Paris, Aug. 20 .- Paris was today the scene of most serious disturbances, recalling some aspects of the Commune. In response to an appeal of the journals, Le Peuple and La Petite Republique, groups of Anarchists and Socialists gathered at 3 o'clock in the afternoon in the Place de la Republique. The police had taken precautions, and there seemed no danger of disorders. Sebastian Faure and Faberot, wellknown revolutionary Anarchists, were the ringleaders. Faure, standing on the pedestal of the statue which rises in the center of the Place de la Republique, addressed the crowd. Among other things, he said that the Anarchists should be masters of the streets. The police then interfered, and dislodged Faure and Faberot, making three arrests. The crowd at this point dispersed, but a column of demonstrators headed by Faure and Henri D'Horr, made for the Place de la Nation. The police broke through the column and a struggle for the mastery followed. Shots were fired, and M. Goullier, commisary of police, was twice stabbed with a knife. This threw the police into momentary confusion. The mob reassembled, and ran toward the Place de la Nation. The police, reinforced by a squad that had been held in reserve, made another attempt to stem the current, and fresh FIERCE FIGHTING

occurred, three constables being wounded. Faure and D'Horr jumped into a passing street car that was going to the Place de la Republique, and the car driver, on arriving there, gave a signal to the police, who immediately arrested them both, together with two other Anarchists, Joseph Ferrier and Jean Perrin. All were conveyed to the Chateau Eau Barracks. Only D'Horr was found in possession of firearms. In the meantime the Anarchist mob retraced its course to the Place de la Republique, smashing the windows of religious edifices on the way. Suddenly , either at the word of command or in obedience to impulse, the column made a loop and surged toward the Church of St. Ambrose, where the rioters smashed the windows. Proceeding thence toward the Faubourg du Temple, which they reached at the corner, Due Darboy, and Eue St. Maur-Popincourt, they formed up into a compact Hatchets were suddenly probody. duced, with long knives stolen from the counters of shops, and a concented rush was made upon the Church of St. Joseph. The aged sacristan, seeing the mob, hastily closed the outer gates, but these

FORCED WITH HATCHETS and bars of iron. The massive oaken doors were then attacked. According to the first account, the wild horde burst into the church, which instantly became a scene of pillage and sacrilege. Altars, fonts and statues were hurled to the floor and smashed; pictures were rent, candlesticks, ornaments and hosts from high altars were thrown down and trampled under foot. The crucifix above was made the target for missiles, and the figure of the Saviour was fractured in several pieces. Then, while raucous voices sang the "Carmagnol," the chairs were carried outside, piled up and set on fire in the center of the square fronting the church. When this stage was reached, the crucifix was pulled down and thrown into the flames. Suddenly a cry was raised that the statue of the Virgin had been forgotten, and the crowd returned and tore this down also Meanwhile the sacristan, who had been captured by the Anarchists, escaped and called the police and Republican Guards, who promptly arrived with Anarchist Faure Precepitates many constables. They were compelled to fall back in order to form up into line of defense, as the Anarchists ATTACKED THEM WITH KNIVES. At length the officers began to gain the mastery. A score of Anarchists took refuge in adjacent houses. Others entrenched themselves in the belfry, and fiercly defended themselves by showering missiles on the Republican Guards, but finally they were dis-lodged. Twenty Anarchists were ar-rested, taken to the police station, searched, and found to be carrying revolvers, loaded sticks and knives. When the police entered the church the Anarchists had just set fire to the pulpit. The interior of the edifice was a complete wreck. Several valuable old pictures that can never be re-placed were ruined. After the mob had been driven away, Abbe Lacour, the incumbent, collected the fragments of the sacrament, and replaced them in the ciborium. As he did so he was heard bitterly lamenting. The people living in the house nearby extinguished the bonfire.

AFFAIRS AT MIDNIGHT. Since 8 o'clock demonstrations as far as Gare De l'Est, have been repeatedly driven back by police charges, the crowd crying: "Vive l'armee," and "Vive la Republique." peatedly The police also dispersed a crowd of gamins, who were burning bundles of newspapers. About 10 o'clock disorders occurred on the Boulevard de Magenta and Boulevard de Strasbourg. Several revolver shots were fired, but nobody was injured. Two newspapers kiosks were burned, and several arrests were made in connection therewith. There is no change in the situation at the building in the Rue de Chabrol, where M. Jules Guerin and his anti-Semite companions are entrenched in a state of siege against the police, who have orders for 20,000 PEOPLE IN THE STREETS. Paris, Aug. 21—2 a.m.—Besides St. Joseph's Church two cafes were wrecked. At a late hour 20,000 people were in the Boulevard De Magenta, which runs past the end of the Rue de Chabrol. They were kept constantly moving by the Republican guards, who made a remarkable display of force. Large bodies of police were constantly operating in and around the Rue de Chabrol, and a large force was held in readiness at the nearest barracks. In the collisions between the Anarchists and Guerinites, the scuffling was serious, and three companies of the Republican guards charged the contestants, several persons being injured.

QUIET RESTORED. Paris, Aug. 21.-Up to the present hour 56 persons have been reported injured, including several policemen. No one, so far as was known, was injured by firearms. Nearly all were hurt by being crushed or trodden underfoot. A body of rioters, who had e in the courtyard of the Gare de l'Est, were expelled by the police, who made 25 arrests. Quiet has now been restored. Shortly after mid-night noisy crowds began demonstra-ting in the Rue de Chabrol, but they were soon dispersed by the police. A PRO-DREYFUS DEMONSTRA-TION. Paris, Aug. 21.-A lamentable feature of the affair is that it will be regarded as a pro-Dreyfus demonstration and react greatly to the detriment of the chances of acquittal. It is much to be feared that yesterday's scenes were due to the weakness the government has displayed over the Guerin affair. The government's toleration and desire to avoid bloodshed has been misinterpreted with the worst results.

FORECAST OF DREYFUS' FATE. New York, Aug. 20.-The special correspondent of the Tribune at Rennes cables as follows, under Saturday's date: "According to impressions just communicated to your correspondent, from such an excellent source as to carry with it unusual presumption of truth the sentence of Dreyfus is already decided upon. He will be found guilty of disciplinary indiscretions, for which he will be sentenced to five years' imprisonment. As he has served this term of sentence, the practical result will be that he will be set free and take his position in the army as captain en reforme without pay or emoluments, and any career in the active army will be closed to him."

Referring to the trial of Capt. Dreyfus, the London correspondent of the New York Tribune says the Dreyfus case is followed with intense interest in England, and every stage of the legal procedure at Rennes is sharply criticised and grossly misunderstood, French and English courts differ so widely in their ideas of evidence and methods of ascertaining facts and dis-criminating between what is relevant and what is immaterial, that writers in each country are always tempted to describe legal processes in the other country as illogical. The continuous speechmaking in the witness box at Rennes astonishes English critics, who are unable to understand how the procedure can be regular, when not a tithe of the evidence would be admissable in the courts here. Yet the military court is acting in full accord with the precedents and habits of mind of French civil courts. English sympathy is solidly with Capt. Dreyfus, and the gloomiest forecasts are made of the result of the trial, which has already discredited the general, as well as the headquarters staff. The commonest idea expressed here, even by reflecting men, is that Capt. Drey-fus cannot be acquitted without a revolutionary catastrophe, when the passions of the French people will have full vent. These prophets of evil forget how their forecasts of a revolution in Paris have gone begging in the last thirty years; they also fail to make full allowance for the fact that there is a strong man in the French

Even quiet-minded Englishmen, as they read their morning's news from Rennes, can find but one explanation, and it is this, that France has gone mad, as she went mad in the revolution days a hundred days ago. But, where-as, her madness then was the sequel of ACQUITTAL. London, Aug. 20.—Thomas Terrell, Q. C., one of the leading jurists in England, who has attended some of the sessions of the Dreyfus court martial, says: "There is an air of unreality about the whole proceedings. Dreyius glone seems in earnest. No flerce conflicts of intellect occur between counsel, as would be the case in England, and in my opinion the president of the court has already decided the question in favor of acquittal. This appears to be the case from his evident anxiety to preserve an air of complete impartiality, and though on occasions he is unable to conceal his hostility to the defense, his intention plainly is to acquit. The court martial is as fair as a special jury, sitting without legal available base where supplies can be assistance, can be. The opinions it obtained. Tuesday or Wednesday, therefore, will more probably see his reappearance in court. He will be provided with a specially-constructed chair that will enable him to conduct the cross-examination at the outset without rising from his seat. Maitre Labori is intensely anxious to return to court, even if he has to be carried there in an ambulance. He is dissatisfied with Maitre Demange's conduct of the case thus far, and on his return, he intends to have Gen. Mercier and the other generals back upon the witness stand. After reading their evidence, he is confident of his ability to crush Mercier, and he expects to use the Schneider and Panizzardi telegrams also to confound Mer-

WHEN THE TRIAL WILL END. Paris, Aug. 20.-The Liberte says that the Dreyfus trial will not finish before the middle of September.

