PROFITEERING CHIEF TOPIC OF DISCUSSION

Demands for Firm Handling of Those Who Are Adopting "Get Rich Quick" Methods Featured in House Proceedings.

ISPIRITLESS DEBATE WITHOUT INCIDENT

Opposition Speakers Are All Showing Themselves Primed to Fight Against Ratification of Treaty.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 5.—Demands for firm handling of the profiteer were again the feature, today, of the House debate on the address. Mr. Demers, of St. John-Berville, thought the problem of the cost of living was of more importance to Canadians than ratification of the Peace Treaty by the Dominion parliament. It was high time for the government to take speedy action to avoid further crimes and possible revolution. As to the ratification of the treaty, that, according to Mr. Demers, would result only in Canada binding herself to financial and military participation in any war caused by the dereliction of one of the signatories.

From other opposition members came criticisms of the government in regard to the cost of living, with the further plea for an amnesty in favor of the defaulters under the Military Service Act. To the latter plea, Dr. Edwards (Freemont) replied that it was useless to go after defaulters "with feather dusters or ice-cream cones." They had failed to do their duty. The cost of living, too, was not a new problem. But it aroused attention today because it affected those not affected before.

On the whole, the debate was spiritless and almost without incident. There was every expectation it would expire before the House rose. The acting leader of the opposition intimated that there were others, however, and it was adjourned. As debate on the Peace Treaty has right of way between Monday and Thursday, it is unlikely that debate on the address will be resumed before next Friday.

SENATE OF U. S. PASSES BILL FOR ENFORCEMENT

An Amendment to Bill Provides for the Liquor and Drug Prohibition Act in the Panama Canal Zone.

Washington, Sept. 5.—The prohibition enforcement bill was passed by the Senate today, after a record vote, and virtually in the form it came from the committee. The measure now goes to Congress for discussion of amendments needed in the House bill by the Senate.

The only material change made in the bill in the Senate was the addition, by amendment, of the Liquor and Drug Prohibition Act for the Panama Canal Zone. This measure has not yet been acted on by the House. An eleven-hour session, by Senator Shields, Democrat, Tennessee, to render ineffective the whole solution of the measure referring to enforcement of war prohibition, is now being the only one cast in favor of it. His amendment would have limited the operation of the war time law to the six states in which demobilization camps are located.

As it passed the Senate and goes to conference, the bill defines as an indictable offense any beverage containing more than one half of one per cent. of alcohol.

The Senate modified, however, some of the most rigid provisions of the House bill, including that affecting private stocks of alcoholic beverages held for personal use.

PREMIER OF P. E. I. HANDS IN CABINET RESIGNATION

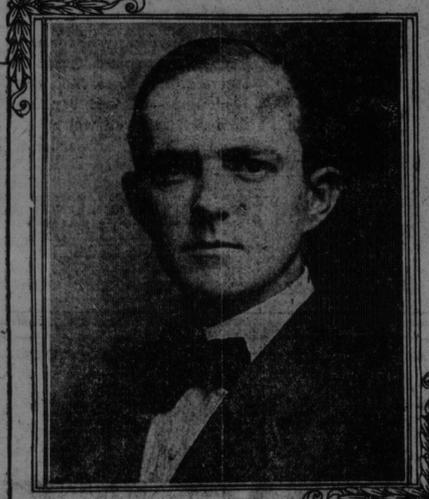

After Conference With His Supporters J. H. Bell Will Form a New Government.

Charlottetown, P. E. I., Sept. 5.—Premier Arsenault handed in the resignation of himself and government yesterday and the acting governor, Chief Justice Matheson, called on Mr. J. H. Bell to form a new government. The latter decided to confer with his supporters before submitting the proposal of the new cabinet. After a meeting next Monday night the new cabinet will probably be sworn in by the acting governor, Hon. Murdoch McKinnon, if he is officially installed in office by that time. In the meantime Premier Arsenault continues in office.

Mr. D. D. McKenzie, Liberal House Leader, Classed Among Profiteers

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 5.—Mr. D. D. McKenzie, Liberal house leader, can be a profiteer if he wants to. It was discovered today that unlike all other public servants, including the Prime Minister and members of the cabinet, the leader of the Opposition draws his salary by the session instead of by the year. This means that Mr. McKenzie is entitled to $14,000 for two sessions in addition to two indemnities of $2,500 each, making a total of $19,000 for the year, or seven thousand dollars more than goes to the Prime Minister.

MYSTERY IN MURDER OF NASHVILLE LAWYER

Robin J. Cooper, a Nashville attorney, whose trial for the shooting of Edward W. Carmack, formerly United States Senator, in 1908 attracted country-wide attention, was murdered at Nashville, Tenn., under mysterious circumstances. Cooper's body was taken from Richmond Creek, soon after his blood-stained automobile had been found on a bridge near his home in the fashionable Belle Meade Park section. The skull had been crushed, but there were evidences that a violent struggle had taken place before the fatal blow was struck.

BOARD OF COMMERCE WILL FIX PROFITS ON ALL NECESSITIES

The Fixing of Profits Will Necessitate the Establishing of Prices Which Must Necessarily Vary According to Different Localities—Prices Will Assuredly be Lower Than Now.

Ottawa, Sept. 5.—"It means that we will fix profits on everything, just as we have done on sugar," said W. F. O'Connor, vice-chairman of the Board of Commerce today, when asked as to the exact contents of last night's announcement that the board will make a series of inquiries and afterwards fix a scale of profits, to exceed which will be an offence with a heavy penalty. Judge Robson, chairman of the board, left last night for the west and Mr. O'Connor will go next week to Toronto, then to Hamilton and next to Montreal. "The fixing of profits," said Mr. O'Connor, "involves the fixing of the price but makes allowance for varying conditions in varying zones. After making inquiries upon which we are now starting, and establishing machinery to continue them, we will be able to ascertain what is the actual cost, and then determine what is a fair profit thereon. The next step will be to set a date at which the price, the result of the fixation of profits, will be effective. These prices will be lower than what now prevail.

Special to The Standard. Fitchburg, Mass., Sept. 5.—Miss Mildred Pearl Aubrey and her sister, Miss Lillian Aubrey, were married within thirty minutes of each other at St. Bernard's church today. Lillian Aubrey was married to Ernest DeLorme of Montreal, Que. at 9 o'clock and Rev. Fr. James J. Donnelly, and the Nuptial Mass, which followed, was celebrated by Rev. Fr. Ralph O'Neill. Mildred Aubrey was married at 8:30 to Ovide H. Charron of St.

LAUREL LIBERALS FAIL TO APPRECIATE NEW POSITION CANADA OCCUPIES IN WORLD

Special to The Standard. Ottawa, Sept. 5.—A clear cut issue between the two parties on the question of the ratification of the Treaty of Peace seems to be developing. Having opposed throughout the war the participation of Canada to its fullest extent, the opposition is carrying out the logical conclusion of its position, by now objecting to Canada's becoming a member of the League of Nations. Mr. Joseph Demers, member for St. John-Berville, in his speech today, pointed out that Canada was governed by the British North America Act. Under this act there was no power to bind Canada for any military participation, except for the defence of the country. Yet this was what was being done by Canada becoming a signatory to the League of Nations. The Prime Minister had said that Canada had now a new international status. He asked what were the changes which had been made which had changed the Dominion's status? What were the constitutional changes? He was absolutely convinced that there was no power in the hands of the Dominion to assume the obligations it had. By signing this treaty the Canadian plenipotentiaries had violated the constitution of Canada. Mr. Demers claimed that Canada should not ratify the treaty, as we were not a nation in the accepted international sense of the word. If ever there was a great war again in which the Empire was involved, he was sure Canada would sign voluntarily offer to assist, but he added, "why now tie our hands? Why not keep our liberty? As for myself, personally, I am very much inclined to vote against the ratification of the treaty, because it contains no reason for Canadian ratification of the treaty, when it was already ratified by the Imperial Parliament. The only consequence of Canadian action would be to bind Canada to military and financial participation in European wars. He said that Canada was neither a great power nor a small nation. There were no clauses in the treaty which would protect Canada from aggression. Why then should we assist other nations. He was of the opinion that it was Canada's duty to devote herself exclusively and entirely to the industrial and economical reconstruction of the country without any interference in the affairs of the rest of the world.

Priests Are Britain To Examine Call Halt On Cheese

Court Enquiry Being Conducted by Counsel for Sister Basile to Establish if Catheradum Were Attainable.

Kingston, Ont., September 5.—Rev. Father Kinealy, of Kingston Mills, and Rev. Father Harrigan, of Deseronto, two of the Roman Catholic priests who were served with restraining orders last night in connection with the Archbishop Spratt vs. Sister Basile case were examined this morning before Judge Lavelle by Mr. B. Cunningham, the counsel for Sister Basile in an effort to establish whether the "catheradum" were attainable or not. Father Kinealy testified that he had received a sum of money passing from a daughter church to the mother church, from a benefice to a see for the purpose of carrying out the work of the diocese. He claimed that it had nothing to do with any individual. He therefore denied that he had ever paid anything to Archbishop Spratt or on his behalf. Father Harrigan said he paid the Catheradum for the current year from his parish on July 23rd, last, or before he received the restraining order. It amounted to one hundred and twenty-five dollars. Mr. Cunningham made arrangements to have Archbishop Spratt examined on Friday, October 3rd.

FIRE AT SUSSEX DESTROYS COL. BEER HOMESTEAD

The Splendid Work of a Bucket Brigade Prevented Further Loss to Other Property Holders.

Special to The Standard. Sussex, Sept. 5.—At eight o'clock this evening the Col. Beer homestead, situated on the Holman farm on the outskirts of the town, was totally destroyed by fire. The Holman residence, and other buildings, including a big barn that contained a hundred and twenty-five tons of hay, were saved from destruction by the splendid work of a bucket brigade formed from the Sussex fire department and other volunteer workers. As the fire was outside the town limits the fire hydrant was far distant from the burning building to be utilized. The fire is supposed to have started from a defective fuse. The wind which was very high at the time of the fire was luckily blowing in a direction that carried the sparks away from the other buildings.

GERMAN TROOPS CONTINUE TO BE SENT TO RUSSIA

Polish Authorities in London Informed That Transfer of Troops to Russian Formations Goes on Despite Denials.

