A Touching Tribute

English Children Decorate Graves of Canadians.

The following excerpts are taken from the Hythe Reporter's account of the English school children's tribute to the Canadians buried in Shorncliffe Cemetery:—

With the passing of the years and the rising of a generation which knows nothing of the horrors of war, it may be that the loving enthusiasm of the children to take the part of laying floral tributes on the graves of the Canadians in Shorncliffe Cemetery will gradually diminish; but so far as the picturesque and moving ceremony on Wednesday afternoon was concerned there was no noticeable difference. The day was perfect, and a prettier or more touching picture has seldom been presented than the one of the serried ranks of the little ones, each carrying their posy and surrounded by a Guard of Honor from the Machine Gun Corps, Royal Irish Regiment, 8th (K.R.I.) Hussars, and Canadian Forces, whilst away on the overlooking hill were grouped the mothers and fathers, sisters and brothers, and also including many in hospital blue. Among those who attracted attention were the Canadian nurses. In the centre of the square was a distinguished party which included Sir Stephen Penfold (Mayor of Folkestone) in his robes and chain of office, with his attendant Town Sergeant (W. Chadwick), the Rev. H. D. and Mrs. Dale (Hythe), Ald R. Price (Hythe Town Council), the Mayor (Cr. W. R. Co-bay) being unfortunately unable to be present; Maj.-Gen. E. M. Perceval, C.B., D.S.O.; Col. W. A. Scott, C.A. M.C., Mr. Waite, representing the Folkestone Water Company, Mr. W. E. Cross, the Amusement Association, Mr. G. Osborne, the Rowing Club, and Mr. Knott on behalf of Sir Philip Sassoon, M.P. There were also many staff officers, and a considerable number of Canadian officers.

The excellent band of the 8th Hussars under Bandmaster Cheeseman, played the following selections while the children were assembling: "Symphonie March of the London Scottish," "O Canada," and the incidental music from "The Merchant of Venice."

The ceremony followed the general lines of previous years. Led by the band of the 8th (K.R.I.) Hussars, under Bandmaster Cheeseman, it began with the singing of "The Maple Leaf." Then came a short address from Sir Stephen Penfold, who said this was the third time he had had the privilege of addressing to them a few words on the subject for which they had assembled that afternoon. The first and second years, as they knew, they were fully engaged in one of the most terrible wars the world had ever seen. Thank God they might say there was every prospect that peace was in sight, and he hoped that before another week the treaty would be signed. They were all very thankful that this terrible bloodshed had ceased, but they were not here to-day to pay a tribute of respect to the memory of those brave men who left their home and country to help the Empire in its great battle for justice and righteousness. It was rather interesting to know that after the first celebration they had there, a lady from British Columbia sent him some seeds for his children to plant in their gardens that they might lay some of the flowers on these graves. Some of the seeds had been planted there and some of the flowers had been brought. He thought this was very touching, and it must be a solace to the men of Canada who had now gone back to their own country to know that the memory of their dear ones left here was being respected. The mausoleum also reminded them of those Belgians who were driven from their country and whose cause they espoused as their own, and to whose memory they were also paying this tribute. In conclusion, he said how glad he was to see the children had come in such numbers to pay their tribute of respect.

The Rev. H. D. Dale said they might be sure their French friends did not forget to lay flowers on the graves of the brave soldiers who were buried "over there." They did not forget that they shed their blood for France as well as for Britain, and their dear brothers from Canada had done the same for the Old Country and for the cause of justice.

Maj.-Gen. H. M. Perceval said he should like them to know he had ordered no parade that day, but officers, N.C.O.'s and men had come there of their own accord.

Col. Scott said they had come there to-day to decorate the graves of the Canadians who laid in that beautiful place. The most touching and moving spectacle showed, in a striking manner, the feelings they had towards them, and the respect they paid to those who had fallen in the cause of justice and freedom.

When the people of Canada knew what they were doing there to-day, they would be profoundly moved. These men heard the call to duty and answered, and laid down their lives in the cause of what all proper thinking people deemed to be right. For those who were left there, they paid them the tribute of respect by adorning their graves, and on behalf of Canada, and on behalf of the Canadians, he thanked them most profoundly.

The National Anthem was then sung and whilst the band played a selection the children advanced and placed flowers reverently on the graves marked with the wooden crosses, on which were the names of those who had died. So many and beautiful were the flowers that they covered the ground and made it a bower of sweetness and color. In all 2,500 children from Cheriton, Hythe, Sandgate and Folkestone took part, and it can easily be imagined what a moving spectacle it presented, and one which will ever linger in the memory of those who witnessed it.

Chinese Medicine.

Dried frogs and asbestos are common ingredients in the "order" which the Chinese doctor prescribes for his patient. For the sake of variety he may include in the prescription any of the following for which the patient perhaps may express a preference: Scorpions, rhinoceros skins, wood shavings, flies, crushed pebbles, moths, centipedes, toads, lizards, caterpillars, powdered snakes or wasps.—Christian Herald.

Improving Western Stock.

Over two dozen young, pure bred bulls of good type, purchased by the Live Stock Branch of the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture, are now at Regina ready for shipment to farmers of the province who are desirous of obtaining good breeding stock at first cost. More will be purchased as orders come in.

Canada pledged her last man and her last dollar. Redeem that pledge in Victory Bonds.

If the fighting were still raging, you wouldn't hesitate to buy Victory Bonds.

CANADA'S FUTURE DEPENDS ON LOAN

Steady Employment and Prosperity Hangs on Victory Loan.

Canada's future prosperity depends to a great extent upon the success of the Victory Loan. No country can exist upon trade within its own boundaries. Canada counts on the trade with Great Britain and other allied countries to keep the flood of good times in the country.

The surplus products of the farm and the factory find their way across the seas. The revenue of the farmer and the manufacturer is dependent on this trade relationship being sustained. The employment of many hands depends on the orders that come to the firm. The pay envelope only comes with steady employment.

Great Britain and overseas countries are still desirous of continuing trade relations, but, overwhelmed with war expenses, they must be given credits for the time being. The farmer and the manufacturer must be paid for their products and manufactured articles in cash. Therefore, Canada must finance the proposition to keep the tide of commerce coming this way. But in order to have the money on hand to do this great thing, Canada must borrow from her people.

The Victory Loan offers bonds to subscribers paying 5 1/2 per cent. interest. The guarantee behind the bonds makes them an absolutely safe investment. Victory Bonds are accepted as collateral at any bank, and can easily be turned into money at a profit. It is then to the interests of every Canadian to subscribe for all the Victory Bonds he can, for it is profitable, it is patriotic, and it is necessary for the continued prosperity of the country.

