The Seamstress' Story.

Idly she sat in her rocking-chair,
A woman of forty, pale and plain,
There were streaks of gray in her scant,
light hair,
On her brow deep furrows of care and Needle and thread from her hands had dropped,
The hands that nervously clasped and
As with voice that faltered and often stopped
She spoke of the days when she was
"Yes, it's twenty years since I saw him
last—
Twenty years since we said 'good-bye.'
I've heard folks say time goes so fast—
They couldn't have known such years
as I.

"Twenty years! I remember yet Just how he spoke and looked and stood.
When he said 'Now Mary, you mustn't
All you have promised,—as if I could!

"There'll be many to tempt you away
from me,
Never heed them, whatever they say;
Wait for me, Mary, wait patiently, [day,
And think of me always, by night and

"Never mind if the years are long,
I shall write when I've time to spend,
I shall be true, and you must be strong,
And look to the end, Mary, look to the end!

"One thing more, Mary, give it due heed,
Bear your joys and your sorrows alone;
Then when I come I shall feel indeed
You have been always and truly my own."

"So he left me—'twas hard to bear—
My lonely life with never a friend,
But he wrote, as he said, when he'd time
to spare,
And I treasured his words and looked
"I thought of him always, by night or
by day,
Just as he bade me; his will was my law;
And I asked no help on my weary way,
'Though often my heart was sad and sore.

"Waiting thus for the years to pass
I never counted them as they rolled;
Perhaps if I'd cared to look in the glass
I might have seen I was growing old."

"And so, when fifteen years had gone,
He sent for my picture from over the sea;
Ah! when I sent it, I might have known,
If I had been wise, what the end would be.

"By the very next mail a letter came—
Not his—she couldn't be so unkind,
But his sister wrote and he signed his name,
To tell me that 'John had changed'

"You see," she said "you are old and plain, Too old for John's wife to tell the truth!"
I laid down the letter and cried with pain,
For hadn't I given him all my youth!

"Well there was nothing to do or to say;
John had a right to change his mind;
I just went on in the same old way,
Only—I left my hopes behind.

"There were some that tried to comfort me then
Saying, 'Best be rid of a fickle heart,'
And John was no better than other men,
But that never seemed to ease the smart.

So she ended her simple tale.
'Twas an old, old story, told oft before,
For one heart will trust and one will fail
Until time and change shall be no more!

WIRED LOVE.

A ROMANCE
DOTS AND DASHES.
BY
ELLA CHEEVER THAYER.

"The old, old story,"—in a new, new way.

CHAPTER XV.—Continued.

"They have!" vehemently, and smiting
the rock where she sat with her hand, as she spoke. "But this is truly awful!"

"Then you do not care for him?"
questioned Jo, joyfully.

"Care for him?" repeated Cyn, irritably. "Of course I care for him!
Is it not my pet scheme that he should marry Nattie? Certainly it is, and has been from the first! And now, if he has gone and fallen in love with me, a nice predicament we will all be in. But you must be mistaken! I cannot believe him capable of such a thing! The only reason I have to fear it is that I would not have credited it of you yesterday!"

"But you see I do love you. You believe I do, do you not, Cyn?" asked Jo, too eager to press his own suit to give much thought to Nattie and Clem.

"Why will you not try and love me, as you do not love Clem? Am I so homely as to be repulsive to you?"

"Homely? Nonsense!" replied Cyn, momentarily putting aside her newest anxiety for the previous one, "now I come to think of it, I had rather marry you than any man I know!"

"Would you? Would you really!"
seizing her hand hopefully. "Then why will you not?"

Cyn allowed her hand to remain in his as she said slowly and impressively,
"I cannot marry. That is entirely out of the question for me. Of my life, love can form no part!"

"But I thought you believed in love?" said Jo, looking perplexed, but clinging to her hand as a sort of anchor.

"I do. I believe it is the best happiness of life. But it cannot be for me. Why, I will tell you. I owe this much in return for what you have given me; what I prize even though I am compelled to refuse it. What stands between us is the memory of a love—gone forever."

"What!" exclaimed Jo, astounded
in his turn. "You do not mean to say that you—that you—you, the gayest
of the gay—that you—" Jo stopped, unable to proceed.

