Hon. Mr. Magee argued, it was not unreasonable to ask that the members' railway frank be extended to cover the whole Dominion. It would be of lasting benefit to the country to have its parliamentary representatives well versed in Canadian life as a whole, its people, its industries, its geography and resources. The Westmorland member's argument was clear-cut and progressive. What appeared at first like an unreasonable request to the railways turned out to be a suggestion filled with patriotic intent.

The resolution passed unanimously and Premier Veniot took pains to assure Mr. Magee that his use of the word "ridiculous" was only as a correction of the proposed record, not a criticism. He was in hearty accord with the idea underlying the proposal and said amen to all that his colleague had so well expressed.

EARLY BIRDS CAN'T CATCH A CAR

A sample of the consideration of the St. John Railway which is being meted out to the general public was demonstrated this morning on the East St. John branch, when several residents of this suburb were left to walk to Haymarket square in order to catch cars which would carry them to their destinations at the earliest hour possible under the circumstances.

The car due to leave Haymarket at 7:57 a. m. came in from East St. John about five minutes ahead of schedule, and the patrons who usually catch this car at the East St. John end met it at Cooper's Corner after it had stopped peacefully at Haymarket square for most of the time during which worried patrons were walking, in—enjoying (?) a bracing constitutional, while the motorman rested peacefully.

TWO JUDGMENTS IN COUNTY COURT

In the County Court this morning His Honor Judge Armstrong gave judgment in two cases, the defendant in the case of Dean vs. Wood Co., Ltd. vs. Leo MacNamara. The first case mentioned had to do with a claim for $140 for labor upon an automobile, and parts alleged to have been supplied. The amounts in each case were $70, totaling $140. The plaintiff alleged he had not been paid while the defendant claimed to have paid a man named Phillips for him. The court found in favor of the defendant with costs. W. A. Ross appeared for the plaintiff and E. C. Weyman for the defendant.

"I TRUSTED HIM"— Moans Queen of the Rum Runners.— "As Every Woman Trusts The Man She Loves"

Edith Stevens, Aristocratic Consort of Millionaire Bootlegger, Discusses in New Article How She Met Casese and Tells More Than She Has Ever Told Before of Her Early Life—She Never Has Allowed Her Friends to Know Who the Much Written About "Edith Stevens" Was—How Her Early, Luxurious Circumstances Fell Away When She Was Sixteen, Leaving Her an Ordinary Wage-Earner at an Adding Machine—Her Marriage at Seventeen, as Reckless as Anything Else She Ever Did in Her Reckless Life—A Yellow Roadster Almost Runs Over Her and Its Driver is the Master Mind of the Rum Runners, Antonio—There, is an Instantaneous Attraction Between the Strong-headed Young People—He is a "Gentleman"—The First Love Passage.

My Experiences as Queen of The Rum Runners

BY EDITH STEVENS

I am twenty years old. In the last four years I have seen the world. In the last year I have attained a place in the modern world of crime—the rum-running profession—that has been the envy of those in my own group. During that adventurous year I became the acknowledged queen of liquor traffickers. Revenue officers, prohibition agents and representatives of the Government's bureau have been constantly on my trail, on land and sea. Working together with a group of the shrewdest, most desperate characters of international underworlds, never was my authority questioned. Never was my place of "honor" in jeopardy. On the one hand, there were men in our band who were known to the world as gentlemen, and who were at home in society's drawing rooms. Again, there were sharpers, cheats, gamblers and notorious racketeers—many of whom I had seen at some of the nation's leading race courses. Yet again—and it can be readily understood why—in our pirates' band were some of the most inhuman, cruel, most devious figures that have ever existed between the polished veneer of my floutments and the crude gestures of the riffraff of my following. Our big jobs were accomplished with team work that was almost 100 per cent efficient. These men at heart were all adventurers, who sought the easiest way to line their pockets with gold. However, they were so selfish, each and every one of them, that they would fight like rats in a trap for a cent more his own personal greed and criminal ambitions.

My men, who were all of the same, largely because of my connections—which I will explain a little while—actually believed I had a character of a human symbol of good fortune. Many times, when the insurmountable odds of our complicated organization "fell down" in their private enterprises, so superstitious were the men that they attributed these failures to my absence.

The Silver Spoon. My start in life was a particularly auspicious one. Born of wealthy parents, I had no cares, nor did I have any whim or caprice that went unfulfilled until I was sixteen years old. At that age a cloud of domestic difficulties darkened our home. There was a divorce. My father, who was his way. My mother hers. As usual, the child paid the price. I have not seen my father since that time.

From wealth to comparative poverty is not an easy path for any one to travel, much less easy one for a girl of artistic tendencies, for a girl educated to the belief that a place had been set apart for her special aggrandisement.

Yet, even in this, if I may say so without becoming immodest in my claims, I displayed nerve and ability. Cast adrift from my home, from my associates, in society, I endeavored to acquire enough money to meet my wants.

But alas! the wants of a society debutante are many. I obtained a position with a life insurance company. I went to work on an adding machine. Dreadfully prosaic was this venture. I thought I should go mad!

I tried to be game, as the sporting world has it, but my heart and soul rebelled. My work—and it was work—followed me to the apartment where my mother, my sisters and I were hiding away from our affluent friends. Numbers, additions, dreary columns of dreary figures haunted me in my sleep. Life was a nightmare of monotony.

Every human being, the old masters tell us, seeks to escape from the things of life, the drab things, without laying down life itself. I was always on the lookout for this escape. At last I found it.

I did not know when I met Antonio Casese that I was entering upon the most adventurous and dangerous career that any woman could undertake. This sounds extreme, melodramatic and bookish, but I hope to convince you in this series of revelations that it was so. Antonio Casese was seventeen years older than I. I was eighteen. He was a good-looking Italian of extraordinary antecedents. I thought I loved him then. I know I did now!

