

Love in the Abbey

Lady Ethel's Rival

LORD STERNE'S STORY.

"This is an excellent one," he says, leaning against the terrace and looking beyond her across to the river. "It is about a little girl who was a very good, quiet, soft-hearted little girl."

"Quite the opposite of me," says Kitty demurely.

"A gentle little thing, as yielding as straw that is tossed by ever so mild a breeze—a little thing that the old painters loved to take as their model when they wanted a blue-eyed shepherdess or Madonna. A wary, disappointed man happening to catch sight of her, as she played among her flowers on a summer evening, fancied, with one of those delusive imaginings which come across the wearied brain of such men, that he had found in her the key to new life and a fresh world. He thought he loved her—perhaps he did, who knows? He could not say yes or nay even now, if he were asked. He was one of those little men whom the world persists in calling great—great! because the fools who believe in him had inflated him with their own breath of adulation, had made the god of their own clay, and forgot their own handwork in their blind belief and worship. This little great man—possessing wealth, fame, a loud-sounding name, all of which he was heartily tired of, laid them at the feet of the little blue-eyed maiden, and prayed her to take them and consecrate them—to take his life, and breathe into it youth and hope and happiness. I do not think she could have refused, even if there were those about her who whispered in her ear how great a man had come to kneel at her feet—how great a lady she would be if she would but consent to sit beside him on his throne of fame and popularity.

She consented to bless this tired, worn-out monkey of a god, and for a time the great little man, full of his new fancy and his new life, was happy—for a time. How short it was, although it seemed to him as if it would last forever! The day on which the great little man and the little, soft-hearted girl were to be made one was then close at hand; all their world was full of congratulation and self-importance; the man himself was beginning to feel that life was not quite over, that there was still one thing more to weary of—a great thing to him. But when, on the night before the wedding, the little maiden came to him, with her blue eyes all wet with tears, and told him that it was not to be, the bubble which had been dancing before his eyes—the bubble which looked so handsome in the sun, and so solid and long enduring—had burst! The little maiden had given her heart—the very thing the great little man wanted—to one who was not tired of the world, who did not need her so much, who perhaps did not love her so well, but whom she happened to love very dearly!

He paused a moment, his expressive face half scornful, half wistful, turned so that Kitty could see every line of it, and her eyes seemed riveted to it by a kind of fascination which, struggle against it as she would, overcame her. Her breath came with one or two little pants as he paused.

"What could he do?" went on Lord Sterne, in so low a voice that Kitty had to bend forward to catch the words—"she threw herself on his mercy, on his love of truth—and her truth pleaded for her. What could he do—only that which he did. He gave her to the other man; he stood beside the altar and listened to her soft little voice as she faltered out her promise to be that other man's wife—that other man who did not need her so much as did he! and then he went home to sit and watch the last remains of his bubble as it floated away, and to learn that for him there was nothing else left to weary of, that all was vanity and vexation of spirit, and that the game of life, with all its varied and complicated moves, was a game played but once and forever for him."

Kitty draws a breath almost of relief. For the first time in her life she has come across a real love story—the love story of the greatest man of his time! She can scarcely believe that it is not all a dream—that it is really the great Lord Sterne who stands there, leaning against the balcony with so listless, so weary a look on his handsome face. It is evident, too, that he has forgotten her also, for he takes a turn up and down for a moment, muttering to himself, but still not so low but that Kitty can hear him.

"What could I do? nothing, but let her go, and with her the last hope of my life! Thank God, she did not deceive me!" he says so heartily, with an infection in his voice that makes Kitty's heart leap. "That shame, at least, was spared me—I should be thankful for that! I could forgive her all else, my sweet, pure-hearted little May child. But if she had deceived me—if she had—" he stops suddenly, and remembers Kitty almost with a start. "Miss Kitty!" he says, in quite a different voice, with a smile that is almost wild as the result of the sudden effort to come back from the past to the present, "this little story, which I am sure you are too kind to have listened to, has a moral lesson, and I am sure you are too kind to tell me that it was not to Come, Let Mother See!

When the child droops, won't play or is restless, pale and grumpy, look to see if the tongue is white, the breath feverish, the stomach sour. Then hurry, mother, but don't worry! Give Cascarets, the harmless candy cathartic. Children take Cascarets without coaxing—only 10 cents a box!

