Maddolena's Story

The Cameo Bracelet.

CHAPTER II.

The usurer heaved a profound sigh. "Ah! Sir George, you must not talk of time to one who numbers four score years, and cannot expect to be spared much longer. What I do, must be done quickly. I cannot agree to any postponement."

by this impulsive offer. He saw that it was prompted by the girl's naturally warm and generous heart, and he was struggling for words in which to express his grateful sense of her good nature, when, with a growl and a snarl like a wild beast, Lucas Goldryng sprang upon her, and with one clawlike hand grasping her arm, he began to rain down such brutal blows on her head and shoulders, that instinctively she shrieked for mercy, and the indignant baronet sprang to the rescue.

CHAPTER III.

The scene was brought to a close by the evil-tempered old usurer suddenly ceasing to resist Sir George Ormsby's endeavors to drag the shrinking girl from his clutches, and dropping back in his chair in a fit. So hideous did he look, that, forgetting her bruised arm, the girl tried to seek the help of Hannah, the old woman who had admitted the baronet—the ill-paid drudge who scrubbed and toiled with no reward but the gratification of her own innate love of cleanliness and order.

She came muttering and grumbling at being disturbed in her work, but was silenced when she saw the condition of her master. Fortunately, she had plenty of common sense at command, and began applying those remedies that were at hand. In this she was assisted by the girl, who crept back after her, and now chafed the sufferer's hands, and bathed his temples as zealously as if she had not just endured his ill-usage.

"Have you ever seen Mr. Goldryng suffering from a similar seizure?" Sir George inquired.

"No, sir. And he looks awful bad, don't he?" the woman whispered, with an apprehensive air. "Don't think he's dying, do ye?"

"I really cannot say. Will it not be more satisfactory to have the opinion of a medical man? If you will tell me where the nearest one is to be found, I will fetch him."

But Hannah shook her head at the proposal. "I daren't send for a doctor, sir, without master's leave. He'd say I was an extravagant hussy for putting him to such cost; and most likely he'd stop the expense out of my wages, though they're little enough already, goodness knows!"

"But he cannot be allowed to lie here, and perhaps expire before our eyes for the want of more efficient assistance than we can render him," the baronet remonstrated; for he was beginning to ask himself uneasily how he should account for his own presence in the house, if Mr. Goldryng died, and public inquiry was made into the causes of his sudden decease.

Still the woman hesitated, not knowing what to do; and under these circumstances it was no small relief when the old man began to show signs of recovering his senses. He pushed aside the cold water with which Hannah was plentifully bedewing his face and head, and presently sat up, looking very feeble and exhausted; but in the full possession of all his faculties.

Feeling tolerably sure that he would not be able to renew his ill-treatment of his niece, Sir George now took his hat, and, briefly saying that he would call again in a day or two, prepared to return home. But with what a heavy heart! The interview from which he had hoped so much had been worse than fruitless; for the well-meant interference of the girl had led to his embroiling himself with her uncle, whose vindictive spirit he had no means of appeasing.

"What shall I tell poor Charlie?" the baronet sorrowfully asked himself. "But, nay; he is such a preux-chevalier that he will say I did right to defend the poor child. Can it be very wicked to wish that this covetous old brute had not recovered so quickly from his seizure? If he had lain long enough to suffer a few of the tortures he inflicts on others, it might have taught him to be more merciful to them."

Sir George's hand was on the door, when the voice of the servant recalled him, and she came hurrying across the hall.

"Please, sir, master wants ye. He's spoken quite sensible like. Indeed, he's a'most hisself again."

The baronet felt an insuperable objection to encountering the old usurer again; but his position compelled him to be conciliatory, and he went back to the room, and civilly expressed his hopes that Mr. Goldryng felt better.

Somewhat to his surprise, no anger at his interposition in behalf of the girl appeared to possess the shaking, gasping old man, who, though scarcely able to steady his voice sufficiently to make himself understood, was hurrying reproaches at his nieces.

"It was her fault—all her fault," he panted, as he pointed his skinny finger to where she stood leaning listlessly against the wall. "She provokes me till I lose all self-control. Didn't you hear her taunt me about her money? She only did it to remind me that it is hers—all hers. She has no right to it—no right. It ought to have been mine—mine, who helped to earn it. My brother was an idiot when he left it to a child who doesn't know how to use it; and, worse—worse than this, left it to her unconditionally. It was a madman's will. I said it was at the time, and so it was. Why, she can claim half when she marries, if it's to-morrow, and the rest when she comes of age! And so she defies me—defies me!"

"What have I done?" asked the girl, sullenly.

"What would you not do, if I were not always on the watch?" he snarled. "Am I not obliged to keep you without your shoes, because I detected you in the very act of stealing out of the house when you thought I was too much engaged to miss you?"

"It is a sin to wish to look at the shops when they are lighted," she demanded. "Who would not be tired of staying in this dull, dreary house?"