London, Sept. 4.—(Reuters).—Reuters is informed by the Polish authorities in London that the transfer of German troops to Russian formations in the Baltic provinces is still continuing despite numerous official German denials. In this connection the following remarks by the German Independent Socialist party, "Freiheit" are interesting. The Freiheit says: "The official communique is a lie from beginning to end. We consider it to be an undoubted fact that whole German military formations, with complete equipment, have passed over and are passing over to the Russian army and the whole of Courland is full of German soldiers in Russian uniforms. That General Von Der Goltz is doing his utmost to assist the reactionary Russian troops is proved by the fact that German doctors receive circulars from the record offices in Leipzig, informing them that doctors and military nurses are necessary for the Russian army which in co-operation with General Von Der Goltz, and other well known German soldiers, is carrying on the fight in the East.

COBALT MINERS' STRIKE ABOUT TO BE SETTLED

A Meeting of the Miners' Union Called for Sunday Night When it is Felt the Big Strike Will End.

Cobalt, Ont., Sept. 5.—The outcome of the Cobalt strike probably will be determined on Sunday. A meeting of the Miners' Union has been called for Sunday afternoon, and another mass meeting of the workers of the camp will be held at night. At both of these meetings the proposals submitted by the managers will be considered.

The Northern Miner today says: "It is generally expected in Cobalt that the report will be adopted."

Today the Temiskaming Independent Operators' Association, comprising a small number of the smaller mines, issued a statement signed by Stearnman, manager of the Genesee mine and president of this organization.

The statement was along similar lines to that published by the other miners' association, and it was presented to a committee of their employees this afternoon for consideration. It is understood that it provides that six hours' work, with eight hours' pay, shall constitute a Sunday shift, except in "continuous operations (mill work, etc.) and any men so employed shall be entitled to a day off during the week.

GENERAL QUIRES NOT WANTED AS PRESIDENT

Costa Ricans Demand An Election in Accordance With the Constitution.

San Salvador, Sept. 5.—A despatch from Managua says that General Juan Quires, who assumed the presidency of Costa Rica on August 12th, following the sudden departure of President Tinoco, probably has relinquished his office. A committee of well known Costa Ricans, the despatch adds, recently decided that General Quires should turn over the presidency to Dr. Francisco Barquero, who in his turn should hold elections in accordance with the constitution and the established laws of Costa Rica.

Shortly after the morning class began she sank suddenly to the floor and although doctors and nurses were almost immediately on the spot, nothing could be done to revive her. She lived for a short time after seizure but died without regaining consciousness. Miss Beaver was 27 years of age and a native of St. Peter's, C. B. The remains will be taken to her home in St. Peter's for burial.

The city solicitor was instructed by the council to proceed against the company.

PRES. WILSON'S SPEECH CAUSES PROMPT REPLY

Leading Republican Senators Bitterly Assail His Indianapolis Speech and Intimate President Could be Impeached.

RESENT HIS STATEMENTS

Accused of Participating in Russian Affairs Merely for the Purpose of Aiding Japanese in Siberia.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 5.—President Wilson's address to the country in support of the peace treaty and League of Nations evoked prompt and spirited replies from the Senate floor.

Sensators Borah, Idaho; Sherman, Illinois; Republicans, assailed statements by the president at Indianapolis and Columbus. On the other hand, Senator McComber, Republican, North Dakota, attacked the treaty reservations adopted yesterday by the foreign relations committee and presented six reservations regarded as expressing views of Republican senators in favor of reservations of "mild" type.

Helping Japan.

Referring to the president's statement at Indianapolis that under the League of Nations we can mind other people's business, Senator Borah criticized American military operations in Russia, declaring such to be an "usurpation of power" without authority under the constitution, and for the purpose of aiding Japan's Siberian policy.

Senator Sherman resented the president's assertion in Columbus, that the International Labor Conference, authorized under the peace treaty, would be held here next month regardless of whether or not the Senate had ratified the treaty by that time.

The president's attitude showed a "contemptuous disregard" of law, the Illinois Senator said, adding that officials had been impeached for lesser breaches. In lieu of the committee reservation to Article Ten of the League covenant, Senator McComber proposed a reservation merely declaring that specific action be required of Congress to make territorial guarantees effective, and that failure of Congress to act as proposed by Article Ten should not be considered a violation of the covenant.

Sub-reservations. Other sub-reservations proposed by Mr. McComber would, in the main, change only the phrasing of the committee reservations regarding the Monroe Doctrine, withdrawal from the League and action on domestic questions. Two additional reservations, presented by Senator McComber, provide for return of Shantung Province by Japan to China upon adoption of the treaty and for limitation of voting power of British colonies in the League, as to disputes with the Mother Country. The latter two provisions were covered by the committee amendments instead of reservations.

Senator McComber's reservation as to Article Ten follows: "That the advice and suggestions of the council of the league as to the means of carrying the said obligations (Article Ten) into effect, are only advisory, and that any undertaking un-

Mr. Fielding May Resign His Seat

Gossip from Shelburne-Queens Indicates That R. G. Irwin May be Federal Candidate.

"Down in Shelburne-Queens there is some talk that Mr. Fielding may resign his seat," said a gentleman from Nova Scotia, who was in the city yesterday. "Just where the base there is for such talk nobody seems to know. Mr. Fielding represented the constituency for quite a number of years before he was defeated by F. B. McCurdy in the reciprocity election. It may be possible that he intends to retire from political life, or the rumor may have reference to the next election when he may have the intention to seek another seat, as he cannot be very well sure of being returned again to the Legislature, where in the last election he was returned by acclamation as a Liberal Unionist."

"R. G. Irwin, who now has a seat in the Nova Scotia Legislature is mentioned as the Liberal candidate for the Federal vacancy, if Mr. Fielding retires from politics or seeks another constituency. While recognized as a good parliamentarian, Mr. Fielding has not been regarded as a good representative by his constituents, as he has seldom visited them except before an election."

NEW YORKERS WILL CELEBRATE MARNE ANNIVERSARY

New York, Sept. 5.—The fifth anniversary of the front line battle, and the 12th of the birth of Lafayette, will be celebrated here tomorrow with appropriate ceremonies, at which Ambassador Jusserand, and France, will be the guest of honor. At the morning exercises the speakers will include M. T. Herrick, of Ohio, who was American Ambassador to France when Marshal Joffre hurled back the German armies and saved Paris. In the afternoon a meeting will be held at the foot of the Lafayette monument.

Under the provisions of Article Ten, the explanation of which may require the use of American military or naval forces or economic measures, can be made by the action of the congress, and that failure of the congress to adopt the suggestions of the council of the League, or to provide such military or naval forces, or economic measures, shall not constitute a violation of the treaty.

PERSONAL QUARREL WITH OFFICER NOT CASE FOR MUTINY

Commander of Ship Alleges Six Members of Crew Assaulted Him — Case Dismissed.

New York, Sept. 5.—Holding that a personal quarrel, even where a member of the crew became embroiled with a ship's officer, does not constitute "mutiny" United States Commissioner McGoldrick today dismissed six members of the Steamer Castlewood's crew who were charged with mutiny by Captain Alexander Mitchell, commander of the vessel.

Captain Mitchell testified that James O. Peterson and five others of the crew assaulted him while en route here from Barbados.

The trouble started, he said, when "shore leave" was denied, and while the vessel lay in a foreign port where restrictions prohibited members of the crew leaving their ship.

The groom, who went overseas with the 24th battery early in 1916 and is now a clerk at the Fredericton post office, had as his best man, Donald Stuart, of the C. A. M. C.

HEAVY PASSENGER TRAVEL ON C. N. R. LINES

Passenger travel is remarkably heavy on all sections of Canadian National Railway Lines, and particularly so in the Eastern section where trains between St. John, Halifax, Sydney and Montreal are every day filled to capacity. The popularity of the Maritime Express and Ocean Limited is amply demonstrated by the many applications for sleeping car reservations on these well equipped through trains.

Requests for space are so numerous that extra cars are being carried and often trains run in two sections. With the rush of travel from troop steamers arriving at Halifax and Quebec this means considerable of a strain on the railway for equipment.

Passenger business, which has been very brisk all summer is likely to continue lively through the fall.

ROBERT HICKEY TAKE NECESSARY

Coroner's Jury Bring in Verdict Resulted in Death of Robert Hickey, Neglected to Recommend That Authorities Order Age Driving Cars

"We, the jury empaneled enquire into the death of Marion Janet Crawford, died, who was said to have been killed on Monday, September 1, at the General Public Hospital as the result of being struck by an automobile on the Loch Lomond Road, being operated by one Robert Hickey. We further find that the said Robert Hickey neglected to take the necessary precautions by slowing up his car and sounding his horn.

"We recommend that the proper authorities take steps to absolutely prohibit the operation of motor vehicles of all kinds by persons who are under age, as provided by law."

A. C. Wilson, foreman; John McDonald, John Jackson, F. McLean, Fred Bryden, Robert M. Auld, Charles Donald.

The above verdict was brought by the jury last night after three-quarters of an hour deliberation after hearing the evidence of William Armstrong, one of the occupants of the car which struck her, and of several eye-witnesses of the accident, which resulted in the death of the little girl.

The first witness was Dr. G. Baxter, who had attended the girl after the accident. He had been summoned by a phone message said to be from a man named Hickey, and first saw the little girl about 4 o'clock. He found her lying in a semi-conscious state, suffering from bruises on the face and legs and broken nose, and he had attended her for several days at the General Public Hospital on Sept. 1. The cause of death in his opinion was cerebral hemorrhage, following the injury and due to it. He had been called up by a Mr. Stesley on behalf of Mr. Hickey and asked how the child was.

Francis Kerr, who was appearing for Hickey, said that he was under the impression that Dr. Baxter was notifying him as to the condition of the child, and the witness said he had mistaken Hickey for Dr. Armstrong, provincial pathologist, who made the post-mortem examination on the child, gave as the cause of death fracture of the skull, pneumonia and meningitis, the two latter being due to the fracture. A person suffering from such a fracture had a very slight chance of recovery.

Marion Crawford, eleven years of age, was not sworn, but told her story of the accident. The three children, Marion, Evelyn and herself, were going from their Uncle Sandy's to the home, and Marion was a little way out in the road. She did not see the auto until it was right on them.

Evelyn Crawford, eight years of age, did not see the car until it was right up to them, and did not bear any horror. The auto seemed to be going quite fast.

James J. Power was standing at the door, about forty yards away from the scene of the accident. He did not see the car until about two seconds before it hit the child. The road at that point was straight, and the person driving the car could see for at least 75 yards. He could not say how fast the car was going, but it was very fast. After the child was struck, the auto went about 35 feet before it stopped in the ditch, he thought because of running into the ditch. The occupants of the car got out and started back towards the child, and he told them to get to a doctor as fast as they could. He picked up the child and administered first aid; he had taken her to her father's home and then gone to Johnston's and Dr. Baxter, who came back with her. The road at that point was straight and he would say about 40 feet wide. He did not know whether the car stopped or not, but had been told Mrs. Power that it did. He heard the horn sounded.

