A Child of Sorrow.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The dinner was a magnificent one. The vast room, much improved and subdued by the girls' taste, was filled by a brilliant company. The women had come in full war-paint, and diamonds and emeralds and rubies scintillated and shot fire in the softened light. There were too many courses, too many servants; but the fact did not seem incongruous when Mr. Carrington's wealth was taken into consideration. He sat at the end of the long table loaded with massive plate and glittering with Venetian glass, his face flushed, his eyes sparkling with triumph and prosperity; and his face grew redder and his eyes brighter whenever he glanced at Maida and caught the flashing of the diamonds he had hidden her wear.

"Look at father," whispered Carrie to Ricky, whom she had contrived to have next to her. "Doesn't he look like a turkey-cock, a dear, handsome turkey-cock, of course. And Byrne—if he doesn't take off that smile someone will presently slip up on it and hurt themselves."

"He's got something to grin about," said Ricky, gloomily. "He's got the woman of his heart."

"Perhaps you'll have the woman of your heart some day, Mr. Clark," she retorted. "And you needn't spend the whole of the time before that day comes looking as glum as an undertaker or a skeleton at the feast."

Ricky shook his head despondently. "I don't happen to be a belted earl," he said, moodily. "I'm only a clerk in a lawyer's office."

"Why, you might be lord chancellor some day," said Carrie.

"Shows how precious little you know about it," he responded. "They don't make lord chancellors out of solicitors."

"Then go to the bar," she said.

"I do; every day, to the bar of the King's Head, where I get my lunch."

But presently his moodiness melted under her coaxing—and no one better than Carrie, in the world, understood the art—and he delighted and amused her by running comments on the people and their conversation.

"Who's that girl the Percys have brought with them?" he asked, in a whisper—of course carefully avoiding looking at the lady alluded to, who sat opposite him. "She reminds me of one of the Gaiety songs: 'Half a yard isn't enough to make a dress for a lady.'"

"But you forget she's an artist," she said, mischievously.

"An artist?"

"Yes; don't you see she paints? She comes from London; she's on a visit to the Percys. She's Mrs. Trefoye. She's a grass-widow—husband out in India."

"I should stay in India if I were he," growled Ricky.

"And yet she looks very nice," remarked Carrie, critically. "And Lord Glassbury looks very much amused."

"I daresay," remarked Ricky, cynically. "She's been talking scandal to him ever since dinner began."

"And will do so until the end, no doubt," said Carrie. "You're surely not going to have another Joe, Ricky? What a greedy boy you are!"

"Some persons are also cool enough they're cold enough already!" he retorted, with a glance at her radiant face.

"Some persons are also cool enough especially in one place—their cheek," retorted Carrie, in a whisper. "And now I suppose," as Maida gave the signal and the ladies rose, "you'll play havoc with the almonds and raisins and maron glace, at which all you men turn up your noses—until we've left the room."

The men did not remain long with the almonds and raisins and claret, and their black clothes soon toned down the brilliant dresses in the drawing-room. There was the usual playing and singing, through which Mrs. Trefoye's clear, sharp voice was heard distinctly as she flitted all over the room with her little budget of London stories and the repartee peculiar to the smart set to which she belonged; and presently—"Fools rush in where angels fear to tread"—she flitted up to Maida, who was seated on a lounge with some of the dowagers, and said, with a mixture of audacity and deference:

"Oh, Miss Carrington, do recite for us; we are all dying to hear you! I'm afraid you'll think it awfully brazen of me to ask you; but nobody but poor little me seems to have the courage to do so. Do be sweet, now; we shall all be so grateful!"

Maida hesitated for a moment; then, thinking it would be ungracious of her to refuse, and dreading that, if she did so, Mrs. Trefoye would be persistent and make a fuss, she went to the piano, from which everybody moved so as to leave her space, and recited for them. Byrne alone stood near her, and his pride in her beauty, her youth, and her wonderful gifts, shone eloquently in his dark eyes. He never heard her without being moved at the first time; and as she finished he moved away without a word.

Though they were all anxious for an encore, Maida smilingly shook her head, got one of the young girls to the piano, and, under the general movement and conversation, went to the tall window opening on to the terrace. The window was open, for the night was warm, and she stepped out and stood, leaning on the stone balustrade and looking up at the stars. They seemed to be smiling at her as they knew and sympathized with the joy in her heart.

To be his in a month! How good Heaven was to her!

She was so absorbed that she did not hear the rustle, the frong-frong of a silken skirt; and she almost started when Mrs. Trefoye's clear voice, which, though it was lowered to a discreet whisper, was carried distinctly on the night air to Maida, said to a lady who had come out with her:

"Oh, yes; she's very beautiful. She's not my style. I like something a little less fragile and spiritual, with more of the world, the flesh, and the devil about it; but some men are wonderfully smitten with that type. And of course she is superbly dressed; those diamonds must have cost a small fortune; but the Percys tell me that the father is enormously rich. What a lucky match for Lord Heroncourt! You know he's next door to a pauper, my dear."

"Really? I didn't know. I only came down to the Walmington's the other day. How wonderfully handsome he is!—every inch a nobleman! He reminds me of the Middle Ages; knights in armour and all that kind of thing. He seems very much in love with her; he could scarcely take his eyes off her all dinner-time, and as he stood at the piano while she was reciting—oh, well, he looked like a man in a trance," said Mrs. Trefoye's companion.

Maida was listening, yet not listening; but by this time she had, of course, gleaned that they were speaking of her and Heroncourt, and she looked towards the window, intending to return to the room; but the two ladies whom she had unwillingly overheard moved, and, by the rustle of their skirts, she thought they were going back to the drawing-room; but they were only settling themselves more comfortably for the greater enjoyment of discussing their hostess; it used to be considered bad form, but the smart set of nowadays has changed all that, and it is considered quite justifiable by them to libel their neighbors, especially their neighbors' wives, and more especially if they can do so skillfully enough to keep clear of the law courts.

To reach the window, Maida would have had to pass the two women, and she shrank from mortifying them by revealing her presence. She thought she would move farther down the terrace; but Ricky and Carrie were leaning over the balustrade a little lower down, and—was not Maida herself in love? So she remained where she was, hoping that the conversation would cease or that someone would come out and interrupt them.

"Oh, I daresay he's in love with her," Mrs. Trefoye went on, with a little yawn; "though you never can tell; men are such actors nowadays, especially when they want anything. If I were Miss in Carrington's place I should be very doubtful of his adoration. I should never be able to forget that I was immensely rich and that he was cruelly poor, and should be afraid that he was marrying me for money, especially if I knew much about his past—but perhaps she doesn't."

"What do you mean?" asked the other lady, with evident curiosity.

"Oh, well, I daresay he's no worse than most men," said Mrs. Trefoye, with a fine air of charity; "though they used to call him 'Mad Vaser'—he was Viscount Vaser, you know; but of course everyone knows his affaire du coeur. It has been the one affair of his life, and I must say that I pity Lady Glassbury."

H.P. SAUCE

She had lowered her voice; but Maida heard her plainly, and would have gone up to them and interrupted them or have returned to the drawing-room; but she seemed unable to move, and stood there looking straight before her, filled, not with fear or even the first movements of jealousy, but with an indignant wonder. Maida knew little of the smart set and its peculiarities; she had never met a person like this Mrs. Trefoye.

"Lady Glassbury?" said the other lady, her whisper thrilling with morbid interest and curiosity. "I don't know anything about her; I have never met her; I have never heard of her."

"Really? How strange! But you have been abroad, haven't you? She was the lady who sat next to Lord Walmington. A very beautiful woman with fair hair and fine eyes. Looks ridiculously young—quite a girl, indeed. She was a very great beauty, and could still give points to many of our girls."

"And she and Lord Heroncourt?" murmured the other lady, invitingly.

"Have been devoted to each other since they were children. Oh, it is quite an open secret. When he was Lord Vaser they were always together; he was quite a tame cat as they say, at Glassbury House. Everyone knows that he would have married her, only that they were too poor. Perhaps they would have married in spite of that, but Lord Glassbury came along and offered himself, and, of course, her people would not let her refuse him."

"And you think—"

Mrs. Trefoye shrugged her too obvious shoulders and fanned herself with a languid air of confidence.

The Home Dressmaker should keep a Catalogue Scrap Book of our Pattern Cuts. These will be found very useful to refer to from time to time.

A PRETTY DRESS FOR THE SCHOOL GIRL.

