Spirit Longings.

Oh, for a tongue of eloquence, To move the hearts of men, And prompt to high and holy deeds With heaven-inspired pen.

To raise the worldly and the cold From groveling, low desire, And kindle in each human soul Love's pure, celestial fire.

To bid the scoffer cease to sneer The slanderer veil his voice, And see wide-spread humanity In brotherhood rejoice.

To light the dark despairing soul,

With words of hope and cheer, And teach it, earth has many thing; Yet beautiful and dear. To point the mourner to the sky,-

While bending 'neath the rod,-To see the loved one free from care Reposing with his God. To take the hand of Poverty,

So shrinking, cold and wan,

And bid him with kind words and deeds

· God speed' life's journey on-To steal into some kindly heart And feel a kindred spirit there

Gave welcome ere 'twas said. And having thus the gift to heal, Should I find sorrow there, Tell it, how every earth-born heart

Must still its burden bear.

Thus teaching ever, learning too. I'd have the ills of Time, And then with glad, rejoicing souls, In Heavenly chorus chime

UNCLE TOM'S GUARDIAN ANGEL.

All who have read "Uncle Tom's Cabin, and wept over the fate of that sweet creature, "Little Eva," will read with pleasure the following lines, dedicated to Mrs. H. Beecher Stowe, by J. G. Whittier:

Dry the holy tears for Eva, With the blessed angels leave ber; Of the form so sweet and fair Give to earth a tender care, For the golden locks of Eva, Let the sunny south land give ber, Flow'ry pillows of repose, Orange bloom and budding rose

All is light and peace with Eva, There the darkness cometh never Tears are wiped and fetters fall, And the Lord is all in all, Weep no more for happy Eva, Wrong or sin no more shall grieve her, Care and pain and weariness. Lost in love so measureless

Gentle Eva! loving Eva! Child confessor, truth believer. List'ner at thy master's knee, "Saffer such to come to me." O, for faith like thine, sweet Eva Lighting all the solemn river, And the blessing of the poor, Wafting to the heavenly shore.

Agriculture.

Every thing in its Place.

"Nathan, where is the shovel? here I've been hunting long enough, to do my work twice over, and cannot find the shovel.' The farmer was wroth.

"I don't know where 'tis, father; summers about, I suppose."

The two joined in the search. "Nathan you have left the shovel where you have worked, I know. Why don't you ever put the tools in their places?" Where is the place for the shovel, I should like to know, father?" He could'nt tell. It had no place,-Sometimes it was laid in the wagon, and occasionally accompanied that vehicle, when harnessed in a hurry. Sometimes it was hung up with the harness, to fall down when not wanted, or get covered up when it was. A great deal of shoe leather had come to nought by that shovel. It had at times more than the obliviousness of Sir John Franklin, and defied discovery. So it was with all the other tools. They would seem to vanish at times, and then come to light rusty as old anchors.

The farmer's room was crowded. He had no "spare room" there. There were several in his dwelling. But the barn was always crammed-it was a kind of mammoth sausage-stuffed every year. So there was no room for a special apartment for tools. In his imagination he never saw his hoes hung on a long cleat, his chains all regular in a row, his rakes and his forks overhead, certainly he was never anxious for such a convenient room.

It would excite surprise in the mind of many a lady adorned with what are known as " jet ornaments," were she told that she s wearing only a species of coal, and that the sparkling material made by the hand of the artistic workman into a "thing of beauty." once formed the branch of a stately posed : yet geologists assure us such is realv the fact. They describe it as a warrety of coal which occurs sometimes in elongated uniform masses, and sometimes in the form of branches, with a woody structure. It is, in its natural state, soft and brittle, of a velvet black colour, and lustrons. It is found in large quantities in Saxony, and also in Prussian amber mines in detached fragments, and, being exceedingly resinous burning with a greenish flame, and a strong bituminous smell, leaving an ash, also of a greenish colour. Let is likewise found in England, on the Yorkshire coast. - Art