"You hardly expected to find me in the role of the victim of a broken heart, did you?" questioned Cyn, with a half-sad, half-humorous smile. "I admit I do not exactly answer to the average description, and my heart is not broken
—there is only a blank in it—something dead that can never live again.
Once I loved a man with all my heart'
—Jo sighed—"with all the illusion of youth, and he loved me. The difference between his love and mine was,
that mine was forever, and his was for a day."

"Impossible!" interrupted Jo. "No man who once loved you could ever change."

"He happened to be one of the kind who could. I never really knew the cause—it might have been a other woman. You know there always is another woman."

"Or another man," added Jo gloom-ily.

"Yes," assented Cyn, and continued.
"He was one of the kind, I think now,
who are incapable of appreciating a woman's love, and consequently unworthy of it. But unfortunately, I did not know this, and wasted mine on him. So he and love, went out of my life forever. But," with a proud raising of her head, "I would not be weak enough to allow all my life to be ruined
because one part of it was wrecked;
with so much gone, there still remained something, and of that I made the most. This is why my art is everything to me, and why I cannot marry
you."

"But it seems to me unreasonable, that because you loved one man who was unworthy, you should refuse the love of another who would try very hard to make you forget that first sad experience," argued Jo. "Give me what you have left, Cyn! If it be but dead ashes, I will thank God for the gift, and perhaps, at some future day, in response to my devotion, even from those ashes shall arise another love, so strong, so intense, that, in comparison, the old shall be but as some half-forgotten trouble of childhood, whose remembrance cannot awaken
even a passing pain."

The fervor of an honest affection
made Jo truly eloquent, and his true
blue eyes met the dark ones of Cyn, glowing with earnestness and love, and for a moment she looked at him and hesitated. Then she arose, saying resolutely,

"No! Jo! no! Do not tempt me!
The experiment would be too dangerous! To give you a warmed-over affection in return for your whole heart, would only be misery for us both—more misery than I am bringing to you now. I respect and esteem you as I said before—we will be friends—comrades—always—no more!"

As she spoke, she extended her hand
to him, in farewell to all his hopes.

And so understanding he clasped it,
a sadness on his face she had never seen there before.

"As you will, Cyn," he replied, happily, "but I shall love you—fore-ever!"

As he spoke, from below came the cry,
"Cyn! Jo! where are you? we are going!"

"Coming!" Cyn's clear voice answered back.

"One moment," Jo said, detaining
her, "may I—may I kiss you once, Cyn? Once, and for the last time?"

There were tears in Cyn's eyes.
She bent her handsome head, their lips met, then, without a word, they went on together to join those who awaited them.

And it was thus Fate decreed for these two.

Love brings the most intense sorrows, the keenest joys of life. But there must always be some lives, into which comes only the sadness, and none of the bliss, of loving.

CHAPTER XVI.

O. K.

Leaving Clem, on their arrival at the hotel, to bear the burden of the green stuff they had brought from the woods, Cyn, with a trace of melancholy on her sunny face, followed Nattie to her room. For Cyn's joyous picnic, with its gay beginning, had ended sadly enough to her.

"I want to ask you something," Cyn said, with frank directness, as she carefully closed the door behind them.

"And that is, are you, can you be foolish enough to imagine, that Clem
and I are in love with each other?"

The small basket Nattie held in her hand fell to the floor, at this unexpected question. Had Cyn drawn forth a Bowie knife, and playfully clipped off her nose, she could not have been more astounded.

"If you can possibly reduce your eyes to their ordinary size, and give me a candid yes or no, I will be obliged," Cyn said, rather petulantly, after waiting in vain for an answer. The events of the day had sorely tried her usually even temper.

A little tremulously, while a burning flush covered her face, Nattie answered her.

"I—I have heard it intimated!"

"You have heard it intimated! That means yes, to my question," said Cyn;
then sinking despairingly on the lounge,
she added, "here is a crisis of which I never dreamed!"

Not understanding very well, and moreover much agitated by the subject, Nattie knew not what to say.

"This is awful!" went on Cyn, savagely beating the pillow with her fist;
"what contrary things love affairs are!"

Fearful of having in some way betrayed her secret—the only conclusion
she could draw from Cyn's extraordinary outburst—Nattie stood looking guiltily at the door a few moments, then recovering herself, she went to Cyn, and said, in a voice full of ex-
citation,

"I do not just comprehend your meaning, dear, but it may be you think I might not quite like the idea,
on account of that—that first affair on the wire. If so, dismiss the thought.
You and Clem are suited to each other,
and——" Nattie stopped, unable to continue.

