Sweet Eva!

CHAPTER XLIV.
Philip kissed her hair.
"You do love me!" he whispered.
"You know I do."
"And you've forgiven me—for every-thing?"
"Yes."
"Look at me then."
"I—I can't."
"Eva—you're not shy of me?" Philip's voice was a little shaky. "And we're supposed to be such an old, married couple," he went on, trying to laugh. He raised her face, his hand beneath her chin.
"Open your eyes."
After a moment she obeyed.
"Say—Philip, I love you."
"You know I do."
"I don't you've never told me properly, Darling—please!"
Her lips moved, then suddenly she broke down.
"I can't—I'm so afraid."
"Eva of me?"
"No—no—of the future, and the past—of everything! Supposing—supposing you were to find out that after all—you—didn't—really—care?"
There was a little silence, then Philip said in a queer, uncertain voice—
"You're not—you're not—really—afraid of that—are you?"
He took his arms from about her and moved back a step.
Eva stood with drooping head, the tears running down her face, then slowly she raised her eyes, and looked at her husband.
There was very much of the boy about him, still, there always would be—but just now he was a boy with a man's unhappy eyes, that seemed to be dumbly pleading for a trust and forgiveness which he knew were still being withheld.
Perhaps in that moment of silence she understood just what these last weeks had meant to him—just how much suffering, and despair, and cruel unhappiness, for a little quivering smile of tenderness crossed her face—
"Philip," she said in a whisper, but now he would not help her—he turned away, and leaning his arm on the mantelshelf stared down into the fire morosely—she did not trust him! how then could she really love him?
He counted the seconds by his heart beats till she spoke again.
"Philip—" and now there was a tremendous laugh in her voice. "I was much happier—just now—before you went so far away—"
Philip turned.
"So you love me?" he asked huskily.
"And trust me?—and believe in me?"
"With all my heart."
Philip held out his arms.
Peter Denison was half asleep in the library when, some time later, his brother-in-law thrust a sheepish head round the door.
"Oh—er—there you are, then," he said lamely.
He came a step into the room.
"I've just told the maids to get us some breakfast," he explained stily.
"Dare say you'll be glad of some—eh?"
"He looked round.
"Where's Calligan?"

race of Hutton ran in her veins. She was a Hutton, without one of the characteristics which distinguished the Rays. While Martin Ray made a hero of Oliver Cromwell, and worshipped him as the saviour of his country, Leah hated the name, and loved the memory of the handsome, graceful, graceless Stuarts; while Martin saw nothing but heroism in the Paris mob who dragged their beautiful queen to the scaffold, Leah loved and admired Marie Antoinette. So through all the pages of history; and yet he thought to make her a denouncer of royalty!
Leah Ray was just sixteen, and beautiful as the opening bud of a June rose; grace, dignity, and passion were marked in every line of her face. The brow was somewhat low and broad, full of idealism and thought; the eyes were dark, the eyebrows straight. It was a face perfect in shape and harmony, with a proud but sensitive mouth—a face difficult to read. The lightness and brightness of girlhood were not on it; it was slightly mystical and dreamy, and the lustrous eyes had a shadow in them.
The noble head, the graceful figure and its movements, the mass of dark wavy hair, so fine and abundant, delighted Martin Ray. The more beautiful she was, the more sure was she to influence men. He never thought whether she would be willing to devote her young life to the propagation of his ideas, whether she would care to give up all the allurments and pleasures of the world to dedicate herself to the people. He had never thought that she would refuse the mission he had appointed for her, The man who preached liberty to the world never dreamed of giving it to his own daughter; he who openly taught rebellion against all authority never imagined that his daughter would disobey him.

CHAPTER IV.
Martin Ray was living in one of the crowded streets of Manchester. The north was better suited to him than the south, because the great centers of industry were there. For some few months he had been unfortunate. Heaven had blessed the bountiful land with a fair, warm summer; the harvest was plentiful, the fruit ripened in rich abundance; there was a general air of prosperity; "no foreign war caused anxiety and agitation at home; orders from abroad had come in freely, and people were busy at work. There was no time for considering how the land and money of the rich were to be divided; men did not care to be drawn from their work by agitation of any kind; and Martin Ray had had fewer lectures to give. The contributions from different committees came in slowly. He was compelled to be content with writing pamphlets, which, before they were published, underwent so much revision as to make them pointless. He was all the more eager to bring Leah forward.
"The girl has genius—she has fire and power," he said to himself. "My mantle must fall upon her. Men will listen to words from that beautiful mouth that they will not hear from mine."
He had trained her splendidly. She was well-read and thoughtful. She was a girl of magnificent talent, full of energy and the restless fire that proclaims genius. He had never told her until now what his intentions were with regard to her; and on this day he had called her into the miserable little room he dignified by the name of study, to communicate his plans to her.
"You have grown very beautiful, Leah," he said, looking at her quite calmly—"very beautiful; and it is time you know for what purpose Heaven has sent you that same beauty."
The girl smiled and blushed. She did not remember that her father had ever used such words to her before.
Martin Ray went on—
"You have a grand mission in life, Leah. You must not be as other girls; you must not think that dress, society, enjoyment, love, and marriage are the end and aim of your existence. You have a far more important future in store for you."
She looked up at him in wonder.
"I did not know that I had any mission, father," she said, quietly. "What is it?"

"Open your eyes."
After a moment she obeyed.
"Say—Philip, I love you."
"You know I do."
"I don't you've never told me properly, Darling—please!"
Her lips moved, then suddenly she broke down.
"I can't—I'm so afraid."
"Eva of me?"
"No—no—of the future, and the past—of everything! Supposing—supposing you were to find out that after all—you—didn't—really—care?"
There was a little silence, then Philip said in a queer, uncertain voice—
"You're not—you're not—really—afraid of that—are you?"
He took his arms from about her and moved back a step.
Eva stood with drooping head, the tears running down her face, then slowly she raised her eyes, and looked at her husband.
There was very much of the boy about him, still, there always would be—but just now he was a boy with a man's unhappy eyes, that seemed to be dumbly pleading for a trust and forgiveness which he knew were still being withheld.
Perhaps in that moment of silence she understood just what these last weeks had meant to him—just how much suffering, and despair, and cruel unhappiness, for a little quivering smile of tenderness crossed her face—
"Philip," she said in a whisper, but now he would not help her—he turned away, and leaning his arm on the mantelshelf stared down into the fire morosely—she did not trust him! how then could she really love him?
He counted the seconds by his heart beats till she spoke again.
"Philip—" and now there was a tremendous laugh in her voice. "I was much happier—just now—before you went so far away—"
Philip turned.
"So you love me?" he asked huskily.
"And trust me?—and believe in me?"
"With all my heart."
Philip held out his arms.
Peter Denison was half asleep in the library when, some time later, his brother-in-law thrust a sheepish head round the door.
"Oh—er—there you are, then," he said lamely.
He came a step into the room.
"I've just told the maids to get us some breakfast," he explained stily.
"Dare say you'll be glad of some—eh?"
"He looked round.
"Where's Calligan?"

A Stitch in Time

Quick action is the only hope when kidney disease appears.
There is a whole train of dreadfully painful and fatal ailments which soon follow any neglect to get the kidneys right. Among others are rheumatism, lumbago, Bright's disease, hardening of the arteries and high blood pressure.
In Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you will find a treatment which is both quick and thorough.
Mr. C. E. Rayms, Lindale, Ala., writes: "I suffer from kidney disease and lame back for more than a year. A friend of mine one day told me of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and seeing upon his advice I tried them. After I had taken one box I felt better, so I continued until I had used five boxes. By this time I felt as well and strong as ever, and glad to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to anyone suffering as I did."

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

MOTHERS AND FATHERS ARE HUMAN BEINGS.
You think parents have got some claim to a little good time once in a while, as well as children?
"But a child at that age up at this hour!" persisted the critic with that dogged reiteration of her own point of view which is the sole argument of a certain type of woman.
What do you think about it?
Only One Night in Two Years.
I know it is conventional to consider it an unparadise sin to keep a child up for a grown-up's pleasure. And so it is that the thing occurs night after night. But once in a while—once or twice a year—can't the child be sacrificed for the parent, since the parent is being sacrificed for the child all the rest of the time?
Of course the child's health should not be sacrificed for the parent's pleasure. But I cannot feel that for a youngster to lose some sleep a few times in a year means that.
It really seems to me that, as a generation, we are inclined to go too far in our feeling that everything should be sacrificed for children. True, their need for a proper foundation of health and education is vitally important; but cannot both these needs be met without quite so much emphasis and sacrifice as are often given them?
Is Such Sacrifice Necessary?
I know a family who have just settled down in a suburb of a big city from which the husband has to make an hour and a half journey each way to his work. That's three hours a day out of his life. The reason is that there are better schools for the son of the family in that town.
That's the sort of lavish sacrifice I mean. Are such sacrifices necessary? Can they not be carried to foolish extremes? Are they always for the child's ultimate good? Imagine the father, utterly worn out by hard work and the long trip catching pneumonia and dying. Such things have happened. Is there not a happier medium of consideration for both children and parents?

The Lost City.

ROMANCE OF BURIED TREASURE.
For four hundred years and more men have been searching for the lost city, where the enormous treasure of the Incas was hidden, and success has at last been achieved.
When Pizarro and the Conquistadores captured Cuzco, the capital of the Incas in Peru, where at that time gold was one of the commonest things, they found to their disappointment and chagrin the great treasure chambers in Cuzco had been stripped empty, and only a short time before, they tortured the natives by the hundred, but not one divulged the destination of the treasure.
A Perilous Journey.
Early last century, after Peru threw off the yoke of the Spaniards, the Peruvian Indians loosened their tongues. According to their traditions, the treasures had been hidden at Choquequirau, which itself means "Cradle of Gold"—somewhere far up in the Andes, where the frontiers of Brazil and Peru now meet. Faithful to their ancient rulers, the family of which still exist there and in utter poverty, none had gone near Choquequirau; and in time even the whereabouts of it had become forgotten. In recent years, different expeditions sought for the lost city, but in vain. It fell to an American, Hiram Bingham, to find it. And to-day a company is digging for the buried treasures.
Bingham found the lost city within eight days' hard travel from Cuzco. Most of the time he and his party were hanging on to the side of a mountain almost by their eyelids. They had to descend into an hitherto unknown valley 6,000ft. deep; cross a rapid and dangerous river there by means of a suspension bridge constructed out of woody creepers; by the Indians of the party; wade through a tall jungle, so dense with shrubs and creepers that it was necessary to cut a track every foot of the sixteen miles; and then climb up 8,000ft. of steep, precipitous mountain, unscalable save by one track much destroyed by time and weather, that apparently had been used in Incan times. In the mists at the top, 18,000ft. above the sea, they found the city.

