Mary, and she seemed to like him. After a long time the baronet's voice broke in on Rob's cogitations, and when he saw that she was still talking without looking at a certain awe filled him. Then they rose from her chair, taking the arm of the gentleman who was Sir Clement's double, and they went into the other room, where the coffee was served.

Rob was tempted by all these staidly miserable things, but the thing to do was to get out of there. He thought it was better to be a man, and drawing up his chest, boldly asked the lion to have a cup of coffee. In another moment he was steering her through the crowd, her hand resting on his arm, and to his amazement, he found her rather liked it.

In the coffee room Rob could not distinguish the young lady who moved like a sea; but he was elated with his social triumph, and cast about for any journalist of his acquaintance who he thought, might like to meet the author of "My Baby Boy." It struck Rob that he had no right to keep her all to himself. Quite close to him his eye lighted on Marriott, the author of "Mary Hooney," a Romance of the Irish Question; but Marriott saw what he was after, and dived into the crowd. A very young gentleman with large empty eyes begged Rob's pardon for treading on his toes, and Rob, who had not felt it, saw that this was his man. He introduced him to the authoress as another admirer, and the round-faced yet seemed such a likely subject for her next work that Rob moved off comfortably.

A shock awaited him when he met Dick, who had been passing the time by taking male guests aside and asking them in an impressive voice what they thought of his great book, "Lives of Eminent Washerwomen," which they had no doubt read.

"Who is the man," like Dowton? he repeated, in answer to Rob's question. "Why it is Dowton."

Then Dick looked vexed. He remembered that Rob had been at Home Castle on the previous Christmas Eve.

"Look here, Angus," he said, bluntly, "this is a matter I hate to talk about. The fact is, however, that this is the real Sir Clement. The fellow you met was an impostor, who came from no one knows where. Unfortunately, he has returned to the same place."

Dick bit his lip while Rob digested this. "But if you knew the real Dowton," Rob asked, "how were you deceived?"

"Well, it was my father who was deceived rather than myself, but we did not know the real baronet then. The other fellow, if you must know, traded on his likeness to Dowton, who is in the country now for the first time for many years. Whoever the impostor is, he is a humorist in his way, for when he left the castle in January he asked my father to call on him when he came to town. The fellow must have known that Dowton was coming home about that time; at all events, my father, who was in London shortly afterwards, looked up his friend the baronet, as he thought, at his club, and found that he had never set eyes on him before. It would make a delicious article if it had not happened in one's own family."

"The real Sir Clement seems great friends with Miss Abinger," Rob could not help saying.

"Yes," said Dick, "we struck up an intimacy with him over the affair, and stranger things have happened than that he and Mary—"

He stopped.

"My father, I believe, would like it," he added, carelessly, but Rob turned away. Dick went after him.

"I have told you this," he said, "because, as you know the other man, it had to be done; but we don't like it spoken of."

"I shall not speak of it," said miserable Rob.

He would have liked to be tearing through London again; but as that was not possible, he sought a solitary seat by the door. Before he reached it his mood changed. What was Sir Clement Dowton, after all, that he should be frightened at him? He was merely a baronet. An impostor who could never have passed for a journalist had succeeded in passing for Dowton.

Journalism was the object of all professions, and Rob was there representing it. The seat of honor at the Symposium was next to Mary Abinger, and the baronet had held it too long already. Instead of sulking, Rob approached the throne like one who had a right to be there. Sir Clement had risen for a moment to put down Mary's cup, and when he returned Rob was in his chair, with no immediate intention of getting out of it. The baronet frowned, which made Rob say quite a number of bright things to Miss Abinger. When two young men are in love with the same young lady, one of them must be worsted. Rob saw that it was better to be the other one.

The frightfully bohemian people at the Symphonia remained there even later than eleven o'clock, but the rooms thinned before then, and Dick's party were ready to go by half-past ten. Rob was now very sharp. It did not escape his notice that the gentlemen were bringing the ladies' cloaks, and he calmly made up his mind to help Mary Abinger on with hers. To his annoyance, Sir Clement was too quick for him. The baronet was in the midst of them, with the three ladies' cloaks, just as Rob wondered where he would have to go to find hers. Nell's cloak Sir Clement handed to Dick, but he kept Mary's on his arm, while he assisted Mrs. Meredith with hers. It was a critical moment. All would be over in five seconds.

