

A GHASTLY FIND—MURDER

Horribly Gashed and Battered Body Found Near Rockwood Park—Identified as Wm. Doherty of Brussels Street—No Clue to the Murderers.

(From Tuesday's Daily Sun.) Just at the end of Lover's Lane, a winding tree-shaded pathway in Rockwood Park, where lovers will walk no more for many a day, the body of a man hacked and shot and chopped and beaten as if murdered by maniacs was found yesterday afternoon.

That murder cruel and foul was the cause of his fearful death the dozens of gaping wounds about his head and body whisper with a dreary lips in the terrible and pitiful confirmation. If these are not enough to convince there remains the fact that the body when discovered was carefully hidden from view by piles of burnt wood, torn down trees, little bushes and armfuls of pulled bracken all so disposed as to effect a full concealment.

But the identity of the murderer or murderers is shrouded yet in mystery as deep as that which surrounds the death of the miser Oulton in north end a few months ago. Indeed, this instance is more inexplicable, as no motive can be ascertained that would account for the perpetration of so terrible a deed. Robbery is eliminated by the fact that the deceased was never known to possess any noticeable amount of money or valuables, and the life led by the young man is hardly one that would have made him bitter enough enemies to warrant the theory of revenge entering into the case.

So the police have started on the case with but little to work upon, and so far have been unable to come upon any definite clue as to the assassin.

MISSING SINCE FRIDAY. Young Doherty has been missing from his home on Brussels street since noon of Friday last. His father is concerned as a digger of sewers, and that day was working on Brittain street. Shortly before noon the young man left his home, taking with him his father's dinner. A boy by the name of Frank Higgins saw him on the way down and was told by the deceased where he was going. Mr. Doherty says that just before dinner time he reported that a young man will later be prepared to swear that he saw him.

IN THE PARK FRIDAY EVENING. As the days went on his parents became anxious and made several inquiries with no result. The mother, fearing he might have got into some trouble, sent her only other child, a young girl, up to the police station to see if any word had been heard of him there. The police knew nothing. The young man had been in the habit of absenting himself frequently from home for days at a time, so although naturally there was considerable uneasiness felt, no organized effort was made to ascertain his whereabouts. That his parents were deeply anxious is shown by a statement made by his father at the police station last night, to the effect that as soon as he heard that the unknown body had been found in the park he felt at once that it was that of his missing son, and hurried at once to the morgue to ascertain.

DISCOVERY OF BODY. The ghastly find was made yesterday afternoon about a quarter to four o'clock by a young man, Harry Beckwith, of Short street, who had gone out through the park in search of berries. The fearful discovery was made within a stone's throw of one of the most beautiful spots in all of beautiful Rockwood Park.

The pathway known as Lover's Lane, or the old military road, runs from near Lily Lake in almost an easterly direction toward the old Drury life range. It has seldom been used of late years, and through the greater part of its length is little more than a path way twisting through trees that meet overhead in quiet shade. Passing the "mush" visited bird house, it runs irregularly up the hill and over to the park boundary line, where it turns toward the left at first and then narrowing all the time twines in the opposite direction until it becomes indistinguishable among the bracken and underbrush of a piece of desolate burnt land. Right at the apparent end of the path is a sloping rocky mound, sloping further on into a steep bushy ravine. The mound is about 15 yards from the park boundary and less than a quarter of a mile from Lily Lake. Its location is shown in the plan above.

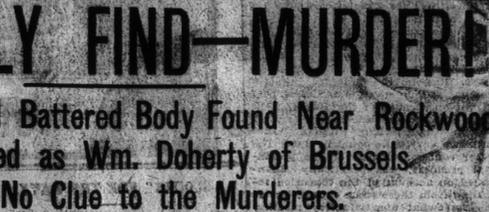

Young Beckwith was strolling along this way yesterday in search of berries when his attention was attracted by the insistent buzzing of a swarm of thousands of flies hovering over a shapeless heap of debris to the right of the summit of the mound, and a short distance down the side. Curiously, he walked over and stooping to examine what had attracted the flies, he was struck with horror to find doubled in the shapeless heap beneath a pile of heaped up timber, low bushes and bracken, the body of a man. Pale with terror, he looked no further, but hastened to spread the news of his horrible discovery.