To Amend the Volstead Act.
Amendment of the Volstead act so as to permit the manufacture of light wines and beer is urged by the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor in a declaration issued on Sunday. Recalling the unanimous decision of the Federation last year to ask for such a change, the council says that that conclusion was not reached until after it had caused an exhaustive investigation of the effects of the Volstead act to be made. That investigation showed, according to the council, a general disregard of the law among all classes of people, including those who made the law; the creation of thousands of moonshiners among both country and city dwellers, as well as of an army of bootleggers; an amazing increase in the traffic in poisons and deadly concoctions and drugs, and an increased rate of insanity, blindness and crime among the users thereof; an increase in unemployment due to the loss of employment by workers in forty-five industries directly or indirectly connected with the manufacture of liquors, and an increase in taxes to city, state and national governments amounting to approximately $1,000,000,000 a year. In view of these results of the extreme interpretation of the prohibition amendment contained in the Volstead act, as well as the enormous expense of "the attempt to enforce that unenforceable legislation," the council concludes that "the act is an improper interpretation of the prohibition amendment; that it is a social and a moral failure, and that it is a dangerous breeder of discontent and of contempt for all law."
Labor for Light Wines and Beer.
This protest is not directed against the Eighteenth Amendment itself, but the council contends that the Amendment "under the present drastic and unreasonable legislative interpretation that it was necessary to cut a track every foot of the sixteen miles; and then climb up 8,000ft. of steep, precipitous mountain, unscalable save by one track much destroyed by time and weather, that apparently had been used in Incan times. In the mists at the top, 18,000ft. above the sea, they found the city."
The council declares that the amendment in order that the law may be enforceable and enforced, and that the people of our country "may not suffer from an unjust and fanatical interpretation of the Constitution." The council urges, therefore, that all citizens, in every walk of life, demand from their representatives and senators in Washington immediate relief from the unwarranted restrictions contained in the Volstead act. It furthermore suggests to the citizenship of the country the wisdom and advisability of bearing in mind the attitude toward the issue presented of officeholders and aspirants to office in coming elections in order that there may be restored to the people the lawful use of wholesome beer and light wines, which, it contends, should be rightfully declared non-intoxicating beverages. Action of the kind suggested would afford an opportunity for testing public sentiment on the subject, but it may be remarked that it will not be enough for the people who desire the change to confine their attention to the legislators at Washington; they must follow a like course in respect to members of state legislatures.—Bradstreet's.

AT HOME.
When evening, balmy time of peace, succeeds the busy day, I sometimes take my aunt and niece to see a moral play. More often, though, we stay at home, and, while the women sew, I read aloud a helpful poem or tale by E. P. Roe. The evening is a thing of charm, a boon to dames and men; and home we're snug and safe from harm, as good to roost as (let's see) the streets, throughout the night, the rolsters proceed; they make the solemn hours a fright, the way they die and bleed. Red murder stalks along the slums, assassins slug and slay, and in the dawn the crowner comes, and loads men in a dray. The victims of the knife and gun might years of comfort know, if they at home would look for fun, and read the works of Roe. Back numbers like my niece and aunt will stay at home with me, but nearly all the young ones part some midnight larks to see. A goodly book beside the lamp is much too tame and stale; far better trot with tough and vamp, and wind up in a jail; it is a punishment, they think, to spend a night at home, and where the bright lights glare and blink on giddy feet they roam. But to the street that roars and rages the wise youth does not go; he seats himself in wicker chairs, and reads some books by Roe.
Would Drown the Old and the Children.
Wholesale slaughter of children and aged and sick, so that Doukhobors of Western Canada may roam the country unhindered, as a vagrant class, in protest against extortionate taxation is contemplated by Peter Veregin, leader of the Doukhobors, according to the Winnipeg Free Press.
According to M. M. Kottinoff, Man-

AN APPEAL!

There are 400 people in St. John's and 450 in the out-har-bors who owe me money for the last two years. I sent out over 700 letters within the last ten days asking for payment. Some responded, but very few; more than my profit for the last two years is still owed me. My whole capital is out on credit and it is impossible to do business when we cannot get paid within a reasonable time. I have my everyday demands to meet to keep up stock and pay wages. I give out my goods freely, and intend to do so, but I want payment within a reasonable time, but when the time goes into one, two and three years, it is out of all reason; and I must make this appeal to those who are inclined to pay me, so I can continue business. If they cannot pay me all at once, let me have what they can.

Their extreme attention to this appeal will greatly oblige

Whooping Cough.

Mr. Robert Wilks, 3274-108ed Ave., Edmonton, Alta., writes:—
"I really believe we would have lost our two-year-old baby with whooping cough had it not been for Dr. Chase's Linseed and Turpentine. He would cough and cough until he would fall back in my arms white as death. We had a doctor for him, but his medicine did not do him any good. We got a bottle of Linseed and Turpentine and to our surprise it did wonders for him. After the second dose there was a difference in his condition, and we kept giving it to him until he was entirely well."

Landsdowne Favors Irish Treaty.

Indications That Lords Will Accept it—Derby Declines Indian Secretaryship—De Valera Issues Another Manifesto—Mystery Fires at Caledonia Being Investigated.

DERBY DECLINES.

LONDON, March 15. The Earl of Derby has declined the offer of the Indian Secretaryship, but has been asked to reconsider his refusal. It is understood that he can better serve the Coalition from outside than inside the Cabinet. Gossip in the lobby of the House of Commons to-night is again concerning itself in the early resignation of the Prime Minister, and the possibility is discussed that Lord Derby might in that case form a Conservative Government.

DE VALERA ISSUES NEW MANIFESTO.

DUBLIN, March 15. Eomom De Valera issued a manifesto to-night launching a new Irish organization to be called Cumman na Pobla Chta, or Republican Association, and asked moral and financial support for it. According to the manifesto the new organization takes its stand on the proclamation of the Irish Republic in Easter week 1916, and its ratification in the declaration of independence in January 1919. De Valera signed the manifesto on behalf of the Republican members of Dail Eireann and their standing Committee. The main objects of the new organization as stated by the manifesto are to secure international recognition of the Irish Republic, to maintain undiminished the sovereign authority of Dail, and to repudiate the proposed agreement with Great Britain as humiliating to the nation and destructive of its status and rightful claims.

LORDS DISCUSS IRISH TREATY.

LONDON, March 15. The debate on the Irish Free State was resumed in the House of Lords to-day. There have been persistent reports that the die-hard members seek to destroy the treaty by amendments, but the tone of to-day's debate gave little indication of such tactics. The Marquis of Landsdowne, who is one of the die-hard leaders, declared that he was an unrepentant Unionist, and called attention to the grievances which he said ought to be remedied, but at the same time, he said, he recognized that the Unionist policy was to do what was in their power to make it successful. To reject the Irish Treaty Bill, Lord Landsdowne declared, would be to extinguish the only bright ray of hope now illuminating the melancholy and depressing horizon. His speech was taken as an indication that the bill would be ratified.

IN THE DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, March 15. Western problems were discussed in the debate on the address in the Commons to-day. Hon. J. B. M. Baxter, once leader of the Opposition in the New Brunswick Legislature and then Minister of Customs, asked the assurance that when the National railways were consolidated and connection between Montreal and Portland, Maine, would be practically cut off and traffic diverted it would be brought to St. John and Halifax. Mr. Baxter urged that the Maritimes should have compensation from the Dominion if the Western Provinces were given control of lands originally forming the Dominion domain. J. Loan declared the old Inter-Colonial railway should be diverted from the National system and managed from Moncton. That railway, he said, had been built to encourage Inter-Provincial trade, but freight rates were now so high that Inter-Provincial trade was being killed. Ex-Mayor Church of Toronto thought there was too much party politics in Canada, and that religious rights should be the affairs of the past. Liberals warmly cheered Mr. Church when he made this declaration, but there were loud cries of oh, oh, oh, from Quebec members when he asserted that there was no bigotry in Toronto, and the House roared with laughter as he naively added, "well, the Prime Minister himself once worked as a reporter on the Toronto Globe."

TURBO BUSINESS MAN DIES SUDDENLY.

MONTREAL, March 15. Warren Ogilvy, proprietor of the Eastern Hat and Cap Manufacturing Company, Truro, N.S., was found dead in his room at the Windsor Hotel here to-day. It is stated that death was due to natural causes and the inquest will be held to-morrow.

VOTE ON TREATY TO-MORROW WEEK.

WASHINGTON, March 15. Opponents of the Four-Power Pacific Treaty in the Senate to-day abandoned all plans for a prolonged fight against ratification, and accepted an unanimous consent agreement to limit the debate and to take a final vote on Friday, March 24th.

NOT A GOOD AUGURY.

LONDON, March 15. A meeting of Unionist members of the House of Commons, convened last night by a group of private members for the purpose of expressing an address to Austin Chamberlain expressing full confidence in the Coalition Government, broke up without result.

EXTENDED TO FIFTEEN DAYS.

ROME, March 15. Official announcement was made from the Vatican to-day that Pope Pius had extended to fifteen days the interval to elapse between the death of a Pope and the session of the Sacred College to elect his successor.

PROSPECTIVE CHALLENGER LAUNCHED.

ESSEX, March 15. The schooner Puritan, which will fish out of Gloucester and in the fall contend for the honor of challenging for the International Fishing Cup trophy, was launched here to-day.

UNRAVELLING THE CALEDONIA MYSTERY.

