Our Special Commissioner takes a Trip up the Rhine—Through Bismarck
The Rhine and the Cities along its Banks—The Ravages of War—Relics of Antiquity, etc., etc.

London, Aug. 10, 1874.

There must be something more than more than fancy in the sudden improvement which many experience in their feelings and general state of health by leaving England or America for a tour on the Continent. To the appetite and the biliousness that so often labor under hypochondriacal diseases, and a sorry state of digestive organs, I would say, take a trip on the continent and a run along the Rhine by steamer, the soothing and diverting effects of which I will not boast to say are more powerful auxiliaries for the cure of bad stomachs and the bilious. As a general rule, until within the last few years, Englishmen have not been exceedingly partial to continental travelling, the light diet and wines of the European cities not being considered by them a sufficient set-off to their "roast-beef, pudding and beer"; also the different languages spoken, that pestiferous nuisance of former years, the passport and the long detentions for examination of luggage, all tending to scare John Bull from the attempt. Within the past few years, however, Messrs. Cook, editors and proprietors of the Excursionist, and other agents have done much to develop travel in that direction, and now thousands of Britons pour over their every summer. With Americans also, during the last three months in the summer, the Rhine boats are swarmed.

Without going into any lengthened account of my observations during the twelve days of my tour, I will endeavour to give your readers an outline of the scenery I visited and the beautiful country I traversed, which, will, I feel assured, be quite sufficient to create a longing desire in some of our New Brunswick tourists to make the journey.

In the first place, as regards cost, the trip across the Atlantic by any of the Anchor Line steamers from St. John to Glasgow, salmon passage, is $65; from thence to London and Harwich, and across the German Ocean, up the Rhine, and back to New Brunswick, embracing a period of about 15 days, about $85 more; and back to New Brunswick, about $100 more. The cost of a single ticket, of course, need not exceed six weeks; of course the longer the tourist stays the greater the expenses. The most comfortable, the cheapest and most delightful trip a tourist can take.

We boarded our passports—although these are no longer required for the journey—travelling being free over every part of the continent, yet it is still considerable to be provided with one for identification. In case of any dispute about your baggage, they save considerable trouble and are very useful when applying for letters at the Post Office, and other official business.

On our route, the first stop is at Glasgow, where we stop for a few days, and then proceed to Harwich, where we board the steamer for London. The journey is very comfortable, and the scenery is very beautiful.

here are the sluice-gates opening to the canal which extends to Ghent, and gives this city the character and advantage of a seaport by admitting vessels of large tonnage. The tourist will observe piers and breakwaters, of piles and stone work occurring along the banks of the Scheldt at intervals. These are constructed to protect the banks against the strong currents and masses of floating ice which descend the river from the upper portions of the termination of the winter.

We next entered that part of the river which flows through Belgian territory, and what may be more properly termed the river. Below Zeld, beyond both sides of the river belong to Holland, Lackenshove, on the left, the city of An-werp with its tall spire, appeared to us on either side of the river before arriving at our destination.

Having arrived at the steamboat wharf on the Quai Vanduyck, we landed and entered the fine city of Antwerp at 10 o'clock. The city is situated on the right bank of the river, and is one of the most beautiful and important of our portlands.
We specially made our way to the partook of an excellent breakfast. Having only about four hours to see the city, we called on the Hotel de la Franc (30 cents) each and proceeded on our tour of inspection. The Hotel de la Franc is the Cathedral of Notre Dame, one of the finest churches and most beautiful in the world. It was commenced in the middle of the thirteenth century, and was not finished until the year 1521. It is a masterpiece of Gothic architecture. The interior is simple, yet imposing. It is 500 feet in length by 250 feet wide. The height of the tower is 160 feet. The interior is a masterpiece of Gothic architecture. The

There being nothing worth seeing between Cologne and Bonn on the Rhine, we travelled from 7 a. m. to 10 a. m., arriving about eight o'clock, and spent two or three hours very profitably in visiting the city. The city is situated on the right bank of the river, man's progress through boyhood, youth, manhood and old age. The boy strikes the first quarter, the youth the second, the man the third, and time the hour.