THE POLICE NOTIFIED. It was about five o'clock when the word reached Chief of Police Clark in the central station. He immediately sent Officer George Earle to the place, followed a few minutes later by Deputy Chief Jenkins and Detective Killen. Coroner Berryman was notified, and in a short time he met the others at the place where the body lay. Nothing had been disturbed. The body lay a short distance down the side of the mound, as illustrated in the diagram. Piled upon it were a half dozen or so large pieces of burnt timber, many fragments of roots of trees, bushes and other debris gathered indiscriminately from the burnt land which surrounded the place. Stones were not lacking to complete the pile, and all around was evidence where such had been removed and other material gathered. One large piece of timber near by showed that an attempt had been made to add it also to the heap, but the effort had been given up, as its weight had evidently proved too great. By the size of the log it should have made an easy lift for two men.

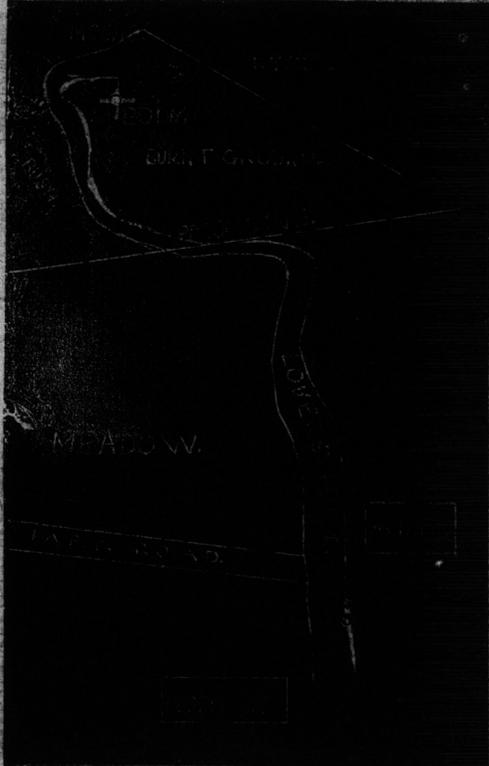

POSITION OF BODY. When the debris had been removed the body was revealed huddled on the side of the mound, sprawling like something thrown "downside up" and "upside down." It lay on the left side, face downward, the head uphill toward the path and the feet pointed toward a clump of alders lower down. The face was caddled in the hollow of his left arm, hiding the worst of the wounds. The coat was pulled up over the head and the cap a grey tweed with a peak—was lying a little to one side. All around was evidence that this might work up into future evidence was carefully noted by the police.

A park employe stated to the Sun last evening that at about 3.45 p. m. Mr. Henry, the park superintendent, came to him and requested him to assist another of the employes in watching the body of the unknown man until the coroner came. He did so. The coroner shortly arrived and viewed the remains, after which he instructed Officer Geo. Earle to examine the clothing, which resulted in the finding among other things of a "little book" and an enamelled scarf pin with the royal coat of arms.

Not till the body had been straightened and turned over did the fearful nature of the death causing wounds become manifest. Hardly a square inch of skull or face was free from gash or bruise or deep jagged holes. The intent of the murderer had been carried out with maniacal ferocity. At least thirteen wounds of varying depth and extent were evident upon the most superficial examination. The body had without doubt lain there several days, and warm weather and the work of the myriad minute scavengers of the nature of the wounds difficult of determination by cursory inspection. One hole down on the right side of the body was insignificant, the result of a bullet. A deep gash about an inch and a half long, sloping downward over the left eye was just as certainly caused by a sharp heavy instrument, such as an axe. Other marks, such as a deep furrow all over the head might have been caused in various ways. Some could have been caused perhaps by sharp stones, others, star-shaped and deep, looking like bullet wounds, or might have been due to blows from some irregular pointed instrument, and others from their situation and appearance made it almost impossible to form an opinion regarding their origin. Among the more noticeable marks were a clean gash along the side of the head over the left ear; a horribly successful wound, chopping through the left ear and into the skull behind; a narrow cut under the left side of the jaw; a tear under the lower lip; two deep holes, one on the right eye and two of almost exactly similar nature on the region of the right cheek bone; an extensive wound almost directly in the back of the head and two small or ones back of the left ear. After a superficial examination of the body it was placed upon a sliver belonging to the park and brought into the morgue, around which excited crowd soon gathered.