TO MOTHERS! Nothing else "works" the nasty bile, the sour fermentations and constipation so gently but so thoroughly from the little stomach, liver and bowels like harmless Cascarets. While children usually fight against laxatives and cathartics, they gladly eat a candy Cascarets. Cascarets never gripe the bowels, never sicken, never disappoint the worried mother. Each 10 cent box of Cascarets contains directions for dose for children aged one year old and upwards.

know, and that is, that you are never, never!—what an emphasis his dark gray eyes—they are dark now with some strong emotion—gives to the word—"that you are never to deceive the man who loves you. Go to him with all your heart in your hand, or put the hand when he asks for it behind your back! There is one thing no man worthy of the name will forgive, and that is betrayal. All your heart, Miss Kitty, or none."

Kitty raises her face slowly, and, with a start, he sees it is quite pale—nay, more, that the eyes that are lifted to his are—can he believe his own? are dim and wet!

With a sudden start, he holds out his arm.

"My child," he says, in his softest voice—and what a voice it is! It goes down to the bottom of Kitty's heart—right to the very bottom—"here have I been keeping you in the cold air listening to my prating! Come; let us go in."

Kitty rises, and puts her hand upon his arm. As she does so, a voice close at hand reaches her—a voice which she recognizes at once as her Cousin Ethel's.

"Is it not beautiful? Ah, Mr. Calthrop, if life could be all one pure moonlight night, how sweet it would be! How peaceful—how free from earthly dross one feels on such a night! Look! there is the river, sweeping like a silver snake through the meadow!—what an emblem of—ah!"

My Lady Ethel stops suddenly, and Mr. Calthrop feels the light touch of her arm tighten.

"Who is that?" she asks, in quite a different tone of voice.

"It looks like—it is Lord Sterne and your cousin, Miss Trevelyan."

"Lord Sterne and Kitty?" says Lady Ethel, in anything but a delighted tone.

"Yes, Lady Ethel," says Lord Sterne, who has led Kitty to the balcony, and now turns, as self-possessed, as free from any touch of sentiment, as different from the Lord Sterne of a minute ago, as is smiling from the gloaming of eve. "Yes; Miss Kitty and I have been holding a long and impassioned argument on the important question—should she take the precedent tortoise shell kittens of black?"

"I hope you have won the day—or, rather the night," says Lady Ethel, with a certain cold significance.

"I regret to say that I am—vanquished," retorts Lord Sterne, with a grave assumption of disappointed humility. "Miss Trevelyan is as hard to convince as the most bigoted fanatic, and meets all my arguments with a complacent incredulity and scorn, and, as he speaks, he looks down, with the old mocking smile, into Kitty's open face. But, for once, he does not meet mockery for mockery; the old defiance is not there; and, in place of some sharp, scathing retort, he finds the small, rounded arm drawn from his own, and Kitty, with her small, piquant face held indignantly aloft, walks off.

CHAPTER IX. A CHALLENGE.

"WHY, dear me!" exclaims Kitty, waking the next morning, sitting bolt upright in the little lace shrine which serves for a bed, sitting up and clasping her knees with one hand, while she tosses back the waves of hair that ripple over her face with the other. "Let me see; where am I? Oh, yes, of course; I remember—but why, I've been dreaming, for the first time in my life, I believe; dreaming I was buried alive in a coal mine with a grimy collar—is that the name for 'em?—like Lord Sterne, sitting and groaning beside me. That all comes of moping in the hermit's cave last night," she laughs. "Last night, let me see, how did it all end? Why, yes, of course I walked off after that piece of impertinence about the kittens, and went into the salon, and there they were all card playing and mumbling, and—and—I went to sleep in the middle of it!"

At this last recollection she colors furiously with a momentary mortification, then bursts into a low laugh of amusement.

