ARE the best for the preservation of the sight, and took the medal at the Centennial Exhibition.

The lenses are made of the best material, uniform in density, and of high refractive power, their perfect polish and spheroidal shape adapt them to ease and improve the sight of the wearer. The eye being the most delicate organ great care should be exercised in selecting spectacles; it is not enough that the glass be of the right focus, but the lenses must be perfectly centered and in many cases perfect relief is only given by having each eye fitted separately. To effect this the lenses are made interchangeable, and having an Optometer to measure the sight, a perfect fit is guaranteed.

IVANHOE.

(BY SIR WALTER SCOTT, BART.)

"Ha!" exclaimed the knight, "knowest thou his name?—But thou dost," he immediately added, "and well thou mayest, for it was from thy hand, and, as I am now convinced, from thine own generosity of spirit, that he received but yesterday a hundred zechins."

"Speak not of that," said Rebecca, blushing deeply; "I see how easy it is for the tongue to betray what the heart would gladly conceal."

"But this sum of gold," said Ivanhoe, gravely, "my honor is concerned in repaying it to your father."

"Let it be as thou wilt," said Rebecca, "when eight days have passed away; but think not, and speak not now, of aught that may retard thy recovery."

"Be it so, kind maiden," said Ivanhoe; "it were most ungrateful to dispute thy commands. But one word of the fate of poor Gurth, and I have done with questioning thee."

"I grieve to tell thee, Sir Knight," answered the Jewess, "that he is in custody by the order of Cedric. And then observing the distress which her communication gave to Wilfred, she instantly added, "But the steward Oswald said that if nothing occurred to renew his master's displeasure against him, he was sure that Cedric would pardon Gurth, a faithful serf, and one who stood high in favor, and who had but committed this error out of the love that he bore to Cedric's son. And he said, moreover, that he and his comrades, and especially Wamba the Jester, were resolved to warn Gurth to make good his escape by the way in case Cedric's ire against him could not be mitigated."

"Would to God they may keep their purpose!" said Ivanhoe; "but it seems as if I were destined to bring ruin on whomsoever bath shewn kindness to me. My king, by whom I was honored and distinguished, thou seest that the brother most indebted

FREDERICTON JULY 15, 1880.

THE GLORIOUS TWELFTH.

"Our flags that day were blended Of Orange and of Green."

—W. Wilson.

We believe in our last we promised to give our readers something more of Master William Appended's speech, with a few remarks appended, and something of the manifestations of the Order in General. Of the day, so far as the violation of the Canada Temperance Act, and the perversion of the Exhibition Palace—which was originally intended for the harmless exhibition of animals, vegetables and roots—was concerned, little could be said with either pleasure or profit; but with both, a speech might be handled which shows that the maker is just as widely acquainted with the prime objects of the Order at whose head he stands, as he is with the commonest topics of English history, familiar to the dullest schoolboy.

We haven't the notes of Mr. Wilson's Monday's speech by us, but we have the speech of last year which is the same. Mr. Wilson says both years:

As far as I am aware, nothing has occurred to justify the opinion which some entertain concerning this institution, that we meet together on our celebrating days for the purpose of perpetrating the antagonisms of past ages, and of creating disturbance, nullifying the peace and quiet of society.

"As far as I am aware," says Mr. Wilson, and what can be plainer than that is not very far, "there is no reason" for the common opinion about our Order.