Antonio Casese is an attractive fellow. I am a Southerner. Some persons may deem it silly to repeat the hackneyed phrase that Southerners are "fiery," impulsive and more than usually hot-blooded, but it is true!

I loved him with my whole soul. Even today, as I sit in this room, persecuted by officers of the law, but still beloved by those who know me really, I realize more than ever that my heart belongs to Anthony Casese. Antonio is now in Raymond Street, New York, awaiting the outcome grew worse. I held fast to this decision.

After a half hour of pleading with me to please see him at least once in a while, he gave up battling. Then, without another word, he took his hat. I saw his face before he left. It was the saddest I have ever seen. I was frightened by the grim line of his mouth.

And then—well, I couldn't live up to my decision. In a few days I surrendered to my heart's instinct and called him back to me.

Perhaps the most important reason that led me to take the path which would finally take me beyond the law, into the tempestuous swarms of the sea, and the desperate dangers of illicit liquor traffic was this:

Personally, Antonio Casese is one of the most honorable men who ever lived! I admit that his judgment had been frightfully misled—that he should not have loved me and that he should not have been a "rum runner."

He was honorable with all those with whom he came in contact. He was chivalrous, fine in every respect toward me.

"Indeed, the outstanding reason that he was so greatly respected at sea was that men knew they would get what they called a "square deal" from him. The Women Trusts.

This quality was exemplified in the quality of liquor he brought into this country. The majority of rum runners carry a bottling apparatus on their ships. As they bottle the liquor, they dilute it. But Antonio Casese never did that. He brought the liquor in bottles under seal. It was genuine. Everybody who knew him knew that he was square in his dealings, and for this reason all his liquor was sold before it even got to this country.

Mr. Casese's liquor was delivered here bottled just as he bought it in the Bahamas.

"I am sure that he never defrauded or tricked a single human being out of a cent in his life. He felt that he had a right to a certain extent to take the chances of liquor trafficking honorably since the people in this country wanted it.

He was wrong in caring for me just as I was, but that is all that can be said about him. He paid me every honor and respect that a woman can be paid. Because of his dominating personality, not a word that I should hear could even reach the roughest of the sailors say in my experience.

It is impossible to get away from the fact that every woman follows the judgment of the man she loves. Her love is founded on admiration and respect. And even though she cannot understand the course of his action, she says to herself:

"About all the things I could understand, I knew Mr. Casese to be a gentleman and a splendid character. And about those I could not understand, I trusted to his superior judgment—and gave him the benefit of the doubt."

Now I see that in this I was wrong. But this is the great pitfall that brings more suffering to women than any other thing else. It is easy not to do the things that look bad. It is when things that are entirely wrong look as if

One cold November day, she sets sail on a pleasure trip. As they steam into the gorgeous sunsets and the moonlight nights her story-book fancies seem all coming true, and Antonio Casese is the Prince Charming.

RADIO FOR THE PATIENT AS THE SURGEONS WORK

New York, April 14.—Radio was employed as an aid to local anesthesia by surgeons at Fordham-Hoagland this week during an operation on Edward Higgins. The operation, for hernia, was successful, and it was admitted that the radio might in future become a factor in similar operations.

The four physicians who performed the operation were loath, for professional reasons, to discuss the use of a radio outfit, but it was learned that Higgins' attention had been completely distracted from the work of the surgeons as soon as the head gear had been slipped into place by a nurse. He listened to a concert from W. J. Z. in Newark, and, according to one informant, laughed at one time during the tedious operation at jokes by a comedian.

It was explained that none of the surgeons could hear the concert, as no magna-vox equipment was used, and that therefore their attention was not similarly distracted from the operation.

Washington, April 13.—Earth tremors of moderate intensity were recorded today by the Georgetown University seismograph. The disturbance began at 10:42 a. m., reached a maximum at 11:20, and died away at noon. Father Tondorf, in charge of the observatory, estimated that it was centred 6,000 miles from Washington, apparently south.

LONDON VIEW OF GERMANY, FRANCE AND OCCUPATION

A Study of Stanley Baldwin, Chancellor of Exchequer

The Norfolk Farm Wages Question - The Royal Huntsmen - Lady Elizabeth Buying Part of Her Trousseau From Little Firms at Home.