"Yes, that was it; and they looked shocked, and papa sighed, and Ethel, dear paragon, smiled, and Lord Sterne sneered, and I crept up to bed. What he wanted to sneer for? Didn't he say himself that he was heartily tired of it? I suppose he hadn't the courage to go to sleep. It's wonderful how much I dislike that man!" She thinks this assertion over once or twice, and repeats it, picking the dainty counterpane with one little pink forefinger meditatively. "Yes, I'm more sure than ever that I dislike him. What does he mean by talking sentiment, as Regy calls it, one-half hour and then sneering at one to one's face the next? I suppose he thinks 'I am a little schoolgirl he can play tricks with. That comes of being caught romping with Master Reginald. Oh, those horrid ruins! To think that I should fall into his arms. I'd rather have tumbled; I told him so—yes, I must be even with him. If one could only make him look stupid for one minute, and so pay him back; but," with a heavy sigh and a fling back upon the pillow, "you can't. I hate a great man that never makes a mistake or looks foolish; last night, even, when he sat there with his head in his hands and his face as long as a kite, he didn't look foolish as another man would; you couldn't laugh at him. Now there is one comfort in poor James," she colors a little at the name, "you can laugh at him, all day if you like, and enjoy it. Poor James. Well!"

This last ejaculation is uttered aloud in response to a sudden, heavy bang at the door which is evidently caused by a strong and willing hand.

"Well, what is it? who is it?"

"Kitty, are you awake?" comes back Lord Reginald's voice, properly subdued out of consideration for the occupants of the neighboring rooms.

"No," answers Kitty, instantly; "sound asleep. What is it?"

"Look here," says Lord Reginald, in a hushed voice, and in the tone which one person on the outside of the door uses when he wants to impress the other person inside. "Don't make a row."

"I won't," retorts Kitty, "the one you are making is quite enough."

"Come out of bed," says the boy, daringly, "and get close to the door, I want to whisper."

"I shall do no such thing," says Kitty, indignantly, but slipping out of bed the next moment and gliding noiselessly to the door.

"Well, what is it? I'm half frozen with the cold."

"Cold!" scoffs Lord Reginald contemptuously. "It's hot enough to make a nigger, you ought to have been up hours ago."

"Ought I? If that's all you have to say I'll go back to bed for the rest of the day."

"Look here, Kitty, I've come to do you a friendly turn. Look sharp and have your bath and come down to the stables, I'll wait for you."

"I dare say!" says Kitty suspiciously.

"No larks, on my honor!" asseverates the boy. "You look sharp, and with this parting exhortation he runs off.

The Navy Clearing

Constitutional Changes in Germany --- Austria
Breaking Up--Bolsheviki in Russia Oppose Allies Entry.

WILL DISARM SHIPS.
LONDON, Nov. 25. A flotilla of mine sweepers left the Firth of Forth this morning to clear a passage to Kiel for the British squadron which, it is understood, will disarm and intern the remnants of the German navy. Wilhelmshaven will also be visited by the squadron, which it is reported, will comprise one battleship and a flotilla of destroyers.

KEEPING ARMISTICE.
ROME, Nov. 24. Italian troops occupied Innsbruck, the capital of the Austrian Tyrol, on Friday, in accordance with the terms of the Austrian armistice. They also took possession of Landeck, west of Innsbruck, on the In River.

ALLIED TROOPS MEET OPPOSITION.
ARCHANGEL, Nov. 24. (By the A.P.)—The Entente and American troops have encountered strong opposition both on the Volga and on the railway. The condition of the country it has been necessary to confine operations to the waterway and the railway. As the upper part of the river is deeper than at its mouth, the Bolshevik craft, equipped with large guns, have been better able to manoeuvre than the Entente ships and have prevented the occupation of Kotlas by the Entente. A line is under discussion in military circles for the creation of a voluntary army of Russian relief, should the Allies agree upon the policy of freeing Russia.

NEW CONSTITUTION.
COPENHAGEN, Nov. 25. An agreement has been reached between the German Soldiers' and Workmen's Council and the Government, it is officially announced in Berlin. The agreement provides: 1, all political power is to be in the hands of the German Socialist Republic and the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council; 2, their aim is to defend and develop what has been achieved by the revolution and to suppress all counter-revolutions; 3, pending the election of representatives of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Councils to an Executive Council of the German Republic, the Executive Council in Berlin is to exercise its functions; 4, the appointment and dismissal of all members of the various legislative bodies of the Republic, and until the final constitution is established, appointments are to be made by the Central Executive Council; 5, before the cabinet appoints assistant ministers the Executive Council must be consulted; 6, a convention of 2 deputies drawn from the Soldiers' and Workmen's Councils is to be summoned as soon as possible.