"Is it correct for a girl of decent parentage to be prowling about at night? Did you not bribe the foolish woman yonder to take you to some low place of amusement, where you would have been plundered of the few shillings I was weak enough to let you have, little thinking to what use you would put them? And aren't you always trying to make acquaintance with loose, dissolute people, who, when they get a fobbing in the house, would rob, and perhaps murder me? But what would you care? You—you—"

Here speech failed him, and he could only lie back in his chair, impotently trying to shake his stick at her; while Sir George looked from one to the other, unable to decide how far these charges were true.

But the girl, with the stolid air of one who was so accustomed to hear herself reviled that she had ceased to let it trouble her, stood chafing a livid wale upon her thin arm, and made no attempt to defend herself; and, seeing this, Mr. Goldryng addressed his next speech to the baronet.

"She talked like the fool she is when she said what she did to you. She cannot lend you the money you want. She cannot touch a halfpenny of it while she is under my guardianship. She is the plague of my life, I wish—and he said this with a bitter emphasis that made his auditor shudder—"I wish she was dead!"

"That is a sad and strange wish," Sir George told him. "This young creature, by your own showing, is your only surviving relative, and ought to be the comfort of your old age."

Lords of the Rivers

Having worked their tollsome way up from the sea, the salmon are busy in the autumn about their family affairs in the small waters far up among the hills.

Salmon and trout lay their eggs in autumn, not spring. It is an interesting sight to watch them on the spawning beds. The best fish chooses a pool with a gravelly bottom, and sets to scooping out a sort of trench. She seems to plough right into the gravel with her body, and the trench in which she lays her eggs may be fully ten feet long.

The eggs, when laid and fertilized, are carefully covered up, both parents taking their share at this work. They keep at it until the trench becomes a mound known in fishermen's language as a "red."

The hen salmon lays about nine hundred eggs for each pound of her weight, so even a ten-pound fish will deposit nine thousand eggs.

Once the important business of the spawning is completed in British waters the parent fish are free to depart. But unless the water is exceptionally heavy they hang about, waiting for a really big spate to enable them to make their return journey to the sea. So, even in the following March, when salmon angling has begun again, many a "kelt" of back fish is hooked in the river and has to be carefully replaced by the disappointed fisherman.

British salmon differ entirely from American and Canadian in that the former get back to the sea alive, while the latter never do so. This may be because of the enormous length of United States and Canadian rivers. The great salmon of Alaska swim up as far as Caribou Crossing, which is 2,250 miles from the mouth of the Yukon River.

Imagine a fish accomplishing such a journey without one mouthful of food to sustain it on its way! Salmon do not feed in fresh water. There is no parallel in all Nature to such a feat. And it is the more wonderful because the salmon, when in the sea is a most voracious feeder.

None of these United States and Canadian salmon return to the ocean. Not one! They simply starve to death and their dead bodies, drifting ashore pollute the river-banks for miles.

Even the smaller hump-back salmon, which, as a rule, use the smaller rivers and creeks of North America for spawning purposes, fail to return to salt water. These American salmon thus provide another example of Nature's care for the race, combined with carelessness of the individual life.—Saturday Night, Toronto.

MESSAGE OF VENIZELOS FLEXING.

ATHENS, Dec. 26. The decision of former Premier Venezelos to pay a visit to Greece without, however, returning to the political arena, as he says in the telegram announcing his prospective return, is variously commented upon in political circles. The Liberals are highly gratified believing that Venezelos can be induced to take up the reins of Government. The Republicans are perplexed for they do not know the real purpose of his return. The reunion of the Greek nation is regarded as a difficult task which only a politician of Venezelos's ability can perhaps achieve.

UNFORTUNATE SUICIDE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26. Despondency seemingly made more unbearable by scenes of Christmas cheer on all sides caused eight persons to attempt suicide during the holiday, police said to-day. Four men inhaled gas, one woman leaped from a roof, another woman drank poison, and an unidentified man threw himself beneath a subway train. The official records state that five died immediately and the others are said to be in a critical condition.

HOPE AT VANISHING POINT.

PARIS, Dec. 26. Indications that hope of rescuing the missing airship Dixmude is approaching vanishing point were seen to-day in the action of the ministry of marine in issuing a list of the fifty officers and men on board, which is seldom done in France until the craft is considered lost. The airship has now been out more than eight days. She carried eight days' rations and water a plenty, but only a limited amount of gasoline. The principal hope fostered here is that the Dix-mude has landed in the Sahara desert. The airship's wireless has been silent for several days.

MAKING SMALL HEADWAY.

LONDON, Dec. 26. The question of re-union of the churches, especially the Anglican and Roman Catholic, which was advocated in resolutions at the famous Lambeth Conference in 1920, has made the smallest headway, according to a Christmas letter which the Archbishop of Canterbury has issued from Lambeth Palace to the dignitaries of the Anglican communion.

ANOTHER STORY.

EL PASO, Dec. 26. Federal troops now control the entire Republic of Mexico except a small locality held by Generals Sanchez and Estrada, according to advices received to-day by the consul of Mexico here.

DOUCETTE MUST STAND TRIAL.