(From Our Correspondent) London, March 29.—The forces, not of intervention, but of mediation in this miserable Ruhr business are beginning to concentrate on two points. The issues for France, of course, are the German payment of reparations and military security for all time against possible German aggression. For reparations the only thing she has to stand by is the Treaty of Versailles, financially a hodge-podge of a broken reed so long as Germany is in a destructive mood. For security the only barrier she has is her own army, the Anglo-American guarantee promised by President Wilson having fallen through. It is now hinted, after the manner of hints that have a semi-official sanction, that it would not be surprising to France if Germany stated what she believes she can pay, that France would be willing to declare what she is prepared to accept, and that in the event of non-arrangement of a settlement arbitration would not be unacceptable. As regards security, France is being sounded on whether she would agree to a modification in the constitution of the League of Nations giving it greater power, so that it, on behalf of Europe, would guarantee French security. Meanwhile, officially France says "hands off" to all intervention, and maintains the largest army in her long military history as security. No Peace Feeling in Berlin. It is now becoming clear that last week's talk of peace moves to be expected from Germany was premature, and had its origin in French hopes. A friend, one of the fortunate few who have contrived to obtain visas to Germany, tells me that in Berlin the business man's attitude is one of resignation, not of conciliation. There is no talk of active opposition to the French occupation—Germany is incapable of it—but there is equally no talk of climbing down. Meanwhile prices in Berlin are terrific. My friend, who went there from Brussels found Berlin more expensive, and had to pay 250,000 marks or 50c. a night for his room. Hoodlumism is a risk, and all the hotels rather a dry and reserved person without the Falstaffian sense of fun which is such a priceless gift to our race. But when Mr. Baldwin joined in a celebration at the Cheshire Cheese tavern the other day, and cracked jokes in Dr. Johnson's seat while smoking the traditional churchwarden, there was a sudden revulsion of criticism. That the Chancellor of the Exchequer has a vein of solid humor is certain; he may need it on budget night when he disappoints the optimists. After Mr. Armitage, when St. James' Park was thickly decorated with captured German cannon, I walked across with the Horse Guards parade with him. He pointed to the cannon. And narrated how, in a thick London fog one evening, while on his way to the House of Commons, he walked slap into a five-inch How. The impact was severe and painful. "My youngster has served through the war in the Artillery," he said, "without getting a medal, and without getting any of the honor and glory, I was merely a casualty to the German guns." There are signs that Mr. Baldwin may be bumping into the Association of British Manufacturers—the gentlemen who expect largess on a fifty-million-surplus scale. Agricultural Wages. The Norfolk strike of farm laborers, although nominally local, deserves to be watched by the nation at large, for it is the outcome of conditions which are general to British agriculture. Roughly, it comes to this, the Norfolk farmers say to their laborers, "We cannot afford to pay you more than 25s. for a 54 hours' week," and the laborers say to their employers, "We cannot live on this." There are signs of absence of bitterness in the dispute, each side going far to admit that the other is right, but both sides fettered by the economic conditions of the industry. The only immediate hope is Government intervention at a time when public opinion is forcing the Government back to the position of non-interference in industry, and the only ultimate hope a thorough reorganization of the industrial, its conditions and methods. It is here that the Government may yet be helpful as an adviser rather than as an executive authority. Meanwhile, the agricultural Kimberley advises farmers to ask for a reduction of rent. If that is the only alternative to a 25s. wage he will certainly have the public with him. A Conservative Trousseau. Although the most important item in Lady Elizabeth's trousseau, the bridal gown, is being made by a well-known authority on these matters, a good many dainty garments have been ordered from anything but ultra-fashionable modistes. Not a few little firms that have served the family long and faithfully have been gladdened with commissions—which shows the delightful conservatism of the Strathmore. The bride-to-be, fettered by mother's busy, too, and not once, but several times lately, girls from these parts have been seen to their Hertfordshire place to help "finish off." A friend who has just had the privilege of seeing the day nursery at Goldborough Hall tells me that it is the simplest room—white-painted, white curtains in large panels, fitted with low divan seats, a plain linoleum floor, and a wreath-pattern wallpaper. There is an open fireplace, a rocking chair with two chairs facing each other for two children to sit in and rock each other. A fine reading-horse, a wooden engine, several carts, a mechanical stage coach and picture books are among the many toys. Where Sarah Bernhardt Will Sleep. Unique in all things, Sarah Bernhardt will rest in a unique grave, every detail of which she had thought out during her lifetime. "When I am dead," she once said, "my tomb shall be a guide to safety for the fishermen I love so well, enabling them in sudden storms which sweep up the Bay of Biscay, to sight the way to a haven of refuge where they may shelter till the danger is past." And so it is. Her tomb is on a rocky islet in the Bay of Biscay. Its rocky prominence may be seen from Belle Ile where she had that wonderful retreat, Le Fort aux Poulains, and where, no doubt, the idea of this isolated resting place first occurred to her. On this solid granite mass which rises out of the ocean she had a magnificent mausoleum erected. Above its four square to the winds of Heaven, will stand an erect figure with arm outstretched, in warning or welcome. This figure, in the beautiful marble of Carrara, is the work of the wonderful woman who will sleep beneath it. On the rocky Belle Ile, Bernhardt, clad in a simple robe, spent her days in the open, clamoring along the rocky beach, leading her pockets with mussels, shooting, fishing or just sleeping in a wicker chair while the tamarisks shielded her from the full force of the wind. Of an evening the little company would sit about the great open fireplace, with its old spinning-wheel, in a room that was once the mess of the fort. The shutters would be left open, and across the low windows stretched old and disused fishing nets. As far as eye could see lay the tumbled ocean, dotted here and there with Breton fishing boats and at one point rose the crag-like rock which this woman had chosen for her last resting place, the mausoleum pointing skywards. Dried Dogs. Even the poor little dogs in Monte Carlo are not escaping the fads of the fashionable women for "color schemes." A friend just back from the Riviera tells me of unfortunate little pets that are actually being dyed to match the particular color fancy of their mistresses. One lady who "just loves mauve" had her Maltese terrier dyed purple. Another who affected royal blue allowed the hotel hairdresser to turn her fox terrier that color. All went well for a day or two and then something dreadful happened to the dye. Under the influence of sea air and ozone the dog came to resemble a splash of paraffin on the road. The Boat Race. Agreed that it was a great and beautiful race, with Cambridge doing the V. C. act on the winning post, but who won it? Some say Oxford's best cox that ever was, Harcourt Gold, who was brought out of retirement to break the spell of post-war Cambridge wins. Some say, usually with an American twang, Mr. Melien, Oxford's Rhodes Scholar, who kept his men merry and bright during training with his clever improvisations on the piano and stroked them bravely all the journey from Putney to Mortlake. Some say the Oxford cox, whose steering was excellent and judgment amazing, particularly in refusing to hug the inner circle round Hammersmith bend. But others say—and I am inclined to agree with them—it was really Dr. Bourne, the famous old Dark Blue stroke, who invented the new Oxford streamline boat. Certainly, considering the form of the two crews, Oxford got along with almost mysterious ease, at a slower but not a longer stroke. Most rowing clubs will be bound to experiment with the new model—centred at the four end seats and side-seated at the four middle ones, and with the boat tapering from Number 3. This new idea will have to be tried out conclusively at Henley. Everybody agrees it was the biggest and one of the most exuberant boat races ever seen. Earl Balfour came along on the umpire's launch specially to see his old university win. He was wearing his horn-rimmed American glasses, however, out of compliment to the Oxford stroke—and there was no schoolboy on the tow-path who was merrier of heart or enjoyed all the fun of the fair more genuinely than our setran of the big political arena. He was not a bit upset when the wrong boat won, and thoroughly enjoyed his trip up the old Thames. A feature of the occasion was the novelty of the boat race show. At Putney the long tedium of waiting for the crews to appear was joyously beguiled by an amazing variety of performers and contrivances. You could have your hair "permanently waved"—"Same as the Dark Blue stroke"—for "a bob"—and there were plenty of daring adventurers who tried the experiment—at a traveling machine like a camouflaged hot chip potato cart.

