The Great Incapable

WHATEVER credit the Patriot may de they have occurred, its prognostications of the future should be received with caution. As a general rule people, even respectable Grits, will not find it safe to ook upon the editor of our Richmond emporary as a prophet. He certain amount of belief when he notifies the public that the potato bug has arrived, or that the con tract for the Cape Traverse Branch has been given out, but when he foretells things he is all astray unless his predictions are of a general nature, such a December will be a cold month, or i will be a number of years before the party obtain office, or it is doubtful hatever party is in power if "we" be ever called upon to take a portfolio again No. whatever else the Editor may be, he is not a prophet, and not being a prophet indulging in the spirit of prophecy. He is not even good at guessing. He bases his conclusions upon false assumptions In the Patriot of last Friday he declared there was scarcely any reason to doubt but that there will be another election at an early day, and he warns Liberals to be ready for the campaign. And why does he think so? Simply because the local Premier has been seen lately in St Peter's! Splendid reasoning, truly. Now if a general election followed every visit of the Hon. Mr. Sullivan to St. Peter's we should have lively times in the Island of Prince Edward. Fortunately they don't. We have said that folks should be cautious about receiving the Editor of the Patriot as a prophet. In good sooth, he seems to be deficient in common sense. or he would never put people in a flutter for which there is no occasion, by stating what he knows has no foundation in fac-For our own part we have the very best authority for contradicting the Editor of the Patriot, and declaring there is not a word of truth in what it says about an election, although, indeed, it is hardly necessary, as that journal has so fallen in reputation that it is no longer believed unless when it says what everybody knows already.

In looking over the Patriot we find that its Editor and Proprietor is the Hon. David Laird. Now, if he is the same David who figured at one time as Minister of the Interior, and at another as Deputy Governor of Keewatin, we are hed that he is not more guarded in using such words as "incapable" and guides the David Laird we refer to all through life, and deficits follow after him. hungry and cadaverous. On Friday last, on the Market Square, Constable Bernard Toole went to effect a Constable Bernard Toole went to effect a seisure on some meat and a wagon belonging, as he was informed, to Mr. Noil McNeill, then in charge of the same. Shortly after Toole made the seisure Roderick McNeill, a brother of the above, attempted to take away the meat, stating that it was his. A tussle ensued, and the constable drew a revolver, and told McNeill if he interfered with him in his lawful duty he would have to send him into eternity. McNeill had a warrant taken out, and the constable was arrested for an assault. While Toole was under arrest, and before bail was procured, the wagon and its contents disappeared.

The Captain was crossing from Charlottetown to Southport in a sail boat at ten o'clock on the night mentioned, and, when about one third of the way, was overtaken by darkness, the precursor of a storm. While trying to keep his proper steerage a squall struck the boat right in the bows, upsetting and turning it com-pletely upside down. The Captain managed to get astride of the keel and kept himself affoat as best he could, shouting now and then, without, however, succeeding in making himself heard. In this way he drifted with the tide up the East River, and returned with the tide again, which was lucky, as if it were going out in the first instance his chances would have been small. He suffered ably during the first two hours, but after that, until in the morning before he was recued and when it blew a gale, and rained and thundered, he felt as well as could be under the peculiar circumstances. At half-past four he found himself aga thport and Charlotte between Southport and Charlotteewn, and shouted lustily for assistance. He was more fortunate this time, as his cries were heard by Mr. Robert Bridges, who keeps the night forry boat on the other side, and who imme-diately rescued him from his perilous posi-tion. Said a reporter to a young lady: "I have become so proficient in writing up things that I can even write about nothing. "Yes, indeed," he went on, "I could even write about you." The reporter has not the slightest idea why the young lady has cut his acquaintance.

Then, summoning Ingersol, with noise-less steps he went out to the stable, and saddling a horse returned to town.

The lights were nearly all out, and the clock rang out the hour of twelve as he reached his office door. He sent the house to the ina stable, and went into the house. Placing the will and purse of gold in a small iron box, he put the key under his pillow and got into hed.

Then, summoning Ingersol, with noise-less stands and anybody. The coxcomb frowned, and the young lady smiled and curtaised as grace-fully as an angel.

"Do you ever have a sort of lassitudal feeling just after dinner, a kind of creeping sixtedness all over, and a desire to sit down he kindly inquired what neighborhood they are the first power of the man on the scap-box. "Well, yes," said the man on the mackerel-barrel, "only the feeling owner over me earlier in the day. It