When Mr. Wilson was quietly performing his daily duties in the hamlets of Douglas, the Orangemen were making a history for themselves, that it were well he made himself acquainted with. And in making that history they were not marching against another St. Ruth, or another Sarsfield, in the cause of liberty, for even the very rocks and lakes had long ago been fought for and won. Yes, while Mr. Wilson murdered the harmless frog, or assisted to kill the household lamb, this peace-seeking order across the seas was shaking its yellow flag in the face of its fellowman, and taunting him to deeds of recrimination and violence. When Mr. Wilson had yet not dreamed of crookedly striding a stable-soiled horse to head the brotherhood, blood and bricks rained in the streets of Londonderry and Belfast, not as an offering to the triumph or the perpetuation of liberty, but in a disgraceful street brawl where one fanatic flaunted green and another yellow, both a disgrace to any civilized or any christian country. Those who went out with yellow ribbons and yellow streamers, as well as those who met them arrayed in green, were—always were—and always will be, the scum of society, a pack of organized cowards and cut throats who are celebrating no principles, but ruffianism, bigotry and ignorance. It is not the respectable men of any city that parades his tawdry yellow and damns the Pope or who with the shamrock desecrated upon his breast, execrates King William but the very lowest scum of the streets. Let Grand Master Wilson point to one act for the good of society the order has promoted since its formation in this country, and we will forgive them the hundred dirty, bloody squabbles their parades gave rise to—we will forgive them the bullet stains on nigh every door in Victoria Square, in Montreal, the death of young Clifford, the breaches made among the peoples of the Upper Provinces that it will take more than a century to heal. No, let Mr. Wilson be in this, as he has been in all his other public dealings, a man: let him throw off the scarlet cloak at once and tell us he is not celebrating any great principle, but he is leading around a lot of innocent ignorant men by the nose, whose credulity he laughs at, and whom he heads and associates himself with at all, only to use them when the time arrives to turn their votes to account. He goes on—last year and this year—

Rightly considered, no man can consider the celebration as a menace to his freedom either civil or religious, but rather as a celebration of the anniversary of the commencement of a struggle which resulted in securing to the Anglo-Saxon race the embryonic principles of freedom which it now enjoys. We celebrate more. We celebrate their development and dissemination with pride, for they now underlie the Government of the civilized world. When these principles first dawned upon the world, they were a mere semblance of what they are now.

Ray likens a writer who uses a great number of words to express himself, to a cuttle-fish, "who hides himself in his own ink." Mr. Wilson wrote the above extract of his speech years ago, but we are faint to hope he did not understand one half of it. What means Mr. Wilson when he says: "No man can consider the celebration a menace to his religious freedom?" A lot of poor galleys, poor innocent gawks, coming out of the woods into sight of civilization for the first time in their lives, "menace our religious freedom" indeed! Mr. Wilson ought to remember the band he leads is only a burlesque on Orangemen, a kind of imitation society. But suppose they were of the intelligent and powerful classes, then indeed, since they celebrate—as they say they do—William's principles, one of which was to maintain the Protestant religion, it is difficult to see their parades in any other light than that of a menace. Since Mr. Wilson seems to know nothing of history, let him read from that little history of England prescribed for schools by the Board of Education, at page 185, where the writer, describing the state of affairs in Ireland after the battle of Aughrim: "The domination of the colonists was now assured, and rigorous laws were made to hold down the Roman Catholics: the bravest and best of whom, denied all chance of rising in their own land, entered the service of foreign states." This of course was the good William's way of granting human "liberty," about which Mr. Wilson has mouthed so much. Another of his methods, too, was to send his soldiers over to the mountains of Scotland, and at the memorable Glencoe to massacre one of the bravest clans that ever gave history to Scotland. Then Mr. Wilson says the band celebrates the commencement of the struggle for liberty. He might as well select the Twelfth of July, and the anniversary of the railroad cowcatcher. Why, if so, not celebrate the doings of the Barons at Runnymede?—yea, the landing of the Conqueror, or the sounding of Hengist and Horsa's drums on Thanet? Why, for that matter, not celebrate the defeat of the Philistines by Sampson, or David's victory over Goliath? What is Mr. Wilson and his tail celebrating anyway? They celebrate the 12th, but William was fought under William on the 1st of July. Aughrim was fought on the 12th, though not by William but by General Ginkell, a Dutchman, who is supposed to have been moved at the time by the influence of not less than a gallon of lager beer. William was not anywhere about during the battle. He was home making places for his Dutch friends, whom he was afterwards compelled to dismiss in a body they not even sparing his famous lager beer drinking "Dutch Guards." All or most of the forfeited lands in Ireland, he gave to his own personal friends, for which he had to make recompense to Parliament. He was sour and grumpy, a typical Dutchman, who was a more than inferior king, but perhaps better adapted to rule the time he came, than the frivolous Stewart whom he supplanted. And Mr. Wilson goes on in 1879 and 1880:—

