CHAPTER XII.

"Leafmore," said Mr. Deane, abstractedly. Then with a sudden brightening up of his faculties, he went on eagerly: "You have some wonderful trees at your place, Lord Gaunt. Wonderful! I don't know that out of Scotland, I have ever seen more magnificent trees. Now, did it ever occur to you that great things might be done with the extraction of terebene from the fir? At any rate, it has occurred to me. Terebene is the active ingredient—"

Bobby touched him on the arm, and Mr. Deane turned to him with kind of bewildered impatience.

"What is it, Robert? I am endeavoring to explain to Lord Gaunt that he has an enormous fortune—an enormous fortune—within his reach. Terebene is one of the most valuable products—"

Bobby glanced at Gaunt apologetically and appealingly, and Gaunt with admirable tact, said:

"Thank you, Mr. Deane. Perhaps you will come up to Leafmore and tell me more about it? I'm afraid I must be going now."

"Yes, my lord," said Mr. Deane, and shaking Gaunt's hand absent-mindedly, he shuffled out of the room.

Gaunt moved toward the door; but as he reached it he looked round, and his eyes rested on the lovely face so dimly seen by the light of the one shaded lamp.

"At any rate, you will come up to Leafmore, Deane," he said. Then he looked at Decima again. "And you too, Miss Deane? I want to show you how comfortable you have made me."

"Oh, we'll come right enough!" said Bobby, heartily. "Eh, Decima?"

She did not answer. They both went to the gate, and Gaunt got on his horse. Then he bent down and held out his hand to Decima.

"Good-night, and—thank you," he said.

His voice had a deep ring in it, which Decima had not heard until now.

"Good-night!" she said, smiling up at him.

Gaunt rode off at a bound, and let the impatient Nero go his own pace—always a fast one; but presently he brought him into a walk by a slight pressure of the reins; and then letting it lie loose, rode on silently and with an abstracted look. The beautiful face haunted him, her words, "I am glad you have come," rang in his ears softly; and her eyes—were they gray, or blue, or violet?

He roused himself as Nero bore him into the court-yard, and with an impatient start and shake, he handed the horse over to the groom, and went into the house.

His valet was waiting for him, and he looked curiously at his master as Lord Gaunt entered the dressing-room. The man—Hobson by name—had been with him for years, and was deeply attached to him. They had undergone perils and privations together, and looked death in the face side by side; but Hobson had never stepped out of his place, and had remained that wonderful being, a devoted and respectful servant, who sticketh closer than a brother. There was an expression in his master's face which Hobson had not seen for years. It was almost cheerful.

"I'm late, Hobson," he said; "a bad beginning. But I suppose you told them in the servants' hall that I was never to be relied upon?"

"Yes, my lord," said Hobson, simply.

Lord Gaunt smiled, and as he took off his coat, said:

"Thanks! I thought you would. But, Hobson, we must reform—reform. Now be quick."

Be quick.

Hobson glanced at him swiftly. He had not heard that tone for years.

CHAPTER XIII.

The next morning Gaunt went down the village, and the village stared at and watched him from its front door, or from behind its windows, with the deepest interest and a lively curiosity, which promptly developed into admiration. For Lord Gaunt, in a riding-suit, with his whip in his hand, and half a dozen dogs bounding round him or trotting demurely at his heels, looked a very different person to what they had expected.

"Why, he's a young man!" exclaimed Mrs. Topper; "and a Gaunt every inch of him! There's no mistaking your real gentry, Mrs. Murphy. Well, I'm going to drop him a courtesy, and give him 'good-day,' if I'm to be shot for it!" And she made her bob as Gaunt passed the door.

He remembered her, and stopped at once and returned the salutation. He spoke to Mrs. Murphy, and touched his hat in response to the respectful, almost awed greetings of the men outside the inn, and he looked round him with an evident interest, which flattered those who were so closely watching him.

Presently Mr. Bright came trotting after him, and he turned to him with a smile.

"Ah, Bright, I'm taking my first visit of inspection," he said. He glanced at the tumble-down cottage. "It is not altogether a satisfactory one. Now, then, fire away! I see you are charged to the hilt."

Bright looked at him with a mixture of eagerness and apology.

"I don't like to begin to worry you right away, Lord Gaunt," he said.

Gaunt smiled.

"Oh, I'm in the humor this morning, and you'd better seize the opportunity. You want me to rebuild these, I suppose?"

"That's it, Lord Gaunt," said Bright, rather nervously.

"Well, they want it," said Gaunt, curtly.

"If you'd just step inside one of them—"

Gaunt nodded, and laid his hand on the rickety gate of one of the cottages. As he did so, a girlish figure emerged from the door-way like a gleam of sunlight. It was Decima. She was looking over her shoulder and saying something, in her sweet, clear voice, to the woman inside; then she turned her head and saw the two men, and stopped.

"Oh, what luck!" said Bright. "Here's Miss Deane. Now, she knows exactly what's wanted. She has been making friends of the people ever since she came, you know, and—Ah, Miss Deane, if you would be so kind as to come with us for a little while! But perhaps you are busy."

"No," said Decima; "I am only going to meet my brother later on. What is it?"

"What isn't it, rather?" said Gaunt, with an affectation of dismay.

Mr. Bright has got me in his clutches already, Miss Deane; and as if he were not more than a match for me, he has called in an auxiliary force.

Wash Day and Backache

WASH day is the least welcome day of the week in most homes, though sweeping day is not much better. Both days are most trying on the back.

The strain of washing, ironing and sweeping frequently deranges the kidneys. The system is poisoned and backaches, rheumatism, pains in the limbs result.

Kidney action must be aroused—the liver awakened to action and the bowels regulated by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This favorite prescription of the well-known Receipt Book author will not fail you in the hour of need.

One pill a day, 25c a box at all dealers, or Edmanzo, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

Well, so be it. But, as you are strong, be merciful."

Gaunt looked into one room of the cottage. It was about ten feet square, and was occupied by a woman and five children. It was badly lighted, close, and unhealthy.

Decima looked at his appealingly. "It is not fit, is it?" she said.

"It's bad, yes," he assented. "It certainly is not fit for you to go into."

"I! Why, they live here!" said Decima, rebukingly.

"They're used to it; you're not," he retorted, rather curtly. "Do you visit all the cottages? How if there should be some infectious disease—measles, scarlet fever—"

He looked at her almost sternly.

"Miss Deane goes everywhere," said Mr. Bright, quickly and admiringly. "I've told her that she's running great risks, but my warning has had no effect upon her. She is our village angel, Lord Gaunt."

Gaunt knit his brows.

"It is not safe," he said. "I'll pull them all down and rebuild them—all of them. Will that satisfy you, Miss Deane?"

Decima was walking between the two men, and she glanced triumphantly at Mr. Bright, and then gratefully up at Lord Gaunt.

"I knew you would," she said in a low voice. "Oh, I am so glad! But then there are the schools. Ah, you must see them! They are almost as bad as the cottages. The children are starved for want of air and ventilation in the summer, and must be frozen in the winter. If you will come—"

"Let us go to the schools by all means," he said.

They entered the crowded, stuffy room, and Gaunt looked round amidst the dense silence of excitement.

"All right," he said. "I see the thing has to be done on a big scale. We'd better get an architect from London, Bright. You—and Miss Deane—can worry through the plans with him. Have what you like, Miss Deane."

Decima was too moved to thank him again. They passed out and came to the church; and Gaunt, glancing at Decima, caught the appealing expression in her lovely eyes. He smiled.

"You want a new roof? And I doubt whether that tower is quite safe."

"It isn't," said Decima, eagerly. "We heard the men say that they are almost afraid to ring the bells—is that to be done, too?"

"Why not?" he said, quietly. "In for a penny in for—several thousand pounds."

"Oh, forgive me!" she said, penitently. "I—I am forgetting that it will cost so much money. What must you think of me?"

"Nothing but good," he returned. "Don't think about the money. I haven't any better use for it than I know of. You had better send for—"

he named a famous ecclesiastical architect—"Bright, and let him work his sweet will on the old place. It's pretty enough to deserve restoring. And now, thank Heaven, here's your brother!" he broke off, as Bobby vaulted over the church-yard stile. "You'll never guess how glad I am to see you, Deane. Come and rescue me from the hands of these Goths and Vandals!"

There was a lightness in his tone which almost startled Bobby.

"They've got at you already, have they, Lord Gaunt?" he said. "I meant to tip you a warning against them. Bright's bad enough, but my sister is far worse. If you let her have her way, she'll pull the place about your ears. You take my advice, and make a stand at once. Deane, my child, these are the things you don't understand alone, run home, little girl, and play with your dolls; better still, get your toiling brother's lunch ready while he shows Lord Gaunt a new fly he has made."

"It is lunch-time!" said Gaunt, looking up at the old clock, and speaking in a casual way. "Seeing that I have been—well, particularly good this morning, wouldn't you like to reward me by coming up to the Hall and eating your lunch with me? Do: it's well, rather solitary up there."

He looked at Bobby, but glanced first at Decima.

"All right," said Bobby, promptly.

"Father—" began Decima; but Bobby waved the objection aside.

"Father takes a biscuit and a glass of sherry in his den, you know," he said.

Well, so be it. But, as you are strong, be merciful."

Gaunt looked into one room of the cottage. It was about ten feet square, and was occupied by a woman and five children. It was badly lighted, close, and unhealthy.

Decima looked at his appealingly. "It is not fit, is it?" she said.

