Hereafter the Globe will reflect the opinions of no strong-minded man, but nerely the wishes of the clique, made up of the grocer, the attorney, the slab-merchant aforesaid, and all of whom are general jobbers in a general way. Politically it will have a Blake flavor, if it pays, but outside of politics it will be used as a general grist mill for the parties aforesaid, and through it will be run various railway, land and other schemes which are already cut, dried and ready for the reducing process.

The directors have already a peck of trouble on their hands and there is more to come. They don't want any strong-minded man in the editor's chair, they want a pliable man and each thinks he will be able to "point" him as he desires. The result will be dissensions, and then finding that they have a mistake they will begin to look for the strong-minded man and they will not find him, or rather he will not take hold next.

The old-timers in the back townships who have been reading the Globe for forty years and swearing by the Browns, have not been heard from yet; and they were the backbone of the Globe; perhaps the directors will find their support weaken in their strongest prop when the old guard in the rural parts learn that the reliable name of Brown has been erased from the title-page of the Globe, and that trained journalists have been usurped by Tea, Slabs and an

STILL DEBATING THE ADDRESS IN

Mr Creighton (North Grey) charged the provinctal secretary with mutilating the report of the immigration agent at Hamilton. This offence was committed for the second time by the hon gentleman, he having done the same thing last year. The speaker went on to quote several cases which he alleged proved that the government had undoubtedly used the license act for political purposes. Referring to the figures put forward by the government with regard to the decrease of committals for being drunk forward by the government with regard to the decrease of committals for being drunk forward by the government with regard to the decrease of committals for being drunk forward by the government with regard to the decrease of committals for being drunk forward by the government with regard to the decrease of committals had undoubtedly used the license act for political the province doubtful whether he was a safe man to be entrusted with the management of affairs. For his own part, and for the government, he might say they would be glad when the writs were issued they could submit the case to the people, who are over and above the heads not only of parliaments but of governments.

Aftar recess Mr Merrick (Leeds and Merrick (Leeds a speaker went on to quote several cases which he alleged proved that the government had undoubtedly used the license act for political purposes. Referring to the figures put forward by the government with regard to the decrease of committals for being drunk and disorderly, he stated that during the first year the Crooks act was in full operation, the number of these committals had been larger than before. Mr Creighton further reminded the house that the temperance people of Toronto had complained that the commissioners appointed to suppress intemperance were granting licenses to the full limit of the law. Although the sense of this house had been clearly against the selling of liquor on the exhibition grounds, these commissioners, with the connivance of certain honorable members, had empowered such sale. The speaker advocated the settlement of a fixed time for the meeting of the house; recommended the government to put the question of new parliament buildings before the people at the coming election; and charged the ministry with delay in the matter of the settlement of financial questions between the provinces of Outario and Quebec and the dominion government. With regard to the boundary award, he accused the government of pursuing a policy of obstruction and negation.

Mr Pardee said that the house was told by hon gentlemen opposite that no important legislation should be entered upon be-above all they could not "go" Mr. Blake and Mr. Mills. And strong in their antagonism to these gentlemen both George and Gordon opposed them to the last.

The event of Saturday may be claimed as a Blake victory, since the directors, hat in hand, are knocking at Mr. Blake's door and imploring to be taken in. But it is not Mr. Blake's diplomacy that has brought this about i circumstances of the second of the church. It was so well arranged that it eclipsed anything in the arranged that it eclipsed anything in the arranged that it eclipsed anything in the arranged that has brought to entertainment that has yet been given by the association. the people. The opposition, having seem their mistake in not standing by the award, now sought to convince the people that they had lost nothing and that the territory was worthless. The other argument, that this government should be in accord with that the dominion, was unsound and dangerous. It was a doctrine tending directly towards centralization and imperilling the safety of confederation. With respect to the question of disallowance, he charged the leader of opposition with deserting his colors in order to serve his political chief. If the opposition had any policy at all on this question, it was a policy against the territorial and legislative rights of the province. Mr. Meredith had said that the dominion parliament had a right to disallow any act passed by this house. He wished very much that his hon, friend would recede from this position. Mr. Pardee quoted from Lord Carnarvon to the effect that the power of disallowance was vested only in the government. Vice-Chancellor Spragge and Mr. Justice Strong were also quoted to the same purpose. The speaker asked if the hon. gentlemen opposite would have agreed to confederation it it had then been laid down that the dominion government had a right to disallow any and every act passed by the people's representatives, no matter by how large a majority? Mr. Pardee next touched on the rivers and streams bill. He maintained—always putting impossible cases. (Laughter). He did not hesitate to say, however, always putting impossible cases. (Laughter). He did not hesitate to say, however, that were such a monstrous proposal ever made, it could never become law. (Opposition applause.) Mr Pardee said he would next quote a greater constitutional lawyer than even Sir John Macdonald, Mr Blake. (Great applause.) The extract was to the effect that the disallowance should never that the disallowance should never here to be emade and that the award was night. Chief Justice Dor, on was also quoted to the effect that if the vetoing power were to be exercised in local matters, particularly in a case where the government of a province was opposed to that of the dominion, the results would be most dangerous. The individual loss which might accrue from the passage of the rivers and streams bill would be a mere bagatells to the confiscation of property which must follow in the absence of any such law. With reference to the decision of the supreme court, he did not hold that court above criticism. Judges were just as liable to be mistaken as members of parliament. ("Not quite.") He pointed out, however, that the decision of that court had really nothing to do with the streams bills, but with a bill that had been passed thirty years ago. If the privy New York, Dec. 19-Last Thursday Alfred Clock, aged 70, residing on Madison He continued playing and drew checks for $128, $200, $700 and $6000. The sharpers suggested that if he drew $15,000 from the bank, he might regain the checks. He assented and with one of the sharpers he went to the bank and drew the money and when he returned the $15,000 were taken from him and he was told that everything was settled. He informed his family and Wm. Edwards has beer arrested as one of the sharpers. Clock is unable to locate the house where he was swindled.