"Allow me," said Rob.

With apparent coolness he took Mary's cloak from the baronet's arm. He had not been used to saying "allow me," and his face was white, but he was determined to go on with this thing.

"Take my arm," he said to Mary, as they joined the crowd that swayed towards the door. After he said it he saw that he had spoken with an air of proprietorship, but he was not sorry. Mary did it.

"I took them some time to reach their cab, and on the way Mary asked Rob a question.

"I gave you something once," she said, "but I suppose you lost it long ago?"

Rob reddened, for he had been sadly puzzled to know what had become of his Christmas card.

"I have it still," he answered at last.

CHAPTER XIII.

"Mr Angus, what is an egotist?"
"Don't you know, Miss Meredith?"
"Well, I know in a general sort of way, but not precisely."

"An egotist is a person who—but why do you want to know?"
"Because just now Mr Abinger asked me what I was thinking of, and when I said of nothing he called me an egotist."

"Ah, that kind of egotist is one whose thoughts are too deep for utterance."

It was twilight. Rob stood on the deck of the house-boat "Tawny Owl," looking down at Nell, who sat in the stern, her mother beside her, amid a blaze of Chinese lanterns. Dick lay near them, prone, as he had fallen from a hammock whose one flaw was that it gave way when any one got into it. Mr Meredith, looking out from one of the saloon windows across the black water that was now streaked with glistening silver, wondered whether he was enjoying himself, and Mary, in a little blue nautical jacket, with a cap to match, lay back in a camp-chair on deck with a silent banjo in her hands. Rob was brazening it out in flannels and had been at such pains to select colors to suit him that the effect was atrocious. He had spent several afternoons at Molesey during the three weeks the "Tawny Owl" had lain there, but this time he was to remain overnight at the Island Hotel.

The "Tawny Owl" was part of the hoop of house-boats that almost girded Tagg's Island, and lights sailed through the trees telling of launches moving to their moorings near the ferry. Now and again there was an echo of music from a distant house-boat. For a moment the water was loquacious as dingies or punts shot past. Canadian canoes, the ghosts that haunt the

"Oh," said Mary, coldly; and at once Rob felt a chill pass through him. It was true, after all, that Miss Abinger could be an icicle on occasion.

Rob, having told a lie, deserved no mercy, and got none. The pity of it is that Mary might have thawed a little had she known that it was only a lie. She thought that Rob was not aware of his loss. A man taking sickness as the comparative degree of an untruth is perhaps only what may be looked for, but one does not expect it from a woman. Probably the lights had blinded Mary.

Rob had still an opportunity of righting himself, but he did not take it.

"Then you did mean the card for me," he said, in foolish exaltation; "when I found it on the walk I was not certain that you had merely dropped it by accident."

Alas for the fatuity of man! Mary looked up in icy surprise.

"What card?" she said. "I don't know what you are talking about."

"Don't you remember?" asked Rob, very much requiring to be sharpened again.

He looked so woe-begone that Mary nearly had pity on him. She knew, however, that if it was not for her six men would never learn anything.

"No," she replied, and turned to talk to Sir Clement.

Rob walked home from the Langham that night with Dick, and when he was not thinking of the two Sir Clements, he was telling himself that he had climbed his hill valiantly, only to topple over when he neared the top. Before he went to bed he had an article to finish for the "Wire," and while he wrote it, he pondered over the ways of woman, which, when you come to think of it, is a droll thing to do.

Mr Meredith had noticed Rob's dejection at the hotel, and remarked to Nell's mother that he thought Mary was very stiff to Angus. Mrs. Meredith looked sadly at her husband in reply.

"You think so," she said, mournfully shaking her head at him, "and so does Richard Abinger. Mr Angus is as blind as the rest of you."

"I don't understand," said Mr Meredith, with much curiosity.

"Nor do they," replied his wife, contemptuously; "there are no men so stupid, I think, as the clever ones."