BELIEVED A BLUFF.
LONDON, Nov. 25. This morning's newspapers display prominently the German advice regarding the agreement between the Soldiers' and Workmen's Councils and the Government, which is regarded as a development of the greatest importance and tantamount to the overthrow of the Ebert-Haase combination and the adoption, at least theoretically, of the existing Russian system. The Daily Mail while pointing out the similarity to the developments in Russia, suggests that the new step is a part of a "big bluff" aimed at persuading the Allies that the old Germany is defunct.

CUTTING DOWN WAR EXPENDITURE.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. Naval estimates for 1920 have been reduced $1,150,215,000 as the result of the signing of the armistice. Secretary McAdoo was informed to-day by Secretary Daniels. The original estimate on a war basis was $2,644,007,000, and this has been reduced to $1,493,792,000.

LIMITING REVENUE BILL.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. By a strict party vote the Senate Financial Committee to-night decided to recommend that the yield from the 1920 Revenue Bill be limited to $4,000,000,000.

THE GERMAN SITUATION.
LONDON, Nov. 25. (British Wireless Service.)—The latest reports received in England from Germany indicate that the internal situation there has reached a critical stage. Although a proclamation has been issued declaring that all political power is in the hands of the German Socialist Republic and the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council, opposition to such a Government is growing outside Berlin.

stage. Although a proclamation has been issued declaring that all political power is in the hands of the German Socialist Republic and the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council, opposition to such a Government is growing outside Berlin.

OUTBREAKS EXPECTED IN PERU.
LIMA, Peru, Nov. 25. Peruvian newspapers call upon the Government to request a cessation of anti-Peruvian demonstrations in Chile. They declare that if the demonstrations continue, anti-Chilean outbreaks may be expected in Peru. The demonstrations grew out of the differences between Chile on the one side and Peru and Bolivia on the other concerning the border provinces of Tacna and Arica.

BOLSHEVIK PRISONERS DIE.
VLADIVOSTOK, Nov. 22. Half dead from starvation and disease, many beyond help, 1,321 survivors of the original total of 2,100 Bolshevik prisoners and refugees in a train sent across Siberia by the Czech-Slovak troops fighting in Samara, European Russia, have arrived at Nikolai, near Vladivostok. The journey from the Ural Mountains to the Pacific Coast occupied six weeks. The survivors reached Nikolai in forty cars. The train carried no provisions and was without sanitary equipment of any kind. Of the eight hundred persons missing from the original total, some were shot while trying to escape from the train, others lost their lives by throwing themselves from the car windows. They loaded the inmates of the jails into trains indiscriminately along with the Bolshevik prisoners of war. The Red Cross at Vladivostok has rushed doctors to Nikolai to aid the arrivals who are in a terrible condition. Some persons regret the ground after being removed from the cars. Other train loads of human freight in similar straits are now on their way eastward over the trans-Siberian railroad.

AUSTRIA BREAKS UP.
VIENNA, Nov. 25. The biggest fact apparent in Austria's breaking up of house keeping is that there is no poignant regret among the common people. The sentiment generally found was expressed by a soldier the correspondent met among the rivers of men retreating from the Italian front. He said now the war is over and we are brothers, whether French, British or Americans, any kind of a brother is a good one. Along the line coming up from Trieste to Vienna, the correspondent talked with dozens of officers who were disappointed greatly because their defeat had been at the hands of the Italians, whose military qualities they had always scorned. "If anybody else had done it we would not mind," said one general, who said that the defeat might be attributed to three reasons: Hungary's withdrawal of support on troops, the war tiredness of Austrians and President Wilson's notes culminating in his refusal to treat with Emperor Charles. These reasons he said brought about the final smash with the soldiers refusing to fight when attacked by the Italians.

