And Refrain From Making Trouble Everywhere.

Joliet Men Await Chicagoans' Action -Columbus Newspaper in Trouble.

Pittsburg, Aug. 23 .- Aside from the partial equipment of the Star plant of the American Tinplate Company and the preparation for its immediate resumption of work there was no special development in the strike situation in this city today. No further trouble occurred at the Pennsylvania tube works, and at all other strike points quiet reigned. While the strikers claim that four of the new men at the Star plant have deserted the company and say that others would leave if they could get out of the mill, Supt. Harper maintains that he has 100 men at work; that none have deserted, and that the men can come and go from the mill as they please. At Irondale the tinplate company gained another victory today by the successful start of one set of rolls. There are said to be enough men in the plant to man one mill one turn, and the company officials say now that the break has been made, they will get the men back. President Shaffer said that no movement has yet been made by either side looking to arbitration or mediation. No hint has come from the steel people on the subject and none has gone out from the workers. There was, however, a tendency among many of the one are prisoners. labor leaders today to discuss the possibility of arbitration, and on every side was heard mentioned the name of Gov. W. A. The news department of the paper having been abolished, the News Writers' Union has declared a lockout at the establishment and tonight the printers decided that hereafter they will set nothing but editorials and advertis ments until the trouble between the proprietor and the News Writers' Union shall be settled. If Kruger imagines that the moment when Russia and France are exchanging felicitations will be a favorable opportunity for bringing forward an indictment against England he is sure to be disappointed.

HANGS HIMSELF IN HIS CHURCH.

SOUTH AMERICA. Censure of Pastor's Marriage Drives Him to Suicide.

Republics Warned by British Wife Finds Him Hanging in the Belfry -Had Been Wedded Only Two Weeks to His Organist.

Washington, N. J., Aug. 23.-The Rev. George B. Harrington, a young Drew Seminary student, who was filling his first charge at Oxford, three miles from this place, committed sui-cide Tuesday by hanging himself in his church. On Aug 7 Mr. Harrington was married to Miss Lida Tice, the organist of the church, and it is largely due to the criticism heaped upon him for this act that he took his life. The young couple drove to Belvidere on the day of their marriage and without asking the consent of any one were married by the Rev. Nathaniel Brooks, pastor of the Methodist Church in that town. They had known one enother for about two months. They went to housekeeping at once in the parsonage of the church, and only last Saturday night the members gave them a reception at which enough provender was deposited in the kitchen to last the minister and his wife through the winter.

Some of the older members of the church shook their heads and said unkind things to the young man, and it is thought that he must have received some word from the authorities at Drew which made it sible for him to return there. To some of his friends he has within the last few days expressed grave doubts as to whether his hasty marriage was proper and has said that he was much worried over its probable effect on his career. Tuesday morning the minister and his wife went to spend the day with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Levi Tice. and though Harrington seemed depressed nothing was thought of it. Shortly before noon he went to a store, but promised his wife nearby that he would return at 1 o'clock for dinner. When he did not return at 2 o'clock, Mrs. Harrington began to wonder what had become of him. Then she remembered that he had said that he proposed to end his life before the day was over. She had only laughed at him, but now the words came back to her with awful force.

She jumped on her wheel and rode to Green's Pond, about four miles away. Having arrived there the young voman realized that it would be very difficult for her to discover whether or not her husband had drowned himself, and so after a few inquiries, she rode home. It was 3 o'clock when she drew up at her father's house, and after a short rest was joined by her father in the search. They went to the par-sonage and then to the church. The door of the church was locked, but knowing that the minister had a key, the father decided to take a shutter from a window and investigate. This was done, and the father and daughter entered. As their eyes became accustomed to the darkness, they saw that they were alone in the auditorium. Then Mr. Tice walked over to the door eading up into the belfry, and discovered that the key which for years had hung alongside the door was gone and the door was locked on the in-It was a frail door and little effort was required to lift it from its hinges. This done, the father-in-law led the way up the rickety stairs to the first platform. When he reached that spot he asked his daughter to turn back. From the platform it was only possible to see the feet of a man hanging through a trap door in the landing above, but they told a tale that needed little further explanation. All the surrounding circumstances show that the minister deliberately planned to break his neck in the fall. He had fixed a clothes line about a beam, and then climbed upon an old scaffold which had been used by Standing on top of this, he had tied the rope about his neck and then pushed the scaffold from under feet. PROGRESS OF ROYAL PARTY

ments at Ottawa and Montreal.

Cape Town, Aug. 23.-The royal yacht Ophir, with the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York on board, sailed today for the Island of Ascen-

WILL, VISIT HULL. Ottawa, Aug. 23.-The Duke of Cornwall and York and his party will visit Hull. No lengthy stay, however, can be made, as the programme as drawn up only permits of a drive through the business portion of the city. Mayor Fallareaudeau has received a communication from Major Maude that the royal visitors will drive through Hull to the Rideau be Opening Day, and we want all the Falls. After viewing the falls, the Duke and party will proceed to Parliament Hill, where the statue of Queen Victoria will be unveiled. A holiday is to be proclaimed in Hull. Arches are to be erected along the royal route. One will be built on the royal route. One will be built on the Interprovincial Bridge, at the Hull end, and another at the Quebec side of the Suspension bridge. Other arches may be erected in the city streets. Hon. Mr. Tarte has been approached and an effort will be made to have Bridges street and the bridges.

to have Bridge street and the bridges decorated by the Government. The Interprovincial bridge will also be gay with bunting. It has been suggested that the Duke of York be asked to lay the corner stone of the new Hull city hall. This, however, can hardly be arranged, as his stay in the city will be limited to a slow drive through the principal streets.

WORKINGMEN'S ARCH OF WEL-COME.

The trades unionists of Ottawa are talking of building an arch of welcome for the royal party, opposite the allied trades and labor headquarters. One of the novel features of the Duke of Cornwall's trip to Ottawa may be an historical spectacle given by French-Canadians. It has been suggested that on one of the open spaces on the route of the Duke's march, a historic spectacle should be erected, representing some event in Canada's early history. The costumes necessary are in existence. It is be-lieved the spectacle would be of great interest to the Duke, and something out of the ordinary.

AT MONTREAL. Montreal, Aug 22.—Mayor Prefontaine has issued a proclamation, declaring Sept. 18 and 19 public holidays. These are the dates on which the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York are expected here.

EDITOR RESIGNS.

Mr. R. C. Lehmann Severs Connection With Daily News.

London, Aug. 22.-R. C. Lehmann has severed his connection with the Daily News. It is said that this step is not connected with the pro-Boen policy of the paper, but is due to differences with the directors regarding matters of management.