She could have preached a sermon that night, with the stupid sex for her text.

The Grim Reaper

WAS WAITING TO RECEIVE A BURDENED VICTIM OF KIDNEY DISEASE.

Paine's Colery Compound Saves a Life After Fifteen Years of Terrible Agony.

One of the Greatest Victories Over Disease Ever Recorded.

Mr. Kevill Says:
"Your Compound Banished All My Aches and Pains."

NO CASE TOO COMPLICATED FOR THE GREAT MEDICINE.

WELLS & RICHARDSON CO.,
DEAR SIRS:—For the past fifteen years I have been troubled with diseased kidneys. I am engaged in the manufacture of cheese, and am obliged to work more or less in a stooping posture. At times I found it almost impossible to work owing to severe pains across my kidneys. Often, after working in a stooping position for a straight, I would find it very difficult to straighten up at once, and could only do so after repeated efforts.

Of late years, while laboring under these severe attacks, I became very nervous, and continually had tired, worn-out feelings. My rest at night seemed to do me no good, and I always felt tired out in the morning.

I had been taking various medicines and was getting worse all the time. At last I decided to give Paine's Colery Compound a trial. I procured a bottle and found it according to directions, and found it effect wonderful. Before I had used the first bottle I began to improve; after I had used the second bottle I felt as well as ever. I did in my life. It had banished all aches and pains, my nervousness was all gone, and the tired and worn-out feelings were banished. I can go to bed now and sleep well, and rise in the morning rested and refreshed.

I have recommended Paine's Colery Compound to my friends who were suffering from the same troubles as I had, and all have been greatly benefited. Knowing what it has done, I can cheerfully recommend it to any person suffering from kidney disease.

Yours truly,
C. F. KEVILL, Dumfries, Ont.

Royal makes the food pure, wholesome and delicious.

Thames by night, lifted their heads out of the river, gaped, and were gone. An osier wand dipped into the water under a weight of swallows, all going to bed together. The boy on the next house-boat kissed his hand to a broom on board the "Tawny Owl," taking it for Mrs. Meredith's servant, and then retired to his kitchen smiling. From the boat-house across the river came the monotonous tap of a hammer. A reed warbler rushed through his song. There was a soft splashing along the bank.

"There was once a literary character," Dick murmured, "who said that to think of nothing was an impossibility, but he lived before the days of house-boats. I came here a week ago to do some high thinking, and I believe I have managed only four thoughts—first, that the cow on the island is an irate cow; second, that in summer the sun shines brightly; third, that the trouble of lighting a cigar is almost as great as the pleasure of smoking it; and fourth, that swans—the fourth thought referred to swans, but it slipped my memory."

He yawned like a man glad to get at the end of his sentence, or sorry that he had begun it.

"But I thought," said Mrs. Meredith, "that the reason you walked round and round the island by yourself so frequently is because you can think out articles on it?"

"Yes," Dick answered, "the island looks like a capital place to think on, and I always start off on my round meaning to think hard. After that all is a blank till I am back at the 'Tawny Owl,' when I remember that I have forgotten to think."

"Will ought to enjoy this," remarked Nell.

"That is my brother, Mr Angus," Mary said to Rob; "he is to spend part of his holiday here."

"I remember him," Rob answered, smiling. Mary blushed, however, remembering that the last time Will and Greybrooke met Rob there had been a little scene.

"He will enjoy the fishing," said Dick. "I myself have fished only three or four times, and I am confident I hooked a minnow yesterday."

"I saw a little boy," Nell said, "fishing from the island to-day, and his mother had strapped him to a tree in case he might fall in."

"When I saw your young brother at Silchester," Rob said to Mary, "he had a school-mate with him."

"Ah, yes," Dick said; "that was the man who wanted to horsehip you, you know."

"I thought he and Miss Meredith were great friends," Rob retorted. He sometimes wondered how much Dick cared for Nell.

"It was only the young gentleman's good-nature," Abinger explained, while Nell drew herself up indignantly; "he found that he had to give up either Nell or a cricket match, and so Nell was reluctantly dropped."