Precious Metals.

Ontario, which has already produced 300,000,000 ounces of silver, and has the greatest gold mines in Canada, continues to make progress as a mineral producer. The total production of the Nipissing mine last year was 50,000,000 ounces of silver. The total dividends paid since the first payment in 1906 amount to almost $18,000,000.

Letter to the Council

Waterdown, Nov. 3rd, 1919

To His Honor The Reeve and Council of the Village of Waterdown.

Gentlemen:—

The product of our plant has sprang rapidly into favor with dealers throughout Canada, and we find ourselves completely snowed under with orders and enquiries from sources both domestic and foreign.

Our "Kiddie Cars" are the best in the world, our "Deerfoot Sleighs" will be sold in every Hardware store in Canada, and thousand upon thousands will be manufactured for foreign trade. The same may be said of other new and original lines which we will introduce, many of which will be made and sold under Patent protection.

In view of the above we partition the Village of Waterdown for a "Grant". We feel entitled to certain concessions in developing an enterprise which means much to the town. We would ask for two acres of land centrally located and in such position as to permit a railway siding from the C. P. R. Also taxation exemption for ten or twenty years.

Should we be favored to this extent we promise to erect such buildings as are necessary for the conduct of a big and prosperous business, steady employment and good wages to more than one hundred married men, in the manufacture of wood and metal products such as Kiddie Cars Sleighs, Carts, Skis, Scooters, Kiddie Koops, Play Yards, Juvenile Furniture, High Chairs, Baby Swings, Woodenware, Toys, Games, etc. etc. Many women will also be employed.

I putting this proposition to you gentlemen we feel that we ask for, only such concessions as would under the circumstances be granted by the Council of any town in Ontario. We invite your inspection of our business, its condition and character, and the possibilities which can only be limited by the amount of energy and capital invested.

THE CROWN MFG. CO.

Hallowe'en

Our citizens who were forced to be about on Hallowe'en night stood agast at the uncanny sight that met their gaze; women masquerading dressed in male attire. These ladies scant knowledge of mens wearing apparel no doubt was the cause of the misfit, especially of the trousers, which were entirely too large, particularly around the waist to say nothing of the length, they being decidedly of the high-water type. The use of pillows for padding purposes gave a very aldermatic and profiteer appearance. It was thought by many that the era of high skirts was at an end and that women were about to adapt a more modest form of dress, but apparently in this they were doomed to disappointment. If females decide to don male attire, the only course left for the men to pursue is to adapt the Highland kilts; this uniform costs less, and besides it would be the means of solving the high cost of living controversy which is occupying the attention of our Government at the present time. Doubtless the fair masqueraders decided, now that the franchise had been extended to women, that they are now eligible for municipal honors, and if elected they would appear to better advantage on the floor of the Council Chamber dressed in male garb. We sincerely hope that women will give this matter serious thought, and not commit any rash act which would be liable to interpret a desire on their part to oust man from positions in Council which has been their undisputed privilege to occupy for centuries past.

EMBARRASSING.

Mrs. Swinburne was calling one afternoon and, while waiting for her hostess to appear, was being entertained by her 6-year-old daughter.

"Mrs. Swinburne," said little Sarah, "will you take one of your shoes off for just a minute?"

"Why do you want me to do that?"

"Well," explained the child, "I hear mother say you were getting a-row-a-foot awfully."

It Eases Pain. Ask any druggist or dealer in medicines what is the most popular of the medicinal oils for pains in the joints, in the muscles or nerves, or for neuralgia and rheumatism, and he will tell you that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is in greater demand than any other. The reason for this is that it possesses greater healing quantities than any other oil.

THE NERVOUS SCHOOL CHILD

Needs Rich, Red Blood to Regain Health and Strength.

Many children start school in excellent health, but after a short time home work, examinations, hurried meals and crowded school rooms cause their blood to become weak and thin, their nerves over wrought and their color and spirits lost. It is a great mistake to let matters drift when boys and girls show symptoms of nervousness or weak blood. They are almost sure to fall victims of St. Vitus dance, or drift into debility that leads to other troubles. Regular meals, out-door exercise and plenty of sleep are necessary to combat the nervous wear of school life. But it is still more important that parents should pay strict attention to the school child's blood supply. Keep this rich and red by giving Dr. Williams' Pink Pills according to directions and the boy or girl will be sturdy and fit for school. The value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind is shown by the statement of Mrs. Pearl G. Harrington, Kingstonsville, Ont., who says: "I have often felt that I should write you and let you know that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did for me. At the age of thirteen I was afflicted with St. Vitus dance. The trouble became so severe that I had to be taken from school. I was given medical treatment but it did not help me, in fact I was growing steadily worse. Then a friend advised my mother to give me Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which she did, with the happiest results, as the pills completely cured me and I was again able to take up my studies and attend school. Again about three years ago I was attacked with nervous prostration and once more took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after using five boxes was fully restored. I cannot praise these pills too highly as I believe they will cure any case of St. Vitus dance, or restore anyone who is weak, nervous or run down. You can safely give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to the most delicate child, or take them yourself with equally good results when you need a blood tonic. These pills are sold by all dealers in medicine, or will be sent by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Apple Rots

It is estimated that in Ontario the average yearly loss from apple scab amounts to about 25 per cent. of the crop. No definite figures are available as to the losses due to the rot of apples in storage, but it is at least 10 per cent., and perhaps reaches 20 per cent. on the average. The losses from rot are of greater importance economically than those from scab, since they involve the loss of a considerable amount of direct human labor—that is, the apple is lost after it has been picked, handled several times, and stored away.

Apple rots are, of course, due to the attacks of certain fungi, of which two are most common in Ontario, namely the black rot fungus and blue mould fungus. Of these the last is the cause of the greater part of the rot in storage. These fungi are living plants which grow in the tissue of the apple and destroy it, after which they produce immense numbers of very minute dust-like "spores," which we call spores. These spores will grow just like seeds, and as they are so small, they are readily blown about by the lightest air currents, and thus the fungus is spread from one apple to another. The following hints will be of use in helping to keep down the amount of rot in stored apples.

In the first place the storage room should be clean. The blue mould fungus will grow on various kinds of litter and produce its spores very plentifully on rotten fruit. If the cellar is kept free from dirt and refuse, and no rotten fruits are allowed to remain there, the chances for rot infection are greatly lessened.

