Reasons for Believing the Charlton Resolution To Be Ill-Timed and Might Do Harm.

At the same time I must express the fervent wish that my honorable friend (Mr. Charlton) will not press his motion further, and that the debate shall stop here and now. Mr. Bourassa, who seconded the motion, told us that he took some exception to the speech of Mr. Charlton, who pro- at the hands of the British. Why, it posed the motion. We who know the was only a few days ago that on the views long entertained by Mr. Bourassa are not at all surprised at that. He has stated at the same time that I was not so easily prepared, but I repulsed, but after each assault the will not quarrel with my honorable friend on that score.

My honorable friend therefore realizes that conciliation and comproare instruments of government, and that while it is quite proper and have been killed, but from the ranks right for anyone to hold his own convictions, it is also proper to remem- kill him; he is too brave a man; he ber that other people also have con- must live." This, sir, is victions which they also hold dear. My honorable friend will realize that in a country like this, inhabited as it is by two different races, a policy of compromise and conciliation is indispensable if we want to make Canada a nation. This is the principle he wants to apply from Canada to South Africa, and in this I abundantly agree with him. With the terms of the resolution, I may say, without any hesitation whatever, I altogether agree. The resolution advises that the war

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

If you have been discouraged in seeking a cure for nervous exhaustion or prostration, the case of Mrs. C. H. Jones, of Pierceton, Que., will interest we do so? Because we considered that you. Hers was a severe case, but is it was a question which affected the a fair sample of what thousands of women are enduring, with the belief that they can never be cured. Mrs. Jones describes her case as fol- jects. "For several years I had been gradually running down in health, and growing weaker and weaker. I did not know exactly what ailed me, for strange, dizzy feelings would come I got a terrible fright, and it so unsettled my nerves that shaking spells would come over me, and I could not keep my feet still, and finally I had to keep the bed most all the

He said that he always had more faith in Dr. Chase than in anl other physician, and was cured by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I began using this preparation, and improved from the first. Altogether I used five boxes, and it has done me more good than I ever thought medicine could do. My health is better in every way than it has been for British Government to be merciful and many years, and my nervous system is strengthened and invigorated. 'I might add that I have also used Chase's Kidney Liver Pills, with excellent results. Chase's Nerve Food cannot fail to benefit any man, woman or child who is pale, weak or nervous. It contains in condensed form the most rotent restoratives of nature. It does not stimulate or give false hope, but gradually and thoroughly builds up the system and effects permanent cures. Like Dr. Chase's Ointment and Kidney-Liver Pills, this preparation has the indorsement of physicians and people alike in all parts of this con-tinent. It is the standard treatment for weakness of blood and nerves. 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2 50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronta

There are two races in South Africa, the British race and the Dutch race, equally proud, in many respects equally strong, so intermixed that it is impossible for either to have an absolutely homogeneous government. The Dutch and British are there together, in the Cape, in the Orange Free State, in the Transvaal, in Rhodesia. They are neighbors who meet together every Ottawa, April 24.-In speaking on day in the ordinary vocations of life. It is impossible to separate them. Sir, this is the position left to the men who are now engaged in South Africa, not only with war, but with negotiations as well.

As to the right of this parliament to interfere in this question, to affirm this resolution, for my part I unhesitatingly say there can be no discussion whatever. The parliament of Canada today is a sovereign parliament. It is a sovereign parliament within the British Empire. Many years ago the parliament of Canada asserted this authority, and claimed not only the priv-

Because we felt that it was in the interests of Canada that the wrongs of Ireland should be righted. It was only two years ago that parliament passed a resolution in favor of praying the British Parliament to amend the coronation oath. Why did rights and privileges and consciences of a large section of his majesty's sub-

> It was only three years ago that this parliament passed a resolution expressing its sympathy with the Uitlanders in the Transvaal. We then affirmed that we sympathized with the efforts of the British Government to right the wrongs which the Uitlanders were suffering. Surely today we have the right which is now universally prescribed in to pass such a resolution as this presented by my honorable friend from pepsia. North Norfolk, and seconded by my honorable friend from Labelle.

> THE RESOLUTION INJUDICIOUS. But while I do not hesitate to say that we have the inherent right to pass such a resolution, and to present our views as to the conditions of peace, I indigestion to exist. It digests the ask myself, and I ask my honorable friend from North Norfolk, and my honorable friend from Labelle, is it opportune? Is it judicious? Is it advisable to present such a motion today? That is the question for me, and I do not hesitate to say that, in my opinion, at this moment such a motion is very injudicious. I will go further, and I will say to my honorable friend from Labelle that if I thought as he does, that the passing of this resolution toto grant an amnesty, I would not hesitate to pass it; but the question today is not in this position.

MIGHT HINDER PEACE. On the contrary, in my humble judgment-and I think I can make it clear to any man in this house-if we were to interfere at this moment we might hinder that peace which we all desire to see established. Sir, my honorable friend from Norfolk knows, and my honorable friend from Labelle, who has been a close student of all these events, knows that at this very moment negotiations are going on for a settlement of the terms of peace. My honorable friends know that only a and sells it, price 50c a box, or three few days ago Lord Kitchener and Lord boxes for $1 25. soldier; Gen Botha, another brave soldier-and they have been in close conference, and we have every reason to believe, though we are not yet informed officially, that terms of peace have been agreed upon.