Cyn, who had been beating the innocent pillow, as if it was the cause of all this, while Nattie was speaking, now threw it across the room, as she exclaimed,

"Oh! the perversity of human nature! Oh! you degenerate girl! As if I cared for Clem in that way! Have I not from the first set my heart on this real life romance ending in the only way it could rightfully end?"

A sudden light came into Nattie's face, but it died away in a moment.

"Then you do not care for him?
Poor Clem!" she said, in a low voice.

"Poor Clem, indeed!" cried Cyn, pacing the floor excitedly. "I cannot —no, I cannot—believe it of him! He certainly has sagacity enough not to run his head against a beam in broad daylight, even——"

"If Jo had not," she was about to add, but checked herself suddenly.
Not for the world would she betray Jo's confidence. What had passed between them to-day should be a secret always, never again to be mentioned—
but never forgotten in the friendship and companionship of after years.

"You must be very difficult to suit,
dear, if you do not like Clem!" said
Nattie, with unconscious significance,
after waiting in vain for Cyn to finish
her sentence.

"It is not that," replied Cyn, somewhat sadly. "Do you not know I have only one love,—music?"

"Poor Clem!" again said Nattie,
from the depths of her tender heart.
"For I know he loves you, dear. He could not help it, who could?"

Such words would have been sweet to the vanity of an ordinary woman.
But on Cyn they had a very opposite effect.

"Things have come to a pretty pass
if one cannot laugh and joke, and enjoy one's self with friends without being made love to!" she said, annoyed.
Then looking scrutinizingly at Nattie,
she asked,

"And you—did you really wish Clem
and I might love each other?"

Nattie played nervously with the fringe of her dress, hesitated, then replied in a low tone,

"I fear I did not, Cyn!"

"Then it may come right yet!" exclaimed Cyn, hopefully.

Nattie shook her head.

"And he loving you? Oh, no!" she said. "I shall never be able to say O. K. to what you term your romance of the dots and dashes, Cyn. In fact, I have made up my mind that there are some people born to go through life missing both its best and its worst and that I am one!"

"Pray, do not say that!" urged Cyn, too disturbed to bring her easy philosophy to bear on the situation. "Of all things, do not get morbid."

"But it is the truth!" persisted Nat-
tie. "Even my name, for instance, proves it! I was christened Nathalie, a very fine poetic name. But, in all my life no one ever called me by it!
I was always mediocre Nattie!"

"And I have curtailed you down to Nat!" said Cyn, with whimsical mortality. "But what a tangle we are in!
First it was the man of musk and bear's grease, who came between you!
Then, when he was explained away, came blundering I! Why did you not lock me out of sight somewhere?
I would have done it myself had I known——," ironically—"what an extremely fascinating and dangerous person I was!"

At this Nattie could not help smiling.

"It was not your fault; it was Fate!" she said, her smile becoming a sigh, that Cyn echoed, for she thought of Jo. But yet unconvinced, she said,

"Fate! No; it cannot be! I think better of Clem than to believe he, too, has made a mistake, like Quimby, and fallen in love with the wrong woman!"
then starting up, she exclaimed, tragically, "Who? ah! who shall cut the Gordian knot and bring about a crisis that shall cause this 'wired love' to terminate in 'O. K.'?"

As if invoked by Cyn's words, there came a sneeze from outside, and Miss Kling pushed open the door unceremoniously.

THE ACADIAN,

WOLFVILLE, N. S., MAY 22, 1885

THE INDEPENDANT JOURNAL.

There is probably nothing under the sun so hard to carry on as an independent, impartial newspaper. The world is fairly teeming with self-conceit and individuality. Everyone feels that they are the parties who are right in opinion. They are the imposed on parties and they are the people whose views and rights, or wrongs should be upheld by the press. A newspaper who has friends who can do nothing wrong, or political views which can never be doubted by themselves, whose party is always right, whose actions should always be lauded has a very easy time of it. They always know what to say and when to say it, or they should know. But the paper that would take the evidence of both sides and, after carefully considering them, sift out and condemn the wrong and support the right, is, to say the least in an unenviable position. This is more particularly felt by local papers. An accident happens and severe injury is inflicted. A particular friend of the paper is injured. A sworn enemy of the paper inflicts the injury. The paper must then, in the interests of humanity, sympathise with the one and severely censure the other. It must not inquire into the circumstances at all. Its friend was injured; its enemy did it. The latter must suffer to the full extent of the editors ability, or vice versa.

