WOMAN'S RIGHTS.

Dennis McFlynn has been thinking about woman's rights, and his excited imagination finds vent in poetry. Read it!

Hurrah! for the time that is coming
When ladies shall vote like the men;
Och, wouldn't the polls be a bloomin'
Wid fithers and crinolines then.
Election day thin I am thinkin'
Will be the great day of the year,
Whin lassies an' lads will be drinkin'
Together the candidates' beer.

What's the use to wrangle wid Biddy
About who the livin' shall make;
An' sure, if I'll please her, I'm ridin'
To give up the bod for her sake,
An' be stayin' all day at the shanty
To 'tend the domestic affairs,
A bollin' the half an' petties,
An' mendin' the rips and the tairs.

This whin election approaches,
An' the lassies are marchin' the strate
Wid big bands of music an' torches,
An' Biddy is standin' the strate,
I'll be on the sidewalk hurrahin'
For me own darlin' Biddy McFlynn,
Wid a child in me arms, and drawin',
A cap wid another one in.

An' whin she is makin' her speeches
Before the great min of the land,
Sure thin I will find her braches
An' sit by her side on the strand;
An' after she's done wid her talkin'
Och, thin, how the people will cheer.
An' off to the polls be a walkin',
An' votin' for Biddy, my dear.

An' whin all the votin' is over
An' Biddy's elected, sure thin
I'll live like a pig in a clover,
Wid Honorable Mrs. McFlynn.
The shanty I'll quickly be leavin'
An' livin' wid Biddy, my dear,
Wid a horse and a shay for me drivin',
An' a nager to wait on the baste.

It's never a lie I am speakin',
But three every word that I say,
It's myself I would never be takin'
The rights of the ladies away.
If a lassie, thinkin' it proper,
Shall shoulder the mortar an' brick,
Bad luck to the thief that would stoop her,
I'd black his two eyes purty quick.

The way is for all to kape aisy,
An' give to the ladies their way;
They'll trip up an' vote like a daisy,
No matter what blackguards may say,
An' thin they should give off the bakin'
Or twixin' the pick or the spade,
An' for us the livin' be makin'
Who cares, so the livin' is made?

IT'S AN ILL WIND THAT BLOWS NOBODY GOOD.

An Incident of the California Panic.

BY ANNA MORRIS.

It was the never-to-be-forgotten 25th of August, and all that long weary day I had been sitting at the open window of my room, or pacing restlessly up and down its narrow limits. As it was my vacation, I was not "dine" at my desk, and I was too much disgusted with my fellow-creatures to seek their companionship.

Twice had my sympathizing landlady knocked at my door, with a gentle intimation that dinner was ready, and twice had I growled out, "I don't want any dinner—do leave me alone!"

"Poor dear Mr. Foster!" I heard her sigh to the chambermaid, as she beat a retreat the second time. "I am afraid he has something on his mind!"

Something on my mind! I should think I had! Wouldn't any man have something on his mind, who had been treated as I had been! Only two weeks ago, and I would have taken my oath that I was the happiest fellow in all California. Hadn't Nellie Jameson—bless her sweet face—just owned that she loved me, after having driven me nearly wild by her flirtations with other men; and hadn't I rushed off and purchased there and then, the prettiest little house on Russian Hill, which I had happened to see a day or two before? It was nearly new, and very neatly furnished. Its owner was about moving to the East, and I got the whole establishment at a very moderate price, which the savings of my salary enabled me to pay. Again and again I explored every nook and corner with the most rapturous delight, fancying how cheerful the little parlor would look when graced by Nellie's presence; then, wandering of to the kitchen, and endeavoring to determine whether there was every convenience there, as the owner had assured me or whether I had better hasten to the nearest hardware store, and order a few cardinals of pots and pans. On the whole, I decided to wait till Nellie should inspect it with me, which I had made up my mind would be as soon as her father returned.

She was an only child, and Mr. Jameson was a widower. He had been away on business for some weeks now, and did not know of the precise condition of affairs between us, but that gave me little uneasiness. He had always been very friendly, invited me frequently to his house, and never objected to Nellie's walking or riding with me; in short, had behaved, I thought, as a father-in-law elect should "do."

"Yes, I suppose so," Nellie said, when I made this remark, in answer to her "wonder what papa would say,"—"only, Harry, don't you remember you said yourself that he did not see why he brought Mr. Selby here so often, and—"

"And as soon as I can talk to your father he shall come no more," I interrupted. "I do not like the man, and I don't believe the fine stories he tells of his great wealth. But never mind him now, Nellie," I added, "I don't like to see you look so sad. Come and sing me one more song, and then I must say good-night."

And she sang, and the days had gone blissfully by, until about the twentieth of August, when Mr. Jameson had returned. I was at his house when he arrived, and at once made known all my hopes and plans.