Up to this time things had developed no clue to the identity of the murdered man, and several were allowed to view the body with the idea of ascertaining from the light of day. As the body lay there on the morgue table with the face dirt besmeared and distorted, positive identification seemed difficult. The remains were evidently those of a slim young man, under 20 years of age, about 5 feet 10 or 11 inches in height, with black hair, narrow complexion, pointed nose, narrow slanting forehead and pointed receding chin. A weak face, characteristics and not very intelligent, but not necessarily a criminal one. On the body were a pair of badly torn and much battered, black, heavy, strap gaiters, a soft fannel collarless shirt, a vest of some dark material and a black serge coat.

Crowds assembled and gathered morbidly around the morgue. Several were allowed in, but for a long time no one could make any possible assertion regarding the name of the murdered man. Officer Geo. Earle for a few moments, seemed to might be a nephew of his, who works in Bell's blacksmith shop on Union street, but he could not be sure. He thought it was Doherty, but couldn't swear to it, though all had been acquainted with the young man. The father of the murdered boy, came hurrying in with a half formed fear in his heart, and in the decreasing light even he could not be sure that the face was that of his son. Taken into the police station, however, he positively identified the cap and the scarf pin mentioned above as those belonging to William and make the assurance more sure he started for home to bring the boy's mother to see him as he lay. Shortly afterward young Higgins and Goodspeed were again taken to the morgue by the police. The face of the dead man was washed of some of its concealing clotted blood and earth, and as it was then placed in the glare of a lantern "That's Willie Doherty," he swore, "that's my own, I calculated both boys."

When Mr. Doherty went to his home on Brussels street to acquaint his wife of his fear and to bring her to the morgue to complete the identification he found the house empty. Starting to look for her he met a Mrs. Macaulay of 128 St. Patrick street, who told him that Mrs. Doherty had been at her house at six o'clock and had been with her daughter for a house on the Red Head road beyond the poor house, where she said she was going to work. Mr. Doherty had returned there after her, but up to twelve o'clock last night they had not returned to their home.

NOT A GOOD REPUTATION. William Doherty, now murdered, was a peculiar sort of a lad. Hardly criminal, but shiftless, the police have had their eyes on him for some time, but nothing has been ever proved against him. He ran with a bad crowd and was arrested with Holm and Tobin at the time of the burglary of Cullinan's dry goods store when Officer Rankin was stabbed. His companions got two years, but no case could be made against Doherty and he was let go. He has never worked at any steady job, though he has at times assisted his father. He was one of the gang of boys that habitually loitered around the Opera House calling tickets, and was known to his companions as "Old King Brady" on account of his propensity for reading dime novels bearing upon that distinguished character. Never definitely connected with any misdemeanor, he has been under suspicion on account of his habit of picking up a number of pennies, leaves, and their male escorts around such places as the old graveyard, and the outskirts of the park. As far as could be learned he was not addicted to drink, was by no means of a quarrelsome nature and had no enemies that anyone is aware of. The nature of the task in locating the perpetrator of so mysterious and apparently motiveless a crime. As soon as the body was identified Chief Clerk and Deputy Jenkins, Detective Killen and Sgt. Kilpatrick on the case. They started immediately and were busy through nearly the whole of the night, but if they were successful in obtaining any incriminating information they kept it carefully to themselves.

The washmen and the restaurant keeper at the park have not a suggestion to offer as to the perpetration of the murder. From the position of the body when found it is more than probable that the deed was not committed there, but that the lifeless body was carried there by the murderer or murderers and slung from the summit of the little mound that ends the visible pathway there. It remains for the police to find where the murder was done. The park keepers say that it would be impossible for a team of the body had been so carried—to go through the park and road without alarming someone. So either the crime was committed near the spot where the mangled body was found or else more than one has been concerned in it and more than one pair of hands has carried the body along the winding pathway of Lover's Lane to the end of it. The case throughout is one of deep mystery and will try the patience of all who are concerned in its clearing up.