HALIFAX, March 15. The fires were produced by physical means of the hands of a girl of the family (Mary Ellen) as shown by marks left in the building. She was not, however, normally culpable, owing to having been in an altered state of consciousness. There is a body of evidence in other quarters, that this altered state was brought about by a disconcerting intelligence. This is a theoretical possibility, whereas the external facts seem certain. The experiences of Harold Whidden and P. O. Carrol were probably of a supernatural character, which does not necessarily imply that the supernatural cause was spiritual; it may have been owing to a psycho-physiological cause, which is perfectly natural though as yet imperfectly normal. Dr. Walter Franklin Prince, Director of the American Society of psychical research, so summed up to-night the results of his investigations into the fires and other mysterious happenings which drove Alexander McDonald and his family from their home at Caledonia, Antigonish County, during the winter.

GIVING UP THE STRUGGLE.

ROME, March 15. A despatch from Durazzo says the insurgents evacuated Tirana Monday morning, promising the Government Commander to abandon the struggle. The Government troops dispersed the remainder of the rebels and resumed control of Durazzo without opposition.

THE COAL STRUGGLE.

NEW YORK, March 15. The Joint Conference of Anthracite Mine Owners and Union officials adjourned at 4:40 this afternoon until Friday afternoon. The operators are expected to make a reply to the demands for a 20 per cent. wage increase presented to-day by representatives of the miners, but gave no indication as to what their reply would be.

FORDSBERG OCCUPIED.

JOHANNESBURG, March 15. The whole of Fordsberg has been occupied by Government troops, it is officially announced, and all armed resistance has ceased. The troops are in possession of every important building and their casualties have been slight.

TARIFF BILL MAY BE HELD OVER.

WASHINGTON, March 15. The long delay in ratification of the treaties in the Senate along with the delay of the Tariff Bill in the Finance Committee is serving to renew talk that the Tariff Measure will be held over until next winter. The calculations of good authorities are that the Tariff Bill cannot pass before June, that this will be followed by a long wrangling in Conference, and that with the House members eager to go home for the summer and the fall primary elections, the Tariff will be forced over for months.

Loyal Orange Association in Nfld.

In November, 1868 the seed of Orangeism was planted in St. John's, Newfoundland by the late Hector Fraser, and to him and his associates is due the credit for the large and influential organization which we have to-day. Whether or not they contemplated the growth of the Association to be so rapid or of such gigantic proportions they were possessed with a sincere conviction of the necessity of the Order and the soundness of its principals, founded on the Bible and the Throne. In the early days the Orange Lodge very often took the place of both Church and School, in settlements where there were neither, and many there were who bless the day of its introduction into Newfoundland. Like all organizations it has had its reverses, but due to the loyalty of its members and the wise guidance of Grand Masters Rankin, McNelly, Winter, Morrison, Cooker, Martin, Hutchings, Kean, Snow, Squires, Puddister and Cave it has overcome all obstacles, and from the tiny plant of 1868 has grown the great tree of 1921, with nearly 200 branches. Well Balanced Bill at the Crescent.

A TREAT OF PHOTOPLAY AND SPECIALITIES. Patrons of the Crescent Theatre witnessed a well balanced bill of photoplay and specialties last night. Katherine MacDonald the most beautiful woman in America to-day, was seen in one of her foremost screen triumphs, namely "Curtain" Race horses, rich men and footlight favourites are the principal ingredients that go to make this picture, the biggest success Miss MacDonald has had for some time. Last night's vaudeville programme by Eddie McGinty was certainly an added attraction. Eddie's rendition of "I love the land of Old Black Joe" was a decided hit. He also recited a catchy piece entitled "Girls Don't Do It" and cracked some good jokes which won ready applause. His final number was that well known novelty song, "I love to fall to sleep, and wake up in my mama's arms." Eddie has a special programme arranged for the St. Patrick's Day show.

Guards' Concert.

EXCELLENT MUSICAL PROGRAMME. It was unfortunate that their was not a larger audience at the Methodist College Hall last night, as the musical programme arranged for the Guards' Comrades Concert was one of the best ever performed before local concert goers. The programme consisted chiefly of songs, with some instrumental selections and recitations. All the vocalists were in excellent voice and the violin, cello, french horn and piano selections were very good. Mr. H. A. Brown delighted the audience with some French-Canadian recitations. The vocalists were Misses Elsie Herder, A. M. Russell, Marjorie Hutchings and Marguerite Mitchell, Messrs. Arthur Williams, Ruggles, W. A. Tucker, Fox and W. Herder, the instrumentalists, Mrs. Brian Dunfield, Hon. Alex. Mews, Mr. Gordon Christian, L.R.A.M., and Mr. Arthur Bulley.

The Patronal Saint of Ireland.

Anniversary of the Apostle of Erin.

(H. F. SHORTIS.)

On to-morrow will be celebrated the anniversary of Erin's Apostle, St. Patrick. Erin's sons and their descendants, who are even more Irish than the Irish themselves (Hibernores Hiberni)—will, in every part of the world, where they are to be found—and where are they not?—with joyous hearts and holy feelings commemorate the glorious advent of the True Faith to the old land of Heremon, in the sacred person of his illustrious Apostle. Fourteen hundred and ninety-two years ago exactly, St. Patrick commenced his missionary labors on Irish soil. In the year of our Lord 432 he landed at Croich Cuallan, now called by the Saxon name of Wicklow, in Leinster. He was then forty years of age. The place of his birth has occasioned much controversy for many years, and our friends the Scotchmen, who always like a good thing, are most pronounced in their assertions that he was born in their country. But his place of birth is of little consequence, and it does not trouble us very much as in what particular part of God's earth he first saw the light of day. Wherever he was born he belongs to the Irish, who never went back on his teachings, nor failed to honor his memory. The weight of authority, however, is in favor of ascribing him a French parentage.

NAME DERIVATIVE.

From the best possible authority I glean that the name of Patrick is derived from the Latin Patricius, which signifies Father, or rather Senator, it was a high distinction which gave to him on whom it was conferred a rank next to that of Emperor. The Order of Patrick to which St. Patrick belonged was different from the old Roman order of the same name. It was one of much higher distinction, and was first instituted by Constantine the Great, who was the first Christian Emperor that sat upon the Throne of the Caesars. This distinction was conferred upon St. Patrick by Pope Celestine from whom he received his appointment as Apostle of Ireland. As the historian relates, it is well to observe here that Patrick had been in Ireland long before the time when his Apostleship commenced. At the age of sixteen years, he, among others, had been taken captive by the Irish legions, who under the Great Niall had fought against the Romans in Britain and Gaul; in the latter place now called France, Patrick and his two sisters, Lupida and Deverca, were taken prisoners and brought to Ireland, where he was sold to Milcho for a term of seven years, according to the then custom; after the expiration of which term he returned to his own country.

NOT THE FIRST IRISH MISSIONARY.

History states St. Patrick was not the first Irish missionary who had undertaken the conversation of the Irish. Five years before his Apostleship mission to Ireland, that is, in the year 427, Pope Celestine had sent Palladius as Bishop, with twelve priests to preach the True Faith to the Irish people. This mission was however but partially successful, owing to the difficulty of making the people distinguish between the spiritual and temporal power of Rome. They thought that by admitting the spiritual supremacy of the Pope they would be thereby subjecting themselves to his temporal authority, a condition which they could not brook, seeing how often they had witnessed the Roman power in warlike encounter and sent the pierced Eagle screaming from the battle-field. At the time of Patrick's return to Ireland, the Irish Throne was filled by Laogare, the grandson of Niall, of the Nine Hostages. The account continues, that the Apostle immediately proceeded with the labours of his mission. After having made some converts at Croich Cuallan (Wicklow) he proceeded towards Dublin, and thence to the North of Ireland. The Princes and Lords of the country attempted to drive himself and his associates back from the coast, desiring them to be pirates. But the noble bearing, sanctified appearance, and the language of divine hope and heavenly consolation which characterized the Saint and his companions, produced their proper effect; and they who had come to resist and persecute the man of God, became converts to his doctrines, and professors of the True Faith. Being now in the neighborhood of his old master Milcho, he hastened to lay before him the Word of God. But the old man was too proud to yield to the teaching of him who was once his slave. He resisted, but his son, and two daughters became converts; whereupon, in the excess of his rage, he set fire to his house, and cast himself into the flames. This affected St. Patrick even to tears.

THE SAINTS' JOURNEYS.

From the North, he proceeded to Meath, where he preached the Faith, and made many converts—He also preached before the Assembly of Tara, which had met to celebrate the festival of Easter. Several of the Druids and Nobles were converted, as were also the Monarch, his wife and two daughters. He then proceeded to the Taltan plain, where the military exercises were celebrated. He preached; and many of the Nobles were converted and baptised. His labours were incessant; he knew not pause nor rest; he passed on to the other parts of the country disseminating the true doctrine of Christ—instructing the ignorant, baptizing those who embraced the Faith, ordaining priests and consecrating the altars. He left no corner of the land without pouring upon its heathen darkness the celestial light of Christianity. During his mission, he consecrated, according to the best authorities, no less than three hundred and sixty-two bishops, and ordained no less than three thousand priests; none of whom were admitted to their sacred offices before they had given the best and clearest proofs of the piety and sanctity of their previous lives. And now to use similar words of the historian, this is with purely a work of love, and not a historic portraiture of the life and labors of a great man. We throw out the fond thoughts to which solemn reflections on the heavenly achievements of our Apostle and our Father give rise—we throw them out irregularly, unconnectedly, lovingly; but not with the artistic arrangement—the impressive eloquence or the winning grace of the studious and aspiring compiler of heroic history.

HONORING THE ANNIVERSARY.

On to-morrow the Irish race—the inheritors of the Faith of St. Patrick, will commemorate the anniversary of the Great Saint, and of the conversion of their dear old Fatherland from Pagan superstition to Christian Truth. And oh, while we kneel together under the roof of that Cathedral reared by the Christian zeal of Old Ireland's descendants as well as by the heavenly aid of one of St. Patrick's successors in the Apostolic vineyard, whose ashes now repose within its sanctuary—while we kneel together under the sacred roof, on to-morrow let us not forget the Old Land which Patrick blest, and which contains his ashes and the ashes of those who lived and suffered and died for it and for the Faith that clings eternally around its heart of hearts. To-morrow we shall hear from the lips of the clergyman, the same Divine Doctrines and Holy Truth which Patrick preached fourteen hundred and ninety-two years ago to our forefathers. The same Faith will be preached, the same doctrines inculcated, the same mysteries taught, the same ceremonies practised, to-morrow, as on the day when Patrick first opened his lips and proclaimed the Eternal Faith of Christ, on Croich Cuallan, in the year of Grace 432. Yes, the same true Faith, in all its implications, which Christ preached, which the Apostles taught, which Pope Celestine received from his predecessors, who drank at the very fountain of Apostolic Truth—this very Faith thus transmitted from Christ, through a few intervening links, to St. Patrick, will be preached to the descendants of Ireland, in all its purity, totality and perfection, to-morrow, in the year of Grace 1922.