Mr. Lehmann, who was formerly a member of the staff of Punch, and who was at one time captain of the Leander Rowing Club, was appointed editor of the Daily News in January last, succeeding Mr. Edward T. Cook. The Daily Express of London announced on April 5 that Mr. Lehmann was to resign the editorship of the Daily News in favor of Mr. Henry W. Massingham, retaining, however, his large financial interest in the paper.

A NEW DEPARTURE.

Alabama Lynchers Fired On By State Authorities and Forced to Retreat.

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 23.—A correspondent at Ashville wired at 12:50 p.m. that Sheriff North and deputies had fired on a mob seeking to lynch James Brown (colored) who was tried and convicted of criminal assault. Two members of the mob named Blankenship were fatally wounded. One hundred shots were fired. The mob retreated, but are said to be reorganizing for another attack. Sheriff North is trying to get in communication with the governor to secure militia.

Another account states that the mob numbered 400 men, and that three men were wounded, two fatally. The mob dispersed. Brown was tried at a special term of court, and sentenced to be hanged Sept. 20. The trial lasted two hours, and the jury was out eleven minutes.

When it became noised abroad that the court had directed the sheriff to take the prisoner back to Birmingham for safe keeping, the mob sur-rounded the court house where Brown was being guarded by Sheriff North and 28 deputies. The mob demanded the prisoner, and the sheriff informed them that he would shoot the first man that put his foot on the court house steps. A few minutes later a member of the mob dashed up the steps firing a revolver. A general fusillade

The sheriff's force fired through the windows and doors, and the mob retreated, firing as they went. Walter Blankenship was shot through the Arthur Blankenship was shot through the head and shoulders with ouckshot. Both will die. A boy named Hanby was shot in the head. Owing to a heavy rain the mob sought shelter in near-by stores. Another attack on the court house is feared.

The schooner was close in shore on Monday afternoon, when a squail from the north came up suddenly. Capt. Burns and his crew made an effort to get the boat out, but could not do so. She went ashore about opposite the Quarantine, and has been so badly damaged by the heavy sea that it is not expected she will be worth taking off. "You charge me, for the hundredth time, with having abandoned the principles of the Liberal party since I became prime minister; with having deserted the cause of the settlers of the west; with having allowed corruption, political insanity and debauch-ery to flood the legislature; and, summing up the whole of my iniquities, you aver as my 'chief crime the blow struck at the moral standards of the people.' You proclaim that it is 'vithin my right, to say othing of your duty, to publicly protest if the platform is completely ignored and repudiated.'

"I leave the public, to whom you appeal, to judge of the sincerity of all this foam and froth, but just placing before their eyes the last crime for which you arraign me, and this I do in the language of your indictment. Thus opens your letter: 'As a result of the recent judicial pronouncement, I find myself, so to speak, a statesman out of a job. It is probably not necessary for me to inform you of the decision in question, as you are doubtless fully apprised of it, and, I am convinced, far from disappointed at its effect. If there were any doubt on this point, you certainly would have hand to interfere, and called off the political dogs of war whom you knew well were pursuing me. No man knew better than you the history and facts connected with the case, and that you stood by and allowed a political crime which you could have stopped by raising a finger, to be perpetrated, proves that if you were not primarily responsible you you were at least particeps criminis.' "From all this it appears that you were accused of having been elected through bribery, corruption, and a violation of the law; that for this you were brought to account before the courts; that the charges were found to be true, and that as a consequence you were deprived of your seat in parliament by sentence of the judicial authority. From all this it likewise appears that, according to your construction of those principles of morh you have been the loud was my duty 'to raise my hand d interfere in your be-half; to 'call off the political dogs of war, whom I knew were pursuing you, and to allow the crime against were pursuing the positive law of the land, by which you had obtained your seat, to remain undetected and unpunished, and this refusal on my part you call a crime. "You say in so many words that 'no man knew better than I did the history and facts connected with the case,' and that, knowing such history and facts, 'I stood by and allowed a

If I were to enter into any defense. I might urge that little did I suppose that the apostle of virtue would expect to be shielded from his own derelictions by him whose chief crime he had often declared 'was the blow struck at the moral standards of the people.' "But I enter into no defense. I do not feel called upon to do so. The public have now the exact measure of what is your conception of 'the moral standards of the people,' and they will now understand the true inwardness of your shrieks against 'political debauchery.' They will come to a conclusion, which others better and more early informed, had had an opportunity of forming and had formed. "I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant.

HIS FAITHFUL DOG

Stopped a Train to Secure Help For Hie Injured Master.

Pontiac, Mich., Aug. 22.-Matt Cole, the 15-year-old adopted son of John Cannon, living a mile north of this city, sustained injuries from which he died yesterday afternoon. He had gone to the railroad track to wave an adieu to his father, who was going to Lansing, when in some way a pile of rails fell on him.

The injured lad was discovered through his shepherd dog which stood on the track barking when the next train came along. The faithful ani-mal refused to leave the track, and the train was stopped, the engineer finding the unconscious form beneath the heavy rails.

The lad was taken to Drayton Plains, and afterward brought home. He was able to tell of the accident, but his injuries were so severe that he died last night.

ANALYSIS OF CENSUS FIGURES

Shows Uniformity of Decrease in Population

Of the Older Rural Districts and Increase in Newer and Urban Centers.

[Toronto Globe.] An analysis of the census figures for Ontario will show with what remarkable uniformity the population has decreased in the older rural districts and increased in the urban centers and the newer regions. Increases occur in three classes of districts: those which contain resources which have recently begun to be exploited, such as Algoma; districts which have developed some industrial asset, such as the Niagara frontier, and constituencies which contain growing cities or towns of the larger class, of which the county of fork is the most conspicuous example. Putting it in another way, the por-tions of the province which border on the lower lakes, with few exceptions, show decreases, while the interior and the Lake Superior and eastern Georgian Bay shores show increases. This rule is not absolute, but is a rough explession of the facts. In other words, old Ontario for the moment has reached the limit of growth other than urban, and new Ontario's period of expansion has commenced.

THE DECREASES. Looking at the details of the figures, it will be observed that, with one exception, the counties upon the St. Lawrence River show decreases. Glengarry, Cornwall and Stormont, Dundas, North Grenville, South Leeds and Frontenac show an aggregate decrease of 3,251; while Brockville has increased by 149. It will be observed that the town of Brockville is in the constituency of that name, and, while details for this town have not yet been given out, we may expect to find it possessing an increase greater than that of the constituency in which it is

On the other hand, the Ontario side of the Lower Ottawa Valley shows on the whole a pronounced increase. The counties which show increases are: Prescott, Russell, Carleton and Leeds and Grenville, and their total increase is 9,389. Against these are to be set decreases of 1,461 in the two Lanarks. The net increase thus is 7.928.