The ACADIAN has at all times tried to be impartial, and as a result it has been condemned by many who are opposed to it in its private views right through. It has frequently alluded to the crime of fast driving in the streets of Wolfville, and in no very gentle terms either. It has never shrunk from its duty in any respect with regard to this or other like abuses of public freedom, but when an accident happens the ACADIAN will give a square account no odds who likes it, or who does not.

A young lady was run over last week and by one, who has been on several occasions reprimanded by this paper for fast driving; but the ACADIAN after hearing both sides of the story, has decided that no one was particularly to blame, and that under the circumstances "the accident was unavoidable." If any one can show us the matter in a different light, by personal observation or conclusive evidence from an eyewitness, so as to prove that any blame could be attached to the driver of that team we will immediately give him such a notice as the offence deserves.

Our columns, or ears, are open, and you 'have the floor.' Go ahead!

All the papers on both sides of politics seem greatly agitated about Sir Charles Tupper's return to Canada. We feel perfectly indifferent about it. We did feel that it was not judicious to let him leave Canada, for it is an axiomatic fact that we have too few smart men in our Dominion Parliament and now if the government comes to the same conclusion the probability is they have too good sense not to act upon that conclusion.

Oh yes, Sir Charles you are only a drop in the mighty sea of great men in England so come back and help along your own country.

The editor of Texas Siftings, who is also a Nova Scotian by birth, seems to think it really smart to poke fun at the English government and its eastern affairs. Perhaps it is funny but we doubt if the fact of Mr. Sweet's poking fun at it will have any material effect on the English government. Don't be a fool Alex.

We would direct the attention of our readers to the question asked by GASPHER OUGH in another column. We have been too busy this week to work it out and would like some one to give us the correct answer for next issue. It appears to be quite simple.

The great event of the Northwestern campaign, during the past week, has been the capture of Louis Riel, the leader of the rebellion. This has been an event of great importance to the government troops, and, although it will probably be some time yet before the trouble is fully settled, we may look upon this as "the beginning of the end."

The Truro Guardian will confer a favor by crediting us in the future with any items that they may make use of from our columns.

CORRESPONDENCE.

ENQUIRY.

To the Editors of the ACADIAN.

DEAR SIRS,—My neighbor and I are in trouble and we would be very much obliged to you, or any of your readers, if you could help us. We bought a side of Beef yesterday weighing 200 pounds, at 15 cents per pound. Each one paid ten dollars, and then we undertook to divide it. The hindquarter being worth more than the fore we agreed that the one taking the hind should pay 11 cents per pound and the one who took the fore to pay 9 cents per pound. We want some one to tell us how many pounds each one is to have, for we are in an awful fix and can't figure it out ourselves.

Yours truly,

GASPHER OUGH.

COMMISSIONERS OF STREETS.

"Hear the other side."—Lin. Fid.
A writer in a late number of the ACADIAN, styling himself "Tax-payer," teaches some strange doctrines which ought not to pass unchallenged. After telling us that the roads of country districts are entrusted to officers called "Surveyors of Highways" each of whom has charge of a section a few miles in extent, he says that towns and considerable villages have been regarded as needing more care and attention, and therefore that two or more officers, styled Commissioners of Streets, are appointed and constituted a Board, and that they are expected and required to act as such and not in their individual capacity. According to this strange doctrine, there is no liberty even in a country which boasts so loudly of its freedom. In the view of "Tax-payer," a Commissioner of Streets is the veriest slave in creation, not being allowed, without the concurrence of one, two or three others to take any step belonging to his office. For instance he is not permitted to have a portion of the funds to deal with according to his own will and pleasure, but must obtain the consent of his colleagues, who may have views and purposes diametrically opposite to his. This is a great hardship, and we do not wonder that the arrangement has been rebelled against more or less frequently by some commissioners of a "certain village not a hundred miles from Wolfville." It is unreasonable that a man of independent spirit should be so hampered by the obstinate notions of others whom accident has associated with him in office, and whose best quality may possibly be their old foginess.