2121—Brown linen, embroidered in colors, was used for this model. The model is made with a long waist, somewhat on moyenage lines. The plaited skirt is gored. The sleeve may be made in the new bell shape, or finished at wrist length, with a smart tab.

The Pattern is good for wash fabrics as well as for silk and cloth. It is cut in 3 sizes: 12, 14 and 16 years. Size 14 will require 5 1/2 yards of 32-inch material.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

A STYLISH ATTRACTIVE MODEL.

2122—Of all popular styles, there is none more comfortable or pleasing than a one-piece model. As here portrayed the skirt section is fitted with wide plaits and joined to a long waist, in moyenage style. The collar may be finished in straight or notched outline; the sleeve in wrist or elbow length.

The Pattern is cut in 3 sizes: 16, 18 and 20 years. It requires 5 1/2 yards of 44-inch material for an 18-year size. The skirt measures about 2 1/2 yards at the foot, with plaits drawn out.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

WAR REVIEW.

NEW YORK, July 6.

After checking the latest effort of the German Crown Prince in the Champagne, the French took the offensive and succeeded in straightening out their lines in the region of Mont Haut and Mont Carniellet. General Petain's men held their gains despite four strong attacks hurled against them and which they repulsed with heavy loss. Switching his attack from operations on the front north of the Aisne did not help the Crown Prince and his effort in Champagne west of Mont Carniellet and southeast of Tahure failed, as did his recent heavy attacks north of Chemin des Dames. Petain responded to the German effort by attempting and succeeding in reducing the salients of his line to the east of the scene of the Teuton attack. The French not only captured prisoners but beat off the counter attacks, showing that the Germans attached importance to the French gains on the rest of the front and especially around the curve in the French line northeast of Soissons violent artillery engagements are in progress. To the north the British and Germans have shown little infantry activity outside of patrol encounters and raids.

A great artillery battle is in progress on the front where the Russians made their sudden advance early this week. Near Zborow and between Ziochoff and Brzezany in Galicia Russian and German guns are hammering the opposing lines and near the Zborow and both Pripet marshes big guns are also active. Signs of re-awakening of activity on the front in Rumania are increasing. Near Beleschi German attempts to fraternize with Russians were answered by artillery.

Northwest of Solon on the Carso, Italian surprise attacks netted some gain of ground. Austrian counter attacks were beaten off successfully.

RUSSIAN REPULSE REPORTED.

BERLIN, July 6. The battle in Eastern Galicia between the Teutons and the Russians developed afresh to-day after last night's pause from yesterday's violent artillery action and the massed assaults by the Russians between Zborow and Konluchy and at Brzezany, broken down with heavy losses to the enemy, according to the German official this evening.

EXPECT PEACE PROPOSALS.

LONDON, July 6. Rumors are persistent in the well informed political class that Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German Imperial Chancellor, in his coming because of its convenient size, reasonable price, and every 15c tin contains three coupons.

SPEECH TO THE REICHSTAG.

The Reichstag will make new and more definite declarations concerning peace, says a Central News despatch from the Hague to-day. The declaration will refer not only to Russia, but to the Entente Powers generally. According to this report the Chancellor's speech will be delivered to-morrow. An Exchange Telegraph despatch from Copenhagen says a Copenhagen correspondent hears that the Reichstag Socialists will make their support of the new war loan dependent on the situation developed by the debate.

QUIET ON BRITISH FRONT.

LONDON, July 6. The official statement from British headquarters in France, issued to-night reads: Artillery has been active on both sides of the Scarpe, east of Arras, and in Messines and Nieuport sectors. There is nothing further to report.

MINE SWEEPER SUNK.

LONDON, July 6. A British mine sweeper struck a mine and sank in the Mediterranean on Saturday with the probable loss of 10 members of the crew, says the official to-night.

ON THE CANADIAN FRONT.

Canadian Headquarters, France, July 6. (By Stewart Lyon), via London.—Posse 5, the pithead which overlooked our outpost in Avion, disappeared yesterday in a cloud of dust and fire. It had been for some time the mark of our heavy artillery, but whether the destruction was caused by ourselves or the Germans is not known. If they anticipated the further immediate advance of our men, they may have blown up the mining works themselves, for it is their policy to leave behind nothing that would aid in the speedy resumption of mining operations in this important coal area. Much evidence of the lowering German morale continues to be discovered in the captured trenches and raided houses. A remarkable letter was found recently, which had been written to a Bavarian at the front three weeks ago. The letter said in part: "One can understand that you are sick of this horrible business. I believe that the climax has been reached, for now one hears nothing of complaints. The German Social Democrats have announced that if a single shot is fired in August a revolution will follow. The situation is no longer good. They are on the track of the German Kaiser, too, and if it lasts much longer it will be the end of Prussia, for the Prussians and English are masters. These two alone are carrying on the war. The others are merely in their hands." If much of that sort of stuff is reaching Prince Rupprecht's men the decline in the fighting spirit of the Bavarians is removed from the realm of matter for wonder. I understand that our casualties have been very light during the past two weeks, and exceptionally so in killed and missing classes.

ENEMY ATTACKS.

PARIS, July 6. The Germans attacked on the Champagne front last night and were repulsed. The War Office announces the assaults were made west of Mont Carniellet and southeast of Tahure. The artillery was active around Verdun.

FIGHTING IN CHINA.

PEKING, July 6. Fighting began yesterday at Lang Fang about 95 miles southeast of Peking between troops of General Chang Han, supporter of the monarchy, and the forces of the Republicans. The situation in the capital is becoming serious. Trains are filled with Chin### ese fleeing to Tien.

Tsin hotels are full of foreigners. Small American and Japanese forces are endeavoring to come from Tien, Tsin, but their arrival may be delayed by the fighting at Lang Fang where 5,000 troops of General Chang Han are opposing the advance guard of 20,000 Republicans.

HEAVY FIGHTING REPORTED.

BERLIN, July 6. Shock troops of the Wurtemberg regiment were engaged in a bitter hand-to-hand fight with French soldiers, last night, north of the Aisne, says the German official statement issued to-day. A large number of Frenchmen were taken prisoners.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

LONDON, July 6. The official statement issued by the War Office to-day says the Germans attempted a night raid on the British posts near Bullecourt which was repulsed. There is nothing further to report.

ON THE VERGE OF COLLAPSE.

LONDON, July 6. A despatch to the Post from Tien Tsin says the Manchurian restoration seems on the verge of collapse. Fifty thousand Republican troops are converging in Peking where General Chang Han has only about 20,000 men. The members of the northern military party do not expect fighting. They believe Chang Han's troops will desert when they realize the strength of the Republican forces. Fifteen provinces now support Tuan Chi who has been named Premier of the Provisional Government established in Peking. A despatch to the Daily Mail says that General Chang Han realizing his mistake in attempting to restore the Emperor, threatens to sack Peking, burn Manchurian Palace and take the Emperor to Mongolia.

WILL PARADE IN NATURE'S GARB.

PETROGRAD, July 6. The Russkaya Vosemensty reports that the peasants of two cantons near Odesse in view of their inability to obtain clothing, have passed a resolution to organize processions of naked men.

ON THE MACEDONIAN FRONT.

LONDON, July 6. The enemy gained temporary footing on the ridge west of Doljevi, southwest of Lake Dorian, but was driven out by counter attacks, says an official report from the Macedonian front. Nineteen tons of explosives were dropped and considerable damage done.

SOCIALISTS REFUSE TO SUPPORT WAR CREDITS.

AMSTERDAM, July 6. A despatch from Berlin says the Socialists in the German Reichstag will refuse to support votes of credit unless certain conditions are complied with.

AMERICAN STEAMER SUNK.

WASHINGTON, July 6. The American steamer Orleans, 2,808 tons gross, owned by the Oriental Navigation Co., has been torpedoed and sunk by a submarine. Four of the crew were drowned.

ADDITIONAL WAR LOAN.

WASHINGTON, July 6. An additional war loan of one hundred million dollars was made to France to-day. This brings the total loans to that country to three hundred and ten million dollars.

FLETCHER'S MISSION.

WASHINGTON, July 6. Enough importance was attached to the mission of Henry P. Fletcher, Ambassador to Mexico, who has hurriedly left Mexico city, by the State Department to arrange for a conference to-day with Secretary Lansing on board the train which is carrying the Secretary to Henderson's Harbor, New York, for a three weeks' official vacation. State Department officials have professed ignorance as to the nature of the mission of Ambassador Fletcher. He requested permission to come to Washington three weeks ago, and left as soon as authorization was received. By some officials it was assumed the Ambassador wished to explain personally to the Secretary the extent which German activity has been carried on in Mexico and the influence German agents had on the Mexican Government and people. Reports that Mexico would enter the war as an ally of the Entente are not regarded by most officials here as well based. They also believe it improbable that Mexico will become active in support of Germany.