NO TIME TO INTERFERE. We know that the Boer delegates have gone back to those in the field to submit to them the terms upon which peace may be secured. What these terms are I do not know, but is it advisable at this moment, when the con-ditions are submitted to the Boer commanders, that we should interfere and excite perhaps in them hopes which might clash with what has been done, and prevent the negotiations being brought to a peaceful, satisfactory

My honorable friend from Norfolk may say perhaps that this is a remote contingency. My honorable friend from Labelle may say, "But what we want is not to reach South Africa, but England." In these days of rapid communication, when news travels in winds, if we were to pass such a resolution the very terms would be wired at once to South Africa, and possibly excite fresh hopes in those now in the field, and induce them perhaps to break off the negotiations, in order if possible to gain better terms. I do not British? This resolution affirms that know what is the nature of the negotithis authority shall be British. With ations, but let me suppose the case, > moment ago referred to the civil war in the United States. Well, it is due to the American people to say that there never was more generous treatment accorded by a victorious foe to its enemy than was accorded by the men of the north to the vanquished south There never was a page more glorious in the history of any nation than that which was then written. But my honorable friend knows as well as I, perhaps better, because he also has been a student of those times and events that after the war the amnesty granted was not given to all those who participated in the strife. It is to the eternal pride of the American nation that not a drop of blood was shed on the scaffold, that not a man was pund ished for his participation in the war; that even Jefferson Davis, after a few years of seclusion, was set at liberty again. But my honorable friend knows well that immediately after Appomattox, which he described to us so eloquently, the amnesty granted by Gens. Grant and Sherman did not cover all those who took part in the war, but only those who had laid down their arms after the surrender at Appomattox to the American army. A number of civilians were debarred from the enjoyment of civil rights, but gradually, as the peace of the country increased and dangers were removed, all the

MIGHT PROLONG THE WAR. Suppose at this moment terms were agreed on between Lord Kitchener on the one side and the Boer generals on the other, and suppose these terms did not include a general amnesty, but only amnesty which covered the great mass of the belligerents, but excepted say-a name that is honored in the resolution of my honorable friend were adopted and wired over to Africa: "Upon this opinion, humbly presented with the prayerful hope that it may left Paris in December. In Harper's aid in securing a favorable and honorable settlement of South African difficulties." Supposing these terms were agreed upon and telegraphed, and sing this resolution was adopted and telegraphed to South Africa, might not the Boers then say: "Oh, we have here the Canadian Parliament standing behind us, and we must insist on better terms." I do not know that my honorable friend would then find that by his resolution he was promoting the cause of peace. I think we had better at this moment leave this question in hands of the brave soldiers who are dealing with it-Lord Kitchener on the one side, and Gens. Delarey and

Dewet on the other. LEAVE IT TO THE SOLDIERS. I think we had better leave them to determine the issue, and I humbly be-lieve in my heart that the terms which will be accepted by these brave soldiers will be such as can be accepted by every British subject all over the world. When the terms of peace have been agreed upon, when the country enjoys again the blessings of peace, if it be found that the terms were not as generous as in the judgment of my honorable friend from Norfolk and my honorable friend from Labelle, or perhaps my own, they ought to be, shall not abdicate the right of the Canadian Parliament to affirm and send its views to the imperial authorities. It will not be too late then, because that is the time when we can Foot soles are curved and soft. Shoe soles are flat and hard!

Breaking in new shoes invariably means shaping the foot soles to the shoe soles, till wear moulds the insoles to the curves of the feet.

The RESILIA is the only shoe which conforms to the shape of the foot sole immediately, from the first moment it is borne upon, and without any "breaking in."

It does this through the compressible nature of the resilient, elastic, cushion centre-sole, which is placed between the leather insole and outsole, instead of the usual scrap filling.

Hope of relief was dimmer than it ever had been, when, a few weeks ago, the city was startled by the arrest of several men prominent in its business and social life for bribery, conspiracy and perjury. When the excitement incident to the first arrests subsided it was found that the city had "Red" Galvin to thank.

He said nothing, worked assiduously, and at length found his chance when influential traction men and their tools in the assembly began to quarrel about the disposition of $135,000 that had been placed in a safe deposit vault to promote vicious legislation.

With an array of provable facts he went to State Attorney Joseph Folk, and the first gun in the fight for civic purity was fired. When the gangsters began to realize that they had been outwitted they sought to check the attack by calling off the man who promoted it.

SPRAYING AND

Lime Mixture and Kerosene audience was averted. Emulsion For Spraying.

When Work Should Be Done - Advantages of Closer Growing-Old Orchards.

It has been only within the last ten years or so that spraying has been regarded as an important part of successful fruit culture. Recognizing the value of anything that would prevent ed the hero of it. There he was, iminjury to trees and fruit, spraying has received considerable attention at the Central Experimental Farm, and many fungicides and insecticides have been tested to prove their relative merits. While experimenting with a lime mixture sprayed on fruit trees to prevent the swelling of the buds in early spring, Mr. W. T. Macoun discovered that the trees thus treated were practically rid of the oyster shell bark louse, an insect which does a great deal of injury to apple trees in the colder parts of Ontario and the Province of Quebec. The lime destroys the gelatinous matter which binds the scales to the tree, and the scales are then removed by the action of rain, frost or wind.

In order to be most effective spraying should be done in the autumn, and there should be two applications, so that all the scales may be covered. Lime used in the proportion of two pounds to one gallon of water has been found to be the best formula so far, but it is possible that one pound of lime to a gallon will be sufficient if the lime be good. This new remedy for the oyster shell bark louse is simple, cheap, and very effective, and should prove a popular one. There is, in fact, no known remedy so good, economical and unfailing as this for the oyster shell bark louse.