After recess Mr Merrick (Leeds and Grenville) returned to the attack on the license question. He charged the government with taking away large sums, in the shape of fines, from localities to the benefit of which that money should have been employed. The total amount taken out of the pockets of the people in the way of fines was $403,000, and for paying inspectors who were appointed by the government and who were political partizans, $744,000, during the few years that this government has been in power. Instead of this money being placed in the hands of the government to distribute at their will, it ought to be in the hands of the people to be fairly and equally distributed. No better plan could be found than that the municipalities should have control of this sum, save the amount necessary to pay printing and seforth. Mr Merrick went on to wade through the streams bill and re-tread the disputed territory question, but without bringing forward any very novel arguments on either subject.

Mr McLaughlin (West Durham)denied that the boundary question had been settled at the Invalentians.

So far there are two distinct plans before the government and the association. One is that of establishing three model cream eries in the east, centre, and west of the province respectively, the cost of which it is estimated would be covered by $10,000. Instruction in the art and science of butter making would be given in the creameries to all applicants, or as far as the accommo dation would go; and the results, it is claimed, would be to diffuse throughout the province many persons who had learned well the art and mystery of making good butter, thereby raising very much the verage of the whole production of

The question then is really between two plans-that of large creameries and that of private dairies. Mr. Lynch contends, and we think with much force, that while pupils attending the creamery schools, as The returns will be put into shape in the we may call them, might, on their leaving, ledge thus acquired would scarcely help dairy. We back Mr. Lynch's proposal as cular says:

"It is scarcely necessary to add, that the information now sought for has nothing to do with any system of taxation, nor will it be available for any assessment purpose. Experience shows, however, that in the inception of every measure for collecting industrial statistics the fear of an ulterior object of this kind exists in some degree.

CHEAP NEWSPAPERS DEMANDED, The economic householder has long since The economic householder has long since demanded his cheap newspaper, just as he has his eye ever open for cheap fuel and light. First of all the one-cent evening gress or decline. But a census is usually taken only once in ten years, and its lessons are often misleading. The time of taking it may be in the midst of a commercial depression as in 1861; or immediately following a bad harvest as in 1871. What false impressions the statistics of Canada for those years have made on the emigrating classes of the old world, it is not difficult to conceive. And the worst of it is, that those impressions have never yet been wholly removed. We have suffered a whole decade for the fact that in 1870 the average production of spring and fall wheat in Ontario was only 10½ bushels per acre; whereas the statistics for this year show that the average was 23 bushels per acre; or, taking fall wheat alone, 26 bushels—being nearly 9 bushels per acre more than the fall wheat averages for Ohio, Michigan, Indiana and Illinois. A knowledge of this fact alone cannot fail to be of great service to the interests of the province, both at home and abroad."

The list of manufactures concerning this high information is sought is a pretty long that the demanded his cheap newspaper, just as he has his eye ever open for cheap fuel and light. First of all the one-cent evening flaws are easefully studied, for they are the measure of a people's progress or decline. But a census is usually states and Canada every city of any considerable size has its cheap evening papers, and it is these papers that are making financial leadway. BECTIONAL PARTY AGITATORS.