"That was not how you spoke," Nell said to Dick, in a low voice, "when I told you all about him, poor boy, in your chambers."

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., FEB. 11, 1898.

Editorial Notes.

We understand that Dr. Borden has been urged to use his influence for the placing of a light at the mouth of the Creek for the convenience of vessels attempting to make the port in the night. We trust the movement may be successful. This is a need that has long been felt by masters of vessels, and the outlay would be but a trifling one. We do not think the request can be regarded as an unreasonable one.

We note by the financial report of the town of Kentville that there was paid to the local newspaper and printing office last year $106.85. The amount paid to the local office by the Wolfville council was $23.55. This would indicate a more economical business policy on the part of the government of our town. The difference may be to some degree explained, however, by the assumption that Kentville had all its printing done at home instead of sending abroad for it.

The Wolfville Board of Trade may now be considered fully organized, and if properly conducted will no doubt prove a powerful factor in advancing the interests of the town and district. The Board is deserving of the strong support of every local business man and the citizens generally. It has been constituted strictly for the promotion of general business interests. A Board of Trade, when comprised of enterprising men and having a large and representative membership, is a mighty lever in lifting a town to a higher level of prosperity. Let all our citizens strive to make each a description apply to our Board.

The federal parliament was duly opened on Thursday of last week with the customary formalities. The address was unusually brief, and referred to the recent loan as showing the high standing of Canada's credit to the welcome accord. Canadian representatives at the Queen's Jubilee; to the action of the imperial government in denouncing the German and Belgian treaties in the interests of Canadian trade; to the extraordinary gold discoveries in the Yukon district. A number of important measures were promised to be submitted, including the plebiscite bill which was announced as one of the government measures to be introduced at once. We hope to see this matter placed squarely before the people without any side issues attached, so that an intelligent vote may be recorded when the time comes.

An exceedingly ridiculous paragraph appeared in last Friday's issue of the Advertiser, with regard to the late meeting of the Fruit Grower's Association here, in which it is stated that the Liberal party was foiled in an attempt to get more of its number on the management by "the respectable Conservatives of Wolfville." The whole story is utter nonsense. There was undoubtedly an attempt made in some quarters to capture the Association, but that it was with a view to introducing politics, or that it miscarried through the action of the "respectable Conservatives," is absurd. The writer of the paragraph alluded to is the one who is evidently attempting to introduce politics and bad feelings into the Association. Surely party politics may be left outside this grand old Association which has done and is doing so much for the fruit growers of our valley. We are surprised that a respectable journal should lend its columns to the publication of such statements.

Town Council Meetings.

The town council met as per adjournment on Tuesday evening. Present—The Mayor, Couns. Borden, Bowles, Chase, Porter, Harvey and the Recorder.

The recorder submitted a draft of an act to be presented to the legislature respecting the water shed lands, for the approval of the council, which was on motion sanctioned by the council and ordered to be sent forward.

A letter was read from the Electric Light Co. and Mr. R. E. Harris respecting the flow of water from the street which had been turned across between the Electric Light Station and the adjoining street, and asking that it be placed past the buildings so as to protect the foundation of the same. The Clerk was instructed to reply, stating that the request would be conceded to.

The financial statement of Nova Scotia was presented in the legislature last week. The revenue estimated for the year did not materialize, and though the government kept within their expenditure estimate the year's business shows a deficit of $21,468.

The Last Sad Rites.

The funeral services of the late Sanford F. Doleman, M.A., were held on Jan. 27th, from the residence of his parents, Brightons, Shel. Co., beginning at 1.30 p.m. The procession formed at the home and walked to the Osborne church.

Immediately preceding the hearse were Bro. Ira Hardy and Austin Bill, classmates of Bro. Doleman, wearing their college gowns. A large number gathered at the church, where the funeral services were conducted by pastor N. B. Dann, of the Osborne church, of which Bro. Doleman was a member.

At the close of a short sermon by the pastor, Bro. Hardy read a number of letters of Christian sympathy and condolences, one from each of the following:—Dr. T. Trotter, president of the University; the faculty; the class of '99, of which Bro. Doleman was a member, and from the editors of the Advertiser, of which he was business editor.