ENEMY MAIL INTERCEPTED.

NEW YORK, July 6. Federal authorities are investigating supposed methods of communication between the States and Germany, it was announced here to-day, upon the seizure of a bundle of letters including a communication which arriving from the Central Powers apparently was intended to reach Alexander von Nuber, formerly Austrian Consul General at New York. Von Nuber left here after the Government investigated the charges that he shipped reservists to Austria under fraudulent passports in 1915. How the letters were to reach Von Nuber has not been disclosed, nor his present whereabouts announced. The letters were brought here by sailors on a Scandinavian steamer and delivered to a sail-room keeper at Hpboken. The plan, according to the investigators, was for the mail to be re-addressed here so that it would appear as correspondence from the United States. The sailors admitted they were paid to smuggle the mail past the British censors and promised to testify to the Government if needed. Some of the letters were addressed to persons in New Zealand, Australia, and India.

age was inflicted by British airplanes in June.

LONDON, July 6. The following official report from the Egyptian front was given out here to-day: The situation is unchanged. There has been considerable artillery fighting. We put out of action 13 enemy guns and destroyed many gun emplacements in June. The sickness of the troops was lower than the average in Egypt in the five years preceding the war.

NARROW ESCAPE.

LONDON, July 6. W. A. Holman, Premier of New South Wales narrowly escaped death during a visit to the western battle front Monday. A German shell burst a few yards distant, bruised him, tore his clothes and inflicted a severe shock. His complete recovery is expected.

NOTHING OF IMPORTANCE.

BERLIN, July 6. To-day's German official statement says there were no military operations of importance to report on the Macedonian front.

HONORS EVEN.

PETROGRAD, July 6. In the direction of Kovel in the region of Gradiska, our artillery brought down a German airplane. The machine was wrecked and the aviators killed. In the Carpathians German artillery brought down one of our airplanes in flames; it fell in the enemy lines. The French pilot and observer were evidently killed.

LABOR TROUBLES IN GERMANY.

AMSTERDAM, July 6. Another outbreak of labor troubles in Germany is reported by the Handelsblad, which says a collision occurred at Hamburg last night between strikers and workers from Government munitions plants. Soldiers fired repeatedly on the demonstrators, one man being killed and 11 wounded.

RAILWAY TORN UP.

LONDON, July 6. Reuter's Shanghai correspondent, in a message filed Thursday, reports that Chang Han's troops on that day tore up the Peking-Tien-Tsin railway at Lang Fang. Foreign troops are being sent to restore communications. The provinces generally are calm. Chang Han stands virtually alone, the despatch says.

REICHSTAG OPEN.

BERLIN, July 6. The Reichstag opened yesterday with a speech by the President, who said the war continued to rage, and asked what a shocking amount of misery and distress would be spared the world if Germany's enemies had agreed to the magnanimous peace offer of Emperor William and his allies to find a peace which would preserve the honor and interests of all nations. The Reichstag's president declared ### that the war aims of Germany's enemies meant the disruption and destruction of Germany and her allies, but that against this existed the usual unanimous duty to resist with all power to defend Germany's future, cost what it may.

DENMARK'S FOOD SUPPLY.

COPENHAGEN, July 6. The Government Commission appointed in April to investigate the problem of food supply reports that Denmark will be able to feed the population from home supplies, but will probably have to reduce live stock and meat production to a certain extent on the basis of the amount of home grown fodder available after the necessary amount for human consumption is furnished.

ARGENTINE DEMANDS APOLOGY.

LONDON, July 6. According to a despatch from Buenos Aires to the Times, the Argentine Government has demanded an immediate apology and indemnity from Germany for the torpedoing of the Argentine vessels Oriana and Toro and a guarantee that the Argentine flag will be respected in future.

APPEAL TO BRITISH SUBJECTS.

BOSTON, July 6. An appeal to British subjects of military age residing in New England to enlist in British or Canadian armies, was issued last night.

LOSS BY FIRE.

PARIS, July 6. The plant of the Transcontinental Express Co., with its contents, 2,700 bales of cotton, was destroyed by fire last night, entailing a loss estimated at more than $40,000. Officials of the company express the belief that the fire was of incendiary origin.

Football Season Opens.

Doubtful Goal Results in One Team Quitting. The initial game of the league football series was pulled off on St. George's Field last evening in the presence of a goodly sprinkling of spectators. The opposing forces were the B. I. S. and Star. A dispute arose at the outset over the grass on the field being too high. Three of the Star team refused to play and three substitutes from the spectators were secured. Under the circumstances, the exhibition was all that could be desired. Both teams got in some lively work and play was about equally divided throughout the first period, during which no goals were scored, though many opportunities were lost through erratic shooting. The second period was more keenly fought and about five minutes before the close (no goals having been scored up to then) a regrettable dispute arose. The Star goal keeper received the ball and a scrimmage occurred. He cleared and in doing so threw it outside and behind the post. The referee should have immediately announced a corner kick, but failed to do so. Then the ball was driven through the outside part of the net, which was broken, into the goal by a B. I. S. player. The referee, who could not have seen what happened, but was evidently carried away by some of the tooters, gave a goal. Unbiased spectators, who were standing near the goal post, said that no goal was scored and even one B. I. S. supporter, who was probably the nearest to what happened, entered the field and informed the referee that he was in error. The latter was in a quandary for a spell, but eventually kept to his decision. The Stars then walked off the field, whilst most of the spectators left and went home. We might say that whilst we do not endorse the attitude taken by the Stars, who should have continued the game under protest, no goal was scored, as we watched closely the scrimmage over the ball and what followed. To obviate any such trouble in future, we would suggest that goal judges be secured and also a sound net, not a survivor of many storms. The players were— B. I. S.—Goal, H. Phelan; backs, T. Duggan, J. Kavanagh; halves, Brown, Christopher, O'Reilly; forwards, Fox, St. John, L. Kavanagh, Phelan, Brien. STAR—Goal, Murphy; backs, Bell, E. Kavanagh; halves, Piercey (sub), W. Hart, E. Hart; forwards, Evans, (sub) McGrath, Jackman, Williams, (sub) McFarlane.

Compulsory Service.

The similarity in so many respects of the positions of Canada and Newfoundland lends additional emphasis to the example which the former has given us in its adoption of compulsory military service. We must keep the subject continually before us until our own Parliament decides definitely whether or not the example is to be followed here. For that decision must be made at once and by that body. We see welcome indications that a truly national government may yet be formed at the eleventh hour. We fervently hope that we are not deceived, that the needed infusion of fresh enterprise and fresh energy into our lethargic do-nothing government will be made and that the vigorous action that the situation demands will follow.

The army and navy are the first proper objects of such energy and action. We were glad to have the views of the Herald on the subject yesterday. Touching the explanation it gives of the real reason why the last draft of volunteers at Ayr had to be trained so rapidly—the delay in sending over the Windsor contingent—we agree with what it says, but the explanation seems to us only a half one. If recruiting had before then been anything approaching what it should have been, the delaying of one draft would not have had these consequences. That particular matter, however, is now under investigation, where we can leave it for the present.

The Herald also states briefly the greatest difficulty in the way of the general compulsory plan—a far more important matter—namely, the severe tax it would impose upon our fisheries and other essential industries. We are quite aware of this, but because this view, if left at that, might encourage a misunderstanding that too plainly and widely exists, we will examine it more fully. It seems impossible for the average mind, when the word "conscription" is mentioned, to escape an impression of a universal press-gang, a vision of the entire eligible manhood of the country under arms and away from home. This is wholly incorrect, but it is easy to appreciate the objections it will raise in the mind that conceives it. Large part of the misconception was removed in the United States by the simple use, in preference, of the term "selective conscription." We could go a step further and call the proposed measure merely selection. The voluntary system is one of selection, and a more unjust selection it would be impossible to devise. It is based on a sentimental idea, almost exclusively an English idea, which England long since, as these rapid times go, found to be utterly fallacious. America saw this so clearly that at the very outset she threw the idea overboard and adopted conscription. It is almost an axiom of the voluntary system, for it is inevitable, that the best men will offer and the worst will not. It follows that the best men, since they are probably best in other respects also, are the most missed. England, for instance, suffered immensely in the beginning because thousands of men, who had the brains to be experts in all branches of essential work, had also the brains and honesty to see their duty. They enlisted, and the country lost more than it gained thereby.

