celebration, and while he realized that most of the people enjoying themselves were justified, and that they deserved the outing, he remarked that if these people knew what their fellow-countrymen suffered in France they would regard it as a violation to ever forget those boys in the first-line trenches. They would not be so much absorbed in other things if they could appreciate the meaning of 80,000 Canadians moved to take part in the attack on the Somme. Their thoughts would be with those men, and never for a moment would the moral support of the community be diverted into other channels, and the war made to seem a far-off, secondary consideration.

THE NEED OF PROTECTION. ONE does not realize frequent need of a raincoat or an umbrella, but each of them lasts a long time, and they are very necessary when the rain falls. The city of London does not often require a steam reserve plant when hydro-electric power fails, but, like a raincoat or an umbrella, it is very necessary when such a failure occurs. London without light or power means that many public buildings are in darkness, local electric traffic is tied up, interurban service abolished, life endangered and much discomfort and inconvenience caused. Transmission lines do not solve the problem; in fact, when there was a single line it was promised that duplication would render the service perfect, but the breaks came.

THE FACTS seem to be that cheap power has caused an overload to be placed on the transmission lines. "Surges" from heat or lightning result in the loading apparatus burning out. New transmission lines seem to be the only solution, and sooner or later Western Ontario must be given more wire service. At the same time the system is at the mercy of certain faulty insulators, which German "efficiency" dumped on the Ontario commission. These insulators have not yet been weeded out, and they break frequently. Private companies, both in Ontario and New York State, which secure power for long-distance transmission have been forced to provide steam reserve plants. In New York State the public service commission compels a secondary system for the protection of patrons.

UNCLEAN MOVIES. FIRST WE ENDURE, then pity, then embrace." Does this apply to the sort of unclean moving picture that is too much seen by thousands of people who are all too young to be put to the test? Thousands of theatres demand new pictures daily, or twice every week. The production is forced and the oldest story in the world seems to be the standby of many producers. "Sin in High Life" might be the title of fifty per cent of the dramas that are now turned out. Faithfulness in love and the ease with which characters held up as models for a "moral" story succumb to temptation, form the central thought of the plots. Sensual appeal is written large over those scenarios which feature certain actresses who essay only one role, that of "the vampire woman."

THIS may be had enough in the United States, where divorce may be obtained sometimes on the ground of "mental cruelty" (whereby a man might cast off his wife if she gave him an angry look), and where the night life of great cities is falsely seized to represent the heart of a nation which is sound. But Canada has none of the nastiness, at least it is not paraded, which stamps itself upon the great American centres. It is, therefore, bringing a new and insidious evil into the life of this country to permit the entrance of these nauseating "pictures of passion." If there is a moving picture censor in Ontario he must like that sort of thing, or perhaps he takes a long vacation. It is to the interests of owners of theatres to deny entrance to the unwholesome influences of the vicious play.