TO DISCUSS ARMISTICE NAVAL CONDITIONS.
ROME, Nov. 25. An Inter-Allied Naval Committee meeting soon in Rome to discuss the naval conditions of the armistice with Austria, according to a despatch from Corfu, to the Corriere D'Italia. The message, which states that the information is from reliable sources, says the discussion will not be with a view to changing the conditions, but to settle upon the best way to carry them out.

LITTLE WILLIE'S LONELY HOME.
AMSTERDAM, Nov. 21. Morderland, a hamlet consisting of a score of small farmsteads and fishermen's huts on the bleak, lonely island of Wieringen, which is situated some distance from the Dutch naval station at Helder, is the home assigned to the entertained former German Crown Prince. The local pastor's humble two storied residence has been leased furnished for six months, and here the former Crown Prince will live. The house, which is without the slightest attraction, is off the beaten track, and is hardly ever visited by strangers. The hamlet itself is inhabited for the most part by mus-capital. Only the formal sessions at the concluding stages will be held in Versailles. The only active string now going on are those of the Joint Armistice Committee which holds daily sessions at Spa, the former German headquarters. General von Winterfeldt is the German military representative at the Conference.

BRINGING HOME U. S. SHIPS.
PARIS, Nov. 24. The American naval establishment in European ports and waters is being reduced rapidly since the armistice. It is intended to order home soon all small craft, destroyers and submarines used principally as convoys, except for a limited number for patrol and escort duty.

EX-EMPEROR FEARS BOLSHEVIKISM.
VIENNA, Nov. 24. (By the A. P.)—Declaring that there is pressing need in Austria for assistance from the Allies and the United States, former Emperor Charles of Austria Hungary insisted to-day that the danger of Bolshevism is very great in his country. It was in conversation with a correspondent of the Associated Press that the former sovereign told of the peril which was impending.

N. F. Excursion Club.
Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—Would you kindly give the following space in your paper. Now than an Armistice has been signed, and the end of the World War is in sight, a number of Newfoundlanders, for many years residents of Boston, have got together and formed what is known as the "Newfoundland Excursion Club" for the purpose of visiting the land of their birth some time during the summer months of 1919, or as soon as possible thereafter.

IN A HURRY.
BASLE, Nov. 25. (Havas)—The Hungarian Government has requested the Allies to hold an immediate discussion of peace terms, according to reports reaching Swiss newspapers.

ALLIES IN BLACK SEA.
PARIS, Nov. 25. The Bosphorus having been cleared of mines, Allied warships have entered the Black Sea and visited various ports from Varna, around the southern coast of Novorossysk.

MINERS DEMANDS.
BERLIN, Nov. 24. Via Copenhagen (by the A.P.)—The Silesian coal miners are demanding a six hour work day and thirty marks as the daily wage and are threatening strikes which, under the existing transportation difficulties would menace Berlin's coal supply.

FRENCH M. P. RELATES EXPERIENCE.
PARIS, Nov. 25. Deputy Ingels, Socialist, was welcomed to the Chamber of Deputies to-day after being a prisoner of war for two years in Germany. The wildest enthusiasm marked his entrance to the Chamber. He related instances of his own experiences as a prisoner and also other Frenchmen's who were also held prisoners by the Germans. "I have seen soldiers brutally kick women and children, and during the time I was condemned prisoner I heard the most abominable things from the guards where women and young girls, some of whom were less than fifteen years old, were imprisoned."

BIG LINER SAILS.
LIVERPOOL, Nov. 25. The Cunard line steamship Mauretania sailed from Liverpool this morning bound for New York. The vessel carried a large number of passengers.

PROBABLY PARIS.
PARIS, Nov. 25. (By the A. P.)—The conferences on the preliminaries of peace probably will be held in Paris instead of at Versailles, owing to the superior accommodations and conveniences in the Girls! Have Wavy, Thick, Glossy Hair Free From Dandruff

Save your hair! Double its beauty in a few moments—try this!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scrub robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots fash, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If you hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

When fruit leaves a stain on the teeth, it should be removed at once by rubbing on a little salt.

Pity The Doctor.

By RUTH CAMERON.

A friend and I were comparing notes the other day on how differently our doctors had treated cases of the ill-renowned "flu" which had occurred in our respective families. Her doctor had been strong for fresh-air treatment, and had pooh-poohed the value of gargles and sprays as a preventive.