The cellar should also be kept reasonably dry. The spores of these rot fungi, like seeds, will not start to grow unless they have sufficient water. A reasonably dry cellar will therefore keep the spores from germinating, even if there are some of them present.

The temperature of the cellar should be kept as low as possible. The rot fungi, like other plants, grow best in warm conditions, and will be able to make very little progress if the temperature is kept within a few degrees of freezing.

Rot fungi got into the apple usually at some wound or bruise. The less injury that apples receive in handling the less rot that will develop afterwards.

When the storage cellar is emptied in spring, it should be thoroughly cleaned, and, if possible, whitewashed or treated with disinfectant to destroy all spores of the rot fungi. The musty smell which is present in many cellars is produced by the blue mould fungus, consequently if the characteristic mouldy odor remains in the cellar this fungus is certainly somewhere about, and every effort should be made to get rid of it before the next season's crop is stored there.

In addition to the above notes on fungus rots attention should also be called to the spotting and scalding of apples in storage, which is not due to fungi, but which is the direct result of improper storage conditions. Spotting and scalding of apples is very frequent towards spring. The spots on the skin are sunken and brown and greatly disfigure the fruit for sale, while scalding is even more damaging to the appearance. In this latter trouble the flesh just under the skin turns brown in irregular areas. While, as noted, these troubles are not directly due to rot fungi, they are likely to give easy entrance to rot producing fungi afterwards.

Both spot and scald arise from improper storage conditions, and will likely be worse on fruit that has not matured properly before being picked. The three storage conditions that favor or spot and scald development are (1), high temperature; (2), humidity, and (3), stagnant air. It should be understood that the fruit is not completely dormant during the storage period, but that there is a constant, if small, continuation of growth processes throughout the whole period. These processes result in maturing or mellowing the apple, and the chemical processes which occur during them involve the absorption of oxygen from the air and the giving out of carbon dioxide. It is, in fact, a slow breathing process. When apples are stored in a place where they have no free access to the air, they are "smothered," and the scald which develops on them is due to abnormal chemical changes brought about because of inadequate air supply. If the room is too warm the growth processes are quickened and scald or spotting is increased. Very moist or humid air also aggravates these troubles.

It is obvious that in an ordinary cellar spotting and scalding can be largely avoided by a little attention to the needs of the fruit for cool, dry conditions, and a continuous supply of fresh air during the storage period.

It is recommended (1) that apples should be stored in small lots rather than in large, close piles or bins. They should preferably be kept in open, slatted boxes, or other similar containers, which will allow all the fruit to have free access to air. (2) That the temperature be kept as low as is consistent with protection from frost, and (3) that plenty of ventilation be provided. If the air is changed frequently in the cellar the incoming supply will not only renew the oxygen, but will drive out the old, stagnant air, which is laden with moisture and over-charged with carbon dioxide. The method of ventilation can best be determined by conditions; in some instances air shafts can be used, while in others the opening of doors and windows on mild days will be desirable. In almost all cases some simple means of securing frequent changes of air can be readily adopted and the fruit thus kept free from scald and spot troubles. W. A. McCubbin, Field Laboratory of Plant Pathology, St. Catharines, Ontario.

COLORS' EFFECTS

On Persons When Used in a Room.

Have you gone into a small room in an apartment and wondered why it appeared so small and stuffy when its twin across the hall seemed so much larger and more cheerful? And have you closely observed the decorations of the two rooms and hit upon the right solution—the difference in the colors used on walls, curtains and furniture?

A writer in Price's Carpet and Rug News brings to light some interesting facts about colors:

Blue is a contrasting color, reflecting less light than it gives and has a tendency to make the room in which it is used as a dominating scheme seem much smaller than it really is.

Yellow is the antithesis of blue, for it expands, reflecting more light than any other shade and gives both length and breadth to a room. It is especially good for use in a room with northern exposure because of its light reflecting quality.

Red is one of the warmest colors and should be used only in small bits for contrast. It should be used most sparingly if a restful effect is desired.

Maues, grays and violets are cold colors and should be used as background for colors of more warmth.

All combined colors, such as green, purple and brown, will follow the dominant primary color of their mixture. A sunny room can stand the cold colors, while a north room must have warm, rich shades. Strong contrasts produce excitement.

WHAT FERTILIZER FOR WHEAT?

(E. G. McCloskey in Philadelphia Record.)

This question is as old as the use of fertilizer itself. It is asked whenever farmers get together to talk at home, at club and at institute. It always brings as many different answers as there are stars on a clear night. The asker and the obtainer of the information each goes out and buys what he thinks he can afford—and his standard of economy is usually measured by the price per ton which he is asked to pay. If the purchaser's bank balance is reasonably big, he buys one buys another, and that is about all there is to it.

Now to come back to the question, "What fertilizer shall I use?" In a few words the answer is—the one which returns the biggest acre profit. To return this biggest profit the fertilizer must be economical and it must be adapted to conditions as they exist on the farm in question. One might suppose this would mean a great variety of fertilizers—a veritable mob of them. Not necessarily so. When we boil down the facts a surprisingly small number of different fertilizers will fill the bill all over the wheat-growing territory. Following the wheat-growing are the recommendations in tabular form of the Soil Improvement Commission, seven different analyses in all. And with the table is a brief resume of where each analysis fits in. Each of these analyses is high—has a minimum of 14 per cent. total plantfood, which is the standard above which all fertilizer ought to grade in point of economy:

THE FERTILIZER FOR WINTER WHEAT.

How to make selection from the several grades recommended by the Soil Improvement Committee:

	I.	II.
	With Ammonia.	Without Ammonia.
A. High potash ..	2-10-6	0-12-4
	2-10-4
B. Low potash ..	2-12-2	6-12-3
	2-12-0	0-16-0

Where no manure is used on wheat land.

Where wheat is planted late, or where land is not plowed for wheat.

Select from Group I.

When plenty of manure is used, and where clover does well and is grown regularly and at short intervals in the rotation.

Select from Group II.

On muck and peat soils, or on sandy soils.

Where manure is used but lightly, or where clover fails.

Select from Group A.

On clay and clay loam soils, or on soils which do not respond to potash, or Where manure is heavily used.

Select from Group B.

Seven different analyses for all conditions under which wheat is grown? Is it possible? Does it seem reasonable?

Not only is it both possible and reasonable, but the system is of immense value to the fertilizer consumers the country over by simplifying their fertility practice. Let us illustrate just how the system works.