Bay of Quinte constituencies show decreases, Lennox, East and West Hastings and Prince Edward having decreased by 5,275. Similarly, the Lake Ontario counties as far west as Toronto show severe losses, the Northumberlands. Durhams and East and West Ontario having lost no less than 13,577. East and West York both appear in the census lists as having gained, the aggregate increase amounting to 17,181. Of this fully 15,000 must be credited to the city of Toronto, while the gains of Toronto Junction and several communities in close touch with Toronto must be counted. The counties at the head of the lake, Halton, Peel and Wentworth, show decreases aggregating 4,732.

constituency has lost nearly REMARKABLE INCREASE. The sub - peninsula formed Kent and Essex shows a remarkable increase, amounting to 3,655. Of this over 2,400 is accounted for by growth of Windsor and Walkerville. Chatham's gain has been very slight, so that for an explanation of the redainder of this gain one is disposed to look to the natural gas industry and the extensive reclamation of soil by means of drainage.

Upon the Lake Huron shore the record of decreases is continued, Lambton, North Middlesex, Huron and Bruce showing a falling off of 15,523. The southern shore of the Georgian

A CHECKERED RECORD. North Grey has an increase of 732, out Owen Sound, which is in the constituency, has gained 1,280. East Grey and North Simcoe show declines aggregating 2,370, while East Simcoe, in which are situated the new industrial center of Midland and the growing Muskoka Lakes district, has gained THE LONDON DISTRICT.

There remains the interior of the western peninsula, and the broad isthmus which, broken by Lake Simcoe, unites the peninsula to the main body of the province. In this district two areas exist in which increases appear. These may be designated the London and the Stratford, Berlin, Waterloo, Galt and Brantford districts. In the westernmost of these the constituencies of South and East Middlesex show an average increase of 1,-213. In both of these, however, are included what are virtually portions of London. The city of London, municipally speaking, has an increase of over 6,000, while the constituency of London shows only 2,136 of an in-crease. The same tale is told here of diminished rural population. In the other district are the constituencies of South Brant, North and South Waterloo, North Perth, and the increase in these amounts to 5,786. South Brant includes the city of Brantford, in which the increase has been 3,878; North Waterloo contains Berlin and Waterloo, which have gained 2,522 and Keef respectively. South Waterloo contains tains Galt, which has gained 331, while

The gains in this group of counties thus are seen to be exclusively urban, and to be accompanied by losses in the rural districts. As for the remainder of the constituencies in the peninsula, those to the southwest of the Brantford-Stratford tier of constituencies, West Middlesex, the Oxfords. South Perth and Wentworth and Brant show losses of 7,271, while those north of it, Cardwell and the three Wellingtons, have lost 6,905. The Lake Simcoe constituencies, North York, South Simcoe, North Ontario, to which may be added the Victoria, show losses of 3,729.

ESCAPED LOSSES. It will thus be seen that the districts in older Ontario which have on Lake Erie, the district in which St. Thomas is situated; on the Detroit frontier, a region of great wealth, whose development is still in progress; on the Georgian Bay, the constituencies in which are Owen Sound and Midland: and in the interior of the western peninsula, the districts which contain the growing centers of London, Brantford, Galt, Berlin, Waterloo and Stratford. To return to the east, the lower Ottawa valley shows considerable growth, with the exception of the Lanarks.

NORTHERN DISTRICT. When we turn to the northern districts of Ontario we are confronted with an entirely different situation. The tier of central districts, the Peterboros, North Hastings and Addington, all have grown, the increases being 3,777. In West Peterboro the inmining areas under active development. Going further north we find the Renfrews, showing an increase of 3,-422. This county contains no large urban centers, but it will be remem-bered that the new Ottawa, Arnprior and Parry Sound Line runs through

When we go one step farther north upon the map we find very heavy gains. Nipissing has gained 15,350; Muskoka and Parry Sound, 7,207; Algoma, 18,930; total for the new Ontario, a gain of 41,487. This vast area of course, the greater portion of the new Parry Sound to Ottaway railway, an immense lumbering area, much new agricultural land, and by far the greater portion of our mineral wealth. Each of these is a separate and powerful reason for the increases recorded. It is indeed singular that nearly 45,000 of the increase made by Ontario should comefrom the new Ontario, which Mr. Whitney has so industriously decried.

EMINENTLY NATURAL. The Globe has already dwelt upon the fact that economic changes, such as the introduction of machinery and the introduction of mixed farming, have resulted in a great decrease in the amount of labor needed on the farms of old Ontario, and have accordingly brought about a proportionate decrease of population. The singular uniformity with which in eastern, central and western Ontario the rural districts have lest population emphasizes this point. The farms of old Ontario are as carefully tilled as ever. They earn considerably more money than they did ten or more years ago. There are fewer farmers to share this increased income, and so they are better off on two counts. While the rural districts everywhere, except on the Detroit frontier and in the Ottawa valley, have receded in population. All of the cities except one have made heavy gains, and, exactly as is to be expected under such circumstances, no small portion of the population displaced from the farms of old Ontario appears to have flowed into the newer districts, whose varied resources are just beginning to be exploited. The process is so uniform as to set forth most clearly how eminently natural it

Chicago, Aug. 23.-Samuel Morris was the wittlest wit that trod the boards of stageland last night, but while he grimaced and uttered his quaint lines that the audience of Hopkins Theater might laugh and applaud his words, his heart was breaking. His wife was dying at the Saratoga Hotel, and when the gay "Rake" in "Under Two Flags" was at his best a telephone bell behind the scenes rang and brought the sad news that the comedian's wife was dead.

Mrs. Morris, who was 35 years old, ended her life by swallowing a pint of wood alcohol. She drank the liquid with the purpose of ending her life, and only repented the deed when whom she had been separated a year appeared. Then it was too late for medical skill to aid her, and Sam Morcrease is only two-thirds that of the ris, with tears in his eyes, was comtown of Peterboro; to the east are pelled to return to his hour of mimicry at the State Street Theater, knowing that she could not live until he might return to her side.

The Censuses Contrasted.