My doctor had laid much stress on fresh air, but had been keen for warmth and had assured me to my capacity of nurse, that I would find gargles an excellent preventive, and in several other details had differed from her doctor.

Not One Case Lost Out Of Five Hundred.

Now her physician is a town specialist with a very fine reputation. Mine is a country doctor not so well known, but possessing the desirable distinction of having handled 573 cases (at that time) of the influenza, and not lost one.

Each brought his patient through very finely; but whether one won his case because of his treatment and the other in spite of it, or both because of, or both in spite of, who can say?

Do you know, I pity doctors?

We Expect So Much of Them.

We expect so much of them, we look up to them as almost demi-gods, and they have so little power, so little knowledge, in comparison with the vastness of their subject.

Understand, I am not decrying the profession. No one honors it and the splendid men in it more than I. I only mean to bring home to those who perhaps have not thought of it, what a burden of perplexity rests on the shoulders of the average physician, and what courage it must take to bear it with the patience and the good cheer most of them show.

Every Patient A Professional And A Personal Crisis.

True, "Our neighbors' troubles do not keep us awake nights"; but looking at it only in the professional light, every case is the doctor's own problem, a part of his reputation. And besides that, I think most successful doctors do have some sympathetic

Milady's Boudoir

No woman should be flat-chested. If she is not full-busted, she may, at least, have a chest expansion that will cover any such deficiencies. Deep breathing will, of course, do this, and the throwing of cold water on the chest every morning will develop the bust; but it is well to have some systematic exercise as well to give a firmness to the bust and a correct chest position. There is no better exercise for this than to clasp the hands at the waist, palms outward. Then stretch the hands, still clasped, as far from the waist line, downward, as possible. Do this ten times each morning, breathing deeply the while.

I am giving you herein a formula for developing the bust. Do remember that in all massage of the bust the utmost care must be taken or the result might be very serious. Never should anything but gentle massage be used for the bust. The bust developer is as follows: Lanolin one ounce. Cocoa butter, one ounce; sweet almond oil, once ounce. Put in a small bowl set in hot water until melted. Beat together and cool. Each night after laying hot cloths on bust, rub it in by massaging.

There is hardly a woman who does not fuss and fume when her hips begin to plump. Naturally, increased size of hips adds maturity to the figure, and girlish lines bid fair to be submerged.

The rolling exercise will reduce the hips, but it must be done each morning, and not three times this week and once next. Lie flat on the floor, place both hands along the sides of the body, and proceed to roll yourself about the floor for at least three minutes and possibly five. You will very likely find it more comfortable to place a couple of old quilts upon the floor during the exercise. However, the harder the surface upon which you roll the more effective is the exercise.

Rats dislike sulphur—therefore sprinkle it about any place they haunt. Baked pumpkin is good served on the rind with gravy.

THE NEW RESPONSIBILITY.

Oh, we've got to pull together, when the work we're in is so big. For the truth is that it is triumphant and the peace that we have won; we may let down just a little from the striving and the strain. But as soon as we have rested we must go to work again.

Oh, we've got to pull together for the bigger, better day. There are problems grave before us, there are doubts to clear away. We have fought for right and justice; now we've got to make it plain. By the manner of our living that we have not fought in vain.

We have triumphed over the tyrant, we have made his capacious cease. We have fought for human freedom and a just and righteous peace; but our tasks are uncompleted; we must prove by all we are that we served no selfish purpose when we sent our boys afar.

We have sacrificed for freedom, side by side to death we've stood. Now we still must stand together for our nation's greater good. There are many tasks before us, we shall all be sorely tried; we must live the peace of justice for which every soldier died.

A Griffith Story.

The following incident was told to me recently by Mr. W. D. Griffith, the producer of the war film on which our new serial is based.

As he stood one evening chatting with the manager of a big theatre where "Hearts of the World" was being played, he was accosted by an officer in uniform.

"I know that there is no 'fake' about your film, Mr. Griffith," said the officer gravely, "for I have just seen my brother killed before my eyes."

Mr. Griffith tells me that three of his staff of nine camera operators who were engaged for over a year on the Western Front taking photographs for the play, have been decorated by the French Government. Between them they took over fifty miles of pictures, of which about two miles were actually utilized for the story as now shown on the screen.