SIR WILLIAM BUTLER. New York, Aug. 20.—The London correspondent of the New York Tribune, referring to the recall of Sir William Butler from South Africa, says: "Sir William Butler, who has been recalled from the chief military command at the Cape, has taken a greater interest in English politics than other generals have done. Born in Tipperary, he sympathized with the home rule government, was once talked of as a Nationalist candidate, and has remained a staunch Radical. Naturally his recall has been sharply criticised by partisans both in England and Ireland, but it was fully justified by the fact that he was not co-operating well with Sir Alfred Mil-Too many cooks spoil the broth in South Africa as everywhere else. Cabling on the same London correspondent of the Sun says: There is considerable astonishment that Portugal, at Great Britain's instance, refused to forward the Boers munitions of war. Two versions of the affair are current. One is that the officials at Lorenzo Marquez are merely waiting for fuller information, and that when they learn the government's desire the consignment will be forwarded immediately. The other version is that the Lisbon government, at the instance of England, has ordered the Lorenzo Marquez officials to hold the supplies until further orders, England maintaining that they will endanger the peace of South Africa, and are unnecessary, as England has not threatened the independence of the Transvaal. It is cer-tain that Mr. Chamberlain will not allow President Kruger to turn the Transvaal into an arsenal, and will rather himself take the aggressive. It is evident, however, that the public at Cape Town does not regard the crisis as becoming worse. The London correspondent of the chief Cape Town paper, who has been exclusively sending the European end of the Transvaal question, including a $1,500 cable message on the night of the big commons debate, received orders this week to include the Dreyfus dispatches in his reports

THE SITUATION IN LONDON

The Tronto Globe Philosophizes on Oce Experience, ▲ Clear Case for Municipal Ownership The Penalty of Giving Away Franchises.

[Toronto Globe.]

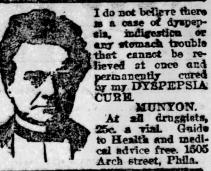

The unfortunate experience of London is forcing a consideration of the problem of regulating public services in the public interest. Ever since the street railway strike last winter there has been chronic or acute hostility between the company and its employes. The last outbreak resulted in mild rioting, but with the costly interven-tion of the militia. The pres-sure of the unemployed, strong even in the most prosperous times, gave the victory to the company, and the places of the strikers have been filled. Some accidents which have recently occurred have been cited to cast discredit on the ebility of the men who have re-placed the trikers, but the fact remains that there are men ready and eager to fill every vacancy. The feeling throughout the city is so strong in fa-vor of the men that a vigorous boy-cott is still maintained against the street railway, and it extends to everyone patronizing it. The boycott de-stroyed what would otherwise have been a happy reunion of London's "Old and it is still obtructing and demoralizing business and entailing serious discomfort and hardship on a large class of the community. That the discomfort is self-inflicted makes it none the less serious. It is discrediting the predictions of those who thought things would settle down into their familiar ruts in a few days. There are no signs of reconciliation nor of resignation, neither are there good grounds for believing that peace will be restored before the present force of employes organize and declare hostilities.

The problem confronting the people of London is one which may at any time confront other municipalities in the province. Modern methods of urban transportation, and the water, gas and electric services made possible by the growth of populous centers, soon become actual essentials of life. Commercial, industrial and social arrange-ments are made on the assumption of their steady continuance. With the steady continuance. With the course of development they become more and more essential as greater dependence is placed on them. It seems like improvident folly to have them established on such a basis that they may be suspended at any time by an industrial conflict. London has has the fire, with the result that there was experience of the sudden suspension of a big explosion. Fireman Adams was a street railway service and the continuance of the trouble has served to Slemin also met with injury. remind other large municipalities of a common danger. Attempts at arbitration and conciliation have proved futile, and it would be over sanguine to expect much from such efforts, however well intentioned. These suspensions have had an by the remarkable success which has municipal ownership and control is a the average citizen. As to the temptahas been freely urged in disregard of feelings of a class of prominent citizens, it is found to be as great or greater when the wealthy company assumes the discharge of public func-

The leasing of a public franchise to a private company is beset with more serious temptations than the operation of it by the municipal council. Under municipal control a street railway would doubtless have on its pay roll ome men not earning the wages paid them. But favoritism would scarcely be more marked than under private management. Besides, it would take many overpaid workmen to eat up the profits which a private corporation is fairly entitled to receive. It is questionable if the waste under ordinary municipal management would equal the profits of a private company controlling the same franchise. Municipal ownership gives greater flexibility, and questions as to rates, charges and services are always open for consideration. The city of London should be ready for an experiment in municipal ownership and control of the street rallway service. It certainly cannot make matters werse than at present, and it will aways be possible to go back to private ownership in case of failure. A cost of reproducing the road and plant for sale. That tends to show that municipalities are extremely generous when they grant franchises. But it may be profitable for the city to pay a struction to get back the road it has parted with. Experience in private management has been costly, but if the besson be taken to heart it may be worth all it has cost.

The high school course of study is amended by making bookkeeping obligatory, and by adding agriculture and manual training to the list of optional subjects. In poetical literature, for Forms I. and II. no special texts are prescribed by the department, but the pupils shall study such selections from pupils shall study such selections from the high school reader as may be re-commended by the principal, together with such books for supplementary reading as he may recommend and which may be obtained from the library of the school. In the case of pupils preparing for university matriculation or taking the course for a commercial diploma, or where the board introduces manual training or any other branch of technical education, on the recommendation of the principal less time may be given by the pupils concerned to one or more of the obligatory subjects of the high school course, so as to meet as far as practicable the aims of the pupils.

EXAMINATION STANDING. At the high school entrance examination the paper in arithmetic will include such questions as will specially test the accuracy of the candidates in the simple rules, as well as their knowledge of the subject, and the paper in dictation will call for the study of the authorized spelling-book.

The examiners will be expected, moreover, to set papers for the purpose of candidates who desire to become teachers, but it is not intended that the ques-tions shall be more difficult than the regulations have called for since 1896. The papers in arithmetic and measuration and grammar and rhetoric, as hereinbefore mentioned, shall be sub-mitted to candidates, when writing for Part II. of the junior seaving course, in addition to the papers in these subjects taken by candidates when writ-ing on Part I. For the optional groups the examinations will be equal in difficulty, as near as may be, in order that candidates who begin the optional subjects at the same time dur-ing their high school course may have equal advantage in preparing for the examinations.

PERCENTAGES. Each question paper will hereafter be valued at 100. Candidates for junior and senior leaving standing will be required to make 50 per cent of the ag-gregate marks prescribed for each of the parts into which the examinations are divided, as well as 331/3 per cent on each paper. Seventy-five per cent of the aggregate will be required for hon-If, after all the answer papers are read, and question paper should be found by the board of examiners easier or more difficult than intended, the minimum on the paper shall be correspondingly raised or lowered, and the total number of marks correspondingly increased or diminished. Each can-didate who makes the required aggre-gate may be awarded a certificate, even though he should fail to obtain the minimum in a subject, provided he was regarded as fit to pass in that subject by the staff, as shown from the confidential report sent to the department before the examinations.

COMMERCIAL DIPLOMA. The course for a commercial dip-loma will, as heretofore, consist of two parts (I. and II.). Part I. will be the same as part I. of the junior leaving. Part II. will embrace the commercial subjects mentioned in regulation 50, viz.: Bookkeeping and writing, com-mercial transactions, business forms and usages; stenography (theory); stenography (dictation).

COUNTY MODEL SCHOOLS.

The abolition of the primary examination will not affect the rights of holders of primary standing obtained in 1898, or a previous year to attend county model schools. It should be understood that county boards of examiners are not allowed to award third-class certificates to candidates who do not make the higher percentage required by regulation 63. A district certificate shall not be granted under this section of the regulations, unless there is a scarcity of teachers, and until the consent of the department has been first obtained. Renewals, granted under regulation 87, are valid only in the county where is sued. Beginning with the examina-tions of the model schools of 1900, an additional paper in methods will be submitted to test the ability of the students in training to teach drawing, writing, bookkeeping and elementary science (botany or agriculture). There will also be an examination in reading.

The bride's dress was of cream cashmere, trimmed with lace. The bride made it herself. Her hat was of the same shade, and was trimmed with lace and forget-me-nots. The bride and bridesmaid wore their hats during the ceremony, which took place at 8 in the evening. The supper was served at 9. The cooking was all done by the bridesmaid. THE LONDONS' HART IS O. K. At St. Paul dispatch says of yesterday's game with Buffalo there: Paul's victory in eleven innings today was due to Hart, the West Superior young man brought here a few days ago to replace Glenalvin, who had his left elbow thrown out of joint. The Saints trailed the Bisons all the way from the first to the minth inning. In the ninth Houtz got a life on Cockman's fumble. Isbell made a single and Lally a triple, and then Hart tied the score with a good single to left, In the tenth Knoll made a hit, but was not advanced. St. Paul went out, one, two, three. Dillon opened the eleventh with a safe line drive to left, and Mc-Kevitt got to first on Shugart's fumble, Dillon going to third, whence he scored on Hall's fly to center. Geler hit safely in the last half, took second on a passed ball, stole third, and got home on Diggins' bad throw to catch him. Isbell struck out and Lally got to first on Hall's fumble. Vaughn's hit put Lally on third, and he scored on Hart's drive over the second bag.