Decima was too moved to thank him again. They passed out and came to the church; and Gaunt, glancing at Decima, caught the appealing expression in her lovely eyes. He smiled.

"You want a new roof? And I doubt whether that tower is quite safe."

"It isn't," said Decima, eagerly. "We heard the men say that they are almost afraid to ring the bells—is that to be done, too?"

"Why not?" he said, quietly. "In for a penny in for—several thousand pounds."

"Oh, forgive me!" she said, penitently. "I—I am forgetting that it will cost so much money. What must you think of me?"

"Nothing but good," he returned. "Don't think about the money. I haven't any better use for it than I know of. You had better send for—"

he named a famous ecclesiastical architect—"Bright, and let him work his sweet will on the old place. It's pretty enough to deserve restoring. And now, thank Heaven, here's your brother!" he broke off, as Bobby vaulted over the church-yard stile. "You'll never guess how glad I am to see you, Deane. Come and rescue me from the hands of these Goths and Vandals!"

There was a lightness in his tone which almost startled Bobby.

"They've got at you already, have they, Lord Gaunt?" he said. "I meant to tip you a warning against them. Bright's bad enough, but my sister is far worse. If you let her have her way, she'll pull the place about your ears. You take my advice, and make a stand at once. Deane, my child, these are the things you don't understand alone, run home, little girl, and play with your dolls; better still, get your toiling brother's lunch ready while he shows Lord Gaunt a new fly he has made."

"It is lunch-time!" said Gaunt, looking up at the old clock, and speaking in a casual way. "Seeing that I have been—well, particularly good this morning, wouldn't you like to reward me by coming up to the Hall and eating your lunch with me? Do: it's well, rather solitary up there."

He looked at Bobby, but glanced first at Decima.

"All right," said Bobby, promptly.

"Father—" began Decima; but Bobby waved the objection aside.

"Father takes a biscuit and a glass of sherry in his den, you know," he said.

Sugar Prices in Canada on Decline.

Government Refused to Fix Retail Rates--Four Hundred Chinese Miners Killed--Railway Wreck Causes Seven Deaths--Commons Debating Irish Question.

MINING DISASTER IN CHINA.
PEKIN, Oct. 20. Upwards of four hundred Chinese miners were killed in an explosion and fire in the Longshan coal mine Thursday. There are one hundred and nineteen survivors. Grief-stricken crowds surrounded the entrance to the mine carrying off the victims as they were brought to the surface by rescuers from the railway shops and cement works near the scene.

CANADIAN GOVT. REFUSES TO FIX PRICE.
TORONTO, Oct. 20. As a result of the Dominion Cabinet's refusal to uphold the Board of Commerce order fixing the retail price of sugar at twenty-one cents a pound, the price will drop to seventeen and perhaps sixteen in the course of next week, according to Toronto buyers.

EGYPTIAN LEADERS TO CONFER WITH MILNER.
PARIS, Oct. 20. Leaders of the Egyptian Nationalist Party will leave for London Thursday to confer with Lord Milner. The members expressed the opinion that the government would grant all the demands which the Nationalists had framed and Egyptian independence would soon be a reality.

SERIOUS RAILWAY WRECK.
ERIE, Pa., Oct. 20. Seven persons were killed and twenty injured, three probably fatal, when the New York central train No. sixty, eastbound, sidetracked train No. twenty-three, westbound, two hundred feet west of the Union Depot here to-day. A switch thought to have been thrown by members of a section gang working at scene of wreck, is believed to have caused the accident. The westbound train had just left depot and eastbound train, a Cleveland-Buffalo express, was coasting to the station when crash came. A car on eastbound train suddenly leaped the rails and crashed into a Pullman, tearing its steel sides away as if they were paper. The occupants of the car were hurled from their seats and thrown into a mass as the steel car tore into the sides of the Pullman. Suddenly the Pullman toppled over with open side in the air. The police and firemen were forced to use ladders in taking the dead and injured from the wreckage. All of the dead were badly mangled, and it is almost impossible to identify them.

IRISH QUESTION DEBATED.
LONDON, Oct. 20. The eagerly awaited debate on the Irish situation was precipitated in the House of Commons to-day by Arthur Henderson, former Labor member of the Cabinet, who offered a motion demanding an inquiry into the reprisals by police and soldiers in Ireland. While admitting that the armed forces of the crown had suffered provocation, Henderson declared the character of the reprisals they had taken were quite in keeping with the aggressive policy which has been consistently pursued by the government. The government's policy, Henderson asserted, seemed to him to aim at stamping out Nationalist opinion and breaking the spirit of the Irish people.

LADY BORDEN'S JEWELS STOLEN.
OTTAWA, Oct. 20. Porch climbers who visited the home of Sir Robert Borden during dinner hour on Tuesday evening, made a complete get away with the major portion of Lady Borden's personal jewelry valued at six thousand dollars. The burglars conducted their job so skillfully that the robbery remained undiscovered until late last night. The police have absolutely no trace of the burglars, who did not leave any trail to work on.

NO NEW DEVELOPMENTS.
LONDON, Oct. 20. To-day brought no new developments in coal strike, neither side to the dispute made any approach to the other and no outside mediation was instituted. It is still hoped that the proposal of Wm. Brace, President of South Wales Miners' Federation, may eventually lead to renewal of negotiations, but it is admitted that it must first be adopted officially by the miners' executive which has so far been impossible, as members of the executive are scattered all over the country. Advocacy by some extremists of withdrawing pumping staffs from the mines finds few supporters among miners generally. Robert Smillie and other leaders are strongly against it. Renewed efforts were made at the Ministry of Labor to-day through negotiation by parties concerned to avert strike on railroads and in transport industry. Negotiations, however, were adjourned until to-morrow.

DR. GRENFELL AND LABRADOR.
OTTAWA, Oct. 20. At a luncheon held to-day in connection with an appeal for assistance, Dr. Grenfell said he was often asked why people lived in Labrador. There was no answer except that they did. He would rather live one day in Labrador than six months in Whitechapel, London, where he had spent a part of his early life and where conditions were terrible. Labrador is a valuable asset to humanity in that it breeds the kind of men we want, said Dr. Grenfell, men who can uphold best traditions of the sea, who can handle our transportation. It is a tough country to live in and therefore breeds a sturdy type of men and women. If you can help to make life more possible in Labrador, either through the eyes of myself as a surgeon, or a timber merchant who would start an industry in our forest belts, we need this help.

OFFER ACCEPTED.
LONDON, Oct. 20. The government's offer of five hundred and seventy thousand pounds for the equipment of the direct United States Cable Company, was accepted by the shareholders yesterday. The sale transfers the cable from American to British control. Sir J. Pender, chairman, said the shareholders would receive at least six pounds a share.

STORMY DEBATE.
LONDON, Oct. 20. The Irish debate in House of Commons to-night resolved itself into a duel between the opposition and government, the former demanding and latter resisting an independent inquiry into reprisals. The defense of the government set up by Sir Hamar Greenwood, Chief Sec. for Ireland, was that while Asquith aims to put emphasis on reprisals, I put it on provocation. He insisted that no cases had been made out for what he characterized as Arthur Henderson's insulting resolution demanding an enquiry into the reprisals by police and soldiers in Ireland. Incidentally he remarked that the United States was no longer welcoming immigration from Ireland because it did not desire to swell the vast total of disturbing elements in the Republic, and he declared his intention to rake Ireland from end to end, including Ulster, in search for arms.

ANXIETY FOR STEAMERS.
JUNEAU, Alaska, Oct. 20. Word was received here Tuesday of the anxiety of White Pass and Yukon railroad officials over the non-arrival of the river steamers Cascas, Nassetin, and Whitehorse carrying one hundred and seventy-five passengers. No word has been received from the ships in the last seventy-two hours. The vessels are believed to be stuck on the bar a hundred miles up stream from Dawson. There is a strong possibility that all three boats may be a total loss if they remain frozen in the ice in midstream until next spring. Together with the Selkirk, now sunk at the mouth of the Stewart River, the loss of these vessels will prove a disastrous ending to a prosperous summer's season just passed.

BIG FIRE IN SASK.
REGINA, Sask., Oct. 20. Twelve stores, half the business section of Wadena, Sask., are in ashes to-day and the flames of the fire that caused three hundred thousand dollars damage to this town of twelve hundred population last night was still smouldering. The cause of the fire is so far unknown.

MEETING POSTPONED.
MONTREAL, Oct. 20. The meeting of the Nova Scotia executives of the United Mine Workers' Association and the Presidents of the Dominion Steel Corps and the N.S. Steel Co., which was called for this afternoon, was adjourned till to-morrow morning. The postponement was due to the non arrival of Mr. White, representative from Headquarters of the Union in Indianapolis.

Why Lift Your Hat?
ROMANTIC ORIGINS OF MODERN CUSTOMS.

When a man offers his right hand to an acquaintance he is unconsciously imitating the cavalier of the middle ages, who held out an unarmed hand as token that his sword was sheathed and that he was friend and not enemy. When he removes his glove to shake a lady's hand he is again the knight of old who would never offer a lady a covered hand.

A knight, when he entered a castle-hall, always doffed his helmet, the most vital part of his armour, as evidence to his host that he came in peace, just as the man of to-day would never dream of entering a drawing-room with his hat on. Just as the mediæval baron would raise his hand to his helmet as an indication that he was ready to unhelm out of politeness, his descendant of to-day touches or raises his hat.