The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful, having been sent by the class of '99, his fellow students, members of the Seminary and Academy, besides from other friends. The relatives felt very grateful for these tokens of sympathy and kind expression from those who knew and loved their boy, and pray for a large blessing to attend those who so kindly helped them bear their great burden of grief.

Bro. Hardy and Bill gave expression to the high esteem in which Bro. Doleman was held by themselves and how sadly they would miss him to the village and where. After these services, and while the bell was tolling its sad farewell, we laid his body to rest in the Osborne cemetery, there to await the glorious resurrection morn. May God make this sad providence a blessing to some.

Two or three days before the great storm the schooner Gypsis, Capt. Cary, Kingsport, was seen off White Waters and the Cape, trying to come up and make Perceux river, but she was caught by the ice, great quantities of which have been coming down from Cebequid Bay, and was carried out past the Cape. She eventually got into harbor at Port Georgeville. For some time fears were entertained for the safety of the schooner and her crew.

The People's Forum.

To the Editor of the ACADIAN. DEAR SIR:—It was a trite saying of Mr. Innes' at a political meeting in Kentville, when he publicly suggested the appointment of Mr. Wm. Young to the Legislative Council, as a solution of the problem of its "Abolition."

Of those who were present and heard the suggestion, some at least regarded it as a huge joke upon his friend Young, while others who were better acquainted with Mr. Young and his method of dealing with public affairs, well understood that Mr. Innes' remarks meant more than a joke.

If Mr. Young's ambition is to win fame or popularity, he surely has adopted an unwise policy; though it is evident he has already gained some notoriety.

To design and build a structure often requires the combined energy and skill of experienced workmen and the toil of years, while any clown may demolish it in a short time.

I now call to mind the raid Mr. Young made upon the Fruit Growers' Association at its annual meeting in Wolfville in 1892. Strangers present at that meeting, not being familiar with the work and worth of the F. G. Association, may have been misled or influenced by Mr. Young's demonstration. But those who had grown up under its influence for good—those who had for years stood shoulder to shoulder through prosperity and adversity, were not much moved by him, nor did they aid him in his efforts to pull down and destroy.

However, the world moves on, and so does Mr. Young. Foiled in his attempt, he gracefully bows to the inevitable and occasionally meets with us, joins in our discussions, and participates in all the privileges of the Association.

Nothing remarkable has since occurred until recently. On Friday morning, the third day of our anniversary, as the hour drew near for the election of officers for the ensuing year, Mr. Young put in his appearance again, armed with his agents of destruction, a squad of new recruits, a score or more, gathered from Kentville and suburbs, two-thirds of whom for the first time paid one dollar and had their names enrolled, and so went duly qualified for the occasion to do Mr. Young's bidding, the outcome of which is well known—and perhaps is quite flattering to Mr. Young's ambition.

Think of the work and worth of men who for twenty or thirty years, at personal sacrifice, have spent their time and money in founding an institution that has developed the resources of our country and the good of their fellow men; then think of him, who cares for none of these things. Whose glory is in his name, and whose characteristic ambition is the destruction of what is good. And what shall we then say?

Without a question the Fruit Growers' Association has been an important factor in the development of the fruit industry in Nova Scotia, and is deserving of the cordial support and universal co-operation. By its efforts many hindrances to the success of this industry have been overcome, while others we still have to face. The commercial side of the business is now the most formidable we have to meet, and requires much skill to manage it. Sometimes the prospects before us appear hopeful;—at other times discouraging.

I had fondly hoped that the contemplated Apple and Produce Shipping Co. would materialize and prove a success, and believed that its promoters and provisional directors were the right men in the right place. I am now wondering if our hopes in this undertaking are to be blasted. Is this enterprise to be "abandoned" in its embryo?

T. H. PARKER. Berwick, Feb. 5th, 1898.

EDITOR ACADIAN.—Pardon me for obtaining myself into your columns, but there are some grievances for which there is no one like printer's ink.

