Lord Rosebery Seeks Deeper Seclusion for the Twilight of His Life.

T is not every earl who parts with his estates before his death. But Lord Rosebery has been gradually doing this, withdrawing more and more into the seclusion he has always perhaprmally desired.

Many years ago he gave his Norfolk estates to his son, the Hon. Neil Primrose, who fell in the war. And now he has installed his eldest son Lord Dalmeny, on his principal estate. Ment more, near Leighton Buzzard.

The reason for Lord Rosebery's action, be says, is that he desires to pass the twilight of his life, which follows so distinguished a public career, in complete seclusion.

He is seventy-five. In his youth he declared that he would marry a millionalress, win the Derby, and become prime minister. And all three ambitions he achieved. His marriage to Hannah, daughter of the nensely wealthy Baron Meyer de Rothschild. was a love match.

He won the Derby not once, but three times

-in 1894 with Ladas, in 1895 with Sir Visto, and in 1905 with the famous racehorse Cleero.

As for his premiership, he achieved this at the early age of forty-six, in 1894, when, after a period as foreign secretary, he succeed Gladstone as leader of the Liberal party. It was this same love of seclusion that was Once, when he was staying at the Hotel Bristol, Paris, he he was shaying at the was besieged by newspaper correspondents anxious for an interview. He successfully evaded them, but on taking a walk through the Rue de la Paix he was recognized by a French journalist, who politely asked him several quesns about British politics. Lord Rosebery tened for a few moments, and then remarked:

"I am afraid, monsieur, that you must have staken me for someone else, possibly for Lord osebery," he added, "whose photograph I am sold I very much resemble."

Yet combined with his aloofness is supreme Many years ago, when he was giving a r to some of his tenants, an old man who nat next to him helped himself to a huge piece of ice cream. When he regained his breath he exclaimed: "Why, this pudding's froze!"

With admirable tact, Lord Rosebery tasted a little from his own plate, and then, his face a wonderful study in genuine astonishment, remarked, "Great Scot! So it is!"

"A lonely man," says A. G. Gardiner, "full of strange exits and entrances, incoherent, inexplicable, flashing out in passionate, melo-dramatic utterances, disappearing into some re-mote fastness of his solitary self."

THE CONCLUSIVE ANSWER OF CAPT. BOBBIE BROWN

How He Pressed the Button and How He

During the weary period of waiting in Germany and Belgium, which the Canadian troops sometimes called "demoralization," prior to "demobilization," Captain "Bobby" Brown, of Galt, was paymaster of the 1st and 3rd Battalions. Some folks had been "out since the first "-of the armistice. Captain Brown had been out since the first of the war, and was still good natured-for a paymaster. But the European type of telephone, with its combination of buttons to press, he found very trying.

Seatel in 1st Battalion orderly room, up fa Germany, at New Year's, 1919, Captain Brown ought to communicate with Brigade H.Q. In the room was Capt. A. W. O. Stewart of Ottawa, assistant adjutant, known to history as the officer who said his heart went "por so potato" in the front line, instead of pit-a-pat.

"I can't hear on this thing," complained the paymaster, fumbling with the telephone head-

"Press the button, Bobbie," advised the as sistant adjutant, who was supposed to know all about such things.

"I am," persisted the paymaster. "Then don't," said the A. A.

"I'm not," was the prompt reply.

And that reminded Capt. Stewart of the equally conclusive answer given by the sentry one night in the line. The adjutant was filling in his report to brigade, and desired to report the direction and velocity of the prevailing "How's the wind, sentry?" he called to the creels. Evening came and Mr. Kennedy was the last to show up. The rest of the party were seated in the car waiting for supper to be served, when he entered and called the steward in a loud tone, "Warwick, take these twelve trout and cook them up for breakfast." The others looked up in surprise, none of them having equalled this catch, but said nothing. No more was thought of the matter until one of the members happened to enter the kitchen, and out of curiosity opened Mr. Kennedy's creel to inspect the big catch. Therein, reposing on some moist grass, he was surprised to see only two small trout, just over the eight-inch limit. Each evening after that Mr. Kennesky was required to dis-

During the recent exhibition in Toronto an excitable, nervous type of man appeared one evening outside the public health tent at the rear of the government building. The tent was in darkness and no sound came from within except the burr of the moving picture machine as a health film was being shown to interest the people who were waiting to hear Mrs. Emmaline Pankhurst speak on "social hygiene."

A lady approached the tent and was about to enter when the nervous man spoke to her. "Pardon me," said be, what is going on in there? Is it a spiritualistic meeting ! " "No," said the lady, "it is just a picture being shown till Mrs. Pankhurst arrives."

U.S.A. LOSE MILLIONS ON SALE OF SHIPS.

One of the most remarkable events in the history of maritime affairs was the sale at auction by the United States Government on September 12 of 226 ocean freighters built of wood in the war period. Ever since the close of the war, the Government has been anxious to find private purchasers for this portion of wartime emergency shipping; but there has been no demand. The average cost of these ships was about $700,000 each. The whole 226 were sold to a single purchaser for $750,000, a sum less than the cost of some of the individual vessels. It seems almost incredible that they should have spent approximately $1,000,000 apiece for a good many ships which, while still new, could not be sold for as much as $4,000 apiece. This rather pitiful end of a great war experiment of wooden steamships merely illustrates-in what is after all a minor detail—the awful wastefulness of war on the material side, even when conducted by most famous business executives as dollar-a-year recruits at Washington.

AMERICAN INCOME TAXES SHOW BIG

The effect of the financial depression which began in the autumn of 1920 on the incomes and profits of the American people is strikingly shown in the recently published report of the Commission of Internal Revenue for the fiscal year neding June 30, 1922. The total collections from income and profit taxes that year were only $2,088,000,000 as compared with $3,-228,000,000 in 1920-1921. The current year should see a still further falling off, as with the beginning of the calendar year of 1922 the highest surtax rate was reduced from 65 per cent. to 50 per cent., while the excess profits tax on corporations was done away with altogether, a straight normal tax of 121/2 per cent. on profits being substituted. This falling-away of the returns from these schedules is a matter of serious moment in their thring plan. Collections on these two items for 1920, for instance, amounted to $3,570,000,000 and this sum was nearly two-thirds of the year's entire tax re-In fact, ever since the law of 1916, income taxes have been overwhelmingly the most important source of the national revenues.