THE PRIDE OF THE IRISH.

This, after all is something. Yes, the Irish race, amid their trials, their sufferings and their woes, can look back with feelings of pride to that ancient and renowned country from whose bosom they have sprung, and from whose living fountains of Christian Truth they have derived the Faith which Christ taught, and which constitutes their safeguard amid the assaults of heresy and their passport to the realms of Eternal Life. After having converted Ireland, St. Patrick proceeded to Rome to report to the Holy Father the success of his labours. He sailed across the Irish Channel to Liverpool, where he preached and received several hundreds of converts to the Faith of Christ. From Liverpool he went to the Isle of Man and thence to the Eternal City. After a short stay with the Holy Father, he again returned to Ireland, and resumed his apostolic labours. He consecrated thirty new bishops, ordained many priests and divided the kingdom into Sees, deaneries, rectories and parishes, over which he appointed ecclesiastics of great learning and piety. At length grown old and worn out by incessant toil, he retired to Lough Derg in Donegal, where he spent the remainder of his days in retirement and meditation. He died at the age of one hundred and twenty-six years, and was buried in Downpatrick, in the North of Ireland. The remains of Saints Bridget and Colum Killie were afterwards deposited in the tomb of the apostle. The following Latin inscription was found on the tomb in 1174:—
"Hic tres, tumulo tumulatur in uno, Brigida, Patricius, atque Columba Plus."
Of which, this is the English version:—
"In Down three saints one grave do fill, Bridget, Patrick and Colum Killie." In the reign of Henry VIII, this tomb was destroyed by the crimson fanatics who sprang up under the auspices of that brutal tyrant, and the crozier of the Apostle was carried off by them.

THE COUNTRY OF SAINTS AND SCHOLARS.

Soon after her conversion to Christianity Ireland became the seat of Religions and Learning. About this time the Roman Empire fell, and the Goths rushed, like a desolating torrent, from the North, and swept away every vestige of Art, of Science and of Literature from the face of Europe. Those Northern barbarians mounted the thrones of the Caesars, and every trace of civilization was blotted out from the European Continent. Ireland alone stood out like an Oasis in the wilderness of desolation and to her as an asylum and a nursery of Religion and Learning, came people from all nations of Europe. Here, as from a fountain, they drank large draughts of learning and wisdom, and imbued their souls with a knowledge of the Divine Truth of Religion. It was at this time, and by the Nations of Europe, Ireland was called by the name of "Island of Saints (Insula Sanctorum). Monasteries and religious establishments of every kind, churches, cathedrals, colleges, studded the land. From these establishments holy and learned men issued forth, like an inundation, over every part of Europe, and founded similar institutions in the various countries to which they had gone. In France, Italy, Switzerland, Germany and every other country in Europe they founded institutions for the promotion of religion and learning. In England they established various Monasteries, Churches and colleges. Thus when the western world became overwhelmed in the darkness of barbarism, Ireland shone out, like a light from Heaven, to guide the people to civilization, and to win them back from the depths of Gothic ignorance to the knowledge and worship of the Divine.

THE DANISH INVASION.

Such was the position which Ireland occupied in Europe from the time of St. Patrick up to the ninth century, when the Danes, a plundering barbaric nation from the North, began to infest her shores. This people continued from time to time, for the space of two hundred years, to commit various depredations on the Irish coast, as well as in the interior of the country, from time to time, which caused much annoyance to the inhabitants, and tended in a great degree to retard the progress of their religious and literary institutions, as well as to obstruct their general prosperity. They were, at length, finally routed and destroyed on the battlefield at Clontarf, by the famous King and warrior Brian Borlombo. After this, the country returned to its former course of prosperity, and religion, literature and science flourished as before.

THE COMING OF THE ANGLO-NORMAN.

The period of poor old Ireland's woes is now approaching. Internal divisions (oh, this has ever been her blackest curse) brought about what the armies of the Caesars had never been able to accomplish. By the folly and treachery of one of her own sons, a petty King, or Riahg Beg, as each of the provincial Kings was called, the Anglo-Saxon, or rather the Anglo-Norman, for the first time found footing on Irish soil. This occurred in the year of our Lord 1169. From that moment Ireland's woes may be said to have begun. In the commencement of this aggression, however, nothing occurred that could cause any serious apprehension to the Irish Nation. The intruders were confined within a small corner of Ireland; and, after some time, they became incorporated with her people, pliant, submissive and obedient to the laws. Their descendants became even "more Irish than the Irish themselves." But ambitious, wily and rapacious, the English Crown kept hawk's eye on the fertile fields and rich demesnes of old Ireland. Secretly and stealthily was division and dissension fomented and encouraged among the people by the agents of the Crown; while the King, princes and nobles of Ireland were too much engrossed with their own petty quarrels, and the maintenance of their individual power and dominion, to turn their thoughts to the common foe who lay lurking in ambush outside their walls. Little, however, occurred, as we have observed, to affect the independence of the nation for the length of three or four centuries after the landing of the first Anglo-Norman settlers.

HIBERNIA ILLUMINATRIX.

How inscrutable are the ways of Heaven! We have seen, in the middle ages, when the darkness of barbarism had overpread the West of Europe, Ireland shone out like a lamp from Heaven, dispelling the barbaric gloom, pouring the floodlight of religion and learning over the world again. Look at her in later years; oppressed, persecuted and trampled down, in a way to which no nation of ancient or modern times afford a parallel, she has adhered to the Faith of St. Patrick with a grasp which no power could break. Nay, more; persecution has been the means of propagating the Faith in every part of the known world. From the Atlantic to the Pacific, the Irish Exile has planted his country's Faith in every city, village and hamlet of the New World. As the most ancient and venerable monuments of religion and learning which the Old World presents, are interwoven with the memory of their Irish founders, so the noblest achievements in the Arts, and Sciences, in the extension of Literature, and the propagation of Religion of which the New World can boast are the work of the persecuted Irish race. And now that a bright and glorious morn has burst upon her crushed hopes, her languid form, her struggling valour and covering, the dark spots on her past history, induce her to forget her past sufferings in her restoration to freedom and happiness.

COMES INTO HER OWN.

The Irish Free State has now the management of her own affairs, and it is needless to say that her great natural resources will be developed, factories started, lines of steamers running between the Old Country, United States, France, Belgium, Spain and other countries. The Irishmen and their descendants, many of them multi-millionaires will advance the necessary funds to place the country of their birth, and the land of their forefathers, in a position to work out her own destiny, and I am as certain as I am that I am penning these lines, that before ten years Ireland will become one of the most prosperous, happy people the most united in either the New or Old World. When that day shall arrive, those of us who can afford it, will visit the land of our forefathers to congratulate the Irish people upon their success in achieving their independence, their prosperity and happiness of the old land, and view with interest and pride the resting place of Emmett, when the object

KEARNEY'S

It's Flavor that Makes the Meal!

And the sauces that the Libby chefs have adapted for you give flavor to the simplest dishes.

It may be eggs, or macaroni, or a cheap cut of meat—an unusual and delicious sauce will make it something you eat with delight and remember with pleasure—because of its flavor.

LIBBY'S CATCHUP and CHILI SAUCE are made from red, ripe tomatoes, grown in the fertile soil of Kent County, Ontario, picked when they are mellowed by the sunshine of long summer days, then rushed to the nearby Libby kitchen.

Here in sunny rooms the tomatoes are cooked with fragrant spices, onions, sugar and the best vinegar—cooked for hours until all the flavors are blended through and through.

Now the sauce is ready to give an appetizing relish to your steaks and chops, or a new piquancy to the meat gravy you serve with your roasts.

Your grocer has, or can get you, Libby's Catchup or Chili Sauce. Use it with your cold meat teas and note how quickly the second helping is necessary.

The delightful flavor of Libby's Beans is due largely to the wonderful Sauce prepared by the skilled chefs. Have you tried them?

The Sealing Voyage of 1857.

All Rigs of Sailing Craft But No Steamers.

Value of Seals Brought in the Greatest on Record—A Contrast in the Ships Then and Now.

In view of the interest attaching to the present sealing voyage, and the fact that it is the first day after day, while the ships are in the following article taken from the columns of the Evening Herald of St. John's, 1916, signed M.J.O.M. will attract our readers' attention. In the year 1857, two hundred and ninety sailing vessels of all rigs carrying 13,000 men, cleared from the port of St. John's, for the seal fishery, bringing in cargoes the total value of which was $1,350,000. Last year (1921) the steamers only presented the seal fishery, their gross returns being but $171,242, or little over one sixth of the proceeds of the same fishery sixty-four years ago. Mr. O'Malley writes with the ease and fluency of one well acquainted with the subject, and it gives us much pleasure indeed to reproduce his contribution to the Herald. It will be understood that St. John's is referred to, no mention being made of the sealing centres in the Colony, which also outfitted large fleets of sealing vessels.

THE FROSTY SPRING.

As the seal fishery is a matter of great interest just now, I would kindly ask you to publish a few items concerning the sealing in the year 1857. The spring of 1857 was certainly one of the earliest and most successful in the history of the voyage. It was known as "The Frosty Spring," owing to the fact that an intense frost prevailed during the early part of the season, from which many of the crews, whilst gathering the harvest, suffered severely. The number of vessels clearing from St. John's in the year 1857, was two hundred and ninety, comprising brigas, brigantines, and the proverbial "beaver-hat-men" crewed with 13,000 men. There was one exception, however, the Barbara, Capt. Billy Keane—a famous skipper of that day. He was father of Capt. A. Keane, now commodore of the present fleet, said to relate, prosecuting a fishery.

THE FIRST ARRIVAL.