What needs ammonia (that is nitrogen) and lots of it. Ammonia gives the young plant a quick start. It helps produce stem and leaf growth and aids the plant in "filling out," and stooling. B: giving the soil a good leaf growth ammonia in wheat fertilizer helps prevent winter-killing.

It will never do, however, to give the crop all the nitrogen it needs in the one fertilizer application made at seeding time. In the fall we need enough ammonia to "start" the crop. What more is needed must be applied in the spring by a top-dressing fertilizer.

The two per cent. of ammonia in four of the seven wheat fertilizers is included as a so-called "starter" to furnish available nitrogen under conditions when the soil cannot be relied upon to furnish it in sufficient quantity. Let us see what these conditions are:

1. When clover or other legumes are not grown in rotation.
2. When but little manure is used on the farm—and this applied to crops other than wheat.
3. When wheat follows corn, oats or wheat.

The first two conditions are self-explanatory. As far as the third condition is concerned, we need simply remind our readers that these crops drain the soils of its available nitrogen and after growing these crops the soil is for a time inactive and lifeless—for those processes which make nitrogen available are slowed down. Under these conditions available nitrogen is needed to start the crop. Thus we say select from Group I—either A or B.

There are other conditions under which the use of the ammonia starter in the fertilizer is unnecessary. When manure is applied to wheat, when clover is plowed down a short time before wheat seeding, when manure is applied heavily to the preceding crops—these conditions indicate a sufficiency of available ammonia and selection may be from Group II—either A or B.

The necessity of studying farm practice so as to see whether or not the wheat crop will suffer from lack of available nitrogen should be emphasized over and over. On some farms, however, the potash proportion is very nearly as important as the nitrogen question.

Especially this year does the latter statement seem true. Up and down the disappointment. Much of the loss is due to "scab" and much to "rust" and some perhaps to the beating rain, which is said to have made pollination difficult. Way in the background there is a suspicion that four years of potashless fertilizer is beginning to tell, just as it has already told with potatoes and tobacco. Rust and scab are diseases without question, but no one can disprove that their virulence is much increased when malnutrition is on hand as a ready aid.

In this matter of high analysis fertilizer the writer is inclined to be a trifle crabbed. Only recently a very good friend asked—what do you think of a 1-8-1 for my wheat this fall? Perhaps by this time the reply is forgotten, though it is doubtful.

No wa 1-8-1 fertilizer will help to grow more wheat. There is not a shadow of doubt about that. It also will return a profit in any case where it has a fair show. There is not a doubt about that either. But neither is an argument for its use unless a higher grade fertilizer cannot be obtained.

What do we buy fertilizer for, anyhow, if it isn't for the plant-food it contains? Let to the average man the analysis on the sack might as well be printed in Greek, for all the use he makes of it. A 1-8-1 is cheaper than a 2-12-2 beyond a shadow of doubt, but how much cheaper is the 200 pounds of plant-food when compared with the 220 pounds of the higher analysis. That may be another story.

Just for illustration, suppose we assume a 1-6-1 fertilizer and a 2-12-2. The 1-6-1 is seldom ever offered for sale, but it will serve the purpose of illustration, and besides, it is not far different than 1-8-1. A ton of 2-12-2 has exactly double the plant-food of a ton of 1-6-1 and in the same proportion. Which shall we buy, half a ton of 2-12-2 or 2 tons of 1-6-1? In the first place 2 tons of 1-6-1 will cost more than 1 ton of 2-12-2. It is bound to, and always will as long as men demand wages and railroad charge for freight. That is loss number one.

Then after we have it, what advantage is there to the two tons that the one ton does not possess? Certainly, not more plant-food. A few more sacks? Yes, and the consumer has paid for them. Count up the list of ways and ends, and the only gain for the low analysis is a few more backaches and a few more pounds of sweat—something most of us could spare without ill-feeling. Item of loss number two.

Fertilizer is just like any other marketable commodity, when you insist on something cheap you get something cheap. The low-priced goods are all right in their way. They will usually return a good profit. There is that to be said for them. But between a good profit and a better profit there is a wide gulf of difference, and that is the difference between the low analysis and the high analysis fertilizers.

In the Alps, the mosquito Anopheles, which causes malaria, is found plentifully up to heights of 5,600 feet, but malaria is never met with above 2,600 feet.

The lumber production in 1918, according to tables recently published by the U. S. Forest Service, show a total of 32,760,000,000 feet. The production for 1917 was 36,000,000,000 feet, so that the past year shows a considerable decrease in lumber production; this was most marked in the Southern and Eastern States.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson VI, Nov. 9:19. Peter's Great Confession, Matthew 16: 13-24.

Commentary.—I. Peter's Confession (vs. 13-17). 13. Jesus came into the coasts—Jesus with his disciples had been in Bethsaida where he healed a man of his blindness, and now they came into "the coasts," or parts, of Caesarea Philippi. Mark speaks of their coming "into the towns" of Caesarea Philippi. Caesarea Philippi—it was called by this name, or Caesarea Philippi, to distinguish it from the Caesarea on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea. It was built by Herod Philip, who named it in honor of Tiberius Caesar, the Roman emperor. This was largely beyond the region of Jewish influence, and the farthest north Jesus journeyed, whom do men say—Jesus did not at first ask his disciples what opinion they held respecting him, but drew out from them the views held by others. He was preparing the way for them to tell what they themselves believed. The Son of man—This was the usual term Jesus applied to himself, and it presents the human side of his nature. 14. some say—others—The opinions held by the people varied, but it was believed that Jesus was a remarkable personage, yet few acknowledged his real nature and office. Some said that John the Baptist had returned to life. Some thought that he was Elijah; others believed him to be Jeremiah, in accordance with the tradition that Jeremiah was to come and reveal the place where the sacred vessels were concealed; and others said he was one of the prophets, that is, one of the old prophets risen again (Luke 9:19). It appears that the thought that Jesus was the Messiah did not prevail among the people. 15. whom say ye that I am—This was the great natural question to ask at this point. Jesus would now have the disciples declare how they had been impressed by his teaching, his miracles and his personal influence. 16. Simon Peter answered—Peter was the spokesman of the disciples, not only on this occasion, but generally. His impulsive nature and his quickness of apprehension favored this practice. It is thought that he was the oldest of the twelve. Although Peter answered the question, his reply expressed the sentiment of them all. Thou art the Christ—Christ is the Greek word for "anointed," and Messiah, the Hebrew for the same idea. There was no hesitancy and no uncertainty. The declaration was positive and emphatic. The Son of the living God—This denotes the nature of Jesus in his relation to the Godhead. There is fully implied in this statement the fact of his divinity, as the former statement declares his office, as the Messiah. "God is here styled the living God, because he is the Author of all life and existence; hence, self-existent, eternal." Peter's confession contains the very essence of Christian doctrine. 17. blessed art thou—A genuine confession. Simon Barjona—Simon son of John, not, of course John the disciple. Bar is Aramic for son. Simon Peter's father was Jonah, or John. flesh and blood hath not revealed it—The knowledge that Jesus was the Son of God did not come to Peter and the other disciples from man or any other earthly source, but from God.