It is not too much to say that the compulsory system is actually designed to meet the very difficulties usually urged against it. Many parts of Newfoundland have suffered more or less severely through the withdrawal to the ranks of their young men. Others have not so suffered at all. To take an example near to us, Portugal Cove has, we believe, sent every man who was fit. Other settlements as large, within an easy day's journey of it, have hardly contributed a man. Could any system produce greater injustice? Yet this comparison can be duplicated in scores of other places. This sort of thing should not be, and must not be permitted longer.

There is not the slightest need for the fisheries or anything else to suffer. Unless the war outlasts all expectations, it will be easy to keep the Regiment at strength without affecting any industry to a measurable extent. All that is needed is to give the authorities the necessary power to make the selection which the country itself will not make. It is not a difficult task; it is comparatively easy. The Recruiting Committee know very exactly both what are the needs and what have been the contributions of every little village in the island. Given the power, they could produce in short time a couple of Regiments composed of men who, from every conceivable point of view, ought to be in khaki. What is more, the country knows this. What is still more, the country, we are convinced, is ready for it and would welcome it. The Government, as at present constituted, has shown a complete inability to realize this; it furnishes one of the most cogent reasons for a coalition. There are, let us be thankful, several at least in the number of the Opposition who know the temper of the people and have not formed so contemptible an opinion of it as to fear, as the Government have feared, to remind their constituents of their plain duty.

Prohibition Case Continued.

The further hearing of the charge preferred against a city manufacturer for violating the Prohibition Act was continued before Mr. Morris, J.P., this forenoon. Another female employee of the defendant gave evidence, as well as the Government Analyst. When the case for the prosecution was presented through Lawyers Hunt and Dunfield, Mr. Gibbs, K.C., on behalf of the defendant considered it unnecessary to go into the defence because there was no evidence before the court to sustain the charge that his client had manufactured Beer, Iron and Wine within the past six months. Mr. Hunt argued that there was considerable evidence and conclusive proof, notably from the testimony of the employees of the defendant, showing that the latter had manufactured Beer, Iron and Wine during the period mentioned. The Judge stated that the question was whether there was sufficient evidence to make it necessary for the defendant to state his case, and he intimated that he would weigh the evidence before him and determine on the matter Monday next.

To-Day's Messages.
10.00 A.M.

LONDON, To-day.
(By Reuter's Ottawa Agency). Perry Robinson writes from British headquarters that after surveying the results of a year it can now be confessed that there were doubts as to the new British armies but this disquieting has vanished as the new men have proved not once but a hundred times that they are superior to the Germans. We are confident to-day, he states, that the new armies are made of better men and are better composed than the German forces.

SCENE BETWEEN GOMPERS AND ROOSEVELT.

NEW YORK, To-day.
A denial by Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, that the Trades Unions had any share in the East St. Louis riots which was met by vehement denunciation by Theodore Roosevelt of the murder of the helpless negroes precipitated a tumultuous demonstration at a mass meeting held at Garnier Hall here in honor of the Russian Mission to the United States. Roosevelt was interrupted by Gompers who rose from his seat and approached the former President, "Why don't you accuse after an investigation?" the Labor Leader demanded. With these words he returned to his seat. Col. Roosevelt strove over to his chair and exclaimed, "Mr. Gompers, why don't I accuse afterward? I'll answer now, when murder is to be answered." With that the Colonel brought down on Gompers' shoulder his left hand which he had raised above his head. At this juncture many men on the platform leaped to their feet and there was a storm of hissing from all parts of the house. When Roosevelt could make himself heard above the din he went on: "I will go to any extreme to bring justice to the labor man, but when there is murder I will put him down." When Roosevelt had finished Gompers evidently stirred to rise and make a rejoinder, but was pushed back in his seat by those who were near him. While Mayor Mitchell, who presided, pounded vigorously with his gavel in an effort to restore order, several minutes elapsed before it was possible to introduce Boris Bakmetieff, Russian Ambassador, and continue the meeting. As the excitement subsided Roosevelt and Gompers found themselves sitting side by side.

Coalition Government

ALLEGED TO BE FINALIZED.
The House of Assembly remained in session only a half hour yesterday afternoon, the obvious reason of the early adjournment being to give ample time during the evening to both political parties to discuss further the question of coalition.

Petitions were presented on various public matters by Messrs. Stone, Abbott and Targett.
The Resolutions respecting a three billion dollar loan for Army and Navy purposes went through Committee and a Bill giving them effect will be introduced on Monday next.

The Bill relating to the exportation of pit props cut since the beginning of the year also passed Committee.
Other items on the Order Paper were deferred.
We understand that a delegation from the Government and Opposition ranks again discussed terms for a coalition ministry. The proposal of the Opposition were entertained by the Government, we hear, and a National Government was finally decided on. What is alleged to be part of the cause of the delay in coming to a settlement was that some of the Coakerite members claimed they were more entitled to an Executive seat than the one their President nominated. This nominee contested the District of St. John's West for the Liberal-Union Party in 1913. This petty grievance, however, was adjusted and coalition is now said to be an accomplished fact.

A Graceful Act

Next week the ladies of the W.P.A. are going to hold a flower day for the benefit of the French Red Cross Association. This is the very least we could do for the gallant and chivalrous heroes who turned back the tide of German barbarism at the Marne and saved Britain and civilization. Many cities in the States are adopting the children and dependents of certain towns in France, and guaranteeing to clothe and educate them for the services rendered civilization by their brave fathers and brothers. We in Newfoundland ought not to be behind our American cousins in generosity. Of course our means are limited, but notwithstanding, we should make a great effort to help the French widows and orphans.

Every school-child could be taught to exercise the gift of charity by buying a bunch of flowers. Many people will say we have room enough here to exercise our charity but it is a poor brand that ends as well as begins at home.

It is a graceful act of our local ladies to do this much for our gallant French allies, and every man, woman and child in the city should help to swell the funds by purchasing a bouquet from the flower-girls on the Flower-Day-for-France which occurs next week.

Whole Family Burned to Death.

Father and Mother and Six Children Victims of Fire in Their Home.
Madison, Me., June 30.—George B. Rowe, aged 37, his wife 33, and their six children ranging in age from 1 to 13 years, were burned to death early to-day in a fire which destroyed their home at Anson near here. None of the occupants of the house escaped.

Investigation failed to show evidence of foul play and the county medical examiner decided an inquest was unnecessary.

The seating accommodation at St. George's Field as it is at present is inadequate for the number of fans who attend nightly. The Leagues are, therefore, erecting new seating, which will be ready for Tuesday night's ball game, so that the Fem-Fans need not have any future cause for worry about not securing comfort in the Grand stand.

APPROVE OF INCOME TAX.
Upwards of five hundred members attended last night's meeting of the Newfoundland Industrial Workers' Association. All arrangements have been made for the importation of a cargo of 100 tons of coal. Members who are buying the coal will make a $3 deposit before July 15th. The coal is due to reach this port on or about the end of August and will be delivered from the ship's side.

The following resolution was then read and passed by a standing vote. A number of speakers expressed themselves as approving the wording of the resolution and pointed out to the meeting that the Association had every respect for the honest and honorable trader. The resolution read: "WHEREAS this Association has been officially informed by the Rt. Hon. the Prime Minister that it is the intention of the Government to consider the question of excess war profits;

BE IT RESOLVED that this Association entirely approve of the imposition of a tax on excess war profits, and hopes that, while the interests of the honest and honorable trader are fully safeguarded, the law to be enacted will compel restriction of the whole or nearly all of the excess profits due to the war;

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that in the opinion of this Association a graduated income tax should be imposed on all incomes above one thousand dollars a year, so that flesh and blood shall not bear the burden of the war, but that wealth may be compelled to bear its full share.
Eighty new members signed the roll at last night's meeting, which now brings the total up to 555, an average of about 90 new members for each general meeting.

LANDS SICK MAN.—The banking schooner Admiral Dewey, Capt. Maddox, owned by Tibbo of Grand Bank, put into port yesterday to land one of her crew named Manning, who is suffering from acute rheumatism. He was attended to on arrival by Dr. Roberts who ordered him to hospital. Capt. Maddox has for 600 qts. of fish which were secured 20 miles east of the Virgin Rocks. So far he has landed 1,000 qts., and but for the illness of one of his crew he would have secured a big voyage as the fish were fairly plentiful.