However, on the 22nd March, with the flag flying from her masthead, the first to arrive was the brigantine Wm. Stairs, Capt. Colbert, with 500 prime seals. The brig Evanthus, Capt. White, (late commander of the steamer Neptune) also arrived on the 23rd, with but little success, the vessel, unfortunately, having had to abandon the voyage owing to illness. On the 23rd the brig St. John, Capt. P. Mullooney, who later successfully commanded the steamers Atlas and Ranger, arrived with 5,700 prime seals, and the Arthur O'Leary, Capt. "Terry" Halleran, 6,000. On the 25th, the Lena, Capt. P. Feehan, arrived with 6,500, followed by the brig, Capt. P. Cummins, hauling 6,000; the brig Eleanor Davis, McLaughlin, 7,000; the Wyoming, Kelly, 8,000 and the Crown, Carew, 5,000. On the 27th the brig Vulcan, Capt. Goss, entered port, having 6,000 seals; followed by the Caledonia, Capt. "Joe" Houlihan with 6,300; the brig, Coady, 4,500, and the brig Henry, Breen, master, 4,900.

OTHER ARRIVALS.

On the 28th the Orient, Chafe, and the Elizabeth, Capt. A. Graham, (a very man) 5,700. The latter recalls the memory when, a few years later, Capt. Goss, in the brig Zambel, was said to arrive from the icefields. It was on a beautiful Easter morning (1st) in the early '50s. The steamer, I remember, came up the harbor as the Cathedral bells were ringing, and the wharf-heads growled, whilst all her flags flying, in tow of the paddle-boat Blue Jacket, hauling for the splendid load of 7,000 prime seals. The crews of all the ships referred to were big hills, but the biggest, however, was that made by the crew of the Elizabeth, Capt. Graham, each man sharing 255 ($75.00). (Note—On the 20th March the first of the Northern ships to arrive was the Ice King, Capt. W. Kneel, with 6,000, followed by the Bearless, Capt. Keane, with 5,500. Later other of the ships arrived with good trips also.)

THE PRICE PAID.

"On the 28th March, however, including previous arrivals, twenty-five St. John's vessels had entered port with the splendid catch of one hundred and twenty thousand seals, in the aggregate, which were valued for $35,000 ($425,000). The price paid, per quintal, this spring, owing to an advance made by the enterprising firm of O'Dwyer, was 37a. 6d. (about $9.00). The seals were mostly prime harps, with a considerable number of young hoods, averaging respectively forty-six and fifty-six pounds per "sculp." The total catch for the spring was 475,000, value for about $1,350,000.

LOSS OF THE JOHN AND MARIA.

"A terrible catastrophe occurred, at the beginning of the voyage, in the loss of the schooner John and Maria, and twenty-one of her crew—mostly Southern Shore men. This vessel sailed from St. John's in the forenoon on March 2nd, intending to call at Cape Broyle for some sealing gear, and was lost the following night at Brigus Head, where she unfortunately struck, and became a total wreck. The Captain (Thos. Carow) and one boy were saved, both having been rescued the succeeding morning from the schooner's rigging in an exhausted condition. The John and Maria was "beaver-hat" rigged—of which there were many of her kind in those days—and was owned by the firm of Ewen Stubb, a well-known commercial house in St. John's. The tragic story of the loss of this vessel has been handed down, and sadly told, from generation to generation, on the Southern Shore, to the present day.

HELD OFF TOO LONG.

"The firm of P. Rogerson & Son had seven vessels prosecuting the voyage this spring, all of which returned with full cargoes, totalling some 35,000. With the high price obtaining, as previously referred to, a handsome turnover would certainly have been made, if an immediate sale of all cargoes had been effected; but, after disposing of a cargo or two, the firm, in anticipation of a further advance, decided to hold on to the remaining lot. In the meantime, unluckily, a considerable slump occurred, with the result that the fine old firm of P. Rogerson & Son sustained a great loss, one we regret to say, that staggered it for some years later. Mr. H. F. Shortis, who is, certainly, well-informed on our early sealing voyages, as well as an enthusiast on all matters pertaining thereto, will be surprised to learn of the splendid catch of the twenty-five St. John's vessels, already noted. Mr. Shortis, when writing of, and sentimentalizing over, the stories and prowess of the "men of the frozen pans," occasionally boasts of the superiority of the Harbor Grace skipper over that of his St. John's contemporary. But, Mr. Editor, facts are stubborn things, and consequently, we have yet to find, if ever, since the inception of the seal fishery, has the whole sailing fleet of Harbor Grace, in any one season, equalled the record catch of one hundred and twenty thousand seals, ashore and afloat in St. John's in March 1857.

HEROES OF THE FROZEN PANS.

"The men employed in the seal fishery in those days required strength, endurance and activity. They usually had a long distance to travel to reach the pack—sometimes fifteen to twenty miles. They left their different ships in the early morning, each carrying a bliscut or two in his "jumper" pocket, and often didn't return till late evening, tired and hungry, with their "rope of fat." To-day, however, through steam and its many appliances, the sealers' work is much easier.

THE UBIQUITOUS STOWAWAY.

"The stowaway was generally an interesting personage in the days of the sailing vessel. He received kinder and better treatment than he does today on the steamers. As soon as he had made his appearance, or had been discovered, the master-of-the-watch was informed, who in turn, acquainted the Captain—the latter requesting his presence in the cabin. Here the intruder was interrogated as to his name, age, parents, etc., all of which were entered on the ship's log. If he were found a hardy boy, and of ordinary size, he was outfitted with a suit of canvas, together with belt and sheath, knife and steel. After donning his new garb, in which he felt proud and happy, he strutted the ship's deck as independently as if he were the Captain's son, all ready for the fray. The stowaway was allowed half his catch, and, if proving a good lad, and happening to sail with a "jowler" skipper, his berth, all things being equal, was secure for the following spring. He was usually a favorite among the crew, and in many cases, through some little incident during the trip, acquired a nickname that forever followed him in after life.

SOME OF THE OLD GUARD.

"A few of the "jowlers," who invariably arrived with bumper trips, were:—Captains T. Halleran, P. Feehan, Joe Houlihan, P. Mullooney, and P. Cummins, whose crews, each season, made big bills—forty and forty-five pounds per man. Consequently, these skippers, owing to their name and fame, always had the pick of material, as to men, to crew their ships. Some of these captains, at Election time, were eagerly sought by political aspirants to act in the capacity of chairman, and in other ways assist in conducting a campaign. One captain, I remember, while addressing a public meeting from the balcony of the old market-house, among other things, boldly declared that he "spilt more blood than the great Napoleon"—an assertion based, no doubt, on his fame as "a great 'sile-killer."

A SUBJECT FOR AN ARTIST.

"It was a beautiful sight, on the first of March, especially if a fresh sou'wester were blowing, to see the large white-winged feet leaving for the icefields. Many of them, amid hustle and bustle, swung from the wharf-heads, awaiting the roll-call, as also picking up the belated stranger, who came along carrying his far, gat, "skins," and the other paraphernalia peculiar to the voyage. Other ships passed down the harbor, with mostly all hands aloft; loosening gaskets and unbending canvas, the latter stiffening to the breeze as they glided along, amidst hearty cheers from the waterfront, which were followed by lusty exchanges from the departing crews.

ALWAYS IN COMMISSION.

"Several of the old sealing vessels, after returning from the hunt, prepared for foreign voyages. Some sailed with fish cargoes to the Mediterranean and West Indian markets, whilst others to England and Scotch ports, carrying the new season's oil. After discharging at the latter places, their destination was mostly for home ports, generally arriving in early autumn. Many of these old "ice-hunters" were fast sailers, often outrivalling our Clyde-built in making quick passages. Many of them, however, were either owned or partly owned by their respective commanders. The names of the different firms manufacturing "fat" in St. John's at this time, which was chiefly conducted on the Southside, were:—Baine Johnston & Co., W. & H. Thomas, Kenneth McLea & Sons, Job Bros. & Co., McBride & Kerr, Bowring Brothers, John Barron & Co., Stubb, Row & Holmwood, and Robert Alsop. Those manufacturing on the Northside were:—Brooking & Co., L. O'Brien & Co., R. O'Dwyer, J. & W. Stewart, R. & L. Tessier, and T. Bond. The Southside firms referred to ran mostly from East to West, consecutively."

A Pretty Mean Friend.

An Athlone, Kan., bride was the recipient of a cut glass bowl for a wedding gift. The bowl arrived broken to pieces, and each piece wrapped separately in tissue paper. The young bride wrote to the jeweler for an explanation and learned that the sender had entered the jeweler's store just as the bowl was dropped by one of the clerks. She bought the pieces and asked to have them packed and sent to the bride with her card. The jeweler sent the package, but ordered the bowl wrapped as it was received to expose the buyer's meanness.

The Speech From The Throne.

If it were necessary to go beyond the text of that most amazing document 'The Speech from the Throne,' delivered at Tuesday's opening of the Legislature, in search of criticism, the speech made by Hon. J. J. Murphy in the Upper House, in seconding the motion for the appointment of a Select Committee to draft an Address in Reply, would supply it, for the trend of this honorable gentleman's remarks were more in the nature of hostility to the speech itself than friendliness. Obviously Mr. Murphy perceived nothing whatever in the speech worthy of praise, though admitting that he approved many of them. These, however, he did not enumerate. The abandoning of the long-established Royal Naval Reserve and the dismantling of H.M.S. Briton, were matters which he thought could have been avoided and in this we heartily concur. Presumably the Admiralty know their own business, and having decided on the step of disposing of the old training ship, it may not have entered the heads of the Government to ask permission to retain it for a similar purpose. It was much better to have a distinctly Newfoundland Naval Reserve, even if the qualification Royal did not go with it. But be that as it may an opportunity has been allowed to slip away which may never recur. There has been more wastage of money during the almost three years' administration of the misnamed Liberal-Reform Party than it would cost to maintain the Briton as a depot ship, if only for cadets, during a much longer period. A Normal School, however, appears to be more in favor than other methods of education.