The True Relief,

For Internal and External Use. In using medicines to stop pain, we should avoid such as inflict injury on the system. Opium, Morphine, Chloroform, Ether. Cocaine and Chloral stop pain by destroying the sense of perception, the patient losing the power of feeling. Conservatives' ruin.

London, Aug. 20.—British naval cir- | lower house, when by a vote of 212 to cles are just now deeply stirred up over charges of treasonable and dishonorable disclosures in regard to British fortifications and coast defenses, which have been publicly made against Lord Brassey, publisher of the famous "Brassey Navy Annual," by G.A. S. George Willis, one of the most estinguished officers of the British army and the former governor of Portsmouth. According to Sir George, Lord Brassey has laid bare in his book secrets concerning England's coast defenses, and especially regarding Portsmouth, that would be of immense advantage to England's enemies in the event of war.

The charges are made all the more forcible from the assertion that Lord Brassey secured his material for his book through his official position as parliamentary secretary of the admiralty and as civil lord of the board controlling the naval defenses, a place he has held for years.

In the eyes of Englishmen, this charge, if it is supported, would become a heinous offense, because Lord Brassey's annual is a private enter-prise and is printed for profit. SHOWS WEAKNESS OF VITAL POINTS. Sir George claims that Lord Brassey has laid bare all the weak points of Portsmouth harbor, the vital point of which the emperor has so publicly and England's coast defenses. Portsmouth strongly identified himself. Their inprobably would be the first point in England that a hostile fleet would attack, and any mishap there would quickly cripple the British navy, for the arsenal and dockyards are the most important in England.

Lord Brassey unquestionably knows all about the weak points in Ports-mouth defenses, but whether he has given any of them away in his annual is another matter. He has been the world's authority on naval matters for years. His name, and the name of his yacht Sunbeam, are familiar to every schoolboy. At present he is governor and military and naval com-mander-in-chief of Victoria, the most prosperous colony of Australia. For this reason Englishmen are greatly agitated over the charges of treason made against him. Many of them probably lend a more willing ear to the charges than they would otherwise, because it is general belief that Lord Brassey is not a bonafide lord, his title an and that he bought his family tree. General readers who hunt through Lord Brassey's Annual for 1899 will have some trouble discovering on just what Sir George's charges are based. There is an entire chapter in the book on British coast fortifications, which tells some of England's weak points in a general way, but there is little about Portsmouth specially.

LORD BRASSEY ARGUMENT. Lord Brassey now argues that the commercial ports do not need fortifications for their defense, but men. As for the protection of anchorages, he states there are in the British Empire many fairly sheltered and open-mouthed bays that would probably be much frequented in time of war. Here is where he believes there should be battery protection. As an example of their effectiveness, Lord Brassey discloses that on the "L. B. and S. Coast Railway, which runs along the coast, a gun has been mounted on and fired from a move-In the case of dockyards, Lord Brassey states that it is to be supposed that until the enemy got control of the sea he would not be able to bring any considerable force against them. If the enemy were a great military power, and had succeeded in getting control of the sea, he would probably do what he liked with the English dock

"Coast fortifications," Lord Brassey concludes, "holds but an insignificant place in any proper scheme of British defense. Fortification, much to the detriment of that freedom of traffic on which the prosperity of the British Empire depends, and will depend even in war, has been made to include obstructions of channels by under-water

GIVES DIAGRAMS OF SHIPS. The Annual for 1899 contains a good deal of information that is more specific concerning the progress of work on Engish defenses and dockyards. In this the Portsmouth defenses are referred to a number of times.

There are no diagrams of coast de fenses, but plans are given of British warships which might be of use to an enemy. Plans of warships belonging to other nations are also given. The bulk of the information in Lord Brassey's however, is concerning British ships and defenses. The 1889 Annual was issued about four months ago.

Defeat of the Canal Bill a Hard Blow for the Emperor.

Berlin, Aug. 19.-The result of Wednesday's and Thursday's sessions of the diet, the unbroken opposition to the Conservatives, constituting almost a majority of the house, came as a stunning surprise, not alone to Emperor William, but also to the whole cabinet. DETAILS OF DREYFUS TRIAL GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBLE FOR

Testimony of Boisdeffre and Gonse-Leakage at Military Headquarters Continued After Dreyfus' Arrest.

Rennes, France, Aug. 19.-There was a thrill of curiosity when Gen. De Boisdeffre, former chief of the general staff of the French army, advanced to the witness box and took the customary oath to tell the truth. The general remarked that in view of his exhaustive evidence already given he would try to be brief. He hurriedly reviewed the leakage in the ministry of war, the discovery of the bordereau, the arrest and trial of Dreyfus, and the latter's alleged confessions, before the ceremony of degradation, to Capt. Lebrun-Renault. Witness said he believed the confessions were genuine. He next referred to Col. Picquart's appearance in the intelligence department, although the witness had hesitated to appoint him because he emperor's enthusiasm for the canal. Putting things together, it is almost certain that if the bill falls, as there thought Picquart too self-confident and not sufficiently deferential towards his chiefs. as the vital part, the Midland canal

"It has been said," continued Gen. De Boisdeffre, "that a secret package of papers was shown the judges of the court-martial of 1894. I positively assert that, so far as I am concerned, I never ordered Col. Picquart to convey any envelope to Col. Maurel. I may add that Col. Picquart never doubted the guilt of Dreyfus and never even expressed doubts of his guilt when he took over the duties of chief of the intelligence department. The first instructions I gave him were to follow up the Dreyfus affair, and it is well know what was the result of those instructions." Captain Alfred Dreyfus at Rennes on the charge of treason, excited much

INTERVIEW WITH PICQUART. The general next described the interview between himself and Col. Picquart, when the latter first mentioned Esterhazy, without, however, connecting him with the Dreyfus affair. Witness discredited Col. Picquart's statement that the latter asked him (witness) not to mention the investigation to Gen. Gonse.

"Gen. Gonse," said Boisdeffre, "is a friend of thirty years standing. I al-ways had the greatest confidence in him, and should certainly not have entertained a request to leave him in ignorance of what was occurring."

Gen. De Boisdeffre, whose evidence was attentively followed, especially by the members of the court-martial, then related the incidents of his interviews with Picquart to see Gen. Gonse, and Gen. Gonse's subsequent letter to the witness advising a continuance of the investigations concerning Esterhazy, but adding that the affair must not be mixed up with the Dreyfus affair. As Col. Picquart persisted in trying to hurry matters and was neglecting his other duties, the witness proposed to the minister of war to send him, not in disgrace, on a mission to Tonking, but the minister of war, the general asserted, found another mission for him. BELIEVED IN THE GUILT OF. DREYFUS.

Everything, the general added, went quietly for a year, until M. Scheurer-Kestner intervened. This was followed by the denunciation of Esterhazy by Matthew Dreyfus and the inquiry in-to Esterhazy's proceedings. "At that time," the witness said, "I was convinced of the guilt of Dreyfus, and this conviction is as strong today as (Sensation.)

"I regard it as an abominable crime." continued the general, "to have en-deavored to substitute for him a man of straw, however reputable he may have been, and whatever his offenses, which in any case would not lighten the guilt of Dreyfus. My conviction is the same as at the commencement of the affair. Esterhazy, it is true, at a certain pyschological and singularly well-chosen moment, confessed to having written the bordereau, but he has made many other statements. He is always telling lies. What is certain is that he could never have delivered the documents enumerated in the bordereau." "You know the result," said he, apparently much moved, "I will not tell you what I suffered at that moment. As soon as everything was ended I tendered my resignation, but was asked to withdraw it. I was told everyone could make a mistake, but I re-plied that while everyone was liable to err, everyone had not the misfortune, as I had, to assert to a jury that a document was genuine when in reality it was forged; that everyone ought to stand by one's word, and that when a man happened to experience such a misfortune there was nothing left for him but to go away, and from that

Answering a question put by a member of the court-martial relative to the conflicting testimony of Gen. Mercier, the former minister of war, and M. Casimir-Perier (formerly president of the French Republic), that he certainly had an interview with Gen. Mercier early in January, during the course of which Mercier remarked, in regard to the representa-tion of a foreign ambassador to the president of the republic: "It is not going to happen this time, either. You can sleep in peace. The incident has been settled." De Boisdeffre declared he was less certain of what had been said in regard to the confession of Capt. Lebrun-Renault. The general was also perfectly certain the incident of the Elysee did not occur Jan. 5, 1895, it was, he said, the 6th or the 7th.