B. I. S. and Red Lions is causing much excitement among the fans. A win for the former would put them well in the lead of the others; while if they lose, all four clubs will be equal. The Red Lion battery will be McAskill (who has improved wonderfully with the fortnight's practice) and Mike Power. Brazie and Carew will control affairs for the Irish.

ATTENTION, UMPIRES.

We have been asked to call the umpires' attention to the fact that in the Cuba-Wanderers game, the coacher on 3rd for the former on several occasions-assisted overiding base-runners back to the bag. This, we think, constitutes a very serious breach of the rules and the runner in each instance should have been called out. We are informed by a Wanderer supporter that this happened no less than three times, which, of course, with watchful umpires and the rule enforced would have meant three Cubs out at third. We merely mention this in compliance with a player's request and not in the spirit of criticism, as we quite realise what the poor Umps have to contend with at each game.

LEAGUE MEETING.

A meeting of the Baseball League will be held on Tuesday night after the game. As matters of importance are to be discussed a full attendance of players is requested.

TO FRED. BRIEN.

(Baseball Correspondent for the News).

Dear Fred: I understand that you are now a sporting writer, too. Success to you in this new line! Yes, come right in—the water's fine! I've known you, Fred, for many a year. So hand you here a friendly steer.

Fred, do not write your baseball grind when something else is on your mind. To get the proper careless touch to circle me to think too much. For thinking thoughts divinely think will take much time, so "can" that junk.

Avoid all slang, Fred. Are you hep? Sparkle, you know, but watch your step!

You're writing for a dead wise gang. So nix on slang, Fred, nix on slang! A rhyme or two won't come amiss. But make your verses short—like this.

Go to it, Fred. Good luck to you! You've studied sport, and know it, too. The world has never turned away from what a champion has to say. If you can write as you can play Fans will have quite a treat each day.

Never Too Late.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Are you at the present time forming any good habits?
There are certain maxims of conduct which, while they are good in what they assert, are not good in what they infer. One of these is the well-pounded maxim in assertion that the only time to form good habits is while you are young.

Three Kinds of Good Habits.
I asked myself that question and was ashamed to find only one good habit on the make, that of drinking two glasses of water before breakfast.
Good habits can be roughly divided into three classes: health habits (like the water drinking); mental habits (like reading some worthwhile book in a stated period) and character habits (such as getting up promptly when called).
Don't you think one ought to have one of each kind on the make all the time?

A Piece of Good Advice.
And while we are on the subject just one bit of advice that has helped me. It is from Henry James:
"Never suffer an exception to occur until the new habit is securely rooted in your life," he warns, "each lapse is like the letting fall of a ball of string which one is carefully winding up; a single slip undoes more than a great many turns will wind again."

If I omit drinking that water one morning it is harder to drink it the next. Perhaps some day I shall reach the point where the action is automatic and I can afford to skip a morning. And then, by the irony of fate, I won't want to.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.
Dear Sirs,—This fall I got thrown on a fence and hurt my chest very bad, so I could not work and it hurt me to breathe. I tried all kinds of Liniments and they did me no good.
One bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT, warmed on flame and applied on my breast, cured me completely.

Resolution of Sympathy
July 6th, 1917.
The Methodist Conference, at the recent Session, forwarded the following Resolution to the Bishop of Newfoundland, which was gratefully acknowledged by His Lordship:—
RESOLVED that the Conference has heard with profound regret of the painful and extended illness through which His Lordship the Bishop of Newfoundland has been called to pass. The Conference welcomes the news of improvement in his health, and expresses the hope that he may speedily reach restoration, enjoy a prolonged season of service in extending the Kingdom of our Divine Master, and have an eventful life radiant with the glory of our Lord.

BACK TO THE FARM.
Since I'm too fat to do much harm with sword or gun or salve, methinks I'll go back to the farm, and do some useful labor. In carnage I would like to stoop, but as I've too much to do, I'll raise the large and d shapely squash, the artichoke and mallow. The n maybe, when the war 's done, and Kaiser Bill's a goner, with him who piled the deady gun they'll let me share the honour. When I'm declared too fat to fight, I do not sulk or grumble; I say, "Whatever is is right—I'll choose a task more humble. There surely is some useful sphere in which a portly duffer may do as much as though, with spear, he made a Prussian suffer. So I shall hum some martial chants while spading, raking, hoeing; I'll cultivate my nutmeg plants and keep my string beans growing." Most men are glad to hear the flag to any warstruck region, if they can ride on prancing nag, and boss a fighting legion. We cannot all wear stripes of gold and train with captains courtly, for some of us have 'grown too old, and others are too portly. But there are places for us all whatever our age or station, to hang a banner on the wall and do things for the nation.

Resolution of Sympathy
July 6th, 1917.
The Methodist Conference, at the recent Session, forwarded the following Resolution to the Bishop of Newfoundland, which was gratefully acknowledged by His Lordship:—
RESOLVED that the Conference has heard with profound regret of the painful and extended illness through which His Lordship the Bishop of Newfoundland has been called to pass. The Conference welcomes the news of improvement in his health, and expresses the hope that he may speedily reach restoration, enjoy a prolonged season of service in extending the Kingdom of our Divine Master, and have an eventful life radiant with the glory of our Lord.

The Gas Range!

The Gas Range means comfort for the housewife; shorter kitchen hours for her, and a cleaner kitchen. It is a great mistake to think that cooking with gas is expensive.
Whenever a woman becomes used to gas for cooking, thoughts of a coal or wood stove fill her with gloom. A Gas range is so much easier to operate, so efficient for all kinds of cooking, and so much cleaner, that the idea of going back to the old style methods is decidedly unpleasant. Yet in winter many housewives think they must use a coal or wood stove, because there is no other way of heating the kitchen. THERE IS ANOTHER WAY AND IT IS FAR BETTER THAN THE OLD. WEEK END NOTES.
(I. C. M.)

"No flowers." Such is the intimation which occasionally is given in the obituary notices of our city—and also of other cities. To me the intimation has always awakened the spirit of inquiry, as to why flowers should be forbidden; and I have heard some very diversified opinions expressed upon the matter.

Among the reasons given as to why flowers should not be used at funerals, that of expense is the most common; while others think that the practice borders on the unduly gay and fashionable; and that at such a time anything like pride should not be indulged in. These reasons in themselves, and in as far as they apply, have much in their favor; and if a few lessons in this direction were learned, they would accomplish much good; because, certain it is, that many people go far beyond their means in this matter.

But after all, what great difference does it make in funeral expenses, if a few dollars are invested in flowers, and a dollar or two in silk ribbon to bind them? It surely would not impoverish the family of the deceased person, nor would it seriously affect the estate, nor irrevocably injure the creditors. Not in the least; for a few dollars would purchase a very nice lot of flowers. But it is not the financial aspect of it that should be looked at, nor does it really meet the conditions of the question; for as a rule, flowers are mostly sent to the home of the deceased as a token of respect, and as a memento of love by friends; and those who send them, are usually able to pay for them; and this is where the harshness of the intimation comes in, and where it is felt. It literally blocks the channel of affection, and debars any friend or organization from paying a becoming token of respect to the memory of the deceased. This is a mistake; and it is gratifying to know that it does not occur very often, but is more the exception than the rule.

Let us consider then the two principal features of this question, viz., Death and Flowers—one the very opposite of the other. In death we have the most solemn reality that mankind is heir to; while in flowers we have emblems of the most beautiful work of creation. One points down into the darkness of the grave, and tells of the sorrow of the broken heart and of blighted hopes; the other points upwards and tells of beauty and life, and proclaims immortality—and what more fitting emblem could be, or should be, associated with death, than that of immortality?

Flowers grow in every land, and the whole face of nature is beautified with them. In number and colour they are indescribable, and their influence is to inspire and uplift. Who that looks into the leaves of the rose, or the heart of the lily, or the folds of the blue-bell, does not see in them the essence of all that is tender, pure and edifying? Who that has studied our own native flowers and has not felt a greater love for their country. Who that has worked at dewy morn over the carpet of nature, which the tiny flowers decorate, or at eventide through the forest, has not seen in the foliage, and the moss and the reeds, the tokens and emblems, aye! and the proofs of immortality?