For what we now enjoy, we are deeply indebted to the great men who, with the pen, tongue and sword, have appeared all along the line, and fought on the side of human liberty in the great struggle between arbitrary power and the rights of the common people. To the old Barons of England, led by Pembroke and Langton, by whose united exertions the tyrant John was humbled and the foundation of the liberties of England laid. To Elizabeth and the great writers of that period of English literature. To Hampden and Cromwell and host of others, down to the revolution of 1689.

In this connection is not the name of William of Orange worthy of mention? (great cheering). Answer me, is his name not worthy of mention? (Renewed cheering). The man who left the land of his birth, the friends of his youth, the land over which he held sway, to preserve the liberties of England.

It was tremendous sacrifice truly, for a man to leave the Principality of Orange-Nassau and the Stadtholdership of Holland, to put upon his brow the English crown, and rule the mistress of the seas! The world has seldom seen a greater condescension or a nobler sacrifice! Add to this if a man wait till he is asked to do a good turn, the credit of doing it is ten times as great! And William waited till he was "asked" before he came over to do this good deed for England. Poor Grand Master Wilson! And further, says Mr. Wilson—on all public occasions:

Fleets have swarmed upon the shores of many a land, to bring away an army, equipped for foreign conquest and they have swept on to subject a people to a foreign yoke. But on the 10th Oct., 1688 lay a fleet of 600 vessels bearing an army not for conquest but for preservation. William came not as Caesar came, to make Britain a Roman Province; not as William the Conqueror came to lay waste the land; not as the Armada came, to rob England of her religion and laws. He came not as a conqueror, but as a friend and preserver, in obedience to the motto flung out from the mast head of his ship, "I will maintain the liberties of England, the Protestant Religion, and a free and legal Parliament." (great cheering).

He came and put an end to that great struggle between arbitrary power and the rights of the people, a struggle waged since the reign of King John. Is his name not worthy of mention? And is not the anniversary of his achievement worthy of celebration? Let the thousands of Orangemen throughout the British Empire, who are met as we are here to-day, for the birth of their principles to the Revolution—answer. Let the voters of the world to whom the Revolution of 1689 secured the right of free franchise answer!

Glorious institutions! They thought they were worth fighting for. We think they are worth remembering. We don't wish to cherish the memory of either men or their acts that have worked mischief to humanity. We don't think we do it. We want to cherish the pure, the good and the holy; "providing all things, holding fast to that which is good." Born of the past, yet living in the present and for the present, we are heirs of the mighty future, and if we are faithful to our opportunities, the past shall be bettered in our hands. Political, religious, and educational freedom was the object of this institution.

And would it be too much to repeat that here and now as there and then, the political object is not absent? Mr. Wilson's annual peroration is this:

The faith we have in man as a being of boundless possibilities and of priceless value, is the great progressive idea, the great inspiration and the living force of civilization. On that faith in humanity, let us build as bravely and as wisely as those who honor. (Great cheering).

Mr. John Pickard gave the people one of his usual eloquent and grammatical staves. There was in this effort the same profound oratorical knowledge, and deep rich utterance, that always are features of Mr. Pickard's speeches. We have reserved "honest John" for the spit in another issue.

HON. H. L. LANGEVIN, C. B.