"What is certain," added Gen. De Boisdeffre, "is that when it occurred, remained personally, at the ministry of war." M. Demange referred to Gen. Roget's deposition to the effect that Dreyfus was certainly intelligent, but that he would not have wished to see him on the headquarter's staff, and asked the witnesses' opinion on the subject. The general answered:

"I can only express the same opinion as Gen. Roget."
M. Demange—Was not Esterhazy, with your knowledge, assisted at the court of inquiry by Major Du Paty de Clam, who gave him advice?" De Boisdeffre—I am absolutely not

Col. Jouaust, president of the courtmartial, put the usual questions to the prisoner, who replied: "I have nothing to say to Gen. Blosdeffre," and resumed his seat. DANGER TO FRANCE.

After a brief suspension of the sitting of the court, Gen. Gonse, who was under chief of the general staff, was called to the witness stand. He explained the motives which influenced his actions during the past few years, and said he believed he was "animated by the loftiest aims, namely, the protection of the army against the criminal attacks made on it from all sides." In this connection, Gen. Gonse dwelt upon the danger to France of the "system of espionage so cleverly organized against her by foreigners," and said that in spite of Esterhazy's statements it was impossible for him to have written the bordereau, and still more impossible for him to have secured the information contained therein. He added that no traces of indiscretion were discovered during all the proceedings against Esterhard the Continuing, the witness deplored the fact that the court-martial of 1894 was held behind closed doors, adding:

"I regret it as a great misfortune.
The witnesses certainly said much more at the secret trial than they would have done at a public trial. But would have done at a public trial. But, the judges had a better opportunity of forming an opinion, even though the public might retain doubts. I deplore it keenly."

Gen. Gonse denied that Esterhazy had received money from the intelli-gence department, and describing the while the name of Dreyfus was often mentioned in the document in the possession of the intelligence department, his innocence was nowhere hinted at. PATY DE CLAM DEFENDED.

The general thea proceeded to defend Paty de Clam from the insinuations of Col. Picquart, and corroborated Gen. Mercier's evidence in regard to the alleged confessions made to Capt. Le-brun-Renault., Witness learned, however, that Capt. Lebrun-Renault "intimidated by the censure of M. Casimir-Perier," did not dare to repeat these confessions, and gave only an incom-plete account of the occurrences at the time of the prisoner's degradation. There was no truth, the witness said, in Col. Picquart's statements in regard to his, Gen. Gonse's excitement, Jan. 5. The general said he only learned of the ambassador's actions, Jan. 6.

The general denied other statements made by Picquart, and referred to the alleged number of arrests ordered by Picquart on "unfounded charges of espionage.

Considerable comment was aroused by the fact that, contrary to the provisions of the law requiring the testimony to be verbal and without notes, Gen. Gonse, adjusting his eyeglasses, proceeded to consult a large notebook and frequently refreshed his memory. Dealing with the Henry forgery, Gen. Gonse said: "I can say it was already known.

Gen.Roget spoke to me about it at least eight days before Henry confessed." (Sensation.)

One of the court asked if the witness knew that a document relating to the conveying of troops was for 24 hours in the hands of the prisoner, and if he knew that imaginary sketches executed by the prisoner had been delivered abroad.

Gen. Gonse-I could not give a positive answer to that question.
Q.—Are there proofs that the documents mentioned in the bordereau were delivered abroad? A. - There was no direct proofs, but their dispatch was certainly announced, Proceeding, witness disputed Mag-istrate Bertullus' account of the interview with Henry, but admitted that when he, Gen. Gonse, handed Henry his forgery, the letter insisted it must not be shown to Picquart. (Sensation.) HANDWRITING OF THE BORDER-EAU.

Replying to M. Demange, witness admitted he had ordered Col. Picquart not to concern himself with the handwriting of the bordereau when he commenced his investigations of Esterhazy. Then," asked M. Demange, sharply, "when you saw his handwritings were identical with the writing of the bordereau, did that make no impression on you?" "Evidently," replied the witness, "the two handwritings had a great resemblance.'

M. Demange—The "honorable" person already referred to, was not in receipt of pay, you said just now.

Gonse—The person was not an agent. He, indeed, wished to procure us information in and out of Europe, but he (Continued from page 7.)

A MILLION DOLLARS

This Vast Sum Will Be Spent in Seeking the South Pole.

England Is to Be the Leading Spirit, and the Money She Gives Was Raised by the Enthusiasm of Great Scientists-Germans, Too, Will Not Be Far Behind, and, Between the Two, Our Geographical Knowledge Will Be Increased.

If the South Pole and its unexplored neighborhood of land and sea, half as big again as the Dominion of Canada, manage to resist the effort that is about to be made to pinetrate their mysteries it will be almost time to conclude that they are not worth bothering with any more. Although Nansen climbed within 225 miles of the North Pole, while Sir James Clark Ross, who got nearer to the South Pole than any other human being, was at his best 700 miles away from the object of his desires, it seems likely that the South Pole may be the first to be reached, for the coming expedition is going to be the most elaborate, most thorough and best equipped of any that ever set out on a pole hunt.

The final plans for it are to be arranged In September at a conference in Berlin between English and German scientists. Expeditions from both countries will start out about the same time-the date has not been determined definitely—but they will start from different points and will follow different routes.

The affair is to be conducted on such a large scale that it is expected to bring bout more changes in the school geographies than have been made before in many a year. At present the maps merely show vague little fringes of land that disappear into space beyond the 78th degree of south latitude. The earliest mapmakers used to fill in such blank spaces with queer animals, and there is plenty of room, even on the maps of tolay, for a whole menagerie of such beasts n the 5,000,000 square miles of the South Pole's mysterious domain.

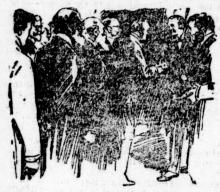

That the world is not wholly Phillisine and sordid is shown by the fact that Great Britain alone is going to spend $500,000 on the expedition, and the German appropriations indicate an expense almost as great.

Yet nobody supposes that this $1,000,-100 will bring a penny of interest or add in the least to the territory of the competing powers.

Mr. Balfour said the other day that part of his satisfaction over the expedi-tion was because there could not be any territorial rivalry between any of the countries engaged in Antarctic research. He said he didn't imagine that the most ardent advocate of imperial expansion was likely to find a sphere in which to arry out his ideas in Victoria Land or the regions around Erebus or Terror.

The only direct financial gain from this unprecedented pelar investment would be an increased knowledge of neteorological conditions which might help weather observers to be much more exact in their prelictions.

The first effective step toward the English end of this interesting enterprise e by Llewellyn W. Longstaff, a Wimbledon manufacturer and scientist,

MR. BALFOUR RECEIVING THE MEMBERS OF THE NATIONAL ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION. who offered $125,000 for the purpose out of his private fortune last March. No string was attached to the gift and no provisos were imposed. He was the man, by the way, who introduced successful profit-sharing in England. He evidently inherited his interest in science from his father, who was one of the founders of the Chemical Society.

The Royal Geographical Society added to the polar fund thus started until it had about $200,000. A few weeks ago a delegation of some of the most distingnished scientists in England waited upon Mr. Balfour, First Lord of the Treasury. to ask him for Government support.

The delegation was headed by Sir Clements Markham, president of the Royal Geographical Society, and included Lord Kelvin, Sir William Crookes, Professor Ray Lankester, the Duke of Northumberland and many others almost as well known. Mr. Balfour rarely has entertained so important a roomful of visitors. He said he believed such expeditions were desirable on practical and purely scientific ground, and were especially important when directed toward the Antarctic region, because of its prodigi-

The outcome of the visit was that the Government agreed to supply $225,000 of the $500,000 needed if Parliament approved, and also to supply the scientific instruments. Since then some of the Australian colonies have also voted appropriations.

Already the drawings for a ship of 700 lons are being made in the office of the chief constructor to the Admiralty, and bids for its construction will be asked for

It is estimated that the wooden steamship which is to be built will cost $175,-000; salaries and wages, $100.000; outfits, $35,000; fittings, provisions and stores, $110,000; landing party, $80,000; contingencies, $50,000, from which it appears that if the South Pole is not discovered on this trip it will not be the fault of those who are laying out the money.

The English part of this gigantic undertaking is to be done under the auspices of the Royal Society, of which Lord Lister is president, and of the Royal Geo-graphical Society, of which Sir Clements

Markham is president. It is believed that the English and German expeditions will approach the Pole from opposite directions, spending the winter on the outer edge of the mysterious continent that lies behind the ice pack, through which Ross was the first to penetrate. Ross was unable to set foot on this continent owing to the towering ice cliffs that bordered it, but Borchgrevink managed to land on it, When spring breaks, the English and German explorers, taking advantage of splendid equipment and of the informaexpect not only to land but to make an effective dash due south toward the Pole.

Until last year no one believed that it was possible to survive the terrors of an Antarctic winter, but the steamer Belgica, sent out by the Belgian Govern-ment, get caught in the ice pack as the winter came on, and stuck there three months, without coming to any great harm. Nansen says that the Antarctic ice pack is less dangerous than that in the Arctic, for the open ocean is so much bigger that it reduces the probability of severe pressure in the pack, the ice floating about more freely.