In a late interview in the Globe, Mr. James McMullen, ex-M. P., says he believes the census recently taken is the most accurate since Confederation. The reasons why the population in Ontario does not show a larger increase are, Mr. McMullen holds, two in number: (1) The census of 1891 was padded, and (2), there has been a large movement of young men from Ontario to Manitoba. Everybody admits the operation of the last-mentioned cause. There may be some who, through political prejudice, deny that the census of 1891 was padded, but Mr. McMullen is able to give proof. He says:

"In 1891 the returns were padded, if not intentionally, then by the system vention. Once on a time, very many adopted. For instance, I know of a case crimes, including common thest and of a family in which there were five young men. Two of these had been in the United States for a year and a above named, were not under the half and have never returned, yet these two young men were included in the census as residents of Canada. I know there were 20,000 or 30,000 young men in the United States in 1891 who were enrolled as residents of Ontario. Of course, at that time there was a very forcible and pointed charge that the Province was being depleted of its of extraditable offenses. We have inpopulation by the exodus of young men and women to the United States, and the enumeration, I believe, was taken on a method to tide the Govern- honest people affected, but greatly to ment of the day over the danger of that charge being verified by the returns of the census, and in order to do that they put down those who were being merely temporarily absent, and as residents of Canada, anticipating their return."

These instances, we doubt not, could be added to in the experience of many other citizens of Canada. For example, we have been told of one family, where three sons were naturalized citizens of the United States, and had no intention of coming back, The densus enumerator of 1891 was informed of this fact, yet he deliberately wrote down the names and ages of these persons and counted them in his list as "Canadians." Of course, this was contrary to the law governing the taking of the census; but if similar efforts to make a big showing were indulged in, to please the "boomsters," on the eve of a general election, when it was deemed necessary to prove that a discredited taxation system had been of some use, it can easily be understood why the census of 1891 fictitiously increased the population. If we would all consent to forget the misdoings of those days, there would doubtless be fewer unscrupulous attacks on the Minister of Agriculture and the officers of the department who have had charge of the

Concerning Hay Fever.

This is hay fever time. It is a mysterious disease, nobody knowing with certainty what causes it or how to cure it. The London (England) Spectator thinks the House of Commons should remember that its members occasionally slander the press in Parliament. and that, owing to the privileges of the slanderers, the press has no remedy. The press gets on very well without being able to call the members of Parliament to account. Why, then, should not the members of the House of Commons endure the attacks of the press with similar equanimity?

A few may get close enough, in their good clothes to make a bow-there is to be no hand-shaking-but the mass of the people will be well enough satisfied with seeing the royal pair. Nor is there anything snobbish or unreasonable in their desire. It is a rational curiosity. The chief thing, then, in the arrangements, is to so arrange the local route that the people may see the Duke and Duchess, and that the Duke and Duchess may get a good view of our Canadian people.

Imitation Primrose Leagues.

The good Conservative ladies of Toronto talk of organizing a Maple Leaf League, with the view of helping Mr. Whitney. This is imitation of the Primrose League of England. The Toronto Telegram takes the ground that as the maple leaf is Canada's national emblem, it ought not to be employed as a partisan symbol. Our contemporary need not tremble. The atmosphere of Canada is too democratic for any imitation Primrose 8 per cent of the business of the court League to flourish in this country. But in Canada, wherever the new-rich have endeavored to "patronize" the not-quiteso-well-off, the Canadian grandees have discovered that the others thought themselves as good as anybody else, and declined to be patronized. The patronizers were probably as much astonished as the French cook, who, on lifting the lid, detected the calf's head in the pot sneering at

The New Zealand Way.

The following letter in the New York Evening Post will be read with interest. It is from the pen of Mr. Henry Demarest Lloyd, the author, who has made a special study of the New Zealand system of conciliation in trade disputes. We feel amply justifled in devoting the necessary space to this important letter:

"To the Editor of the Evening Post: "Sir,-Mr. Charles Francis Adams, in his very interesting communication to your columns suggesting a public board of investigation as a means of solving labor troubles, speaking of "compulsory" — so-called—arbitration, says: 'No practical method of causing the award of any tribunal to be respected or obeyed has yet been devised,' and he repeats the familiar re-mark about the impossibility of making a business man or laborer work if he does not wish to.

"I have recently received a volume of 471 pages, published by the New Zealand Government, and entitled: Awards, Recommendations, etc., made when the Act Came Into Force to June 30, 1900.' In the language of the preface the book is meant to serve the purpose which law reports fulfill in regard to other courts. It shows that during the six years of the law, in the first of which nothing was done, 205 cases have been before its tribunals. Of these 106 were initiated before the boards of conciliation, which have no powers of enforcing awards, and in only 31 of them were the findings accepted; 75 were taken up to the court of arbitration, which has the power of enforcing-if needed, as it seldom isand there settled, and usually the decisions of the conciliation boards were reaffirmed. Other cases to the number of 57 were initiated directly in the arbitration court, as the disputants felt that time spent in the boards with no enforcing powers was time wasted. Of these 163 cases thus settled by boards of court, only 12 came up afterwards in applications for 'enforcement'; in 6 crossed the borders into neighboring the application of the aggrieved party for enforcement was denied, but in others, where the violation of awards was clearly proved, the court, ignoring its perhaps too distant critics, proved that it was entirely practical to enforce the enforcement. A firm of curriers in Auckland was made to pay a fine of two guineas to the union of its men, and all the costs. In Wellington, Tonks, a baker, was found guilty of a 'very deliberate breach' in making his men go to work before the stipulated time of 4 o'clock in the morning. That cost him ten pounds sterling besides five guineas to his employes union, and all the expenses of the case. A master plumber has to submit to of nearly $150 for three breaches. A gold mining company was penalized an equal sum-and so on. Not the least interesting or important of the returns in the volume is that in 24 of the cases the appearance before the tribunals was not to litigate, but simply to file as a public document an agreement made between employers and employe binding both during its continuance. One of the principle purposes of the original law was to fix a procedure and create a place of record for such agreements in renunciation of the 'right' of strike or lockout. That was made up of the recording of such agreements must be considered a very ment.

"In another return lately issued the New Zealand Government shows that the total cost to the country of these boards and court, for salaries, fees. traveling expenses, everything for six years, has been $27,000. 'I may be wrong,' as the popular song has it, but I cannot help wondering if that investment was not more practical than as we lie between the forever warring forces of labor and capital. "Perhaps a word about the 'compulsion' may clear away a stumbling block. No workingman can be brought before these tribunals nor appeal to them unless he belongs to a trades union, nor unless that trades union has legally registered for the purpose of summoning or being summoned in such proceedings, and such workingmen can withdraw their registration and pass out from under the law if they wish.