At our meals we are similarly linked with the long-gone past. The knife we use is the successor of the dagger or hunting-knife with which our ancestors of long centuries ago cut up their food; and our finger-bowls had their origin in the days when fingers were used to convey food to the mouth. We owe the fork to the enormous ruffs which made it difficult to reach the mouth with the fingers, and made a substitute necessary; and the paper frills which adorn our cutlets, hams and so on, were originally used to obviate soiling the fingers by handling the joints or portions.

The Norfolk jacket is a reproduction of the chain-mail tunic, girt with the sword-belt; and the frock-coat is Affected His Play.

A cowboy invited a tenderfoot to play a round of golf with him. The cowpunchers were very proud of their links and of their games, and this particular one became very bitter when the tenderfoot showed signs of beating him.

At a lonely part of the links he stopped.

"Say, stranger," said he to the tenderfoot, "you're doing well."

"Oh!" answered his opponent, with an air of pleased modesty, "I'm not doing badly."

"Say," said the cowboy, producing a murderous-looking six-shooter, "I reckon you're doing a darn sight too well."

And somehow the tenderfoot went right off his game.

Forecasting Weather.

A homely method of foretelling the weather is to drop carefully a lump of sugar into a cup of coffee. If the bubbles it causes, suddenly rush from the centre to the side of the cup, it is going to rain very hard. If the air bubbles assemble in the centre and then pass to the side of the cup in a deliberate way, you must still be prepared for what the weather forecast would call "some showers." But if the bubbles refuse to stir from the centre of the cup, you may go forth to your labors assured of a fine day.

Our Philatelic Corner.

(By "PHILATELOS.")

The editor of the Telegram having proven the progressiveness of his paper by inaugurating a weekly stamp chat, the work of conducting this innovation has fallen on my shoulders. During the winter, I hope to be able to publish a series of short articles on the formation of a collection of postage stamps and its gradual progress to the specialised stage. For the present, however, I am going to entertain my readers with a few stamp stories which I am sure will make interesting reading, even for the philatelic layman. The number of curious mistakes made by designers and engravers is really surprising, and our own Newfoundland stamps furnish us with two very interesting examples.

I wonder how many of you have noticed the peculiar error made by the artist who designed the seal depicted on the five cent brown of 1866, the five cent black of 1868 and the five cent blue of 1876. The seal, an animal surely not unknown in our part of the world, is actually drawn with two fore-paws instead of flippers. It was not until 1880 that this error was corrected.

If you will examine your copy of the two cent green fish of 1866 you will find that there is no split in the tail of the fish. Imagine a cod without a split tail!

Probably the best known philatelic anachronism is depicted on the 1903 issue of St. Kitts-Nevis, two islands in the West Indies which issue a joint series of stamps. The design of this stamp shows Christopher Columbus looking through a telescope, an instrument not obtainable until some years after his death. To make matters worse, the postal authorities of these two islands have perpetuated this "howler" by incorporating the picture of Columbus and his telescope in the design of the series of stamps which they issued a few months ago.

Next week I shall have a few more interesting stamp yarns, and in future these little chats will contain notes of interest on current events in the philatelic world.

I shall be only too pleased to answer, when able, any questions of a philatelic nature, which readers may ask me.

Letters should be addressed to the Stamp Editor, The Evening Telegram Office.

"Our Philatelic Corner" will, after to-day, be a regular feature Saturdays.

Rigorous Regulations.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—I was keenly interested with the article copied from the North Sydney Herald of October 2nd and published in your paper of October 5th, dealing with the new Vaccination Regulations affecting passengers from Newfoundland entering Canada. I was a passenger on S.S. Kyle arriving at North Sydney on the morning of October 5th, and the annoyance and outrageous hold up in landing was deplorable.

The steamer arrived at about 5.45 a.m., after a splendid run across the Gulf, and the one hundred or more passengers, anxious to land and seek breakfast, before joining the morning express from Sydney, were held up until after seven o'clock. About 6.15 the Immigration officer arrived and next the Doctor, but nothing was done until the Customs official had made his appearance, about 6.30.

The Port Doctor summoned all passengers, first and second class, to appear before him in the ship's saloon, where each in turn passed his keen (?) scrutiny. Men, woman, and children were forced to bare their arms, and if a satisfactory vaccination mark was not visible, they were vaccinated to the enjoyment of all lookers on. Before my turn, some twenty-five had been scratched, as we humorously named the operation, and the sum of one dollar from each was collected by the doctor scratching.

We effected a landing nearing seven o'clock, and after passing the Customs official, were again confronted by our friend, the doctor. We each in turn presented our identification slip and went on our way rejoicing, at once again being immune from all disease, but longing for the sight of a lunch counter.

Two points rising out of this question needing investigation to my mind are:—First, should passengers, especially those travelling second class and perhaps limited as to means, be forced to pay for the vaccination? and secondly, should not the medical officer furnish each passenger, so vaccinated by him, with a certificate to that effect, so as to assure him or her against being held up at some point further West? The hold up at North Sydney on the particular occasion was the means of many passengers missing the morning West bound express, and consequently were detained at North Sydney all that day.

I am sure I voice the condemnation of every passenger arriving on this particular occasion, and if this vaccination regulation, as law, has to be enforced, it is up to the Newfoundland Government to suggest an easier and business like way in dealing with passengers arriving in Canada from the ancient colony.

Yours truly,
ROBT. K. OKE.

Celebrated Golden Jubilee.

On Tuesday, 19th inst., the veteran operator, Mr. E. B. Thompson, of Hr. Grace Telegraph Office, celebrated his Golden Jubilee in connection with the Anglo American Telegraph Company, having entered the office in 1870. Of his associates and contemporaries of those days few now remain. We can only name Messrs. D. Stott and H. F. Shortis of St. John's, S. S. Stantford and A. D. Martin of Heart's Content, James Hagen of St. Pierre, and Wm. Tobin the veteran repairer of Harbor Grace, and William Savin of St. John's, who joined up in 1866, the year the Atlantic Cable was successfully laid by the S.S. Great Eastern. Capt. Halpin. We wish the veterans of the Old Guard of the New York, Newfoundland and London Telegraph Co. of the early days many more years amongst us. Mr. E. B. Thompson's father, the venerable W. H. Thompson, the nestor of Telegraphers was probably the oldest key manipulator in the world at the time of his death, a few years ago.

An Appreciation of Sir J. C. Crosbie.

Bay de Verde appreciates the generous action of Sir J. C. Crosbie in storing fish in St. John's and giving financial assistance to people here who could not dispose of their catch except at ruinous prices. His efforts on behalf of the people have placed him on a pedestal that will stand as a lasting monument, and his name will be treasured as one who has the interests of the fishermen at heart. We hope that the day is not far distant when Sir J. C. Crosbie will occupy the highest position in our Legislature, one which he so well deserves. We are suffering as we never did before owing to unjust regulations. In our darkest hour Sir J. C. Crosbie has come to the rescue by buying our fish and doing all possible to help us out.

STYLES IN HEROES AND HEROINES.

Is there anything in the world in which there are not changing styles? Styles in clothes, styles in furniture, styles in medical cures, styles in houses, styles in words, and hereby hangs my tale—styles in heroes and heroines.

According to the last few love stories I have read, honey colored hair seems to be the proper thing for heroines of to-day. I rather like that, too. It suggests a warm amber color, and for some reason (probably because I have some unconscious memory of a real woman with honey colored hair who wore it that way) I always see it in coronet braids with loose ringlets escaping.

There is another style later than that, however. I saw it once a few days ago and doubtless shall see it again. Sanguine colored hair. Do you care for that? I don't. The hair might be beautiful, but I don't like the word.

The Latest in Heroes.

I haven't left myself much space for discussion of the latest styles in heroes, have I? But when it's a question of appearances, women have the first right to the floor (or once). So I'll just mention two types of heroes that we all have come to know by heart:

There was the "clean limbed" hero who was borne into our ken by the wave of enthusiasm for outdoor sports a few years ago, and vaunted his cleanliness of limb for some years until some of the humorists fell upon him and inquired where he got it—whether it was by virtue of a daily bath and whether he thought we didn't take them, too.

The latest in heroes is the man who by a limp, or puttees "which have seen other service," or by the changed expression of his face, shows he has just come back from war. We may know some man who did not go to war, but apparently the novelist and short story writers know of such.

What's In a Name?

A lecturer, at the opening of his address, came to the front of the platform and took a small phial from his pocket.

"My friends," he said, "before I begin my address I wish to test the ventilation of this hall. I am going to pour out this oil of peppermint. When the odour reaches you, raise your hands, so that I may see how rapidly it travels."

He emptied the phial, and almost immediately several hands went up; then the hands began to go up by the dozen, until at last the people in the last seats caught the odour and raised their hands.

The lecturer thanked his auditors and went on with his address. When

COMMON BLESSINGS.

Deprived of teeth, I cannot chew, and so I live on liquid glue, and boneless soup and oatmeal mush, and all varieties of slush. Strange longings through my bosom fit, as in the dining-room I sit. My neighbors call for steaks and chops, while I refresh myself with stlops; the men and women all around have molars firm and strong and sound; they know no spasms when they eat large slabs of beef and other meat; their laughter fills the dining room while loaves and fishes they consume; and I sit in a shaded place and pour cheap gruel in my face. And once I had such teeth as theirs, and I could bite the rungs from chairs; and to that boon I gave no heed; all thoughtlessly I used to feed, and never gave a word of thanks for my long fangs in gleaming ranks. We never prize Dame Nature's gifts until rebuking hand she lifts and takes some precious boon away, and then we cry alackaday! The dentist's working hard and well, to make me teeth of tortoiseshell; he says he'll have them in my mouth before the wild geese travel south, until which time I'll have to spill in to my works all kinds of swill.

he had almost finished, and was speaking of the effect of the imagination on our senses, he paused, and said with a smile that it was only clear water he had poured out of his phial.