KEROSENE EMULSION. Kerosene emulsion has been usually used for this purpose, and with good success when the insects are running, but as they only run four or five days in the first week in June it is difficult to kill them all off in this way. By covering the trees with lime you are able to get at the scale, and the lime makes the trees white, so that you can see whether all the scales have been covered or not. The advantage of clover growing in an orchard in the fall is that much of the plant food in the soil, which has been liberated and made more easily available by the constant cultivation during the early part of the summer. is prevented from leaching by being used by the growing plants, the clover thus becoming a "catch crop" as well as a cover crop. Where soils suffer from lack of moisture in a dry time, the clover should be plowed under as early in the spring as the land can be worked, and cultivation should be begun at once. This will conserve much of the moisture which would otherwise be transpired through the leaves of the growing plants until they are plowed under towards the end of May, hich is the usual time. If the soil however, always contains plenty of moisture, it would be better to let the clover grow until about the third week in May, as there would be additional by Galvin.

"Red" Galvin's remarkable record for bringing important scoops to his paper is attributable to the simple desire to realize the ambition of his newsboy days—to be a good reporter. In a business way he never had any other ambition. Extraordinary energy and tenacity, and an unusually accurate knowledge of men are his stock-in-trade. While not posing are a reformer he has the reporter's dishumus and nitrogen obtained by this method.

NEGLECTED ORCHARDS. Many orchards have been neglected so long and have reached such an age that it would not be profitable to attempt to renovate them. The best plan in such cases is to plant young trees. On the other hand, there are many orchards where the trees, if cared for, would be in the prime of life, and neglect is the only cause which prevents profitable crops from being grown. It is of orchards such as these that a few suggestions are here ffered as to how to bring them back into good condition. But the results desired cannot be got in one year. The trees, to begin with, should be prunned, not too heavily at first, but enough limbs should be taken out to open up the top and permit a free circulation of air and the admission of sunlight to it. The trees will probably, be much moss grown, and both they and the fruit may be affected with various diseases. Injurious insects, too, are almost certain to abound. sesses all the important virtues for Spraying should be begun early in the building of health and bodily the season, and the trees should be kept covered from top to bottom with It is partially cooked and predigestbordeaux mixture and Paris green uned, therefore requires no digestive eftil the fruit is almost fully grown. fort; it is readily assimilated, and al-Scraping the trunks and large branches ways retained on the most delicate of the trees may be done if there is nuch moss, but as soon as the tree Malt Breakfast Food is generally rebecomes more vigorous, and air and commended by our ablest physicians sunlight are admitted, much of the as the best diet for the strong and moss will disappear. terials already mentioned. PLOWING THE ORCHARD. As the orchard, if neglected, is almost certain to be in sod, the soil should be plowed shallow in the spring, turning under a good dressing of manure if it can be procured. If the sod is not too thick it might be worked up with the disc or spade harrow. The ground should then be kept thoroughly harrowed until July, working in other fertilizers if the land be poor and manure is not to be had, and then red clover seed sown at the rate of twelve pounds per acre, and the ground rolled. A good cover crop should then he formed by autumn. This would conclude the first season's work. The results would probably be a greatly increased vigor in the trees, and the fruit.

though, perhaps, not plentiful, would be cleaner. The second season, additional by less, pruning should be Joue, the trees kept thoroughly sprayed, as before, the clover plowed under in the spring, and the land kept harrowed or cultivated until July, and then seeded down to clover. The fruit should be better than the year before, but not until the third year should the trees be expected to bear heavily and the orchard he in good condition.

Stage Presence of Mind.

"I am thankful to say that I have never been called upon to face a disaster on the stage," writes John Drew to the Saturday Evening Post, "although I have been near to it.

"Miss Rehan and I were one night playing in a place, the name of which I do not remember—but that is neither here nor there—and were in the midst of a little conjugal quarrel. She looked past me with a change of expression entirely apart from the purpose of the scene. Following her eyes, I saw that the gas logs used in the stage setting had set fire to the scenery. To give any evidence of knowledge of it would creand smothered it. The alarm of the

"Once, in 'A Night Off,' in the scene I played with Otis Skinner, and which hinges on a pocket book, the call boy forgot to give it to me, and we came near to upsetting things generally. The man who is ambitious to have a past, but who has none, was waiting for the pocket book, which I was to lend him, and which contained a lock of hair and some other little mementoes to prove his gallantries. I put my hand into my pocket to get it. It was missing. The whole scene depended upon it.

"I tore madly off the stage, leaving him to face the situation, and he provprovising: 'Dear old Jack-as erratic as ever. Forgotten something, perhaps-likely his pocket handkerchiefand so kept it up until I rushed back with the missing 'property.' The audience knew nothing, for he was very alert, but I was fearfully upset. We were all so strenuous in those days at Daly's that I feit I had done him some wrong, but he took it delightedly as he had carried the day."

A Wagner Story.

A London paper tells a story of Wagner in the days of his youth and poverty calling upon Rossini in Paris and noticing "a little composition" of his own on the piano rack. The reply of Rossini when it was pointed out to him that the music was upside down was perhaps hardly up to the best form of "the polite Frenchman." "You see, I found it sounded better that way." Bill Nye's compliment to Wagner was in a happier vein. He told the great composer that he had no doubt his music was really much better than it sound-

The Meat Trust.

When the price of a commodity gets beyond the reach of the people the latter usually have a weapon in what is known as the principle of substitution. For instance, if there should be a potato famine, people, rather than pay famine prices, could turn to the food products of cereals. The recent rise In the price of beef in the United States left them the alternative of resorting to other foods. The beef trust anticipated this and placed 100,000 cases of eggs in cold storage in June. in order to create an artificial scarcity and manipulate the market. The trust has gone even further than this. It has forced up the prices of pork, veal and lamb, compelling dealers to submit to its exactions or go out of business. The prices of canned meats also have been raised.