SYDNEY, Dec. 26. John W. Doucette, charged with the murder of Edith Mary Brailford, a young English working girl, who was shot through the head in the Fortune home at Dominion on Nov. 24th, was to-day committed to stand trial in the Supreme Court. No startling evidence was adduced at to-day's hearing, but the magistrate stated his opinion that the circumstances were such as to warrant a trial.

THE POLAR FLIGHT.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26. Recommendations that the navy's Polar exploration flight be attempted during the coming summer with the dirigible Shenandoah, and using Nome, Alaska, as the main operating base, are contained in a report of a special board of naval officers headed by Rear Admiral William T. Moffett, Chief of Naval Aviation.

WILLING HELPERS.

WORCHESTER, Mass., Dec. 26. More than one hundred persons in every walk of life answered the appeal of little 9-year-old Ralph Orcutt, at the City Hospital, for skin to be grafted to his body to heal the terrible burns suffered last July. The surgeons recently decided that Ralph's future as a cripple might be spared if twenty inches of skin could be grafted to his limbs.

GARCIA JOINS REBELS.

EL PASO, Tex., Dec. 26. General Alfred Garcia, former military commander in Seseotecas, has joined the rebel forces of General Estrada, according to travellers from the South.

POLICE DISPERSE K. K. K.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 26. Police, using clubs as weapons, forced their way through a crowd of more than 2,000 persons gathered at a Ku Klux Klan ceremony here just after midnight and extinguished the burning cross which had been set up on the steps of the building. The police arrived at the conclusion of the ceremony held by men said to be leaders of the K. K. K. in Detroit.

Obituary.

JOHN VINCENT DUCHEY.

Our little town was greatly saddened on Friday, the 7th December, by news of the death of one of our most promising young men, in the person of John Vincent Ducey. The deceased, who was the eldest son of Benjamin and the late Cecilia Ducey, had been for two years mate of the schooner "General Byng," of which vessel his brother Patrick was master. On one of her recent voyages to Portugal he contracted a chill, which speedily developed into tuberculosis. During the past summer he received the best of medical treatment from doctors in St. John's, Burin and Grand Bank, but got steadily worse, and a few weeks ago he went to the sanatorium at St. John's. Here, everything possible was done for him by doctors and nurses alike, but all to no avail, and feeling himself that the end was near he expressed a desire to return home to die. His brother and sister-in-law, Captain and Mrs. P. J. Ducey, hastened to the city, and found him very weak, but full of eagerness to reach home. After a journey painful both to himself and those who took care of him en route, he arrived here by the S.S. Argyle on Thursday at noon. On Friday at 10 a.m. he breathed his last, twenty-two hours after his arrival at the home he so longed to reach. He was attended by the parish priest, Rev. Dr. McGrath, who administered the last rites of the church. Jack, as he was called by his many friends, was of so happy and cheerful a disposition that even at the time he was feeling worst, would look on the bright side of things, and his early passing is deeply regretted by all. He was always happiest when at home, and besides numerous relatives he leaves a large number of friends here and elsewhere. He is survived by a father and step-mother, Mr. and Mrs. B. Ducey; three brothers, Patrick at home and Bernard and Don in St. Paul, Minn.; and four sisters, Mrs. Capt. W. P. Walsh at home, Mrs. Leo Walsh in New York, Mrs. Victor Baker and Miss Cecilia, both in St. Paul, Minn. The gathering at the church and graveside on Sunday afternoon was one of the largest seen here in years. The services were conducted by the Rev. F. J. McGrath, Ph.D., and the members of the Holy Name Society, of which the deceased was a member, paraded in a body. In spite of the rain, young and old followed the remains to their last resting place, and just at the close of the burial service the glorious sun shone out, reminding us of the resurrection morning, when there shall be no more partings. To his parents and those who mourn the loss of a loving son and brother we extend our heartfelt sympathy—May his soul rest in peace.—Com. Marystown, Dec. 13th, 1923.

Decline in Exchange

The steady decline which took place in exchange rates on European currencies throughout October reached a climax in a sharp break which occurred early in November and extended roughly up to the 20th of the month. Sterling declined in Montreal from 4.54 on the first of November to 4.38 on the 17th. French francs experienced a similar movement, declining from 5.95 on the 1st of the month to a low point of 5.32 on the 17th and Italian lire dropped from 4.56 to 4.22 during the same period. Other European rates, for the most part, experienced similar movements, said the Royal Bank in its "December Letter."

Various causes have been assigned for this sudden break in rates. Undoubtedly both economic and political factors have entered the situation. Such a decline would naturally be facilitated by the fact that the period concerned is the one in which Britain makes arrangements for heavy purchases of American cotton, Canadian wheat and so on, and these purchases react against sterling. There is a possibility also that the government is collecting dollar exchange pending its December payment to the United States on debt account. Furthermore, the general uncertainty which existed in Europe caused a transfer of foreign balances to the United States. The threatened severance of the triple entente led to serious uncertainty with regard to the future, and this undoubtedly reacted unfavourably on the exchanges. One of the factors in the British election, discussion which carried no weight in London, but possibly had some influence abroad, is the "capital levy" plank in the Labor platform.