To my surprise, he asked, "What property have you, Mr. Foster?"

Now, he knew as well as I did, that I was head clerk in a large establishment, and had a good salary, with strong hopes of soon becoming a member of the firm, for the senior partner was an old friend of Mr. Jameson, and had told me that he had made particular inquiries as to my position. I had thought that all right, seeing as he must, my intentions in regard to Nellie, but supposing he thought me ignorant of his having the information. I explained briefly what my prospects were, and impatiently awaited his answer.

It was not long in coming. Leaning back in his chair, and slowly twisting his heavy watch-chain as he spoke, "I am deeply grieved, Mr. Foster," he began, in sarcastic tones, "to be obliged to decline your highly flattering offer, but the truth is, I look higher for my daughter. Parents are apt to be ambitious for their children, you know; so perhaps I may be pardoned for hoping that Nellie will make a wealthy match. I had supposed that your own good sense would teach you this, and though I was always well pleased to see you as a friend, I must beg you to distinctly understand that anything of this sort is entirely impossible."

I bowed, and left the room without a word. Some other time I might argue the matter with him, but if I stayed another minute then, I knew I should choke him; and as he was Nellie's father, that would not answer.

In the hall I met Nellie, who saw in a moment that something was wrong, and slipping her dear little hand into mine, drew me out of the door, and down into a shaded summer-house in the garden, where we could be secure from interruptions, before she asked:

"What is it, Harry?"

I told her as quietly as I could, longing all the while to snatch her up, and carry her off where her father would never see her again.

"I was afraid he would not consent," she said sadly. "I am convinced he intends me to marry Mr. Selby, if he asks me; indeed, I think there is some understanding on the subject between them, but I will promise you solemnly that I will marry no one but you. Perhaps, when papa sees how much I care for you, he will relent. He is very fond of me, and generally ends by letting me have my own way, though he may scold for a while."

So with many promises to be faithful we parted, my only consolation as I slowly returned to my lodgings being that I had not mentioned the dear little house on Russian Hill to Nellie. I had refrained from telling her of my purchase, intending it as a delightful surprise, as soon as her father had given his consent, and I was now very glad that I had done so. "It would only have added to her sorrow," I reflected, as I found how hard it was to give up all my bright dreams connected with it.

Now, the question was, what should be done with the house? I could not bear the thought of letting or selling it, and finally determined to let it remain as it was for the present. If I could in no way change Mr. Jameson's feelings toward me, I would sell it, and leave San Francisco.

In the meantime, what should I do with myself? It was, as I said, my vacation. I had declined several invitations to join my friends in their summer excursions, preferring to remain near Nellie. Now almost all whom I knew were out of town, and being in no state of mind to join them, I shut myself up in my room, and moodily pondered on ways and means of winning Mr. Jameson's favor.

It was on the evening of the twenty-fifth, that I received a little broken-hearted note from Nellie, saying that her father had brought home Mr. Selby, and introduced him to her as her future husband, and upon her appeal to him not to sacrifice her, he had sworn that she should be married the very next evening, and be out of my reach.

Mr. Selby, when she implored him to withdraw his suit, saying she had no love to give him, had coolly replied that he would be satisfied with her esteem—endeavor to be worthy of it, etc., etc.

Nellie concluded by saying that she had resolved to leave home; she would not tell me how or where she was going, lest I should be accused of having persuaded her to take this step, but would let me hear from her again as soon as possible. "I'll wait till to-morrow afternoon," she added, "in the hope that papa may yet yield."

I knew well enough where she would go, to an uncle and aunt who lived a few miles from the city, and who had been the kindest friends to her since her mother's death. I believed that they would protect her as far as possible, but how much that would be I could not determine. They were poor, and consequently not held in much esteem by Mr. Jameson.

I also knew the secret of Mr. Selby's influence over Mr. Jameson. He had not been long in San Francisco, lived in great style, drove splendid horses and talked loudly of his wealth. Such a man was the very one to impress Mr. Jameson, who, having begun life as a poor boy, and earned his fortune by his own exertions, now made money his God, and was ready to bow down and worship any one who possessed it. There had been various discreditable stories about in regard to Selby, but nothing positive enough to convince Mr. Jameson.

So this was my position on the afternoon of the twenty-sixth. Little wonder that my good landlady concluded that I had something on my mind!

Suddenly the doorbell rang a furious peal; quick steps were heard on the stairs and a loud rap sounded on my door.

"Let me in, Harry," cried a familiar voice, and as I turned the key, in rushed Dick Halset.

"How can you stay here?" he exclaimed, "when the whole city is in such excitement! Haven't you heard?" he went on, in answer to my look of enquiry. "Why, man, the Bank of California has stopped payment! It is said that there is an official announcement that it will not go on at all, and if that is the case, half the firms in the city will fail. Come out, and hear for yourself!"