Dr. Baxter took the stand again and explained that he had not a message from Hickey through Fred Bonnars, had gone to the scene of the accident and been told the girl had been taken to the city and then gone back to Johnston's, where later he was found by Dr. Crawford.

Frank McBratney was talking to Alexander Crawford at the time of the accident. He did not see or hear the child until it was almost on the child. He heard a child call out and he called her attention to the car. He heard no horn sounded. The distance from where the child was picked up to where the car stopped was 35 feet. Marion was a little ahead of the other two children.

In answer to Mr. Kerr, the witness said the car must have been quite close when the children went out the gate. He thought it would be less than a minute from the time it went out of the gate until the little one was hit by the car.

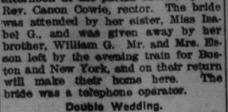

William F. Armstrong, one of the occupants of the car, said they saw children about fifty yards away, and that at that time they were on the side of the road. When they were quite close to them the one who was hit started screaming the other. He was under the impression that the car was slowing down, but could not say positively whether the brakes were applied. After the car stopped the two children went back and met another woman who told them to get a doctor. He cranked

Revised Vote Standing of Candidates Today—First Change Since August 27th

The Leaders Hold Their Own. Those Down on the List Still Down—Candidates Who Do Not Get Busy at Once Will Have Names Dropped—No New Candidates Will be Permitted to Enter the Contest After Sept. 13th.

Today the vote standing of the candidates is changed, this being the first revised vote standing since August 27th. Time was given between the revised list and the previous one in order that candidates down in the list might have a chance to build their vote up somewhere near the leaders, but in looking over the votes as they stand today, the same old leaders are there and those down in the list have not moved up at all.

What are the candidates who are not trying to get subscriptions thinking of? Are they going to pass a test?

chance to win valuable prizes right now when they are within reaching distance? Unless these candidates send in enough subscriptions to show that they are at least making a try for the prize, and if this evidence is not shown at once, they may expect that their names will be dropped from the list of candidates.

Any new candidates who are thinking of entering their names must get them in by the end of next week, as new candidates will not be accepted during the last two weeks of the contest.

ROBERT HICKEY NEGLECTED TO TAKE NECESSARY PRECAUTIONS

Coroner's Jury Bring in Verdict Regarding Accident Which Resulted in Death of Little Marion Crawford—Recommend That Authorities Take Steps to Stop Those Under Age Driving Cars.

"We, the jury empaneled to enquire into the death of Marion Crawford, find: That the said Marion Janet Crawford died on Monday, September 1, at the General Public Hospital as the result of being struck by an automobile on the Loch Lomond Road, being operated by one Robert Hickey.

"We further find that the said Robert Hickey neglected to take the necessary precautions by not slowing up his car and sounding his horn.

"And we recommend that the proper authorities take steps to absolutely prohibit the operation of motor vehicles of all kinds by parties who are under age, as provided by law.

A. C. Wilson, foreman; Louis J. McDonald, John Jackson, F. C. McLean, Fred Bryden, Robert McLean, Charles Donald.

The above verdict was brought in by the jury last night after about three-quarters of an hour deliberation, after hearing the evidence of William Armstrong, one of the occupants of the car which struck her, and of several eye-witnesses of the accident, which resulted in the death of the little girl.

The first witness was Dr. G. O. Baxter, who had attended the girl after the accident. He had been first summoned by a phone message said to be from a man named Hickey, and first saw the little girl about 4:30 standard time. He found her in a semi-conscious state, suffering from bruises on the face and legs and a broken nose, and he had attended her until her death, which occurred at the General Public Hospital on Sept. 1.

The cause of death in his opinion was cerebral hemorrhage, following the injury and due to it. He had been called up by a Mr. Seelye on behalf of Mr. Hickey and asked how the child was.

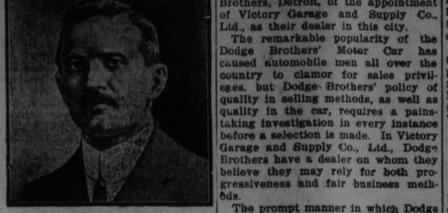

Francis Kerr, who was appearing for Hickey, said his client was under the impression that Dr. Baxter was to notify him as to the condition of the child, and the witness said he must have misunderstood him.

Dr. Abrahamson, provincial pathologist, who made the post-mortem examination on the child, gave as the cause of death fracture of the skull, pneumonia and meningitis, the two latter brought on by the fracture. A person suffering from such a fracture had a very slight chance of recovery.

Muriel Crawford, eleven years of age, was not sworn, but told her story of the accident. The three children, Marion, Evelyn and herself, were going from their Uncle Sandy's to their home, and Marion was a little way out in the road. She did not see the auto until it was right on them.

DODGE BROTHERS APPOINT DEALER Victory Garage and Supply Co., Ltd. Will Sell Popular Detroit Car in This Territory.

Announcement is made by Dodge Brothers, Detroit, of the appointment of Victory Garage and Supply Co., Ltd., as their dealer in this city.

The remarkable popularity of the Dodge Brothers Motor Car has caused automobile men all over the country to clamor for sales privileges, but Dodge Brothers' policy of quality in selling methods, as well as quality in the car, requires a painstaking investigation in every instance before a selection is made.

The prompt manner in which Dodge Brothers assumed one of the foremost positions in the automobile industry is regarded as a striking testimonial to the high regard in which their name was held by the public even when they believe they may rely for both progressiveness and fair business methods.

"Fruit-a-tives" is certainly a wonder. For a year I suffered with Rheumatism; being forced to stay in bed for five months. I tried all kinds of medicine but without getting better, and thought I would never be able to walk again.

"One day, while lying in bed, I read about 'Fruit-a-tives', the great fruit medicine, and it seemed just what I needed, so I decided to try it.

"The first box helped me, and I took the tablets regularly until every trace of the Rheumatism left me.

"I have every confidence in 'Fruit-a-tives' and strongly recommend them to every sufferer from Rheumatism."

OUCH! CORNS! LIFT CORNS OFF

Doesn't hurt a bit to lift that sore, touchy corn off with fingers.

Dr. Baxter took the stand again and explained that he had got a message from Hickey through Fred Barker, had gone to the scene of the accident and been told the girl had been taken to the city and then gone back to Johnston's, where later he was found by Dr. Crawford.

Frank McIlrath was talking to Alexander Crawford at the time of the accident. He did not see or hear the car until it was almost on the children. He heard a child call out and this called his attention to the car. He heard no horn sounded. The distance from where the child was picked up to where the car stopped was 38 feet. Marion was a little ahead of the other two children.

In answer to Mr. Kerr, the witness said the car must have been quite close when the children went out of the gate. He thought it would be less than a minute from the time they went out of the gate until the little one was hit by her car.

William F. Armstrong, one of the occupants of the car, said they saw the children about fifty yards away, and at that time they were on the side of the road. When they were quite close to them the one who was hit started across the road. He was under the impression that the car was slowed down, but could not say positively whether the brakes were applied or not. After the car stopped they walked back and met a gentleman who told them to get a doctor. He cranked

THE SEPTEMBER RUSH.

For several weeks there has been a procession along Prince William street, through the entrance to City Hall, and up the long winding stair to the City Assessors' office. People in all walks—and climbs—of life have been protesting against their tax bills. The application of the new assessment law has created a tea-cup revolution, and protests in a regular avalanche have almost swamped the Board of Assessors and engulfed the Commissioners as well.

Holders of Victory Bonds—and their name is legion—are calling to high heaven against the injustice of being compelled to pay civic taxes on the incomes of these bonds. They seem to think that when the Federal Government issues tax exempt bonds both the bonds themselves and the interest derived therefrom should be exempt from taxation of all sorts. And when told that the income from these debentures is not exempt from taxation they want to know how it is that the Dominion Government can exempt from civic taxation the seasonal indemnity payable to senators and parliamentary representatives from this city.

Another group is composed of civic employees who have had their pay raised by order of the council in recent months and who have been taxed, not on the amount of income which they now enjoy, but what they will earn—if luck is with them—the next full year at the increased rate. Policemen and firemen have been lining up in squads, each with a tax bill in his hand and a look of intense concentration on his face. They go into the hives of hollies with square jaws and a grim determination to win out or die in the attempt. And they come out with the self-satisfied look of those who have succeeded in doing the city.

Then mixed up among others there is the property owner who finds that this year he has to pay two dollars and sixty-two cents more on his three-tenement house than he paid at this time last year, and he declares in soda-fountain tones that he has been stuck for higher taxes all because he put on a new coat of paint. But the diplomatic assessors ask for his insurance policies, want to know how much he will now take for the house, dig into the amount of rent he enjoys, and send him away still dissatisfied but firmly convinced that it takes a genius to get ahead of that bunch after all.

With the returned soldiers, difficulties have now been overcome by the action of the council in ordering the cancellation of the assessment on pensions. But there are some men who feel that they are unfairly taxed inasmuch as they are assessed on income which they possibly earn within the next six or eight months but which there is no immediate prospect of receiving. Many of these men will object to the generous credit item which the assessors credit them and prefer applying their own ideas. These cases, however, are subject to individual decision, and settlement of the divergent views is usually reached after reasonable discussion.

THE MINE WORKERS' THREAT.

Organized labor in Canada enjoys the well earned respect of the people by reason of the moderation of its leaders in presenting their claims for improved conditions of work and for better wages. There have been occasional exceptions to this policy, leading to local feeling, and due entirely to the extreme views advanced by certain undesirable elements. Labor in Canada has progressed very satisfactorily indeed through its policy of moderation and it will be very unfortunate indeed if the United Mine Workers of Cape Breton are permitted to depart from the course which has produced such excellent results.

When labor appeals to public opinion for more favorable legislation, for shorter hours, for better pay, for improved living conditions generally, and backs these claims by the presentation of intelligent reasoning, it invariably wins. But if organized labor in Canada today attempts to interfere with the administration of justice, it will be opposed, but in the event of a contest taking place Conservatives will have difficulty in securing a man of sufficient prominence to win against the newly-appointed Liberal leader. The only name so far suggested is that of ex-Premier Arsenault, and he, although possessed of many excellent qualities, would prove a very poor candidate. It was due largely to Mr. Arsenault's personal policies that his government met with disaster in the recent local elections. He himself went down to defeat in his own district and could not reasonably anticipate success in the federal contest against a man enjoying the prestige of Liberal leadership.

