Mr. Ward,

SIR:

Referring to your enquiry with reference to NEARY'S LINIMENT, I beg to say that I have used it for many purposes in my stables, both at the mill and at home, and find it an indispensable article. We never think of packing a chest for the woods without at least a dozen bottles. The men in camp are also using it this season for cuts, bruises, chaps, etc.

A BUSY WEEK—THE ABERDEENS DOING THE TOWN—DEPARTURE OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL—LADY ABERDEEN MAY SPEAK TO THE PUBLIC.

Halifax, August 9th.—At the risk of boring the readers of communications from this city, one is compelled to talk "Aberdeen" to an absurd extent if he would give a summary, be it never so brief, of the week's happenings, for our notable visitors are the centre of all attention.

That the Aberdeens really and pleasure in the round of formal receptions, dinners, etc., which they are called upon to honor with their presence is open to doubt, but that they are finding life at beautiful Maplewood full of pleasure is certain. Several hours have been spent by the vice-regal party on the waters of the Arm, and I heard this week of one lady resident at the Arm who was favored by an informal call from their excellencies, the Earl having rowed their little boat from Maplewood himself. Such freedom is delightful in people over whom no end of formal fuss is being made.

On Sunday, Lord Aberdeen and his family attended morning service at St. Luke's church, and in the evening the Earl and Countess, with the little Lady Marjorie occupied a pew in Fort Massey. It need hardly be said that unusually large congregations were present at both services.

The week has been very gay in the bon ton circles of our social life. The drawing room held on Monday evening was one of the most elaborate events of the season, in fact of many seasons. The interior of the Province Building was magnificently decorated with plants of all varieties, and the Legislative Council, where serious deliberations are wont to be carried on, presented a scene of splendor and beauty, which has not been equalled since the gray old walls for many years gone by as the good citizens of Halifax made obeisance to Her Most Gracious Majesty's worthy representative. Lady Aberdeen wore a very handsome black gown, the train being carried by two pages. Her jewels were diamonds. Lord Aberdeen was attired in full court uniform. Several of the ladies presented were elegantly dressed, and everything was carried out as though such affairs were of every day occurrence.

On Tuesday the Home of the Good Shepherd, and the school for the Blind were visited by Lady Aberdeen, whose interest in philanthropic work is well known.

By the way, I have it on good authority that there is a strong possibility, yes, even a probability of Her Ladyship addressing a public meeting on behalf of one of the philanthropic institutions of the city. The Superintendent has heretofore been markedly successful in interesting and gaining the co-operation of the public in his good work, and if he can win the full sympathy of Lady Aberdeen, the welfare of those under his charge will assuredly be advanced in no small degree.

Prof. Loissette's free lecture on Mnemonics in the Academy of Music on Tuesday afternoon drew a full house, made up of the leading people, both from an intellectual and social standpoint. Lady Aberdeen and the children, and General Montgomery-Moore graced the platform with their presence, and the meeting was presided over by the Bishop who introduced the lecturer. Professor Loissette, who is a fine speaker, gave an interesting outline of his system of training the memory, during which he held the close attention of his large audience. Classes are being carried on this week, and quite a number have paid the modest sum of $10.00 for the wonderful instruction Prof. Loissette has to give.

As Bishop Courtney facetiously remarked, one thing all the class members will be sure to remember, is that they did pay $10.00.

The afternoon hop on the Blake on Tuesday was attended by a goodly number of the elite, and as one young lady enthusiastically informed yours truly, "a bonnet dance on the Blake is the jolliest sport out."

Not least, rather greatest, among the swell functions of the week, at any rate most enjoyable to the gentlemen, was the banquet tendered to the Governor-General by the North British, St. George's and Charitable Irish Societies, on Tuesday evening at the Halifax hotel. About two hundred guests enjoyed the feast provided by Host Hessein, and participated in the wit and wisdom which followed.

To-day Lord Aberdeen leaves on the Blake for Charlottetown, where a right royal welcome awaits him.

The Art loan exhibition, with its many features of interest has been largely patronized this week.

I have left not a few events of interest unnoted but I fear I have already over run the space allotted.