Again according to "Tax-payer," a Commissioner of Streets should render an account to the authorities of all the moneys that he has collected and disbursed, or rather of all that have come into his hands. Here is an intolerable hardship and one which directly curtails "the liberty of the subject." Few men would accept of public money on these terms, and submit to a requirement which would compel them to account for every dollar that came into their possession, when a good many might have been lost or gone astray, no one knows whither. The pleasanter and better mode certainly is not to give one's self such unreasonable trouble; but either to render no account at all, after the manner of some, or to send in a "block sum" account, in which the debit may be represented by any convenient figures that offer, and the credit by other figures as accommodating. After the no account plan, this is the next best.

And still again "Tax-payer" lays it down as a doctrine that in "the month of March or April," as soon as possible after the frost is out of the ground, the commissioners should inform themselves of the state of the roads and with the help of so many of the inhabitants as may be needed, should go on the ground in the mud and rain, perhaps, to repair temporarily any dangerous bridges or turn any water courses that might wear away the road; and that they should do such foolish things for no better reason than that it would "save" a few paltry, miserable dollars; "twenty" or "fifty," as he suggests. This is a small business and altogether unworthy of a public officer; and I do not wonder that Commissioners of Streets generally have thought it derogatory and degrading.

But I will not proceed, lest I lose my patience entirely. I always knew that the world was an unreasonable one, but I have been so disconcerted with the outrageous propositions of "Tax-payer" that I cannot pursue the subject further, although much else might be said, but will here abruptly and indignantly conclude.

Our North West Rebellion.

WINNIPEG, May 14th.—A despatch from Fort Qu'Appelle says a letter is being circulated signed by Riel. The letter was written on the 30th April to a relative and dear friend, calling on them to come and help and plunder the houses and stores and take everything in the way of provisions. He tells them that he has met our troops and he had great success. The letter is concluded in the most touching language. Our Indians are all on their reserves and appear quiet. Col. Macdonald has been working day and night to bring this about.

BATOCHÉ, May 14th.—There is great bustle and excitement at camp. A great many half-breeds have come in and delivered themselves up, each and every one claiming he was obliged to fight, having the choice to do so or be shot. All join in charging Charles Notin now a prisoner at Prince Albert, with being the first to encourage rebellion, while on Albert Monkman, also a prisoner, is laid the blame of having incited the Indians to join. The report that the rebels were short of provisions and ammunition proves to be incorrect, as large quantities of both have been captured by our troops. Amongst other things captured by the troops is a large quantity of papers belonging to both leaders amongst which is a dispensation to all who were in rebellion. There is a feeling in camp that the prisoners should be given twenty-four hours to bring in Riel, or that the government should offer $10,000 for Riel and $5,000 for Dumont.

OTTAWA, May 16th.—A despatch has just been received here from General Middleton saying that Riel was made a prisoner last night and is now detained in close custody. The announcement has been received with unbounded satisfaction throughout the city.

LATER.

CLARK'S CROSSING, May 16th.—It was ascertained that Riel and some of his followers, after leaving Batoché, made toward the river intending to join those who had previously crossed over to the other side. The Northcoote, with infantry and some of the girth, went down intending to head them off. A number of Major Boulton's scouts meantime patrolled the river bank. After they had heard a whistle from the steamer and some shots a party immediately went in the direction the sound came from, and a couple of miles below Fisher's Crossing espied a party of rebels. They challenged them, and in reply were fired at. The scouts answered and then made a dash. The rebel party quickly scattered, but Riel was recognized and at once became the object of attention. He was mounted on a stalwart pony and started off at a hard gallop. The scouts gave chase and finally overhauled the rebel leader who surrendered without firing a shot, but not without threats. He was brought into camp last evening and taken direct to Gen. Middleton's tent. There was no demonstration, the general having ordered the men to their tents fearing violence to Riel. No one is allowed to see him.

WINNIPEG, May 18th.—A telegram from Guardupis Crossing via Humboldt and dated Saturday reports Riel as looking tough and terribly disconcerted, as if he dreaded being shot by the troops. It would seem from this telegram that Riel is being taken to Prince Albert and not to Regina as at first supposed. Major Boulton and two hundred mounted police are scouring the country for Dumont, who was last seen Friday morning ten miles south of Guardupis Crossing. Batoché is described as presenting a desolate appearance. The houses are torn asunder with shells, while white flags surmounting the dismantled roofs meet the eye everywhere. The enemy have surrendered up to Saturday 150 guns. Most of the prisoners have been allowed to return to their homes, but the ring-leaders will be taken to Prince Albert to be tried.

