Attacking the Reporter

The attack by Sir Charles Tupper on the Canadian correspondent of the London Times, which has now been fathered by the Opposition as a whole, cannot do that well-known journalist

What the Conservative leaders object to, it seems, is the cabled statement that on the morning after the tariff announcement, members of the Opposition bewailed the fact that when in power they had not forestalled the Liberals by providing for preferential trade with Great Britain, as has been accomplished at the earliest opportun-

If the representative of the London Times so informed the British public, he had ample warrant for his action the after-denials of the Opposition leader notwithstanding. In the lobbies, early on the morning of Friday, April 23, while the excitement over the announcement of the notable departure was at its height, Conservative M. P.s freely acknowledged the importance of the step, and Lamented that their leaders had not been more alert on this score and less anxious to force another issue. The Times correspondent is these figures prove that Germany's himself a strong Conservative, but he has always performed his duties without prejudice, and his dispatches have hitherto received general commendation. The present attack on him but Illustrates how prone a certain class of men are to get out of a tight hole by belaboring the public chronicler. British readers, however, appreciate the truth, and may rely upon it that the Times' correspondent is too experienced a newspaper man to be swerved from dozing, no matter how skillfully gone about. The "dished politician," as the Conservative St. James' Gazette calls him, is no longer Sir Oracle in the estimation of the British public, whom for period he craftily bam-

It is the greatest proof of British manufacturing supremacy that the slightest foreign inroad upon the home market should create so much surprise and commotion, whereas no other nation in the world, however highly protected, is so free as Great Britain from outside competition in this line. Her trade policy enables the motherland to manufacture more cheaply than countries like Germany, where the materfals of industry are so heavily taxed. And no old world nation pays as high does Great Britain. German workmen, though "protected," are poorly paid when compared with British workers.

A Rejected Lover Wounds a Girl and Then Spares Her Life-His Suicide.

Fresno, Cal., May 3.-The worst crime in California since the murder of six members of the McGlincy family near San Jose by Dunham, was con mitted last week at Red Banks, in this county, by James Brooks, a farm hand, who dangerously wounded Mrs. John Qualls and her daughter Lulu with a shotgun, and then committed suicide. Brooks was formerly employed on Qualls' ranch, but was discharged because he annoyed Lulu after she had rejected his love proposals. The man became crazed with disappointment, and threatened to shoot the girl, whereon her father had him placed in Recently, before Brooks' sentence had expired, Mr. Qualls went on his bond, and the prisoner was released. He went to work ten miles away. Success of the Toronto Horse Show-London Horses in Front.

Toronto, May 3 .- The horse snow an artistic, social and sporting standpoint, and probably in a financial way. The feature of the day was the preshas undergone, but he is probably not as strong as his ruddy appearance would seem to indicate. His Honor and Mrs. Kirkpatrick were kept constantly engaged in shaking extended hands, and acknowledging speeches of come. Other distinguished visitors were Premier Hardy, Sir Adolphe and Lieut.-Col. Prior, of British Columbia. In the afternoon, there were several classess judged. Class 44, best saddle and harness second to Hume Blake's Rufus, third going to G. A. Gunn's Dalmeny. Class 49, for best performance over six jumps, brought out a class of good hunters and jumpers, and was a hotly contested class, several of the horses being sent over several times have because the form of the present tariff was not then determined, it is probable that the Colonial Secretary learned a good deal about the aspirations and hopes of the Canadian by falling walls and live wires, but Watertown, N. Geraldine was in a few moments far too deeply absorbed to notice either plants or pictures, for the contents of the pocketbook, as she turned them one by one, and placed them on the table, were a series of enigmas to which she had no clew. First came half a dozen letters, addressed in different hands to "Henry Hammond, Esquire, 103 Duncan street, Brompton." These had all been sent through the post and opened. She ascertained this, and placed them, without fur-ther investigation, in a pile together. Next came a cutting from a newspaper, giving an account of a street row with no names, but with the hint that principal delinquents were, and the parties are advised to settle their do-mestic difficulties indoors another The next thing she took out was a photograph; it was the portrait of a girl in an ill-fitting dress of the style of a few years before—a girl so young and so pretty, even when judged through the medium of this somewhat inartistic reproduction, that one could forgive the want of taste which had led her to tousle her hair too much in front and to curl it too much behind, and to deck her "tatting," fastened by a brooch and a bow of ribbon, and finished off by a couple of cheap necklaces. This pho-tagraph had been taken at Holloway. On the back was written, with a fine pen, in a scratchy, sprawling woman's hand, "To dearest Harry, with Ada's love." On the memorandum cleaves of the pocketbook were entries in a man's handwriting, probably that of H. Hammond, the owner. Some of the leaves had been forn out, leaving the others loose; one fluttered t ground unnoticed by her. She glanced at some of the entries; they were merely a man's odd jottings, sometimes in the form of an attempt at a diary, sometimes stray memoranda. The entries afforded her little information; on one page, for example, were the following:

22nd.—Saw a body fished out by London bridge. Thames wouldn't do Here the page ended. The next entries were fragments of medical pre-scriptions, the title of a work on poisons, and a chemist's address in a poor part of London.

The nature of the fragments of diary interested Geraldine enough to make her wonder who the writer could have been, how the book could have got into Sir Charles' room, and why it should have been sent by the housekeeper to her. Nothing seemed clearer than that it had not belonged to her father; the handwriting was a pencil scrawl, quite unfamiliar to her, She was proceeding in some perplexity to open one of the letters, when a hand was suddenly laid upon the whole pile, at the same moment that pocketbook was quickly and neatly transferred from her keeping to that of Lindley Fielding, who stood by her with some anxiety in his eyes, but with his mouth expanded into his favorite bland smile. "Miss Geraldine-Miss Geraldine, I did not expect to find you tampering with other people's letters!" said he, with playfulness which was rather

When Lindley's hand had so unex-pectedly swooped down upon her, Geraldine had instinctively kept out of his reach the letter she had just taken up, and she still held it firmly.
"If you can give me some proof that what you say is true, you shall have he letter," said she, after a pause. But Lindley smiled on. Placing his poils carefully in one of his pockets, took from another a handful of etters and papers, and, selecting one letter, showed her the signature at the end, "H. Hammond." Then he replaced it in his pocket in triumph. Reluctantly Geraldine gave up the let-ter she held, and it was not until it was safely in his fingers that it occurred to her to say: "But you did not show me that that letter signed 'Hammond' was addressed to you."

Lindley laughed outright—quite

age of innocence? "I learned it, Mr. Fielding, in Copsy churchyard," she replied, coldly. Having gained his object, he had rereated a little way, and was criticisng the old pictures airily through his yeglass. As Geraldine was rising from her chair, she caught sight of one leaf of the diary on the ground at her feet, and she did not scruple to defraud Mr. Hammond and his intimate friend by slipping it into her pocket, as, with a great air of dighity, she left the room. Standing at the foot of the staircase opposite was the gaunt housekeeper, who had eviently been waiting for her, as she stepped forward at a pace rather quicker than her usual stately march. 'You got the pocketbook, ma'am? she asked, in a low voice.

Dear Sirs: I have been keeping in the house your Radway's Ready Relief for the last six years. I have used it in every way, and found it to be the best on earth. Six years ago I was sick: I tried all kinds of medicines, but they did me no good. My father saw the advertisement in the paper; he told me to try a bottle. I did so, and by using it three days I was able to be out. I have kept it on hand ever since, and I have told my neighbors about it. My wift had been troubled with toothache. I gave a trial of the medicine and it cured her pain instantly. I was gathering corn and got my hand caught between the wagon-bed and standard, and mashed it badly. I ran to the house and poured on a lot of Radway's Ready Relief, and had no more pain. I tied my hand up with a piece of flannel, poured on more Eadway's Ready Relief. Moberly. A DINNER PILL-Many persons suffer excruciating agony after partaking of a hearty dinner. The food partaken of is like a ball of lead upon the stomch, and instead of being a healthy nutriment it becomes a poison to the sys-tem. Dr. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are wonderful correctives of such troubles. They correct acidity, open the secretions, and convert the food partaken of into healthy nutriment. They are just the medicine to take if troubled with Indigestion or Dyspepsia.

The Organized Charity Society now have their Pingree potato scheme ready, and it will be launched at once. Mr. Edward Daly has kindly given them, free of charge, the use of six cres of desirable land, between the Barracks and the C. P. R. roundhouse. The society has also as good as secured a second plot in the city limits. These plots will be plowed and prepared for seeding immediately. They will be laid out in sections, and the deserving poor allowed to cultivate poatoes or any vegetables they please during the summer months, so as to lay in a store of food for the winter. The society are confident that the scheme will be a success and save much outlay of relief money when the