We are still enjoying delightful weather. Sunshine each morning greets our waking. However, many are looking anxiously for rain which is really much needed, and would be heartily welcomed by those whose gardens cry for refreshing.

Educational Notes.

The Journal of Education for April contains the following items of importance to teachers and trustees at the present time.

1. ANNUAL ENGAGEMENTS.

"Trustees and teachers should promptly notice the regulation making engagements between teachers and trustees for a period less than a year illegal, unless for special causes after the consent of the Inspector is obtained, such consent being simultaneously transmitted to the Education Office for registration. The law thus lays a heavy responsibility upon the Inspector, that of seeing that the spirit of the law is not so grossly ignored with impunity."

2. THE OPENING DAY.

"The attention of teachers is directed to the Regulation of the Council of Public Instruction, No. 7, under the head of TEACHERS.

Neglecting to use at least a postal card in the discharge of this new duty may have unpleasant consequences.

The Inspector should know what teachers are engaged in each section in his district. Sections from which no reports are received will be assumed to be vacant."

The foregoing is so important that the following form is given for the use of teachers. Whether the form is used or not, all the information outlined in it must be given:—

THE ADVERTISER

MY FIANCE'S GLASS EYE

He was tall, dark, and, to my taste, altogether charming. Last evening, for the first time, we walked in the winding walks of the park. The straight avenue, which stretched itself within view of the house, had been, until now, the only witness of our confidence.

I loved dearly this avenue, with its great oak trees at regular intervals, short, the benches for talking quite at one's ease, the green grass all around and beyond. When one wandered off a bit, the linge windows, which opened, by the light of the setting sun, great, wide, open eyes, all smiling at our happiness.

"Walk along the avenue with Monsieur de Valente, Angèle," my mother had said to me at the beginning of our engagement. "The path in the park are altogether too damp."

And I walked along the avenue, gaily, resisting Roux—he was named Roux—who appeared to have, I know not why, a marked preference for the shaded paths.

"Mamma says the narrow paths are damp. Had we not better remain here?" that evening, however, my head was turned, and something tugged at my heart-strings—he was to leave the next day to buy up some paper necessary for our marriage.

Eight days without seeing him? How could I live? And he, taking advantage of my trouble, made me turn into the damp, narrow walk, which, by the way, in spite of bad reputation, seemed to me as dry as possible.

"My Angèle, you are not going to forget me during these eight days?" "Forget you? No! I would have lifted my hands to take Heaven as a witness that such a thing could never happen if he had not been so tightly clasped in his arms. It is not my habit to lose myself in sentimental protestations—my heart is too certain, and this time not more than at others did I play my native false.

"But, you love him, do you not? Well, then, I wish to tell you all my faults, I shall be more tranquil if you know them beforehand. You would see them sooner or later; so listen. I am very wild, I will not yield to you. You may as well make up your mind to it. Then I am as inflammable as gun-powder. I stamp my foot, I scream, I even cry at times. I am very impatient, I pass quickly. Besides that, I am a coquette, like all women. You will not be jealous, I hope. And Angèle, I am quite sure, I can't quite tell—a little gentleman-façon, not wicked, not despicable—I find nothing else. As to the physical, what can I have wrong there? You must know that also, as I am of my fingers nails is not quite the same as the others. Look; but it seems to me that that's too good."

And, releasing my hand, I showed him a little pink nail, a little square than the others, a very innocent eccentricity of nature. Roux laughed and wanted to kiss it, but I drew away my hand. "I have also long, white teeth, which is gone forever, alas! I can never altogether be wise. They took it out because it came too soon, and, sir, it is our curse. Confess yourself, Angèle, visibly embarrassed, remained silent.

"Go on, have courage. You may be quite exact—I shall not scold. I do not know your faults, but it is quite certain you have some. In the first place, you are near-sighted, for you wear a monocle instead of an eye-glass, which, it seems to me, you would see much better. Mamma says that that glass causes you to make such fearful mistakes, but I don't think so; I please me as you are. However, take out the eye-glass, so that I can see how you look when your face isn't crooked."

I had seated with a little gentle gesture, the string of the monocle, when Roux stopped my hand. "No, my little Angèle, leave it there. Without it I should no longer see it. I am near-sighted, very near-sighted, it is true; and I want to see you, Angèle, for you are the joy of my life."