Our apologies to Hon. Mr. Murphy for having to quote him again, this time on revenue. He was not the only surprised one to have heard it announced in the Speech that there is a surplus revenue. Others are equally so, and are inclined to take that statement with a grain of (Tuckahoe) salt. It has often been said that figures cannot lie. May be not. Two and two will make four if added together but when placed following the number is twenty-two. Numerals may not of themselves lie, but in the hands of a skillful manipulator they can be made to show anything that is desired. Surpluses are tricky things, usually existing only on paper where by mathematical juggling they can be made to appear. But subject them to close scrutiny and careful audit and they disappear with amazing rapidity. Any commercial man, any ordinary student of conditions; even the man on the street can tell when imports are large and when the same are slack. And the casual observer knows quite well that only the barren necessities paying lesser rates of duty have been coming into the colony during the past year. Then the reckless expenditure against a decreasing revenue. Everybody knows that public money has been wasted like water and with even less regard. All the road scandals, supply scandals, railway scandals, salt scandals, sugar scandals have been the means of swallowing up millions of dollars of taxes sweated out of a groaning people, and yet the Speech from the Throne audaciously declares that the current public accounts show a surplus balance. Probably when the Opposition audit probe is applied this alleged credit balance may be turned into a substantial debit. Such things have occurred before.

St. Patrick's Day.

To-morrow (Friday) being the festival of St. Patrick, and a general holiday, the Telegram will not be published.

From the Sealing Fleet.

OVER 21,000 REPORTED.
The sealing news received last night is encouraging and should ice conditions improve there is no doubt but that a good fishery will result. The catch so far amounts to 21,000, with the Diana, Capt. John Parsons in the lead. The ship reports for 7,000 with good prospects. Evidently the ships are nearing the main patch. Last year the ships struck the seals on March 27th, 95 miles E.N.E. of the Funks, and the greater part of the catch was taken on the 27th, 28th and 29th. After that the ice broke up and the seals took to the water. S.S. Viking, prosecuting the voyage in the Gulf reported for 2,000 whitecoats panned, and it is believed the ship will have no difficulty in securing a full load. Following are the messages received last night:
BOWRING BROTHERS.
Terra Nova. (Wednesday p.m.)—Picking up a few scattered seals all day.
Viking. (Wednesday p.m.)—Panned 2,000 whitecoats this afternoon, 20 miles North of St. Paul's Island.
Ranger. (Wednesday p.m.)—Have been jammed since the 10th. Got clear to-day. Now steaming north.
Eagle. No report.
JOB BROTHERS & COMPANY.
Theis. (Wednesday p.m.)—10 miles S.W. of Funks. Killed and panned 1500. Jammed all day.
Neptune. (Wednesday p.m.)—5 miles East of Funks, 1500 on board, seals scattered.
JAMES BAIRD, LIMITED.
Diana. (Wednesday p.m.)—Panned 3,000 to-day. Prospects good.
REID NEWFOUNDLAND CO.
Sagona. (Wednesday p.m.)—Have 3,600 on board. Seals not plentiful yet. All well.

Dr. Chase's Diary Competition.

NFLD. LADY TO THE FOREFRONT.
The announcement has been made that Miss P. Florence Miller, of Topsail, has tied for honors in the Almanac Diary Competition conducted by 'Dr. A. W. Chase, Medicine Co.' This Dr. Chase Diary Competition attracts thousands of competitors from all over Canada; this year the competition was even keener than usual, some very artistic and beautifully written diaries being entered. The books of Miss P. Florence Miller, of Topsail, Newfoundland, and Miss Lawrence, of London, Ont., were judged of equal merit, so the judges decided to divide the first prize between these two ladies. This is the second year that Miss Miller has won distinction, as she obtained first prize in the 1920 competition. Miss Miller is the Government telegraph operator at Topsail.

Express Passengers.

S.S. Kyle arrived at Port aux Basques at 12:30 a.m., bringing 107 bags of mail matter and the following passengers who are on the incoming express, which left the terminus at 3 a.m. J. D. Calvin, J. Gaherty, R. Menton, F. E. Pittman, W. Thomas, A. J. Walker, W. Bragg, E. Bragg, Miss A. Stone, J. Currie.

A MEMORY FEAT.—If you try to recall how you spent last St. Patrick's Day you will find your pleasantest memory is of 'Irish Night.'

Seen From the Gallery.

Resuming the sequence of notes under this heading with reference to the opening of the House on Tuesday afternoon, the F.P.U. members looked quite themselves after their winter's rest from the arduous toil of attending to the needs of their constituents. An apology is due the genial Minister of Posts for omitting him yesterday from the list, as is one likewise due the ever pleasant and obliging Minister of Shipping (First Lord of our local Admiralty). Both these gentlemen were in their places and appeared none the worse for their legislative holiday. They will not be again overlooked in this column in so cavalier a manner.

On the Opposition side of the House the familiar face and striking figure of Capt. John Lewis was missing. Since the last meeting of the House the gallant captain has crossed the trackless ocean of eternity and entered that 'undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveller returns.' The tributes paid to the memory of the late member for Hr. Main were sincere and appropriate and testified to the esteem in which he was held by all. The late Captain Lewis was that type of whom it truthfully can be said, 'His life was gentle and the elements so mixed in him That Nature might stand up And say to all the world This was a man.'

Two other vacant seats were noticeable to the right of the Speaker. Those of Sir John Crosbie, who did not put in an appearance, and Mr. C. J. Fox, the silver-tongued orator of the House, who was absent through illness. The gallery scribes trust that when the Assembly sits again the junior member for St. John's East will be there with all his literary and eloquent vigor.

That veteran of many fights, the Leader of the Opposition, Sir M. P. Cashin, occupied his usual seat, and apparently has lost none of his pristine energy. Much to the disappointment of the Government he still retains the direction of affairs of his party, and the wish that he might have resigned ere the House assembled was but father to the thought of many on the Government benches. The formidable list of questions with which he bombarded various departmental heads, shows that there is going to be something doing during this session. Messrs. J. R. Bennett (St. John's West), Higgins and Vinnicombe (St. John's East), Sullivan, Walsh, Sinnott (Pascata), Jones (Hr. Main), MacDonnell (St. George's), Moore (Ferryland), were all in their places, as also was Mr. Archibald, who continues to plow his lonely political furrow from the middle of the House. There evidently cannot be much attraction generated by the 'Independent' section, otherwise magnetism would draw some addition from one side or the other.

Postal Officials.

SEEK 1920-21 WAGE SCALE.
At the regular monthly meeting of the Newfoundland Postal Association held on Tuesday night, it was decided to petition the House of Assembly that the salaries of 1920-21 be paid, and the Bill passed at last session of the House be cancelled. It is understood that the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, Mr. Halfyard will be asked to present the petition on behalf of the Post Office officials. The meeting was largely attended and before its close a vote of condolence, moved by Mr. Campbell, jr., seconded by Mr. Lloyd and unanimously supported was tendered Mr. James Gushue, on the passing on Sunday of his sister, Mrs. Ellis.

Tie-Cup Game To-Night.

BRIGUS TO PLAY A REAL TEAM.
The Tie-Cup game between the St. Bon's and the Saints will be played in the Prince's Rink to-night. A good contest is expected. Following the regular fixture a team selected from the Fieldians and Terras will play the visiting team from Brigus. This should prove a lively game and from all appearances, the Brigus boys are in for a trimming in proportion to that which they gave the City 'Old Timers' last night.

Emerson Said

That if a man made a better mousetrap than his neighbor's the world would beat a path to his door. Personally we would like them to do this after the first heavy snowfall. But to keep to the analogy, we would say that the Royal Stationery are selling the best tickets in town (those for Irish Night). The moral would seem to be 'Beat it.'

DON'T FORGET!

HIS DIARY.
March 16th.—To Water Street, where I meet Mr. Archibald, that is member for Harbor Grace, and did have lengthy discourse with him of the political situation. I did also meet Mr. Forsyth of Grand Bank and he tells me of conditions in his district. Much talk about town of a new political party, but I hear naught of who will compose it. And, indeed, high time for a new party, but it is little like to come about for many months.

Deputations Seeking Work.

GOVERNMENT PROMISES AID.
Despite the efforts that have been made to relieve the unemployment situation in Conception Bay it appears that there are large numbers of people looking for work. The employment given at Bell Island does not cover one third of the cases, and during the past week deputations after deputations have come to the city in order to ascertain if anything can be done in the matter. This morning a deputation of 40 men from Portugal Cove and other settlements were in the city in this connection. Efforts are being made to relieve the situation by promises of work at building public wharves breakwaters, etc.

Debating Memorial.

BIG NIGHT AT M.C.L.L.
An extremely topical subject will be debated at the M.C.L.L. to-night, 'The War Memorial coming in for full discussion. As there seems to be a decided difference of opinion over the form which the Memorial will take, the debate should prove of great interest. The Memorial Committee of the Patriotic Association stands for an utilitarian form, while the Committee headed by Mr. R. G. Rendell and Padre Naugle stands for a monumental form. The resolution to-night reads 'Resolved, that Newfoundland accept the utilitarian proposition represented by the Educational Building, stationary, etc., as adopted by the War Memorial Committee of the Patriotic Association December 1919, rather than a strictly monumental memorial. The leaders are Wm. White, affirmative, and H. E. Cowan negative.

Well, here's some.

Shoremen Taking Seals.

STEAMERS SIGHTED AT CAPE FREELS.
Nothing further has been received from the sealing fleet since the messages to the owners last night. The Marine and Fisheries Department however received a message this morning from Newtown, B.B., stating that 3 steamers were sighted early this morning from Cape Freels. The steamers are supposed to be the Terra Nova, Thetis and Diana. The landings at Cape Freels and Newtown are apparently doing well with seals, as yesterday they reported taking 150 whitecoats and to-day they accounted for 60 young harps.

Mr. Gosling Replies to His Critics

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—I have read with interest your criticisms which you have published in your issue of the 14th inst. and I am glad to note that while apologists for either political party disclaim responsibility for the condition of things, no one has so far contended that my diagnosis of the case is incorrect, or that the remedies I suggest would not be effective. The courteous Editor of the Daily News rather resents my criticisms of politicians, and contends that the merchants, and those who generally hold themselves aloof from politics, are largely to blame for allowing the terrible waste of the past five years; and cannot wholly deny the responsibility. I think I might myself put up a fair excuse of having had other things to attend to during this period, but shall not urge it; and probably all others implicated can offer equally valid reasons for not entering the field of politics.