I seized my hat, and dashed down stairs conscious of only one thought. If the Bank of California had failed, Mr. Jameson was ruined, as his entire fortune was invested in the mining stocks controlled by the bank, which of course would now sink to mere cipher, and what effect would this have on Selby?

The city was, as Dick had said, in great excitement. California street was filled with a dense crowd on either side of the bank. Every emotion was depicted in the countenances by which we were surrounded, from idle curiosity to perfect agony. We had pushed through the crowd nearly to the bank, when I saw a man reeling along, as though almost unable to walk. In an instant I perceived it was Mr. Jameson. Fearful of rupture, if I offered the assistance he so evidently required, and yet unwilling, for Nellie's sake, to let him pass unaided, I hesitated for a moment what course to pursue, when to my relief he was making for Selby, who stood near.

"All the better," thought I, the bitter feelings all returning at sight of the two. "I want nothing to do with either," and was passing along with Dick, when a sudden exclamation fell upon my ear. It was from Mr. Jameson, who, unheeding me, or the crowd, was talking earnestly to Selby.

"All gone!" he was saying. "I tell you Selby, the property it has taken me a lifetime to accumulate, will be gone, if this is true."

I glanced at Selby. His face grew white. "Well, sir," he said, coldly. "I sincerely regret your ill-fortune," and turned to depart without another word.

"Don't go, Selby!" exclaimed Mr. Jameson, seizing him by the arm. "Come home with me, and talk matters over. Why, I had nearly forgotten! It is your wedding day! Come home, and we'll send for the parson, and have the job done up right! No failure there, eh?" he added, with a feeble attempt at a jest.

But Selby drew his arm away. "Excuse me," Mr. Jameson, he said, almost insolently. "Circumstances will not permit—that is in your reverses, you will undoubtedly require your daughter's presence—sorry to deprive you—I have an unexpected call away from the city; and he turned to go.

I believe I should have knocked the fellow's brains out, in my mingled rage and joy, had not Dick restrained me.

"Let him alone," he whispered; "we shall have enough to do to take care of Mr. Jameson."

We had, indeed! Mr. Jameson would have fallen to the ground, had not the crowd been so great as to prevent him, but he was entirely insensible, and continued so until we had extricated him with much difficulty, and placed him in a carriage. I feared a apoplexy, but Dick, who was somewhat of a doctor, brought him round all right. As his recollection returned, he seemed quite overcome on finding that I was taking care of him.

"This is returning good for evil, indeed," he said, with a ghastly smile. Perhaps you do not know Mr. Foster, that the bank failure will ruin me."

"I heard you tell Mr. Selby so," I replied quietly, at once perceiving his meaning; and was very sorry for your sake that such was the case.

"Perhaps," he continued with the same suspicious look and tone, you would not be so anxious now to marry Nellie."

"On the contrary, I answered, I am more than ever anxious to do so."

"But I shall not have even a roof left to shelter me," he argued; and then what would become of you? These words seemed to place his loss so vividly before him, that he quite broke down, and rocked helplessly back and forth, moaning, "Not even a roof to shelter me!"

I placed my hand on his shoulder to rouse him. Listen to me, Mr. Jameson, I have a home, which I prepared when I thought to gain your consent to my marriage with Nellie. It is not grand and luxurious like yours, but neat and quiet and comfortable. Let me marry Nellie, and her home shall be yours. I have enough to support us all, and will most gladly do so. You have seen for yourself how much Selby is to be depended upon."

"I can tell you plenty about him," put in Dick, drawing some letters from his pocket. "Listen to me, Mr. Jameson, I have a home, which I prepared when I thought to gain your consent to my marriage with Nellie. It is not grand and luxurious like yours, but neat and quiet and comfortable. Let me marry Nellie, and her home shall be yours. I have enough to support us all, and will most gladly do so. You have seen for yourself how much Selby is to be depended upon."

"I believe it a lie! He would have married poor Nellie for her fortune! The villain! and now that it is gone, he is deceiving her! As for you, Foster," he continued, "I beg your pardon, and thank you for all your kind words. You shall have my daughter as soon as you choose."

"This very evening, then," I interrupted, and rising hastily, gave orders to the hack man to drive as rapidly as possible to the residence of Rev. Mr. Smith.

"What do you want with him?" exclaimed both my companions in amazement. "To tie the knot at once!" I returned, jestingly, though in truth, I began to feel much alarmed lest Nellie should have departed before we reached her home, and was secretly determined if such was the case, to pursue her to her uncle's and marry her there, lest more favorable accounts of the bank's condition might bring a change in Mr. Jameson's feelings—possibly a reconciliation between him and Selby.

Fortunately, however, the clergyman was at home, and accompanied us without delay to Mr. Jameson's residence, where we found Nellie, though she privately informed me that she had her hat on to depart, when we drove up.