"Employers and employes can keep out of the reach of the arbitration law by the simple device of arranging with each other not to resort to it. can then strike and lockout to their heart's content, if such war does come from the heart. Here is the compulsion: If one party to a labor dispute wants to arbitrate instead of fighting, the other party, if summoned by it, must come into court and arbitrate. It is the compulsion of our civil courts which guard us with lawsuits instead of suits of armor. And under the New Zealand law no business man or workingman who does not like the award compelled to work. They can stay home or go fishing; only, if they do work, it must be under the award. The 'practical' result is that both employers and employes all the country have formed unions to take advantage of the law: they could withdraw, but they do not do so; the law is so popular that its scope is widened to include several classes not before given the privilege of arbitration, such as clerks, tram car men, and others. "The publication states that it is intended, reference for 'students of political economy in other countries.' I have no doubt that any American inquirer could obtain a copy by writing to Mr. Edward Tregear, secretary for labor, Wellington, New Zealand. That is the kind of strike they encourage in New Statesers Vs. Americans.

[Galt Reformer.] We observe that the London Advertiser and a number of others Canadian papers have ceased to use the word "American" when referring to the United States. The point is well taken. The Yankees have no more right to be termed "Americans" than we have, and we are only tickling their vanity by so referring to them. "United Statesers" may be an unwieldly and not very euphonious term, but it is nevertheless the proper expression to use.

A New Organization Needed.

[Rochester Post-$xpress.]

There are powerful labor organizations in this country that are oppressing those who are not members and seeking to obtain a mastery over those who are non-union. Their leaders say: "You must join our organizations or we shall deny your right to work. It seems to the Post-Express that the time has come for another organization, embracing those who would maintain their rights as simple American citizens. The platform of the organization should be: Freedom Contract; No Dictation; the Right to

Everywhere we see the rights of men attacked or disregarded; everywhere we see a resort to violence; everywhere we see a denial of the right to work except under the direction, and subject to the orders of so-called labor leaders. All this is wrong; all this is contrary to the spirit of our institutions. It is, therefore, the duty of Americans to resist it, and resistance can be successful only through

THE WRONG PRINCIPLE

The Restraint of Production an Economic Mistake.

[From the Pittsburg Dispatch.] A candid view of British trades unionism is taken in an article by Mr. Benjamin Taylor, of Glasgow, in the North American Review. He declares that while in theory the trade union is an organization for protection against tyranny, it has become in practice a power in restraint of labor and for manacling capital. Of American competition he says: "If American manufacturers are enabled to undersell their British rivals in some of their pet industries it is not because the Ameri can workman is a better craftsman than the British—he is, indeed, often imported from Britain-but because he is an unfettered producer. That is to say, American labor is more productive than British.' In short, the conception of the Brita definite amount of work to be done world, and, to give each man a share to do, no one should do more than is absolutely required of The union is used to prevent ore workman from earning more than an-

There was vigorous opposition to the railroads by the canal boatmen on the ground that men would be de-prived of employment. The teamsters made riotous demonstrations against the first pipe line on the same score. The moving machine and harvester met the same objection. Yet, as a matter of fact, labor has been more fully employed since the influence of modern improvements has been felt. The canal boatmen and teamsters found more profitable occupation in most instances. There is work to be had on the farms, for this year has been a loud cry for more labor to Labor should receive a full measure of compensation. "Take care of the pennies and the dollars will take care of themselves," is a good old saying with a good deal of truth in it, but, like all maxims, there are some striking exceptions to it, says Shoe and Leather Facts. While it is undoubtedly true that no man can make very much of a success of his business unless he either himself watches the details closely or has some one to do it for him. still there is danger on the other hand getting the pennies so closely up to the eyes that you can't see the dollars beyond. Training Gardeners.

Boston Herald

One of the practical things undertaken by the London county council is the training of boys to be gardeners. Good gardeners, says one of the London newspaperrs, are deplorably rare. Whether they come to the United States for better opportunities, the newspapers do not say; but we are disposed to think the American labor market is not oversupplied with entirely competent ones. The Technical Education Board of the offers scholarships to boys who are leaving the public elementary schools to enable them to take a thorough course of training at the school practical gardening, which has lately been established by the Royal Botanical Society in Regent's Park. Pupils who left this school last summer all obtained good places. A school gardening is as necessary as a school of forestry. Our agricultural colleges give instruction in gardening, but they do not take boys from the primary schools. A large proportion of their students are young men who have No, Maude, dear, nautical talk need done as much gardening and farming as they care to do, and are seeking to A MERRY HEART GOES ALL THE DAY.—But one cannot have a merry heart if he has a pain in his back or a cold qualify themselvts for something that seems to them better.

"A Breezy Time," which will be seen at the London Opera House next Monday and Tuesday, is one of the most effective farce comedies on the road this season. It is diverting without being inane, and has a slight story which makes a very strong vehicle for introducing the various specialities of the different members of the cast, each one of whom is an artist in his or her line. "A Breezy Time" has a fine brass band and orchestra, playing nothing but the very best selections, and those who want to hear will have a chance, as the band makes a parade daily. Plan now open.

Clans Gathered as Pipers Played "The Campbells Are Coming."

The canny Caledonian invaded Pittsburg yesterday, says the Pittsburg Commercial Gazette of Wednesday, and in a few hours the town was his. It was the 20th regular meeting of the Royal Clan of the Order of Scottish Clans. No less than six thousand Scotchmen in all parts of the United States and Canada are represented by the delegates now having headquarters at the Monongahela House. Clansman James McCash, of St.Louis, was sick and not able to attend this meeting. At the name of McCash the blood of every true clansman tingles, for it was he who founded the first clans on this side of the Atlantic. It was McCash who inaugurated what is tenderly referred to as the "auld mither clan" at St. Louis on St. Andrew's Day, 1873. The loyal Scot had but a few friends around him then, but from this clan, known officially as Clan Campbell, No. 1, there have sprung clans in almost every corner of the continent. Clansman McCash had not missed a Clansman neeting of the order he founded until his time. Many members yesterday ent him telegrams of congratulation. VESUVIUS IN A BAD HUMOR!