WINNIPEG, May 18th.—George McLeod, a Prince Albert courier, reported that while on the way to Batoché, from Prince Albert on Wednesday afternoon, he met three Indians about twelve miles behind Lepine's crossing. He was talking to the Indians when Gabriel Dumont appeared at the end of the bluff and asked McLeod what he wanted. McLeod asked him to give himself up, saying that the general had promised him a fair trial. Dumont replied that he had taken up arms and intended to fight, he would not be taken alive. Dumont only had a few Indians with him.

TORONTO, May 19th.—A despatch received this morning from St. Paul, Minn., states that Col. Otter, yesterday, attacked Poundmaker, and after a severe battle captured him, and took 120 prisoners. The battle was fought in Eagle Hills, and Otter made the assault against the Indians. Twenty-one Canadians and nineteen Englishmen were killed. A despatch from Winnipeg, received later, says nothing is known there of the capture of Poundmaker or of a battle, and the story is not believed.

THE BOOKSTORE!

Eagle Building, Wolfville, MAY 19th, 1885.

Riel has been captured and the papers announce that the Rebellion in the North West is practically at an end. This is encouraging news and makes all loyal people feel good, but it is only a cipher in comparison to the joy we have felt during the last few months as we have supplied our customers with Room Paper at less than cost and seen them depart full of that joy and happiness which can only come to those who feel that they have done a good deed.

True it does not pay in dollars and cents to sell at cost but it does pay in the satisfaction we have of making families happy and homes clean and pleasant.

And still the great work goes on. People are coming daily and hourly to buy. They do so and go away happy. Probably never in the history of Wolfville has Room Paper been sold so cheaply as now. We have been (and will continue till our present stock is exhausted) selling our papers at the same prices as we paid for it at the factory in England. You cannot afford to lose the opportunity.

Just think of it, Room Paper at one-third the price you have been paying all your lives. Oh verily, in the words of Bardette, what is home without its wall paper.

We have no second price and ours is a "bona fide" cash sale. Come early! come 3 or 8 times a day, but come! and we will make you smile.

Ever keeping in mind the fact that we must work for the welfare of our customers we have after two years of patient waiting been enabled to secure the services of Mr. John F. Herbin to carry on a Watch Making and Jewellery business here. We can assert confidently that although he has spent two years and a half in the west he is perfectly harmless and that he can clean and repair your watch and repair your Jewellery with that neatness and thoroughness which can only be attained from a life-long study and practice of the trade. Give us a call and see for yourself. All his work is guaranteed and must give satisfaction.

When you come for your room paper at one-third the usual price bring that Watch that wont go and that clock that points to half past six and strikes 25 when it is only 3.15 and you will be able to get to Church in time to make a full inventor of Deacon Smith's wife's spring bonnet and silk dress and Squire Jones' whole outfit before your beloved pastor has thought of commencing on sixtieth. Oh yes time is a great herb but must be correct in its habits to be properly appreciated.

By the way, if John wants a new School Book you might also bring some change with you for we can fit him all out for the next term in about two minutes; and who knows but that he may some day be some kind of a governor if he lives and uses our books to advantage.

Ours is a work of love and we are bound to do it so long as people have homes to beautify, children to educate, and watches, clocks and jewellery that wont keep time.

Don't forget, we live in the Eagle Building and it is next door to the Oni n House.

Beware of cheap imitations. Ask for the Western Book & News Co.'s and see that our name is on the sign over the door. None other is genuine.

Yours, muchly,

We don't mind how much our friends go fishing, but we do not like to hear them lie so about it when they return.

A quantity of Furniture is advertised to be sold at auction on Saturday, May 23d, at Dr. Welton's late residence.

Messrs Jack & Bell have sent us samples of their Fertilizers. They seem to be fully up to their usual good quality.

If you have not already seen those new PENCIL TABLETS at the Western Book & News Co's go in at once, as they are going rapidly.

Messrs Caldwell & Murray wish us to say that their store will be closed on Monday the 25th. Customers will remember this.

Mr. Geo. W. Munro recently set a hen with fifteen eggs, of the Light Brahma variety, from which were hatched fifteen chickens. Can't somebody beat that?

A PLEASANT SURPRISE.—While Master Berb Stewart was harrowing on the Grand Pre dyke, he had the good fortune of finding a Spanish double, date 1806.

C. H. Borden has had a large advertisement painted on the west side of his shop. The work was done by Mr. E. G. Bishop, and will no doubt be a great benefit to his business.