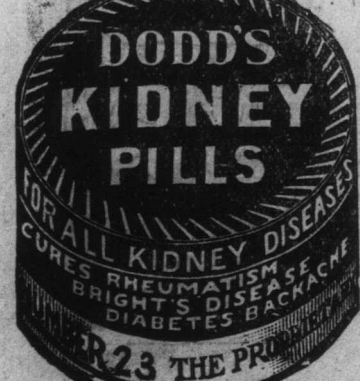

The flowers preach to us every day, and whether they bloom in the open or within the sanctity of the home, their lesson is the same. The parables of the Redeemer are all sublime, but one of the most sublime, and most quoted, is that of the "Lilies of the field." Only a lily, we say? Yes, only a lily; but in grandeur and glory, and beauty, not even a Solomon was equal to it. The flowers tell of all that is best and truest, and they inspire hope, and speak of renewed life. Therefore are they fitting and becoming in the chamber of death. Their presence bespeaks hopefulness, and lend an atmosphere of relief to the scene, and express the respect of the friends who sent them, and of the gentle hands which arranged them.

O yes! let there be flowers in the chamber of death; for death is not the end. Dark though it is, and a penalty though it be, its power is broken, and the immortality which was at first meant for mankind is finally to be restored, and death is to be swallowed up in victory; as saith the Scripture, "O Death where is thy sting, O Grave where is thy victory?"

When comes the end of life, and all its work is done,
And the last day lends but a few more hours;
When in the western sky of lifetime sinks my sun,
Then let who will, bring flowers, sweet flowers.
And when the last Amen is uttered o'er my dust,
And moistened is my grave by gentle showers;
Even though it be not marked with marble bust,
Let it be decked with flowers, sweet flowers.

Collins for floral tributes to adorn the coffin of the dear departed.

America's "Drives"

(From the New York Times.)

The second "drive" ended like the first. The Red Cross War Council, under the skillful management of Henry P. Davison, set out to raise $100,000,000 in seven days. The seven days are up, and it has raised $114,000,000. The first drive was for the Liberty Loan. The third is to raise 70,000 volunteers for the regular army. The success of the first two is a good omen for the third.

There are still those who say that America is apathetic, uninterested in the war. The truth is that America, in all her history, never entered any war in which such things as these either could be or would be done at the outset. No European country in the present war had such a success with its first loan as we have had with ours. That fact could not be denied, so it was met with the remark that the Liberty Loan was an investment. The war loans of the United States in the past, the European war loans to-day, were investments, but they were never so successful as this. But the Red Cross subscription is no investment, and it, too, is oversubscribed, great as the amount demanded. Again we must repeat that the fact that the United States is not yelling and waving its arms about this war is no indication that it is not wholeheartedly in it, and that people who continue to nurse delusions about it will continue hunting for explanations as they get one shock after another.

So send me your name and the test treatment will be sent you at once. When I send you this, I will write you more fully, and will show you that my treatment is not only for banishing rheumatism, but should also cleanse the system of Uric Acid and give great benefit in kidney trouble and help the general health.

This special offer will not be held open indefinitely. It will be necessary for you to make your application quickly. As soon as this discovery becomes better known, I shall cease sending free treatments and shall then charge a price for this discovery which will be in proportion to its great value. So take advantage of this offer before it is too late. Remember the test costs you absolutely nothing. F. H. Delano, 808 C. Delano Bldg., Syracuse, N.Y.

Save Your Rain Water

The householder who is going in for intensive vegetable cultivation in his back garden this year will, if he is wise, save his rain water instead of letting it run to waste down the drains.

Any old barrel will do to collect it in, provided of course that it does not leak, and the water will be found far superior to that provided by the water companies.

The latter, in fact, is of very little use for assisting the growth of vegetables. If it must be used, run it off into baths, tubs, or other handy receptacles, and let it stand out in the sun all day, using it warm in the early evening.

Even then, however, it is not a patch upon rain water, the reason being that the latter contains certain organic properties—"impurities" you may call them if you like—which are absent from the soft rain water.

Memories.

Oh, boyhood scenes of days of yore
What thoughts come up before me now,
Long e're the badge of care I wore,
E're furrows did not mark my brow.
Once more those years they were my soul,
They cling to me as fresh as when
I kicked the football through the goal,
And chased the blackbird in the glen.

Again I view them with delight,
And in my mind I gain the top
And on the "barren" by the kite
And play the game of "leap and hop."
In fancy I go to the pool,
I courted in the summer fair,
Where with companions from the school
We caught the little "prickleys" there.

Oh, boyhood chums where are you now,
Where are the smiling looks you were,
The flush of health upon each brow,
Those laughing youths I loved of yore,
The cares of men you bear to-day
As down the hill of life you tread,
But those old scenes you'll pass away
Till you and I are joined with the dead.

Sweet memory's gift from God above
How precious fits to banish cares,
It gives us strength through life to love
The glowing scenes of boyhood years.

When life was like a running stream
Redolent with the purest bliss,
But now, alas, we can but dream
Of days we once had known like this.

Yet we may still be contented be—
Though shadows dark our path pursue,
We yet may keep our souls as free
As in the days when life was new
If God we love and ask His aid
To help us on the thorny way
We'll find that we will be repaid
And feel like boys of yesterday.

Premier Encampment I. O. O. F.

There was a good attendance of members at the regular meeting of Premier Encampment I. O. O. F., held last night, it being the annual meeting at which reports were received for the past year. The reports read indicated a decided advance over the past year both in membership and finance and the interest manifested in all the proceedings of the evening left no doubt that the new term will witness an enthusiastic effort for further progress in view of the new proposals to be carried out within the next few months. Following the reports Installation of Officers took place, conducted by S. Butler, D.D.G.P., assisted by D. Cook, D.D.G.W. and G. F. Grimes, D.D.H.P. Officers installed were:—

Bro. G. Parsons—T. W.
Bro. S. Frellick, F. W.
Bro. J. Long—G. of T.
Bro. S. Levitz—S. G. of T.

Following the installation the District Deputy Grand Patriarch S. Butler on behalf of the Encampment presented Bro. G. F. Grimes with a Patriarch's Jewel in recognition of his services for the past year. The recipient replied in suitable terms. The newly elected officers then made short addresses after which the meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Great British Achievements.

London, July 2.—A year ago Saturday will remain memorable in British history. Early that July morning the British troops attacked on a twenty mile front along the Somme, and began a campaign which was the most pretentious and successful feat of arms ever attempted by the soldiers of Britain.

The artillery preparation, the size of the forces engaged and the number of guns and men captured were considered stupendous, and hopes ran high. Though there was much bloodshed, even veteran soldiers believed that a wedge would be driven clear through the German lines and that Doua and Cambrai soon would be in British hands.

That day marked the turning-point of the war, when the great Prussian military machine was thrown on the defensive in the West, and it is there to-day, a year later. Hopes were never fully realized on the Somme, but it proved a valuable training-ground for the British amateurs, who since have graduated into professional ranks and have shown themselves during 1917 to be more than the equal of the pick of the Kaiser's army.

Compared with the feats of 1916, the British achievements of 1917 look large, and still the year is only half done. To-day there are three hundred thousand veterans to a mere hundred a year ago. A year ago the length of the attacking front was limited by the supplies of big guns and shells. To-day, on the evidence of the Minister of Munitions, the supply is so nearly unlimited that it has made possible generous contributions to Italy and Russia.

A year ago Germany could mass big forces against Russia and stem the British advance. To-day hers are the best concentrated of all forces in the west, and still she is unable to halt the British attack.

A year ago she counter attacked with great violence. To-day her reply is feeble and disorganized. A year ago Sir Douglas Haig's army was untested and untried. To-day he knows exactly what to expect. A year ago the British suffered from the disastrous failure in Mesopotamia. To-day Britain holds Bagdad.

Waiting.

Serene, I fold my hands and wait
Nor care for wind, nor tide, nor sea;
I have no more 'gainst time or fate,
For lo my own shall come to me.

I stay my haste, I make delays,
For what avails this eager pace;
I stand amid the eternal ways,
And what is mine shall know my face.

Asleep, awake, by night or day,
The friends I seek are seeking me;
No wind can drive my bark astray,
Nor change the tide of destiny.

What matter if I stand alone?
I wait with joy the coming years,
My heart shall reap where it hath sown
And garner up its fruit of tears.

The waters know their own and draw
The Brook that springs in yonder heights;
So flows the good with equal law
Unto the soul of pure delights.

The stars come nightly to the sky,
The tidal wave into the sea;
Nor time, nor space, nor deep, nor high;
Can keep my own away from me.

John Burroughs.

Results of Prohibition

Montana is to vote on prohibition of the liquor traffic next November, and the liquor interests keep warning the people through the press of the dreadful results that will follow if they vote for it.

They frequently refer to Wichita, in the dry state of Kansas, as a dreadful example of the effects of prohibition. The truth is that Wichita and several other cities in Kansas refused to enforce the law until a few years ago, but that did not prevent the liquor interests from representing it as a prohibition city.