MOTORS
And Their Care

Slow Traffic to the Right!
The slower the car is operated, the nearer it should be kept to the right-hand side of the road.

Adjustment of Carburetor.
The road test of correct carburetor adjustment is to run the car a short distance, throttled down. Then speed up the motor quickly and the car should pick up rapidly without laboring.

A Suggestion.
The clutch pedal foot rest, on cars having stiff clutch springs, should be covered with rubber to prevent the foot from slipping. This will be found helpful and restful for drivers, especially in wet weather.

The Usual Spring Mud.
Because of the spring thaw, motorists are warned to keep off dirt roads. Stick to the hard road and avoid sliding into the mud. Chains are sometimes useless in mud ruts and holes, for they help to dig in further.

Care of the Body Finish.
The varnish on an automobile will not stand having dust or mud rubbed off, nor will it endure the grits of dust and mud driven into it by the water blasts from a high-pressure hose, to which it is often subjected.

Slipping Clutch is Dangerous.
A driver who habitually slips the clutch is courting danger. He increases the wear tenfold so that finally it will hardly hold at all, and some day when he will need it badly to pull him out of a tight place, it will fall entirely.

Longevity to Tires and Tubes.
When the rims become rusted, rough particles of rust and scale act like sandpaper on the inner tube, which often results in a premature blowout due to a worn spot. By coating the rim with aluminum paint occasionally this can be prevented.

A Good Driver is Known by—
His skillful steering.
His ease of handling.
His promptness of pedestrians.
His properly adjusted steering apparatus.

His strict obedience of every traffic regulation.
His extensive and intelligent use of arm signals.
His use of the brakes before he gets to the curve.
His protection of his motor; his use of second and first speeds.

He alternate use of foot and hand brakes on long grades and in emergency.
His avoidance of all obstacles, however small, without endangering the occupants of his car or any other car.
His respect for railway crossings; he stops, looks and shifts gears before he is actually on the tracks.

A Bad Habit.
Never drive with the feet resting on the clutch and brake pedals. The clutch is in this way partly released, causing almost constant slipping, and the car will lack speed. To overcome this the driver feeds more gas, causing the engine to overheat, and also wasting gasoline.

The muffler is one of the most neglected parts of an automobile.
The turn to the left is the dangerous one. Signal clearly and go slow.

An aluminum crank case has about the same strength as cast iron, but is about one-third lighter.
Always be careful when passing close to a parked car. The driver might start up just as you come alongside.

Never back a car any more than is absolutely necessary. Always look, and signal with the horn, before backing.
In order to have power ready in case of emergency, it is a safe practice to have the motor running when descending a grade.

Persons overcome by gases from automobiles and gasoline engines should be removed to fresh air and artificial respiration applied until a physician arrives.
When using chains, never permit the tire to rest directly on one of the cross-links for any length of time. This inflicts a slight but permanent injury to the tire at the tread.

U. S. AT LAUSANNE
LOOKING ON AS AT LAST SESSION

Washington, April 14.—U. S. representation at Lausanne in the same form as was had during the first sessions of the Near East conference probably will be authorized by the Washington Government when the conference convenes.

This was announced yesterday at the White House and it was interpreted in some quarters as indicating that Ambassador Child, at Rome, would return to Switzerland as observer and probably again would be assisted by Minister Grew, at Geneva, and in an advisory capacity by Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, U. S. high commissioner at Constantinople.

Formal announcements of these appointments were admitted by state department officials to be under consideration.

TORONTO LIBERALS SHY COALITION WITH U. F. PARTY

Toronto, April 14.—At a meeting of the Central Liberal Association of Toronto last night, the following resolution was adopted and ordered sent to Premier King, and Wellington Hay, leader of the Ontario Liberals: "Resolved that this association place itself on record as being opposed to the insidious propaganda now being carried on by the alleged Federated Liberal Clubs tending to bring about a coalition of the Liberal party with the U. F. O., on the ground that such proposals do not reflect real Liberal sentiment and that such action shall have a very disastrous effect upon the future of the party."

HERE'S A REAL REFORMER.

To the Editor of The Times: Sir—One reads with regret the derogatory remarks that are directed at Quebec nightly in your editorial page. Surely if these editorials are representative of the opinion of the people of St. John, they, the people, despite the numerous churches, follow not the teachings of Christ, who tells us: "First pluck the mote from thine own eye."

It is to be sincerely hoped that your editorials do not voice the opinion of the people, being rather the bastard child of a disordered mind, for such articles tend not to harmony but to discord. This is perhaps what you desire, to be a fiercer state, the actions of your city Government, coupled with newspaper criticisms driving away any likely settlers; witness the exodus of the T. Eaton Company and the subsequent prosperity of Moncton. You praise of Quebec's liquor industry. Why not set things right at home first, where one can obtain whiskey at any hour if one pays the price, which system is or was giving New Brunswick a revenue of $200,000 per year. Is this Prohibition?