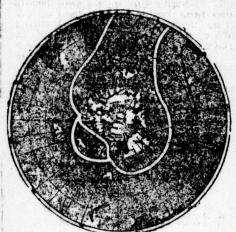

The Antarctic region has taken the lives of fewer explorers than the frozen north, into which Andree and his men have been the last to disappear. But the open sea which separates the Antarctic belt of broken ice from the mainland is frightfully rough, and the difficulties of making a landing over the vertical ice cliffs, rarely less than 150 feet high, are appalling. Not only does the sea forever lash itself to fury at their base, but powerful currents drive the ice to and fro wherever man would land, as if Nature were doing her best to keep what is now her biggest secret, so far as geography is concerned.

This mainland, which Ross souched in 1842, he named Victoria Land, and this is the name printed on the maps on the fringe of terra firma jutting out from the vast blank space around the Pole. It was he, also, who discovered Mount Erebus, the volcano designated on those maps. He discovered, likewise, a great mountain range, and since then explorers have found volcanoes in eruption on the side of the continent opposite Victoria

Fifty years later Borchgrevink, following Ross' route, got through the ice pack into the open ocean in a little over a month, and had the first look at Victoria Land of any one since Ross sailed away from it 50 years before. Although he managed to get the satisfaction of setting foot on the mainland, he narrowly missed paying for it with his life, for the current and the floating ice nearly carried him away while he was trying to return to the ship. After sailing back through the open sea he managed to get through its icy boundary in only six days.

Geographers are inclined to think that the mainland whose outer edges have been touched by these and other explorers

ANTARCTIC EXPEDITIONS.

Proposed Route of British Expedition is Shown by Broad White Line. Black Line Line Shows Route of German Expedition. is a vast continent, and that when wellequipped explorers are once landed on it progress to the Pole may not be excessively difficult. No one cares especially to find the geographical pole, for that is y, and probably not in the same place as the magnetic pole, over which the needle of the compass will become exactly vertical.

Many important investigations into magnetic currents of the earth completed when it is known def what the compass will do at the magnetic pole, when the exact location of that interesting place is learned. It is even thought that the deviations and uncertainties of the mariner's compass may be corrected when the influence of the polar currents is known by observation at their headquarters, so to speak.

There is plenty of other lines of inquiry that may be expected to make the million dollars to be spent on the proposed expedition a good investment. For instance: Is this supposed continent, fiveeighths as large as the whole of North America, populated? If so, it would be by a race supposably cut off from our own species by a period of time compared to which the creation of Adam, according to Bishop Usher's chronology, took place only yesterday.

But perhaps that line of speculation is rather idle, for recent explorers have been able to discern no sign of life on the land, except birds and insects, although Morrell, an explorer in the early part of this century, asserted that he discovered somewhere in that neighborhood -just where was delightfully vague-8,000 sea elephants and a marvellous collection of strange birds, sea dogs and sea leonards.

Many seals and whales have been seen in the Antarctic Ocean, and if it can be proved that the surrounding pack ice is not difficult of penetration by especially constructed ships it is possible that new whaling and sealing grounds of great commercial value could be established in time. It is even surmised that the whales which have so nearly disappeared in the northern waters may have fled to the Southern Pole to get out of man's way.

Perhaps the most practical field of investigation will be that of the winds and currents, which have a direct effect on navigation further north, and of which, as Lord Kelvin points out, seamen might be able to take advantage to get new and improved foutes between the southern extremities of South America, Africa and

So it appears that this expedition, which will be making its report to the world at the beginning of the twentieth century, will probably be remembered at the end of that century as the most important scientific legacy left to it by this century.

THE SHIP DIANA

It Has Started on the Voyage to Carry Supplies for Peary Into the Far Frozen North.

Captain Samuel W. Bartlett commands the ship Diana, now en her way to Arotic seas for the purpose of communicating with Lieut. Peary, establishing caches of supplies, and collecting scientific data in Greenland, as well as in the ice-bound waters to the west of that island. Captain Bartlett has a picked crew, and carries a party of 34, among whom are Herbert L. Bridgman, secretary of the Peary Arctic Club, who will direct the PEARY. expedition: Professor William Libby of Princeton, Russell W. Porter of Boston, Robert Stein of Boston and Charles A. Wyckoff, whose book, "The Workers," has given him leading rank as a writer. The Diana is 478 tons burden, well equipped with machinery, very strong and capable of an average speed of eight knots an hour. She is almost 30 years old, but has recently been overhauled and put in condition for her perilous voyage. Captain Bartlett, the master, is of the famous Newfoundland family of that name, and is singularly well equip-ped for his new duties. Mr. Bridgman, who will direct the expedition, was of the Peary auxiliary expedition in 1894, and is familiar with the region into which his new venture will take him. If possible, the Diana party will find Lieutenant Peary and bring away such data and material as he may have gathered. If he is not encountered, provisions will be cached for him and his men, and monuments at various places will direct Peary to their place of shelter. The expedition will also collect data of its own. Sydney, Cape Breton, was the last point at which the Diana touched. She will probably not be heard from again before November.

THE AUTOMOBILE.

The distance an automobile will travel without replenishing the reservoir (whatever the power-material used) is, of course, dependent on the capacity of the latter, and the effort being to keep the bulk of the apparatus at the smallest limit that will serve the purpose, the result is generally a trip not much greater than the 25 miles accorded to the practical electrical vehicles.

The weight of the compressed air carriage, with its apparatus, is little less than that of a storage battery vehicle of equal capacity. The motor apparatus suitable for carbonic-acid gas, ammoniacal gas and liquid air would differ little from that for steam in appearance and weight. The lightest automobile of which I have learned is a French wagon for two per sons, equipped with a steam motor, the entire weight being stated as 140 pounds Several of the applied motive powers have apparatus sufficiently compact to be contained in a little more than the space under the seat of the vehicle. among which is the very volatile petro leum-spirit.

All existing automobile vehicles except the electric carry apparatus for producing an electric spark or a flame, for igniting the vapor or gas in the cylinder, or for warming the expansive material.

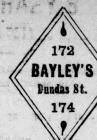

Most motors now recommended for road vehicles can be driven at any pace up to the speed of an average trotter, and the day of automobile racing has already arrived in France, and probably will not be long delayed in other countries. The prize contest at the Charles River Park exhibition of horseless vehicles, in Boston, last summer, involved the following conditions: Speed at level grade; at greatest possible grade; turning around in smallest space; stopping at an unexpected signal in shortest space; economy of fuel; quickness of preparation, and durability and cost of machine. - Lippincott's.

The oldest British volunteer is Quartermaster Sergeant George Catford of Honiton, who is 82 years old, and who was sworn a member of the Honiton subdivision of the Devon and Exeter Volunteers on Aug. 31, 1853, and whose signature, written that day, is still among the archives in the Exoter drill hall. Several years later, when the volunteer ferce was remodeled, he became a member of Third Devon Rifles, and so continues to this day. In spite of his advanced years, he attends the meetings of his company, and during 1898 he was present at the annual inspection, and attended three church parades. He wears nine service stars each representing five years' service, as well as the star of a past sergeant. He has, of course, received the long service medal. Until last year he was in active business as a saddler in Heniton, and is still a bale and hearty member of the volunteer ferre

Hanever Fruit Theorists Give Some New Ideas in Seasonable Foods for Hot Weather

Students of our time thinking on parallel lines with the savants of Germany, who have made such strides in the discovery and improvement of foods. have learned how much less it requires of bulk to satisfy the body (not the artificial appetite) than was thought in the eighteenth century. But all are pretty well agreed, especially in Germany among the truit theorists, that the food of all important workers should be the best. It is not uncommon to hear a fruit specialist say: "You-exhausting energy as you do for the daily press, which demands that the faculties of each man shall be at the top of his bent, you must eat better food. You should pay for the raw material of your food not less than ten shillings ($2.50) a day." If you expostulate, "But I think so much money can be better spent. Consider, doctor, the Scottish School of Metaphysics; all that brain stuff turned out on oatmeal and whisky; I don't think my work good enough to spend ten shillings on it. Rather let me do as St. Teresa (whose family spent a fortune on her health), pay no attention to my food or my health, and perhaps by thinking only of others as she did I will get strong as she did."

Here you are bidden be practical and open your eyes to light. Another German specialist said to me: "And eat-don't do as all women do-dine on tinned corned beef and hard boiled eggs. But go to the best place, order a broiled bird, a pint of Clicquot and a bunch of the best grapes iced-or Rudesheimer if you have the good sense. You will see that your editor will send a broiled chicken and champagne check, instead of one of corned beef and weak tea kind. To write well a man must build the thought up by the

If what the Hanover fruit theorists give out be true, the following fruit soups, taken icy cold or hot according to preference, are good for brain workers and people who must exert themselves in warm weather. They are given as food and medicine. But the doubter can take them for the sake of variety. Iced Soup of Oranges-Take oranges, grate the peel in sugar to absorb the essential oil, then pound the sugar in a bowl, and squeeze over it the juice of the fruit and do the same with two lemons, cutting the lemons lengthwise and squeezing the juice over their zest. Reject the seeds and put the pulp and sugar, in a porcelain pan, to which you have added three pints of cold water and let it boil. Dissolve in a cup a tablespoonful of Irish moss and add to the orange liquor. Let it reduce by ten minutes boiling, strain and cool Then put in it a pint of chopped ice, let it stand a few minutes, add a glass of white wine (unless white wine be forbidden as it is not prescribed for all men) and eat with bread as any other soup.