The trust is protected from foreign competition by a tariff of 271/2 per cent. A member of the House of Representatives has moved for the abolition of all duties on meats, but it is safe to say Congress is in greater awe of the organized power of the trust than of en unorganized sentiment of the people. The Buffalo Express says that "no existing duties should be repealed without reciprocal concessions from the countries whose markets are to be Why should Canada, Mexico or Argentina reward Uncle Sam for coming to his own relief? Still, on the principle that, a freer exchange of natural products would be a mutual benefit, Canada will be ready to listen to any proposals which may posal to memorialize the British Govlead to a permanent arrangement.

No Waste of Capital.

The $30,000,000 of revenue derived from the forests has gone like last winter's snow .- Stratford Herald.

Has it? Better look more closely. The Province has received from woods and forests since Confederation $27,720,-965 75. Opponents of the Government say the capital of the Province has been wasted to that extent. Grant for the sake of argument that the revenue from that source was capital-the Administration has merely transferred it from one form to another. There has ings and public works are capital account. Railways have been subsidized to the amount of $8,304,901 12, and a subsidy for a railway is an expenditure on capital account. On colonization and mining roads, $3,528,339 18 has been spent, on surveys $3,591,352 45, and on rivers, lakes and bridges, $1,160,-620 12 On all these items of capital account there has been an outlay of $27,-834,991 16, or $114,625 41 more than was realized from the sale of forest wealth. The capital-if it was capital-exists in the form of public utilities. Yet the Herald says it has gone like last win-

Drawing Them Together.

Some Britishers are in a state of nerves over the "Morganizing" of the North Atlantic steamship lines. It s estimated that the combine embraces 208 steamships, with a tonnage of 1,-106,842. The number of vessels in other Atlantic lines is 338, with a tonnage of about 1,743,000. It is now reported that the Cunard Line will enter the merger. This would throw the balance against the independent companies. Perhaps one result of the extension of the trust movement to the steamship business will be the steady de- dwelt upon his necessities: nationalization of the ocean carrying trade of the world. This would be rather a wrench to British sentiment. "Britannia rules the waves:" her red ensign floats over more shipping on the high seas than is covered by the flags of all other nations put together. From a commercial standpoint, there would be nothing to fear. Great Britain would continue to build the ships, so I have done today? long as she built them cheaper than other countries, as she does now. In another and even more important direction, this steamship combine may have an international effect. It illustrates on a large scale the irresistible trend of British and American capital toward common investments. A material bond is being forged that will tend to assure friendly relations between the two countries for all time to the fourth floor." come. At any rate, the amalgamation of capital on a huge scale, of which this steamship combination is an instance, will create in the United States a powerful, one might almost say a to save it than to borrow it. controlling influence for peace. There character of the lands of Western On- will be such an interlacing of comtario between Port Arthur and Rat mercial and financial ties, and such a real community of interest between Great Britain and the United States, apart altogether from the nexus of kinship, that a rupture of friendly relations will be almost impossible. [By Hall Caine.]

Is it right to fight? Are nations justified, according to the moral law, in taking up arms against each other for the settlement of international disputes? It is difficult to discuss this question at the present moment without reference to the war in South Africa, but I shall try to do so, and in any reply or response which readers may perhaps make to what I say on a difficult problem I will ask them to be good enough to hold their political sympathies rigidly and entirely apart.

The theory of war (as war is usually practiced by civilized countries) may be simply stated. Two nations, having a cause of quarrel which they cannot compose by pacific means, agree to submit the settlement to the issue of physical force. Each thinks it is on both sides.

Does the nation which wins in war establish by its victory the justice of Ladies' Fancy Stripe Parasols, satin the principles it fought for? By no means. It establishes no more than finish, black and white, special, the superior power of its forces. Friday and Saturday $1 00 Ladies' Fancy Parasols, satin,

Does the nation which loses prove by its failure the falseness of the cause it championed? Indeed, no. It proves nothing but its inability to hold on to the struggle. The right (as such) has nothing to do with the issue; the solution depends entirely upon might.

A PAGAN PRINCIPLE. Surely there never was anything more frankly pagan than the principle of war. It excludes the idea of a God who governs the world in justice, and leaves the destiny of nations in the control of a great unmoral monster, who must be always on the side of the battalions, the money bags, and the latest and deadliest developments of the blunderbuss.

Yet this pagan deity is down to this moment the power which presides over civilization. Not only the questions of national limits of authority, but also the welfare of the people, the happiness of their homes, the success of their industries, and the measure of their wages, are submitted to the arbitration of the God of War. Civilization bows to it almost as submissively as barbarity did, and man in his national character is as pagan today as he was two thousand years ago.

When Christianity came into the world, what did it say in reply to the pagan theory that the only Right is Might? It met it with an assertion of the moral law. Where paganism had promulgated the doctrine of physical force Christianity upheld the doctrine of non-resistance. Where paganism had glorified power, Christianity championed weakness. Where paganism had asserted the domination of the rich, Christianity proclaimed the ultimate triumph of the poor.

And Christianity claimed to do all this not only on the lines of the moral law, but also on the lines of the only true and abiding laws of life.