"Then, even before I had time to think, he had taken me, drew me to him, and covered my eyes and my hair with kisses. "Roux, how naughty of you; enough of that, if you please." "Why naughty? Are you not my fiancee, my little darling wife?" "When I am your wife it will be quite different. Let me go; I will not remain here; it is too dark under these trees."

I had succeeded in releasing myself and holding down my hair, which, under those soft kisses, where flying in all directions, as if charged with electricity, I escaped by running away to a more frequented path. There was no longer any question of making Roux offend. Hissing violently, I was thinking of quite different matters. The next day he was gone. What a frightful moment this departure, when, standing on the front steps, I had turned away my head, so as not to see James griping up the reins, the horses pull together, the victoria sway; in a word, so as not to see they were taking him away from me.

Papa had gone with him to the station, while mamma and I breakfasted alone together. It was dismal in the extreme. Mamma ate as usual, which I couldn't understand. As for myself, I ate only a very little, just enough to sustain me, and even that with difficulty. Every mouthful stuck in my throat. In the midst of the breakfast Justinie opened the door. "Madame, Monsieur de Valente has left his glass eye in his room. Shall I send it to him?" "Had the heavens been opened to let fall on the table, the sun and the moon, I couldn't have felt a greater shock. The end of the world will, perhaps, be nothing to equal it. I repeated with horror: "His glass eye, Justinie?" "Yes, madame; it is on his wash-stand." Mamma grew pale, but remained calm. "Very well, I will leave the room. We will see if it is necessary to send it to him." I had only two ways to express my intense emotion—sneezing, or burst into convulsive sobs. I chose the latter. "Mamma—mamma, he has a glass eye! Good heavens, is it possible? How horrible! I shall never console myself I shall die of grief."

"Calm yourself, my child, calm yourself. It is ridiculous to put yourself in such a state. This gentleman has deceived us, that is all. I always thought he had rather a queer expression."

"Mamma had risen, and I was sobbing on her breast. "Why did he not tell me? I, who had avowed all my own defects—the wretched teeth, and the anger—all everything! Dear me! How unhappy I am! And only last evening he had said, 'You are the joy of my life.'"

"Come, calm yourself; don't cry. Think that, I tell you it is ridiculous. Think of it! How unfortunate it is that things have gone so far. Only eight days before, it is lucky we found it out in time."

I hardly listened. One question burned in my throat. He has another eye to change with, mamma, and he has one which he has used probably put in water to cool. Mamma was horribly worried; I knew never known any one who had a glass eye, and do not care to know how they manage it.

She continued a little monologue all to herself. "It is pleasant! All this trousseau, marked with a V. We will never find the same mark again; and my husband will have nothing to say. He was so charmed with this gentleman at first sight. The references were perfect; an excellent character, his college preceptor, one can never forget one. A pretty discovery, indeed! I always thought there was something extraordinary about him; the individual never pleased me, and I was quite right."

I had raised my head; the vision of the glass eye gazing at me from the depths of whatever case it troubled me profoundly. But another vision came also to my memory. I saw again my fiancee, so good, so tender. I heard once again all our prospects for the future; all our joys, all our pains, and suddenly it seemed to me to be last evening and a rain of kisses was falling on my hair. I had not said mamma about these kisses; but I felt that I loved Roux with one eye, and that nothing would induce me to give him up. All my courage came back to me.

"I am sure he must have lost that eye in some honorable, magnificent way; in saving some one, perhaps, or in some other noble, but less such a certainty—no, no, he has such a noble, noble, I quite understand it, he was losing it."

"What do you say? Are you crazy? Do you think I am going to allow you to marry with such an infirmity? You, my beautiful Angèle, you are, only seventeen, and with your fortune, and with your beauty, my child, do not waste for yourself a romance of devotion and sacrifice; it is perfectly useless. I will never consent to your marriage with a man with one eye. Should he lose the other, he would be blind, and how agreeable that would be!"

"But, mamma, I will be his faithful nothing, I will take care of him, and I will love him in spite of his infirmity, in spite of everything that he has lost. I will take care of him, and I will love him in spite of his infirmity, in spite of everything that he has lost. I will take care of him, and I will love him in spite of his infirmity, in spite of everything that he has lost."