Every student when he enters College seems to become infected with a four year's itch for devilry and with the progress of the disease we are all familiar. Recently however some of them probably by thinking their hankneyed, infantile tricks a little tame for grown men, made a new departure in this line.

A few evenings ago a party of boys and girls (young ladies and gentlemen in the drawing room) were treating by

A SOLDIER'S LIFE.

ONLY VETERANS CAN REALIZE THE SUFFERINGS OF ARMY LIFE.

Strong Men Made Helpless Invalids—The story of one who suffered Day and Night for Twenty Years.

From the Cheban Banner. Everyone living in and around the village of Wheatley knows Mr. Peter Sippe, who has been a resident of the place for upwards of twenty years, and who during the whole of that period up to last year was a constant sufferer from acute rheumatism, complicated by other troubles, until he was worn almost to a shadow. At the age of twenty he joined the 21st New York Volunteers, and after being a member of that organization for three years, he joined the New York Cavalry and served through the war of the rebellion. He took part in the historic battles of Bull's Run, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, and at one time rode eighty miles at a stretch carrying dispatches through the enemy's lines. On another occasion he was on horseback for four days and five nights, and it is little wonder that such hardships left him, as they did thousands of others, with a wrecked constitution. While in the army, as a result of poor food and often warm water, he was attacked with diarrhoea, which assumed a chronic form. This of course greatly weakened him, and he fell on a easy prey to the pains and terrors of rheumatism. To a correspondent of the Banner he said: "I never expected to be any better in this world as I had tried scores of medicines which brought me no relief at all. Sometimes for weeks at a time I could not lie down or sleep, and could eat but little. I was not only troubled with rheumatism, but at times was subject to fainting spells, and at other times everything appeared to turn black before my eyes. I would often feel sick at my stomach, at which times food would prove loathsome to me. My kidneys also troubled me greatly and my nervous system seemed completely shattered. Tongue can scarcely tell how much I endured during those long and weary years. About a year ago I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and it was a grand day for me that I began their use. After I had used a few boxes my pains had lessened and I was considerably better. Later, through a continued use of the pills, I could eat, sleep and felt able to work as I had done twenty years ago. I now feel well and strong and if any of my old comrades see this ad as afflicted I would urge them to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills." An analysis shows that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain in a condensed form all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood, and restore stasis, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, eczema, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of the grippe, palpitation of the heart, nervous prostration, all diseases depending upon vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppression, irregularities, and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature.

The Wild Horses of Arizona.

"There must be 20,000 head of wild horses in northern Arizona," said Will S. Barnes, one of the largest cattle owners in Navajo county, recently. "They are the worst nuisance that can be imagined. It has reached the point where we cannot safely turn out a riding horse to graze. We have to keep our animals in barns and round up horses stabled all winter or bring them to Phoenix for pasturing. The wild stock not only eat the food that ought to go to the cattle, but they chased off all the cattle from the west end of the Hah Kulte range, one of the best grass districts in north-eastern Arizona. It is useless to put out salt away the cattle that come near it. At this season of the year they are fat and have shining hides. They sweep over the country in great bands, gathering up any stray animals they may come across. A good horse is as good as lost that joins them."

Interesting Notes for the Ladies.

Success in Dyeing Means Pleasure and Profit.

Beware of cheap and worthless imitations of Diamond Dyes. See that your dealer gives you "Diamond" when you ask for them.

Diamond Dyes have a world wide reputation; their work is of the highest order, and their success is deserved.

There are forty-eight colors in the Diamond Dyes for dyeing wool and cotton goods; each dye is perfectly true to color, and as reliable as pure gold.

Diamond Dye color anything any color. They are fast to soap, washing and sun, and surpass all others in brilliancy.

Diamond Dyes are the strongest dyes made, hence the cheapest; one package is equal to three of any other make.

Never be deceived by the false claims of imitations of Diamond Dyes. If your merchant asks you to accept any other make of dye, be sure he is after large profits, and never think of your comfort and success.

A Dignitary of the Episcopal Church

RECOMMENDS PRAYER FOR THE PROHIBITION OF TEMPERANCE.