Prof. Matteucci's Daring Studies at the Crater Edge,

Peering Into the Depths When Rocks Were Shooting Aloft-A Block Weighing Thirty Tons Tossed High Into the Air-The

Observer's Lucky Escape. It is not often that a man risks his life in the cause of science. As a rule, no one would receive much praise for doing so, though there are occasions when such an act is most heroic and laudable. Perhaps there are not many to applaud the achievement of Professor Matteucci, the distinguished Italian geologist, who lived on the edge of the crater of Vesuvius for three days last year. But all's well

The volcano resumed a very active phase nearly five years before Profes-President Henry White, of the Gar- sor Matteucci went into camp on the ment Workers of America, and Ralph outer edge of the scene of disturbance. Vesuvius began a new eruptive period on July 3, 1895; ebullitions of greater or less magnitude, accom-panied by a considerable flow of lava, were of frequent occurrence for about 50 months. At last, on Sept. 1, 1899, the lava ceased to flow through the lateral fissure by which it had escaped from the crater. At that time bottom of the crater was 700 feet below the lowest part of its rim. Fresh supplies of lava began slowly to fill up the crater again. On April 24, last year, the surface lava was within about 260 feet of the crater edge. On that day another period of violent activity began, lasting for an entire month. No lava was discharged down the mountain side, but some of the explosions in the crater were terrific, particularly tetween May 4 and 11, reaching a maximum on May 9. The noise of the explosions was distinctly heard throughout a large part of the Campagna. The Italian professor watched all the phenomena from the slope of the mountain, and spent May 11, 12 and 13 at the crater's edge. It is well known that the eruptions since the seventeenth century have greatly altered the contour of the mountain, and that its central vent or crater has undergone many changes. During the period of Professor Matteucci's observations the crater has enlaged in one of its diameters about twenty feet. It measured at the top 164 meters, about 540 feet, across the northeast to southwest, and 180 meters from east to west. The flames produced by the sulphurous vapors were abundant; many projectiles were hurled into the air, the highest altitude attained being about 1,800 feet above the bottom of the crater. On May 9 the professor observed a block of unusual size rising above the top of the crater. He happened to have his watch in hand, and found that the projective was in the air above Vesuvius seventeen seconds before it reached terra firma on the slope of the mountain. He ascertained later that it measured about twelve cubic meters, and that its weight was approximately 30 tons. When it reached the earth it was traveling at the rate of about 300 feet a second. It has been estimated that the force which propelled this mass of rock high into the air was equal to 607,995 horse power. The volume of the solid material which was projected from the crater during the explosive period of April and May is estimated at about 500,000 cubic meters; and in that time about 30 feet were added to the altitude of the mountain.

The younger brother wrung his clasped hands and gazed upon the floor.
"Will you not be pleased to answer me?" demanded Deacon.

Me? demanded Deacon.
Vaughan, at that, looked up at the speaker, and in his eyes, which hitherto had never once looked unkindly upon him, he read only harshness and griet.
Do you still think that heaven intended you and Juliana for one another? Deacon questioningly resumed.

"Speak, Vaughan, I entreat you!"
"Oh, Deacon! Deacon! what can I say—

according to your advice entirely. Give me your counsel."
"I have none to give," was the other's cold response.

"I will see her again," said Vaughan, suddenly. "No, I could not bear to look into her eyes again and know that we must part. I will leave Cylandow at once hay, this very hour. Do you agree to that."

you, Deacon."
"Farewell," returned the elder man, "Farewell," returned the elder man, stretching out a cold, trembling hand to his companion—"farewell! and recollect this: howsoever you have deceived and wronged me, I am still your brother—your loving brother! Go, and in the course of a month let me hear from you."

Then he turned aside, and with a deep sigh and a heavy heart left the room.

An hour after the above-narrated scene Vaughan Prynne secretly quitted his home. He had written a letter to Juliana and another to his mother, both Juliana and another to his mother, both of which he left on his dressing table. The former communication was exceedingly brief. It was to the following effect:

"Dearest Juliana,—What have we been thinking of? Reflect! I shrink at the mere thought of what passed between us yesterday! Juliana, our love is a sin—a wrong committed against one of the kindest and noblest of men! Beg him to pardon you and learn to forget me. It is your duty as it will be mine to forget the frenzy that possessed us for a lew short hours. few short hours.

"Farewell forever, "Farewell forever,
"VAUGHAN."

As Vaughan Prynne rode away from the home of his fathers he turned to look at the house under the roof of which Juliana—the girl he loved—was sweetly sleeping, dreaming happy dreams; and where his elder brother was pacing his chamber with a tortured spirit and a wounded heart. Poor Deacon Prynne! In the whole world there was not to be found a truer soul than his. He did not think of Ju-liana with any feeling of anger, although he mourned over the loss of her love. He asked himself how to act so as to secure her happiness. He cared but little for himself; all he really desired was to see her thoroughly contented.

"And if I did thrust aside my affection for her, and give her up to Vaughan, what would happen to her in a few years hence, when her mind had learned to think with sober and mature judgment? Why she would blame herself for having chosen so unwisely."

Deacon had a terrible trial before him.
He had to speak to Juliana, and, probably, to hear from her own lips that her love for him-if ever such a sentiment her love for him—if ever such a sentiment toward him had existed in her breast— had vanished forever. He would deal gently with her, for she had no mother to consult on this momentous occasion, no earthly friend save himself. CHAPTER VII.

CHAPTER VII.

Deacon did not close his eyes during the whole of that night, and eager to see Juliana before his mother left her chamber, he hastened down stairs somewhat early, knowing that it was the girl's habit to walk in the garden for a hull half-hour prior to being summoned to breakfast.

Scarcely, however, had he reached the terrace when Juliana, with an open letter in her hand, and with eyes glistening with excitement, confronted him.
"Vaughan-Vaughan-where is he?" she broke forth.
Deacon could not muster courage to reply immediately, and she repeated her question with frantic earnestness.
He departed from here last night;" Deacon rejoined, with as much calmness

The girl lifted her hands and thrust the hair off her temples with a gesture of impatience and anger. "I do not understand you, Deacon,"

"You do not Juliana?"
"You do not, Juliana?"
"No," faitered she, her cheeks scarlet.
"Why—why did he go away?"
"Why did he go away, Juliana? Do you need to ask that question? He left vour sake. for your sake."

"Not so, Juliana," answered Deacon, firmly, yet mildly. "He went hence of his own free will and pleasure."
The girl looked searchingly into the eyes of her companion before she spoke again.
"You know all?" she said, after a painful nause.

"Yes, Vaughan has confessed everything that hapened between you and him."

The girl clasped her hands and wrung them tightly.

At these words she raised her head suddenly, and dashed away the trickling drops. "Love you no longer!" repeated she. "Deacon Prynne, I never loved you! "Juliana, what language is this?" spoke Deacon, now roused to anger by her violent speech. "Are you mad?"