CHRIST'S EXAMPLE. In order to see Christianity in its relation to the state, look at the person of its Founder, for in his life, surely, its principles found their most perfect expression. Christ was born a Jew, at a time when his country was under the stituted authority as asserting the sepneel of the conqueror. Great liberators arate rights of the soul. of his own people had gone before him, but their insurrections had failed, and the condition of his race was worse in his day than it had ever been before. His people were crying out for justice. They were looking for a deliverer, and their dream of the Messiah was that of a soldier who should be mightier than Judas Maccabeus, a king who should be greater than David. How did Christ come? To the Christian Church Christ is God as well as man; and, might have come as a soldier. He did not wish to be a soldier, and great warrior, a great king, a great deliverer-he came as a poor Jewish workingman. Though he knew his father would send him twelve legions of angels he did not ask for them. When the people tried to make him a king he disappeared, and his nearest approach

Not only the words but also the acts of Christ show that this doctrine was at the foundation of our religion; there is not a fact in the life of Jesus which does not illustrate and support it, from his birth in the stable at Bethlehem to his death on the cross at Calvary. Surely there is nothing clearer in the teaching of Christ than these two > channel of justice, and next, that the only ground of right is the moral law Christ's teaching is the reverse of that of the Anarchist, "Violence is wrong, therefore it is right to resist violence. That is what the Anarchist says, and strange as it may sound, it is also what every civilized nation says when it takes up arms. Thus the principle of civilized war is the principle of Anarchy, and statesmen fight for jus-

He is certain that the right will prevail, and (as Dr. Har-Can any teaching be more opposed to nack says) he does not think it necesthe pagan principle of war? Can any sary for justice to use force in order to remain justice. I am compelled to conclude that, according to the teaching of the Christian religion, it is not right to fight, and that the spectacle of two Christian nations, praying to the same God for success for their opposing armies, ringing their church bells to celebrate their victory or to lament their defeat, singing on one hand their "Te Deum." and on the other their "Miserere," and all in the name of him who said "Resist not evil," is a spectacle of deeper and crueller irony than anything else that civilization at this moment presents. Whether the Christian doctrine of non-resistance is incompatible with civilized life is another question which must be left over for discussion on some other occasion.

A WEST KENT VILLAGE VIRTUALLY WIPED OUT.

Cooperville in Ashes-Loss on Mills Alone Over $400,000. Chatham, April 25 .- Cooperville, 12 miles north of Chatham, was wiped out by fire on Wednesday. The conflagra-tion was the most serious in the history of Chatham township. The village had been built up around the sawmills of John Cooper, and comprised twelve houses and a store. The Cooper sawmills were also in the village. Today the whole place is nothing but ruins, and a hundred people are rendered homeless. The country is very dry, and the drought was taken advantage of to burn out a slashing. The fire carried by a strong south wind, swept down on the village at sundown, and obliterated it. Four teams were used to plow up a break in the path of the fire, but the huge volumes of smoke and fire came rushing on at such a rate that the men were forced to cut the horses loose and seek safety. The horses went to their stable and perished. There were no fatalities. The farmers in the vicinity are taking care of the homeless, and supplies of food have been forwarded from Chatham. The loss will be very heavy, as the mill and nearly all the staves and logs piled in the yard were destroyed. Mr

Look me in and that is a good way in which to get the eye and see if you think you can rid of surplus cartridges. The best method to pursue if it is I've started to tell you, or I'll make within 75 yards is to send a shrill you feel like thirty cents, right before whistle over the water. It will stop your boy." then for three or four seconds and listen intently, just as a deer will stop and listen to a similar signal, and in boy?" that time the hunter must do his most careful sighting and trigger pressing. The loon can be fooled in this way once or twice, but not oftener. Charles Piper, a taxidermist at Delafield, Wis., gets loons whenever he wants them by a method of his own. He goes to the lake, marks the spot where the fish killer is at work and does not care if it is a quarter of a mile | when I was still a boy and left my out. Waiting until it dives, he runs mother to take care of me, I'd have forward, ties a handkerchief to a reed grown up to be either a pickpocket or and runs back to his place. When the loon comes up it is certain to observe the bit of white or red cloth and to experience a desire to know what it is. It will dive again, but come up slightly nearer to the handkerchief.

It may fool away an hour at this kind of thing, but eventually, if it is not disturbed, it will come within 40 it would come if let alone Piper does t know He uses a shotgun on loons, not only because it is surer, and no bird with. in range ever gets away, but because number 6 shot do not tear the skin as a rifle ball, however small, is sure to do. He has always a half dozen mount ed loons in his collection, although he finds a ready sale for them.

A Physicians Testimony For Labatt's Stout.

ALEXANDRIA, DEC., 20th. 1901 Speaking from personal experience I can state that your Stout is excellent in building up the system-I was very much run down and was dised to use Labatt's Porter—this I have done for some time and I large-ly attribute to its effects my steady improvement in strength and weight. I deem it but justice to you, and it certainly is a pleasure to me, to add my testimony to its sterling qualities, and I gladly recommend you Stout as an excellent tonic and food in cases where such is required.