The audience had been caught so neatly that even those who had held up their hands joined in the laugh. But one illiterate fellow, whose hand had gone up more promptly and emphatically than any other, did not quite understand.

"What they laughin' at?" he asked of the man sitting beside him.

"Why," explained the man, "you did not smell peppermint at all; it was only imagination."

"Well," said the other, "I knowed it was somethin' that smelled mighty strong."

False History.

Major G. H. Putnam, who was howled down by a noisy crowd when he attempted to deliver a lecture at Brooklyn on Anglo-American relations, is a victim of biased and misleading textbooks. For years past the school histories of the United States have given a distorted view of the causes which led up to the American Revolution and of the motives of the statesmen responsible for the rupture of relations. All references to the eloquence of Burke and Fox, directed with a burning sincerity against the war, is carefully excised. The Hanoverian King, at that time on the throne of England, is persistently regarded in these text-books as the exemplar of British ideals and British wishes. Lord North, plastic as putty in the royal hands, and seeking only the advancement of himself and his family, is typified as the strong leader, and his imposition of the Tea Tax stigmatized as proof of his hatred of the American colonies, although the facts reveal that he was lukewarm in the cause of war and resigned office after the defeat of Cornwallis, so strong was public opinion against him.

At the time these text-books were first written it may have seemed patriotic to the authors to emphasize the righteousness of the revolt and to glorify the forces which the Colonies met and overcame. But a patriotism that is founded on error and hatred is built upon the sand. It is a sad commentary on the enlightenment of a great nation when a veteran of the Civil War, whose ancestors have won the highest honors in the military service of his country, is rallied at by ignorant hoodlums and is accused of treason when he recounts the bare facts of history.

The blame is on the text-books and on false teaching, and the error can and will be remedied when the great mass of the people realize that the peace of the world depends on the unity and the harmony of the Anglo-Saxon peoples.—Montreal Daily Star.

Famous French General in America.

General Emile Fayolle, who recently came to America to represent Marshal Foch at the Cleveland convention of the American Legion, belongs to that distinguished group of French generals who introduced new methods of tactics in the French army and planned for victory with the definiteness and system that one associates with business efficiency rather than with the fortunes of war. Like both Joffre and Foch, Fayolle is a former pupil of the Polytechnic School, and after obtaining his military training he became professor in the French War College and assisted the very man who was to be his chief to revolutionize the existing instruction in tactics.

Six weeks before the war Gen. Fayolle, having passed the age limit of service, entered the retired list when he was sixty-three years old. He was immediately recalled to service at the outbreak of the war, and given a command. He was one of the conquerors at Grand Couronne, at Nancy, and the first battles of Artois. To retrace his history from this date it would be necessary to recapitulate the entire history of the war.

It is interesting to note that he formed part of the army of Petain in 1915 at Carency, and was soon promoted to the command of the Sixth Army. In 1916 he participated actively in the offensive of the Somme and took the command of a group of divisions which freed Verdun.

The year 1917 was perhaps the crowning point of his career, for in Italy he was in charge of the French reinforcements, which helped to strengthen the crumbling front of the Allies. Moreover, during Foch's great campaign he was in command of a group, first a group of reserves, and then changed to the "Army of the North." Under his direction Debancq, Humbert, and Mangin operated.

After the cessation of hostilities, Gen. Fayolle, who has been in command of the French Army of Occupation in Germany, from November, 1918, to the following June, was put at the head of the commission in charge of superintending the disarmament of the German Army. He represented France in the Council of the League of Nations.

A Great Sailor.

(From the London Advertiser.)

Spain is celebrating the fact that four hundred years ago this month Ferdinand Magellan, one of the greatest of Spanish captains, sailed through the straits that bear his name, and rounding into the Pacific, completed his circling of the globe, as on the previous journey he had gone to the eastern limits of the Indian Ocean. It was his Pacific adventure on which his fame will rest. He started on his bold venture with five small vessels, the largest registering 110 tons. One of the ships was wrecked, while two others were burned by mutineers. But one ship, the Victoria, reached Spain after an absence of three years. Magellan himself perished while fighting cannibals in the South Sea Islands. Compared to Magellan's daring trips, that of Columbus was but a small affair. Columbus stumbled on America. On the other hand, Magellan knew what he wanted to find, and also knew of the terrific obstacles that he would meet. And he reached his objective. His feat required greater endurance, was a greater test of courage than that of the Genoese whose fame has overshadowed all other captains of his time. Magellan discovered a new land, and by his world-girdling explorations demonstrated that the world is round. He was greater than Columbus.

Resolutions Passed By Fish Exporters' Association.

Dear Sir—We shall be obliged if you will publish in the next issue of your paper, the Resolutions which were unanimously passed at a General Meeting of the Newfoundland Fish Exporters Association, Ltd., held in the Board of Trade Rooms this morning and at which were present representatives of the following firms:—

Harvey & Co., Ltd., Bowring Bros., Ltd., Job Bros. & Co., Ltd., Monroe Export Co., Ltd., Alan Goodridge & Sons, G. M. Barr, A. H. Murray & Co., Ltd., W. A. Munn, P. Templeman, J. Sellars, Geo. J. Carter, W. Ashbourne, Bishop Sons & Co., Ltd., E. Lindsay, Jas. Baird, Ltd., F. G. House & Co., Ltd., R. Moulton, Ltd., Newfoundland Labrador Export Co., Samuel Harris, Ltd.

The Resolutions were as follows:—
WHEREAS, The Government of Newfoundland has thought fit to regulate the prices and terms of sale abroad of Codfish through the agency of the Governor in Council and of the Codfish Exportation Board;

AND WHEREAS, The Newfoundland Fish Exporters Association, Ltd., was formed in September, 1920, expressly for the purpose of maintaining harmony and close touch between the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the Codfish Exportation Board and the Trade at large;

AND WHEREAS, The Association has received frequent communications from the Exportation Board, and has from time to time been consulted upon the details and methods of control, and is now working in close touch and harmony with the Exportation Board;

AND WHEREAS, certain sections of the Press of Newfoundland are seeking to convey the impression that the greater portion of the Codfish Trade is working in opposition to the Regulations, and are continually publishing attacks upon the Regulations, and anonymous letters and other matter, frequently incorrect in fact and malicious in intention;

AND WHEREAS, We are of opinion that nothing could be more damaging to Newfoundland Trade interests than that Newspapers should admit to their blunders and support propaganda tending to assist and encourage the lowering of prices of our staple product abroad and to create apprehension and disunion at a time when the Colony has to contend with united action on the part of foreign purchasers of Codfish.

RESOLVED:

- That on the assumption that the Administration of the Regulations will be continued in the constitutional manner in which they have recently been administered which insures complete confidence between a large body of the Exporters and the Codfish Exportation Board, the members of the Newfoundland Fish Exporters Association present purposes to loyally support any price and terms of sales which have been or may be arranged from time to time during the marketing of the present season's catch.
- That we consider that propaganda as recently published by a section of the Press aimed at making the Regulations ineffective, strike directly against the interest of every person in the Colony, inasmuch as it is hampering sales of fish both here and abroad.
- That some effort should be made to induce the discontinuation of publication of similar damaging propaganda.

RESOLVED, That a copy of these Resolutions be sent to the Press. Thanking you in anticipation,
Yours very truly,
NEWFOUNDLAND FISH EXPORTERS ASSOCIATION, LTD.,
Avalon F. Goodridge, Secretary, St. John's, Oct. 20, 1920.

Britain Honors Cavell—Belgium Gives Statue.

London, Oct. 13.—(United News)—While memorial services were held in London and Norwich Tuesday for Nurse Edith Cavell, shot under German court-martial orders in Belgium, Princess Clementine unveiled the Belgian Refugees' Monument, erected by Belgium on the Victoria Embankment of the Thames, out of gratitude to England.

The Duchess of Argyll and Earl Curzon accepted the monument on behalf of Britain. It was only a coincidence that while this service was under way Nurse Cavell's statue, erected at her home in Norwich as well as in London, were being decorated with flowers and wreaths, all the British, Belgian and French nursing institutions being represented in the memorial exercises.

DECISION EXPECTED.

LONDON, Oct. 21. A decision of the Transport Workers and Railwaymen relative to a sympathetic strike with coal miners, is expected to-day. It is believed that a decision in favor of the strike would precipitate a critical phase of the dispute between Labor and the Government, and the Ministry of Labor is exerting its utmost efforts to prevent such a step.

OUTRAGE UPON OUTRAGE.

GALWAY, Oct. 21. Michael Walsh, Urban Councillor of Galway, was taken from his home on Monday evening by masked men, who demanded to know how many policemen Walsh had shot, according to the story of a seventeen-year old apprentice. The finding of Walsh's body in the river, with a bullet wound in the temple has induced an order for military inquiry.

LIME JUICE.

LONDON, Oct. 21. In reply to a question in the House last night, Edward Short, Home Secretary, said that the Brixton prison Doctor was justified in forcibly feeding MacSweeney with lime juice, if it would help him to live and give him another change. He said MacSweeney had taken light medicines from time to time, but did not know whether he had taken lime juice.

NEWSPAPER CITED.