WHAT THEY SAY

A Pertinent Question. New York Herald: Will organized labor, the only labor able to strike and force high wages now, be willing when prices are restored to a lower and normal level, to have their wages reduced in proportion to the increase in the purchasing power of the dollar? If not, the injustice and inequity of wage discrimination will be still more apparent.

Check on The Executive. New York Tribune: It seems indispensable to have a check on the executive department. If the treaty is ratified according to the "Sign here" theory, there will be no check. A precedent will be made that will control. If the campaign to coerce the present Senate succeeds, the future Senate will have about as much control over foreign relations as the Roman Senate had over the emperor who pretended to act in its name.

An Analogy. Philadelphia Public Ledger: However, the ingenious but not ingenious person who has invented the phrase that Mexico is the Belgium of America in the presence of the colossus of the north does not care for facts or for the exactness or justness of the analogy. He simply wants a slogan to stir the pacifist and the anti-American heart to bleed for Mexico at a time that the Senate is about to reveal the humbug that has stood for government down there all too long.

No Place in a Free Country. Boston Transcript: Let it be understood, both as a warning and as a matter of unchangeable civic truth, that such a thing as Bolshevism, with its proletarian autocracy, has no more place in a free country than has Prussianism, with its autocracy of Kaiser and Junkerdom. And let the reasons for our faith be repeatedly acknowledged, for, simple as they are, it is never superfluous to dwell on the permanent and fundamental tenets of our political life.

Milk Producer Not to Blame. New York World: Public assumption of water service was not more hastened by considerations of health than by anger at the exactions of private water companies. So it may prove with milk. The producer does not get too much milk; his price is more scientifically fixed by cost-sheet experts than ever before. The trouble is with distribution. The problem must be faced, as the commission warns us, whether public necessity may not compel the cities to take over the task.

Merely Wilson's Agent. New York Sun: As head of the Postoffice Department Mr. Burleson has never been anything except President Wilson's agent. At any moment when the policies and practices of Mr. Burleson ran against the President's policies and practices the President had it in his power to eliminate Mr. Burleson from public life in a jiffy by

I know what I'd do, said Reddy Merly, I'd buy about a dozen fire engines and I'd drive a different one to every fire and help to put it out, and sometimes I'd leave my friends drive the other ones, and sometimes I wouldn't.

Yes sir, I said, I'd offer prizes with it, I'd give a prize to whoever was the best at certain things. Good, said pop, what kind of things, for instance? and I said, O, the different things, I'd give a prize to whoever could hold their breath the longest, and whoever could walk the farthest on their hands, and whoever could wobble the loudest with their fingers, and different things like that.

Mothers' Advice

The responsibility for a daughter's future largely rests with the mother. The right influence and the information which is of vital interest to the daughter imparted at the proper time has not only saved the life but insured the success of many a beautiful girl. When a girl's thoughts become singular with headaches, dizziness, or a disposition to sleep, pains in back or lower limbs and a desire for solitude, her mother should come to her aid and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, will at this time prepare the system for the coming change and start this trying period in a young girl's life without pain or irregularities. Thousands of women residing in every part of the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtues of this medicine, and what it has done for their daughters.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

It matters not who, any man, young or elderly, needing more vital strength who not quite the man he should be, who feels himself weakened as a result of past practices and excesses, can, beyond the shadow of a doubt, hope for self-restoration of his lost or weakened powers if he is willing to make a fair, square effort along certain perfectly natural lines (of which he can easily learn), and will lead that sort of a decent existence which Nature demands that all of us should lead, if we are to prove up to the normal standard of vigor and manly capacity, as we see it exemplified in the best men of the world today.

Just what I believe you yourself should do or should not do where more manly strength may be desired is told in a perfectly plain, commonsense, practical, every-day sort of way through the medium of a little 72-page illustrated book of advice that I publish and am now sending free, sealed, by mail, to men all over the world who write for it. This little compendium of self-help has, I hope, been of more benefit to my fellow men than any similar publication of its kind before used. Over one million copies have been distributed since my first announcement that they would be sent free of charge. Therefore, reader, please to this wonderful little free book, a copy of which will go to you in a perfectly plain, sealed envelope by return mail. Remember there is absolutely nothing offered for sale in the whole booklet, excepting in that part which speaks my little invention, the Sander's Vitalizer, and you are not expected to get one of those appliances unless you make up your mind it is what you want. The book is absolutely independent of all else, and is a free gift in every sense of the word. It carries with it no obligation on your part of any kind whatsoever. Please send your name and address. SANDEN, Author.

Real, sturdy, vigorous manhood never comes for many men if it does today. If you are strong, vital, manly, the whole world appreciates you; if you are a weakling—well, that is a dark time, the age of cure, for the one who must stand aside to my mind a vigorous, strong-nerved, manly man is one of the greatest inspirations in the world, because the very force of his character and manhood makes itself felt wherever he goes or wherever he may be. What he does he does well, and his reward is in proportion to the strength and sturdiness.

With special attachments, the Vitalizer is also used for rheumatism, kidney, liver, stomach, bladder disorders, etc. If, after reading the free book, you decide that you would like to wear the Vitalizer, we shall be pleased to make special arrangements for you to have one to use. If in or near this city, we should be glad to have you call; otherwise please write for book. Hours 9 to 6. Satisfaction guaranteed in every case.

Real, sturdy, vigorous manhood never comes for many men if it does today. If you are strong, vital, manly, the whole world appreciates you; if you are a weakling—well, that is a dark time, the age of cure, for the one who must stand aside to my mind a vigorous, strong-nerved, manly man is one of the greatest inspirations in the world, because the very force of his character and manhood makes itself felt wherever he goes or wherever he may be. What he does he does well, and his reward is in proportion to the strength and sturdiness.

Latest Canadian Political Views

Items Concerning the Live Questions of the Day Under Consideration by the People.

NATIONHOOD AND RESPONSIBILITY.

(Toronto Times.) There are indications that the Federal Opposition will oppose the ratification of the Peace Treaty on two grounds: that ratification by Great Britain is sufficient to bind Canada, and that Article 10 of the Covenant of Nations would entangle us in future wars.

NOT MERELY INVESTIGATORS.

(Ottawa Journal.) "There is still some doubt as to the power of the Board of Commerce to go more than investigate," says the Toronto Star. That doubt does not exist in the minds of anybody who has studied the act under which the board derives its powers. True, criminal proceedings against profiteers must be taken by provincial officials, but the Federal Government having no power to do so, but if the Board of Commerce prepares an indictment and the necessary action in the courts, those provincial officials will comply or soon be deprived of their jobs by the people. Newspapers like the Toronto Star will see to this.

Skipper Again On Trial.
Capt. Adolph Pedersen, skipper of the American bark Puka, with his two sons who are mates of the vessel, is now on trial in New York on the charge of cruelty to five of the crew who died on voyage from Victoria, B.
C. to Cape Town. The father and the older son were acquitted last May on the charge of murder on the high sea. The younger son was found guilty of the charge of having died violent deaths.

rived at Rio de Janeiro Tuesday after having completed the laying of a new cable from England by way of Ascension, St. Vincent and Natal, putting Passenger Increase for Boston.

Only 17 foreign passengers entered the port of Boston during August, 1918, and two of these were stowaways. During the same month of the same classification numbered 8,250.
The Belgian, the first vessel ordered by the Leyland Line to replace the tonnage lost through the activities of German submarines during the war, was launched August 29 at Harland & Wolff's shipyard, Belfast, Ireland.
She is intended for the service of Boston and other ports. She is about the same size as the Devonian, one of the steamers of the company which also lost the Canadian and Russian during the "sub" traffic.

ABNORMAL DEATH
RATE IN 1918
The rate of mortality the life insurance companies had to meet in 1918 was about 35 per cent greater than in 1917 and 14 per cent greater than the average death rate of a score of years. This great advance was mainly the influenza epidemic, the ravages of which continued during several months of the current year.
Thirtysix life insurance companies reporting to the New York Insurance Department were called upon to pay for claims and dividends amounting about $38,000,000 more than in 1917.
The increase in death losses paid by life insurance companies was approximately $120,000,000 in the United States and Canada—mainly due to the influenza, on lives under age 50. To meet the increased mortality the surplus funds of life insurance companies as they stood at the end of 1917 were depleted more than $37,000,000.
Normally the increase of surplus should have been about $40,000,000, indicating a direct draft on surplus of about $77,000,000, owing to the abnormal mortality. Pastoral orders having limited surplus and small reserves suffered very severely.

AROUND THE CITY
FAIR AND WARMER

PURSE FOUND.
A pocketbook containing a small sum of money was found in King square late last night. The owner can have it by applying at the police station and proving property.

A LONELY ONE.
Business was not very brisk at the police station last night. One drunk, arrested on Main street, was given night's lodging and will pay his respects to the judge this morning.

REMAINED TO JAIL.
Murray Miles, who was arrested on a warrant sworn out at Hampton on a liquor charge, was taken to Kings County on Thursday by Inspector Merryfield. He pleaded guilty to the charge and was remanded.

TO ADDRESS THE CLUB.
Major (Rev.) A. T. Shatford, of Montreal, will be the guest of and address the Canadian Club some time about the middle of the month. The club has tried on several occasions to procure the services of a speaker, as at a noted speaker, and those who hear him will be indeed fortunate.

THE LARGEST TREE.
The city is rapidly losing its few trees for another one fell yesterday assisted by the axe. The tree was a victim of old age and was condemned by the city authorities. It was on the property owned by Mrs. Landry on Leinster street and is said to have been the largest tree in St. John.

SUMMONS FOR DIRECTIONS.
L. A. Conlon, who is looking after the interests of the Brayley Drug Co. Ltd. in the suit against Chief Liquor Inspector Wilson, has asked for a summons for directions. The proceedings are the result of remarks made by Inspector Wilson concerning the Brayley Drug Co. Ltd. The company has not yet named the amount of damages for which it will ask.

PILOT REGULATIONS.
The secretary of the board of trade yesterday received a communication from the Department of Marine and Fisheries in answer to a letter re pilotage conditions here. The letter stated that the department was now engaged in the reorganization of the Vancouver pilotage service, under the recent legislation, and as soon as this had been completed the work of reorganizing the service at St. John would be undertaken.

ENGINEERS TO MEET.
The fifth general professional meeting of the Engineering Institute of Canada will be held in St. John on September 10, 11, and 12. The committee has arranged for a varied programme, and speakers prominent in the engineering profession in America will address the different sessions. It is expected that many engineers from different parts of Canada will be present. The meeting will take place in the Board of Trade rooms.