The reactions which occurred in the above mentioned exchanges are not apparently the result of any fundamental change in the economic situation of these countries, but are due to current conditions. A study of the statistics of the circulation of the countries concerned, immediately dispels any fears which might exist that the governments concerned are resorting to inflation of the currency, as was the case in most of the central European countries. The outstanding currency of Great Britain, France and Italy in October 1920 and 1923, is given in the following:

1920—Great Britain: £481,000,000;	France: 38,596,733,000 francs; Italy: 15,238,709,000 lire.
1923—Great Britain: £404,000,000;	France: 37,870,009,000 francs; Italy: 12,929,538,000 lire.

The rapid decline of the German mark to the point of utter worthlessness is now an old story. The futility of endeavoring to carry on business with such a medium of exchange had led to various efforts to return to gold mark quotations; such attempts up to the present, have been only partially successful.—Saturday Night.

League Shows Interest in a 50-50 Marriage

Geneva, Nov. 30. (AP.)—Everybody connected with the League of Nations is interested in a pretty little romance between modest League workers which has joined together in matrimony the impoverished son of a former great Russian magnate and a beautiful young noblewoman, descendant of one of the oldest families of the former great Russian empire, both of them exiles from Russia as a result of the Soviet revolution. M. Pastoukhov, the bridegroom, whose father was the fabulously wealthy owner of the Donetz coal mines in southern Russia, has a humble position as interpreter at the League and there he met and wooed Countess Ounarov, of a family of ancient lineage, despoiled of title and fortune, who does not scorn to labor daily as typist and Slavic secretary in the political section.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR A GUEST

FAITHLESS.

Poor is the man who counts this life By days of pleasure and of strife Who thinks this paltry gift below Is all that he shall ever know. And wails no poverty is worse Than is the poverty of purse.

He has no faith to lean upon. No source of strength when hope is gone. He feels the winds of winter blow. He sees the cruel ice and snow. And thinks men suffer grief and pain. Love and are loved, and all in vain.

Yet he who cannot see the snow. Is poorer and more wretched than The pale, decrepit beggar man. With all their beauty at the gate. He poorer and more wretched than The pale, decrepit beggar man.

He may be rich in purse, but when He shares the common fate of men. And one he loves is called away. If all his joy was housed in clay And he has seen no spirit there. Then he is fated to despair.

No God to turn to with his prayer. None for his absent ones to care. No life beyond this stretch of years No future hope to dry his tears. Then, in his darkest hour of need. The faithless man is poor indeed.

MAY HAVE BEEN A COINCIDENCE.

A paper that prints a good many alleged photographs of unusual people had three all on one page, and all three were of men who wore those grotesque, deformed, drawish apologies for a real mustache, consisting of a tuft of hair on the upper lip. It might have been a coincidence, but one was a fellow who served ten years in a German prison for murder, one claims to have made a cannon that will shoot around a corner and the third was a man who paid $50,000 for a strawberry plant.

Famous Woman Criminal

"BLONDE ALICE THE QUEEN OF CROOKS."

A woman whose criminal adventures in two continents earned her the title of "Queen of Crooks" has been sentenced at Durham to three years' imprisonment. She openly vaunted that in crime she was the equal of any man, no matter how daring the venture.

"Blonde Alice" was the sobriquet by which this amazing crook was best known in the underworlds of London, New York, and Paris, but her real name is Alice Mary Smith. She was sentenced at Durham Assizes for stealing diamond rings.

Overcoats for Animals

Amusement was caused at the recent dairy Show by a white Runner duck dressed in a check coat tied around its breast with ribbon.

Overcoats for Animals

Certain animals, such as horses, have long had their special clothing, but in these days, when so many costly animals are bred, the question of clothing them appropriately is a matter of real importance. Just as racehorses have their suits cut and made to measure, so do racing dogs. No greyhound would last long if it had not a warm blanket-coat ready to slip on after it had finished a hard course. A greyhound's coat is made of very warm stuff lined with fleeces of soft woolen material.

Clothes for toy dogs cost up to £5 a suit, and include waterproof coats for wet weather. Some dog-lovers keep a waterproof coat for each animal.

There is, however, no necessity to spend a lot of money on such a garment. A piece cut from a worn-out waterproof or from a remnant of oilcloth can easily be adapted by means of a couple of straps.

Monkeys and other animals brought from the tropics require clothing of some sort during the winter unless kept in specially warmed rooms, and the writer once saw an elderly parrot which had lost most of its feathers dressed in a home-made jacket of red flannel.

SO DIFFERENT BUT SO ALIKE.

There are two very interesting facts in marriage which people seldom get through their heads until they have had them battered in by experience. The first is how very different the two sexes are. And the second is how very much alike they are.

Different in their reactions to certain things, and in the ways of expressing themselves. Alike in their fundamental feelings. I don't know which is the more important fact to realize, but I do know that more is said about the first, and so I want to say a word about the second.