Collier's Weekly tells the story thus: "Wichita a few years ago was the Gibraltar of the saloon in Kansas. Its saloons were running years after the Kansas law went into effect. Deals were made at state conventions, and nominations were secured through the promise of open saloons for Wichita. The protest was long in coming, but it arrived at last, like many other reform movements of the day, arrived with momentum. A dry mayor was elected; heavy penalties for violation of the law were exacted. The saloons died hard, but they died, and note the result.

"Before the saloons closed, the bank clearings of Wichita were $1,120,000 weekly. In three years they had increased to something more than $3,000,000. The city instead of going backward has steadily grown. One newspaper changed from favouring the saloons to opposing them; in six weeks its circulation had increased 6,000 copies. Merchants declared that their collections had increased. Workmen were paying weekly for insurance; before the saloons closed forty per cent of these workmen were in arrears.

"Within a short time after the enforcement of the law these arrears had disappeared and many were paying in advance.

"That editorial was written in 1911, but they say that conditions are still better now. The last year of Wichita's saloons was 1907, when bank clearings were $55,000,000. For 1912 they were $196,184,000. Wichita's bank deposits in 1907 were $7,420,976. In 1915 they were for the same months $17,048,000. Wichita's property valuation on the same basis was $74,453,849."

Collier's does not claim that the property valuation in every town that adopts prohibition is bound to be tripled in nine years, but they do claim that the above figures do prove the absurdity of the argument that booze brings prosperity.

Norway Not to Submit Tamely to German Bully.

London, June 27.—Norway has reached a crisis in her relations with Germany. Judging from information reaching here to-day, there is reason to believe she will not submit tamely to Germany's arrogant demands as to her commerce and shipping, despite her desperate desire to maintain peace.

Well-informed Norwegians in London recognize the military purposes of Germany's continued and illegal destruction of Norway's shipping. They see the reasons for Germany's systematic campaign to wipe out Norwegian ships by submarines no less than the remarkable German bomb plots recently uncovered at Christiania.

The German campaign has already reduced Norwegian shipping by almost a third of its total before the war. If it is continued, it means the practical elimination of the nation's shipping.

Norway is now exporting great quantities of fish, iron ore and nickel to England, while exporting practically nothing to Germany. It is this fact it is believed here, more than anything else that impelled the German authorities to try the terrorist scheme of having German agents smuggle bombs into Norway to put aboard Norwegian ships—a deliberate effort to wipe out Norway's merchant marine as well as to frighten her shippers and her seamen.

In packing the picnic lunch, it is better if each sandwich is wrapped separately in oiled paper, the fruit put in a box by itself, and the sweet packet alone, so that each thing will retain its flavor and not be confused with everything else, as it is bound to be if all are packed heter-skelter into a basket.

$1,000,000 a Year for Charlie Chaplin.

San Francisco, June 25.—Charlie Chaplin, movie comedian, has sold his pictures for the coming year for a sum exceeding $1,000,000. It was leased here to-day. The First National Exhibitors, a syndicate of wealthy film men, made this purchase. Under this deal, Chaplin will produce his own pictures and will have his own company. Chaplin completed the deal during a visit here last week.

Russia's New Song.

The Russian revolution is complete, for Russia has now her revolutionary song! It is to be the song of the freed Russian Nation. The "Bole Tsaria Khirani," the old anthem, beautiful as it is, stands for a past from which every Russian wants to look away forever, and so it has been discarded for the wonderful plaint of the bachelors of the Volga, a song than which no other is so full of the religious feeling of a race. Under the ancient regime the melody of the Volga was forbidden to be sung, because it had already been adopted by the revolutionaries. Igor Stravinsky has made it the theme of a national anthem which will take its place with the "Marseillaise" among the great historic songs of the world.

Milady's Boudoir.

THE COIFFURE AND FACE. Women of to-day, who do not have the luxuriant growth of hair that was manifested in older times, a face that was undoubtedly due to the treatment to which the hair was subjected. This scantiness of hair is a source of worry when it comes to arranging the coiffure. When such is the case and one does not wish to adopt artificial hair, one must then rely upon the use of a headdress of hair ornaments to fill in the vacancy and detract from the scantiness.

The arrangement of the coiffure, however, cannot make a woman beautiful unless the face expresses that attribute. Perhaps little lines are manifesting themselves here and there upon the face. They may be due to age, habit or weather, but from whatever cause steps should be taken at once to arrest their progress. I have found the following sufficient, providing its use is begun in time.

Have water boiling, then simmer two ounces of quince seed in twenty ounces of water for forty minutes. Strain, add two ounces of pure alcohol, and a few drops of scent if desired. When cold, bottle and keep tightly corked. This should be put on the face before retiring at night, first working it well in. When a fresh application is made allow it to dry on.

In making the morning toilet after the face wash, an equal amount of the lotion and water is poured into a bowl. This is applied to the face, neck, hands and arms, allowing it to dry.

U. S. Naval officers.

Washington, June 25.—American naval officers to-day showed great interest in the demand of Winston Spencer Churchill, former First Lord of the British Admiralty, for aggressive action by the allied fleets, especially since the entry of America into the war. Officers were inclined to agree with Mr. Churchill.

The first effect of an offensive policy by the Entente and American navies, it was stated, would be to make the Germans man their coast artillery. While the number of men demanded for this would be relatively small, the amount of materials consumed would be considerable, and this accomplishment alone, it was declared, would be more than any other achieved by the Allied fleets excepting the closure of the sea to enemy commerce and the protection of Allied trade.

It was not believed that the Allied navies ought immediately to attack German naval bases. Bases, it was said, are "loaded," but the very strength of land fortifications was said to be their weakness also, as they are fixed and unable to protect other points on the coast.

American officers asserted that should the strength of the Allied fleets be used against Germany, the submarine menace would fade like snow in the sun.

When Northcliffe Was Surprised.

Philadelphia Ledger: Whatever happens to him on this trip, Lord Northcliffe will get no bigger surprises than fell to him when he visited the United States a few years ago. You may recall that he edited a tabloid edition of the New York World. The managing editor of that paper, who thought he knew all about the correct ways of a newspaper office when a real Lord was boss, said everybody should come to work that night in a dress suit. Regardless of how or where they got the suits, every man of them, some one hundred and fifty in all, appeared in evening clothes. Lord Northcliffe came in a bit late, dressed as a working journalist, and he was the only man in the building who was not adorned with a spike-tail. Europe's foremost journalist was somewhat staggered by the dressy appearance of his staff, but it didn't interfere with his giving orders like a Napoleon.

THE PRINCE IS DAVID.

London Daily News:—There is a strange sect called the "Anglo-Israelites," who believe that we are the Lost Tribes, and that united with the Found Tribes, we are divinely appointed to rule the world as the chosen people of God. A devout and charming woman, now dead, was an enthusiastic believer in this faith, and when the present Prince of Wales was born she implored King Edward to have him christened David. The King foresaw troubles with Queen Victoria, but the lady overcame them. She said: "Call him after the patron Saints—George, Albert, Patrick, David. This would be very popular, and would secure the name." It was done, and the Prince has always been called "David" in the family circle.

FINED $100 for Bringing a Bottle of Booze From Sydney.

A northern man found in an hilarious state last midnight by Constable Green, was brought to the police station. This morning the inebriate was fined $2 or 7 days for drunk and disorderly conduct. On being questioned as to where he got the liquor he said he just came from Sydney and from there he brought a bottle full along with him. The bringing of liquor into the Colony was considered a serious offence by the court and the defendant was fined $100 or 10 days.

Hastings Here A Prisoner.

Former New York Reporter Returns Under Arrest From Holland.

Charles Hastings, at one time an occasionally employed Newspaper reporter in New York City, returned on the St. Louis a prisoner in the custody of Leslie E. Reel, American Vice-Consul at London. Hastings was one of the men employed in New York by Albert Sander to act as spies on the war activities of Great Britain.

Hastings' post was in Holland. His duties were to receive reports written in invisible ink from Sander's agents in England and transmit them across the Dutch border.

When the clumsily conceived and executed plot collapsed, Hastings was arrested in Holland and hurried to London.

There he made a confession. He claims to be an innocent victim of misplaced confidence. Hastings was turned over to the Federal authorities. It is believed his evidence against certain agents of Germany now under suspicion, but not under arrest, will be more effective than was that of George Vaux Bacon, his fellow conspirator, who escaped execution in the Tower of London only by his offer to return to New York and testify against Sander.