DUBLIN, Oct. 21. Martin Fitzgerald, one of the directors of the Freeman's Journal, has been summoned to appear before a court martial on Friday to answer a charge in connection with reports published in the Freeman's Journal in connection with the activity of the "Black and Tans."

WARSAW, Oct. 21. A general strike has been proclaimed throughout Poland as a protest against the proposed creation of an Upper Parliamentary House, under the new constitution, on which a commission has been working for over a year. At Warsaw where the tram service was stopped a procession of several thousand persons marched to the Diet and presented resolutions.

FAVOR GOVERNMENT CONTROL.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Oct. 21. At a late hour last night it was apparent that an overwhelming vote in favor of government control of the sale of liquor, was cast with a majority of some fifteen thousand. The defeat of the present dry act is conclusive.

FORCIBLE FEEDING.

LONDON, Oct. 21. The Self-Determination League bulletin says meat juice was forced into MacSweeney's mouth during a fit of delirium last night. The Home Office announced that the prison doctors, under instructions, may use any possible means to keep him alive.

WILL CALL CONFERENCE.

LONDON, Oct. 21. The belief is expressed that the government will make a move during the next few hours to call a fresh conference of coal operators and mine owners, to examine an adjustment of plans.

Burglar Found the Safe Easy.

A few nights ago (says an exchange) a cracksmen blew open the safe in the office of Henry Brady, real estate broker, next door to the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, and got away with $2,000 in cash, some stocks and bonds and several articles of jewelry. After going to his home the safe-blower wrote the following letter to the man he had robbed: "Mr. Henry Brady, 139 West Thirty-third street: Why don't you pay an extra dollar and get a decent safe? If you are going to repair this one or buy one like it I would advise you to leave it open and save me ten minutes' work and also save you money. I think a real estate man of your standing to have only about $2,000 in his safe is a piker, and I will not bother you again until I am sure you have more. If I have any success with the next couple I blow I will send you back part of what I took, but I need the money at present. If you find out the brand of cigarettes you will find out who I am." The letter was unsigned. After the robbery was discovered it was found that the safe-blower, after opening the safe with nitroglycerine, had taken bonds, stocks and papers to an empty lot near the Brady offices and there had gone over them one by one, discarding those he could not convert into money at once and taking those that he could. Many cigarette butts were strewn on the floor. Mr. Brady believes that the crack-man, who evidently has a sense of humor, intends to break into other real estate offices, as he showed a knowledge of the real estate business by the papers he took. The police have been working on the case, but, as usual, said nothing about it. The letter has been turned over to them as finger prints were found on it.

Dog Days.

The ancients applied the term "dog days" to a period of about forty days, the hottest season of the year, at the time of the heliacal rising of Sirius, the dog star; that is, the time when the star rose just before the sun. The heat, which is usually most oppressive at this season, was formerly ascribed to the conjunction of this star with the sun. We still retain the expression, dog days, as applied to the hottest season of the year, but owing to the procession of the equinoxes it is no longer the time of the heliacal rising of the star. In certain rural sections a superstitious beliefs centre about dog days. It is thought the sun's rays have an extraordinary tendency to cause sunstroke in this period, and some mothers warn their little sons not to go swimming in dog days, believing that if in any way they suffer a lesion of the skin the injury will refuse to heal. Some believe that dog bites in this season invariably cause hydrophobia.

"Kangaroo Courts"

INSTITUTED BY AUSTRALIAN CONVICTS.

Kangaroo court is an expression which, however strange it may be to the layman, is familiar to most United States marshalls, post office inspectors and the police forces of large cities; remarks a writer in the Detroit News. What it really stands for is explained by a post office inspector who had had much experience with offenders and criminals.

It appears that in a number of the larger prisons in this country the prisoners, from time to time, are accustomed to hold what they call kangaroo court, and that every notorious criminal in the United States is probably not only familiar with the term, but has no doubt presided often enough as judge or prosecuting attorney in this relation, or perhaps has been tried for some of the numerous mock charges that are preferred against those who have the misfortune to be haled before such a tribunal.

Such a court is held only in the great prisons of the country, being entirely unknown in the country jails. The institution of kangaroo court seems to date back some 40 years in the United States.

In the days when Australia was a penal colony the convicts at Botany Bay, by way of amusing themselves and relieving the monotony of prison life, used to organize a sort of mock court at which the shrewdest and often the worst criminals of the lot presided as judge, while others acted as jurymen, prosecuting attorneys, bailiffs, criers and the like.

At such trials the prisoners were wont to take on recent arrivals from England on all manner of mock charges, such as snoring too loudly, washing their faces with soap, and so on. If it was found that among the batch of new-comers, convicts just from the old country, there were several who possessed money, court was immediately convened and the ones suspected of having funds were haled up on the charge of having red hair or wearing box-toed shoes.

The trial was held with mock gravity and decorum, and in the end the prisoner would be found guilty and fined whatever amount he was known to have on his person for the offense charged. The money thus obtained would be divided among the old, long-term convicts, who would buy tobacco and other luxuries with it, while the victim of this form of extortion would have no recourse except to await the time when he himself got a chance to preside as judge or sit on the jury at the trial of some new arrival.

It was called kangaroo court because in those days the Botany Bay convicts spoke of themselves as kangaroos, an animal very abundant, as everybody knows, in Australia.

The institution, as well as the term, traveled from Australia to England, whither it was brought by returning Botany Bay convicts, whose terms had expired. It had a short life in England, however, where it was speedily discovered by the jailers and turkeys and broken up; but it was not long afterward that it found its way into the prisons of the United States, where it has remained ever since.

Stories From W. H. Mallock's Social Memories.

Lord Lytton.

A certain noble lord was on notoriously bad terms with his wife. "She told the following story of him. He was, so she said, in London, and she, having been left in the country, had written to propose joining him. He had at once replied begging her not to do so, but to leave him a little longer in the enjoyment of philosophic solitude. "When I heard that,"—so she confided to a friend—"I set off for London instantly; and there I found him with Philosophic Solitude, in white muslin, on his knees.

"Ouida."

"Ouida," the super-romantic, conceived a great passion for Lytton. "Lytton, during the previous spring, had been spending some weeks in Florence. He was quite alone; and "Ouida," who, apart from her affections, was a very remarkable woman, had no difficulty in securing his frequent company at her villa, where she fed him at an incredible price with precociously ripe strawberries. On her memory of these tender proceedings she had built up a belief that his nature had been emptied of everything except one great passion for herself, and she had actually come to Knebworth convinced that a single word from her would tear him from the bosom of his family, and make him hers alone. The magic word was said. The expected result had, however, failed to follow—perhaps because the word, or words, had not been very happily chosen. They had been these:—

"Why don't you leave this bourgeois man-and-wife million behind you, and prove in some Sicilian palace what life may really mean for people like you and I?"

Two Yarns From America.

Mr. Mallock has paid the inevitable lecturing visit to America, and the following are two of the stories he brought back:—

"Certain hotels, no doubt, are notoriously over-gilded. A story is told of a certain country man who stayed for a night at one of them. The wife said to the husband: "Why don't you put your boots outside the door to be blacked?" "My dear," said the husband, "I'm afraid I should find them gilt."

This clergyman (of a millionaire New York church) was one morning surprised by receiving a visit from a nigger, who expressed a desire to join his exclusive flock. The shepherd was somewhat embarrassed, but received his visitor kindly. "You are," he said, "contemplating a very serious step. My advice to you is that you seek council in prayer; that, if possible, you should see Our Lord; that you make quite sure that this step is one which Our Lord would approve; and that in three weeks' time you

Farmyard Superstitions.

Farmers who get a crowing hen among the brood in the yard often look upon it as an evil omen. A superstitious farmer considers his poultry as prophets; thus, if his own death is near, he will tell you that they will go to bed at noon instead of at their usual roosting time. Numerous birds are mixed up with songs of death. Let a pigeon enter a house, or a robin come through the door, and some people expect calamity. Owls, again, are ominous birds to the superstitious, especially if they had from the housetop.

For a single magpie to cross the path of the superstitious is enough to send them into a cold perspiration, and they hasten to lay two straws across each other to avert the evil influence.

When swallows and martins build about a farmyard the superstitious farmer is troubled if they do not appear regularly year by year, for should they desert their old nests he expects misfortune.

The call of the cuckoo has always been mixed up with good and bad luck. Hear it while walking, and provided it is the first time you have heard it that year, it is said to indicate a happy new year for you.

When the farmer's wife sets eggs she will sometimes place an odd number in the nest if she wants her chicks to prosper. The superstitious farmwife will not bring eggs into the house after sunset.

Peacocks' feathers in a house are said to mean misfortune, but for an eagle to hover over a person or house is thought to indicate an approaching success.

Soviets Eating Dogs and Facing Famine.

"Bolshevik Russia is in a terrible condition; food is so scarce that people are eating dogs and cats. An overwhelming desire for resumption of relations with Europe and America to relieve the situation is apparent everywhere in the Soviet Republic."

This report was brought to the Cross-Atlantic News Service by A. L. Chase, Lowell, Mass., of the United States cruised Frederick.

"A majority of the people of Russia favor a Bolshevik regime," said Chase. "Personally it seems to me the Soviet Government will last if it eliminates the crazy idea of revolutionizing the rest of the world and gets peace with the Allies. The railroads are in a terrible state. I believe they are willing to make great sacrifices to get rolling stock and other necessities from Europe and Canada."

The French Secret Service has obtained a confidential report of the Soviet Government's Supreme Agricultural Control Commission to the Soviet Government, stating that Russians cities are facing famine next winter, and declaring conditions to be infinitely more critical than at any time since 1914.