I was in an extraordinary state of exaltation. My sobe began again harder than ever, and I did not promise soon to stop. When Justinie reentered the room, her longest face showing every expression of astonishment and stupefaction. "It isn't possible that madame should be so out of herself in such a state, because Monsieur de Valente has forgotten his glass eye in his room. I will take care of it, and I will love him in spite of his infirmity, in spite of everything that he has lost."

"I had seated with a little gentle gesture, the string of the monocle, when Roux stopped my hand. "No, my little Angèle, leave it there. Without it I should no longer see it. I am near-sighted, very near-sighted, it is true; and I want to see you, Angèle, for you are the joy of my life."

LONDON POLICEMEN.

It costs that City Ten Million a Year for their Services. It costs close upon $10,000,000 a year to police London. There are in the metropolitan police force 15,000 men of all ranks, and their total clothing and equipment, allows for the taxpayers of the big city £1,343,909 a year. Then there is the pay of the commissioners, clerks, electric staff and workmen generally, the maintenance of stations and officers and the thousand and one expending the peace of the metropolis the total cost of the machinery for guarding the peace of the British metropolis a few pounds short of £2,000,000 a year.

There are 12,385 ordinary policemen on the force. They are called "constables," there being only one grade below that of sergeant. The pay of a constable varies between 24 shillings a week, the pay of a new recruit, and 488 shillings a week, the maximum pay of an ordinary constable. There were last year 1,099 men on the London police force recruited in a winter and 20 men in summer. This force of constables is supplied to the constables of the metropolis from the government supply of clothes from the government stores he receives £3 a year in place of the clothing.

This matter of allowance is an important one to the policeman, and is received by every member of the force. Lodging, for instance, receive an allowance of coal money when they are not living in the stations. Married men get fourpence a week and single men three pence halfpenny a week. Married men living in stations receive 40 pounds of coal a week the year round; single men 40 pounds in winter and 30 pounds in summer. This form of coal and coal allowance amounted to £14,930 last year. The London policeman has by no means so good a job, as far as remuneration is concerned, as his New York policeman, making all allowance for the difference in comparative value of the money, with the exception of a place in comparison with the average Londoner as the New York policeman, when compared with that of the average New Yorker, instead of the London policeman is poorly paid, even as his pay goes in England—New York Sun.

Padrowski's Account of Himself. "When I am to appear in public I keep perfectly quiet during the preceding hours. I put on my best clothes immediately after rising every day. I eat with great appetite, and am not in the least a difficult machine to get on. When my recitals are over I feel that a weight has been lifted off my mind, and then I like to join in a little of the fun. I practice at all hours of the day, and at night—sometimes all night, for I have to set rules for my own conduct, and very often practice between the courses at meals or while I am dressing, or while from insomnia consequent to the great strain on my nerves, and although it is not noticeable to the general public, I am a martyr to nervousness. I go through positive tortures when I contemplate playing Liszt's recital myself, to absolutely subdue my feelings or they would rise to such a pitch as to prevent my having the least control over my fingers."

An Awful Dream. I had a dream the other night when everything was still. I saw the baseball club of Galt on the way to White Dunes, Bradford, were laughing fit to kill. In front the baseball club of Galt on the way to White Dunes, Bradford, were laughing fit to kill. Each ball was ornamented with a lovely little scaly. Now there was Master Stover, and Master Hever, and Mr. Miller, Mr. Miller on third base taken them. And Scottie he was everywhere where there's a fly ball. He put the ball across the plate for scaly to beat the ball.

Congre took his snuff pan and smashed a good home run. And Mike Fourn scooped home before the game was done. Mr. Cronk was tipped to bury Galt, at setting of the sun. So the faded colors, all duty on the field. And clean them up; the championship is coming back to Galt. And Billy Smith will stand and watch, and Charlie Madlock smile. And Lapham will come limping home from many a And Tommy Smith, in left, will crouch at Galt's feet. And all the good and rare old photos will sit up on the fence. And Master Genevieve Stroman will whisper: "It's im-possible."

On the Right Track.