INQUEST TONIGHT. Coroner Berryman, who took charge of the body, has appointed Dr. Ellis and Macaulay to perform the autopsy. They made a superficial examination of the wounds last night and will complete their investigation this morning. Coroner Berryman will try the case of the inquest this evening.

HARRY BECKWITH'S STORY. Harry Beckwith of Short street, a young gentleman of about twenty years of age, who discovered the body, talks freely to the Sun last evening. Beckwith, who is a young man of most exemplary manners, has for some time past, been employed in the cotton factory, but lately has been working on the site of the new street school. Yesterday morning rain interfered with the work, and in the afternoon, the weather being uncertain, Mr. Beckwith decided to take matters into his own hands, and putting a paper bag in his pocket started for the park, telling his mother and sister where he was going, adding that he had taken a paper bag in case he should run across any berries, a public nuisance, which he had been ordered to pick up. He followed the road leading toward the old site by the ravine, which terminates in a fence at the end of the meadow. From there on whether it is a road or a path, but some hundred and fifty yards further on there is a choice spot for raspberries, little back from what is called the road. Knowing his ground, Mr. Beckwith started to follow a foot-path that would lead to the berry patch, when about thirty or forty feet from the road his attention was attracted by an immense swarm of flies. The object of their concentration not being more than a foot from the path Mr. B. investigated, at first he did not realize what the trouble was, but after moving one or two branches of trees and a quantity of leaves, etc., he discovered the hand and arm of a man. This was enough to start the discoverer but a few minutes to reach a man, who was working in a hay field near by. This party did not take kindly to the affair, in fact refused to have anything to do with it. Mr. B. then went in search of Mr. Henry, whom he found near the moose enclosure and drove back with him. In company with Henry and the haymaker they went to the spot where the body was. Henry, after making a careful examination, pulled the man's cap from over his head. None of the party.

RECOGNIZED THE BODY. The haymaker was left in charge, and Henry and Beckwith returned to the restaurant, Beckwith to communicate with the authorities.

In further conversation Mr. Beckwith described the spot as being one where a body would be placed for hiding rather than where a man would be killed, although there was a clearing but a few yards away that would show but few traces of a struggle. The body was a number of pennies, leaves, and it is understood some berries bushes upon which the fruit was still fresh, which would further indicate that the body had been deliberately placed where it was found. The body lay with the head close to the path.

Mr. Beckwith says that had it not been for the flies he would have probably passed by without noticing the body.

HAMPTON. Appeal in the Noted St. John Tobacco Case.

Very Wordy Arguments By Messrs. White, Hanington and Fowler—Judge Wedderburn's Charge and the Jury's Verdict.

HAMPTON, Kings Co., Aug. 1.—An appeal was argued today before Judge Wedderburn in chambers here in the case of Tribe against Jacobs, tried at the last sitting of the county court of Kings county, and a verdict rendered for the plaintiff assessing the damages at $186.55, the full amount claimed.

Mr. White expressed satisfaction with the judge's charge, but thought the verdict of the jury was in open antagonism to it. If the appeal is allowed, it will come before the supreme court at the October term.

Mr. White moved for the judgment to be set aside, and entered up for defendant, for arrest of judgment, and falling there, for a non-suit. He argued that an error existed in the form of the writ issued in the case; that there had been no acceptance of the goods under the meaning of the statute; that the goods delivered were not in accordance with the contract; that the judge did not charge the jury as to the meaning of the term "acceptance" with the law; and that the verdict was in direct opposition to the evidence given before the court.

Mr. White's argument occupied about three hours, and he was followed by Mr. Hanington, mainly on the question of the "mental attitude" of the parties interested, as laid down in Benjamin "On Sales," and claimed that it was clear from the evidence that Jacobs never "intended" to accept the goods, as shown by his acts and words, notwithstanding which the jury affirmed that he did accept them.

Mr. Fowler, in reply, said the main grounds for an appeal might be summed up in the declaration that there was no acceptance, and that the plaintiff was not the right person to sue. As to the "attitude" of the defendant that must be gauged by his acts. He contended for the goods, received them into his own warehouses, where no one could enter without his permission, and held them subject to his own and only will and order.