After 12 Years.
A wife who has been married 12 years told me this little incident. "My husband said something the other day in regard to the children's schooling that I agreed with heartily. And when I said so his face fairly lit up.

"Why I thought you'd blow up and bust if I said that," he said, "I just dreaded to say it. But I felt I had to because I believed it."

"I was so surprised. I had no idea he felt that way. I've felt that way lots of times but I hadn't any idea he did. I supposed he just said what he wanted to and didn't care whether I agreed or not. He always acts that way. And when I told him I felt that way too, he was just as surprised as I was. Isn't it funny, two people living together 12 years and each of them feeling that way about a thing and never suspecting that the other did?"

It is funny. But I guess it's not an uncommon human experience.

There is just one human being in the world about whom we have inside information. But in the first place there are very few people who try to understand and study this information. In the second place there are still fewer who realize that in it they have a text book on human nature.

"Put Him in Your Place."
If every man and woman who is trying to make a success of one of those legalized friendships known as marriage, would make it a habit to constantly ask himself or herself when he experiences an emotion or a state of mind: "I wonder if my wife or my husband feels that way, too?" there would be a good many divorce lawyers out of a job.

"Put yourself in his place." is a good rule. Another equally good is: "Put him in your place."

Men are men, and women are women and never thwain shall meet. But underneath that substratum of difference both men and women are human beings and just alike. Don't forget either of these facts if you want to make your partner happy. And in so doing, yourself.

Better Ship May be Put in Cabot Strait Service

NORTH SYDNEY, Dec. 19.—Premier Warren, of Newfoundland, has returned home after three months absence during which he attended the Imperial Conference in London, England. The Premier was accompanied from North Sydney by Mrs. Warren, R. G. Reid, of the Reid Newfoundland Company, and Mrs. Reid, and M. S. Sullivan, member of the Newfoundland Legislature for Placentia and St. Mary's, all of whom are returning from Britain.

During his short stay in North Sydney Premier Warren discussed local issues and developments in the political situation with his friends, but declined to make any statement regarding a number of other problems which he pleaded, he must first lay before his council at St. John's.

The Premier believes that the greatest problem with which his Dominion had to deal at the present time is the unemployment situation, and he expressed the hope that a number of promised developments would assist this situation materially, if not relieve it entirely.

Premier Warren is carrying back to Newfoundland a proposition made by President Wolvin of the British Empire Steel Corporation, relative to the Bell Island iron ore mines, where operations have been seriously curtailed by the corporation. Whether the offer was a favorable one or not Premier Warren would not intimate.

Premier Warren said he had, while in England, interviewed representatives of iron and steel companies, and others, in an endeavor to find a market for the Bell Island product, but did not receive very bright encouragement. It was intimated by one of the members of the Premier's party that Sir Newton Moore, one of the directors of the British Empire Steel Corporation in England, was following up this lead by endeavoring to sell Bell Island ore to British, German and other steel making firms. The general tone of the conversation did not reflect opinion of a very bright quality.

Regarding other matters Premier Warren was more optimistic. He said the general feeling in Britain toward Newfoundland is very friendly, and the Dominion stood with a good reputation in financial circles, and the prospects of a number of industries being established in the early future are good. Mr. Warren would not disclose the nature of the industrial proposals that he will lay before his council on his return to Newfoundland, but it is understood there will be one by the Reid Newfoundland people in connection with the development of the Humber River District, involving the erection of a one hundred thousand paper mill at Tidewater. Mr. Sullivan has also proposed for the establishment of three industrial works that are expected to meet with approval.

Regarding matters particularly of interest to Nova Scotia, Premier Warren said he understood that increased traffic had greatly improved the financial position of the Newfoundland Government Railway, and the possibility of replacing the Kyle with a larger and more comfortable steamer on the Port aux Basques-North Sydney service was discussed. Mr. Sullivan expressed the opinion that the need for this had now become acute, and that the traffic now warrants such an addition to the fleet.

Premier Warren intimated that the matter would be given very serious attention.—Morning Chronicle.

Blames British Industry FOR CURTAILED PRODUCTION.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—(A.P.)—Sir Herbert Hambling, president of the Bankers Institute, blames capital and labor for restricted industrial output in England more than he does the economic crisis in Europe.

"I say without hesitation," Sir Herbert declared in a recent address, "that although we are losing much trade because of the European situation, a situation largely outside our control, we are losing more as a result of our high production costs, a situation within our control."

"I contend that if all restriction on output were removed by labor, and if all our trading interests aimed at making a large total profit by securing a small profit on each individual item of a big output, rather than by making a large profit on a small output, we should increase our overseas trade, develop our home markets and provide a large number of our unemployed with remunerative work."