It did not take long to reconcile her to the change of bridegrooms, or induce her to consent to my wish for an immediate union; so an hour or two later, I had the satisfaction of exhibiting my little home to my wife and her father.

Nellie was in raptures—declaring it a thousand times more beautiful than her father's great house, with all its showily furnished apartments. Wonderful to relate her father agreed to all she said, and although, as I foresaw, his losses are not as great as he anticipated, and he might easily retain his own establishment, he much prefers disposing of it, and remaining with us, and he is so agreeable, that Nellie and I prefer it also.

Mr. Selby made some overtures for a reconciliation, but the coldness with which they were met, and the astonishing intelligence that Nellie was already married, effectually quenched him.

We all sincerely regret the loss and sorrow occasioned by the panic, but nevertheless, as Dick observes, "It's an ill wind that blows nobody good."

THE O'DONAGHUE.—Writing of the Lakes of Killarney a correspondent says: "On Ross Island are the ruins of a castle once belonging to the O'Donaghues. Once in seven years, on a fine morning in May, he appears riding upon a snow-white horse. Fairies hover about him and strew flowers in his path. As he approaches his former home everything assumes its early magnificence. The castle is no longer a ruin, but in a state of regal splendor. He rides about as though overseeing his estate, and if any choose to follow him, they may cross the deepest part of the lake without wetting a foot, and ride to his treasure house in the mountains, where liberal gifts are bestowed upon the courageous visitor. Before the sun comes up the O'Donaghue returns to the island and vanishes in the ruins of the castle. 'Have any of you ever seen him?' I asked of our boatmen. 'Only the man at the prow,' he has seen him once." "Did he get a present?" I inquired. "No," the one O'Donaghue preached him a sermon, and that is all he does nowadays."

READY FOR EMERGENCIES.—Pronouncing the lesson taught by the great fire in Boston, a man living near Springfield, Mass., has made up his mind that he won't be burned alive. Once every week, he gives the alarm of fire at midnight, and which his wife and children instantly arise and dress. He takes out a window sash, puts a rope around his wife, and lowers her to the ground, and then throws into her arms one child at a time. He next puts his furniture into the street, and moves it to a place of safety. The whole time occupied is less than fifteen minutes, and he hopes to do it in ten. He broke the arm of his second eldest child the first time, and his wife says the piano is rather out of tune, in consequence of its many and hurried removals, but otherwise he is quite satisfied with the excellence of his plan.

The last remarkable fish story comes from ancient Nantucket, where a fisherman caught a seventy-five pound codfish, which, when opened, was found to contain two ducks. It would have been still more remarkable perhaps, if the two ducks had caught a codfish, which when opened, was found to contain a seventy-five pound fisherman, or if the codfish had caught a fisherman containing two seventy-five pound ducks.

Brown came home late the other night, and Mrs. B., reaching out of the bedroom window, said: "So you've been tipping the glass again, have you?" "Glass," said Brown; "his 'tis a funny word; take off the 'g' and it's you, my dear." "Yes," answered the wife, "then take off the 'l' and it's you, you wretch," and she slammed down the window with a bounce.

A French wit who had bargained in vain with a Jewish dealer for a superb Christ on ivory, finally burst forth with the remark: "My friend, your ancestors sold the original of that picture for one-hundredth part of the money you ask."

An aspiring orator at St. Louis has irretrievably damaged his political prospects by alluding in a speech to several prominent citizens as his "tried friends." As most of them had not only been tried, but convicted, and were awaiting sentence, the allusion was not considered particularly fortunate.

As the rays come from the sun, and yet are not the sun, even so our love and pity, though they are not of God, but merely a poor, weak image and reflection of him, yet from him alone they come. If there is mercy in our hearts, it comes from the fountain of mercy. If there is the light of love in us it is a ray from the full sun of love.—Charles Kingsley.

It is on record that there was formerly in Sweden a law which punished the calumniator with a fine or money which was called slander-money. But this was not all. The slanderer was compelled in court to slap his own mouth, to recall the slander, to proclaim himself a liar, and to walk backward out of the court-room. Moreover, he was incapacitated to make a last will, and, unless his accuser interceded for him, he was expelled from town. This law might do little harm now-a-days.

Arrival of the Prince of Wales in England, Enthusiastic Reception.

The fleet bearing the Prince of Wales and party, arrived at Portsmouth on the 11th inst. The Prince accompanied by the Princess and royal children landed at the dockyard, where a vast crowd of people had assembled to meet them. There was great cheering as His Royal Highness stepped ashore. The Mayor of Portsmouth read an address and a chorus of 230 ladies and gentlemen sang "Welcome Home." On the conclusion of the ceremonies the Prince and Princess and suite took a special train for London and arrived at Victoria Station the same evening. An immense crowd surrounded the building, and cheered with great enthusiasm.