One sees more drunkenness here than in the City of Quebec, whose population is double that of St. John, the reason for this being that one can buy a glass of beer there without slinking around back doors and using a secret knock or password.

Is it true that your bootleggers conceal operations again immediately after leaving the Police Court where they are called to account at set intervals to pay $200 into the city's coffers; surely, this is a great source of revenue. Why not settle your hydro question, almost two years in dispute? Where do all the taxes go to? The average man here is taxed 1800 per cent. more than Quebecers. Why do you so heavily tax employees of shipping companies who are transferred here by their employers? Why do you not light your streets properly, clean your roads, repair your sidewalks, and at least move a portion of the snow which accumulates during the winter? I actually noticed in your papers recently a suggestion to residents of a West Side street that they club together and hire a team to break up the snow. Why do they pay taxes?

It is impossible for me to enumerate all the things that could be set right in this old Loyalist city. Reviling other cities will not set them right. Why not cultivate a broader outlook on life. Quebec does not worry itself sick about the doings of St. John, perchance in Quebec papers once in a year, and then the article will be in a friendly spirit. This spirit obtains throughout the province, witness the winter carnival, at which the fair St. John entry, was crowned queen. Would a Quebec contestant receive the same fair play in St. John, judging by your bitterly sarcastic editorials? I would say not!

While the writer of this letter does not wish to criticize your fair city,

FLATTENED OUT,
DECLARES IRISH
REBEL OFFICER

"Five More Arrests in Each Area and We Are Finished," Says Document

Fears They Cannot Win "Militarily" — De Valera Talks of Viewing Tragedy Through Wall of Glass—Decided Swing Towards Peace.

Dublin, April 14.—The Irish irregulars have been reduced to such straits that a summer campaign on their part is impossible, according to captured documents made public by the publicity department of the Free State army.

In one of the documents, the officer commanding the first southern division of the irregulars reports:

Fought to Standstill.
"The present state of the division is that we have been fought to a standstill, and are flattened out. In the Cork 1st, 3rd and 4th brigades we have twenty-nine killed, twelve posts captured and six seriously attacked. If five are arrested in each area, we are finished."

"The men are suffering great privations, and their morale is going. The enemy is in a very strong position, with several spare battalions at the Curragh."

The divisional officer further says he is quite content to continue until a meeting of the republican executive, when he desires to satisfy himself that "what we are fighting for we can win militarily," but these are the only conditions on which he is carrying on.

Extracts from the correspondence show, according to the government publicity department, what the "high-thinking" irregular leaders are doing. An alleged communication from the adjutant-general to the president, dated Feb. 20, says: "The quarter-master-general is not quite clear what our minimum peace terms are. What should I say to him?"

The purported reply of the president to the adjutant-general two days later reads: "The obvious answer is that our minimum will be the maximum that conditions will enable us to obtain. Under conditions of which it is possible to conceive, this maximum might be as low as zero. People talk sometimes as if there were nothing in question but our desires."

Significant Admission.
The captured documents are regarded as showing how decisively the situation is adjusting itself in favor of the Free State. The admission that big scale operations on the part of the irregulars are no longer possible is considered very significant.

When the peace resolution proposed by the republican deputy chief of staff Barry at a meeting of the republican executive committee on March 22 was defeated by only one vote it was agreed to summon the executive committee in three weeks to consider the position further. When this adjourned meeting is held it is thought possible the scale may be turned against the continuance of armed opposition. Much comment is provoked by Eamon de Valera's admission in the captured documents that he was "condemned to view the tragedy through a wall of glass, powerless to intervene effectively."

Ottawa, April 13.—In the Senate this afternoon, Sir Louis Davis, Deputy Governor General, gave Royal Assent to the interim supply bill. Royal Assent was also given to the bill to authorize further advances to the Vancouver harbor commissioners.

Gasoline Saved pays for Hasslers

BIG corporations operating fleets of cars and trucks know to the fraction of a cent what the up-keep of a car costs them per mile. Over and over again their figures prove that Hasslers' actually cost their owners nothing—saving gasoline, repairs and tire mileage.

Automobile springs are as good as engineering skill can make them, but the better the spring the more resilient it is. Hasslers' control both the upthrow and rebound, so you can run along with even gasoline feed over rough roads on high gear.

It costs more fuel to stop and start any car than it does to run along at even speed.

You will make every gallon of gas go farther, saving fuel expense—if you have Hasslers'.

Along the saving of gasoline will pay for your Hasslers'; you save on repairs and tires besides. Your dealer knows these Hassler facts.

FORMER ST. JOHN NEWSPAPER MAN SERIOUSLY ILL

Thomas M. Dieulaide, Well Known Throughout United States, Sick in Washington—Had Been on Cruise With Navy.

(Special to The Telegraph.)
New York, April 13.—Thomas M. Dieulaide, formerly city editor of The Telegraph, St. John, N. B., and for more than 30 years on one of the best known newspapers in the United States as a member of the editorial staff of the Evening Sun here, is gravely ill in Washington. He was taken from the U. S. transport Henderson upon her arrival in Washington this afternoon after a five weeks' cruise in the Caribbean Sea, suffering from paralysis of the throat. Mr. Dieulaide had been the guest of the United States government during the trip, having been a member of Secretary of the Navy Denby's party on the cruise and inspection of the government's naval bases in subtropical waters.

KILLS GUNMAN, GIVES HERSELF UP

Woman Says He Threatened Her—Shot as He Slept.

Worcester, April 14. — "I've just killed a man," said Mrs. Arnie Di Pari, twenty-eight, as she walked into police headquarters, and laid a .32 calibre, pearl handled pistol on Sgt. Power's desk.