(To the Editor of The World.) Sta -You say in a short article to-day in your paper that you had received and rejected two letters which had been sent to you to publish in the interests of the two aleable parties in this province—I mean the Roman catholic and orange protestant. I don't mean to say the Roman eatholics and orangemen are all, or even a minority of them, willingly saleable, but that there are just such political agitators and selfish tricksters as you describe, always ready to turn up, as persons pretending to have the power to sell these parties. The objects they have in view are to get some office for themselves, to grind some secret axe, or set themselves forward as great ones among their fellow Romanists or orangemen. A more detestable practice it is not easy to find, and it is time every real patriotic man frowned the practice down. Perhaps Mr. Patrick O'Gorman is a well known Roman catholic, He has been a merohant, an innkeeper, a bailiff, a license commissioner, a schoolmaster, and above all a political bunnier among his Roman catholic acquaintances. He knows Mr. Fraser is in power. He has heard of Marmien and the thunders of the bishop's palace. He has seen the success of the O'Boyle-O'Donohoe intrigue with Sir John A. Macdonald. He has seen Frank Smith a senator and bank manager, and says, "why may not I through my sectional religious power be as successful as well?" So he becomes a confidant either of the Mowat clique or of the Ottawa government. He is open for bids, jobs, railway sections, canal jobs, or is a caudidate for sheriffships, don't mean to say the Roman eatholics and clique or of the Ottawa government. He is open for bids, jobs, railway sections, canal jobs, or is a candidate for sheriffships, county attorneyships, license commissionerships, or even a bailiffship if nothing better turns up. He believes he is a great man, perhaps he can speak well, and is able to meet Mr Plumb or Mr Boultbee at public meetings; or he may be the owner of a newspaper. Then we have the stuck-up conceited orangeman, who cares about as much for protestantism as the other sectional partisan does for Roman catholicism. He communicates with the Hon Mr Bowell, pretends that he has his ear, is perhaps a parties of the communicates with the Hon Mr Bowell, pretends that he has his ear, is perhaps a district master, controls half a dozen lodges, is able to fool the brethren by his wise winks, apouts very loud at lodge meetings or grand lodge meetings, is ready to join the green and the orange, to swallow the pope and William of immortal memory holus-bolus, a sweet mixture. Do the people see such characters about? Why then not mark them as reprobates? Suppose the methodists, presbyterians, church of England people all got up their party sectional cries or had their party leaders, what a pretty country we would have.

Toronto, Dec. 15, 1882.

Toronto, Dec. 15, 1882. ALCOHOL AS A MEDICINE.

(To the Editor of The World) SIR: I noticed in your issue of yesterday a reference to the temperance sermons preached at the request of the Ontario branch of the Dominion alliance; and as I listened to a sermon on the subject I was struck very forcibly with the fact that not one of the ministers, so far as I am able to learn, re- Toronto, ferred to the medicinal use of this vile poison.

I am led to the conclusion that this must result from the influence of early associations, as no one can study its effects on the living cells found in the blood, as well as those assimilated into the tissues, without being led to the conclusion that it "kills" these cells whenever it is permitted to come into contact with them.

And how these gentlemen, or any one else, can conclude that what is so vehemently denounced as a beverage, even in the greatest moderation, can, when prescribed by a physician or taken as a "domestic" remedy, become not only innocuous scribed by a physician of the compression of the medicinal, is more than I can compressed the compensation. The temperance work of to-day is being a largely counteracted by the indirect influence of the medicinal use of this poison.

Its medicinal use is really far more criminal than its use as a beverage; for it lays the foundation for its immoderate use, just the foundation for its immoderation as a beverage, by accustoming the vital nerves a large market. There were about 2000 the total nerves and 88c to 92c for spring. There were about 2000 to the diseased has been as when taken in moderation as a beverage, by accustoming the vital nerves and 88c to 92c for spring. There were about 2000 the control of the moderation as a large market. There were about 2000 the control of the moderation as a large market. There were about 2000 the control of the the same as when taken in moderation as a beverage, by accustoming the vital nerves to its presence; and in a more marked degree. For when a person is convalescing from a sick bed, the appetencies are, as it were, newly formed, and are more apt to be permanently fixed than when we are well and about our usual avocations. And again the more a person is reduced by indisposition, the greater is the necessity for avoiding anything that will still further depress the energies.

The persistent use of alcohol will wear The persistent use of alcohol will were out the most vigorous constitution, simply by killing the cells with which it comes in contact. This was illustrated in experience of the Hon George Brown of this city, and of Garfield, as well as scores of less noted persons, who have been persistently poisoned by its medicinal use.

Permit me in this connection to urge that during the approaching festive season ladies desist from placing it on their tables for their guests, as many a one has indulged for the first time under the pressure of a fascinating hostess, and who never again refrained as before, and finally ended their career in an inebriate's grave.

JSAIAH RYDER, M. D.

SEPARATE SCHOOL BOARD.

(To the Editor of The World ) SIR: It is cheering to notice the lively preparations which are being made by the present trustees and former trustees (who would be officeholders once more for the good of the people-what else ?) for the coming elections. Two-thirds of a decade has not yet rolled by when a trustee was only to be had by coaxing, and as a matter of course he attended to his duties in a careless and slovenly manner. There was no money in it and it was ridiculous to expect business men to squander, away time.

actreles and slovenly manner. There was no money in it and it was ridiculous to expect business men to squander away time. Thanks to the exertions and counsel of a few agreest men, who though not directly connected with the board, pointed out the mode by which the separate schools could get their rights, and forthwith money began to flow in so quickly that the trustees became dazed and at once commenced a regular pitch battle. Like everything earthly the big pow-wow came to end, but not before much harm was done. The beautiful language of the Toronto separate school board was quoted in the Australian parliament in opposition to the archbishop of Melbourne, who was then seeking for the privileges which Ostario catholics enjoy, and a leading newspaper in Ireland, attertaking copious extracts from the proceedings of the Toronto separate school board herman parliament." "After a storm there comes a calm," and when something like peace was restored, up spring the "Moon" commander. Of course there was another disturbance, but this time a trivial one; the few lightess left on the board (the rest having been removed by an indignant people) were on the side of Jones, Brown and Robussos.