The idea propounded by several "newspaper" who does not actively support either one of the present political parties or found a party of his own, seems rather strained. I take it that a man may be deeply interested in politics in its larger sense, without joining any party or entering actively into political life, and I see no reason whatever for forbidding such a person from expressing his views on public matters. Indeed his opinions may be all the more valuable because he is clear of political entanglements. I cannot agree to the "Squeakers" (not "Squealers") doctrine that because one sells window, "winder," that one is obliged to go out and wash it. It is necessary to pay much attention to criticisms of anonymous correspondents, but I cannot refrain from saying that the last thing I expected to be accused of was "pussy-footing." I described the economic consequences of high taxation, high expenditure, and state support, and showed that economic laws are as natural and inevitable as so-called natural laws, or moral laws. The remedies I suggested were drastic and early rather of the nature of the "iron heel" than the "pussy-foot."

The Editor of the Advocate indeed has hint that I might be accused of callousness. I admit that my suggested policy appears to be cruel, but it is better to be kind; however, it is not better than the reverse, so I am not to be put by Dean Inge—"The sentimentalist, kind only to be cruel, unkindly promotes precisely the results which he most deprecates." At the risk of offending again, I should suggest using the words "politicians looking for votes" instead of "sentimentalist."

It is unnecessary again to describe the vicious circle in which we are engaged, but the way the poison of state support works perhaps needs further explanation. This cannot be better than by instancing our present case. We have in St. John's some 600 men without work and badly off for whom state support in the form of wasteful if not entirely un-economic work is supplied. By thus morning or allaying the stress, the efforts of these 600 to 800 men to find work for themselves are stopped; at the same time possible employers of labour feel themselves relieved of the burden of finding employment. It is impossible to say how far the consequences of this un-economic action may reach. Progress is born of effort and stress, and I have no doubt that in this instance we are "kind only to be cruel."

To the fishermen of the country I would like to address a few words—Get it out of your minds that any new wonderful scheme can be evolved which will add dollar to the value of your produce. The price of an article is governed by a thousand circumstances which are entirely beyond anyone's control. The value of an article is its exchangeable ratio with other commodities, or for instance, the fisherman is well off when he can get a barrel of flour for a couple of fish. The price of an article is that value expressed in terms of currency. The value of an article in comparison with other articles according to its supply and demand. If we have a large fishery we know that it is probable we will have to accept a lower price for it, unless the demand has been affected by a change of the Norwegian fisheries, or a reduction in the supply of some other article of food, such as jerked beef in Brazil. The demand is also influenced by the prosperity or adversity of our regular customers, for instance, the failure of the current crop of Greece, would leave the Greeks too poor to buy our fish. There are, as I said, a thousand things which are always without ceasing affecting the value of our produce; and no mortal mind can conceive much less control them. Therefore no one can possibly say what the value of an article is at any particular time. Value can only be ascertained by bargaining. But the law of supply and demand always tends to produce a just equilibrium. If an article is sold too cheaply the competition or demand tends to increase, and the production or supply to decrease. Contrariwise when too high a value is placed on it the demand decreases and supply increases. A temporary low price may therefore not be an unmixed evil, it may bring a blessing in its train; nor are high prices always beneficial, as has been proved in many instances of late.

There are only two certain ways of adding to the value of your produce. The best important is to produce good quality. Merchantable fish is worth twice as much as West India. The other certain way is to insist that the Government, by economizing expenditure, and by reducing the taxes you have to pay, allow you to exchange your fish for the largest possible quantity of the goods you require.

Yours truly,

Brigus Defeats City.

OLD TIMERS MASSACRED BY OUT-PORT PLAYERS.

The massacre of the British troops at Islandia had nothing on the defeat which the City team suffered at the hands of the Brigus youngsters last night. The outport team won by 17 goals to 3, and it served the City right. Those who selected our team evidently suffered from an overdose of conceit and thinking that there were none who could play hockey but those who had the good fortune or otherwise, to be born in St. John's, put an aggregation of old timers on the ice. If Nix Vinicombe had used the side of a house in goal, and the rest of the team had double runner skates and smaller corporations, there might have been a difference in the score. Not that the Brigus would have been smaller. This could not be, however, and the local players got their deserts. As was recently predicted in the Telegram, everything possible was done for the comfort of the old timers and included in the requisites for their well being, were a few gallons of iodine, a keg of Minard's Lintiment and about fifty yards of sticking plaster. These last accessories were needed and before the game ended, all had been used up. The stock of expletives which the City players have been storing up for use against the Government when further taxes are put on, were all exhausted last night and it will take a good, hard frost to freeze the ice up again. Pomeroy, Meaden, and E. Gushue showed up well for Brigus and on the whole, the team is quite well balanced. To-night they will be given a chance to show what they can do against a more representative league team than that they played last night.

The line up was:—
BRIGUS Goal.
W. Pomeroy N. Vinicombe Defence.
F. Pomeroy Gus Harder G. Meaden G. Marshall Forwards.
G. Jerrett Pius Parsons E. Gushue Karl Trammell R. Gushue F. James SPARES.
Brigus—E. Jerrett, H. Payne. City—J. Bugden, R. H. Simms, E. Pinst.

OUR POET'S COMMENT.

It was a famous victory
Of that there is no doubt
And everyone was glad to see
The City put to rout.

For they did greatly underrate
The team from o'er the Bay
And now I think they'll hesitate
Another time to play.

The City had an awful nerve
To try out such a team
And consequently did deserve
To lose our whole esteem.

Their days where hockey is concerned
Are now completely done.
They must when out to play they Turned,
Have had a touch of sun.

For youth and age cannot compete,
This truth is very plain.
For age must take a far back seat
Nor poach on youth's domain.

So when next from across the Bay
A hockey team comes up
Against a city team to play
"Old Timers," don't appear!

Ruth Chase Delivers Excellent Programme

NICKEL PATRONS WELL PLEASED WITH SHOW.

Last night Miss Ruth Chase, the well known Soprano again delighted her host of admirers with her beautiful two selections of "The Great Awakening" and "Out of the Shadows," two selections of international fame. Film fans were well pleased with "Miss Hobbs" which was the photoplay attraction at this theatre last evening. Miss Hobbs is a delicious satire on the super-feminine woman, most admirably interpreted by the little blonde favourite. As a star Miss Hawley, the leading role shows likeable qualities beyond anything she exhibited in her more restricted province as a leading woman. The thing that impressed last night's audience was the naturally wholesome and girlish manner in which Miss Hawley, romped through all her scenes. Abundant youth, remarkable beauty and real ability as a comedienne proved the recipe which gave last night's audience a thoroughly enjoyable evening's entertainment. Do not miss the St. Patrick's Day programme at the Nickel.

Fishes That Live

Out of Water.

SOME MORE MISSING LINKS IN EVOLUTION.

To call a man who is out of place "a fish out of water" is insular and unscientific, in fact medieval. The modern survey of species of fishes which can live out of water. When it was first known that all life was in the ocean during at least half the story of life on the earth, many wondered how the evolutionist was going to start the story of land-life. Already, however, the naturalist was supplying the missing links, and to-day we have no difficulty.

There have been Europeans in India and the islands of the Indian Ocean for a couple of centuries; but in the early days they were too busy making money to study the wonders of life in that region. There is, for instance, a wonderful fish called the Climbing Perch which prevents any Anglo-Indian from calling a man a fish out of water.

CLIMBING TREES.

You may, on a hot summer's day, meet a company of these fishes strolling—rather clumsily—across the fields. There pool has dried up, and they seek a "better" one. They can live for a day or two out of water, because they have a special chamber in the head for assisting their breathing out of water. Early observers claim that they climb trees occasionally, and even their scientific name (Anabas scandens) sanctions this, but the evidence is not very good.

There is, however, another fish in tropical Asia and Africa which undoubtedly does a little climbing. The bismi, as natives call it, remains on the shore when the tide goes out, hunting whatever the waters have left behind. Its breast-fins are bent like elbow-joints, and are very strong, and by means of these it skips or jumps about the shore. A close observer will, however, notice that it is very apt to retire speedily to a little pool and its tail therein. It has a supplementary breathing apparatus in its tail, and it may remain a long time resting on a stone with its tail in the water, its great goggle eyes staring round for some small victim.

LIVING IN TWO WORLDS.

These are what we may call crude experiments in the power of living in two worlds. There are, however, many kinds of fishes with lungs as well as gills, and these show us best how, ages ago, part of the population left the over-crowded ocean and began the story of life on land. We do not think to-day that these are actual survivors of the first fishes to leave the land, but they are relics of a large population which at one time more or less developed the power of living on land. The best known is the "Burnett Salmon," as it is popularly called, of Queensland. There is, of course, no salmon in Australia, but the "digger" has a facetious way of giving aristocratic British names to native things, and more than one British politician has fallen into the trap and marvelled at the cheapness of "salmon" in Australia. The Ceratodus is a coarser fish, but it is one of the marvels of Nature. It has a lung as well as gills.

The Queensland one-lunger is not properly called a "mud fish." It never lives in the dry mud when a stream ceases to flow. In the Burnett and Mary rivers it lingers in the pools at the bottom of the water, and the water never entirely disappears. It may, however, become so low and foul in the summer that every other type of fish will be killed, while the Ceratodus suffers no more inconvenience than a sewage-man in a crowded tub. It just rises to the surface now and again, and "spouts" like a miniature whale. Then it fills its one lung with air, and sinks again to the bottom.

TWO LUNGS.

But there is a cousin of the Ceratodus, found over the greater part of Africa, which lives entirely out of water during about six months of the year. It has two lungs in addition to gills. As a rule it is found in the marshes near the rivers. For half the year it gorges on frogs and worms and other delicacies, for it must live on its fat during the long "summer sleep." Its fins are really limbs. They are useless as paddles, and at the bottom of the water. The tail is the propeller.

When the dry season comes, the fish bores down about 18 inches into the mud, coils itself up, and wraps itself in a sort of cocoon made of mucus from its skin. Above its head it makes a sort of lid, to keep out the inquisitive, and it even has the remarkable instinct to make small holes in the lid to let the air through. So it remains sleeping for months, breathing entirely by its lungs. We now know that these lungfish use their lungs, even during the wet period, in addition to their gills.

WALKING ON THEIR FINS.

