Poetry.

A good wife rose from her bed one morn And thought, with a nervous dread,
Of the piles of clothes to be washed and mor Than a dozen of mouths to be fed;
The meals to get for the men in the field,
The children to fix away
To school, and the milk to be skimmed and churned: And all to be done that day.

It had rained in the night, and all the wood Was wet as it could be; There were puddings and pies to bake, be sides

A loaf of cake for tea.
And the day was hot, and her aching head
Throbbed wearily as she said:
"If maidens but knew what good wives know
They would be in no haste to wed."

"Jennie, what think you I told Ben Brown?"
Called the farmer from the well;
And a flush crept up to his bronzed brow,
And his eyes half bashfully fell.
"It was this," he said, and, coming near,
He smiled, and stooping down,
Kissed her cheek: "Twas that you were the best
And dearest woman in town!"

The farmer went back to the field, and the wife,

In a smiling, absent way,

Sang snatches of tender little songs
She'd not sung for many a day,
And the pain her head was forgot, and the clothes
Were white as the foam of the sea;
Her bread was light and her butter was sweet
And as golden as it could be.

'Just think," the children all called in breath
"Tom Wood has run off to sea!

"Tom Wood has run off to sea!

He wouldn't, we know, if he only had

As happy a home as we."

The night came down, and the good wife

smiled

To herself as she softly said:
"'Tis so sweet to labor for those we love,

It's not strange that maids will wed."

Samantha's Secret.

s-not a particularly attractive occupa tion, nor could any one, even the most romantic dreamer, have seen anything pictur esque in the picture she made. Had anyone noticed her, or having caught a glimpse of her cared to look again, this is what they would have seen: An old farmhouse, once painted yellow, but now so worn by years of winter blasts and summer sun, that it had a dirty, mottled appearance, a broad door where vegetables, dishes, brooms, and kittens were mingled in delightful confusion; on the worn wooden step, a young girl, whose face, framed by a mass of tumbled hair of varying shades of brown, was not that of a rustic beauty; it was broad and freckled, the eyes were of an indescribable greenish gray, the lashes that shaded them so few and light in color as to be almost indistinguishable. The nose was well shaped, the mouth large and irregular. There was in fact nothing attractive in the whole figure, for everything from the soiled, torn calico dress to the old boots that lacked a sufficient number of buttons to keep them on well, betokened a careless indifference to anybody or anything in the world about her. falling into the pan of the apples, as they fell n the girl's hands and the ticking clock on the shelf beside the door.

Then in the distance came the sound of a slow shuffling tread. Nearer and nearer it came. Now a puff of wind drew a cloud of dust from the wake of the impetuous footsteps into the face of the girl, but she made sight of the figure in the door, quickened his pace until he reached the gate, then stopped, leaning both elbows on the fence and staring at Samantha. Still, Samantha sat on the step, never looking up nor showing by any outward sight that she was aware of any presence save her own and the kittens, as leep in the sun at her feet.

"I say, Samantha, can I come in?" This time the silent figure moved, the face actually lifted a moment, and then a voice said slowly, almost mechanically: "Don't see anything to prevent, the gate ain't fastened and Bruin is shut up in the

The voice did not sound particularly inviting, but the answer seemed to satisfy the open the gate with a shove that sent it rattling back with a bang, coming up the path and seating himself on the step. But Samantha kept on paring apples.

"I say, Samantha, can't you say nothing to a fellow? I want to talk."

fellow, but I'll be hanged if I can if you set there a-paring and a-paring and never saying a word that you're glad to see me, nor ain't one way nor t'other. I say, just drop that work, will you?" and the question was em-phasized by his taking the pan of apples from Samantha's lap and placing it on the ground just beyond her reach.