Raspberry Soup with Italian Paste-Take a quart of raspberries with a cup of powdered sugar and mash them finely. Pour over them three pints of boiling water, stir well and put on to come to the boiling point. Then add half a cup of vermicelli, which you have boiled tenderly in a little water separately. Stir and taste if agreeably sweet, and then add the juice of half a lemon and grate the zest into it. Put away to cool, then ice it, or not, as you prefer.

Apple soup is not due to modern theorists, for it has been a fruit broth for convalescents (in Germany) for certainly half a century; perhaps more. Indeed, by independent search I find that in the seventeenth century much that we think due to our age was employed by gentlemen and scholars, among them George Herbert, the poet and saint. Take four tart, very good apples, peel and core sem, and boil to a thin puree in three pints of water, add the grated rind of a lemon and four tablespoonfuls of sugar, a saltspoon of salt, two gills of Rhine wine. Lastly add three tablespoons of sago and cook slowly half an hour.

Pineapple purce can be made the same way, without the lemon rind. Not only is it an agreeable iced soup, but in winter it is given to babies to cure diphtheria. In exaggerated cases the juice only is given. Iced rhubarb is made into a thin purce or thick soup. Some thicken it with a little oatmeal. But catmeal does not agree with everybody, and makes itself manifest in a fainting sensation an hour after it is taken. For this reason some children's dislike of oatmeal should be considered.

Iced current jelly is another variety. Take half a pint of current jelly and a pint of chopped ice and shake them well in a closed vessel five minutes, then take as a soup. Strawberries and gooseberries can be similarly confected, and both these are commended for such as must do writing or study at night, while peaches and all stone fruit are not good for people of sedentary life.

UTILIZING CRIMINALS.

A Novel Suggestion In Regard to the Philippines.

A western lawyer, A. J. Sawyer, recommends that the criminals of the United States be sent to the Philippines as missionaries. We are spending millions of money annually, says he, in keeping in our midst the criminals, in maintaining jails, prisons and other places for confining the criminal classes, which are nothing more or less than schools and colleges where crimes are taught and the graduates rendered more proficient in the art of crime. In my judgment, all the criminals who are found among us should be sent where they can get all the barbarism they want. Nearly all nations have practiced banishment until recently, and many of the most enlightened governments are still practicing it for certain high crimes. England started her empire in America and Australia by it. We are maintaining hundreds of public nuisances, monasteries of malignity, for the more complete eradication of virtue in the depraved than is otherwise possible. We have thousands of convicts who to our civilization are mischievous and dangerous. To the Filipino they would be an invaluable help. They would become industrious missionaries, better than Christian missionaries for being more like the rogues among whom they would be sent. They would understand each other better than either of them now understand the missionaries.

During our civil war crime almost ceased throughout the country, because the war created a demand for the criminal and made him useful. Colonization of criminals would do exactly the same thing. Would it not be better for civilization if the treatment which we apply to missionaries and criminals should be exactly reversed? Let us send the criminal to the heathen and place the missionaries under that great forcing process, the penitentiary, with such changes, of course, in the institution as would adapt it to its new inmates. Let us adhere to the principle that righteousness, like crime, is the best cultivated by gathering large quantities of it together in one spot. We would then intensify piety at home, as we now intensify crime. If it would bring out out missionaries as much better as it now makes our criminals worse, our home righteousness would be irresistible.

One reason why the heathen cannot get along better with the missionaries is that the ethics of the missionary are too high for them. Their self esteem will not suffer them to believe that there is anybody better than they are. It has been wisely said that "they cannot trust a man who does not mean to cheat them, who looks upon the restraints of civilization as too few instead of too many and upon the methods of industry as being too sordid instead of too honest, who takes no delight in stealing, does not know what it is even to lie, owns only one wife and never whips her." In their inability to comprehend him they unconsciously believe that he must keep on hand some concealed stock of deeper villainy than they have found out in him, and they will not ethically and aesthetically mix with him. They are like the American Indians in the presence of the Puritan and Saxon, between whom there could be no bleed fellowship, nothing but extermination from the Atlantic to the

TREES HAVE TO SLEEP.

Trees and plants have their regular times for going to sleep, as well as boys and girls. They need the same chance to rest from the work of growing and to repair and oil the machinery of life. Some plants do all their sleeping in the winter, when the ground is frozen and the limbs are bare of leaves. In hot countries, where the snow never falls and it is always growing weather, the trees rest during the rainy season or during periods of drought. They always choose the time they cannot work the best for do-ing their sleeping, just as mankind chooses the night, when he cannot see to work. A Norwegian scientist has made some interesting experiments trying to ehloroform plants, and he has found that the fumes of this sleep giver make the plant sleep harder and grow faster when it wakes up.

BANNERMAN NOT TO RETIRE. New York, Aug. 20.—The London correspondent of the Evening Post says: Sensationalists have been trying during the week to stir the waters of home politics by the announcement of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman's intended retirement from the Liberal leadership in the House of Commons. The statement is utterly false. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman made at the last session an excellent impression, and with the invaluable and of Herbert Gladstone as chief Liberal whip, and the equally invaluable help afforded by the hopeless failure of the domestic programme of the ministry, he is already restoring the Liberal opposition to good fighting form for the general election now not far off."

OPPOSED TO WHEAT TAX. London, Aug. 20 .- The speech which the Right Hon. Henry Chaplin, president of the local government board, made a week ago, suggesting the taxing of wheat one shilling a quarter in order to provide the nucleus for an old age pension fund, has aroused great opposition, especially among the Unionists, and it has been discussed freely by all in course of the week. Spectator sums up the coinion of the Conservative party in regard to the matter when it says that a Cabinet minster should encourage such a proposal and with an obviously protectionist intent is a matter which cannot be but of grave concerns to all Unionists who realize how im it is that the ruinous policy of home rule, which is not dead but only comatose, should be faced with a united front.

Lord Provost declared that the Glasgow community did not want the People's Palace open Sundays. The labor party in the council strongly desired Sunday opening.

UNITED IRISH LEAGUE SPREAD-ING.

New York, Aug. 20 .- The London correspondent of the World says: William O'Brien's United Irish League is spreading apace in Ireland, and in order to check its further progress, the government is resorting to repressive measures on the ground that the speeches of O'Brien and others are calculated to intimidate "land grabbers," who have taken farms, from which the tenants have been evicted.

Two newspapers - the Waterford Star and the Tipperary Nationalistand six tenants, who are accused of intimidation, have been proceeded against for contempt of court, and violent harangues against the league have been delivered from the bench by two Tory

Judges of the supreme court.

These steps are taken in Ireland, as the surest indications that the rapid growth of the league is causing apprehension to the British ministers, who see in it the apostolic successor of the land and national leagues, and which is certain of development into a formidable electioneering engine at the next election.

It is the only living, thriving nationalist organization now in Ireland, and it has seemingly a clear field before it, which O'Brien and Davitt are preparing for a parliamentary harvest next or the succeeding year.

Secretary Gerald Balfour naturally wants to check the formation of such an organization, for if dissolution took place with the nationalists of Ireland in their present distracted state, the result would be the return to parliament of a body of unpledged members who would be an unorganized and wasted force in the British House of Commons.

Cabling to the Tribune on the same subject, Mr. Ford says: Irish affairs have been simmering for a long time, but have not dropped entirely out of sight. Intense interest is taken in the new councils organized under the Unionist local government account, and a conference of delegates from these bodies will be held in Dublin next week for an informal exchange of views. Much is expected of these councils, which are under Nationalist control, except one-half of Ulster, but they cannot improve roads on a large scale and provide employment for laborers without saddling expense upon the tenant farmers, and the large land-owners cannot be called upon to pay the costs of the various useful schemes now under discussion. The revival of interest in the local government is a great gain for the island, and so, also, is Mr. William O'Brien's "United Ireland" movement, which is making headway in the west and south. London, Aug. 20.-Two American ladies lately visited the German Kaiser on board his yacht at Kiel. They were (says the Christian World) pioneers in the movement for the emancipation of women. She says that women have no business to interfere with anything outside of the four K's-Kinder, Kirche, Kuche and Kleider-children, church, kitchen, and clothes.'

St. Johns, Nfld., Aug. 20. - Sir Hugh McCallum, governor of Newfoundland, in the speeches he is making to residents along the French treaty coast, where he is now inquiring into the fishery dispute, is very outspoken and emphatic respecting the French claims in that region. The governor asserts that they have no right there, save the right of fishing concurrently with British subjects, and that they are entitled to no territorial recognition whatever. This is the strongest declaration yet made in favor of the colony.