Still more advanced are certain fishes of Brazil. In an aquarium they will walk on their fins (which are really limbs) to take bread from the hand of the keeper. Even in the water it does not swim, but wriggles like an eel, its limbs moving like those of a biped. Like its African cousin it spends the dry season asleep in a burrow which it hollows out in the mud. It carefully closes the tube with a babes while mother disports herself. The development of these lungs is simpler than the inexpert would think. All the higher fishes have air-bladders in their bodies. They are submarines, and used to alter the weight of the body by compressing or enlarging this air-bladder. The lungs are adaptations of the air-bladder, which is often double, and connected with the gullet.—John o' London's Weekly.

The Pope's Languages.

The new Pope is reputed to know twenty-seven languages. This is not a record, even at the Vatican, for a predecessor of His Holiness in the position of Papal Librarian was credited with the extraordinary number of seventy-two. This prodigy was a Scotsman—James Hopburn, who was born in East Lothian in the sixteenth century. After quitting St. Andrew's University he travelled all over the East, applying himself to the study of Oriental languages, and eventually became keeper of the Oriental books and manuscripts in the Vatican Library.

Red Tape.
 Probably, through nobody's fault, but the result of too much red tape, a resident of a northern outpost who arrived here several days ago for admission to the Lunatic Asylum, was kept waiting in the cells of the lock-up, whilst two M.H.A.'s vainly tried to have the patient admitted. The latter, who is a middle aged woman, resident of Bonavista, was examined by two doctors since coming to the city and pronounced insane, but because the regular forms had not been completed with, entrance to the institution could not be gained until this morning.
'Plane After Seals.
LEFT BOTWOOD THIS MORNING.
 Major Cotton left Botwood at 11 a.m. in the Martynside 'plane to search for the main patch of seals. The Westland machine, which will be piloted by either Mr. Bennett or Mr. Butler, will proceed to Pogo to stand by. A message to this effect was received today from Botwood. The sealing steamers are still on the outskirts of the patch, and if Major Cotton locates the main patch, it will help considerably to shorten the voyage and bring about a large catch.

Enquiries for Relatives.
 Enquiries are being made for the relatives of a Mrs. Annie Reed Murphy. The couple were married in Indiana, after arriving from the old land, and shortly after left to make a home here.

The Sale of Tickets.
 Several correspondents have written the Telegram complaining of the manner in which the sale of tickets for the B.L.S. play on St. Patrick's night was conducted. One writer states that when the tickets were placed on sale, those who gained admittance first, found that every worth while seat in the hall had been sold. The writer does not blame the members of the B.L.S. Society, many of whom were left out in the queue and kept in absolute ignorance of "private sale."

Obituary.
 Much sympathy will be expressed for Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Dominey of Greenspond, whose eldest daughter, Edna, passed away at home on the night of 12th inst. (Sunday). Deceased was of a most genial disposition, having many friends on the South West Coast where for a period she taught school. The sad part of it all is that Miss Dominey was making preparations for her marriage when death intervened. The Telegram joins with others in extending condolences to the bereaved parents and family.

Upon His Honor as Minister of the Gospel
 REV. W. A. THOMPSON WRITES OF DR. F. G. KINSMAN'S HEART TABLETS.
 I had heart trouble severely for fifteen years and had many doctors to treat me with no discernible effect. I had become so low that I could scarcely walk fifty steps. At night I was troubled with fluttering of the heart, and by no means had a night's rest for that length of time. I had pains most excruciating and could not lie on my left side even for a moment. I tried five boxes of your Heart Tablets and can now truthfully say that I am well. I am a Minister of the Gospel and upon my word as such, I believe I could not have fared had it not been for your remedy. I am not generally speaking, willing to give testimonials, but I fully owe this or more to you as owner of the Heart Tablets.

Serious Accident at An Auction Sale.

The extensive collection of paintings, sketches, and race prints of Lord Eldon were put up to auction at 16 Picardy Palace, Edinburgh on March 15, 1833, when a very serious accident occurred. The fame of the collection had attracted a great crowd of men and women of taste and letters, and when the auctioneer was in the act of disposing of a famous painting which had been a special favorite of Lord Eldon, the floor of the drawing-room suddenly gave away. From eighty to a hundred persons—ladies as well as gentlemen—were precipitated in one mass into an apartment below which was filled with china and articles of vertu. The cries and shrieks, intermingled with exclamations and ejaculations of distress, were heartrending; but what added to the unutterable agony of the awful moment was that the density of the cloud of dust, impervious to the rays of light, produced almost total darkness and diffused a choking atmosphere, which nearly stifled the terrified crowd, in which state of suspense they remained for several minutes. Among the mass of people who went down with the floor were Lord Moncrieff, Sir Jas. Riddell, and Sir Archibald Campbell. Efforts were made as quickly as possible to rescue the unfortunate people, but many persons were most severely injured, while Mr. Smith, a bank of Moray Place, on whom the hearthstone fell, was killed. The wonder is that more such accidents do not occur where sales are held in private houses, for obviously the floors of the rooms were never intended to stand weight of the crowds which are drawn to such public auctions.

JOHANNESBURG, March 16. The strike of miners, which has held South Africa in its grip for more than two months, has been called off. The decision was taken by the old South African Industrial Federation, as distinct from Federations Augmented Executive. It announced first, that the general strike was null and void; second, that the Augmented Executive is to call off the miners' strike, and third, that complicity in the revolution against the Government, is repudiated by the Federation.

KING OF EGYPT.
CAIRO, March 16. A rescript, issued by Sultan Achmed Fuad Pasha, last night, announced that Egypt had become an independent State, and that the Sultan will assume the title of King of Egypt. A Cairo despatch to the London Times, last week, said the Sultan was expected to assume the title of King upon ratification, by British Parliament, of the decision to terminate protectorate over Egypt. The new constitution, with which Egypt will be provided, however, calls for renunciations by the Sultan of some of his prerogatives. The British Parliament has not yet passed an act lifting the protectorate.

Harbor Grace Notes.

...came in like a lion as we are sure, and it appears by the frost in the last few days, that Spring is near as the few beautiful sunny days of last week had led us to think. We are hoping to see the return of the lamb—as the old States—with the advancement of our last winter month.

...Skating Rink was open to-day on Saturday past. During the season it was closed. No doubt the skating season will soon be at an end.

...annual St. Patrick's Day Concert was again looked forward to as an important event of that evening. It bespeaks a large audience.

...Nellie Dwyer left town on Monday to take passage by the S.S. Carotte for Boston, Mass.

...R. F. W. Strong arrived from St. John's by Saturday night's train for the city again this morning.

...Miss Simons spent a few days in business visit to the city last week and arrived by Saturday night's train.

...W. G. G. of Spaniard's Bay, returned during the week.

...W. E. R. Cracknell, Incumbent of St. Peter's Church, South Side, returned last week, after spending a few weeks at St. John's. The blockade had lengthened his stay in the city.

...Ladies of the Methodist Church are holding a Social, Easter evening, April 16th, in the hall, Coughlan Hall.

...O. E. Grimm went out by Saturday's train for St. John's to visit the General Hospital for the Blind. It is the wish of her many friends that she stay in this institution for much benefit.

...arrangements have been made with the employers who sought work at the mill and met with some trouble. It is hoped that they may be employed at the mill, and it is pleasing to note the scarcity of unemployment at the different corners of the place.

...regular meeting of the Young Men's Christian Club, held at the hall, Coughlan Hall, on Wednesday evening, a very lively program was given through the assistance of some Band and Flute selections, songs and recitations, which was followed by refreshments. The entire programme had been supplied by the young men, and after a vote of thanks had been accorded to them, the very pleasant evening came to a close by singing "For They are Jolly Good Fellows." This Club was organized by the Rev. W. H. Browning in October, 1921, and is for the mental, moral and physical improvement of the young men of the Methodist Church in our town—the motto of the Club being "Excelsior—ever higher. Meetings are held on every Wednesday, and a social time once a month. The Club is progressing favorably under its officers:—

President—Miss Mollie Pugh.
 Vice-Pres.—Miss Gertrude L. Davis.
 Secretary—Miss Marion I. Simons.
 Treasurer—Miss Winnie Whiteway.

The writer was pleased to be the recipient of a letter from Labrador, via Aero mail to-day, same having been from Cartwright, and stamped there on the 12th. From the contents can be gathered the following which may prove interesting to some of your readers, viz:—"We have been favored with the long expected aeroplane, which was notified of last fall and on Monday, 6th inst, she manifested herself. Excitement ran high for a little time at Cartwright, everybody eager to get snape, etc., etc." She made a run from Battle Harbor, covering 100 miles in 1½ hours. Pushing mail service, eh? Letters written here in the morning can be received your way in the evening of the same day." Can we imagine how much the visit of the airplane must have meant to these people of the frozen North? And with what surprise and pleasure the Martynside was greeted.—COR.

 Hr. Grace, March 13, 1922.

Brigus Notes.

Misses Taylor and Wilson, St. John's, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bartlett for the past week.

Mr. Joseph Burke, representing Crown Life Assurance Co., spent the past week here and neighboring settlements collecting business for his firm.

We learn that Messrs. J. Roberts, P. James and J. G. Percy are the Commissioners to look after the buying of the timber to rebuild the new Government Wharf.

Capt. W. Bartlett and crew, who were delayed from going to St. John's on account of the strike, left on Monday morning last to prosecute the sealibery again in the old Viking. We hope he will get a bumper trip this season.

The election of a new Road Board took place on Feb. 22nd, and the following were elected: Thos. Roberts, (Chairman), Jos. Cantwell, Edward French, Joseph Bartlett, Robert Bartlett and N. Clarke.

Miss Ollie O'Toole, daughter of Magistrate O'Toole, of Conception Harbor, spent the past few days here being the guest of Dr. F. D. Gill.

Miss H. Ayre is paying this town an extended visit and is the guest of Miss C. P. Jerrett.

Miss E. Bartlett, who spent the past two months visiting friends in St. John's, returned home last week.

We learn that the hockey match which was to be played between St. John's and Brigus, on Thursday last and which was postponed on account of ice conditions being unfit, will be played on Wednesday.

The old folks say when cock robin makes his appearance, Spring is approaching; if this parable is correct we are going to have an exceptionally early spring this year.