II. The church's foundation (vs. 18-29). 18. I say—Peter had spoken, now Christ had something further to say about the kingdom under the figure of the church. "Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church—'Thou art Peter' (Greek, petros, a stone). 'Upon this rock' (Greek, petra, the bed-rock). There has been much discussion as to what the rock is upon which Christ builds his church. The leading opinions are: 1. Peter alone. 2. Peter on an equality with the other apostles, whose spokesman he was. 3. The confession of Peter, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." 4. Christ himself. All these views are strenuously maintained by their respective advocates. A statement in Ephesians (2: 20): "And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief cornerstone," indicates that the main foundation is Christ, and the apostles and prophets are joined with him in the church's foundation. The confession that Jesus Christ is the Son of God is essential to the foundation of the Christian church. The apostles' confession of the divinity of Christ is the foundation of the church. The church includes all who accept Jesus as their personal Saviour and maintain faith in him. The gates of hell—The powers of the infernal world. Shall not prevail—The church of Christ is indestructible. Satan has put forth all his efforts for ages to overthrow Christianity, but all in vain. 19. The keys of the kingdom of heaven—A key is a symbol of authority, and the apostles were to have authority with respect to the church after Jesus' earthly mission was closed. Whatsoever thou shalt bind, etc.—This explains the use of the keys. The apostles were given authority to organize and direct the church of Christ on earth. The terms "binding" and "loosing" were much used among the Jews to denote forbidding and allowing. Wisdom and authority were to be given the apostles to govern the church, and what they did in that capacity would have the sanction of heaven. They were to be so directed in their preaching that they would utter the truths of the gospel, and what they said would be worthy of full acceptance by their hearers. 20. Tell no man that he was Jesus the Christ—The declaration then of the Messiahship would have a tendency to arouse his friends in Galilee to attempt to proclaim him King.

III. Christ foretells His death and resurrection (vs. 21-23). 21. From that time forth—Having established the disciples in the faith that he was the Messiah, he could make known to them the course that lay before him. Unto Jerusalem—The capital city and centre of Jewish influence. Suffer many things, etc.—The opposition would constantly increase and culminate in his death at the hands of the highest officials of the Jews. The elders constituted the Sanhedrin. Raised—third day—a promise and prophecy of his resurrection. 22. Peter took him—Aside. Began to rebuke him—Peter's impulsiveness again asserted itself. He could not reconcile the course Jesus had declared was lying before him with the great fact of his Messiahship. 23. Get thee behind me, Satan—Jesus did not call Peter Satan, but indicated that Peter's rebuke emanated from Satan. Satan put the words in Peter's mouth, and Jesus used the same language that He did at the temptation in the wilderness. An offence—"A stumbling-block"—R. V.

IV. Conditions of discipleship (v. 24). 24. If any man will come after me—Will become my follower. Deny himself—He must refrain from every wrong, and must deny himself every lawful thing that would hinder his progress in following Jesus. Take up his cross—Be ready to suffer whatever it is necessary by virtue of being a disciple of Christ. The cross was the symbol of ignominy and shame, for crucifixion was the form of execution used by the Romans in the case of the worst criminals.

QUESTIONS—Where was Caesarea Philippi? What question did Jesus ask his apostles? Why did he ask it? What was their answer? Who did Peter say Jesus was? Who had revealed this to Peter? What was the rock on which Christ built his church? What is meant by the gates of hell? In what way did Christ give the keys of his church to the apostles? What is meant by binding and loosing?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic—The Messiahship of Jesus.

I. A great question.

II. A great confession.

The events of the lesson were preceded by the desert miracle of multiplying the loaves and fishes, the hastened departure of the disciples, the mountain season of prayer and the reassembled multitude, to which was delivered the wonderful discourse recorded in the sixth chapter of John's gospel. The last resulted in the withdrawal of many of Christ's followers (John 6: 66). Antagonism was becoming more pronounced, and he naturally turned to test the fidelity of his disciples. In the lesson we have:

I. A great question. From the point of the lesson Christian history takes a new departure. In its study we pass the outer portals and enter the inner sanctuary, come more closely into touch with the true spirit and purpose of Christ's life and work. The time had come for a closer relation between himself and his disciples. From the hour of Peter's confession he began by way of preparation to unfold to them the deeper experiences of the cross and passion into which he and they were about to enter (Matt. 16: 24). The disciples had mingled with the thronging multitudes, and with them had listened to the teachings and beheld the works of Christ. Doctrine and miracle could but have produced some effect upon the public mind. Jesus had referred the messengers, sent from John, to his works. The public sentiment concerning Christ was exalted, but insufficient, unsatisfactory and uncertain. It connected him with the historic and heroic past, but fell fatally short of the great reality. "Who is Christ?" is the supreme question of the ages.

II. A great confession. Jesus passes from general to individual inquiry. "Whom say ye that I am?" It requires little of faith or knowledge to echo complimentary public sentiment. The church should always have a clearer religious opinion than the world. A personal certainty is essential to personal Christianity. Anything which muffles either Christ's character or his cross is destructive. There is no middle ground between his complete claim to essential divinity and imposture. He put forth the stupendous claim for himself and the Father repeatedly attested it. Peter's confession of Christ's divinity embodies the essence of Christianity and the faith of the ages. Upon this great truth Christ builds his church. Its certainty is her security. Against this stupendous truth the "gates of hell" can not prevail. The deity of Christ is essential to the value and virtue of his atoning sacrifice. It imparts infinite worth to his human sufferings and assures the permanency of his human sympathy.

III. A divine revelation. A true knowledge of Christ is always a matter of direct and divine disclosure (Luke 10: 22). Peter's confession was begotten of an inward spiritual revelation. As with Peter, so with Paul, who declared that the gospel which was preached by him was not received of men, but was revealed (Gal. 1: 12, 13). "No man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost" (1 Cor. 12: 3). Intellectual assent is ineffectual without an inspired heart faith and recognition.