The proposed vote of censure moved by Sir Henry James on the Royal Titles Act, was debated in the House of Commons last night and decided—334 ayes to 226 nays.

The Turkish Ambassador is instructed to express to the Great Powers the Porte's deep regret at the Salonica outrage, and to give assurances that the guilty persons will be punished.

He is also instructed to declare the Porte is willing to meet the wishes of the three Emperors regarding the execution of the programme embodied in Andrassy's note, and will raise no objection to the guarantee, which may be required by the Powers.

Merchant Shipping Bill.

The House of Commons resumed its sittings after the Easter recess on Monday, 24th, and then went into Committee once more on the Merchant Shipping Bill, the consideration of which it resumed on the 14th clause, relating to the stowage of grain cargoes, which, after a short discussion, was agreed to with verbal amendments. A somewhat protracted debate followed upon the next clause, making the space occupied by certain deck cargoes liable to dunnage. To this Mr. Pimms proposed an amendment which would have the effect of prohibiting deck cargoes on British ships, except of such goods as could only be carried on the deck or carried there more safely than below. The amendment was proposed by ministers, and in the course of discussion Sir Wm. Hartcourt objected that the clause was a virtual legalization of the system of deck cargoes. On the other hand, the Chancellor of the Exchequer contended the amendment on the ground that it introduced a protectionist policy in favour of British as against foreign ships, and that its adoption might entail serious difficulties with foreign States. Mr. D. Jenkins contended that instead of checking, the clause would encourage deck loading, owing to the inadequacy to repress the evil. And Lord Elington intimated that he should vote against both clause and amendment, because the former did not go far enough, whilst the latter went too far. Upon a division Mr. Pimms's amendment was negatived by 198 to 75. In reply to appeals made by members Sir C. Adderley said it would be wrong for him to hold out any that the Government had any scheme in contemplation respecting deck cargoes. Mr. Mundella remarked that, after this intimation, it was only reasonable to assume that nothing further was to be expected from the Government as to deck loading.

Lost in the Quicksands.

Considerable excitement was created in St. Louis yesterday morning on the discovery that the Belleville House, a two-story frame, just south of the Pittsburgh Railroad and Coal Company's dyke, near the southern limits of the city, had disappeared in quicksand. The circumstances connected with the usual occurrence are as follows. The house, which is used as a hotel, was built on piles, but a few days before showed evidences of an inclination to sink into the earth. On Thursday night it sunk about two feet, but the proprietor, Mr. Frank Decker, not apprehending anything serious, paid no attention to the matter. On Friday night the guests went to bed as usual, but at a late hour the clerk, Mr. George Heubner, discovered that the premises were getting rather unsettled and gave the alarm. Before the inmates could realize what was going on, the building had sunk forty-eight feet, carrying with it ten persons. The back water from the river soon surrounded the place where the house stood, and would have very probably taken it away, if the gable end, all that is visible, had not been securely fastened with ropes to terra firma. Mr. Decker's loss on the building is about $6000. Insurance not known. The house was recently purchased by its present proprietor, and in all probability it entirely disappeared last night, as very little of it was visible at a late hour.—St. Louis Journal, May 7.

A contemporary remarks that it is a "and commentary on our Arcostook climate, when the early robins congregate on the window-sills and loudly demand hot whiskey punch and the crows sit on the highest trees gawling their throats with Cayenne pepper." And on the same day a Lewiston paper assures its subscribers that a gentleman in that town, has grass in his door-yard that has grown this season two and one-half feet.

Corporal Punishment in Schools.

is attracting attention in St. John, Fredericton and elsewhere in the Province. A recent case in Portland, St. John, resulted in the teacher being fined $10. It was the third offence. A few days ago a teacher in Fredericton, flogged a boy with a ruler, and was punished by the father of the child. From the statement as published it appears there were two brothers at the school, the youngest of the two was told to get a new copy book, and if he came without it he would be punished. His mother sent him to school without it, as it was not convenient to get it that morning. His teacher, a female, reported him to the principal, a Mr. Wright, who beat the lad with a round ruler. His older brother ran to his brother's aid and belaboured the teacher and hit him with his slate, and extracted his brother from the teacher's grasp. The boys were ordered to leave the school. Their father called the teacher up of the school, and enquired what he beat his child for. His answer was, "to please himself." The parent informed him he would not permit any man to beat his child in such a manner. The teacher "squared off," and the parent gave him a doubling, "and told him to take that because it pleased him." The father then complained to the Secretary of the Trustees, and they told him to send the boys back to school, which he did. A meeting of Trustees was called, but owing to the absence of one of them, it was adjourned over, and at the next meeting the parent was not notified. At that meeting it was decided the boys should make an apology to the teacher before they could be admitted to the school. The parent objected as he states only one side of the question was heard. Now, it is next to impossible for teachers to get along with some boys, without chastising them, but they should have good cause for doing so, and it should be performed in a proper manner. A switch or thong, would not be improper, but using a round ruler to beat any child is worse than harsh. Firmness, and moderate correction will answer, but when improper weapons are used, parents will interfere.