There was a momentary struggle on the girl's part as the strong hand caught the pan with an energy that sent the apples rolling one against the other, while one bounded over the side of the pan and rolled away, as if glad to be free once more. Then she dropped her hands into her lap, gave herself little stretch, leaned her head against the

"All right, talk away and I'll listen." "Samantha, I've made up my mind to one thing. I'm going away. I'm sick to death of this life and this place. Here I ain,t no count, only just Sam Orr's chore boy, and I'm going off somewhere where nobody don't know me, where nobody can't point at me and say: "Oh, he ain't no good, his father's in rrison, you can't expect much of him."

longer. Only this morning as I was ploughing up a piece of meddar land, I heard Jim Wilkes say to Sam: "Young Brad there, he seems to be quite a worker—must make something out of him." Sam smiled that durned smile of his—I call it prayer meeting smile-and says: "He's a pretty good worker," then speaking up loud so I could hear—"but it isn't every one that would take a convict's son into the family, you know, there's no telling how he may turn out." And then I just put the plough through the ground at a great rate, as if I was grinding up all them old hypocrites into mince meat together. I'm just going off, that's what I am, and if I don't make myself Folks needn't be down on a fellow because his father went and done something wrong!"

"I know Brad," and the listless expression left his hearer's face and there was a kindly gleam in the eyes, "it's a mean shame be easier for you to go somewhere else, only hate to have you go, Brad. There won't be any one to cheer me up when I get down-hearted, and how can I get along without you to help me in my—you know," and the girl lowered her voice and glanced around as if she feared even the trees might snatch word of her secret.

"That's so, 'Manthy, 'twill be just like pulling teeth to leave you, but what has to come has to come, and there ain't no way to come 'round it. Mayhap I can help you more by going. I say, when will you have it done? I'm going pretty plagued quick, and I might take it along with me." He paused a moment, waiting for an answer, then broke out, "Oh, I forgot, I saw the first meddlar pink to day; stuck a stick side of it so we could find it again easy.

"You did?" and the girl's face lighted up as she jumped to her feet. "Where? Come and shew me," and catching up her hat from the window seat, she was at the gate before more moderate Brad had arisen from his hard seat.

Down the road they went together, a curious looking couple so thought the Rev. Mr. Menson as he rode slowly down the dusty village street. But he didn't go far before he turned back

"I say, Samanthy, tell me again the name of those pinks, will you? I'll be blest if I "Arathusa bulbosa," came from the depths of dust, and a shower of dirt was sent vindictively over the doorsill. "Arathusa bulbosa, bulbosa on account o the little bulb it grows from. It's an orchid," and Samantha stood in the doorway, leaning on her broom.

"You can't forget it if you only stop to think. It's the same family as callapogan, ladyslipper and ladytresses—good-by," and Brad gazed a moment at the open doorway, put his hands in his pockets, muttered something to himself, gave a low whistle, then turned and went slowly down the road. A week from that day saw Brad taking his departure. Samantha walked with him the whole of

In the magazine reading world there was a little excitement as to who the new author was, for in a recent issue of one of the most prominent magazines of the day had ap-peared an article entitled, "Wild Flowers of the Connecticut Valley." Hawker's catarrh cure will at once give relief in mild cases, and a thorough course of treatment, accompanied by the use of Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic, in extreme cases, will cure the most aggravated case of Chronic catarrh.

The reader will perhaps remember cases, some most remarkable ones, of persons who had used other treatment without benefit, but who were completely cured by Hawker's catarrh cure and Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic. There have been many such.

Hawker's catarrh cure will knock out a cold in the head quicker than any other remedy. It costs but 25 cts. per box, is sold by all druggists and dealers, and is manufactured only by the Hawker Medicine Co. (Ltd.), St. John, N. B., and New York City.

This year 100,000 more logs went down the Kennebec than during 1894. Kennebec lumbermen are planning for a greater assault on the spruce forests this season than ever. Already the different concerns that have begun operations indicate a cut of 60,000,000 feet, and this, together with those who will start in later on, will probably bring the Moose River and lake cut up to 100,000,000. By the Queen's wish, the room in the Kensington Palace where her majesty was born, and which was closed for years, has been specially done up this year, so as to present the exact apearance which it had in 1819. It is understood that her majesty will in future allow the room to be visited by special friends of the court. The gold and brass work of the room, although much worn, is still in a fair state of preservation.

dealing with this subject was introduced into our provincial legislature at the last session, but as it dealt with a subject entirely new to the people of this province it was not deemed advisable to push it through all its stages at that session. So far, however, as we have been able to understand the system, from a brief study of it, we think it is a question that should not be lost sight of.