SUNDAY AT HOME

MAN AND THE SABBATH.

The question is constantly being asked "Is it right to work on a Sunday?" I say Sunday because that is our Sabbath Day, our weekly day of rest and worship, the first day of the week, distinct from the Jewish Sabbath which runs from sunset on Friday to sunset on Saturday. Still for all practical purpose we use the terms as meaning the same thing, and there are endless diversities of opinion as to how the day should be spent.

To those who are absorbed in church activities, what more natural than that they should delight in attendance at two or three services during the day, provided that they can spare the time?

Others who feel the need for relaxation of body or mind, or both, spend the best part of the day out of doors in walking, declaring that the sermons of Dr. Meadows and Dr. Fields are in every respect equal if not superior to the spiritual pabulum they get at church. To a certain extent I agree that there is nothing like a restful day in the open air, and if Sunday is the only day on which it can be obtained, then few will disagree with its beneficial use in that manner. At the same time it is only right to point out that the majority of people nowadays have more leisure at their disposal than ever before, and that with the reduced pressure of work there is not the same need for devoting the whole of Sunday to recreation.

It is a poor Christian who cannot spare time to attend at least one service a week in his or her Master's house; for, after all, there is a direct command to Christians to join together in worship, and, since outdoor services are not a standing feature of our time it is fitting and proper that we should meet together in the places sacred to the service of God and hallowed by the associations of generations of worshippers.

A correspondent asks me this: "Is it right, as some of the present-day clergymen say, that if you go to Early Communion you can do practically what you like for the rest of the day; or are we to keep to the old rule, and do no work on the Sabbath? Did not Christ Himself give an indication of His views when He plucked the ears of corn while walking through the cornfield on the Sabbath, and did He not say that it was right for His disciples to do likewise and to eat the corn? And does not the Book say that the Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath?"

True, my young friend. He also performed miracles on the Sabbath, and performed the problem to His antagonists of what a man should do if his ox or his ass fell into a pit on the Sabbath Day. I don't see anywhere in the New Testament that Christ refused to admit that necessary work must be done on that day. As to what we consider necessary work nowadays, that is a matter which must be left to the conscience of the individual Christian and the circumstances attending.

Another point put before me is this: "Would it be wrong to forego church for once and go into the country? Would it be letting the flesh gain dominion over the spirit if one went for pleasure, or would it merely be keeping the law that our bodies are the temples of the Holy Ghost, and must be kept clean for it? Surely it would be a crime not to keep them sound and healthy by taking outdoor exercise at the proper time. Is Sunday the proper time?"

Again, did not Christ walk across the fields on Sunday? Was not that His recreation? Is He not our Example, and are not to follow Him? Before churches were made there were fields and woods, trees and plants, grass and flowers. Where did Abraham have his altar? In the open, on the top of a mountain. That was where he was going to make his greatest sacrifice. Wasn't the Greatest Sacrifice made? In a church? No. It was made in the open air, on Calvary's Mount. Did God say, "That will not do, it wasn't made in church"? No, it was accepted. If it hadn't been, where should we be now? Why, there wouldn't be any church to go to on Sunday or any other day. In His Agony, did Christ go to a synagogue? No. He went to a garden, the Garden of Gethsemane. When He went to talk with His Father He went to the wilderness or on the top of a mountain. That was where He prayed. Shall we not pray where He did? Is it for us to say, "It is wrong to pray in a field or a wood, one can only pray in church?"

Certainly not. Prayer is never out of place, wherever and whenever the need of it is felt, but some people are so constituted that they require the environment of a church to put them into what they would call the right frame of mind. Others never feel so close to God as they do in the open air. At times like this, too, we must bear in mind that, owing to the strain of the past five years, many people have tired nerves, tired hearts, tired spirits that fall to find in church the rest they so badly need. That, I am afraid, is the fault of the churches—they lack the power of the ability to convince the great mass of the people that they have a true message of rest and peace to the soul. While that is so we shall always find thousands who prefer to spend their Sundays in the country whenever possible.

The Apocrypha.

All the Old Testament apocrypha, fourteen in number, have been translated into English and are included as apocryphal books in some editions of the Bible. They were formerly printed under a distinctive heading between the Old and the New Testaments, and in that form can still be found in many of the "family Bibles." They are always included in the so-called Septuagint, a version of the Bible used by the Greek church.

TOWN PLANNING

Important Conference to Be Held in Hamilton Shortly.

It is expected that all the city and most of the town and village councils in Ontario from Niagara Falls to Windsor will be represented at the South-Western Ontario Town Planning Association's conference to be held at Hamilton in the Royal Connaught hotel, on Nov. 27 and 28, as matters of vital interest to the welfare of the people will be considered. Able speakers will address the meetings on subjects of interest to progressive municipalities. Among them will be: Lawrence Veiller, New York City, secretary of the National Housing Association; J. A. Ellis, Toronto, director of the Government Bureau of Municipal Affairs; Thomas Adams, Ottawa, Federal Town Planning Adviser; N. Caubon, Consulting Engineer, Ottawa; W. J. Donald, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Sir John Williams, Toronto, and a cabinet minister of the new Ontario legislature.

A shoe that is uncomfortably tight may be fixed by laying over the place a cloth wet in very hot water. As the leather steams it expands.

SIR WILLIAM'S WILL

She looked from right to left, as if she would have escaped the question if she could; but his eyes were fixed on her with an intentness, an earnestness that seemed to command her heart, and—traitorous heart!—it yielded.

"Why, yes," she said, in a low voice, which, for all her efforts, quavered, and with a smile that flickered pathetically. "I—shall be glad—you have always been so kind—so—so—careful of me—us, my sister—"

He nodded. "Yes, put it that way," he said, with a short breath. "Then, if luck go with me, I'll come to you—but I can wait. Can wait"—he laughed slowly, mockingly—"for wealth and fame and the rest of it, you know!" She moved away from him without a word, and he stood, his eyes still fixed on her; then he started, as if from a dream, and said: "Your horse?"

"At the stable," she said, just glancing at him. "But don't trouble. One of the men—"

He walked beside her, and almost in silence they reached the stables. He got the horse—she noticed how carefully he examined the girths and the fastenings—and held his hand and knee for her. His strong hands lifted her, as if she were a feather, into the saddle, and he stood for a moment looking up at her, as he arranged the reins in her hands.