The balance was sent to a tenement house at 8 Plum street, and the police found Salvatore Martucci unconscious on a bed. They took him to the City Hospital, where he died without regaining consciousness.

The police say that the victim was a notorious gunman, who was on parole from state prison at Charlestown, where he was sent for a Boston robbery.

Mrs. Di Pari said that she shot him as he lay sleeping because he demanded that she join in a white slave venture and threatened her life. She showed no hesitation in telling her story, or regret for her act.

Lieut. Prendergast found a discharged cartridge which fitted Mrs. Di Pari's pistol, on the floor of the room near the bed where the dying man was found. Martucci has been buried at the house since he was discharged in central court on a charge of murder.

He was arrested in connection with the killing of Pietro Mero, twenty-two, of 24 Prentice street, following a wedding in Mero's house. He got off because two men were alleged to have fired shots during the affray and the second man could not be found.

Do you often talk about your battery?
A man with a battery like the Exide, that does its duty ungrudgingly, does not say much about it. He does not think about it—it is off his mind. Exide owners accept perfect battery performance as a matter of course.

It is the person whose car will not start quickly or whose lights are uncertain that talks about his battery. This sort of thing goes a long way toward taking the satisfaction out of motoring.

And why put up with it? You can get an Exide battery the right size for your car at a nearby Exide Service Station. The trip there will end your battery worries. The Exide has the rugged power you can always depend on. It lasts so much longer than ordinary batteries that it pays from a dollars-and-cents standpoint.

In new cars leaving the factory to-day more Exides are used than any other make of battery. If your new car has a long life Exide, you know the best has been provided for you.

When you have to replace your present battery, ask for an Exide.

"ACCIDENT" GIVES STORE'S PATRONS ITS VIEW OF 'EM

Salespeople Leave Bulletins Around Where Customers See Them—Read with Curiosity and They Are Flattered.

The E. E. Atkinson & Co. store in St. Paul, Minn., recently evolved a new method of driving home to its customers the desired idea of its exclusiveness and service, men by telling them about it, but by letting them discover it "accidentally."

The store carries a high-class line of women's, misses' and children's wear, and it wanted to emphasize to its patrons that it was the store's policy to cater to those of good taste and refinement.

It, therefore, issued a bulletin, copies of which were distributed to its salespeople, visualizing for them the type of women who patronize the store and explaining what the attitude of the sales force should be towards such women.

These bulletins were left around on the counters here and there by the clerks, just as though they had been innocently laid them down for the moment and forgotten them.

The result was inevitable. Women waiting for their change or their parcels would casually pick them up and glance at them. Their eyes would be caught by the first line of the letter.

"The ideal woman who patronizes the E. E. Atkinson shop was established."

Then they would read further under the stimulus of the curiosity thus aroused.

"She is the woman of impeccable taste. She knows what to wear and when to wear it. Her clothes never intrude. There is no fancy, loud or noisy appeal in her wardrobe. The keynote of her dress is simplicity in accord with her personality."

"To her the atmosphere of courtesy, refinement and good taste will always be attractive."

"It is her shop—she does not hesitate to bestow confidence—she recognizes instinctively she belongs. The merchandise, the treatment afforded, the mail matter, the advertisements all have the same individual distinction which wins her unstinted approval. The simple dignity, the lack of bustle and hurry, the uniform desire to please makes her want to come again and bring her friends."

"She is the E. E. Atkinson woman—she never from whom we must all strive to win the highest regard."

SELL OLD STOCK FIRST, GROCERS ARE ADVISED

Greatest Need of Business, Prof. Whitehead Tells Retailers

Addresses Group at Grocery Institute—New Courses are Opened at the University of Boston.

Sell the old stock first!

That is one of the biggest needs of the retail business, Prof. Harold Whitehead, associate professor of sales relations, College of Business Administration, Boston University, declared at the installation of a grocery institute by the college for the purpose of improving retail methods.

"The profits of the business come from care of stock, cleaning out old lines and always selling the old stock before offering the new," Prof. Whitehead, who is a well-known authority on retailing, said in part: "How many retailers make it a rule never to sell a new can of peas or tomatoes for instance, until all the old goods have been disposed of?"

"That may not be a very good illustration of the idea, but the principle involved is of much importance. When the average small merchant falls short of old goods which should have been sold out long ago, even at a loss. Keeping the stock fresh and cleaned up from day to day is a matter of much more importance than it seems."

"The retail merchants of the United States control more real estate than do men in any other industry; control more money than all the banks, and employ more persons than any other industry. If they were united they would have a greater voting strength than any other class. The retailers need to realize their power, to develop their ability and get together."

"Roughly there are in the United States 115,000 grocers, 150,000 general merchants, 65,000 meat markets and 4,000 tea, coffee and spice stores, a total of 294,000. These you may compare with 32,000 dry goods stores, 45,000 drug stores, 24,000 jewelers and 22,000 hardware dealers."

"The druggists are trying to sell groceries and some of them are carrying quite a number of grocery products. I remember that many years ago when I was working in a hardware store the grocer across the street put in a pretty full line of granite ware. We therefore added to our stock a well-known line of jams and jellies, making a considerable display in the window and offering them at cost."

"When the grocer saw what we were doing he came across the street and inquired about it. We told him that the next week we were going to put on the best-selling brand of tea. The result of it was that the grocer bought our jams and jellies and we bought his granite ware and we were friends ever afterward."

"A combination which we are likely to see more of in the near future is that of the small store with the traveling store, starting from the store and covering territory not covered by the establishment itself and salesmen soliciting nearby trade and by telephone.