The Woodstock Sentinel Review is a strong Grit paper but its editor is an intense Canadian. He has had some things to say recently that Cartwright-Charlton et al will not like. The editor of the Review is one of the clearest-headed editors on the Provincial press, and his views as to trade relations with the people of the United States, particularly as he is a Grit, are worth quoting. Here is what he says— "One other point is clear, the satisfaction which the Canadian people feel in the meeting of this conference is due very largely to the attitude of the people of the United States towards Canada. It has been, especially of late, commercially and politically hostile. And while this is true, the financial crisis in the United States has opened the eyes of Canadians to the results of their political and fiscal systems, it has killed, and we hope for all time to come, annexation sentiment in this country. While we believe, as we always have, that the United States is Canada's best market, and that we should never cease in friendly but self-respecting efforts to secure it on fair terms, still we are not prepared to secure it at a sacrifice either of national self-respect or national existence. Nor are we prepared to sit with our hands folded while the Americans refuse to deal with us as friends and neighbors. Canadian interest in the colonial conference springs from national self-respect and a spirit of national self help. If our neighbors spurn us and pursue a policy avowedly hostile, we must look elsewhere for opportunities to promote our commercial and material prosperity; and with the instinct of self-preservation we must strengthen our position at one of the most important colonies in the great imperial family, while we are moving forward to a great nationality of our own."

Creamery Stands.

Our farmers are justly to be congratulated on the founding of the new creameries as these will afford them a regular source of income, and will render them less dependent upon their apple crops, and their potato markets. It frequently happens, however, in the introduction of new methods that various appliances which accompany them require to be modified as the result of additional experience or reflection. This a change would seem to be necessary in the style and location of the "stands" now in use for the milk which awaits carriage to the creameries. At present these stands are certainly a disfigurement to the otherwise generally neat appearance of the country roadsides. A large proportion of the farmers have expended considerable time and money in making the surroundings and their homes attractive alike to resident and visitor. Indeed few farming districts can surpass this valley in the taste and skill which will here be found displayed on flower garden, hedge and garden fence, and on footpaths and private driveways before the country dwelling. For our farmers to erect at this time an unsightly stand, immediately in front of the various residences means in a measure to destroy the beauty of their garden frontage, to lessen the value of their previous labor on street adornment, and to discredit their well deserved reputation for neatness and taste in home surroundings. Evidently these milk stands ought to be placed in the back yard, away from public view. If, however, they are to be kept on the roadside for the convenience of the milk-purchaser, then they should be erected as close as possible to the fence, aside from the garden front and adjoining the entrance to the back yard, and should never form such a prominent feature of the roadside landscape as they now threaten to become in some parts of this county.

Kings County Academy

The County Academy will re-open on Monday, 27th, inst, and with greater facilities than heretofore for thorough and efficient work. Hitherto progress was largely hampered by want of room. There was no laboratory where the pupils could perform individual work, so indispensable in the study of the Sciences, which occupy so prominent a place in the school curriculum of today. The new addition to the school building supplies not only this long felt want, but also a class-room and a gymnasium. The greater advantages will of course increase responsibility and heighten expectation. Further achievements will be expected to eclipse the bright record of the past. There is now every facility for doing thorough and efficient work, and if parents throughout the county avail themselves of this grand opportunity of free and liberal education for their sons and daughters, Kings County Academy will ere long distance all rival institutions. To show that this is no extravagant opinion, we have only to glance at the good work accomplished in the past under very unfavorable circumstances.