CANADA'S TREES

Her Forestry Exhibit at the Paris Exposition.

Preparations are being made by the Canadian geological survey for a forestry display at the Paris exposition. The space allotted to Canada in the forestry building is 1,000 square feet, but even this is considered inadequate.

The spaces allotted to the other nations are not known. The Canadian exhibit will adjoin that of Great Britain, which will naturally be much smaller, as Great Britain has but nine native trees of commercial value, whereas Canada has upwards of 80. Canada is to be represented as a nation by itself, and not as an adjunct to Great Britain. An important feature of Canada's display will be separate photographs of 80 native trees of commercial value as timber. This, of course, does not in-clude domestic fruit trees, but the wild cherry, the wood of which is perhaps the most valuable sylvan product Canada possesses, will be represented. To supplement these photographs, speci-mens of commercial timber in every form, from the section of a sawlog to semi-manufactured products, such as hubs, spokes and deals, will be on view. Square timber will be an especiimportant feature. It is expected that the Canadian display will be greater in range than that of any other nation, with the exception of the United States. The latter can show even a greater variety on account of her tropical possessions.

Havana, Aug. 19 .- It is asserted that the arrest of Gen. Juan Isidro Jiminez, the aspirant to the presidency of Santo Domingo, was not caused by the orders from Havana, but was effected through the orders of Gen. James H. Wilson, governor of the consolidated department of Matanzas and Santa Clara. Immediately upon learning of the arrest, Major-Gen. Brooke, governor-general of Cuba, gave orders for the release of the prisoner. The action of Gen. Wilson in ordering the arrest of Jiminez causes much comment. present plans of Jiminez are not known. Having missed the steamer on which he had taken passage, he will probably return to Havana.

VANDERBILT'S ENGINE A SUCCESS

The New Locomotive Did Its Work Well in Two Unusually Severe Tests.

New York, Aug. 19 .- Cornelius Vanderbilt, jun, is pleased with the suc-cessful trials of the new locomotive designed by himself and tested over the Mohawk division of the road on Tuesday and Wednesday. He was in his room at the Grand Central station where he works in the engineering department under Chief Engineer W. J. Wilgus, when he explained how the electricity. On the Riqueval locomotive differed from those in general use.

"The chief difference," he said, "is in the shape of the boiler and firebox. The old-style boiler and firebox were pear-shaped, the boiler surrounding the firebox. As the natural tendency of heat is to expand, the old firebox would stretch and tend to assume a cylindrical form. To overcome this a great number of staybolts had to be used. These burned through in course of time, and when it was necessary to replace the firebox all the staybolts had to be cut through, which was a long, tedious and expensive job as there are from

1,200 to 1,600 staybolts. "When I was at the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale, I conceived the idea of having the boiler cylindrical in shape and suspending the firebox from it by sling-stays from the top of the This has many advantages. boiler. The heating surface is much greater, the steam can circulate around the firebox more freely, and the firebox can be removed much quicker without removing the cab, as is necessary in the present engines. It will take less than half the time and half the expense to change a firebox in one of my engines. "I did not finish the plan while at school, but completed them last year while in the motive department of the road. The plans were sent to the Albany Engine Works, and while workmen were building it I learned that almost the same idea had been tried in Germany with absolute failure, and by the Strongs in this country with but indifferent success. I was so confident in my idea, however, that the work went ahead, the engine was finished, and we started the tests over the Mohawk division two days ago.

"I might say," continued Mr. Vanderbilt, "that it is usual when testing new engines to have small trains of cars. Now, this was not done with my engine. One train had 50 cars and the other 63. The distance was 138 miles. These were exceptionally sewere tests, but good time was made and the engine steamed well and handled the trains with ease. I am thoroughly satisfied with the tests. I rode in the cab with the engineer."

Mr. Vanderbilt's designs have been patented. It is expected that the new fireboxes will last much longer than the ones now in use. A favorable report of the tests was received officially at the office of the superintendent of motive power yesterday, but further trials will be made. Should they prove successful the locomotives of the road will probably be altered in conformity with Mr. Vanderbilt's invention

LONGEST CANAL - TUNNELS

One in France That Is Over Three Miles in Length.

Of canal tunnels proper, the longest is the Riqueval tunnel, on the St. Quentin Canal, in France. It is 21 feet wide, 41 feet high, and 2½ miles long. The Hoirran tunnel, which brings water to the same canal, is 7½ miles long, but it can hardly be called a canal tunnel in the ordinary sense, as it is but five feet wide, and cannot be used for ordinary canal boats. Another French canal tunnel on the Marne and Rhine Canal, is three miles long. In England the longest canal tunnel is the Standege tunnel, on the Huddersfield Canal; it is 31-10 miles in length. Next to it comes the Sapperton tunnel, on the Thames and Liverpool Canal; it is 4.300 yards long.

In these tunnels there is generally no towing path. Through some the boats are taken by means of steam or or 30 barges, each weighing 300 tons, are often taken through in a line, by means of a steam towboat working on a chain, at the bottom of the canal. In others men in the boats haul upon chains fastened to the wall, or propel the boats by pushing with poles against the roof. In a few the old method of "legging" is still used. Men lie on the deck of the boat and push with their feet against the roof and the walls. These men are known as "leggers."

FELL INTO THE RIVER.

Chicago, Aug. 19.-Two bridges over the Chicago River have been ordered closed to traffic, seven others have been condemned as dangerous, and more are labeled "very suspicious." All this came about yesterday, because of the bridge over the Calumet River at Ninety-fifth street dropped into the water when it was swung for repairs. The bridge broke squarely in half over the center pier, and both ends went down into the water.

"Well," said Fanny, offering him some more tea, as she sat down again by the table, "it is rather odd, Nella and that Gerard Norman, you know, are second cousins. Norman's grandfather had a business up in Lancashire -I think it was a silk mill—and he made a great deal of money by it. He had some land, too, and was of good family. Their name was Wentworth. Well, he quarreled with his son, Norman's father, and left all his money away from his to his nephew-Nella's father. But Mrs. Wentworth had some money, and besides, some came to her from her relations, and he was to take the name of Norman, and came to us, you know, to be prepared for the army. Mr. Fenwick, who sent him to father, toid us all this."

"Oh, but then the money disappeared, didn't it;" said George.

"Then she was only 15 then," thought George. "Give me the book, Fanny. What's it called; I must read it. It's rude to know an authoress, and not read her

"Oh, well," said Fanny, "now I know what you think of people who haven't happened to see your things in print. But I'll get Nella's book for you. It's

"Is it about the what d'ye called the place, with skulls and fire?" said George; "the thrilling romance' you

'No, but she made that into a little tale for the St. Pancras Magazine. I'll give you that, too."
George went off with the books, when his visit was over, to the rooms which he occupied at the school house, where meant to put the old trifles which had belonged to his great-aunt at Wardale. He had already hung Daniel Gladwyn's portrait, properly framed, over his chimney-piece, and as he sat down opposite it to smoke and read, he had that sense of being looked at which the eyes of some portraits give. He sat still with Helena Winifred Wynne's book on his lap, and looked back at the picture, meeting the wild and thoughtful eyes with his own.

George entertained, without really holding, all those ideas which are called 'occult" by their admirers, and "queer'

by other people.

He amused himself with the thought whether some kind of "sympathetic magic" pervaded the likeness of his powerful ancestor, and whether, from those mystical eyes, his influence would pour itself on his descendant. "I feel as if I should know somehow what he'd think about things," he said to himself. "I shouldn't like to plan a dirty trick with him looking on. I'll turn his face to the wall if I want to Jockey my conscience any time. By Jove! I think he's mesmeric! I'll read the stories. That girl ought to write

She did. "In the Heart of the Fire." as the shorter tale was called, was a fantastic little sketch, done in the most impressionist and up-to-date style, of a forced marriage in the middle ages. It began in the middle and ended there, merely giving in the first per-son the feelings of the unwilling bride. But it had force and style, and George would have seen merit in it even with-out the clew which he held to its meaning. Moreover, it was the other half of "Love's Flame." What would Miss Wynne think when she read that in the

With eager curiosity he turned to the other book, which proved to be a girl's novelette of the better class, well prin-cipled and well written. It was all young and crude, and not very wise; but it was written with the most curious realism in spite of its conventional plot. The knot was cut by the heroine's death, and the cousing only a presented in time to stand by her only appeared in time to stand by her grave, the reader being left in doubt whether, if she lived, he would have proved worthy of her affections or not. The heroine's name was Kitty, and she was endowed with flaxen hair and melting blue eyes. Under this astute disguise Miss Wynne doubtless felt that her own personality was veiled com-

George had already ascertained from his mother and sisters that Miss Wynne was a clever girl, but thought a great deal of herself, and that her aunt was "very peculiar." But then his family did not much like people who did not run on very straght lines. He had failed to awaken much curios-ity about Daft Dan, and had gather-ed that his banker grandfather had despised him as a spendthrift, and his father the canon had disapproved of his as dissenter. His mother spoke with kindness of old Aunt Hannah, and the story of Wordsworth's acknowledg-ment of the old prophet as a fellow-writer had caused Mrs. Gladwyn to remark that she supposed old Daniel had been a clever man. Perhaps, at first the yeoman forefathers had not been grateful to the ideas of a family rising into professional rank, and by the time such an origin had come to seem interesting and even distinguished, the facts were forgotten.