Retailer John Course

The university has made possible a course of training for owners, managers and clerks of grocery stores. The first meeting was attended by more than eighty persons in the business, some coming a long distance. Dean Everett W. Lord welcomed the retailers present, of whom sixty-five signed up for the course. Charles J. Kramer, president of the National Retail Grocers' Association, wrote the university in praise of the idea. Artemus Ward, for many years editor of a grocery trade journal, presented his book, the "Grocers' Encyclopedia," to the university library.

One of the big errors a retail salesman makes is judging the buying capacity of customers by his own. Prof. Whitehead said: "If the customer has an income much greater than the salesman and a higher scale of living it is absurd for the salesman to recommend an article just because he himself is accustomed to it. It is better to recommend too good merchandise rather than poor goods."

The best buyers for retail stores isn't the one who buys at the lowest price or what he himself prefers, nor the one who gets the highest price goods. He is the man who secures what is sure to please his trade and at a reasonable price.

To illustrate the lack of initiative which characterizes many retail store salesfolk still, the professor told of going to nine stores in Boston to ascertain if the sellers would try to get him to buy a shirt, which was a profitable article of merchandise with them. In each case he asked for a collar button or some other small article and no salesman had the "gut" to sell him a shirt, although he was ready to buy.

sold him. The salesman found out the professor was to lecture and that he had fifteen minutes. Having learned this, the salesman suggested the professor had plenty of time to look over some nice shirts. The argument was brought up that Prof. Whitehead was going to a meeting and didn't want to carry a bundle. The salesman met this by offering to ship parcel post.

As an intended "knockout objection" the professor said he had no money. This didn't work, for the salesman offered to trust him and made the sale.

PASTOR COMMITS MOST OF BIBLE TO MEMORY

Texas Preacher Quotes Chapters of Testament Without Looking at Book

A minister of El Paso, Tex., has memorized the New Testament and a large part of the Old. He is the Rev. W. B. Hogg, of the Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The Rev. Mr. Hogg developed his memory when his eyesight failed, but when his sight was restored he continued in the development of his memory until now it is considered remarkable.

His congregation testify to his quoting verses and often whole chapters from the Bible at the beginning of his sermons, all from memory. For a while a number of members of his congregation checked up on him, but in no instance did they find a mistake. One of his most remarkable feats of memory is noted when he quotes a chapter from one part of the Bible, then another chapter from a different part, then another and still another and still another to carry out and connect his theme, but never once opening the Holy Book.

The Rev. Mr. Hogg says that he believes that few men in the world use their brains more than 50 per cent. of their capacity. "Daniel Webster probably didn't use more than 60 per cent. of his brain capacity," he declared.

"I read a page as quickly as I used to read a sentence. I read three or four books a week and I remember what I read. I am studying law now, five minutes a day, and in five minutes do the average of about four hours of study. I never intend to practice law, but intend to learn law for education and diversion. When I have finished with law, I will study medicine, but I will never leave the ministry."

Canadianizing Canadians

1. The Ramparts—Amethyst Lake, Jasper National Park.
2. Lord Darg of Vincy, Feeding a Stream in Jasper National Park.
3. Portland Canal on the Alaskan Coast—Scenic Seas of the North Pacific.

"We have to-day travelled through the most glorious scenery it has ever been my privilege to witness."

In this simply worded sentence, uttered during the course of a speech at Prince Rupert, the Duke of Devonshire, statesman, diplomat and traveller, paid tribute to Canada, of which he was then Governor-General. Like many of his predecessors he was no stranger to the beauties of nature in many parts of the world. Yet during his stay in this country he repeatedly extolled the fascination of Canadian scenery.

Today Canadians are realizing that there are many wonderlands within the boundaries of their own country, as far as anything that some of them have travelled over half the earth to see. That knowledge has given a great stimulus to their desire to know more about Canada by personal observation. Hence the growing appreciation of the educational value of travel intelligently planned and carried out. Many Canadians indeed plan their business trips so that they may be able to devote a little time to visiting beauty spots that lie in their course. Thus they find brief relaxation from the complexities and strain of modern business life.

It is in the summer months, however, that the minds of the majority of Canadians are turned to travel. The sea, the lake, the quiet streams, the mountains, the rolling plains and the great forests, all have their appeal to the seekers of recreation, health, and pleasure. Summer resorts and journeys full of charm and attractiveness are legion in their choice. But the trip of all trips, the one that is essential to the completion of knowledge by Canadians of Canada, is that across the Dominion to the Pacific coast. On the way lies Jasper National Park, a desirable stop-over point, which is an historic as well as gorgeously beautiful area. David Thompson, explorer and geologist, struggled with dangers less courage through this section of the country in 1810. In 1811 the Athabasca Pass through the Rockies was discovered, and about 1826 the Yellowhead Pass became known to the white man.

The men who led the way and blazed the trails through these passes, were fortunate if they made more than six or eight miles a day. Their discoveries opened a new route between the Pacific and Hudson Bay, over which, twice a year, dog sleigh and pack horse made trips with goods and passengers. That was considered one of the marvelous feats of the time. Today this land of wonder may be traversed in a modern railway train at a speed of forty miles an hour, and may be viewed in leisurely fashion over roads and well defined trails, by those whose time permits of camping and exploring among surroundings whose ever-present beauties are a source of never-ending amazement and delight. To the travellers who journey thence on the Pacific coast, with its charm of climate, scenic setting, and growing cities and towns, there is in prospect the finest water trip in the world. The 750 miles of ocean voyage from Prince Rupert to Vancouver and Victoria, or on to Seattle, is incomparable in its beauty. This trip is a fitting climax to the succession of gorgeous scenic pictures that can never be erased from the observant mind. Nature has been lavishly kind to Canada. Her resources in natural wealth are beyond human computation. The greatest factors in the development of these are the railways. What they have done to develop the country in a material sense can never be adequately described. Now they are bringing not only Canadians, but tourists from all over the world into touch with the matchless natural wonder places of the Dominion. They are in a very large measure responsible for the awakening to the fact that a land can be rich in all that makes for a great agricultural and manufacturing nation, and yet be noted to the ends of the earth for its scenic delights. In these phases of development the Canadian National Railways System is active. A trip across Canada aside from the pleasure it gives, will prove to be of testifiable educational value.