B.I.S. Dance an Unqualified Success

Upwards of 250 people attended St. Stephen's Night Dance, in the B. I. S. rooms last night. The Ladies' Auxiliary, under whose auspices the affair was held, are deserving of a great deal of praise. These energetic workers had every preparation made for the comfort of all and the affair was voted one of the best Irish nights yet held. A large number of players participated in the card tournament, the final outcome of which resulted in Mrs. Wadden and Mr. J. Callanan being awarded the prizes. Dancing was indulged in at 9 o'clock. The usual Christmas novelties were in evidence. Fancy colored caps, crackers, rattles, etc., were distributed to each of the dancers, and general merriment followed until well after midnight. The Prince's Orchestra rendered a delightful selection of music for the occasion, encore after encore being responded to. A dainty supper was served by the ladies under the direction of Mrs. McKay, the President. On the eve of the first general holiday there will be another dance which is expected to prove equally as interesting as last night's.

Yuletide Bells

Yuletide Bells, a bright little Christmas number, issued by Miss A. English, has been received by us. It contains many fine contributions in prose and verse, by local and other authors, and we take the liberty to reprint the following anecdote from it:

A POLITICIAN'S MARK.

The late Barzey Owens, the noted old horseman, of Point Breele, had a fine sense of humor, and at a dinner that he gave recently to some New Jersey politicians, he impressed his guests a good deal with a toast that he proposed. "A toast of politics," he began. "A toast to politics and politicians. I know a man whose son is ten years old. To find out what his son's tastes were, this man put in the boy's room one day a Bible, a bottle of whiskey and a five dollar bill. If he takes the Bible, the father said to himself, 'It's a sign he's going to be a preacher. If he takes the money he'll be a business man. If he takes the whiskey he'll be no good—a drunkard. And he crawled under the bed and waited for the boy to come in. When the boy came in he was whistling. He ran to the table like a flash and took the money and put it in his pocket. He took the Bible and put it under his arm. He uncorked the bottle of whiskey, took two or three drinks, smacked his lips and went out whistling again. By jingo! said the father, crawling out from under the bed, he's going to be a politician."

Large Audiences at the Popular Star Again Last Evening

The theatrical expression "The attraction of the thing" was fully proven at the Star Movie last night, for in spite of the stores being open thereby preventing many hundreds from attending, nevertheless a packed house greeted the show. Pedrick and Devere are to-day the talk of the city, they being voted the best team we have yet seen, and the prolonged applause that greeted them went to show the high appreciation in which their numbers were received. For Friday night they have in preparation, this, with their new scenery which is now in course of erection will make them more at home, and will be an added attraction. The music of the Orchestra, is very favorably commented on, it affording the audience an opportunity of seeing a show that's a real show from beginning to end. It is a decided addition to the program and is fully enjoyed by all.

For Friday night "The Abnormal Brute," with Reginald Benny, which was delayed for Xmas Day, will be shown, and as this feature is being eagerly sought for, and with all new music by the orchestra and a change of songs and dances by Pedrick and Devere it goes without saying "All roads lead to the popular Star Friday and Saturday."

Wedding Bells.

VALLIS-WAY.
At St. Boniface Church, Ramea, on December 1st, the marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. E. S. Templeton uniting in the silken bonds of matrimony Miss Margaret Vallis and the Rev. M. E. Way, Rector of the Parish. The bride was becomingly attired in a navy blue costume with hat and flowing veil to match. Miss May Way, sister of the groom, was the chief bridesmaid, while Arch Bungay supported the groom. The wedding was a very popular one as was evidenced by the way in which the people of Ramea gave vent to their sentiments. The bride was the recipient of many valuable and useful presents. Mr. and Mrs. Way after spending a few days with the groom's parents at Hermitage will proceed to their new sphere of labour at Random, T.B.

Great Social Melodrama at the Nickel

"WOMEN MEN MARRY" HAS A DEEP STORY, WELL TOLD.

What question is as eternal as that of marriage? Every moment of the day some girl is leaving her childhood's home to enter into the sacred portals of matrimony. What do they know of what lays ahead—of dangers and pitfalls? In the photoplay, colossal in its human significance, "Women Men Marry," Director Edward Dillon has shown the fruits of the false education of the young, and the folly of those of riper years who forget that love and not money is the essential ingredient of successful conjugal venture.

How would you like to take a satisfying peep into the lives of those who compose the cream of society. All looks sweet and wholesome from the outside—but go behind the scenes. In the great photoplay, "Women Men Marry," the master director takes you into the boudoirs and drawing rooms of the exclusive set. It is a revelation which you will long remember.

St. Stephen's Night

AT T. A. SOCIETY ROOMS—ENJOYABLE AFFAIR.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the T. A. Society held a very successful card party and dance in the Armouries last night. Considerable interest was manifested in the card game. The prizes were won by Mrs. Wills and Mr. Lee, after a very exciting finish. During the interval the ladies of the Association served a delicious supper, and after the appetites of all had been satisfied, dancing was indulged in until an early hour this morning. The music for the occasion was furnished by Miskell's Orchestra. The evening was one of thorough enjoyment to all.

On New Year's Night another social evening will be held.

Wesley Barry at the Crescent To-Night

AMATEUR CONTEST TO BE HELD TO-MORROW NIGHT.