The Queen's birthday comes this year on Sunday; the following day, the 25th, will be kept in Wolfville as a public holiday. All the principal places of business will be closed.

Dr. D. M. Welton, of McMaster Hall, Toronto, arrived on Tuesday evening. He will probably be in this part of the country for a while. Toronto appears to agree with him.

Arrangements have been made for a game of cricket between eleven of the ministerialists and eleven of the opposition, on Rideau Hall grounds, Ottawa, on the 25th of May, the Queen's birthday. Mr. Jenkins, M. P., will captain the government side and Mr. Davies the opposition men.—Halifax Herald.

We are now furnishing Letter and Statements, Business Cards, Shipping Tags, and all kinds of plain and ornamental printing at extremely low prices. Samples and prices furnished on application.

MICROSCOPE.—We learn that Prof. Caldwell has recently imported direct from the celebrated maker, Henry Crouch, London, for the use of the college, a superior microscope, with two objectives, two eye pieces and a draw tube. It gives eight different powers ranging from 42 diameters to 614. It is accompanied by a stand condenser for illuminating opaque objects. Through the kindness of Mr. Andrew Johnson the instrument was forwarded from England without expense.

Local and Provincial.

Mr. S. C. Moore returned from Ottawa last week.

Mr. D. R. Munro launched his yacht last week. He says she sails better than she did last summer. She is a fine craft.

We notice that the dangerous place in the planking at the foot of School House Hill has not been repaired yet. We may get another item out of that.

We omitted last week to acknowledge the receipt of the Report of the N. S. Fruit Growers' Association. It is well filled with information on fruit culture etc. The Secretary will please accept thanks.

Mr. R. Prat has lately put up a new set of blinds in his shop, which adds much to its appearance. They are blue in color with an advertisement in gilt letters. New blinds have also been put in the People's Bank Agency.

A change has been made in the running of the Bay of Fundy steamers. Steamer Empress will leave St. John, for Annapolis and Digby every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings, returning on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday afternoons.

BLINDS! BLINDS!—Go to Caldwell & Murray's for all kinds of Window Blinds. Linen in Green, Striped and mottled; Painted Cloth. Also Venetian Blinds in Green, Walnut & Spruce, Light and Dark Hardwoods, and excelsior. Any of the above may be had in all sizes at the lowest price. 33

TO THE FRONT WITH YOUR GOOD COLTS.—Mr. James Elderkin has a handsome filly, two days old, sired by "Confidential Charley," that stands 44 inches high and girths 3 feet 1 inch. Mr. Aubrey Brown has also a colt the same age, sired by the same horse, that measures only one inch less.

We have received the catalogue of Acadia College for the current year. It is neatly got up and contains more matter than usual, as it gives for the first time a list of all who have taken Honors and won Prizes at the College. The list of students as contained in the Summary is, Seniors 8, Juniors 15, Sophomores 18, Freshmen 21, General Students 10, Total 72. The graduating class however only numbers 7, as one of the Seniors is absent.

ACCIDENT.—A light wagon driven by Fenwick Gertridge, of Gaspereau, and R. Prat's Express collided on Main street on Saturday night. Mr. S. Prat, who was driving the express, and his brother George were thrown out, the former lighting on his shoulders and the back of his head and the latter on his hips. Both were badly shaken up. The occupants of the other team escaped without injury. Both horses went clear of the wagons. Prat's went down street lively with the whiffletree gracefully slapping him on the back, but Gertridge's did not get away. The wagons were uninjured with the exception of the shafts. Mr. Gertridge had turned off to stop at Weston's tailoring establishment and was consequently on the wrong side of the street. He also says he did not see Mr. Prat coming as the night was dark and he had just come out of the glare of the shop lamps. Mr. Prat saw the other team coming and turned out to let it pass on his right and so collided. Who was to blame for the collision?

RESCUED.—Mrs. Holstead writes: "That she used a number of emulsions, and derived no benefit from any of them. Her physician told her that her only chance was 'Eager's Phospholeine,' which was highly recommended for Consumption. She tried it. Commenced improving after first bottle; has taken 12 bottles and is now well.

There is no remedy in the world so valuable to use in the case of sudden accident or illness as Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. It can be used internally and externally, and its power is truly marvelous.

There is nothing so dear as cheap medicine; it is dear at any price. This is true of the large packs of condition powders now sold. Buy Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders and you can't make a mistake. The large packs are utterly worthless.

EUREKA!