MILNARD'S LINIMENT CURES DAN BRUFF.

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, June 11th, 1917. TRAGEDY OF A GREAT SINGER.

The death of Edouard de Reszke, the great basso, is a tragedy of the war. Before the world conflict began Edouard was a rich man, with a splendid estate in his native Poland. The Germans destroyed his possessions, Edouard became a fugitive, and when last heard of was living in a cellar in the occupied territory, destitute and almost without food. His brother Jean learned of his plight in America, where he has been singing to retrieve the family fortunes, but was unable to succour him. "I fear he will not survive the blow," said Jean. Verdi gave Edouard de Reszke his start. Edouard was then an amateur vocalist, studying farming for a profession. Verdi was in difficulties over the cast of "Aida," and, hearing of Edouard, who was on a school holiday in Paris, he sent for the youth. The master opened his score of "Aida" and asked Edouard to try over the part of the King. He had only sung a few notes when Verdi bundled him out of the room, exclaiming, "Go and get yourself measured for the costume."

FOOD CONTROL AND "PROFITEERING."

Lord Devonport's disinclination to remain Food Controller has naturally been deepened by his recent breakdown in health, and it is generally assumed here that opportunity will now be taken to place the Ministry of Food on a more defined basis. The retention of the voluntary food system is in present conditions assured, and so far Lord Devonport can claim a success; but such failure as has attended his efforts has arisen from his inability or unwillingness to tackle the makers of huge "corners" in food, and especially in mutton and bacon. A few casual prosecutions of "food hogs" who "hoard" pots of jam or packets of tapioca furnish interesting reading and provide a wholesome caution, but there is a venal offence compared with that of their colossal companion "food hogs" who make vast fortunes by hoarding meat for the sake of securing higher profits. It is there the shoe pinches, and it is there Lord Devonport has failed. That may not have been his fault, but if the next Food Controller needs more powers to deal with "corners" the Cabinet will have public opinion at its back in conferring them.

THE TENT-MAKERS.

The largest tent and tept equipment factory in the world is that which was established two years ago in the London area by Waring and Gillow. It was visited recently by the Duke of Connaught, who inspected samples of the hospital tents that are now used in France in certain hospital bases and almost exclusively in the eastern areas. In the first press of work, when hospitals were being set up with all speed, the firm employed 12,000 hands, and last year turned out 400,000 tents, each capable of accommodating sixteen patients; but 9,000 do the work now, and are content with an output of 100 tents a day. The main hall is probably the largest sewing-room in existence, and one gets a clear view down its length of the thousands of women machinists, surrounded, sometimes almost buried, by the white canvas and yellow Indian stuff of which the tents are made—white for the outer covering and yellow to afford coolness and a softened light under glaring heat. They are ingenious tents, improvements on the Indian models, with little window frames waiting to be filled in with celluloid doors, widely netted ventilators, panels for ventilation on each side leading under a canvas awning, and an outer covering under which a current of air constantly circulates. In other departments women were making mosquito netting, bell tents with pockets to be weighted down with sand, gas harnesses for men and queer arrangements that protesting horses have to learn to use, hospital-mattresses and hard, fiber-filled mattresses made in three portable sections, known technically as biscuits. Scores of little girls were hard at work and several departments were served by small boys doing rather dull jobs.

TRIALS OF THE SMOKER.

London is threatened with a famine in matches. So, at any rate, say many of the tobacconists; while the few gloomily proclaim that the famine is already among us. Certainly the match is frequently unobtainable. Time was when the City tobacconist scorned to serve an order which consisted merely of a box of matches. His Cockney wit would prompt him to inquire if he should send it with the delivery van. But now the match has come into its own. In a few short months it has achieved in the tobacconist's shop the status of a pound of sugar at the grocer's. "I keep 'em below the counter," whispered a confiding retailer to me, "and only give 'em to customers—and not all of 'em neither!" One remarkable feature of the scarcity is that the existence of a shortage is officially denied. It is admitted that importations have diminished almost to vanishing point, but it is asserted that the home production is sufficient to meet the demand. The tobacconist in language varied but emphatic, deny that the supply is adequate. They say that at the present time they have the greatest possible difficulty in getting any matches from the manufacturers, who in their turn declare that they are overwhelmed with orders. In spite of official assurances, there can be no doubt of the existence of a scarcity of matches to the extent that the consumer is frequently unable to buy them.

CAPTAIN ALBERT BALL.

Lord Devonport is dead! He will be mourned by all England, indeed by a big part of the whole world, for his deeds were written of by the press of all countries. There is a blaze of fame about the airman, fighting his duels in the sky over the armies, that has come to no other fighters since the days of the Paladins. He had vanquished thirty German airmen when he returned to Nottingham last year. When he went back to France after three months at home he began again at once, and brought down another twelve. How many more fell to him since then is not known, but it made at least fifty. He was a great and terrible fighter, but his friends knew him as a quiet and lovable lad. In August, 1914, he was a young man beginning business, and seemed to have a long, successful life, with perhaps local fame, before him, perhaps ultimately a line in an "honours" list. To-day his name resounds throughout the land, and it will never be forgotten.

LONDON IN JUNE.

Ordinary years would have seen the middle of "the season" by now, and if one takes stock of London this June there are still a few signs to be discerned besides the extraordinary greenness of the grass and leafiness of the trees that there is a ghost of a season still in the town. There is opera at Drury Lane and at the Shaftesbury Theatre, and a very good Gilbert and Sullivan production at Hamper-Smith. The scene at Drury Lane Theatre some nights is almost brilliant. There are jewels in the boxes and long strings of carriages waiting, and even a footman or two. The gallery has changed most, the young men with long hair and jerseys returning in many instances in khaki or in navy blue. The most particular requisites have been seen at matinees wearing red ties which would have made them ill three years ago, but now quite content with them and their hospital blue. Last Saturday M. Nabokoff and a Russian diplomatic party were in one of the boxes watching "Boris Godounov" with its scene of Russian revolution—an incident more dramatic than anything on the stage itself. The look of the town is still dainty, but I noticed in Grosvenor Street and other Mayfair places that palatial and palatial have been freshly done. Regent Street, despite its lack of paint, looks gay with its summer fashions, and there is hardly an unlet shop in it. There are a few window-boxes, but the flowers this year are mainly to be found in the nursing homes. The fringe of the box on the top of St. James's Palace loggia, however, is bright and green, and the flowering shrubs in the gardens of the squares made a special effort this year.

Rann-dom Reels.

THE HEN.

The hen is a modest barn yard ornament whose mission in life is to lay eggs and get run over by red touring cars. The high price of eggs now prevailing in this country is due to so many hens getting on the right of way and dying with a loud and mournful squawk. One can hardly take a drive upon any of our main highways without fitting past the silent forms of a dozen porstrate hens which had been stepped on by a 34 x 4 tire and taken out of this world at the very height of their usefulness.

Your Boys and Girls.

Scientists say sugar is a very good food for children if it is properly eaten. The trouble with a great deal of candy is not with the sugar it contains, but with other harmful ingredients. Another trouble is that too much candy eaten at a time, and that it is eaten at the wrong time—between meals. The best candy for children consists of a little chocolate or sweet chocolate tablets—or pure sugar, as in a lump of sugar or pure rock candy or barley sugar. Only a little of this should be eaten at a time and preferably it should be eaten after meals so that it will not spoil the natural appetite for other things. Children should always be taught not to twist or ring the nose when using the handkerchief. This habit is often the cause of a mishap nose. Rough handling is also apt to enlarge the nose and make it red. The redness can in some cases be reduced by bathing the nose twice daily with witch hazel. When baby is teething make bibe for her by cutting dress sleeves in two and covering each half with soft material. These protect her dresses and are as easy to launder as any other bibe.

Fashions and Fads.

Chinese crepe waists, figured or dotted, are smart to wear with street skirts. Dark blue organdy is combined with black satin or white crepe de chine. Charmeuse and chiffon is as good a combination as ever for afternoon dresses. Very convenient petticoats for the small girl are made slip-over fashion. Beige seems to have taken the fashion world by storm—everything is beige. Hat and parasol of "gingham" to match the dress makes a pretty morning outfit. The smock-blouse comes midway between the long smock and the regular shirtwaist. A charming dress is of handker-in MEN'S ENGLISH WOOL CASHMERE UNDERWEAR.

These are odds and ends of old stock that cannot be matched to-day except at prohibitive prices, and as we cannot furnish all sizes, we are marking same down to low prices to clear.

We have good values in MEN'S CASHMERE and LISLE HALF HOSE.