HARBOR AND TAXES.
The mayor and commissioners were again in session yesterday discussing the petitions received from the citizens who desired relief in respect to their taxes. The matter of harbor commission was also taken up, and His Worship said that he had not yet received any word from Ottawa in reply to his letter asking about the ferry. R. W. Wigmore, M. P., had been asked to take the matter up with the Minister of Marine and send information to the city. As soon as the necessary information is received the question of commission for the harbor will be submitted to the people.

ELECTRICAL MATTERS.
All electricians who wish to operate in the city will be required to have their certificates before the seventh of this month. For those who have been operating in the city five years licenses will be granted without examination; for those successful examination and three years' experience are necessary. The electrician's report for the month shows 74 electrical permits, 39 new work, 15 alterations and additions, 24 inspections, 40 permits completed, 13 temporary permits.

SCHOOLS OF TORONTO.
Apropos of the overcrowded condition of the St. John public schools, it is interesting to note that a Toronto paper devotes some space to a description of practically the same state of affairs existing in that city. The article states that while the increase of pupils last year was regarded as phenomenal it is expected that this year's enrollment will shatter all previous records and that in several cases emergency rooms have been built in the school grounds.

WIDOWS OF FRENCH SOLDIERS.
The Canadian government has decided by the Pension Act of 1919, to give all widows of French soldiers living in New Brunswick the same benefits as those who were killed during the great war a bonus to add to their pension. All widows of such French soldiers resident in New Brunswick are to communicate with W. Frank Hatheway, Consular Agent, St. John. Each applicant to state particulars about date and manner of husband's death and number and age of children.

NARROW ESCAPE.
At the corner of Main street and 77 1/2 avenue yesterday morning the trolley pole on car 74, eastward bound, collapsed, the conductor standing on the rear and several other street railway men standing at the corner narrowly escaping injury. The conductor was shifting the trolley at the time of the collapse, and it was only by crawling into the rear of the car above the tender that he escaped as the heavy pole and wheel fell into the street. The apparatus struck the roof of the car with a crash before bounding into the street and caused considerable excitement among the passengers, who rushed to the doors. The disabled car was taken to the car shed.

DUPLIX HOUSES TO BE STARTED
IMMEDIATELY

Housing Commission Has Decided to Go Ahead With Building as Soon as Lots Can be Secured.

A meeting of the Housing Commission was held last evening in Commissioner Bullock's office, at which it was decided to start construction on four duplex houses and four self-contained houses as soon as possible if a plot of land can be secured on the West Side, which is considered suitable as a site, and which it is believed can be purchased without difficulty. The buildings would give accommodation for twelve families. Plans and specifications have been prepared by the architect, and will be submitted to the Dominion Commission at Ottawa for approval. The commission will go ahead putting up buildings as fast as they can secure suitable building lots. This Mr. Bullock and members of the commission have inspected a lot of properties in the city, but good sites are not abundant, and the more desirable are held at pretty stiff prices. The houses which it is planned to build on the West Side will be equipped with all modern improvements and the construction work will be done under the direct supervision of the commission. They will be offered for sale at cost price on the terms of the Housing Act. Miles E. Agar, the new member of the commission was present at the meeting last evening.

FREE PLAYGROUNDS HAD A GOOD SEASON

Executive of Association Met Last Evening and Expressed Appreciation for Work of Teachers.

A successful season was reported at the meeting of the Executive of the Free Playgrounds held at the Y. M. C. A. last evening. Captain A. J. Mulcahy, the vice-president, was in the chair. Reports from the Allison, Aberdeen and Centennial Playgrounds were handed in, but as all the reports are not complete, it was decided to wait until the remainder are received before the directors meet. It was felt that the teachers deserved a special word of praise for the way in which they had carried out the programme, but that next year more time must be given to free play, and that the children must not be allowed to depend on the apparatus. More attention to be given to sewing and other useful arts. The attendance was good, although it was greatly affected by the large number of holidays which occurred throughout the season. Nearly all the bills for repairs on the grounds were handed in last evening and paid. For the West Side grounds, Mrs. Mulcahy stated that she had collected $13 from the sale of articles made by the children. She said that there had been no serious accidents on the grounds and that the work went on smoothly and well.

Directors Are Responsible
Act of 1916 Clearly Places the Responsibility on the Company.

Premier Foster and the directors of the St. John and Quebec Railway are coming in for some adverse criticism for their failure to secure running rights from Westfield to St. John, and establish the service the people of the Valley have waited for so long. Mr. Foster and the directors disclaim any responsibility, but the act of 1916 clearly places the responsibility for securing running rights upon the company, for sub-section (b) of section 12 says: "That the company (St. John & Quebec Railway Company) undertake to acquire and secure by lease or purchase, on or before the date of the completion of the line of railway from Gagetown to Westfield, running rights over the line of railway of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company and over the bridge and railway of the St. John Bridge & Railway Extension Company, from Westfield to and into the city of St. John, upon terms and conditions to be approved of by the Dominion."

G. W. V. A. BAND.
A meeting of the G. W. V. A. Band was held last evening in the room on Wellington Row. Major Morgan presided and there was a full attendance of the members. Matters concerning the administration of the band were discussed as well as plans for the coming winter's programme. It is understood that the G. W. V. A. Band will give the citizens an opportunity to hear them to advantage at a free concert to take place shortly on King Square.

Martello Hotel
May Be Acquired
For The Orphans

West Side Building Will Probably be Used as Temporary Quarters Until New Home is Erected.

It is probable that the Martello Hotel will be taken over by the Commissioners of the Protestant Orphan's Home and used as an extension of their present home, which is not adequate to present needs. While the idea of constructing a large up-to-date home is not being lost sight of it is said the commissioners have come to the conclusion that it is not advisable to build at the present time when the cost of material and everything else is so high. It is understood that they are prepared to take over the Martello Hotel as a temporary solution if satisfactory conditions are obtainable from the Government. The Martello Hotel is a large three-story wooden building, having an excellent site and good surroundings. During the war it was taken over by the Dominion Government, and fitted up as a military hospital. Considerable outlay was made upon it, and it is now in good condition. A heating system was installed, which is ample for all requirements, and other improvements were made. Beyond general cleaning and some whitening work, little need be done to make it suitable for an orphan's home. The building contains large rooms suitable for school purposes and assembly halls, and abundance of rooms suitable for dormitories. The interior is bright and airy. Immediately around the building is an acre or more of grass land, and near by are fields for playgrounds. The Protestant Orphan's Home has a provincial charter, and is an incorporated body in children from all parts of the Province. Recently different societies have been conducting a campaign to raise money to provide for an extension of the work of the home.

DELICIOUS DISHES
DERIVED FROM MILK

Demonstration Given Last Evening Showed How the Housewife Might Prepare Lactereal Dainties.

Those who attended the demonstration of the uses of milk given at the Women's Institute last evening were fortunate in that they learned something about the uses and value of milk and also were treated to a share of the delicious results achieved by Miss Elizabeth Nutter who did the cooking. The demonstration was held in the Congregational Hall and Mrs. Edmund Flewelling was in charge, assisted by Mrs. Stack.

WILL BUILD RATHER THAN PAY THE RENT
Sackville Will Have Its Own Fire Station—Rent Increased in Premises Formerly Occupied.

Rather than pay a yearly rental of $50 for housing the fire apparatus, the Town Council of Sackville decided to build a fire station of its own and not pay any more rent. The matter came up at the meeting of the Town Council, Tuesday, when the owner of the building in which the apparatus was housed notified the Council that the rent would be increased from thirty-six dollars a year to fifty. The fire committee was given power to construct a building for the fire department, and it was expected that the interest, etc., would only amount to about $20 per year.

They are showing a smart lace collar suitable for collar and cuff sets in the gamb material. One of the latest styles in neckwear are the Ficus which come in hats and Georgette crepe, and can be seen in some very smart designs. There is also quite a variety of net and lace veils, all to be seen in neckwear department, first floor, Dykeman's.

FISH BUSINESS
PROSPECTS ARE MUCH BRIGHTER

Sardine Factory is Not Working to Capacity on Account of Difficulty in Securing Tins.

"Men in the fish business are having enough of difficulties this year, what with strikes and high prices," said Lewis Connors, of Connors Bros., Black's Harbor, yesterday. "Our sardine factory is not working to full capacity this season. We find it very difficult to get tins and oils for canning purposes." Asked about the market prospects Mr. Connors said that the market had been very dull, but was beginning to show signs of improvement. His firm is now shipping fish to Argentine and even to Australia, but the shortage of shipping and high freight rates do not favor an expansion of business at the moment. Some shipments are being made to Great Britain, but the market there is not so active and costly. For the British market they have to omit the word sardines from the label on their tins, owing to the decision of the British Congress that only pilchards, which are mainly packed by the French, are entitled to be described as sardines. The New Brunswick product which sells in Canada, the United States and various other countries under the name of sardines is now offered for sale in England and France under the name of sardine, a rather vague description.

THE WIND TAKES A
WHIRL AT THE PAPER

Dust and Paper Combined With a Gusty Wind Made Prince William Street Most Unpleasant.

St. John was struck by a whirlwind last evening. While not of very great magnitude it was strong enough to make matters particularly unpleasant for pedestrians. How high the wind had been in evidence during the afternoon, but about 7 o'clock last evening the wind eddies seemed to eliminate in Prince William street near the Congregational Hall, and the Standard staff visited other parts of the city during the evening and found that there were still the few eddies of dust and paper scattered about the other streets.

Increase Rate On Sugar Shipments

The Board of Trade yesterday received a copy of the decision of the Board of Railway Commissioners in the matter of rates on sugar from St. John and Halifax to Montreal, which is that the Maritime Province refiners may have to pay the increased rate provided for in an order in council made on July 27, 1918, taking sugar out of the commodity class and putting it in the class of other goods. The Maritime men raised a vigorous protest and by an order in council dated August 24, 1918, the rate was fixed at 22 cents from St. John and 33 from Halifax, but this decision rescinded the order in council of August and that of July goes into effect. This means an increase of about 25 per cent in the rate from these provinces.