Honoring the Oyster

OF COLCHESTER.
The ceremony of opening the Colchester (Eng.) oyster fishery took place recently, when the corporation steamed in a dredger over the fishery, and the mayor having made the first haul of oysters, according to a custom dating back 800 years, the civic dignitaries consumed gin and gingerbread. An oyster luncheon followed. The corporation has presented 10,000 oysters to the military hospitals at Colchester.

Tasty Dishes

MADE OF FISH.
Fried Codfish.
Three pounds codfish, boiled in water with a little vinegar for 10 minutes. Make a thin batter with one egg, flour and milk and salt. Cut codfish in slices, dip in batter and fry in deep hot lard to a golden brown.
Broiled Smoked Halibut with Poached Eggs.
Select the thinnest and hardest halibut; soak twenty-four hours in cold water, with the flesh side down, only cover with water. Broil over hot coals; serve with poached eggs and dish them with the halibut as if for ham.

Fillet of Halibut Sauce.
Mix the yolks of three eggs, three tablespoons olive oil one-third of a cup of vinegar and one-fourth of a teaspoon salt. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly until the mixture thickens then add one tablespoon finely chopped parsley and a few grains of cayenne.
Boiled Halibut.
To one pound of halibut add a cup of hot water and let it come to a boil; add one slice of onion and a little mixed cloves. Boil slowly five minutes, then add a half cup cream or milk, or if the former cannot be obtained, add butter the size of an egg and thicken with a tablespoon of flour; add two hard boiled eggs, cut into square pieces. Serve with mashed potatoes.
Fish Timbals With Normandy Sauce.
Remove the skin and bones from a thick piece of halibut, chop fine and force through sieve; there should be one and a third cupfuls pointed in a mortar, adding gradually the whites of two eggs, then add one and a fourth cups of heavy cream. Season with salt, pepper and cayenne. Turn into buttered timbal molds, set them in a pan of hot water covered with buttered paper and bake until fish is firm. Turn on a serving dish and pour the Normandy sauce around them.

PEACETIME PRICES.

When doves of peace are soaring round, and eagles quit their yapping, will things cost just as much per pound as when the hosts were scrapping? The prices rise without a break, the snowed summits striding; no effort does it seem to take to keep the blamed things hiking. The news is flashed across the sea that some one's goat is taken; up goes the price of prunes and tea, and succotash and bacon. A bunch of kings have soaked their crowns, we read in late dispatches; up goes the price of hand-meadows, and pointer pups and matches. Some heartless rulers vainly try to smile while taking biters; up goes the price of whiskers dye, of applejack and fritters. It's easy turning "reasons" loose, most any fake suffices, the punkest sort of cheap excuse will do for raising prices. When war dogs crawl into their den, convinced that war is cheezy, will bringing prices down again, think you, be quite so easy? Will Jinks, the grocer, blithely say, "We've had good news from Sweden, so I can cut the price to-day, on all the things you're needin'?" Will Grimes, the clothier, say, "It's nice to know that Russia's better, so I will now reduce the price of that star-spangled sweater? let's hope such things will come to pass, when doves of peace are soaring, and meanwhile, as we dig the brass, cut out the useless roaring.

Salt and Pickled Herring.

Although there are still a few offerings of split herring on the basis of $8.50 St. John's, Nfld., which certain factors in the trade have been considering, it may be said that Newfoundland splits of good quality are held firmly at the prevailing quotations of $12 and 13 per barrel. The sale a few weeks ago of several lots at $12.50 ex-dock cannot be considered as having weakened the market in any material respect, for the sellers "forced the market," so to speak, and the pressure of their offerings naturally had its influence on the price of the goods thus offered. In most quarters holders are quoting within the range, many holding for $12.50, regardless of the size of the fish. Importers have been further strengthened in their ideas by the fact that packers in Newfoundland have been quoting on a slightly higher basis. Round herring is now offering in New York, and the quotation of holders is $13 and 14 for large, while medium herring are quoted variously from $11 to $12.50 per barrel. There are only limited quantities of round herring this season on at all. In Newfoundland, however, the price continues slightly higher than splits, the differential being in proportion to the high and low level of prices here. Other salt and pickled herring are in light demand, and it is noted that marinated herring in 10-pound pails is now quoted on the basis of $1.30 and 1.50, in various quarters, the inside price being a reduction of the former quotation of $1.40—N. Y. Fishing Gazette.