The Bishop of Peterborough, England, has sent a letter to all the clergy of his diocese, asking them to set apart Sunday, February 6th, for the purpose of calling special attention to the work of the Church of England Temperance Society in promoting the cause of temperance and total abstinence. He has also approved the following special form of prayer to be used on that occasion, should the important duty of God be mightily destroyed the works of the devil, and make us children of God and heirs of everlasting life, be pleased to bless and prosper all who are striving against the deadly sin of intemperance. May thy Holy Spirit ever be with us to give us wisdom and strength, that we may both perceive and know what things we ought to do, and also may have grace and power faithfully to fulfill the same. May He give us unity and brotherly love, that we may try to help one another to live according to thy will, and to rescue and save those who have fallen into sin; and so may daily increase in love and in every friend of our cause, will carry lasting Kingdom; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.—New York Examiner.

Prohibition.

Anent the discussion between Dr. Lucas and Rev. Dr. Grant, the Hamilton Temple of the 27th of January says:

To test his sincerity, we challenge Dr. Grant to disprove the statements made in the letters published below. They come from men in authority in places where prohibition has been tested; and the story of success that has attended the efforts of reformers in the East and in many friends of our cause, will carry conviction to some who have not yet been able to believe that a prohibitory law may be enforced,—and will either disarm or disarm the man of God who has unconsciously or consciously been doing battle for the enemy of mankind.

The first letter is from Alvin F. Hornwell, mayor of Cambridge, Mass., and is dated "Office of the Mayor, Jan. 4, 1898." It reads:

"The city of Cambridge is now in its eleventh year of no-licensing, the voters acting on this matter annually at the December election. There is no liquor sold in our city except at the drugstore. The law is thoroughly enforced, is not a 'dead letter,' and there is no corruption existing among the police force."

The second letter is written by J. A. Johnson, mayor of Fargo, North Dakota, and is dated "Mayor's Office, Jan. 7, 1898." It says:

"North Dakota is a prohibition State by constitutional prohibition, and Fargo is a prohibition city in every sense of the word. There is not a saloon or a blind pig in Fargo. No intoxicating beverages can be procured here except at the drug stores, and then only on the prescriptions of some reputable doctor; and unless there is need for such prescriptions cannot be had. At stated times each druggist is required to publish the names of all parties who present prescriptions, with the amount and kind of liquor procured, and of whose prescription they were delivered. As stated above there are neither saloons nor blind pigs in Fargo; neither are there any gambling houses here, nor has there been any since I became mayor nearly two years ago. Some parties tried it soon after my election, but we stopped them in short order. Both county and city officers make an honest effort to suppress the evil, and find no difficulty in doing so. Our judge, Hon. Charles A. Folsom, is an ardent prohibitionist, and that in itself is a great help to the police force in the city and the sheriff in the country. Fargo has a population of from 13,000 to 15,000, with not a vacant residence or store that is at all desirable in it."

An Important Opinion.

Since his return to Great Britain, Rev. Dr. John Watson (Jan. McLaren) has expressed his opinion of the prohibition movement as he saw it on this side of the water. He said: "With regard to those parts of this country (America) where there is prohibition, I had no opportunity for personal examination into the success of the results or the working of the measures, but I made inquiries. I was assured by some of their absolute success; I was assured by some that they could be easily evaded. But everything can be evaded if people set their minds to evade. There is no doubt that the prohibition measures have been a great boon to America, and I do not see why they should not be of as great value to this country."—Forward.

Here are some facts about Maine: Before prohibition there were in Maine seven distilleries and two breweries. Now, not one of either in the state.

Many cargoes of West India rum were imported every year. Now, not even one puncheon is received.

Formerly, rumshops everywhere; one in every hamlet. Now, in more than three-fourths of the state, having three-fourths of the population, the grogshop is unknown. An entire generation has grown up there, never having seen a saloon or the sight of one.

The quantity of liquor now sold is not one-twentieth what it was before prohibition. In Portland the quantity is not one-hundredth part of what it used to be, and the city is twice as large.

The people used to spend every twenty years, in strong drink, the entire valuation of the state. Now, one million dollars will more than pay for all the liquor