What did it all mean? Had the Fenians come to take us in our beds? At last we found out. A large number of the elite of Springfield had assembled outside the house of the bride and groom to give them a sainte. After a while window after window lighted up, a door opened, the crowd filed in. Then there were congratulations, light refreshments, were congratulations, light refreshments wedding march on the organ, three cheers another volley and all was peace and quiet Fish Facts. British Columbia expects to export this year about 25,000 pounds of salmon.

Herring were never so plentiful off the Massachusetts coast as this year, and the catch so far has been pheomenally large.

Mackerel have struck in all along the Luneuburg shore and boat fishermen are improving the chance to make up a season's work.

per pound.

Mackerel will soon be a luxury that can be indulged in only by the wealthier classes if the supply does not increase, which is not likely, especially this season.

The herring catch at Shang Harbor, Yarmouth, which is about over for this season, has been unusually good, large quantities of good fat herring having been caught.

Nearly all the vessels comprising the Roman mackerel fleet have left Halifax for home, the majority of them with very small fares. The present season has been one of the poorest ever experienced in the mackerel fishery. f the supply does not increase, which is not fishery.

The total pack of lobsters for P. E. Island this year is 5,091,000 one pound cans, a decrease of 79,000 compared with last year. This/total was the product of 92 factories. In afdition, 11,800 pounds of live lobsters werk exported to Boston alone.

The total receipts of new salt mackerel at Boston, New York and Philadelphia from foreign ports have been 27,671 barrels; to same date last year 38,972 barrels. The receipts this year comprise 23,771 barrels from Canada, 12,654 from Ireland and 1,446 barrels from Norway.

Herring are being caught off the Shelburne coast in abundance. Two nets the other morning are said to have contained about fifteen barrels. This is certainly a providential send for though the market is very low yet it is hoped that something will be realized to help make up the shortage in the general catch of other fish.

Summerside Journal:—Smaller quantities of oysters are being shipped this season than in former years. This is due to two causes—the increasing scarcity of the bivalves, and the unusually windy weather, which interferes greatly with fishing. However, high prices prevail, and this is the best compensation for the scarcity of fish.

To add to the shortage caused by the great scarcity of mackerel in the waters along the coast of Nova Scotia, usually prollific with them, the very blustery weather experienced during the fall months has also lessened the catch very considerably. Practical fisherman say that unless seine fishing is prohibited for a number of years the chances are that the mackerel will soon become extinct in the waters where they are now found.

From St. John to Liverpool.

From St. John to Liverpool.

At a cabinet meeting of the Dominion Government Saturday the question of providing a winter outlet for the trade of Canada was discussed. The proposition is that the country pay a yearly subsidy of $25,000 for a fortnightly service between St. John, and Liverpool, England, the rates to be as low from western points as are now offered from American ports. The proposal aims at sending goods now shipped from Portland, Me., during the winter season from a Canadian port. The Beaver Steamship line offer to make regular fortnightly trips between St. John and Liverpool, for $25,000, and a contract will likely be made. If such measures materialize St. John will greatly increase in activity. rease in activity.

Northern Michigan is swamped under a phenomenal crop of potatoes, and instead of the good crop bringing good times it has brought severe loss to very many farmers. Nothing like the present abundance was ever known before, and there is absolutely no market for prefaces there to days. or market for potatoes there to day. Many farmers put all their money into potatoes this year, and are in hard straits now be-cause, while having realized a handsome crop, they can't realized anything on it.

It Was a Perjured Affidavit.

SENSATION IN THE HOLMES CASE AT PHILADELPHIA.