His honor recalled to the minds of counsel his request that the jury should carefully listen to his decision upon the application for non-suit, and the minute details he had given of the cases upon which counsel relied, as

In many parts of Canada a good deal of damage is annually done in grain, hay and pasture fields by the common woodchuck or groundhog. Not only is a considerable amount of grain or fodder consumed by these animals, but much more is trampled upon and destroyed, while the open burrows are occasionally responsible for accidents to horses employed in harvesting.

The equipment necessary for this sort of woodchuck hunt consists of a bottle of carbon bisulphide, a bundle of old cotton or other cloth, a pall and a spade. The pall is first filled with dirt and set near the hole ready to turn in; then a piece of cloth is placed between thumb and finger, saturated with about an ounce of the liquid, and immediately thrown as far into the burrow as possible.

DEATH OF JAMES KELLY.

L. O. R. Travelling Passenger Agent, at Halifax, Monday Afternoon—Was a Well Known Resident of St. John.

The Sun's Halifax correspondent telegraphed early last evening as follows: James Kelly, L. O. R. travelling passenger agent, died this afternoon at the Queen Hotel, aged 51. He had been ill for some days with kidney trouble. This afternoon he rose from bed, shaved, and his room was dark and he expired. The body was forwarded to St. John by tonight's express.

News of Mr. Kelly's death will be heard with regret by a large circle of personal friends, coupled with deep sympathy for his bereaved wife and family. Mr. Kelly had been telegraphed by Halifax last evening when advised by wire of her husband's demise.

Mr. Kelly was 41 years of age. He was born at Carleton Place, Ireland, and came to St. John when quite a young fellow. He worked for a time in the tailoring establishment of James May, and then started business on his own account. He was very successful, and kept a clothing store on Market square, and after a time in the West-Union building. He entered the mercantile business in 1870, and was for some time a travelling passenger agent for the Intercolonial railway.

Mr. Kelly during his active life in St. John was a foremost figure in the former society circles. He was Free Mason, an Odd Fellow, a Forester and a P. O. W. A. of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of New Brunswick. He was very prominent in Orange circles. He was a F. M. of Johnston, No. 24, and York, No. 3, L. O. L.; was also P. D. M. and P. C. M. of St. John, Co. L. O. L., and was P. G. M. of N. B. for two years. Since occupying the position of district passenger agent of the I. C. R. Mr. Kelly did not take any prominent part in society work.

R. employ in this city. Mr. Kelly and his family resided on High street, whence the funeral will take place probably at 2.30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

SWEET BREATH. When Coffee is Left Off.

A test was made to find if just the leaving off of coffee alone would produce an unpleasant odor of the breath, when coffee is left off and Postum Food Coffee used in its place.

A man from Clinton, Wis., made the experiment. He says: "A year ago I left off drinking coffee and tea and began to use Postum. For several years previous my system had been in wretched condition. I always had a thickly furrowed, bilious tongue and foul breath, often accompanied with severe headaches. I was troubled all the time with chronic constipation, so that I was morose in disposition and almost discouraged.

At the end of the first week after making the change from coffee to Postum I witnessed a marvelous change in myself. My once coated tongue cleared off, my appetite increased, breath became sweet and the headaches ceased entirely. One thing I wish to state emphatically, you have in Postum a virgin remedy for constipation. For I certainly had about the worst case ever known among mortals and I am completely cured of it. I feel in every way like a new person.

During the last summer I concluded that I would experiment to see if the Postum kept me in good shape or whether I had gotten well from just leaving coffee off. I quit Postum for quite a time and drank coffee and water. I found out before two weeks were past that something was wrong and I began to get worse as of old. It was evident the liver was not working properly, so I became convinced it was not the avoidance of coffee alone that cured me, but the great value came from the regular use of Postum.

The programme for the coronation day was announced by Mr. Prof. Watson. He had a number of unique photographs taken by himself on exhibition at the school. He got three hundred and sixty small images on one plate. The fine point of needle looks blunt and the edge of a sharp razor full of dents in photos made by combining the microscope and camera. Some of these things have never been done before.

The second meeting, with a Bible reading, led by Rev. J. B. Gough.

The next theme was a review of the county field, including the county meeting, and later the parish officers' reports. A report was read by Rev. Mr. Hubby. It spoke of many excellent parish conventions.