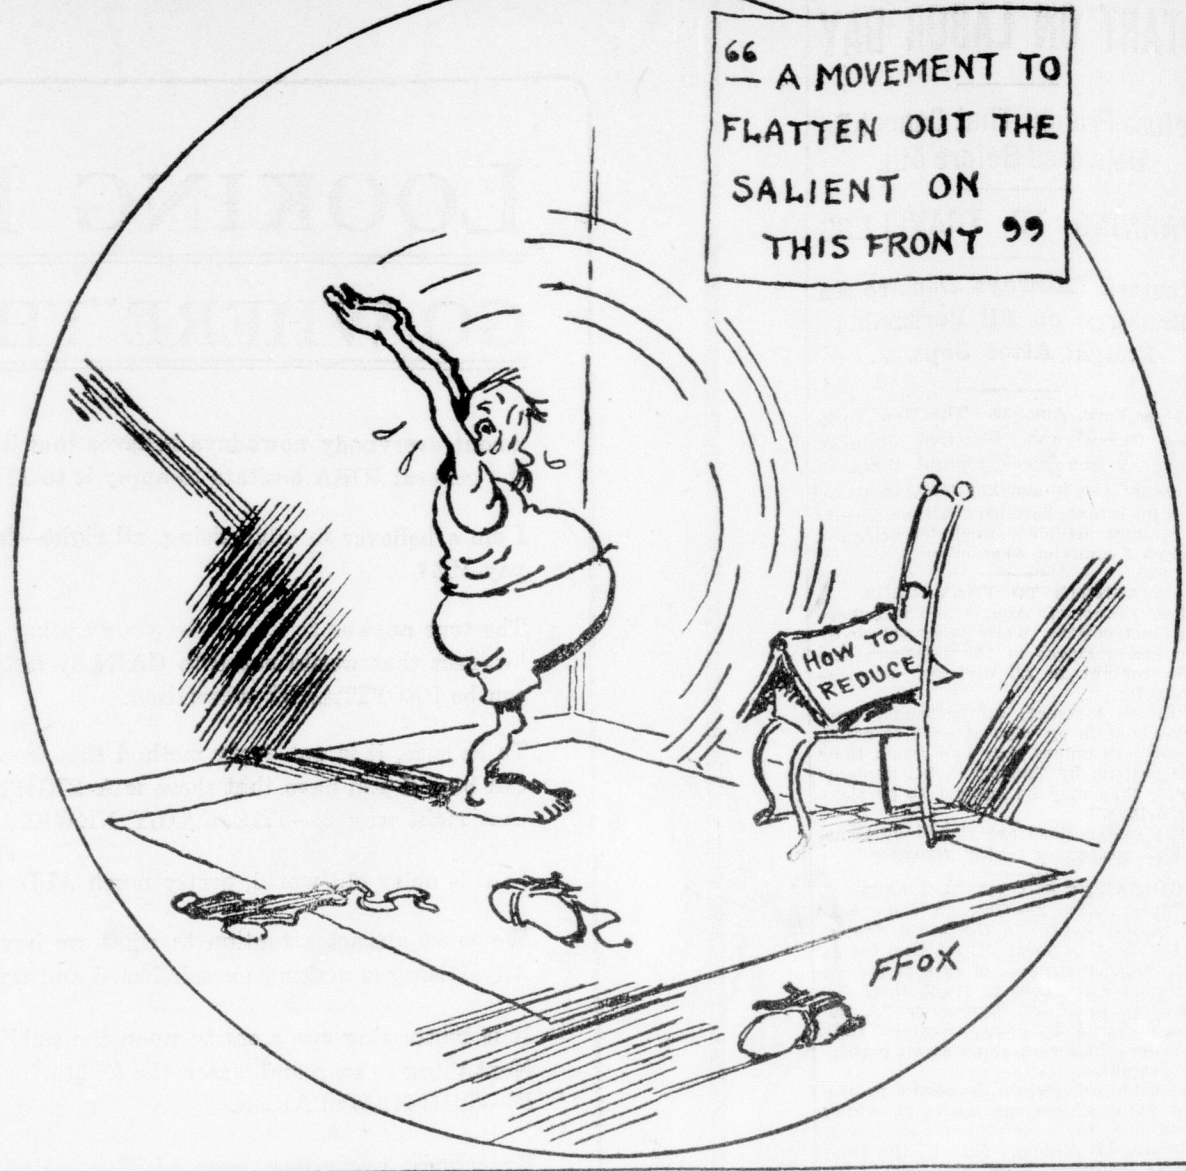

EDITORIAL NOTES. Life is worth living in Detroit—for auto bandits. Bulgarian soldiers are low in spirit and also in pocket. Germans accuse Rumania of treachery. They demand a monopoly of this weapon. Berlin, realizing that defeat is inevitable, says one more enemy makes no difference. Constantinople of Greece might as well be fighting as undergoing a series of surgeon's cuts. All bands of the Allies will now have to begin practicing the Rumanian Nation Anthem.

France is importing Chinese men to work in munitions factories. This is, in truth, a Yellow Peril—for Germany. Ferdie, the Fox of the Balkans, sees the hounds growing faster and stronger as he weakens. He must get back to his den or perish. "God knows I did not will this war."—Kaiser Wilhelm. He can at last say it, in the case of Rumania, without blaspheming. Thinking of how the German atrocities will be investigated and punished when the day of victory comes is "rest and expatiate" in la revanche to be.

Hon. I. B. Lucas says he knows nothing of hydro power being exported to Detroit. But then, there are other things connected with the commission's work of which he was quite ignorant. President Wilson's attitude towards the threatened railwaymen's strike seems to indicate he has lost faith in "watchful waiting" or else only believes in it when blood-letting is apt to follow action.