Facing a Famine.

A marked dearth of food supplies is noted even in the Central Russia Volga region, which heretofore has been the granary of the Muscovite Empire.

The sole hope of Russia lies in the crippled condition of rail lines Siberian and Caucasus crops, but limited transportation facilities and progress disaster.

Peasants everywhere in Russia are hostile to the city population and the Soviet officials, refusing to accept worthless paper in payment, and, fearing confiscation by the Government of their crops, many have raised just enough for their own uses.

Litvinoff's commercial mission to London was of negligible importance. A few consignments of potatoes were all that arrived, and these were in bad condition. Russian trade relations with Italy gave a small amount of textiles, but these were useless, as the factories were paralyzed.

Trade Depression and Excess Profits.

The threatened depression in trade which is already affecting the boot industry may upset the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Budget calculations. The Excess Profits Duty is in many ways a tax on the proceeds of a boom in trade. In a falling market profits shrink rapidly, and losses begin to be incurred. Big profits have been very largely made by the sale in a rising market of goods bought some time before at much lower prices. Now we are threatened with the reversal of that process. Not only are the proceeds of the Excess Profits Duty likely to shrink in consequence, but firms which suffer losses are entitled to claim rebate on the duty already paid. It was difficult to find a substitute for the Excess Profits Duty this year, but it is likely to prove a flimsy and uncertain foundation for a Budget.—Westminster Gazette:

Horse-Hair Suits Coming

Suits made of "horse-hair cloth" have made their appearance at Leeds, England. This new cloth was woven at Batley, and the suits, which are priced at $30, were made up at Leeds. They are extremely smart, and are shown in four self-colours—beaver, grey, green, and blue. Experts are of opinion that the new cloth is the hardest wearing material yet discovered. The new "turnable" overcoat for man is another novelty evolved by the outfitters of Yorkshire. This garment is of smart herringbone cloth on one side and a gabardine on the other. It is cut to the Raglan pattern, and the conversion is simply a matter of turning the sleeves inside out.

MRS. LAURA RARICK, of Peoria, Ill., who says she believes she is the happiest woman on earth since Tanlac so completely restored her health. Regains 50 pounds which she lost during a period of ill health which lasted eleven long years.

"I believe I am the happiest woman in the world, and it is all because of what Tanlac has done for me," said Mrs. Laura Rarick, 403 Melroth St., Peoria, Ill., a well-known and highly respected resident of that city. "I never dreamed that I would ever find anything that would do for me what Tanlac has done," she said. "I was in a wretched state of health and was down in bed so long that I lost fifty pounds in weight, but I have gained back every pound I lost and I now feel as well as I ever did in my life. The indigestion and other troubles that made life a burden for eleven years have entirely disappeared and I am like a new woman. My stomach was so disordered that even liquid foods and plain water caused me to have dreadful cramping spells that lasted for hours. My kidneys were disordered and I had pains across my back almost constantly. I had severe headaches nearly every day and became so dizzy I could hardly stand. I was so nervous it was impossible for me to get a good night's sleep. I tried every conceivable medicine and was treated by specialists, but nothing helped me, and finally I was told I would never be well again. "But Tanlac has made me a perfectly well woman in every way. I can now eat and sleep like other people and I haven't a pain about me. "I am glad to give this statement, for I want to do all I can to let the world know about this wonderful medicine."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Paradise by Mrs. Martin F. Byrne, in Upper Gillies by Heber Andrews, in Portland by H. C. Haines, in St. Joseph, Salmonier, by Mrs. J. Gushue, in Millertown by Ex-Joints Valley Royal Stores, Ltd., in Flat Island by William Samson, in Jamestown by Christopher Haines, and in Lewisporte by Uriah Freake.—adv.

What is Democracy?

Showing how mistaken is the idea that only those who labour with their hands should be included in this much-abused word. Nothing but disaster can accrue from such a false and vicious definition of democracy.

(By Alfred B. Cooper, in Answers.) Demos, the many-headed, has become in these latter days Demos, the one-headed—and that head is Labour. This is the result of wrong-thinking, of exclusive definition.

The word democracy means nothing if it does not mean everybody, yet millions, not only in our own country, but throughout Europe, have come to regard the word as a synonym for the class which works with its hands.

The Labourites say "We are democracy," just as the Leninites in Russia speak of getting rid of the bourgeoisie.

The mistake is by no means a new one. It was made by the French after the Revolution. It has been made again by the Bolsheviks. Their theories may be all right, but their practice is all wrong. It is class government—and that of the worst order because, whatever may be the shortcomings of an aristocratic form of government, at any rate it has education, and long use and tradition behind it, often associated with the highest ability.

We speak of the "body politic." It is a phrase which has grown out of a true conception of democracy. St. Paul says, in one of his letters, that the body is one and its members many, and that none of these can afford to be independent of the others.

We are the People!

The body is a true democracy. The eye helps the hand, the ear the brain, the smell the health, and in a hundred ways there is an interchange of assistance, guidance, control, and inter-communication. "The eye cannot see to the foot, I have no need of you." Each in its place is an aid to fitness and efficiency.

Just as well then might we say that the body is a hand or is a foot, or is an arm or is a leg, as say that democracy is the Labour Party. That party is a section of democracy. To say that it is an essential part is only to say that, without the other parts, it is incomplete, and must therefore be inefficient, that its effectiveness depends upon its close co-operation with the other limbs of the body politic.

Lincoln defined democracy as government of the people, by the people, for the people. The next question is: Who are the People? Surely if the People and the Nation are not one and the same, we are going to be put to it whom to exclude?

Is the man who paints doors one of the people and not the man who paints portraits? The man who lays bricks and not the man who designs houses, the man who chips building-stone, and not the man who finds the angel in the marble, the man who was educated at the Council School and not the man who was educated at Eton and Harrow?

"We"—all of us, anybody and everybody, "Duke's son, cook's son, son of a belted Earl," blacksmith, goldsmith, plumber, poet, mason, sculptor, weaver, designer, peasant, and peer—We are the People?

Altruism is the companion word of democracy. It means the greatest good of the greatest number. It means all for each, and each for all. It means that the best for me is always and every time the best for you. It means that selfishness is the sure prelude to self-extinction.

Democracy is universal. It is the gospel of mankind and not only of a nation. Nationalism is only good when it is linked with internationalism, and when the world is truly democratic, the rights of man will be the first plank in its platform.

Inclusive, not Exclusive.

Democracy, in short, so far from being exclusive of everything and everybody. It excludes no citizen. It gives equal rights to every citizen. It draws into its fold all talent, capability, handicraft—every brain, every hand, every heart. It is cosmopolitan, it is humanitarian, it is proletarian. Like charity, it seeks not its own, but if by no means it can do good to any, that is its appointed task. It is large-hearted, whole-hearted, and true-hearted, its patriotism is the patriotism of peace, and the only men it makes war upon are men who delight in war, the only thing it abhors are the things that are anti-social, self-seeking, and dividing.

Its motto is: "Whatever concerns man concerns me." That is democracy. There is no other.

We must rid ourselves of the new and vicious definitions of democracy. If we do not, nothing but disaster can accrue. A democracy which sets class against class is not a democracy but a road to chaos. It would indeed be pitiable if, after we have spent a century in this country in the work of breaking down every social barrier, extinguishing every test, whether religious, natal or educational, we should immediately allow ourselves by a false definition of a word, to drift into the backwater of political exclusiveness.

Its only result would be to get rid of one form of autocracy and to set up another, and that a less capable one under present-day conditions. If we lay iconoclastic hands on the temple of government before we have raised a newer and better shrine, the people, so far from being happier and more prosperous, will find themselves as men without a home, clad in the rags and tatters of broken systems and with no moral or mental assets to keep them out of the workhouse.

GUARD AGAINST CHILLS

Simple Precaution Against Dangers of Cold and Damp.

Cultivate the habit of taking a cup of hot Oxo—a cube to a cup—before going out in the cold or damp. Such weather is a tax upon the system, and the strengthening and warming powers of the concentrated beef-goodness fortify you against the evils consequent upon exposure.

If the uses of Oxo are new to you, try a tin of four cubes. Oxo greatly improves gravies, stews, or soups, and is a delightful, sustaining and appetizing beverage. It is excellent for children.

THE FLAW.

He made his bid for fortune through his youthful days and sunny. The spur to his ambition was the yellow stuff called money. He slaved for it and saved it, the heat and cold he braved for it. He daily watched his holdings grow the fortune he had wanted so; Then one mistake he chanced to make—he saw the fickle market break and others rushed his wealth to take.

He must beware who counts in coin the total of one of his happiness. And builds his joy upon the sand where money-seekers find success. For yellow gold is hard to hold, it's slippery stuff and very cold; Since first it's power on earth began, in it no loyalty we scan; it serves, but never loves the man, And who shall make but one mistake, wherein his fortune is at stake, at morn to poverty shall wail.

Another spurned the road to wealth to be a brother to his neighbors. He shared their sorrows and their joys and knew their burdens and their labors. And he was kind of heart and mind, to friendly ways he was inclined, And all he knew to him were true—they knew the good he tried to do; Mistakes he made, but friends they rushed to aid, 'till every debt of love was paid.

State Aided Shipping.