The people of Quebec are generally signing a petition to present to Her Majesty praying that further titular honors be conferred upon Hon. H. L. Langevin as a distinguished leader of the Acadian people. We are not at all surprised to see the Acadians drawing up such a petition and we should not wonder to see Blue and Rouge forget for the time their common political antipathies and subscribe a request which, granted, would be a compliment and a mark of honor to all the Acadian people. It looks not a little strange when Her Majesty's Government were distributing spurs to Sir John Macdonald, Sir Leonard Tilley, Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Richard Cartwright, all of English descent, they should have forgotten some representative Acadian. For the Acadian element enters not alone largely into our population, but into the composition of the country's chief council. In days gone by the Acadians told with pride that one of their fellow-Acadians had stood so high before his country and his Queen, that the Sovereign conferred on him the Knighthood. Sir George Cartier's name is spoken of with pride to-day by Canadian Frenchmen, who all through his life differed from him in politics, but who then admired his fine abilities, as they now honor his memory.

Hon. Hector Langevin is the legitimate successor of Hon. George Cartier, and we are sure it was the merest oversight that he did not get the spurs which by his great abilities he had won, when the Queen was distributing them among the other four. No Acadian to-day so well deserves them; and as they are due to some Canadian, Mr. Langevin is the man. Success to the Quebec petition.

And now we may say that it is our opinion that the Acadian people of New Brunswick, and there are nearly 100,000 of that race here, should sign a similar petition. To carry out this plan, Hon. P. A. Landry, a distinguished Acadian leader in this Province, would be eminently fitted. Let us hope the Chief Commissioner will not lose sight of the hint; and we may add he would get many a signature beside the Acadians' to his petition.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED

IS A FACT ATTESTED BY THE HIGHEST MEDICAL AUTHORITIES IN THE WORLD.

A careful observance of the laws of health, and the systematic and persistent use of Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lim and Soda will accomplish this result. This preparation has all the virtues of these two most valuable specifics, in a form perfectly palatable, and acceptable to the most delicate stomach, and we make the unqualified statement that Scott's Emulsion is being used with better results and endorsed and prescribed by more physicians for Consumption—and the diseases leading to it, such as Chronic Coughs, Bronchitis, Scrophula, Anæmia, General Debility, and the Wasting Disorders of Children, than any other remedy known to medical science. The rapidity with which patients improve on this food medicine diet, is truly marvellous.

See What Physicians and the People Say About It.

MESSRS. SCOTT & BOWNE: 66 West Thirty-sixth Street, New York, September 2, 1876.

GENTS.—I have frequently prescribed SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES during the past year, and regard it as a valuable preparation in scrophulous and consumptive cases, palatable and efficacious.

C. C. LOCKWOOD, M. D.

MESSRS. SCOTT & BOWNE:—Gentlemen.—Within the last year I have used in my own family, and in my private practice prescribed very extensively SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES and found it a most valuable preparation, especially in diseases of children. It is agreeable to the most delicate stomach, which renders it a very valuable agent as a nutritive remedy in consumptive and scrophulous cases. October 12, 1876.

Yours respectfully, A. H. SEXTON, M. D., Baltimore.

MESSRS. SCOTT & BOWNE:—Gentlemen.—Within the last two months I have fairly tried SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES, and I candidly declare that it is the finest preparation of the kind that has ever been brought to my notice; in affections of the lungs and other wasting diseases, we can consider it our most reliable agent, in a perfectly agreeable and elegant form.

December 12th, 1878.

Yours truly, J. SIMONAUD, M. D., New Orleans, La.