"Thank you, thank you," she murmured, her eyes downcast. "I—I am late, I must ride fast. Good-by!" "Good-by," he responded, in his deep voice; and the music of it rang in her ears, and seemed to be echoed by the pines as she rode between them.

Jack stood looking after her, his face pale, his lips set. Yes; he could wait until the time of grace set forth in the will had passed; then he would go to her and say: "I am Wilfred Carton. I have renounced my claim to the estates and the money, they are yours; I love you; will you marry me?"

A voice from the beach started him, and he turned, to see Lord Stanton coming up the beach.

"What luck?" he called out, and the words sounded like a good omen in Jack's ears. "I was afraid I should miss you, I say, Douglas, the specifications have come down, and I want you to go over them at once. Will you come up to the Towers to-night?"

Jack nodded. "Yes, I'll come," he said, absently omitting the "Lord Stanton."

The lad looked at him. "I say, you look rather off color, Douglas," he said, and he laid his hand in a very friendly way on Jack's broad shoulder. "You haven't looked the thing for some time past. You've been sticking to the work too hard, and want a change, that's what's the matter. Why not take a holiday, go up to London, and have a bit of a spree, do the theatres and the music-halls, eh?"

It did not strike him as strange that he should speak as if to an equal; and Jack nodded.

"Pray I might," he said, thoughtfully.

"That's right!" said Lord Stanton.

"And, by the way, I put a cheque in my pocket, thinking I might see you—rather fortunate coincidence, wasn't it?"

He shyly slipped a cheque in Jack's hand, and went on talking quickly; but Jack, after glancing at the cheque, broke in with:

"Oh, but this is too much, Lord Stanton!"

The boy laughed; then faced him resolutely.

"Yes, I thought that was the kind of rot you'd say," he declared. "Too much! Why, it's only on account; you don't suppose I meant it as full payment? You juggle! and I've scored no end by employing you instead of a regular Johnny. Now, look here!" as Jack opened his mouth to expostulate.

"I can be as darned obstinate as you can, Douglas; and I tell you straight that I shall be awfully offended if you make any fuss about the coin."

Jack nodded. "It's too much—but very well, I'll be up to-night."

"I'd ask you to come now, but the Miss Bramleys and Mr. Hesketh Carton are dining with us."

"I'll come some other night, tomorrow," said Jack quickly.

"No, no!" said Stanton eagerly. "I want you to go over those papers. I'll come to you in the library—there's the phaeton; and, by George! I'm late."

He ran to meet the phaeton, and Jack turned into the cottage to receive Mrs. Westaway's reproaches. But he seemed more cheerful, more like his old self, that evening, and while he had his tea, he took Polly on his knee and told her stories until she clapped her hands and buried her laughing face against his heart.

"I'm so glad you're better, Mr. Jack," she said, stroking his face. "And I've been and told Miss Clytie you was ever so bad!"

He changed his well-worn riding-suit for one of blue serge, lit his pipe, and walked over to the Towers. As Polly had said, he was better. The glorious light of hope had cast a beam across his brooding heart and lightened it. Of course, she had not understood what he was driving at; but she had not been offended; had not turned away haughtily from his request. Why, it had almost seemed as if she had promised to wait for him! Ridiculous, of course, but he hugged the delusion, and pictures, delicious pictures, of a possible future unrolled in his mind in the starlit night, in which the sighing of the pine branches seemed to imitate the music of her voice.

That beautiful girl his! His! He stopped to stare before him, breathless with the thought.

He had timed himself to arrive at an hour when the dinner should be well over, and Lord Stanton free to come to him, and as he approached the house he saw through the windows of the great drawing-room a scene which had once been familiar enough.

He paused in the screen of the laurels and looked in wistfully. The softly shaded lights showed him the women in their rich frocks, the men in the severe regulation evening dress; Lady Mervyn in black velvet, with priceless lace and diamonds. Mollie in her white cashmere with her ruddy hair tied in a pigtail, and there was Clytie in black lace that made the clear ivory of her neck like the driven snow on which the faint dawn is shining. How lovely she was, and—ah, how much better!—how lovable!

But for his folly, and the fierce passion which was skin to madness, that had wrecked his life, he might be there, by her side, a welcome guest, free to love, to woo her. With a sigh, he was turning away, when he saw the tall, slight figure of Hesketh Carton leave Lord Stanton and approach Clytie. Jack stopped unconsciously and watched them. He saw Hesketh bend over Clytie and speak to her—it was some request, evidently, for she, after a moment's hesitation, rose, and they passed into the adjoining conservatory.

Jack moved away; but he had to pass the conservatory, and though he turned his face aside, and setting his teeth, endeavored to walk on, his resolution failed him, and he looked in.

They were standing in front of a bank of chrysanthemums, and Hesketh Carton—his cousin, as Jack mechanically reflected—was talking to her, bending over with an expression in his face which sent the blood to Jack's face and made his heart beat fiercely. Clytie was listening at first with just conventional attention; but he saw Hesketh suddenly draw closer, bend still lower over her, and take her hand.

He was almost too blinded by the sudden passion to see that her face had grown crimson and then pale; his eyes were fixed on Hesketh's face, and his rapidly, yet smoothly moving lips; and, with a stifled exclamation, an oath wrung from him in his agony, he turned and fled—for it was flight—into the darkness.

Fool, fool that he was! He had been too honorable to declare himself, to tell of his love, had beaten about to her to wait—and Hesketh Carton had stepped in before him and won her!

His passion, the jealousy, which had been so swift to leap to a conclusion, tore at him like a wild beast. He flung himself into the shrubbery, and forced his way through like some wild animal in a fury, and found himself upon the road, down which he stumbled like a man half-blind.

Luck! He had called upon it, and it had answered him promptly enough—made a mock of him.

Yes, he had lost her. And serve him right! Such men as he, such fools as he, deserved just such jacks as had been dealt out to him.

For hours he wandered about the woods, now stopping to stare before him and try and ease the anguish, the despair, that crushed his heart, but ever driven on again in his flight from thought, from the realization of his loss.

It was nearly dawn when he reached the cottage, and he was calmer now, and moved as one spurred by a plan of action.

With some difficulty he wrote a short note to Lord Stanton, saying that he was off, not for a holiday, but for good; then he went up to his room and packed a few clothes into a bag and stole down again. Softly as he moved, Polly, who was awake, heard him, and called to him. He went into the tiny room, and she sat up, rubbing his eyes.

"Is that you, Mr. Jack?" she said, yawning. "What are you doing? It's velly late, isn't it? Where are you going with that bag?"