But as George, on the day of his mother's little party, looked at his four mother's little party, looked at his look handsome, fair-skinned, large-boned tary Ferret, who has told a he. The house which Mrs. Gladwyn had taken was called "Corners," whether from the sharp angle which it offered to two cross-roads, or simply because its first owner had been a Mr. Corner, was a moot point in Whitebury. It was a pleasant old house with a big garden, and was made to look homelike with family furniture and ornaments.

He came to the little afternoon party, given in return for the attentions that had welcomed 'Mrs. Gladwyn's arrival at Whitebury, with one thought para-mount in him. Neither his name nor himself had struck any chord in Nella Wynne's memory, but her aunt could hardly fail to remember his call on her at Chiswick. What would she do when she met him, and what—oh, what—must he do when he met her?

George was eager and full of interest, his good looks increased tenfold, and all the visitors noticed the tall young under-master, with his fine, shining eyes and speaking face. He attached himself at once to the

"Aunt Nora isn't coming," she said, as she came up to Fanny and shook hands with George, who at once begged her to let him take her to have some tea. Helena consented. "That's just what I feet," said George. "The stories are very vivid," he remarked, after a moment. "They have great reality. That is, the characters have. It is always rather difficult to believe in a death-bed promise."

"I'm afraid it's a hackneyed motive," said Miss Wynne. She did not mind the done, as it were, by a fellow-sinner.

It is just as easy to drift into danger as to drive into it. The progress is slower but the end is equally sure. It is the gradual progress of drifting which blinds to the danger. Men and women drift into ill-health in sure. There is a little feeling of oppression after eating. After a time it passes away. Some day it returns and brings another symptom headache, perhaps. Something is done to relieve the headache, but nothing to relieve the cause. So one more victim goes drifting on to the rocks of disease. Young women who are teaching or studying are very apt to become victims of disease of the stomach. They eat injudiciously, in some cases, and in general the brain is too occupied to allow the stomach the blood necessary to carry on its functions. Hence in time the organs of digestion and nutrition are totally deranged, and the young graduate goes home a chronic invalid.

The timely use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will avert such a condition; the faithful use of it in chronic cases will effect a complete cure.

cases will effect a complete cure.

"I was troubled with very frequent headaches, often accompanied by severe vomiting," writes Miss Mary Belle Summertion, of San Diego, Duval Co., Texas. "Bowels were irregular and my stomach and liver seemed continually out of order. Often I could ear almost nothing, and sometimes absolutely nothing, for twenty four hours at a time. I was entirely suffit for work, and my whole system seemed so run down that I feared a severe sick spell and was very much discouraged. I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and before finishing the third bottle I was able to undertake the duties of public school life, and contracted to do so."

M. Demange—Did you not say that this person had been proposed for a cross of the Legion of Honor, and that if he was not decorated it was because someone had intervened to prevent it?
Gonse—I never heard of it.

Demange-Very good. When Dreyfus was asked the regular question, he said: "I will reply direct to the secretary of the ministry of war, who said he saw me in the offices after service hours. As regards Gen. Gonse, I am surprised that the general officer repeats, dinner-table gossip. There is known to be an insurmountable difficulty in intro-ducing anyone into the ministry of war, and it is absolutely impossible for an officer to bring anyone into the minis-To this the general replied:

doubt it is difficult.' Col. Jouaust-No doubt it is difficult, but it is not impossible. The ministry could be entered easily enough at certain hours. Dreyfus was in a position to know that. (Sensation.)

The Prisoner—I will reply to Secretary Ferret, who has told a lie. What ministry, even when a French officer, I was obliged to descend to the floor below, and even members of the Chamber of Deputies who called on me could not enter the ministry. It is consequently absolutely impossible under ordinary circumstances for a subaltern to bring anyone into the ministry. Gen. Gonse declared that permits could easily be obtained. PICQUART RECALLED. At this point Col. Piequart re-entered the witness box in order to repy to allegations as to the way he performed his duties. He denied a number of Gen. Gonse's assertions regarding the arrests which the witness ordered. Picquart also described the extraordinary methods of investigation employed in the intelligence department by his predecessors. Counsel for the defense, after emphasizing the fact that even in the opinion of Gen. De Boisdeffre there was a connection between Esterhazy and Dreyfus affairs, asked the president of the court to request Col. Picquart to give information in regard to the 100,-000 francs said to have been expended for surveillance of Esterhazy.

While the witness was chief of the department, Gen. Billot, then minister of war, thought it necessary to make a distribution of amounts of secret service funds available at the different offices, and the funds in the witness' department were diminished by 8,000 francs monthly. At this moment, Col. Picquart said, negotiations of great importance were in progress, and an extraordinary expenditure had been arranged beforehand.

"This decrease in the funds," continued Picquart, "did not prevent me from pursuing the extremely interesting questions upon which I was then en-gaged. I made a memorandum in which I asked for a supplementary grant and 100,000 francs was given me. When the 100,000 francs was received, Gen. Billot made another redistribution. I received 20,000 francs, and with the balance remaining I was responsible for the whole service. In any case, no extraordinary expenditure was made in connection with the Esterhazy in-There could not be an inquiry quiry. costing less.

"In a note to the minister of justice in 1896, it was set forth that I employed as official agents the private detectives of the inquiry bureau. I only employed unconventionality of discussing her a single official agent. What led to book over the teacups, since it was the belief that I employed private agencles was the fact that this agent styled himself a 'business agent' on one of his cards included in the dossier of the Esterhazy affair.'

SECRET FUNDS. When the witness finished speaking, Gen. Billot jumped up and asked leave to speak.

"Picquart," the general called sharp-

"Certainly," replied Col. Picquart. "Gen. Billot then said: "I am very pleased that Col. Picquart has raised the question of the secret funds, which I had already brought before the court of caseation. The secret funds are secret funds, and I should, if I respected the purpose for which they are assigned, say nothing about them. I will endeavor to say nothing about them. I will endeavor to say nothing which should remain secret. The secret funds are placed at the disposition of the minister of war for the service of the state, and the minister has only to account for them to the president of the republic. The president controls and gives his discharge for the secret funds. Col. Picquart received from the chief of the general staff the funds assigned to his department. He believed he could dispose of them as he liked, but this the minister decides with regard to the requirements of the services, and distributes with the approval of the president, the secret funds at his disposal. I distributed these funds as they have been distributed for thirty years before my advent to power, by all the ministers of war. The sum of 32,000 francs monthly was allowed by the chief of the general staff for the intelligence department. When the credit of 10,000 was asked for, it was on the service of the general staff, and not for the intelligence department, as Col. Picquart believes. It was asked for on the report of Gen. Boisdeffre (then chief of the general staff), and not on the report of Col. Picquart, for the general service of the secret war funds. These funds were expended, as Col. Picquart stated, 8,000 francs by myself, and, as Gen. Roget said, 20,000 francs in 1896 and 20,000 francs in 1897 by Gen.Gonse. The remainder was placed at the disposal of my successor, M. De Freycinet, who had this sum liquidated by Pre-sident Loubet. I will not say another word. But, I must deal with the perfidious insinuation made to the court of cassation, which is calculated to deal a blow to the delicacy, loyalty and honor of the ministry of war."

This statement caused applause in the rear of the court, but Col. Jouaust cut the demonstration short by announcing the adjournment of the court till Monday.

My dear brethren, I wish now to direct your mind to a different theme. No doubt you were all more or less surprised at the announcement made by his lordship, our good bishop, in his address last Sunday. Well, it was no surprise for me. It was just what I asked for, and, therefore, my dear brethren, I this morning most gratefully and most cordially thank our good bishop for granting me my re-quest, viz.: A few weeks' vacation. "Not only a few weeks, but three months and more, if necessary," replied the bishop. Could he be more kind and generous than this? And what is still more in my favor, that on my return he will give me a home commensurate with my present position, and re-lieve me of the onerous duties of cathedral rector. If, therefore, any misunderstanding or misinterpretation as regards his lordship's words last Sunday have gone abroad in the parish, I wish, here and now, to rectify these misunderstandings or misinterpreta-About 9:30 Saturday night, street tions, and to state to you that what car No. 96, ran off the track at the he said was my own seeking; that although you will not have Father rounded by a crowd of loafers, who Tiernan to go to in your trials, troubles and sorrows, you will have smashed the car windows with stones. your good and zealous bishop, and you The crowd swelled until 150 or 200 perwill also have Fathers Alward and sons were present, and the spirit of destructiveness prevailed.