THE GAY
The one of you who have dwelt even lingered—in Chicago, Ill. (this is not a humorous story), are familiar with the region known as Loop. For those others of you whom Chicago is a transfer point between New York and San Francisco there is presented this brief explanation:
The Loop is a clamorous, emerald district embraced by the arms of the elevated tracks. In a boating fever millions, it would know familiarly as downtown, Chicago. And he who frequents it might in search of amusement cheer is known, vulgarly, as a Loop hand.
As Hertz was a Loop-bound, on occasion of those sparse first night of the metropolises of the West he was always present, the night, also, left. When a new loop was opened Jo's table always commanded an unobstructed view of thing worth viewing. On entering was wont to say, "Hello, my dear, carelessness cordiality to the head while the while his eye roved expertly for a table to table as he removed gloves.
That was Jo—a plump and loquacious bachelor of fifty. A plerotic, roved and windy man, clutching vast at the garments of a youth that long slipped past him.
The gay-dog business was a phase in the life of Jo Hertz. He had been a quiet man, a steady, steady, steady and hard-worked brother three unweaned and selfish sisters is underfoot.
At twenty-seven Jo had been a dutiful, hard-working son (in wholesale harness business) of a widowed and gunning mother, who called him Joey. If you had looked close you would have seen that and then a double wrinkle would appear between his eyes, wrinkles which had no business there at twenty-seven. Then Jo's mother died, leaving him handicapped by a death-bed promise to three sisters, who were in an under-basement house on Calumet street. Jo's wrinkles became a fixture.
Death-bed promises should be broken as lightly as they are seriously made. The dead have no right to lay clammy fingers upon the living.
"Joey," she said, "her high, voice, 'take care of the girls.' 'I will, Ma,' Jo had choked.
"Joey," and the voice was weak, "promise me, my dear, to be a success. I promise, Ma, you'll be rich. Then Joe had hesitated, appalled: "Joey's my dying wish, Promise!"
"I promise, Ma, you'll be rich," Whoreupon his mother had comfortably, leaving him with a completely ruined life.
They were not bad-looking girls, they had a certain style, too. That Stiel and Eva had, Carrie, the middle one, taught school over on the West Side. In those days it took her about two hours each week. She said kind of costume she required should have been corrugated steel. But three knew what was being worn, they wore it—fairly faithful copy of it. Eva, the housekeeping sister, a needle knock. She could trim state street windows and come away with a mental photograph of every arate look, hem, yoke, and ribbon heads of department stores. One thing they kept in drawers, and went home and reproduced them to the aid of a two-dollar-a-day seamstress. Still, the youngest was beauty. They called her Babe, wasn't really a beauty, but some had once told her that she looked like Meredith. She was when work of fiction was at the height of popularity. For years afterwards whenever she went to parties, she faced a single, fat curl over her right shoulder, with a rose stuck through it.
Twenty-three years ago one of the terrors did not strain at the household leash, nor crave a career. "Call taught school, and hated it. Eva's house expertly and complainant. Babe's profession was being the family beauty, and it took all her spare time. Eva always jet her sleep until ten. This was Jo's household, and he was the nominal head of it. But it was empty title.
Most men of Jo's age were stand before their mirror of a Saturday night, while they blithely and absently while they discarded a blue polka-dot for a maroon tie, whipped off maroon for a shot-silk, and at the moment decided against the shot-silk in favor of a plain black-and-white because she had once said she preferred quiet ties. Jo, when he should have been preening his feathers conquest, was saying:
"Well, my God, I am hurrying! G a man time, can't you? I just home. You girls have been lay around the house all day. No woman you're ready."
On those rare occasions when business necessitated an out-of-town trip he would spend half a day flourishing about the shops selecting handkerchiefs or stockings, or feathers, fans, or gloves for the girls.
There was something selfish in him, as there always is in any truly and joyfully made. They suspected the exquisite pleasure give him to select these things; their fine, soft, silken things. There were those of you who have dwelt—or even lingered—in Chicago, Illinois (this is not a humorous story), are familiar with the region known as the Loop. For those of others who to whom Chicago is a transfer point between New York and San Francisco there is presented this brief explanation:

The Loop is a dangerous, smoke-infested district embraced by the iron arms of the elevated tracks. In a city boasting fever millions, it would be known familiarly as downtown. From Congress to Lake street, from Wabash almost to the river, those thunderous tracks make a complete circle, or loop. Within it lie the retail shops, the commercial hotels, the theatres, the restaurants. It is the Fifth avenue (dubbed) and the Broadway (deleted) of Chicago. And he who frequents it by night in search of amusement and cheer is known, vulgarly, as a Loop-hound.

Jo Hertz was a Loop-hound. On the occasion of those sparse first nights granted the metropolis of the Middle West he was always present, third row, aisle, left. When a new loop café was opened Jo's table always commanded an unobstructed view of anything worth viewing. On entering he was wont to look her almost with careless cordiality to the head waiter, while his eye roved expertly from table to table as he removed his gloves.

That was Jo—a plump and lonely bachelor of fifty. A plethoric, roving-eyed and windy man, clutching vainly at the garments of a youth that had long slipped past him.

The gay-dog business was a late phase in the life of Jo Hertz. He had been a quiet different sort of man. The staid and harness-brother of three unwed and sister states is an underdog.

At twenty-seven Jo had been the dutiful, hard-working son (in the wholesale harness business) of a widowed and gumminging mother, who called him Joey. If you had looked close you would have seen that now and then a double wrinkle would appear between Jo's eyes, as if he had had no business there at twenty-seven. Then Jo's mother died, leaving him handicapped by a death-bed promise, the three sisters and come away with a mental photograph of every separate lock, hem, yoke, and ribbon, heads of deprecatingly showed her the things they kept in drawers, and she went home and reproduced them with the aid of a two-dollar-a-day seamstress. Still, now, young man, was the beauty. The called her Babe. She wasn't really a beauty, but some one had once told her that she looked like Janice Meredith (it had been that work of fiction was at the height of its popularity). For years afterward, whenever she went to parties, she affected a single, fat curl over her right shoulder, with a rose stuck through it.

Twenty-three years ago one's sisters did not strain at the household leash, nor crave a career. Carrie taught school, and hated it. Eva kept house expertly and complacently, Babe's profession was being the family beauty, and it took all her spare time. This was Jo's household, and he was the nominal head of it. But it was an empty title.

Most men of Jo's age were standing before the mirror of a Saturday night, whilst whirling blithely and abstractedly while they discarded a blue polka-dot for a maroon tie, whipped off the maroon for a shot-silk, and at the last moment decided against the shot-silk in favor of a plain black-and-white, because she had once said she preferred quiet ties. Jo, when he should have been presenting his feathers for conquest, was saying:

"Well, my God, I am hurrying! Give a man time, can't you? I just got home. You girls have been laying round the house all day. No wonder you're ready."

On those rare occasions when his business necessitated an out-of-town trip he would spend half a day fondling the shops selecting handkerchiefs or stockings, or feathers, or fans, or gloves for his girls.

There was something selfish in his living, as there always is in any gift. He joyfully and joyfully. They never suspected the exquisite pleasure he gave him to select these things; these fine, soft, silken things. There were many things about this slow-going, amiable brother of theirs that they never suspected. If you had told them he was a dreamer of dreams, for example, they would have been amused. Sometimes, dead-tired by nine o'clock, after a hard day down town, he would dose over the evening paper. At intervals he would wake, red-eyed, to a snatch of conversation such as "Yes, but if you get a blue you can wear it anywhere. It's dressy, and at the same time it's quiet, isn't it? The expert, wrestling with Carrie over the problem of the new spring dress. They never guessed that the commonplace man in the frayed old smoking jacket had banished them all from the room long ago; had banished himself for that matter. In his place was a tall, debonair, and rather dangerously handsome man to whom six o'clock spelled evening clothes. The kind of man who can lean up against a mantel, or propose a toast, or give an order to a man-servant, or whisper a gallant speech in a lady's ear with equal ease. The shabby old house on Calumet avenue was transformed into a broad and chandeliered rendezvous for the brilliance of the city. Beauty was here, and wit. But none so beautiful and witty as She, Mrs.—er—Jo Hertz. There was wine, of course; but no vulgar display. There was music; the soft lilt of a violin, the tinkling of a piano, and the graceful, tactful host, king of his own domain.

"Jo, for heaven's sake, if you're going to snore-go to bed!"

"Why—did I fall asleep?"

"You haven't been doing anything else all evening. A person would think you were fifty instead of thirty."

And Jo Hertz was again just the dull, grey, commonplace brother of three well-meaning sisters.

Which brings us to one Sunday in May. Jo came home from a late Sunday afternoon walk to find company for supper. Carrie often had in on her school-teacher friends, or Babe one of her frivolous intimates, or even Eva a staid guest of the old-girl type. There was always a Sunday night supper of potato salad, and cold meat, and coffee, and perhaps a fresh cake. Joe rather enjoyed it, being a hospitable sort. But he regarded the guests with the undazed eye of a man to whom they were just so many netticoats, timid of the night streets and requiring escort home.

This Sunday night it turned out to be one of Carrie's friends.

Emily, said Carrie, "this is my brother, Jo."

Jo had learned what to expect in Carrie's friends. Drab-looking women in the late thirties, whose facial lines all slanted downward.

"Happy to meet you," said Jo, and looked down at a different sort altogether. A most surprisingly different sort, for one of Carrie's friends. This Emily person was very small, and duffy, and blue-eyed, and sort of well-crinkly looking. You know. The corners of her mouth when she smiled and her eyes when she looked up at you, and her hair, which was brown, but had the miraculous effect, somehow, of being golden.

Jo shook hands with her. Her hand was incredibly small, and soft, so that you were afraid of crushing it, until you discovered she had a firm little grip all her own. It surprised and amused you, that grip, as does a baby's unexpected clutch on your patronizing forehead. As Jo felt it in his own big hand, the strangest thing happened to him. Something inside Jo Hertz stopped working for a moment, then lurched sickeningly, then thumped like mad. It was his heart. He stood staring down at her, and she up at him until the other laughed. Then their hands fell apart, haphazardly.

"Are you a school-teacher, Emily?" he said.

"Kindergarten. It's my first year. And don't you call me Emily, please."

"Why not? It's your name. I think it's the prettiest name in the world. Which he hadn't meant to say at all. In fact, he was perfectly agitated to himself saying it. But he meant it.

At supper he passed her things, and stared, until everybody laughed again, and Eva said acidly: "Why don't you feed her?"

It wasn't that Emily had an air of helplessness. She just made you feel you wanted her to be helpless, so that you could help her.

Jo took her home, and from that Sunday night he began to strain at the leash. He took his sisters out, dutifully, but he would suggest, with a carelessness that deceived no one: "Don't you want one of your girls' friends to come along? That little What's-her-name—Emily, or something. So long's I've got three of you, I might as well have a full squad."