Some parishes had held three conventions, several held two, some one, and one held four. Some had not held any conventions, and in these Sunday school work individually was not at its best.

The statistics were incomplete. Some schools yet to be reported from. Two executive committee meetings had been held, and sub-committees had done the work allowed to them.

Several features of this report elicited discussion. Only a few parish officers were present. Havelock parish shows out as standard in its efforts.

Two normal classes had been started and one school had been greatly increased in attendance. An effort is being made to establish ten centres for normal work at Corn Ridge and Havelock Corner.

Committees were appointed by the president after which "Our Sunday school scholars" became the theme for consideration.

In the absence of another person, Rev. Mr. Rainie said a few words on the teacher's attitude towards the scholars through the week.

This subject was dealt with as fully as is feasible if the person had been there. All felt its importance. The consideration of these subjects was a good answer to any who think teachers can get no help in such a convention.

After the offerings and questions the meeting adjourned till 2 p. m. Mr. Hubby closing with prayer.

ARCHBISHOP IRELAND

Denounces the Fervid Talk of Catholic Agitators,

And Points Out That it is the Duty of All Loyal Sons of the Church to Calmly and Confidently Leave the Settlement of Catholic Affairs in the Philippines in the Hands of the American Government and His Holiness Leo XIII.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 3.—Archbishop Ireland, preaching this morning in the cathedral, said:

"The Apostle Paul gives this counsel: 'Not to be more wise than it behooves to be wise, but to be wise unto peace and according as God hath directed us to acquiesce in the measure of faith.'"

"In the mind of the apostle things most excellent, if made use of in undue measure, and without proper regard to circumstances, may become a hindrance to things peaceful and hurtful. And this is undoubtedly what is happening in the case of the fiery zeal in defense of Catholic interests, which seems to be covered by the name of patriotism, and which is the subject of the present time among certain classes of American Catholics. The interests of the church, it is said, are made to suffer in the hands of the government in its newly acquired dependencies, and the call to arms is sounded from the rostrums of Catholic societies and through the columns of Catholic newspapers, the perturbation of the whole Catholic body, and indeed, of the whole country."

"Who are they, who complain and protest and call upon Catholics to be up and doing? Are they those who might claim to represent the church in its general or local interests? Has the Sovereign Pontiff spoken? Certainly he has not complained. Rather he has been heard from in very different tones. Has he not said: 'What authority in the dependence has invoked our aid? In no instance have they so acted. Where they have been heard from in the case of Porto Rico and of Cuba, it was to tell us in plainest words that they had no objection to our intervention. The archbishops of the states met together once a year in Washington. They have sounded no alarm. What ever complaints have been heard come from individual Catholics or societies of Catholics. Societies of Catholics are organized for purposes of their own, usually with the intent to secure special relief for some class of members thereof. Restricted to their purposes they are within their sphere and are entitled to respect. To venture beyond these purposes and to assume to represent the church in Rome, or to demand that the church should be a party to their quarrels, is quite another thing. It must be remembered that soldiers of the church, as soldiers of an army of whatsoever kind, whether singly or whether in companies or regiments, must await the action of the command before they undertake to act for the whole organization."

"Catholics have in the past suffered much from calumny and distrust; and their complaints here, as they have done to fair play and to justice, are the more to be respected. It is the duty of the equitable treatment which they claim for themselves and their religious faith, from their fellow citizens of the government. Let justice be done to fair play and to justice, before they turn to high expedients in their own dealings with their fellow citizens and with the country."

"Most cautious at all times must Catholics be. Do not stir up untoward prejudice and discontent, the latent of which, as experience teaches, there is no small share here and there in the community, and which but too ready is disposed to fan into fire and flame. Nothing is more dreaded in America than hatred and war among citizens in the name of religion. It behooves Catholics to be cautious, and to be moderate in their demands, and to be moderate in their demands, and to be moderate in their demands."

"The simple approach among them to form a political party on the basis of religious interests would be to the detriment of the interests of the public peace."

"Nor is public agitation necessary in America to redress grievances. I say it advisedly, and I am prepared to stand by it here, as I am prepared to stand by it there, that the only way to redress grievances, so far as circumstances may allow, if it is sought through quiet and reasonable methods from the legal representatives of the government, is the only way to redress grievances, so far as circumstances may allow, if it is sought through quiet and reasonable methods from the legal representatives of the government."