Yours truly, C. S. TIFFANY, M.D. IOHN LABATT, Esq., Brewer, LONDON, Ont

MME. WYMAN AND MR. BLIGHT. The Toronto Mail and Empire of Wednesday has warm words of praise for Mme. Julie Wyman and Mr. Arthur Blight, who take part in the concert at the Grand tonight in aid of dulged in by a large number of those cital was given jointly at McConkey's tent, was present from Galt, and gave ness. assembly rooms last night by Mr. Ar-thur Howard Blight and Mrs. Julie much appreciated by his friends here. Wyman. Mr. Blight is the possessor of an exceptionally powerful, sweet and moving baritone voice. His teaching also has been the best; his enunci-ation and phrasing are marked by delicacy, grace and understanding. In a baritone so young it would be hypercritical to look for a highly developed sentimentalize. Among the charming songs that he sang, Maud Valerie White's setting of Browning's 'Marching Along, and Walter Damrosch's plete the hoped-for $100, for which the 'Danny Deever' were splendidly done. Mr. Blight's chief success; it was virile, idiomatic and expressive in its rendering. Mrs. Julie Wyman proved herself a peereless artiste in the mere art of singing expressively. Her diction, whether she sings in French or English, is so exquisitely fine that prima donnas might well envy her. Moreover her warm contralto voice had a rich smoothness such as has not marked it on her previous appearance in Toronto. Such instructive power of interpretation as she showed Western Canada L. and S.

"I think not," Mr. Field gravely relied, "for, if he had instituted proceedings for such a decree, he must have caused a notice of his intentions to be served upon the first Mrs. Remington, so that she might contest them if she wished to do so. No such notice was

"I cannot understand it," Max said, in great perplexity; "all such double-dealing seems so at variance with the innate honor and nobility which I have been led to believe characterized all Mr. Remington's actions."

Mr. Field made no reply to this.

He was not there to either extol er

Verfest knave. He laid before Max the other proofs in his possession, and the young man was overwhelmed with the evidence that seemed to substantiate Laura's claim, and, in despair, he was compelled to acknowledge that the outlook for his mother was exceedingly dark.
"I have now laid the matter clearly before you, Mr. Remington," Mr. Field remarked, as he folded his papers; "we shall give you a week to think it over and come to some decision, and if we hear nothing from you by the end of that time, we shall feel obliged to take

"In other words, she intends to make beggar of my mother," Max said, bitterly. "I do not care so much for myself—if her claim is a legal one, I would scorn to appropriate a dollar to my own use—I am a man and not above working for my living; but my mother was Mr. Remington's honored wife, whatever Miss Pomeroy may claim. She has never Remington's honored whe whatever kinss Pomeroy may claim. She has never known want or hardship, therefore on her account, I feel this impending change deeply. I do fear that the stigma, which must in consequent rest upon her, will crush her. Will it not be possible to save something for her, Mr. Field?"

The lawyer could not help admiring The lawyer could not help admiring the handsome, high-spirited young man, he was touched by his evident affection for and devotion to his adopted mother. "I wish it were in my power to make some favorable terms with you," he said, kindly; "but I am not authorized by Miss Pomeroy—or Miss Remington, as I suppose she will hereafter be known—to do I am simply empowered to conduct case to a successful issue, if pos-e. The gentlemanly counsel bowed him-self out, leaving Max in his misery and self out leaving Max in his misery, and wondering how he could ever gather courage to break the fearful news to his mother.

This is doubtless what Laura meant when she warned me that by defying her I was making trouble for myself that I would regret all my life," Max said, musingly, as step by step he went over the evidence which Mr. Field had laid CHAPTER XXV. Mrs. Remington continued so ill, dur-ing the week that followed Mr. Field's visit to Max, that the young man did not deem it prudent to say anything about the blow that was ready to fall upon her unsuspecting head. He accordingly wrote a frank, manly note to the lawyer, stating her condition, and asking him to defer all action until she should at least be convalescent.

Mr. Field consulted with Laura, showing her the letter that Max had written, and wondered to see her proud, handsome face harden as she read it.

She crushed the paper angrily in her hands as she finished, and seemed to be upon the point of refusing to grant his request, when the lawyer remarked:

"I would recommend all due leniency; a week or two, even three, cannot make a week or two, even three, cannot make much difference to you; and courtesy, if not humanity, should prompt us to yield the point under the circumstances. It is no light matter to swoop down upon people and carry off a handsome fortune, like the Remington estate, with no little warning."

"But you forget the long years that I have been deprived of my rights, while they have been spending, with a lavish hand, money which I should have had," Laura returned, with a sullen look.

"No, I do not forget it, Miss P— Miss Remington," Mr. Field replied, somewhat atiffly, for he did not like the spirit she was manifesting, "but the fault was not was manifesting, "but the fault was not theirs, and though you may have suffered a pecuniary wrong through them, they are now called to suffer through you a far greater one, which no amount of money could atone for. As your counsel I would advise that no further steps be taken until we hear from Mr. Remington eggin."

'And give him time to devise some scheme to thwart me," said Laura, petu-'Mr. Remington, I am persuaded, is not a man to devise anything dishonor-able. Whatever he does he'll do con-scientiously, and I am sure he will confer with me just as soon as his mother's health will allow him to do so," Mr. Field rejoined.

Laura, in her present vindictive state, would have been glad to push matters and cause Max and his mother all the annoyance and trouble possible. She even gloried in anticipating the shame she was about to bring upon them, and yet, when Mr. Field proposed a delay, she had a faint hope that she might turn it to her own account and induce Max to yield to her; perhaps, now that he realized the humiliation it was in her power to bring upon him, he might be willing to purchase her clemency and fulfill his pledge to her. Laura, in her present vindictive state, be willing to purchase her clemency and fulfill his pledge to her.

She drew her writing desk toward her, She drew her writing desk toward her, and, taking a sheet of paper from it, began to write, while her cheek flushed and her eyes grew bright with reviving hope. That evening, as Max went downstairs, after a little visit to his mother, who really seemed better, a servant handed him a letter which he informed him, had just come by special messenger.