Philadelphia, Nov. 18. —Argument for a new trial in the case of Holmes was heard to-day. Mr. Shoemaker, one of Holmes' counsel, presented an affidavit from a witness purported to be named Blanche Hannigan. In it the witness swore she had known Pletzel, and that he told her he intended to commit suicide. District Attorney Graham asked that the witness be called, and Mr. Shoemaker replied he did not know where she was. Then Mr. Graham called a private detective named Zwetzler to the stand. He testified that Mr. Shoemaker, weeks ago, had written out the affidavit and given him $20 to pay some one to swear to it. Then Detective Geyer was called, and testified that Swetzler had shown him the affidavit before it was signed. A woman was called to the stand who said she was the Blanche Hannigan who signed the affidavit. She swore that she knew nothing about the statements in it. Her name is Rhea, and she is matron in the fourth police district. It was at the suggestion of Geyer that she went with Swetzler and impersonated Blanche Hannigan. Shoemaker gave her $20 and took her to a notary public and there she swore to the statement. This astonishing testimony, that seemed to clearly point to a perjured affidavit, evidently surprised the court, and when Mr. Shoemaker attempted to make some confused statement Judge Thayer suggested to him that his greatest safety lay in silence. Mr. Rotan, Holmes' other attorney, stated to the court that he knew nothing of the affidavit, and then began an argument for a new trial. The main points of the reasons for asking for a new trial are that the district attorney influenced the jury in introducing evidence showing that the children were killed by Holmes, that the defence was not ready to proceed, and that the court erred on a number of points in the trial. As Mr. Rotan proceeded it became evident from the questions of the court that the application for a new trial would be refused. SENSATION IN THE HOLMES CASE AT PHILA attention of the state department to the rumor that the American steamer Laurada had violated the neutrality laws of the United States in landing an armed force on Cuban soil to aid the insurgents. Secretary Olney transmitted Senor de Lome's protest to the treasury department, and Secretary Carlisle to-day telegraphed the collectors of customs along the Atlantic coast to look out for the Laurada, and seize her wherever found. The department of justice was advised of Minister de Lome's communication, and United States marshalls have been instructed to co-operate with the treasury officials in detaining the vessel when found.

The Laurada was formerly the British steamer Empress and was given American registry by a special bill passed through last congress. She is supposed to have cleared from New York about the 21st October for Jamaica ports. It is alleged that after leaving port she took on board, at some point on Long Island sound, Emanuel Cespedes, the Cuban leader, and 45 followers, and a large lot of arms and ammunition. It is stated that the scabby sheep came from the United States through Montreal. The incident will probably end in a bill excluding all live stock from being landed in Great Britain. This is what the nostile agriculturists seek.

Falling Off in Consumption of Spirits. Ottawa, Nov. 8.—In the annual report of the Department of Inland Revenue just issued, the consumption of spirits, beer and tobacco, per capita of the population shows a considerable reduction. The per capita consumption of spirits was .66 gallons, against .74 in 1894; beer, 3.47 gallons, against .72 gallons; tobacco, 2.16 pounds against 2.26. The revenue per head derived from these articles was:—On spirits, $1.12, against $1.23 in 1894; on beer, 16 cents, against 20 cents; on tobacco, 64 cents, against 68 cents.

PAGE WOVEN WIRE FENCE Has the Highest Award

In the World!

Is the unequalified approval of every customer. Our fence has won at every Fair or Exposition where entered. But what does a practical farmer care for that? The lighting qualities of a soldler are proven on the field of battle, not no dress parade.

Don't fail to keep it before the people that ours is the only perfectly self-regulating fence offered. Don't lose sight of the great saving inposts, as with some other fences the posts alone costs as much as our fence complete.

I believe we have my belief on the fact that one string of fence sells lots more. Page fence has proved itself y far the best for farmers use, and we know from the orders already received that our business will boom with that of the farmers. armers.

was a living skeleton; the doctor said he was dying of Marasmus and Indigestion. At 13 months he weighed only seven pounds. Nothing strengthened or fattened him. I began using Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites, feeding it to him and rubbing it into his body. He began to fatten and is now a beautiful dimpled boy. The Emulsion seemed to supply the one thing needful.