"And let Catholics be careful lest by imprudent agitation and repeated mistrust of the government of America, they instill into the minds of their fellow citizens the notion that as Catholics they are disposed to form themselves into a people apart, ever dissatisfied with America and its institutions, ever ready to complain, ever anxious to find a plea upon which to rest their murmurings. The Catholic body will never prosper in America, unless it be thoroughly imbued with the spirit of the country and with a deep love for its welfare. To be one with the country is the lesson which Pope Leo is ceaselessly teaching Catholics in every country; it is the lesson which I am confident he would wish Catholics in America to take to heart and to practice, even were there in us doing some sacrifice to be made."

"As to matters in the Philippines, we cannot discuss them. They are for the time being beyond our reach, and they are the subject of negotiations between the government of America and the Sovereign Pontiff. To take at the present such matters into our own hands would be to disturb the wisdom and good will of the Pontiff, and of this loyal Catholics should not be capable; it would be to treat with discourteous ingratitude the administration in Washington, and this, as true Americans, Catholics will not permit themselves to do. The logic of the situation, in presence of strange complications for church and state, which are being presented to a mutual conference between the head of the church and a representative of the state is a clear and dignified way to a final and permanent settlement."

"Leo XIII. saw this. Theodore Roosevelt saw this. Lap took the initiative, proposed the conference and asked the government to expose frankly and thoroughly its views. The president and his advisers accepted the proposition. What more could have been done by the administration, to prove its goodwill and sense of justice? If the administration had refused to send a representative to Rome, or to demand that the church should be a party to their quarrels, would have been; and now when we have sent a representative to Rome and agree to the further proposal of the Vatican to transfer negotiations to Manila, clamorers are still raised.

"Some people are born to clamor, and privilege to clamor must be allowed to them. Be it so; but we shall insist that they claim in their own name and not in the name of the church in America, and for our own part we shall hold our souls in peace, leaving church interests in the Philippines to one who understands them at least as well as we do, and who will be as wise in disposing of them as we could well hope to be—Leo XIII."

Qual and Rooker, torpedo boat No. 32 and the port guard boat No. 33, the latter ship being in charge. Since the termination of hostilities and the consequent taking of the oath of allegiance only one vessel is now left on duty, and where necessary the electric search lights of the vessels were thrown round every half hour, one light every two hours now sufficient. The military guard on the islands continues for a short time.

Government steamers and launches now run continually during the day between the islands and the main town of Hamilton to convey the prisoners, all except the hundred or so who are allowed to spend the day in Hamilton as they please, but are obliged to return at sunset. Any who have had sufficient means to pay their own passage home have been allowed to go, and quite a number have done so.

The boys have been taken on a visit to the dock yard and otherwise entertained. The officers have called on the governor and have generally been entertained at luncheon, etc. In a word all are enjoying life and have not the least complaint to make.

The steamer Rosslyn Castle reached Bermuda on July 26 and was to take away some 350 of the prisoners. The str. City of Vienna is shortly expected to reach there, and will carry to Cape Town between 1,000 and 1,200.

RIVER RUNS AWAY FROM CITY.

Leaves Concordia, Sewer Without Outlet and Leaves New Bridge Useless.

CONCORDIA, Kan., July 31.—The Republican River, since the flood of last Sunday, has changed its channel and left the city a mile to one side. The new channel starts about a mile and a half north and west of the city and joins the old one again about a mile and a half northeast, ruining several fine farms and leaving the Concordia mill and electric light plant without the water power by which they have been largely operated.

The city will be compelled to extend its sewers over a mile to secure an outlet, while the county must build another expensive bridge, the costly one which formerly spanned the river being now more than a mile from water.

POPE WANTS TO PLEASE U. S.

ROME, Aug. 2.—The delay in appointing an apostolic delegate to Manila is due to the desire of the Vatican to please the Washington authorities by sending to the Philippines an American prelate, and the Vatican is now awaiting letters from the United States. The prelate, who is thought likely will accept, is thoroughly adapted to the position. Should the plan fall through the most probable candidate is Mr. Guild, now in the office of Cardinal Rampolla, the papal secretary of state.