Opening it he read:

Still if, by acceding to her request to "consult" with her, he could in any way shield his mother; if he could keep from her the disgraceful knowledge which Mr. Field had revealed, he would have walked miles and braved a hundred ills and dangers to accomplish such a result.

It was still early in the evening, only eight o'clock, and he could easily slip over to Michigan avenue and return within an hour.

"I may as well learn what this matter "I may as well learn what this matter of importance is," he mused, and, donning his hat and coat, he immediately bent his steps toward Laura's boarding-place, which was in one of the finest apartment houses in the city.

The girl had hoped that he would respond promptly to her summons, and she had accordingly arrayed herself, for his benefit, in a most alluring costume of delicate mauve satin with garnet trim-mings, which was exceedingly becoming to her clear, dark complexion. She had entirely discarded her mourning now.

She greeted him as if there had never been the slightest unpleasantness be-tween them, expressed her sorrow and sympathy for Mrs. Remington in her illness, and made herself so agreeable, that Max almost forgot her recent treachery and offensive behavior. and offensive behavior.

A neighboring clock struck nine before he realized how the time had flown, and he had intended to make the interview just as brief as politeness would allow. Thus recalled to himself, he remarked: "In accordance with your request I have come to ascertain what you wished to consult me about. If there is anything that I can do for you. I am at your rights?—because I am going to deprive you of your fortune?"

"No; I think I do not hate anybody," "No; I think I do not hate anybody," Max gravely returned. "Of course it will seem strange and no doubt somewhat hard to be deprived of my usual income; and yet I am not sure that I shall not rather profit by my being thrown upon my own resources. I shall at least have an opportunity to prove my own mettle. On my own account, as I told Mr. Field, I care comparatively little; but I am afraid that the blow will kill my mother."

"Those things are the least to be lamented; they are nothing compared to the disgrace that she will have to endure; could I avert that I should be happy. I would work for her with all my strength and energy to supply the comforts which at her age have almost become necessary; but this other trouble—this knowledge that she has never been a legal wife—how can I bear to have her learn it?"

MAY BOX BOB. London, April 24.-The list of boxng events billed by the National Sporting Club for coronation week is causing a good deal of speculation among ring patrons here. Chief interest centers in the Jeffries-Fitzsimmons match. Neither Jeffries nor Fitzsimmons has ever fought in this country, although both have appeared in sparring exhibitions. Judging by the form shown by each in their stage work, Fitzsimmons is considered by the critics to be the better boxer of the two. Jeffries' great size impresses all who saw him, but he moved slowly, and his blows appeared to lack the precision of the Australian's. While Jeffries is above all others the man that the club is anxious to put against Fitzsimmons, yet should the former refuse to box over here another opponent will be found for the Australian. Kid McCoy has been com-municated with, and if Jeffries still stands aloof he will be chosen to face Fitzsimmons. The latter has already expressed himself as ready to meet any man the club may select. McCoy

Jordan was a St. Louis boy, and be-answer that question. Strength depends on nutrition. When the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition are diseased, the body fails to receive its full supply of nourishment and hence grows weak. That is why no man is stronger than his stomach.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and the allied organs of digestion and nutrition. The food eaten is then perfectly digested and assimilated and the body is made strong in the only possible way-by nutrition. "I was troubled with indigestion for about two years." writes Wim. Bowker, Esq., of Juliaetta, Latah Co., Idaho. "I tried different doctors and remedies but to no avail, until I wrote to you and you told me what to do. I suffered with a pain in my stomach and left side and thought that it would kill me. Now I am glad to write this and let you know that I am all right. I can do my work now without pain and I don't have that tired feeling that I used to have. ton, a few days ago of a fractured skull. Manning was driving a spirited horse, which became unmanageable, and ran away, throwing the veteran from the wagon, his head striking the stone curb. Manning first became prominent as a runner in 1872. His greatest race was a half-mile run at Beacon Park, Boston, against Robert Hindle, of Scotland, for $2,500 a side. Manning won by 18 inches. MILK ADULTERATION IN ATHENS A French newspaper describes an ingenious method of milk adulteration practiced in Athens. The residents have a penchant for goat's milk, and herds of these animals are led along the street by milk sellers wearing long blouses with capacious sleeves. Their cry of "Gala! gala!" brings the housewife to the door, and she prudently demands that the goats shall be milked in her presence. This is done, but the milkman has in one hand the end of a thin tube which runs up his sleeve and connects with an India rubber receptacle full of water, which is carried under his ample blouse. At each pressure of the fingers on the udder there is a corresponding compression of the water sack, and milk and water flow side by side into the milk pail.

LESS CANDY.

Better to Give Children Delicious Food

Than Candy. Some foods will cure dyspepsia and other foods will cause it. The safest way to get well is to use the food that agrees with the stomach and permits Nature to go along in a thoroughly natural way. A lady says, "I have at last found a true way to get well and keep well, and that is by the use of Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food. "For six years I suffered with indigestion and palpatation of the heart so that I could not sleep nights. I tried a great many different kinds of medicines and a lot of different kinds of cereals, but none of them helped me, and my stomach seemed to get worse "I became very despondent and was at a loss to know what to do. One day I read in the paper that Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food would cure indigestion and build up the body. I wondered if it contained any medicine, but learned that it did not, but that it was only a food prepared so that the stomach could easily digest it.