Shipping is a peculiar industry, which does not flourish and acquire strength and develop a high standard of efficiency under artificial conditions or State-imposed restrictions. Moreover, any favors, as we discovered in the past, granted by the State to native shipowners with the idea of bolstering up the industry have necessarily to be paid for by native merchants, and by them are passed on to the community. These, among other reasons, led to the abrogation of our Navigation Laws, and from that event we date the steady growth of our maritime interests, until we come to possess half the shipping of the world on the war. We have proved that the freedom of the seas in association with the freedom of the ports represents the only policy which promotes economic health, and protects us from becoming periodically embroiled with other countries. Now that the United States has adopted what our experience suggests to be a mistaken policy, it is not our business, or the business of any country, to attempt to interfere, so long as treaty obligations and other obligations of a mutual character are respected.—London Daily Telegraph.

be in. The machine was heading for the ground, upside down, with the engine roaring madly. Everything seemed to depend on me—and I was clinging for dear life to the petrol tank and dare not let go with either hand to regain control of the runaway! At any moment the petrol which was leaking out of the filler-cap of the main petrol tank might catch the flame from the open exhaust of the engine, in which event we were doomed to an awful death by fire in mid-air.

Something had to be done, and done quickly, and after a desperate struggle I managed to reach the control stick with my foot and kick it back. The machine, to my vast relief, answered to the control and righted herself.

Hurriedly I scrambled into my seat and immediately noticed how close we were to the ground. A glance at my height indicator showed that we had fallen eight hundred feet upside down; another moment and we should have crashed.

I explained and demonstrated his mistake to the pupil, who had now recovered his nerve, and then landed. He never realized how close he had been to death, and I vowed I would never leave the ground again when instructing without being belted in.

This Machine Smokes Fags.

Some interesting experiments have been carried out in South Africa, with the object of discovering how much of the nicotine contained in a cigarette is absorbed into the system of the smoker.

To obtain the desired information it was necessary to ascertain the exact proportion of the cigarette that entered the mouth in the form of smoke, and then to find out the amount of nicotine contained in that smoke.

A machine was devised which "smoked" cigarettes at a rate and in the manner similar to the average smoker.

It was found that approximately two-thirds of the cigarette is actually smoked, the other third representing the quantity that burns away between the puffs, and the stub. As for the nicotine, a certain percentage contained in the tobacco is destroyed by the burning, a fraction remains in the moisture in the stub, the rest enters the mouth.

The final conclusion was that the average cigarette contains nineteen milligrams of nicotine, and of that quantity five milligrams are "wasted." Fourteen milligrams are actually smoked, half of which enters the system.

What it all amounts to is this: If you smoke a hundred cigarettes a week, and from each one you inhale seven milligrams of nicotine, that equals just one eleven grains of nicotine you take into your system weekly.

It may be consoling for the "cigarette fiend" to remember that there are 437½ grains to the ounce.

Whiskey and Sugar

EMPT THIEVES AT OLD COURTRY DOCKS.

The high price of whisky and sugar has made pilfering at the big docks of England and Scotland an everyday occurrence—and a very serious one at that, when the debit side of the ledger comes to be examined.

Some little indication of the gravity of the pilferage evil is contained in a recent announcement that the claims for theft and pilferage which passed through the claims department of Lloyds Bureau during 16 weeks amounted to $550,000, or an average of nearly $35,000 a week.

For one single week during April the claims amounted to $47,500.

During the trial, a few days ago, of a respectfully dressed workman charged with stealing two bottles of whiskey from a ship lying at the Queens Dock, Glasgow, a representative of the Clan Line, commenting on the serious nature of the theft, said that on a recent voyage the cargo of one of their ships had been plundered to the extent of $1,500.

Stealing whiskey is one of the most common crimes in Scotland at the present time; its expensiveness and scarcity have given it unique attractions, and to workmen loading or unloading cargo, or working at repairs on board a ship (as the workman mentioned was doing) the "real Mac" presents probably the most profitable and irresistible of all lures: A caskhead of whiskey sells at $1,000 in Scotland. No wonder it has acquired among thieves a value next to that of jewellery and silver plate. In another recent Glasgow case four men were charged with stealing whiskey and brandy from the hold of ships lying in the harbor and from the adjacent sheds. They were all heavily fined.

Nerve-Trying

Adventure in the Air.

One morning I was up with a pupil on a "D.H." machine, teaching him to do what is known in R.A.F. parlance as the "half roll," writes Ex-Instructor, R.A.F., in a London magazine. The pupil was in the pilot's seat; I sat in the front seat with a dual set of controls and a speaking tube connected from a mouthpiece in my seat to ear-pieces fixed in his helmet.

I did the "half roll" several times, explaining each movement of the controls to the pupil down the speaking tube, while he felt and saw his own set of controls moving.

I then told him to do it himself, and to show that I was not helping him in any way with the controls I put my hands over the side of the machine.

The pupil, being very keen, thought this a grand opportunity of showing his ability and giving me a surprise by attempting to loop the loop with me first. He proceeded to do so, but did it too slowly. The machine had not enough speed to go right over the top of the loop, and we hung upside down, a thousand feet up.

I was not strapped in, so was thrown clean out of my seat, striking my head on the petrol tank which, in this type of machine, is clipped on the underside of the top plane. Although dazed by the blow, I clutched that tank with both hands and hung on desperately. Meanwhile the pupil, who was strapped in, had lost his head, let go the controls, and gripped the sides of the machine, which was careering about upside down, almost uncontrolled.

Oil was pouring out of the engine pump on to the hot cylinders, raising clouds of evil-smelling smoke that blew back in my face, filling my eyes and nearly blinding me.

It was truly a terrible position to

Some Famous
Fasters of the Past.

The long-continued fast of Lord Mayor MacSweeney, of Cork, and other Sinn Fein prisoners has drawn public attention to former persons who have abstained from food for a lengthened period in recent years.

Modern history is not lacking for instances of persons who not only abstained from food for abnormal periods, but who suffered no inconvenience, except, perhaps, a slight weakness. In fact, so beneficial has fasting been for some that it was eloquently advocated as a cure for almost any malady.

But how long can one go without food? The generally accepted figure seems to be forty days, although Alexander Jacques, a veteran of the Franco-Prussian War, is believed to have abstained from the delights of the table for fifty days. He accomplished that a quarter of a century ago in the London Aquarium, and he is usually held up as the "champion."

It was a United States citizen, however, who was the pioneer of all modern fasters, Dr. Henry Samuel Tanner, a Minneapolis physician.

The man who attained the most widespread notoriety and probably the one who attracted all the converts to fasting after his time was Doctor Tanner. Day after day newspapers followed the course of his experiment, and doctors and laymen all over the world told him what to do and how to reach the best results. New York newspapers established watchers to see that the test was genuine.

One of these watchers was E. Cholmeley Jones, a Philadelphia theatrical man, then a newspaperman. Mr. Jones was profoundly impressed by the fact, but especially by the personality of Doctor Tanner.

"He was a man who was perfectly sincere," said Mr. Jones. "He was wholly free of any desire of gain or emolument, and he made his test for its scientific value."

Dr. Tanner's Experience.

After a series of negotiations with Dr. William A. Hammond, a widely known specialist of the metropolis, and with others, Doctor Tanner left Minneapolis and took up his home in Clarendon Hall, on Twelfth street, just east of Fourth avenue, New York.

The fast began on Monday, June 23, 1880, and lasted until Saturday, August 7. In that forty days Doctor Tanner ate nothing and drank a little water. In the early days of the fast he took a little exercise, walking in the neighborhood and riding through Central Park. Up on Morningside drive he found a pump with excellent drinking water.

Every precaution was taken to guard against possible reception.

On one occasion, Mr. Jones said, Thomas B. Connelly, who was then managing editor of the Herald, visited Clarendon Hall. The reporter assigned to watch Doctor Tanner and "cover" the story had stepped out for lunch.

Connelly was furious. Immediately he ordered that two men be assigned to watch the physician by day and two by night. He ordered that every one keep at some distance from Doctor Tanner, and so strict, finally, was the regimen that he was not allowed to use a handkerchief for fear that in its folds he might secretly convey food to his mouth.

As the end of the fast drew near, thousands of persons from every section of the earth advised Doctor Tanner to be careful as to how he broke his fast. Koster & Ball's Music Hall, then the great centre of vaudeville entertainment, was selected for that event.

Doctor Tanner laughed, and, according to Mr. Jones, he ate a big porterhouse steak, half a watermelon, two pies and washed it down with three quarts of milk. The spectators were horrified, expecting that the physician momentarily would drop over dead. But he felt no ill effects and he lived until December 30, 1913, his death coming at the advanced age of eighty-eight.

The Case of Giovanni Succi.

The wires had not cooled with the result of Doctor Tanner's experiment when almost every city in the United States and Europe sent forth its champion faster.

The most widely known of these was an Italian, Giovanni Succi, whose vogue as an exhibition faster lasted well into the twentieth century. Succi said he had learned to fast in Africa, when he withstood an attack of tropical fever. In 1887 he exhibited in Milan and abstained from food thirty days. He lived a normal life and devoted himself to athletics.

Four years later he went to New York after fasting for a time in England. He started his fast in the United States on November 6 and finished December 21. Koster & Ball's was the scene, and although he was never left without watchers, considerable doubt was expressed as to the genuineness of the fast.

As late as 1906 Succi was mentioned in the newspapers, and a cable dispatch from Geneva told how he had fasted thirty days, losing only nine pounds in weight and remaining in excellent physical condition. Nothing but water and lemon soda passed his lips.