MESSRS. SCOTT & BOWNE:—Gentlemen.—In September, 1877, my health began to fail and my physician pronounced it spinal trouble; under his care I got some relief from pain, but my general health did not improve, and early in the winter I began to raise blood and rapidly grew worse. In May last I was taken with a violent bleeding which brought me to my bed and my life was despaired of for many weeks; violent symptoms appeared, night and morning coughs, night sweats and short breath, and a return of the spinal trouble. My physician stopped the bleeding and then ordered Cod Liver Oil and Lime; and I used various preparations, but they did me no good. I lost all hope of life and was an object of pity to all my friends. Last September I purchased a bottle of your EMULSION and before it was all taken I was better. I afterwards bought a dozen bottles, and following results: Coughs subsiding, night sweats stopped, appetite returned, pains in spine disappeared, strength returning, and my weight increased from 115 to 140 pounds in sixteen weeks. I have taken no other medicine since commencing with your EMULSION and shall continue its use until I am perfectly well. I frequently meet some friend on the street who asks, "What cured you?" and I answer, "SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL, etc." I have a friend who has not spoken aloud for 15 months, and he is getting better. I gave him a bottle, and he bought two more, then got a dozen, and says it is the best medicine for him. He was given up to die a year ago, but he is improving now wonderfully. My recovery is exciting the surprise of many people, and shall do all I can to make known your valuable medicine.

Teachers' Parliament.

This Institution opened for the fourth time Tuesday afternoon in the Normal School. On the afternoon of Tuesday, very much business was done, but in the evening the hall was crowded and Dr. Rand delivered his address which showed a vast deal of careful preparation.

WEDNESDAY.

Per Dr. Rand it was announced that the Course of Instruction for High Schools and also for Primary Schools would be opened by Mr. William Crockett. (Perhaps a small tribute to Mr. Crockett here would not be out of place.)

He invited full and free discussion on the course of instruction. Mr. Freeze suggested that Greek in the proposed course should be optional, and that French, a living language, should be compulsory.

Mr. John Marsh said he thought the course worked well in St. John. In some grades there was too much work. He thought Grammar should be relegated to the fourth grade.

Quite an excitement was created here over the marriage of Miss Annie Murray and Mr. Mappin. Our aristocracy yesterday in full bloom.

Our town had some Government visitors last week. The Attorney General Fraser, Commissioner of Public Works and our own Mr. Adams.

There are not a few who could wish the editor had remained there.

Our local authorities make a test case of violation of the Sabbath on a few of those gentlemen who make the Sunday the day of sporting on their fishing excursions—and yet these men are called respectable.

The little clique are again raising their heads. Some appointments at the last Council such as a "Board of Health" were made. Drs. Smith and McDonald appointed—that are their duties, and what fees do they receive?

William Russell's property was sold by auction the other day, the purchaser being A. A. Davidson, Esq., for $400.

The "Matheson" property was also sold same day and purchased by same party for $350. The National Policy has not increased the price of real figures, and the City Council let him off with $50 for taxes.

The 12th of July was exceedingly quiet here. No procession and no noise. The only flag flying was at the I. C. B. Newcastle Station. I suppose it's the duty of the employers to fry the nation on such days. Fry our public buildings. I do not know whether the minister belongs to the Order or not. Perhaps McLellan does.

Griffin returned from his holiday trip to St. John. He reports having an enjoyable time, but had quite a trouble with his two companions.

The "Mappin" House at Derby was purchased by James Brown for $2,500. Brown was agent for Robinson, but scored $100. Well done James—you will be a legislator yet.

Personal. Hon. P. A. Landry arrived yesterday from his visit to the north.

Mr. Charles G. D. Roberts, who has charge of the Chatham schools, is in the city, spending his holidays. We understand Mr. Roberts is preparing to publish in book form those beautiful poems he has given to the public through various sources, and also a number of others which as yet have not seen the light.

The Attorney General, the Provincial Secretary and the Insular Commissioner have attended the Institute pretty regularly.

A large fishing party, among which will be Mr. T. Adams, leaves New York in a few days for the north. It is the same party that has purchased the Fraser property.

Grammar for the Institute. We take two specimens of English from yesterday's St. John papers for the Institute. This is from the Sun, which tells of a case of poisoning in the Insular Commissioner.

"The flower grows without cultivation, is frequently seen in gardens and lawns, and too great care cannot be exercised in protecting it from little children."

The Sun looks to the safety of the flower, not of the children.

STRAWNS.—The value of exports from Kingston to the United States, during the last two months, was $125,000, being the largest for any corresponding time during the last five years.