"Yes—almost," she replied, with enforced calmness, and clasping her head between her hands. "You don't know how hot my brain is, and how wildly it is throbbing. I think I am losing my senses, for nothing seems to me as it was yesterday, and I—I am no longer myself. Yesterday, I was in an earthly paradise: now, to me, the world is buried in total darkness."

And with that the girl dropped her arms to her side with a gesture of moody despair.

The yacht carried mainsail, working topsail, fore stay sail and jib. After the yacht's anchor was down, Sir Thomas boarded the Associated Press tug and told the reporters that the Shamrock would go out for a long trial spin today, extending down to Sandy Hook, and perhaps, if there was clear weather and a good breeze, she might try to cover the America's cup course outside the Hook or fifteen miles to windward and back. Sir Thomas, with a party of guests, will go to Oyster Bay on the Erin on Saturday to witness the races between the Constitution and Columbia, on Long Island Sound, under the management of the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club, whose guest he will be at dinner that night.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 23.—Cresceus and The Abbott will meet at Charter Oak Park, Hartford, Wednesday, Sept. 4. The match was made at Readville on Wednesday afternoon. The contract calls for a 3 in 5 race, with a $7,000 purse; $5,000 to the winner and $2,000 to the loser. At the same meeting, Labor Day, there will be a free-for-all trot, likewise arranged on Wednesday. In this event the starters will be Boralma, Lord Derby, Charley purse is $2,500, and the conditions mile heats, best 3 in 5.

KING OF TROTTERS AT READVILLE.

KING OF TROTTERS AT READVILLE. Readville, Mass., Aug. 23.—The celebrated Cresceus, who through his record of 2:021/4 is the king of all trotters and leader of the turf nobility, was the magnet yesterday to draw almost 16,000 people to the Grand Circuit meeting here. As a sort of recognition of the favors shown him in the way of annuals when he are a sort of recognition of the lavors shown him in the way of applause when he ap-peared on the track, the chestnut horse proceeded in the second heat of his win-ning race with Lord Derby and Charley Herr to lower the track record for the mile by three-quarters of a second, and to break the world's record of final quarters by trotting that distance in 29%. By this latter performance Cresceus lowered the record of 30 seconds for the final quarter, which he himself made at Detroit quarter, which he himself made at Detroit about a month ago, when he strode the mile in 2:05. The accomplishment of to-day was not the fastest quarter of all kinds, for both Peter the Great and Tommy Britton did the second quarter of a heat at Lexington, Ky., several years ago in 29½ seconds. Something of the interest was removed from the free-for-all trot for a purse of $2,500 when Charley Herr, who was driven by his owner, David Cahill, was distanced in the first heat, thus leaving the affair to Cresceus and Lord Derby, and there are some who saw the race who believed that the Geers gelding would have done something wonderful in the second and last heat had he not breken coming home, for on the last half of the bend he was heat had he not breken coming home, for on the last half of the bend he was in front of the world's favorite.

FISTIC. A TOURNAMENT AT PORT HURON. Port Huron, Mich., Aug. 28.—Professor McCarty is arranging a fistic tournament at the Auditorium for Thursday evening, Aug. 29, to end with a ten-round bout between Mike Ward, of Sarnia, and a Detroit pugilist. McCarty has endeavored twice to get off a pugilistic entertainment at Sarnia, but each time the officers interfered, and refused to countenance the sport. It is said he has arranged for no police interference in this city.

When the fighters' representatives met yesterday with those of the local clubs, no sealed with those of the local clubs, no sealed bids for the fight were in evidence. It was announced that the clubs had agreed not to put in bids until certain clauses of the agreement made by Ruhlin and Jeffries on Thursday should be modified. The clubs wish to have the $2,500 bond clause eliminated; also the one pertaining to the referee. The clubs object to George Siler for referee, on the ground that supervisors will not issue a permit if a referee shall be chosen outside of the state. It also develowed that the clubs state. It also developed that the clubs have an understanding with each other and are willing to give up 65 per cent of the receipts. Madden and Delaney are holding out for 65 per cent and $500 training expenses.

Hope lacrosse teams met yesterday at the island to play off the tie for their district championship, and the game was unsatisfactory in many respects. There has been hard feeling between the clubs all season, and right at the start the play was hard, almost to fierceness. No one was seriously hurt, but in the second quarter, when the score stood 6 to 1 in favor of Port Hope, the Oshawa management, who were dissatisfied with the referee from the start, took their team off the field, and as a matter of course the match and the district championship goes to Port Hope.

SHAMROCK II. IS PERFECT.

Says the World's Greatest Expert on Yachting Matters.

Cup Defender Will Have to Use Her Heels.

The appearance of the new Shamrock as she rides the water at the Erie Basin is most disquieting, writes John R. Spears, the great vachting expert, in the New York World. In nothing that was written on the other side was she adequately described, and nearly every description of her that was sent here was seriously misleading.

For, without any exception, the model of the new Shamrock above water is the most beautiful and the sought for or defended the cup. Let it be fully undersood that these adjectives are applied only to what can be seen above water. Her lines under water may be wrong in various

PERFECT IN HER PROPORTIONS With this in mind it is well to recall the fact that when the original America was modeled the discovery which her designer had made and used in her was the placing of the greatest width in the middle of a ship's length and tapering both ends very nearly alike. This is not said to detract at all from the honor of Mr. Watson as a designer, for Shamrock II., is not a copy of anything; but the fact that this feature was demonstrated to be good 50 years ago is to be considered in weighing the chances of the new boat. In short, in this feature in her proportion of bow to stern Shamrock II. is perfect, according to the best American ideas. as well as to the best ideas in Europe, and she is the only challenger that has ever shown perfection in this

The Kansas "joint smasher" arrived at the Twenty-third street ferry of the Pennsylvania Railroad at 8 o'clock in the company of the manager of her lecturing tour. As she crossed the city in an electric car, she glared at every saloon sign she saw, but made no comment.

Insect Is Particularly Fond of Expensive Carpets.

Some Simple Means That May Be Taken to Exterminate the Strange Little Pest.