Succi's success stimulated a Hungarian named Sacco, and Sacco managed to better Succi's record slightly. The Hungarian tried a fast of fifty days, but failed after the forty-fifth day. That was performed in London in the first three months of 1906. He had drawn twenty-two bottles of water and smoked cigarettes incessantly. He was weak at the end of the experiment, but otherwise his health was good.

The following year he again attempted a fifty-day fast, but lasted forty-six days. That is said to be the record, and perhaps better authenticated than a host of others.

A Philadelphia FASTER.

For example, there was the case of Mrs. Rudolph Weber, who is still living somewhere in the northern section of Philadelphia. It was claimed for her that she went 100 days, subsisting on nothing but water and orange juice. Her physician was Dr. R. Straube. That was in June, 1910, and she hit upon the fasting idea as a cure for ulcers. Doctor Straube said the other day that she was cured, but that he could not recall how long the fast had lasted.

Every physician knows of the classic cases of pathology. An English woman, her reason unhinged, went without food fifty days and swallowed nothing but water, and on one occasion two teaspoonfuls of brandy.

Another instance is that of the "Market Harborough fasting girl," nineteen years old, who abstained from food from April, 1874, until December, 1877, but she used morphine constantly.

Similarly morbid was the case of a Welsh girl, Sarah Jacobs, whose troubles were told to the world in 1868. Her parents declared that she had not eaten anything for months, but a remarkable feature was that she failed to lose flesh.

Doubting Thomases suggested that a systematic test be arranged. That was done. For a few days she seemed to be in good health. Then her body became cold, and those who conducted the test told her parents to feed her. But they refused, saying that her condition was not unusual. In the meantime visitors enriched the family with tips. On the eighth day the young woman died of acute starvation. The parents were arrested and convicted of manslaughter.

While no definite figures have ever been published, it is well known that Indian fakirs have managed to live for long periods without food. Some of them have been able to suspend all their vital functions to a point closely akin to complete collapse.

Short-Period Experiments.

Fasting for periods shorter than forty days have been comparatively common. Milton Rathbun, a grain dealer, of Mount Vernon, N.Y., in June, 1899, went thirty-five days with nothing but mineral water as food. He weighed 207 pounds when he started and 164 pounds when he finished, a loss of forty-three pounds. He fasted because he wanted to reduce weight, fearing that its gradual increase might bring on apoplexy. His friends called him a fool, but he persisted, going to his place of business every day and at the end of the fast swore that he felt like a boy again.

Probably the most distinguished of the fasters was William E. Chandler, former Senator from New Hampshire. For twenty days he fasted the delights of Washington cooking. His wife gave him an excellent example, for she likewise went without food for the same length of time. William Stewart, former Senator from Nevada, a colleague of Senator Chandler, also submitted to the heroic treatment for eighteen days, and Mrs. Stewart ate nothing for thirty days.

Woman Suffrage.

ST. JOHN, N.B.—Those who have been advocates of woman's suffrage profess to find in the New Brunswick general election results more than sufficient evidence to substantiate their arguments in favor of the wider franchise.

This was the first election in New Brunswick in which all the women had the right to vote and there was considerable curiosity regarding the way in which they would meet the opportunity to assume political responsibilities.

The size of the vote seems to have settled the oft-made assertion that the women would not take the trouble to vote. They did vote, and apparently in almost as large numbers as the men. In fact, in some of the city polling places, the returning officers said that they had had more women voters than men.

Throughout the province the figures indicate that the proportion of women who went to the polls was nearly as great as the proportion of male voters, and the size of the women vote was a surprise to many.

Another Argument Gone.

Another stock argument of the opponents of woman suffrage—that the women simply would vote as their men folk did and would not affect the issue—received a body blow. Undoubtedly the majority of the women did vote in the same way, but a sufficiently large number voted according to their own ideas to make them a factor which must be considered very seriously by any political party or candidate in future elections.

Ballot is Criticized.

The provincial system of balloting in which of the dark ages, and one which makes independent voting difficult. The official ballot is simply a blank piece of paper on which the voter is expected to write the names and initials of the persons for whom he or she wishes to vote. Printed ballots, furnished by the candidates bearing the names of their own ticket are accepted and these may be modified by scoring out some of the printed names and writing in any of the opposite party. This system is inclined to discourage split tickets and it was thought that the women would vote the straight ticket in most cases rather than run the risk of spoiling their ballots. They did not do so, in St. John at least. At least as many women as men split their tickets to vote for the men of their preference.

This preference was ruled not only by political considerations, but also by matters of principle and morals. The defeat of more than one candidate is considered due to the objections which the women had to their stand on the temperance question or to other and more personal matters.

It is believed that the extension of the ballot to the women will justify the claims made that it will have a tendency towards higher standards in public life and a more rigid insistence on higher personal standards on the part of candidates who seek election to public office.

American women have established schools to teach their sex how to use the ballot. How many men can qualify as teachers?

Remnants of the Great War.

We came upon them in a remote corner of the wrecked country between Albert and Bapaume, writes W. H. Armit in a London paper.

Two grizzled and scarred veterans in khaki of the andorred type, they sat upon a couple of rusty petrol tins, smoking their pipes as they meditated on that portion of the new world within their ken. Except for a quick glance from under bushy, grey eyebrows they exhibited not the faintest interest in our approach.

"Very quiet here now," I opened rather fatuously, and received a monosyllabic answer in which there was little sound and less enunciation. Venturing further, I quizzed in with the desire to be informed what they were doing so far removed from everything and everybody.

Taking his pipe out of his mouth and using it to indicate an old dump of sorts discernible in a declivity, which may have been a mine crater, one of them said laconically: "Guarding that."

There was the flicker of a grin about the jaw of the other, as they exchanged looks of self pity which were intended not to be lost on inquisitive callers. As the only possible habitations within miles were a few old army huts, I daresay my demeanor expressed amusement, but under the influence of a cigar the speaker expanded.

Marooned on a Battlefield.
"They dumped that scrap heap there after cleaning up, a matter of many months ago, and we were left to see that the surrounding population of which you might say there ain't any—don't run away with it. Not that there's much worth pinching that I see. Anyhow, 'ere we've been put, and 'ere we 'ang on. Nothing ever 'appens, and it's seldom anyone comes near. I think they've forgotten us."

I murmured something about relations, and from the look of resigned and patient virtue which sanctified their countenances it was borne in upon me that these old soldiers were not without a commissariat of more than negligible consequences. I suspected they had found means of doing themselves well, and that they had known tighter corners in life than being marooned in summer exile on the uplands of Picardy.

"Some day you will be remembered and relieved 'Shall I inquire'?" I offered, as I sauntered off.

"Well," replied the second man, with a show of interest and a wink, "our officer does come round now and then. He said something the last time about Government sales, so it's not for the duration of the peace."

"And in the meantime?" I called over my shoulder, as they settled themselves among the petrol tins with elevated feet and far-away looks directed towards the high ridges. Waiting a farewell with cigar-laden fingers, the answer I expected came floating through comfortable rings of blue smoke—
"We carry on!"

Local Railwaymen Demand Higher Wages

The Reid Company's railway workers—Station Agents, Operators, Engineers, Firemen, Baggage-men, Conductors and others—are threatening a general strike the last day of the present month, at midnight, if demands made upon the concern for a general increase of wages are rejected. The increase is said to be 20 per cent. on all salaries over $900, and $3 1-3 per cent. on salaries under $900. The workmen mentioned have recently formed a Railworkers' Union, which is federated with the United Railway Workers' Association, a delegate from the latter having been in the Dominion for some time organizing. The establishment of the Union had the sanction of the Reid Co., and when application was made for an increase of wages, a reply was given which the railway workers claim was tantamount to an acceptance of their demands. Since the Government Commission took control of the Company's affairs another letter was drafted and forwarded the Commission, which they claim has not been replied to. The Union is still hoping that a favourable response to their demands will follow, but if not the operators will close their keyboards at 11.59 p.m., October 31st, the engineers and firemen will bring their trains to their stations and all work will cease. The Union claims that full sympathy will be given the strike by the United Railroaders' Association, who will refuse to handle any shipments coming to Newfoundland.

A Splendid Number.

The Autumn Number of the Newfoundland Quarterly, for advance copy of which the publisher, Mr. J. J. Evans, has our thanks, is perhaps the best yet issued. It is replete with illustrations of a topical nature, while the articles are from the pens of our best known authors. In biographies there are interesting sketches (illustrated) of the Bishop-Elect of St. George's Diocese, Rt. Rev. Henry T. Renouf, the late John L. Slattery and Richard J. Devereaux. Altogether the current number of this journal is one well worth purchasing.

One thing essential in your Winter Coat is QUALITY. One has to wear their Winter Coat for many months, and to stand against this you require the best of material in it.

We have carefully selected our stock of Winter Coatings and feel we have goods that merit your approval. You can purchase enough excellent material to make a coat for $24.00, and if you wish we can make it up for you, and deliver the finished garment in a week or less if necessary. The material is equal in quality to that in coats which retail at $70.00 to $90.00.

We ask you to come in and see the goods, examine them, get samples and prices, compare with others, and come back and purchase the goods.

If a Testator

although seeing the benefits to be derived from a Trust Company's administration, hesitates about cancelling any appointment he may have already made, the Montreal Trust Company can be named to act with the Executor or Executors already appointed. In this way the Trust Company co-operates with the Testator's appointees in the administration of the Estate.

This plan is very acceptable when the Testator's wife is named as Executor. Few women have the necessary business training to enable them to carry on the administration of an Estate, but with the co-operation of the Montreal Trust Company the Testator's wife can be appointed with full assurance that the Estate will be well looked after.