The Japan Daily Herald of the 8th April has been kindly mailed to us, by one of the officers of the Occidental and Oriental Steamship Co., Mr. F. A. Stevenson. It is a large and well-filled sheet, from which we learn that the citizens of Yokohama, enjoy life they have theatres, races, gymnastics and other exhibitions. Mr. Stevenson we understand stands well in the estimation of his employers and brother officers.

PLANTING TREES.—It is pleasant to notice that several persons in the town are planting shade trees in front of their dwellings and on their grounds. We have heretofore advocated this commendable practice, as adding to the appearance of the town, and adorning the grounds.

The St. George tug Utopia made her first trip for the season to St. Andrews on Monday last having brought over a number of passengers from the "Birks of Macdonald." A. H. Gillmor, Esq., M. P., was among the passengers; his stay was short as business required his presence at St. Stephen, and he left by the Steamer Belle Bruen in the afternoon.

Notwithstanding the season is advancing very little is yet done towards planting and sowing. On Monday morning ice formed, and it was so cold that people working in their gardens used mittens and gloves; there is no question as to the season is being back.

Mr. Hart commenced operations in his Lobster Factory last week. His orders were large; the fame of the Passamaquoddy Bay Lobsters having been established. He has had men employed during the winter preparing for the putting up of the lobsters.

The Summer Term of Training School was opened on Friday last. Dr. Rand, Dr. Jack, the Lieut. Governor and other gentlemen addressed the pupils. The students admitted for the term numbered 91.

ROBERT ROBINSON, Esq., we are happy to state is improving in health, his voice is becoming stronger.

Col. Ince was in town, on Tuesday, and is looking hearty. We learn that Campa are to be held at Fredericton and Woodstock during the summer.

Mr. Andrew Phair, son of the late Postmaster of Fredericton, accidentally shot himself on Saturday last; the shot passed through his right arm close to the shoulder. The Doctor has but little hope of saving the arm.

GRAND SOUTHERN RAILWAY.—A notice in our columns asking for Tenders for Grading and Masonry of the Western Division of the line, is a sufficient answer to the squibs which have appeared in some newspapers. That the work will go on is beyond a shadow of doubt, as the contractors are reliable men of means.

A. H. Gillmor, Esq., M. P., President of the Company, with Chas. Clinch, Saml. Johnson and J. E. Lynott, Esq's., Directors, are in town to-day.

The Circuit Court was opened yesterday. His Honor Mr. Justice Wetmore presided, and delivered an admirable charge to the Grand Jury, in which he complimented the County on the absence of crime. The Sheriff presented him with a pair of white gloves. No causes were entered for trial.

Dr. COCKBURN has taken the store and office lately occupied by E. L. Street, where he keeps on hand medicines, &c.

It is reported that the principal object of the Hon. Mr. Blake's visit to England is to secure an arrangement with the Judicial authorities in Great Britain respecting the Supreme Court Bill, with reference to the last Court appeal. The final settlement of this important matter, is required by the Dominion.

There is another scandal at Sackville, implicating a leading member of a prominent church in a very serious offence—abusing confidence as an Executor to an estate whose assets foot up nearly $4,000.

The New Boat for the Paris Crew, was unfortunately smashed while being brought from England in the Steamship Scotia. The boat was in a case, carried on deck, and during rough weather, the foreboom struck the case smashing it and damaging the boat. A new one will no doubt be ordered. The crew are in training for the regatta which is to take place at Philadelphia.

A SOUVENIR FOR THE CENTENNIAL.—Messrs. A. B. Fleming & Co., the celebrated Printing and Manufacturing Co. of Leith, Scotland, have published a large royal sheet, in which their advertisement is printed in the character of all the languages and tongues which have been written up to the present time, "As a Souvenir of the International character of the Philadelphia Exhibition," in the form of a Polyglot Advertisement. It was executed at their office, with the assistance of Messrs. Gilbert & Livingston, the eminent Oriental Printers of London.

It is a wonderful piece of work, and is well worth inspection.

ARNEY BROWN one of the men who escaped from Fredericton Jail, was caught by Sheriff Temple and policeman Woolard at Muzell Settlement a short distance from Fredericton. The prisoner is safely locked up with little fear of another escape.

The St. John River is higher than has been known for many years, and the water still rising. Persons having stores near the wharves have had to remove. The Railway wharf at Gibson is submerged, and the lands at Sheffield and Mangerville are flooded.