For a long time he didn't know what was the matter with him. He only knew he was miserable and yet happy. Sometimes his heart seemed to ache with an actual physical ache. He realized that he wanted to do things for Emily. He wanted to buy things for Emily—useless, pretty, and expensive things that he couldn't afford. He wanted to buy everything that Emily needed, and everything that Emily desired. He wanted to marry Emily. That was it. He discovered that one day, with a shock, in the midst of a transaction in the harness business. He stared at the man with whom he was dealing until that startled person grew uncomfortable.

"What's the matter, Hertz?"

"Matter?"

"You look as if you'd seen a ghost or had what she called a plain talk.

"Listen, Jo. They've offered me the job of first assistant resident worker. And I'm going to take it. Take it! I know fifty other girls who'd give their ears for it. I go in next month."

"Away! Away from here, you mean—to live!" Carrie laid down her fork.

"Well, really, Jo! After all that explanation."

"But to go over there to live! Why that neighborhood's full of dirt, and disease, and crime, and the Lord knows what all. I can't let you do that, Carrie!"

Carrie's chin came down. She laughed a short little laugh. "Let me! That's eighteenth century talk, Jo. My life's my own to live. I'm going."

And she went.

Jo Hertz was his own master. Free to marry. Free to come and go. And he found he didn't even think of marrying. He didn't even want to come or go, particularly. A rather frumpy old bachelor, with thinning hair and a thickening neck. Much has been written about the unwed, middle-aged woman; her fustiness, her primness, her say: "How did you like her, Jo?"

"Like who?" Jo would spurt feebly.

"Miss Matthews."

"Now don't be funny, Jo. You know very well I mean the girl who was here for dinner. The one who talked so well on the emigration question."

"Oh her! Why, she was all right. She was a smart woman."

"But didn't you like her?"

"I can't say I did, Eva. And I can't say I didn't. She made me think a lot of a teacher I had in the fifth grade. Name of Hines, as I recall her, she must have been a fine woman. But I never thought of her as a woman at all. She was just Teacher."

"You make me tired," snapped Eva impatiently. "A man of your age. You don't expect to marry a girl do you? A child?"

"I don't expect to marry anybody," Jo had answered.

And that was the truth, lonely though he felt. Any one who got the meaning of the Loop knows the significance of a move to a north-shore suburb, and a house. Eva's trouble was that she was growing up, and her mother had an eye on society.

That did away with Jo's Thursday dinner. Then still his husband bought a car when she was getting so that made objected to Sunday dinners, anyway. Besides, they were unhealthy, old-fashioned things. They all meant to ask Jo to come along, but by the time their friends were placed, and the lunch, and the boxes, and sweaters, and George's camera, and everything, there seemed to be no room for a man of Jo's bulk. So that eliminated the Sunday dinners.

"Look here, I'm going to drop the week," still said, "for dinner. Except Wednesday—that's our bridge night and Saturday. And, of course, Thursday. Cook is going to come along, and wait for me to phone."

And so Jo drifted into that sad-eyed, despondent family made up of those who were in a second-rate restaurant.

And the came the War. The war that spelled death and destruction to millions. The war that brought a fortune to Jo Hertz, and transformed him over night, from a baggy-kneed old bachelor, whose business was a failure, to a prosperous manufacturer whose only trouble was a shortage in hides for the making of his product—leather! The armies of Europe called for it. Hundreds! More harnesses! Straps! Millions of straps! More! More!

The musty old harness business over on Lake street was magically changed from a dust-covered and somewhat obscure to an orderly hive that hummed and glittered with success. Orders poured in. Jo Hertz had inside information on the War. He knew about the troops and horses. He talked with French and English and Italian buyers—noblemen, many of them—commanded by their countries to get American-made supplies. And not when he said to Ben or George "Take Frimstance your raw hides and leathers." They listened with respectful attention.

And then began the gay-dog business in the life of Jo Hertz. He developed into a Loop-hound, ever keen to the scent of fresh pleasure. That side of Jo Hertz which had been repressed and crushed and ignored began to bloom, unhealthy. At first he spent money on his rather contemptuous nieces. He sent them gorgeous fans, and watch bracelets, and velvet bags. He took two expensive rooms at a downtown hotel, and there was something more tear-compelling than grossness about the way he glowered over the luxury of a separate ice-water tap in the bathroom. He explained it.

"Just turn it on. Ice-water! Any hour of the day or night."

He bought a car. Naturally. A glittering affair, in color a bright blue, with pale blue leather straps and a great deal of gold fittings, and wire wheels. Eva said it was the kind of thing a sourette would use, rather than an elderly business man.

And he was lonesome. He was very lonesome. So he searched about in his mind and brought from the dim past the memory of the luxuriously furnished establishment of which he used to dream in the evenings when he dozed over his paper in the old house on Calumet. So he rented an apartment, many-roomed and expensive, with a man-servant in charge, and furnished it in styles and periods ranging through all the Louises.

The War went on, one on, and on. And the money continued to roll in a flood of it. Then one afternoon Eva, in town on shopping bent, entered a small, exclusive and expensive shop on Michigan avenue. Exclusive, that is, in price. The room was becomingly rose-illuminated and somewhat dim, so that some minutes had passed before she realized that a man seated on a raspberry brocade settee not five feet away—a man with a walking stick, and yellow gloves, and tan spats, and a check suit—was her brother Jo. From him Eva's old-eyed, glance leaped to the woman who was trying on hats before one of the many long mirrors.

Eva turned sharply and encountered her own sales-woman returning, hat laden. "Not today," she gasped. "I'm feeling ill. Suddenly." And almost man from the room.

The next time it was Stella who saw them. In a restaurant. She said she spotted her evening. And the third time it was Ethel. She was one of those gossiped at a theatre party given by Nicky Overton II. You know. The North Shore Overtons. Lake Forest. They came in late, and occupied the entire third row at the opening performance of "Believe Me!" And Ethel was Nicky's partner. She was glowing like a rose. When the lights went up after the first act Ethel saw that her uncle Jo was seated just ahead of her which Babe could display the curls. She got up plump. She stayed home from the party that night. When she was present she tried to look as plain and obscure as possible, so that the sisters should show up to advantage. She schemed, and planned, and contrived, and hoped, and smiled into Jo's despairing eyes.

"And three years went by. Three precious years, Carrie still taught school, and hated it. Eva kept house, and more complacently as prices advanced and allowance retreated. Still was still Babe, the family beauty; but even she knew that the time was past for curls.

And Babe did. She made a last desperate drive, aided by Eva, and captured a rather surprised young man in the brokerage way, who had made up his mind not to marry for years.

Babe had as useless a trousseau, and as fitted with extravagant pink-and-blue and lacy and frilly things as any daughter of doing parents. Jo seemed to find a grim pleasure in providing them. But it left him pinched.

There was nothing domestic about Carrie. She had given up teaching two years before, and had gone into Social Service work on the West Side. Jo took to prowling about department store basements, and household goods sections. He was always sending home a bargain in a ham, or a sack of potatoes, or fifty pounds of sugar, or a window clamp, or a new kind of ping knife. He was forever doing odd little jobs that the janitor should have done. It was the domestic in him claiming its own.

Then one night, Carrie came home with a dull glow in her leathery cheeks and her eyes alight with resolve. They angularity of mind and body. In the male that same fustiness develops, and a certain primness, too. But he grows fussy where she grows lean.

Every Thursday evening he took dinner at Eva's, and on Sunday noon at Stella's. He tucked his napkin under his chin and openly enjoyed the home-made soup and the well-cooked meats. After dinner he tried to talk business with Eva's husband, or Stella's. His business talks were the old-fashioned kind, beginning:

"Well, now, looks here, Take Frimstance your raw hides and leathers."

But Ben and George didn't want to "take Frimstance, your raw hides and leathers" at all. They usually listen, restively, and say, "Uh-huh," at intervals, and at the first chance they would sort of fade out of the room, with a meaningful glance at their wives. Eva had two children now. Girls. They treated Uncle Jo with good-natured tolerance. Still had no children. Uncle Jo degenerated, by almost imperceptible degrees, from the position of honored guest, who is served with white meat, to that of one who is content with a leg and one of those obscure and bony sections which, after much turning with a bewildered and investigating knife and fork, leave one baffled and unsatisfied.

Eva and Stella got together and decided that Jo ought to marry.

"It isn't natural," Eva told him. "I never saw a man the took so little interest in women."

So they had in for dinner certain friends and acquaintances of fitting age. They spoke of them as "splendid girls." Between thirty-six and forty. The following Thursday Eva would with what she afterward described as a blonde. Then her uncle had turned around, and seeing her, had been surprised into a smile that spread broadly all over his plump and rubicund face. Then he had turned to face forward again, quickly.

"Who's the old bird?" Nicky had asked. Ethel had pretended not to hear, so he had asked again.

"My Uncle," Ethel answered, and flushed all over her delicate face, and down to her throat. It spoiled Ethel's evening. More than that, as she told her mother of it later, weeping, she declared it had spoiled her life.

Eva talked it over with her husband in that intimate, kinnoch hour that proceeds bedtime. She gossiped heatedly with her hair brush.

There exists a strange and loyal kinship among men. "Well, I face for know," Ben said now, and even grinned a little. "I suppose a boy's got to show his wild oats some time or other."

"All right," Eva retorted. "If you're not man enough to stop it I'll have to do that's all. I'm going up there with Stella this week."

They did not notify Jo of their coming. Eva telephoned his apartment when she knew he would be out, and asked his man if he expected the master home to dinner that evening. The man had said yes. When she reached the city Eva found turmoil there. The first of the American troops to be sent to France were leaving.

"Isn't it dreadful!" Stella gasped.

Their car was caught in the jam. When at last they reached their apartment he had not yet come in.

No, they were not staying to dinner with their brother, they told the reserved houseman. Still and Eva sat in rose-colored cushions. They refused avoided each other's eyes.

And then there was a little check. The two women sat up, tense. The door opened. Jo came in. He blinked a little.

"Why—Eve! Why, Babe! Well, why didn't you let me know?"

"We were just about to leave. We thought you weren't coming home."

"I was in the jam on Michigan, watching the boys go by." He sat down heavily. The light from the window fell on him. And you saw that his eyes were red.

And you'll have to learn why. He had found himself one of a thousand in the jam on Michigan, as he said. He had a place near the curb. Then the crowd had cried, "Here they come! Here come the boys!"

Just at that moment two little, futile, frozen fist began to beat a mad tattoo on Jo Hertz's broad back. The little fists kept up their frantic beating and pushing. And a voice cried "Let me by! I can't see! You man, you! You big fat man! Let me go by—to war—and can't see! My boys!"

Jo scrooged around, still keeping his place. He looked down. And upturned to him in agonized appeal was the face of little Emily.