Found! a Plum Tree that will not

Black Knot!

The Masters Plum Tree

has stood the test 40 years in Kentville,

King's County, Nova Scotia. Chas. A.

Masters, of Kentville, found this tree growing on lands now owned by Judge

G. A. Blanchard forty years ago, and removed the tree to his garden in the village, where it now stands a healthy bearing tree, and is now owned by me.

There are scores of trees throughout the village in bearing from 4 to 20 years old

which bear every year, and not a vestige

of black knot appears on one of them.

The tree is an annual bearer of rapid growth, growing tall not spreading. The Plum is quite large, purple color, and of excellent quality. It is the best preserving plum grown, and sells higher than any plum brought into the market. Last year, while the crop was immense, this plum readily brought $3.00 per bushel,

$1.00 more than any other variety offered for sale. We have several hundred first class trees to offer for the spring planting and intend to plant 6,000 root grafts here. That this is the best and most profitable Plum Tree to plant that is grown in the Dominion of Canada,

and that it will not black knot we refer

the planters of this delicious fruit to

F. S. Masters, Barnister, of whom we purchased the original tree; also to Chas.

A BRAVE ACT.
 Some ten, or more, summers ago, a flat-bottomed, stern-wheel steamer was making its slow way down the tortuous windings of the Real River of the North. Among the few passengers was a little girl three years old—a dainty, fearless, winsome child—everybody's pet, from her father, an officer in the Hudson Bay Company's service, and the good-natured captain, to the grim deck-hands, whose acquaintance the little maiden had somehow made on the lower deck.
 One afternoon the child was taken by her nurse to the floor of the lower deck. Three men were lying here, bound hand and foot. They were on their way to Fargo to be tried for crime. The sheriff kept a close watch on them, for they were desperate men. They guessed their game was up and accepted their fate with half-cheerful bravado; but the sheriff knew them for ruffians and bullies, and never left his post.
 The child came up to the men and looked at them curiously; they looked silently at her. Perhaps these rough crime-hardened men had never seen anything so dainty and sweet before.
 She was not afraid of them, but began talking in her pretty, broken words, and putting her baby hands on the fetters of one, smiled and said, "What dat?" The man smiled back without replying, and soon the little maid moved away.
 As she walked, there was a sudden jerk of the whole ship, it ground jarringly against some unyielding substance hidden in the water; it tilted over slightly, the child lost her balance, and with a scream fell over the side into the water. The three prisoners saw her disappear.
 The prisoner to whom she had spoken, and whose handcuffs she had for a moment touched, exclaimed to the sheriff, "God! don't ye shoot, Bill!" Then quickly rolling himself over and over, he tumbled into the water beside the child. His hands were bound, but he caught the child's dress in his teeth, and, treading the water with his fattened feet, kept the child above water until help came, and it was some minutes before the steamer's boat reached them. The child was saved.
 "I guess you air a white man after all, Eriker!" said the sheriff, admiringly, to the man.
 It was afterwards learned that the sheriff told the story to the 'judge,' and the judge, with Western freedom and that admiration for a gallant act which covers a multitude of sins, so arranged that when it was found that Eriker, who was a Scandinavian by birth, had mysteriously disappeared, nothing was done beyond a little official bluster, and he escaped.

A HINT TO THE GIRLS.
 There are more chances of making a passable husband out of a fool or a crank than out of a drunkard or vicious person. The fool, if not too egotistical or silly for anything at all, can usually be led, coerced, or driven, but the vicious person cannot. The woman who undertakes to reform a man in order to get a husband has undertaken a task that is not successfully accomplished one time in a thousand. In the first place a man who needs to be reformed before he is fit for a companion is lacking in some of the elements which are necessary in the make-up of even an average man.

KISSING IN PUBLIC.
 Men don't do it; neither should women and girls. It is a vulgar practice because, intentionally or otherwise, it attracts the attention of strangers. When two women, at a railway depot or other crowded place, rush together with a resounding oscillation, like two rapid meteors out of their orbits, the whole crowd grins and the dudes prick up their ears, and eye-glasses. Don't—[Ladies' Home Journal.]

MINNESOTA GALLANTRY.
 "Did you ever notice how a woman takes the cork out of a bottle?" asks an exchange. No, sir. We let the woman notice how we take the cork out of a bottle. No gentleman would stand idly and let a woman struggle to get a cork out of a bottle. It takes her too long.—St. Paul Globe.