Like Mother Used to Make

[BY FANNY GRAY.]

WAIT A MINUTE!

By J. H. F.

Nathan Leach was a spoiled only son when Lena Clark married him. His mother had slave for him all her life, and but for the fact that his was a naturally sunny, unselfish nature, his upbringing would have attured him, like his mother, to a life of luxury.

On the whole, however, he was a pretty good sort, and Lena, who had married him with her eyes open, had little cause for complaint. Naturally, he had imbibed the idea that it was woman's place, to do all she could to please man, especially to cater to his stomach; for "mother" had always striven to gratify his appetite, and many a time, when scarcely able, had prevailed over a hot stove to get up a meal that should please him and his father. She was always cooking some special dainty for him and tempting him with appetizing dishes, until folks used to say that Nathan Leach's wife would have a hard time with Nathan always throwing mother's cooking at her.

Now Lena was something of a cook herself, and rather proud of it, though she did yield the palm to her mother-in-law in some things. When they were first married, Nathan had complimented her highly; but, after a time, he had become more critical, and unconsciously fell into the habit of comparing his own table with his mother's. Lena took it good naturedly, always had a ready answer, and her friction was avoided. But the habit grew until it became a very pernicious one, and Lena woke up at last to realize that she never served a meal that did not bring forth some comment or criticism.

And she realized, also, that it was but a habit, for on some of the occasions when complaint was loudest her own table was best provided. She turned the situation over and over in her mind, wondering how she could meet it. It was unjust to her, and sooner or later, would mean unhappiness for them both. Nathan certainly needed a lesson. How could she bring home to him his unfairness and unwarranted?

Finally she hit upon a plan. Nathan's mother was a pretty good sort, after all. And, although old, and feeble, and had spoiled her son, she recognized the fact and regretted it. Knowing this, Lena decided to go to her for help in her trouble.

She laid the case before her, and the older woman entered into her plan most readily. Mother and wife in a conspiracy against son and mother-in-law! "Dear me," said Mrs. Leach, "I'll try to see to it that your mother gets cooked as near like her own as possible. Don't you worry any."

"All right," said Lena, "I'll try to see to it that your mother gets cooked as near like her own as possible. Don't you worry any."

"That so?" said Lena quietly. "Well, I didn't see anything the matter with it. Your mother ate her share all right, and acted as if she liked it, too."

The casualty lists from automobile racing will compare favorably with those issued during the celebrated picnic, the Yanko-Spanko war.

We will not write a book on "How it Feels to be a Witness." It would be a harrowing tale.

It would appear that Greece is figuring on taking the big leap with the Allies, following Rumania's lead. Soon we will be singing that well known peace song.

After listening to the evidence in that Winnipeg conspiracy case the folks of Manitoba, it seems to us, are lucky to have a nickel to their names.

We read that J. Wesley Allison's great crime was in deceiving Sir Sam Hughes. Some of us doubt that Wesley would be guilty of such a deception.

Rumania is frank, and that's something in her favor. She is in the war for what she can get out of it, and places her money on the winning nag.

There seems to be some difficulty in getting a German or Austrian king for Poland. The job does look rather insecure.

It is probable that some of the older men would like to be Jess Willard, just for a night.

Soon the only peaceful nation in the universe will be Woodrow Wilson's celebrated country, which was too proud to fight.

Horse-racing may have been a bad thing in many ways, but motor-racing has it beaten forty ways for slaughtering folks and making American holidays rival the days when all Rome went out to see a few folks killed.

Dancing is the poetry of motion, we read, but it generally limps much like Poet Bill's poetry.

Up to the minute we have received no requests for prayer for another dry and hot spell.

Detroit is having such an epidemic of hold-ups that one suspects that some folks are trying to get hold of some money before Billy Sunday lands there.

White Sea had gone ashore at Shark Rock, St. Mary's Bay, Nfld. The report was sent by wireless by the Canadian Government steamer Lord Strathcona. The White Sea, a ship of 1,323 tons net, commanded by Capt. Stephens, was at Montreal on the 14th of the month and was, it is presumed, bound for a trans-Atlantic port when she went ashore on the Newfoundland coast.