Have you seen the Buffalo bug? If you are a housekeeper and have not, you will be taking a very wise precaution if you examine your silk wedding dress, inspect your carrets and generally overhaul your wardrobe. For the Buffalo bug, which is one of the most destructive insects known, has firmly established itself

The Buffalo bug delights in the musical name of Antrenus Schrophulariae, although it is more often known as the Buffalo "moth." Why it should be termed a moth is not clear, for the insect is really a beetle. It is less than a fifth of an inch in ngth, and is black, ornamented generally, with white and red spots. The beetle itself is harmless, but its arvae, once they have become established in a house, are extremely destructive. Last year many complaints were heard from different parts of the city about its depredations, and this year it has multiplied greatly. One South London gentleman who takes a justifiable pride in his beautifully furnished residence, has been driven to despair by the wholesale destruction of carpets and curtains. In the home of a wealthy Queen's avenue resident the same condition of affairs exists. In these instances the Buffalo bug is credited with destroying not only woolen goods, but linen as well. This, however, cannot be true according to Prof. Moffat, the well-known not attack linen or cotton goods.

entomologist, who, in reply to questions put by The Advertiser, asserted Prof. Moffat has had unusual opportunities of observing Anthrenus Scrophulariae; and among other things he has discovered, that the beetle is, apparently, particularly fond of the beautiful blossoms of the spiraea. Now, if you should chance to have a particularly fine spiraea plant near your house, don't destroy it on this account; for, remember, it has not been proved that the Buffalo bug has a fondness for it alone. It is, as a matter of fact, a flower bug, and is known as such in Europe from whence, like most other pests, it came originally. It is nevertheless a singular fact that it has been found i great numbers on spiraea bushes in

A South London gentleman who had a very beautiful spiraea in bloom in his garden, determined to watch it for the Buffalo bug. He reported to Prof. Moffat that in three days he removed from the plant over 100 the beetles. Whether this may taken as conclusive evidence of th spiraea's guilt, or whether merely a an indication that the insect chos the spiraea as being the most desir able flower within reach, is a point ye to be definitely settled. The larvae of the Buffalo bug is diminutive furry little thing, about fifth of an inch in length, but its ap petite is in inverse ratio to its siz It is no respecter of quality in th goods it attacks; in fact a $5 th yard carpet is, apparently, more its taste than the sixty cent kin Referring to this costly appetite, Pro Moffat, in a paper included in the 31s annual report of the Entomologic Society of Ontario, says: "It European insect, but * * it on this continent that it first obtain its notoriety as a carpet pest; the habit here of tacking down carpets for year giving it a splendid opportunity to propagate undisturbed. With this, as with other of its kind, frequent stirring up is an excellent means of deterring them from indulging their destructive propensities. And now that it is here to stay, as it is not entirely depending on indoor propagatien, so cannot be exterminated except locally, there is nothing for it

"Having learned to recognize the beetles they may be seen upon the windows in early spring and destroyed before they have an opportun-ity to deposit their eggs, and thus prevent future trouble from them. In nature it takes a full year to com-plete the round of its existence, but with the artificial warmth of houses, with the artificial warmth of houses, it matures in shorter time, and beetles may be found on windows before the end of winter.

"When once a dwelling has become infested, not only should the carpets be thoroughly beaten and disinfected, but narrow strips of thin muslin should be fastened over the joints of the floors with varnish before relaying, so as to prevent them secreting themselves there. A strip secreting themselves there. A strip of tar paper laid under the outer edge of the carpet is an excellent preventive. "When they are known to be at work, and it is not convenient to lift the carpet, benzine will kill any living insect that it is brought in contact with, but great care must be exercised in not allowing a light to approach it while it is evaporating, as it is very inflammable. A damp cloth and hot iron will also effectually arrelations. rest the operations of any depredators upon whom they are applied. Steam or benzine may also be used to ad-vantage to get rid of their presence in upholstered furniure; by such means can their operations be restrained and rendered comparatively harmless. But constant watchfulness against their presence is required, for even if a dwelling has been freed from their presence during one season, the beetles may enter at the open windows next summer and start a colony

"There are conflicting stories as to how the Buffalo bug received its name. One is to the effect that its American debut was made in Buffalo. N. Y. A more probable story is that it was first observed in California, where, owing to its furry appearance, it was given the name of the Buffalo

PICKED UP IN THE PARK.

Lounger, pulling at his cigar until the tip of it was a flery-red eye in the darkness; "curious thing that people will flock in thousands to an evening band concert to which they never think of listening. Excepting a very small percentage of the crowd, nobody pays any attention to the band, which for two hours manfully tries to make itself heard above the hum of gossiping women, the screeching of small boys and the giggling of school girls, who chew gum and walk arm in arm in long rows. Last night, after swallowing goodness knows how many cubic yards of dust raised by thousands of shuffling feet around the band stand, I wriggled into the inner circle near the stand, where the few dozen seats Victoria Park boasts are placed. It looked quieter in there, and I thought I might be able to pick out here and there a note of what I believed to be a waltz the band was playing. In front of me was a quartet of sweet young things in bicycle costumes. This is the music I listened to: "'O Nell, don't you just love band music!"

"'It's too lovely for anything, dear.'
"'O girls, what do you think Willie Noodles says?' "Chorus: 'No; what? O do tell us,

Gladys!' "'He says that every woman ought to be compelled by law to take off her hat in theaters and churches.' "Chorus of shrieks and giggles made the bass horn sound like a whistle. "Silence of three seconds, during which I distinctly heard several notes of the waltz. "Clara breaks in: 'Girls, you should have seen that Mamie Highnose at church Sunday night. Of all the frights. She was dressed in-Clara, in a gurgling soprano described minutely the costume of The Fright, her description being liberally punctuated by 'Ohs', 'Reallys' and similar exclamations.

"Before Clara had finished Gladys interrupted: 'Mamma says I can't have a new hat this fall, and I know I'm going to be a perfect sight!'
"Chorus of protesting voices: 'Oh, no, dear; you know you always look too sweet for anything!'
"'Well, I don't care,' Gladys persisted. "I think it's just too mean of mama! There are those vulgar Uptown girls who have so many dresses and hats they don't know which to wear, and they never look decent, I don't think,' she added, with a truly feminine disregard of the fact that two negatives make an affirmative.

"'There goes Jack,' suddenly sang out Mae, in a tone so loud that Jack, a thin-chested youth, with $2 patent leather shoes and a flaring red tie, looked around, grinned, and lifted his hat with the grace of a sea-lion. This brought forth more giggling, Gladys exclaiming, 'Isn't he cute,' to which everyone assented. "Suddenly there came a blare of horns and a roll of drums that parti-ally drowned the din about me, and I knew that the waltz was finished. "'Girls, wasn't that a lovely two-step?" chirruped Clara. Awfully,' gurgled the chorus. "I beat a retreat."

Muscular Strength. There is this to be borne in mind in these days, when so many young men are giving so much attention to muscular development, in gymnastic and athletic exercises, that there cannot be permanent muscular strength where there is not blood strength. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives blood strength, promotes digestion and assimilation, and builds up the whole system.