The uniform success of the Third year students at the Provincial Examinations, has been such as to place the institution in the forefront among the Academies. The same success has accompanied those of them who have gone to higher institutions of learning. George Cogswell, after holding a scholarship for four years at Dalhousie goes to Cornell University where he takes a more valuable one. Fred McKittrick, at the expiration of his scholarship in Dalhousie, takes the Exhibition Science Scholarship of the annual value of $720 and tenable for two years; Miss Beat, whose Scholastic standing fully sustains the high expectations her distinguished career in the Academy had raised. Miss Mudge and Miss Rand, whose indefatigable perseverance bespeaks university honors; Miss Jackson who left the Academy to enter the Second year in Acadia University, and on obtaining the degree of B. A. is appointed to a high position on the teaching staff of Acadia Seminary; R. Griffin, Bishop, Cahoon, and Miss Strong, who take a foremost place in their respective years in Acadia. Hugh L. Dickie, makes a general average of 79.5 at the Entrance Examination for the Halifax Medical College, while the other candidates from different parts of the province failed. The late lamented Dr. Gleason, whose career as a student at a New York Medical and Letter as a practitioner, was so successful; F. Cogswell, whose high standing at the close of his medical course led to his being chosen valedictorian by the graduating class. In the Engineering Department, McGill University, Harry Chase and Avard Newcomb, acquitted themselves in a manner that has gained for Nova Scotians the epithet boiling. L. Lovett, who took a first class place when he entered upon his law studies, and Nepesin Ruggles, in whose success as a lawyer, he has realized the high hopes his collegiate career had inspired. This list which is far from complete, should suffice to encourage others to go and do likewise. He who resolves upon doing a thing by that very resolution often scales the barriers to it, and secures its achievement.

THE GLOOM

SAYINGS AND SAMUEL SLICK

BY LORIAN CHANDLER

'So I did,' he replied, 'the last one I had to sell to him, but I've got a few left for other folks yet. Now there is a man on this road, one Zeb Allen, a real genuine skinflint, a proper close-fisted customer as you'll a' most see anywhere, and one that's not altogether the straight thing in his dealin' neither. He don't want no one to live but himself, and he's mighty handsom to me, -saying 'my clocks are up to a cheat, and that we ruin the country, a drainin' every drop of money out of it, a callin' me a Yankee broom, and what not. But it ain't all just gossip that he says. Now I'll put a clock on him afore he knows it; I'll go right into him as sick as a whistle, and play him to the end of my line like a trout. I'll have a hook in his gills, while he's a thinkin' he's only smellin' at the bait. There he is now, I'll be darned if he ain't, standin' afore his shop lookin' as strong as high proof jamajak; I guess I'll whip out of the bung while he's a lookin' arter the spicket, and p'raps he'll be none of the wiser till he vends it out, neither.'

'Well, Squire, how do you do,' said he; 'how's all at home?'

'Reasonable well, I give you thanks, won't you aught?'

'Can't to day,' said Mr. Slick, 'I'm in a considerable of a hurry to catch the packet; have you any commands for Sou'west? I'm gain' to the Island and across the Bay to Windsor. Any word that way?'

'No,' says Mr. Allen, 'none that I can think on, unless it be to inquire how butter's goin'; they tell me cheese is down, and prodos of all kinds particular dull this fall.'

'Well, I'm glad I can tell you that question,' said Slick, 'for I don't calculate to return to these parts; butter is risin' a cent or two; I put mine of mind at tenpence.'

'Don't return; possible why, h'ow you talk? Have you done with the clock trade?'

'I guess I have; it ain't worth foller, in' now.'

'Most time,' said the other, laughin', 'for by all accounts the clock war's worth havin', and most infarnal dear too; folks begin to get their eyes open.'

'It warn't needed in your case,' said Mr. Slick, 'peculiarly composed manner that indicates suppressed feeling, for you were always wide awake; if all the folks had cut their eyeteeth as early as you did, there'd be plaguy few clocks sold in these parts, I reckon; but you are right, Squire, you may say that, they actly were not worth havin', and that's the truth. The fact is,' said he, 'throwing down his reins, and affectin' a most confidential tone, I felt almost ashamed of them myself, I tell you. The long and short of the matter is just this: they don't make no good ones nowadays, no more, for they calculate 'em for shippin' and not for home use. I was all stuck up of a heap, when I see'd the last lot I got from the States; I was properly lit by them, you may depend - they didn't pay cost; for I could't recommend them with a clear conscience, and I must say I do like a fair deal, for I'm straight up and down, and love to go right ahead, that's a fact. Did you ever see them I fetched when I first came, them I sold over the Bay?'

'No,' said Mr. Allen, 'I can't say I did.'