SAYS WE ARE NOT TO BE TAKEN SERIOUSLY

(Montreal Gazette.)

The protest of the Maritime Provinces against reduction of their membership in the House of Commons grows in strength. Press, politicians, public bodies have all registered resentment against the waning influence of this part of Canada, measured by numbers, in the seats of the mighty. Insisting that their present quota of membership be not less than the minimum. This agitation cannot be taken seriously, so opposed is it to every element of equity and justice. If the principle of representation by population is to be perverted, where will the matter end? It is regrettable that the Maritimes will lose two or three seats in the next Parliament, but none the less the fact remains that their representation will be neither less nor more than that of any other province on the basis of population, the one and only fair principle of democratic government. Quebec suffers nothing by having a fixed membership reason that as that membership is in the Commons of 65, for the simple fact that the Maritimes are an irreducible membership more than once reduced by the operation of the rule of representation by population, and it is the height of absurdity to suggest giving the Maritimes an irreducible membership in the Commons, irrespective of their population, is not a matter of favor but of justice.

We learn from the Halifax Chronicle that Mr. Venz, premier of New Brunswick, in presenting a resolution in the Assembly of that province that the Maritime representation should not be further reduced, "declared that the fathers of Confederation did not take into consideration the change that would follow the opening of the great Northwest. It had not been thought that the Western provinces would sap the life blood from the provinces by the sea, and, as the Leader of the Opposition, in seconding the motion said, it is no more than right that the Western provinces, which have drawn so largely from the Eastern provinces, should now be willing to give the latter some consideration. It surely an extraordinary argument if the Northwest has been largely populated from the Maritime Provinces, as it has not been those people have right to relative representation in Parliament in precisely the same degree as if they had remained in the provinces by the sea, and that is all the Constitution contemplates. The whole case is summed up in this query: Should a resident of Nova Scotia or New Brunswick possess a larger voice in the House of Commons than a resident of Saskatchewan or Alberta? If that is the contention of the Maritimes let it be plainly stated, in which event the absurdity of the claim will laugh it out of court.

IMPERIAL PRECEDENT BROKEN

Tokio, March 11.—(By Mail.)—Another imperial precedent of Japan has gone by the boards. Prince Juliano Yamashina, third son of Prince Kienmaro Yamashina, has decided to enter the Imperial University at Tokio as a student of literature. Heretofore, imperial princes by custom have entered either the military or naval service, or have been attached to the court of the royal family to attend a university. He is a graduate of the Peer's School.

Windsor Man For Boston Marathon

(Halifax Echo.)

Victor MacAulay, Windsor distance runner, is to compete in the Boston marathon again this year. He is to leave Windsor on Monday for Boston, and his friends and supporters are being asked to subscribe a sufficient sum to meet his legitimate expenses. In 1922 Victor was a competitor in the Boston Marathon, and his showing on that occasion was indeed creditable, seventy-eight of the world's best long distance runners faced the starter, and as the runners completed the twenty-six miles, 385 yards, the Windsor wonder carried the freshest smile. He finished in fourth position in the fine time of 2:24.02, and the winner eclipsed all previous records. In the twenty-six years this event has been held MacAulay's time has been beaten by only three runners. On five occasions first honors have been taken by Canadians, but none of these runners covered the course as speedily as the Windsorian.

Changes in the Y. M. C. A. Staff

A meeting of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. was held last evening, F. T. Barbour presiding. A report of the general secretary showed that the last eight weeks were the busiest of the season and that the financial campaign in March had met with a splendid response. The membership at the end of March totaled 1,202.

General regret was expressed by all when it was made known that the resignation of William Bowie, the general physical director of the association, had been tendered. Mr. Bowie has been with the Y. M. C. A. for three years. The resignation was accepted with extreme regret. The board also had to accept the resignation of Arthur B. Horwood, boys' work secretary, who is leaving to continue his studies at Albert College, Belleville. Mr. Horwood has done exceptionally good work among the boys during the winter. Harry T. C. Hutton, who has been physical director of the Moncton Y. M. C. A. for the last three years, was appointed the physical director to succeed Mr. Bowie. Mr. Hutton's record at Moncton has been a splendid one. C. M. McCully, who has ably filled the position of office secretary during the last year, will assume the duties of boys' work secretary in the fall, Harold T. Williams continuing in the capacity of assistant boys' work secretary.

$50,000 PARROT BITE. Housekeeper Who Lost Finger Sues the L'Ecluse.

New York, April 14.—A suite for $50,000 damages for the bite of a parrot was filed in the Supreme Court recently by Hilma Gurason, against her former employer, Mr. and Mrs. Milton A. L'Ecluse of Huntington, L. I. Miss Gurason says that on December 30 while she was a house-keeper for the L'Ecluses at Huntington the parrot bit her on the finger, the wound became infected and made amputation of the finger necessary. The complaint charges that the L'Ecluses maintained the parrot in their home although they knew the bird was vicious and had a "naturally tendency and inclination to bite." Mr. L'Ecluse is president of a real estate corporation.

Dr. William McIntosh, Curator of the Natural History Society, gave an interesting lecture last evening in the parlors of Queen Square Methodist church, under the auspices of the Young People's Society. Dr. McIntosh spoke of New Brunswick trees, plants and birds, and told of several canoeing trips in the province. The lecture was illustrated with lantern slides. Rev. Neil MacLachlan, pastor of the church, thanked the speaker on behalf of the large audience present.