The exodus has been reversed, a Halifax despatch says, the steamer "Worcester" this morning, having landed 100 Nova Scotians, returning from the United States.

The Queen as an Artist.

But the Queen is not merely a dilettante of painting, she is herself an artist. All her life it has been one of her favorite occupations to handle the pencil.

Take up her "Journals in the Highlands" and you will find in the autumn of 1844. "We sat down on the ground, and Lady Canning and I sketched;" in 1852 when her husband had shot a stag, "I sat down and sketched a sketch of him on a bit of paper which I put on a stone; in 1859, within sight of the Lochness Hills, "I made some hasty sketches;" and on board a yacht in Cork Harbor in 1849, "While Albert went on shore I occupied myself in writing and sketching;" such entries as these mark scores of occasions on which nature caught Her Majesty's eye with a peculiar beauty, or when she pursued the pencil to while away the hours during which she waited on lonely hills and in solitary woods for her husband's return from his sport.

Of that gentler use of the pencil there is in this volume other evidence than these entries—some of the sketches themselves. Nor is this the only instance in which Her Majesty has run the gauntlet of criticism by submitting her work to the public. To several exhibitions at home and abroad she has contributed, and among others to that of Philadelphia in 1876, where she sent a series of etchings, which we specially mention because they indicate that the co-operation already alluded to as existing between the Queen and Prince Consort in the art of painting, and the fine arts was also carried to the extent of collaboration in the practice of them. And the mention of these etchings remind us that some of the Royal handiwork is kind very narrowly escaped being made public against the will of the artists. This was in 1848, when some copies of etchings, the joint work of the Queen and the Prince, were stolen by a workman in the employ of a printer at Windsor, who had been engaged to take impressions from the original plates; and these were reproduced by a publisher in Paternoster Row named Strange. The Prince at once instructed the Queen's private solicitor to apply for an injunction to prevent the issue of copies of any of the private engravings referred to in "A Descriptive Catalogue of the Royal Collection and Albert Gallery of Etchings," and this was granted by Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce, whose decision was appealed against a few months later before the Lord Chancellor, by whom, however, it was fully confirmed.

How the Commons in Old Time Treated "Bradlanghs."

Thomas Carlyle is quoted by the Pall Mall Gazette as author of the statement that Mr. Bradlanghs is not the first Englishman whose speculative views on religious matters have afforded pre-occupation to an English Parliament at a time when there was urgent need that it should turn its attention to more important business.

In the second Parliament of Oliver Cromwell, James Nayler afforded material for what Mr Carlyle describes as interminable debates, excellent support alike to human speech, even in English parliaments, this editor has ever been exposed to. "Four hundred gentlemen of England," he says, and I think, a sprinkling of Lords among them, assembled from all the counties and boroughs of the three nations, to sit in solemn debate on the terrific phenomenon—a mad Quaker seeming to fancy himself a new incarnation of Christ. Shall we whip him, shall we hang him, shall we bore the tongue of him with hot iron; Shall we imprison him, set him to pick oakum? Shall we roast or boil or stew him? Shall we put the question whether this creature shall be put to death? Shall this be debated? In the name of Heaven, what shall we do with him—this terrific phenomenon of Nayler?

This is the history of Oliver's second Parliament for three long months and odd. Nowhere does the unfathomable Deep of Dulness which our English character has in it more stupendously disclose itself.

Who is there who has the strength of ten oxen that is able to support these things? Couldst thou debate on Nayler, day after day, for a whole winter? Thou, if the sky were threatening to fall on account of it, wouldst sink under such labor, appointed only for the oxen of the gods. The honorable gentlemen, Mr Carlyle continues, "did at last decide what to do with Nayler, who, after being whipped, branded and tongue-bored, and put to pick oakum on bread and water, finally repented and repented and confessed himself mad; after which this great phenomenon, visible to posterity and the west of England, was got winded up."