'Well,' continued he, 'they were a prime article, I tell you - no mistake there - fit for any market; it's generally allowed there ain't the best of them to be found anywhere. If you want a clock, and can lay your hands on one of them, I advise you not to let go of the chance; you'll know 'em by the 'Lowell' mark, for they were all made at Judge Deber's factory. 'Squire Shepody, down to Five Islands, axed me to get him one, and a special job I had of it, near about more sarch arter it than it was worth; but I did get him one, and a particular handsome one it is, copal'd and gilt superior, I guess it's worth

Some Horse Sense.

The size of a horse's stomach is small in proportion to that of his frame. Hence he requires to be fed frequently.

While a horse is at grass he is almost always browsing; still he does not gorge himself.

Horses should not be fed while heated. The stomach is not in a proper state to digest the food.

A small quantity of gravel is good at such a time and the stomach has had time to regain its tone.

Regularity in feeding is of the utmost consequence.

Long fasting is very injurious, and the mischief is often aggravated by the animal eating too much when he has his food.

An over-fed is hurtful at any time, but more so when the stomach is depleted by long fasts.

Such produce indigestion, gastritis, colic, etc.

At least, the horse should be fed three times a day.

Horses should be watered before being fed.

Water, unlike food does not lodge in the stomach, but passes on to the small intestines on its way to the cecum.

Horses that have access to water never drink too much and they should always have a bucket of clean water in the manger.

The nature of the food that they may be partaking of, in part, if of a succulent nature, supplies the place or want of water.

Except in such cases, as being excessively heated or exhausted, or from having been kept from water for a length of time, a horse may be allowed to drink freely as much as he likes.

Sound Sensation.

Do not use poor stationery, and do not economize space in letters by crossing your writing.

Do not ask even an intimate friend to do some shopping for you unless she should offer to do so.

Do not be continually asking people to come and see you. Perhaps they had rather not.

Do not delay when you are ready to leave after a call or a visit. Do not linger at the door in saying good bye.

When in doubt as to the propriety of an act a little out of the ordinary, do not do it by convention.

Do not allude to your poverty. One should be as discreet in regard to it as to their riches.

Do not force into your conversation the names of noted persons you may have chanced to meet.

Do not dress inappropriately or conspicuously. It is better to be undressed than overdressed. Women of refinement give attention to the shoes first, the gloves next, while the dress and bonnet are later considerations.

Do not be one minute late at a lunch or dinner.

Do not forget that well-bred people are always thoughtful and polite.

Health-Giving Perfumes.

The art of perfuming in all its refinement comes to us from the Italians, and it has remained for an Italian to discover what perfumes are actually healthy. It is a very old theory, but there is no reason in the world to doubt the correctness of the theorist's conclusions. He confines his theorizing largely to the domain of the vegetable kingdom, including the old-fashioned, sweet-smelling herbs that the grandmothers loved to have about them.

Among these are cherry, laurel, cloves, lavender, mint, popper, lemon, fennel and bergamot. He says that these exercise a healthy influence upon humanity by converting the oxygen into ozone and thus increasing its oxidizing influence. In the perfumes which he also favors as of aid in this manner, but in a lesser degree, are sage, nutmeg, and thyme. Among the flowers that are acrimonially qualified are the hyacinth, mignonette, heliotrope, and lily of the valley, all of which have ozone-included vessels.

He is of the opinion that flowers without perfume are destitute of those health giving qualities, and, on the contrary, absorb the ozone to the detriment of health. He recommends the cultivation of flowers in marshy districts and all places invested with animal odours on account of the powerful oxidizing influence of their ozone. The inhabitants of unhealthy regions should, he thinks, surround their homes with growing, sweet bearing flowers, and the more odoriferous the better. - Washington Star.

What She Really Needs.

A crucial observer remarks in The Rochester Post Express that what women needs nowadays is "not so much a higher grade of education as a higher grade of husband."

The Best Medicine.

J. O. WILSON, Chemist and Dispenser, 125 Water Street, Boston, Mass.

Dr. J. C. Ayer's Pills are the best medicine ever tried, and, in fact, the only one that has a better general reputation than any other. I have used it in my family and I can recommend it to my friends and acquaintances for more than twenty years. It is a certain and safe remedy for all of the following complaints: Constipation, biliousness, headache, indigestion, and all other ailments of the bowels. It is a most valuable medicine, and one that every family should have.

Permanently Cured.