THE PREMIER'S VIEW.—It is impossible to procure an enlightened enforcement of Treaties from the Government of the United States," apropos of the want of reciprocity in the use of canals, etc., contrary to the Treaty of Washington, is strongly approved in a leader in the London Standard of the 24th inst. It remarks that Canada must feel aggrieved both with England and the United States on this account.

MR. BENJAMIN KILLAM of Yarmouth is missing. The Halifax Herald says "Mr. Killam left for Digby on business, thence to St. John, thence to Boston, on to Albany, and thence somewhere else. He was Assignee for Young, Kinney & Corning, Commissioners for signing Town Bonds. Vice President of the Exchange Bank. He is wanted, to pay over $30,000 of Estate funds, an overdrawn Bank balance of $100,000, including endorsed paper, with $100,000, or $12,000, Township funds, the whole amounting to the respectable sum of $50,000. His bondsmen have made up their minds for the worst."

CITY COLLECTOR Geo. Van Hollern left Chicago Wednesday night for Europe via Canada. He has confessed to friends that he is a defaulter in the sum of $100,000, and this confession is verified by an examination of his accounts. A great part of this amount has been used to pay gambling debts, which it was said he was constantly contracting.

The Railway.

To the Editor of the Standard.
Sir.—How long is the town of St. Andrews to be left without a Daily Train. Are people who have travelled all the way from California by rail, without any detention for nearly six thousand miles to meet the first and I may say only detention on the N. B. & C. Railway within a few miles of St. Andrews? And is the old and respected Postmaster of this Town, who has served in his office for nearly half a century to be kept up until nearly midnight, waiting for the mail conveyed three times a week by stage. Will the people suffer any longer, when it is in their power to prevent such unpleasant delays?
Yours, etc.

(We cannot answer our correspondent, the delay complained of has been a serious injury to ourselves.)

THE PRINCE OF WALES.
Arrived in England on the 11th inst. His Royal Highness was met in the Solent, by the Princess of Wales and his children, who were on board the yacht Albion. On landing at Plymouth, the people of all ranks turned out and gave the Prince, a right loyal and magnificent welcome—such an one as Englishmen alone could give. Tens of thousands vied with each other in the enthusiastic reception tendered him; the Mayor and corporation of Plymouth presented him with an address, and the new national song "Welcome Home," written by the eminent composer, Sir Julius Benedict, was sung under the lead of its distinguished writer, and the chorus rendered by 300 ladies and gentlemen. The streets were lined with soldiers who "presented arms," as the Prince passed. His Royal Highness and Suite took a special train for London, where he arrived about 5 o'clock, and upwards of a million of the citizens assembled to receive him. Flags and streamers floated in the streets through which the cortege passed—and the Prince was heartily cheered, the ladies waving their handkerchiefs. At Buckingham Palace his august mother Queen Victoria, received him, after which he proceeded to his home, Marlborough House, which he reached at half past seven o'clock.

THE CENTENNIAL.
was opened on Wednesday last with great eclat. The President, Cabinet Ministers, officers of the Army and Navy, and the Diplomatic Corps, the Emperor and Empress of Brazil, were present. The concourse of people was not so large as was expected about thirty thousand persons attended the opening. The absence of a large number of foreigners is commented upon in our United States exchanges; the fact is, the arrangements are not yet completed, nor will they, until about the first of June, after which date many "foreigners" will probably visit the Centennial. As an "Exposition" it will no doubt prove a success, financially, it can hardly be expected to do so; the event, however, is worthy of any expenditure the Government and people may make, as it celebrates a most important epoch in the history of that great country, the United States.

EXPENSIVE ECONOMY.—The following extract is a proof the expensive folly of employing incompetent men at low wages to perform the duty of competent persons at fair salaries:

"The British Parliament think it worth while to employ Baron Percy, whose scientific attainments are well known, to supervise the heating and ventilation of their buildings, and pay him about $20,000 a year for his services. In the U. States, the engineer in charge of the ventilating machinery of the House of Representatives is appointed by the clerk of the House, and receives $1,800 a year.

Upon the assembling of the present House of Representatives, Mr. Small, the assistant engineer who for several years has had charge of the electrical gas-lighting apparatus, was invited to resign. Among the appointments made by the new House, none understood the management of the battery and switches. The chief engineer, in his wisdom, undertook it. Mr. Small refused to give any information, the chief engineer, after some time, was dismissed, and there was no occasion to light up the dome. But at last this wise electrician turned on the gas in the dome and lighted it. The house also, at the close of the evening session on a Friday, he extinguished the gas, but left 2,800 burners open, and they remained so until Monday morning. Over $1,000 worth of gas escaped, and there was enough gas in the building to have heated Donaldson around the world. In his frantic efforts to straighten things, he put the battery (composed of 150 four-gallon smee cells) on short circuit, and succeeded not only in ruining the battery, but in burning off over 500 of the platinum points, which cover the burners.