Wesley Barry, the prince of juvenile entertainers, will be seen at the Crescent Theatre to-night in his gigantic screen triumph, "Rags to Riches."

Packed with action, thrilling scenes and stirring adventure—interwoven in a beautiful story of romance, pathos and laughter. "Freckles" is seen in one of the greatest and most lovable roles of his career, supported by a stellar cast which includes Niles Welch, Ruth Renick, Russell Simpson, Richard Tucker and Eulalie Jensen. The story centers about young Marmaduke Clarke and his adventures when a burglar enters his room and adopts the boy as a pal.

Dolly Moore and Jimmie Clayton will appear to-night in an entire change of programme of novel and classy dances, and this in itself is well worth seeing. To-morrow night the usual Amateur Contest takes place. During the week many new names have been added to the list and a good evening's entertainment is assured all who attend.

Star Dance Was Big Success

St. Stephen's Night entertainment in the Star of the Sea Hall last night proved to be a huge success. The ladies of the Association, well known for their hospitality, left nothing undone for the comfort and enjoyment of their guests. About 165 people took part in the card tournament. After prizes were awarded to Miss Fower and Mrs. Harris, dancing was indulged in. The spacious room, which was tastefully decorated for the occasion, presented a real old time Christmas appearance. An unusually large gathering of members and friends of the Society indulged in the dancing. The strains of the C. C. C. Orchestra were probably never heard to better advantage. The entire gathering voted the affair a great success, and all went home at an early hour this morning, happy and satisfied. It is the intention of the ladies to hold a similar evening's amusement on twelfth night when another large gathering is anticipated.

The country is split on the question. The Royalists to his programme. Anti-Venizelos sentiment is summed up by the Chora as follows: "Partisans of Venizelos are borrowing the same shouts of joy which signalled the legal and honest return of Constantine, but Venizelos is not returning as victor. His election majority is false and non-expert people are wearied through hatreds engineered by him."

15 INSANE PATIENTS PERISH IN A FIRE.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27. Fifteen patients of the Chicago State Hospital for the Insane at Danzing, are believed to have been burned to death or suffocated in a fire which destroyed the frame structure used as a dormitory for tubercular patients to-night, and at least three others are believed to have perished. Attendants said possibly a score had perished but they believed the number would be less. The fire is thought to have started from an overheated boiler in the annex and the flames burst through into the rooms in which the men patients were dining. Many of those who are dead are believed to have been killed by suffocation, being overcome when the Guards were hurrying them into the drizzling rain outdoors. All were but mildly insane and there was little confusion, as they were lined up and marched to safety, some even remaining behind to help those who were overcome, or to attempt to fight the flames outside. Those who escaped found themselves temporarily without surveillance, and many wandered away into the city but were recognized by their hospital attire and finally all were guided back to the institution. The damage to the annex is estimated at one hundred thousand dollars. The institution which is on the edge of Chicago, consists of seven buildings, and houses thirty-hundred patients.

The Burden of Taxation.

In every country the cry is heard: "Relieve us of the burden of taxation which is crippling industry and making life itself unbearable." Recently in referring to this matter we quoted the remarks made by Sir Vincent Meredith, Bart. and Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor to the Shareholders of the Bank of Montreal. In the Monthly Review, Barclay's Bank, Ltd., the following comment on the reduction of taxation is made:

"From the experience of the past few years, it seems evident that we must regretfully accept the position that some of the factors affecting our trade are outside our control. But there are others dependent upon the conditions existing within this country, and these, to some extent at least, can be affected by concerted national effort. For example, the great strain imposed upon industry by excessive taxation can, up to a point, be dealt with internally. That this strain is amongst the several adverse factors affecting our trade is generally admitted, and it is not, therefore, surprising that many suggestions have been made for dealing with our national obligations in a manner which would make possible an immediate reduction in annual taxation."

"These taxes must be reduced. The taxes of the nation must be reduced now as much as prudence will permit, and expenditure must be reduced accordingly. High taxes reach everywhere and burden everybody. They bear most heavily upon the poor. They diminish industry and commerce. They make agriculture unprofitable. They increase the rates on transportation. They are a charge on every necessary of life."

"Of all services which the Congress can render to the country I have no hesitation in declaring this one to be paramount. To neglect it to postpone it to obstruct it by unwise proposals, is to become unworthy of public confidence and untrue to public trust. THE COUNTRY WANTS THIS MEASURE TO HAVE THE RIGHT OF WAY OVER ALL OTHERS."

The President forestalls the objection bound to be raised on the ground of expenditure, and says, "Reduce the expenditure." That is the matter for us to take to heart, and to impress upon our representatives when next they come round soliciting our votes.