"I'm going on—a little journey, Polly," he said. "Don't make a row and wake your mother. Tell her I am obliged to go. She'll find some money on the kitchen table."

The child put her arm around his neck and peered sleepily up at him.

"How curious your voice sounds," she said, "and you're all white and shaking. You're bad again, I know. And what are you doing in the middle of the night?"

"Business, Polly," he said, his throat dry and aching.

"You're comin' back?" she said, anxiously.

"Yes, I'm coming back," he said, forcing the falsehood. "There, lie down and go by-by again."

He drew the clothes about her and kissed her; with a little sigh of content she closed her eyes, and Jack, a lump in his parched throat, stole from the room and out of the house.

CHAPTER XIX.

Now, Clytie had accompanied Hesketh Carton to the conservatory without the least suspicion of his object in asking her to do so. It may be accepted as an almost universal truth that every woman, even a girl in her teens, knows when a man is in love with her; and had Hesketh's heart been engaged in this business, no doubt Clytie would have discovered the fact; but he was not in love with her—it is doubtful whether Mr. Hesketh Carton was capable of an exalted passion—what he desired was not Clytie, but Bramley and Sir William's fortune; and, that being so, Clytie was justified in attributing the attention with which he had favored her to a simple desire to make himself pleasant to a near neighbor.

So she went into the conservatory quite innocently and without any misgiving, and listened placidly and serenely as he expatiated on the beauty of the chrysanthemums. She noticed that his voice was softer than usual, and that his dark eyes dwelt upon her face rather than the flowers, but she remained quite unconscious until his voice dropping to almost a whisper, he said:

"Miss Bramley, I asked you to come out here alone with me because I wanted to speak to you, to tell you of something that is of vital importance to me. I think I hope, that you will not be altogether unprepared for what I am going to tell you. You must have seen that my frequent visits to the Hall, my evident desire to be near you, sprang from no ordinary cause. Indeed, though I have refrained from speaking—for I have, of course, felt, been sensible of the presumption of avowing myself—I think you must have guessed how it was, is, with me. I do not think any man could have seen so much of you as I have done without being inspired by love for you; at any rate, I am not that man; and I have come to love you so much that I can keep silence no longer. To-night I have resolved to confess my love for you and to ask you to be my wife."

It was at this point he had taken her hand, and Clytie was so amazed, so bewildered, by the sudden and unexpected avowal that, as Jack unfortunately had seen, she had actually allowed her hand to remain for a moment or two in Hesketh Carton's, while a blush, say, rather, a startled flush, had risen to her face. It might well have been mistaken by Jack for the sign of a warmer emotion. But after that moment or two she recovered herself, and, withdrawing her hand, looked at Hesketh steadily, her face pale, her brows drawn together as was their wont when she was deeply moved.

Heating the House.

The proper temperature for various rooms of the home are as follows: The living room should be 70 degrees, no more. It does not become close, but the doors should be kept closed into the hall. The dining room and kitchen should be heated to 65 degrees. Most kitchens rise higher than that. The bedrooms should be heated out at all, except for the little time that the occupants use them for dressing. The bathroom should be made as warm as you choose and the halls should be given no special heat, as we are always exercising when we are going through them.

A Coated Tongue? What it Means

A bad breath, coated tongue, bad taste in the mouth, languor and debility, are uneasy signs that the liver is out of order.

Dr. H. M. Pierce says: "The liver is an organ secondary in importance only to the heart."

We can manufacture poisons within our own bodies which are as deadly as a snake's venom.

The liver acts as a guard over our well-being, sifting out the cinders and ashes from the general circulation.

A blockage in the intestines piles a heavy burden upon the liver. If the intestines are choked or clogged up, the circulation of the blood becomes poisoned and the system becomes loaded with toxic waste, and we suffer from headache, yellow-coated tongue, bad taste in mouth, nausea, or gas, acid dyspepsia, languor, debility, yellow skin or eyes. At such times one should take castor oil or a pleasant laxative. Such a one is made of Mayapple, leaves of aloe and jalap, put into ready-to-use form by Doctor Pierce, nearly fifty years ago, and sold for 25 cents by all druggists as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

THIS WEEK, NERVOUS MOTHER

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which added to my weak condition kept me worrying most of the time—and he said if I could not stop that, I could not get well. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my husband wanted me to try it. I took it for a week and felt a little better. I kept it up for three months, and I feel fine and can eat anything now without distress or nervousness. —Mrs. J. WORTHINE, 2842 North Taylor St., Philadelphia Pa.

The majority of mothers nowadays overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down, nervous condition with headaches, back-ache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious ailments develop. It is at such periods in life that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will restore a normal healthy condition, as it did to Mrs. Worthine.

McClary's Kootenay

TOP, bottom and all four sides of the Kootenay oven are evenly heated. That is why it is so famous as a dependable baker. There is a thermometer, too, to tell whether the heat is right or not.

No range is quite so easily managed. Duplex grates clear the ashes at a single turn. Burnished cooking-top never needs blacklead. Nickered steel oven walls are kept clean with a damp cloth. Well-fitted joints and dampers hold the fire—and the oven heat—for hours.

Let us show you the Kootenay.

Canada's Financial Position.

The last budget disclosed Canada's financial position to be:
Pre-war national debt, $335,996,-850.
Estimated debt after demobilization, $1,950,000,000.
Present Dominion securities held in Great Britain, $362,700,000.
Held in the United States, $150,-783,000.
Held in Canada, $1,510,000,000.
Pre-war annual interest, $12,893,-564.
Present annual interest, $115,000,-990.

Last year's pensions, $17,460,000.
Present year's pensions, $30,000,-000.
Future year's pensions $40,000,-000.
Demobilization and gratuities, $300,000,000.
Estimated total expenditure this year, $620,000,000.
Estimated revenue, $280,000,000.
Estimated deficit to be covered by loan, $340,000,000.

Canada's Debt.

Canada's debt is now about two billion dollars, of which three-fourths are held in Canada itself, one-sixth in Great Britain, and one-twelfth in the United States. Canada is now practically independent in a financial sense. The bulk of the debt is from the Canadian people to that section of it which invested in bonds during the war.

A Sad Case.

The lieutenant was lonesome for a familiar face. Seeing a chap who looked like the boy who used to deliver groceries at his home, he stopped him and asked: "Do you know who I am?" "No, sir; don't you?"

Point Blank.

Jack—And when I proposed at the dance she asked for time to think it over. What do you suppose she did that?

Bess—Well, a girl naturally hates to think of disagreeable things while enjoying herself.