This person has been rather an expensive experiment. The ventilation of the capital is very defective, and many cases of sickness have been caused by bad air.

A gentleman residing in Buffalo, N. Y. has just found his son, after a search of eleven years. When the boy was eight years old his father put him out to board with a lady, who afterwards removed to Buffalo, and then disappeared. Since that time the father has been unable to learn the whereabouts of his boy, although he has been constantly at work to find out, until he made the acquaintance of Deputy Chief Quinn in February last, coming to Boston for that purpose.

Captain Quinn took a strong hold of the matter, and after a diligent inquiry he learned that the boarding-mistress had come to Boston, and that the boy had been adopted by a gentleman who gave him his own name and took him to Bath, Me., to reside. An interview between father and son occurred yesterday, in Boston, when the father recognized his child in the midst of a large assemblage, although eleven years has passed since they met. The son is very happy in his new home, but will go to New York to remain a fortnight with his father.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE, OTTAWA.

Friday, day of May, 1875.

PRESENT: HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL IN COUNCIL.

WHEREAS it is provided by the 58th Section of the Act 31 Victoria, Chapter 6, intitled, "An Act respecting the Customs," that the Importer of any cattle or swine may slaughter and cure and pack the same in bond, under such Regulations and restrictions as the Governor in Council may from time to time make for this purpose.

And whereas it has been found expedient to give effect to the said Section 58, in so far as regards the importation of swine, and to alter the terms of the Regulations for this purpose, adopted by Order in Council of 22nd day of May, 1864:

His Excellency, on the recommendation of the honorable the Minister of Customs and under the provisions of the said Act has pleased to order, and it is hereby ordered, that the said Order in Council of the 22nd day of May, 1864, and the Regulations thereby established be and the same are hereby repealed, and that the following Regulations be and are hereby adopted and established in lieu thereof—that is to say:

1. Upon the importation of swine for the purpose of slaughter, the Importer shall enter the same for Warehousing, upon the usual form of such entries, stating upon its face, the number and value of the hogs and also the quantity of pork bacon, hams and lard, which the Importer shall produce when slaughtered and dressed at 110 pounds weight for each live hog so imported, and the amount of duty to which such produce is or may be liable under the rate prescribed by the tariff in force at the time being as the proper duty on meat of that kind. Such Importer shall also execute a bond to the Queen, in double the amount of such duty, the condition of which bond shall be, that upon the due exportation within one year of the said products of the swine so imported and converted into pork, bacon, hams and lard, or part of the duty secured by the said bond, then the said bond shall be and become null and void, otherwise shall remain in full force and virtue.

2. Upon the receipt into the Bonding Warehouse, the swine shall be regarded only as meat, and it shall not be lawful to remove any of them from such Warehouse alive; nor shall any part of the produce of such swine be removed therefrom, for any purpose, without a permit from the Collector, or proper Officer of Customs, as in the case of all other bonded goods.

3. Swine imported in carcases to be cured or packed in bond, may be entered in the usual way for Warehouse, and be placed in the premises established as a Warehouse of this class for the special purpose of curing and packing. The weight of such carcases to be duly ascertained by the proper Officer of Customs, and the Importer shall give bonds to the Queen in double the amount of duties accruing thereupon under the tariff then in force, conditioned for the due exportation of the same, or payment of duty within two years from the date of first entry.

4. The killing pens, curing and packing houses, and all cellars, stores or other apartments, included in such Warehouse, shall be accessible at all times between sunrise and sunset to the inspection and survey of the Collector or Inspector of Customs, or any officer of Customs to whom the duty of such inspection may be assigned by them or either of them.

5. The produce of swine imported alive and warehoused for slaughter, at the rate of 113 pounds for each hog, and the meat of the swine imported in carcases for curing and packing, at the actual ascertained weight at first entry, shall be subject while in bond to all changes in the tariff rate of duty, and when entered out of bond for home consumption, shall pay the rate of duty force at the date of such entry.

Representative and Champion of American Art.
PROSPERITY FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE.

THE ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA.
ISSUED MONTHLY.

A MAGNIFICENT CONCEPTION, WONDERFULLY CARRIED OUT.

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal, did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and beautiful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the end of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume can not duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on ground of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, or original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interpretation of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, sustain an unabated interest, impulse where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment, worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875
Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in all colors, of the same to his dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"MAN'S UNSELFISH FRIEND"
will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself.

Besides the chromo, every advance subscriber to THE ALDINE for 1875 is constituted a member, and entitled to all the privileges of THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500 are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

ONE SUBSCRIPTION ENTITLING TO THE ALDINE ONE YEAR, THE CHROMO AND THE ART UNION.
$6 per annum in advance.
(No charge for postage.)
SPECIMEN COPIES OF THE ALDINE, 50 CENTS.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of James Sutton, President.