"The next time I went down town I bought two packages. This was on Tuesday and it was all gone on Saturday for we all liked it so much, so I sent down and got three more packages and from that time I have been asing Grape-Nuts steadily and my indigestion has entirely disappeared. Sometimes when my little girl has been playing extra hard after supper she will climb on my knee, pat my cheek and whisper in my ear, 'Mamma, please give me something good," say (knowing all the time) 'What is good, dear?' She says, 'Grape-Nuts with cream on top,' and there is nothing, candy or anything else, that she enjoys better than this good, wholesome food. She eats it for breakfast every morning and prefers Grape-Nuts pudding for dinner. At night she has Grape-Nuts for her supper with a soft boiled egg, and she thrives wonderfully on this kind of food." Battle Name given by Postum Co., Creek. Mich.

Snow at Kingston, Ont., today (Thursday). SO RAPIDLY does lung irritation spread and deepen, that often in a few weeks a simple cough culminates in tubercular consumption. Give heed to a tubercular consumption. Give heed to a cough, there is always danger in delay; get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and cure yourself. It is a medicine unsurpassed for all throat and lung troubles. It is compounded from several herbs, each one of which stands at the head of the list as exerting a wonderful influence in curing consumption and all lung diseases.

Several Young Probationers Get Their Certificates.

Occasion Made Interesting by Able Addresses Delivered at Open Meeting.

The young Methodist probationers, who have been writing their examinations the past few days at the Colborne Street Methodist Church, were given their certificates last night, at an open meeting, which was quite largely attended. Two very interesting and impressive addresses were delivered-one by Rev. E. N. Baker, B. D., pastor of the Central Methodist Church, Stratford, and the other by Rev. George W. Henderson, of St. Marys. Rev. James Livingstone, of Windsor, president of the London Conference, presided. Rev. Mr. Baker spoke of "How to Secure Apostolic Power and Success in the Pulpit," and Mr. Henderson of "The Ideal Minister." Both addresses were helpful and encouraging. Mr. Clayton Moorhouse, of Dorchester, won the honor of leading his class, taking an excellent standing in all subjects. Certificates were handed out as follows by Rev. Jos. C. Philp, of Pe-trolia: Third year-Harvey Kennedy, Oakdale, second-class honors; Anson Moorehouse, Fullarton, first-class honors: Clayton Moorehouse, Dorchester, first-class honors. First year - A. W. Budd, Florence, first-class honors.

Candidates - John A. Agnew, Edy's Mills; Charles Donn, Exeter, first-class honors; Morley D. Madden, Thorndale, second-class honors; George H. Tuckey, Ferguson, second-class

MUSIC AND DRAMA

Kathryn Kidder, in "The Country Girl" at the Grand. Kathryn Kidder and a good company came to the Grand last night in a revival of "The Country Girl," an English comedy, which had its genesis over two and a quarter centuries ago. It was stone macadam pavement, to be constructed out of the general funds. The chairman will secure a report as to its legality.

The engineer was instructed to engage inspectors for cement sidewalk construction. A previous motion to pay them 25 cents an hour was rescinded and 20 cents fixed as their wage. The engineer wanted bricklayers engaged the plan.

The question of passing a bylaw providing for the use of wide tires on vehicles was discussed, and it was thought the change would secure a saving of the permanent roads. A copy of the bylaw in force in Ottawa will be secured.

The city engineer recommended that the sewage farm be rented for pasture, after fencing the bacteria beds in to save them from damage. No action was taken toward fencing the beds, but the farm will be rented.

The engineer was instructed to write the street rallway company, asking them if they will put 'tirified brick along their rails on asphalted streets. The pavements are to be repaired.

In connection with the recent debate on long pastorates in the United Free Presbytery of Glasgow, Rev. R. W. Parke petitioned for a six-foot (instead of a five-foot) cement walk, (Ian Maclaren), of Liverpool:

"With regard to your proposal of a limited pastorate, I have ever had a high sense of the accumulated capital of character and influence which a man obtains by working for a long period in one city. But I also feel more deeply every day that a young minister should have a change after his first five years, and that ministers in city charges cannot as a rule stand the work and the demands, both upon brain and body more than, say, ten or fifteen years in one place. I also am convinced that, as a rule, no man etition was filed.
C. V. Morris, et al., petitioned Beal, applied for positions as inspector of cement walks. The applications much above 50 will be able to main-tain a large city charge in an efficient manner, at least if he is obliged to be both pastor and preacher. It would be better for the church that city ministers (of course, I know there are exceptions) as they approach 60 should go for a few years to a country town or rural parish, where they could work very well and do a great deal of good."

The Gate of Europe. Buda Pesth, the Hungarian capital, is one of the handsomest cities in the world. Its wide streets, bordered by magnificent buildings, its parks, paiaces, theaters, and last, but not least, its luxurious cafes, which have no equal, cannot fail to impress the visitor with its wealth and beauty. The city is built on volcanic ground and the internal fires are still smoldernight that Albert Janes, chief of police ing. A visit to the St. Lucas hot sulof Strathcona, N.W.T., had died in that phur baths, across the Danube at Buda, might lead the visitor to think that the infernal regions are not far off, and indeed a humorous preacher could make good use of this when moralizing on the gay and luxurious life of the Pesth half of the consolidated town. Another curiosity of the spot is the natural aperient waters, renowned throughout the world, of which Apenta is the leading one. The Apenta accumulates in wells dug for the purpose and absorbs from the soil the salts that make it a valuable purgative. To one returning from the East by

The Socialists of this city will hold a convention, either on Tuesday next or on Thursday, and will choose a candidate to contest the provincial election on their behalf.

In the ranks of the party the opinion seems held that the nominations will be offered to Mr. H. B. Ashplant and Mr. Frederick Haselgrove—the former for the city and the latter for the rural riding. In connection with the Socialists' intentions, the following letter explains somewhat the stand which they are