Great Rescue Home Scheme.

One of the great needs of Newfoundland at present, is a large and up-to-date institution for the taking care of wayward and unfortunate girls. The Salvation Army, the last winter, had to turn away six girls in a week, pleading for admission, and only later three more were turned away, two of them without home and mother, because their facilities were not equal to the demand. The Army answers "his question by inaugurating a scheme for a new and up-to-date Rescue Home, Maternity Hospital and Children's Clinic, in the city of St. John's, for all of Newfoundland, without regard to denomination, so that any one in need and distress on this line, can have the full benefits of an institution that can meet their needs. Mr. F. C. Alward, the Manager of the Continental Life Insurance Company, Toronto, has been detailed by Commissioner Richards, the head of the Salvation Army in Eastern Canada, Newfoundland and the Bermudas, to handle the scheme.

Mr. F. C. Alward has had large experience in similar campaigns of this kind, and in securing money for great and worthy schemes. The Salvation Army has Homes of this kind in the principal cities of Canada and America, and many other countries, and has wide, hearty and successful experience on this line, and work of this character placed in their hands is not a matter of chance, but by the blessing of God an assured success. Because of the worthiness of the object and its great importance to this increasingly important Dominion, the building should be one to fully meet the need. Now that the door is thrown wide open for the meeting of its requirements, the heartiest co-operation of all classes should be given for the consummation of so worthy an object. The Army seeing what is required to meet the pressing demands, is asking for forty to fifty thousand dollars for this purpose. The need cannot be properly met with less. Some of the very first men and women of the city, seeing the great need, and the opportune time to be now, are giving their unqualified endorsement and co-operation, and are subscribing to the undertaking.

Seal Returns.

After an absence of nearly twenty-four days, the s.s. Seal, Capt. Randell, arrived in port from Labrador yesterday. She went to St. John's, where Rev. Mr. Stewart landed. From there he left on his 1,800 mile journey across the frozen Labrador to his station in Ungava. Leaving here on the 2nd inst., the Seal made good time to Cartwright. She was detained there from Thursday to Saturday, having a large quantity of freight to be landed for the Hudson Bay Co. Thence, she made a direct run to McDevick, which was reached Sunday morning, a terrible snow storm raging at that time. She remained there because of the storm and a N.E. gale until Wednesday. That night, she reached Rigolet and discharged the remainder of her cargo. She remained here until Saturday, during which time a storm, the equal of which Capt. Randell declares he never witnessed, raged. Bateau was not reached until Sunday night. They stayed there until Wednesday forenoon, when the ship left and arrived at Battle Harbor that night, having called at intermediate ports. A little delay was experienced at Twillingate owing to there being a considerable quantity of freight awaiting. The Seal reports Spanish Influenza to be very prevalent on Labrador. At Bolster's Rock, everyone was ill, and one or two deaths had occurred. Two deaths were registered at Indian Tickle, and three at Cartwright. One case was also reported at Rigolet. The following passengers came by her: Rev. Mr. Picher, Mr. J. T. Croucher, of Battle Har., and the latter's housekeeper and a man named Dyson, who came south to join the regiment. The ship is discharging cargo at the Furness Withy Co.'s wharf.

Klark-Urban Co.

George M. Cohen's mystic drama, "The Seven Keys of Baldpate," in two acts, prologue and epilogue, attracted a full house last evening and everyone present was delighted with the play and the renditions of the players. The plot of the story is that a novelist accepts a friend's wager that he cannot write a ten thousand word novel in twenty-four hours at a resort agreed upon by both. The latter proves to be his summer inn, which is supposed to be haunted, and is situated on the top of a mountain. The novelist completes the novel in the given time, naming it "The Seven Keys of Baldpate." The G. C. C. orchestra, under direction of Mr. Arthur Bulley, rendered excellent selections during the evening. "Seven Keys to Baldpate" will be repeated to-night.

Another Small-pox Case.