"Why, Emily! How in the world?—"

"My husband, he ever been to say goodbye to Jo at home."

"Jo?"

"Jo's my boy. And he's going to war. So I'm away. I had to see him. I had to see him go."

"Why sure," said Jo. "Of course you want to see him." And then the crowd gave great gasps.

"There he is! Emily! Struggle about the din. There he is! There he is! There he is!"

"Which one? Which one, Emily?"

"The handsome one. The handsome one. There!"

"Polder his out!" Jo commanded.

"Show me. Never mind. I see him." Somehow, miraculously, he had picked him from among the hundreds. Had picked him as surely as his own father might have. It was Emily's boy. He was marching by, rather stiffly. He was nineteen, and fine-looking, and he had a girl, he didn't particularly want to go to France—and to go to France. But more than that he had hated, he had hated not to go. So he marched by, looking straight ahead, his jaw set so that his chin stuck out just a little. Emily's boy.

Jo looked at him, and his face flushed with purple. His eyes, the hard-fleeced eyes of a Loop-hound, took on the look of a sad old man. And suddenly he was no longer Jo, the sport, old Jo, Hertz, the say dog. He was Jo Hertz, thirty, in love with life, in love with Emily.

Another minute and the boy had passed on up the broad street.

Emily was clinging to Jo. She was mumbling something over and over. "I can't, I can't. Don't ask me to. I can't let him go. Like that. I can't."

"Why, Emily? We wouldn't have him stay home, would we? We wouldn't want him to do anything different, would we? Not our boy, I'm glad he enlisted. I'm proud of him. So are you glad."

So it was that when Jo entered his own hallway half an hour later he blinked, dazedly, and when the light from the window fell on him you saw that his eyes were red.

Eva was not one to beat about the bush. She sat forward in her chair, clutching her bag rather nervously.

"Now, look here, Jo. Stella and I are here for a reason. We're here to tell you that this thing's got to stop."

"Things? Stop?"

"You know very well what I mean! Something gathering in Jo's face should have warned her. But he was slumped down in his chair in such a huddle, and he looked so old and fat that she did not heed it.

But he got to his feet, then shaking, and at what she saw in his face even Eva faltered and stopped.

WHY BEAUTY FADES

A Condition Due Entirely to Poor, Watery Blood.

The girl who returns home from school or from work thoroughly tired out will be fortunate if she escapes a physical breakdown, because this getting tired so easily is probably the first warning symptom of a thinning blood that must not be disregarded if her health is to be preserved.

When the blood becomes thin and impure the patient becomes thin, pale, haggard and anemic. She not only tires out easily but suffers from headaches, palpitation of the heart, dizzy spells and a loss of appetite. This condition will go from bad to worse, and in prompt steps are not taken to increase and enrich the blood supply. To make the rich, red blood that brings the glow of health, no medicine yet discovered can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. If given a fair trial their use brings rosy cheeks, bright eyes, a good appetite and good spirits. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have made thousands of pale, languid girls active and strong. On the first signs of poor, thin blood mothers should insist upon their daughters taking a fair course of these pills. They will not only restore health, but will save further doctor bills.

EDUCATION AS MEANS TO REDUCE OUR FIRE LOSS

People Do Not Realize What Carelessness May Lead To.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN

Should be Appealed to When it is Considered That Sixty-Five Per Cent. of Fires Start in the Home.

By W. A. McSWAIN, Fire Marshal, E. Carolina, read at Toronto Convention by G. H. Anderson.

With the strenuous efforts of individuals, of fire marshals, of fire departments, of states and municipalities, there has been very little reduction in the fire waste of North America. Why? Is this great waste of life and wealth due to the fact that the citizens of the United States and Canada are not awake to the situation, or is it because our citizens are uninformed as to this great loss of life and property? Most certainly the people are awake to the situation! Most certainly every man, woman and child of this great country is deeply interested in every life that is lost and in every dollar that is destroyed by the fires which are occurring every minute of the day and night. What, then, is the reason for the lack of progress in the elimination of fire waste so small? Is it not due to the fact that so very few persons ever know of these occurrences, but in a large measure to the enormous area of the continent and the lack of proper interest? What proportion of the business men of this country ever read any part of a newspaper except such as refers to his particular hobby or business? What proportion of the busy housekeepers read about fires that destroy the lives of children and reduce to ashes within a few minutes the hard earnings of a lifetime invested in the home that is burned? It has been accurately ascertained that the largest proportion of the fires occurring in this country are due to what we term carelessness, or, to put it in other words, after a fire has occurred we have determined that it could have been prevented by the exercise of due diligence on the part of the owner or occupant.

One of the most striking examples of what may be accomplished in the elimination of fire waste is found in the experience of the United States Government in connection with the World War. Our Government found it necessary to build many camps, entirely of frame construction, to be occupied as dwellings and dormitories. These buildings were occupied largely by men from every section of the country. The occupancy of these frame dwelling cities ranged in population from 60,000 men down, and each such building in these cities was equal in hazard to that of a frame hotel. The frame hotel is regarded by fire underwriters as especially hazardous. In many instances insurance companies decline to accept liability on frame hotels, so that we find the Government in this comparison confronted with what is known in underwriting circles as a special hazard. Yet, without automatic sprinklers, and in many known cases without adequate water supply, the actual loss of property in connection with this class of risk has been practically nothing.

What lesson do we learn from this experience of our Government? It is that if there is one agency more active than another in eliminating fire waste it is that of careful and systematic inspection with prompt removal of any condition found to be unsatisfactory. Of course, the Government, by reason of its military organization, was able to exercise a more rigid system than could probably be made effective in civil life; at the same time, it should convince us that this is the agency that we should encourage and emphasize as the most desirable means for curtailing fire waste.

The value of inspections in the matter of eliminating fire waste is further evidenced by the activity of fire marshals in many states and provinces of this continent in inaugurating campaigns for cleaning up and encouraging good housekeeping, but devoting to this work anywhere from one day to one week in the year. Of course, it is better than none, but two days is much better, and one inspection a month highly desirable, while an inspection of every property by each individual at least once every day is the most desirable of all, and would accomplish the best results. The value of such work is recognized by state and municipal governments in providing and enacting laws which have for their main purpose the safe-guarding of lives and property against the ravages of fire waste, yet in regulations up to the time seem to be lacking in respect to the great importance of frequency in such inspections.

Due to Carelessness.

In looking over the fires occurring in the United States in 1917, we find that 65 p. c. of them started in the homes in the country. In other words out of a total number of 366,896 fires occurring in 1917, the number of fires originating in dwelling houses was 238,021. Now, since we know that so large a proportion of the fires start in the homes of the country, is not this a splendid opportunity to enlist the mothers and children in this great agency of eliminating the fire waste by careful and frequent inspections with prompt removal of any unsatisfactory condition? Can you imagine a more fertile field? If we can arouse the mothers and children and housekeepers of this country to an active campaign against fire waste, it is clear that we will reach 65 p. c. of the places where fires begin. I believe that next to the friends, the best avenue through which we may reach the mothers and children is the public schools of the country.

To sum up, there are many active agencies interested in the elimination of the fire waste. These agencies have been successful in reducing the fire waste to some extent, yet there is need of a much greater, stronger force. Such a force seems to be the arousing of public sentiment to such an extent as will insure the cooperation of every individual in the matter of careful and systematic inspection for the purpose of eliminating careless fires. Such a public sentiment can only come as a result of a careful and systematic educational campaign conducted by those who have been trained in the matter of preventing fires.

SAYS LABOR POLICY IN NATION SHOULD UPHOLD GOOD FAITH

J. H. Tregoe Would Make Contracts Between Employer and Employee Inviolable.

New York, Sept. 3.—Advocacy of a national labor policy that would compel good faith and honor to contractual relations between employer and employee in which the personal rights to hire and discharge at will or to leave and strike at will would be subordinated to law, is urged by J. H. Tregoe, secretary-treasurer of the National Association of Credit Men, in a letter to members of the organization yesterday.

Mr. Tregoe wrote in part:— "The right to hire and discharge at will implies the converse, the right to leave and strike at will. Both of these rights, at least up to the present delegated to the government, are under the control of natural laws and when misused carry a moral injury. "When organization of either employer or employee is used for autocratic and arbitrary purposes it becomes offensive, and by all reasonable measures should be controlled or suppressed. The strike, in the final analysis, is too frequently the application of an autocratic power with a brutality that offends community life. It always carries its penalties to the community at large, though the latter holds a superior position in public and private enterprises. It places burdens on the innocent and non-offending. "We cannot permit in this nation of ours, with its ideals and traditions, the domination of personal rights over public welfare and happiness, and therefore we must have a labor policy—a policy not only recognizing but compelling good faith and honor in the contractual relations of employer and employee in which the personal right to hire and discharge at will and to leave and to strike at will are subordinated to law, to the provisions of a medium that with fearlessness and unprejudice will require the observance of contracts and the granting of conditions that spell fair play to all alike and give to them all opportunities for advancement, for comfort, for the culture toward which our best aspirations should tend. "Let us quit strong-arm methods, autocratic procedure, destruction of property, the breaking of contracts, the violation of good faith, with ignoring of public interests, and get down to the basis where men can and must live right in their social and industrial relations with one another."

Mr. Tregoe's letter touched also upon the question of high prices for commodities, against which the association has declared itself.

DOG DAY.
It was "dog day" in the police court. Nearly two hundred persons were reported for keeping unlicensed dogs. Forty or fifty settled by paying the tax. Many of those who failed to pay appeared in court yesterday. Those who could not give a satisfactory explanation of their failure to conform to the terms of the city by-law paid $2.50 and settled their cases.

EX-EMPRESS' SCORN

Indignant Speech to a Deputation.

(Daily Express' Correspondent.)
The newspaper "La Suisse" learns from Vienna that the ex-emperor Karl just before leaving for his exile in Switzerland, received a numerous deputation representing the old Austrian regime and the Hungarian magnates, who wished the ex-emperor, who was still hesitating, to remain in Austria.

The conference had lasted for several hours when the ex-empress Zita rose and indignantly said, "Gentlemen, enough. The Hofburg has been a hell to us. You cannot flatter yourselves that you can make us accept the appearance and responsibilities of power of the ancient regime."

"Personally I have been treated with hatred and disdain by persons paid by your clique. Your emissaries insulted me at Salzburg when I was speaking to my children in Italian, my native tongue. I was always a foreigner for you."

Enough; let the matter remain there. My husband and myself have done our duty, and we have suffered enough."

The ex-empress's spirited speech acted like a bombshell, and the deputation hurriedly departed.