A glance at the figures in the Nfld. Year Book reveals a state of affairs that is truly startling. In 1911-12 the expenditure on current account was $3,524,653. In 1920-21 it was $10,951,489. The revenue during the same period increased from $3,786,456 to $8,438,040. It will be observed that whereas in 1911-12 the revenue was in excess of the expenditure, the reverse is the case in 1920-21. A business institution run on such lines would soon be wiped out, but the balance has been on the wrong side of the Government's accounts ever since 1915-16. The War, yes, of course the war was responsible for the piling up of both taxation and expenditure, but what attempts have been made since the war ended to get back to normal conditions? Taxes imposed as special war measures are still in force to maintain—what? Machinery introduced to carry out war-time obligations and still functioning, although the duties which devolved upon those offices have long since been completed.

Similar conditions exist in many Government Departments, but no Government has yet possessed sufficient courage to use the pruning knife. No attempt is made to economise. On the contrary each succeeding administration appears to seek other channels into which public moneys can be turned.

If the public would realize that the one and only reason for the whole of the hardships which they have been suffering for years was due to the squandering of public funds, a change would soon be brought about.

When the next election campaign takes place in this country, be it sooner or later, every constituency should insist that there must be but one issue and one only—Reduction of Taxation based on Reduction of Expenditure. Candidates who introduce any other subject should be refused a hearing, and treated as agitators, attempting to arouse political animosity for personal ends. Unanimity of action by the country in this direction would bring even the most case hardened professional politician to a full realization of the futility of his old-time methods, and either reform him or break him. The latter alternative would be far more beneficial so far as our politics are concerned than the former, and far more effective in improving the moral tone of our administrations.

A feature of the programme was the presentation of white gifts by the children, who offered their missionary collection in little white bags, which were placed on a Christmas tree, the while they sang a pretty chorus. The concluding item was a cantata heralding the coming of Santa Claus, who presented the children with gifts from the Christmas tree, to their great delight.

Rotary Dines City Boys in the Institute

The Rotary Club were hosts to a large number of boy guests who assembled in the Institute Hall to-day at one o'clock to partake of a sumptuous dinner. The hall was gaily decorated, and the eight presented at those eager faced boys gathered round the festive board were one to make glad the heart of every Rotarian, and was an eloquent tribute to their interest in boy welfare. In addition to the members of the club several other gentlemen were present including His Excellency the Governor, the Hon. W. R. Warren, the Hon. Tasker Cook and a representative gathering of the clergy from the city and outports. During the dinner, the boys joined heartily in the rendition of popular airs from the Rotary Song Sheet and several ladies rendered solos. The speaker of the day, His Excellency Sir Wm. Allardysse, gave a very stirring address to the lads, offering them every encouragement to strive out and make a career for themselves. His speech was received with great enthusiasm, and the kindly sentiments expressed will not soon be forgotten. Another feature of the day was President "Tim" Mitchell's message from Rotary which was as follows:— "Boys! The Rotary Club welcomes you. Our wish is that you go "right to it" and have a good time as this is your party. We want your help to make this old town of St. John's a better place for boys to live and work in. To do this will take time, for you know "Rome was not built in a day." You must lend a hand and I will tell you how you can assist. First, you must guard and protect property, especially trees and flowers; do not break or destroy anything that belongs to another. Try to be good boys. Be good and you will be happy. Badness in a boy's soul is like a pencil mark on a sheet of white paper, you may rub out the blackness but the scratch remains. Be bright and manly. Be honest and truthful, for the liar is the thief's brother. Be true to your friends and "Play the game." Of course you have your troubles and worries, we know them, we were boys once; but now as men we aim to lessen our worries and troubles and give you a better chance to live happily and grow to be better men in this our own home town. Wishing You a Happy New Year, T. M. MITCHELL, M.P., President, St. John's Rotary Club. Before the gathering dispersed gifts of candy, cake and fruit were distributed. All the boys left the banquet hall happy and cheering for Rotary.

Death of the Rev. Canon Cartwright

We regret to chronicle the death of the Reverend Canon Cartwright which occurred on December 4th in Edinburgh. During the time that the late Canon worked in St. John's he endeared himself not only to the members of the congregation to whom he ministered but to the community generally. Of commanding figure, charming personality, and scholarly attainments, he left an impression upon all with whom he came in contact, which the passing of the years has not obliterated from their minds. Harry Beauchamp Cartwright was a scholar of Christ Church, Oxford. He received his Degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1885 and his M. A. in 1893. He was ordained Deacon in 1886, and was priest in 1887. From 1886 to 1893 he was curate at St. James's, Collyhurst, and in the following year was appointed Priest in Charge of All Saints, Canlington Manor. Thence he removed to undertake work in Canada where he spent considerable time in the west. Returning to England in 1892, he was engaged in parish work at Hythe, and in 1895 was made Fellow of St. Augustine's College, Canterbury. From St. Augustine's he came out to Newfoundland, where he assumed the duties of Rector Canon and Sub Dean of the Anglican Cathedral. Six years of arduous work necessitated his return to England. He was then appointed sub Warden of St. Augustine's College, Canterbury. Many Newfoundland students who completed their theological studies at that institution have good reasons to remember with gratitude the warm personal interest which he took in them, and his assistance and advice which was always theirs for the asking. Rector of Adisham, Kent, in 1914, he left that living to engage in work in the poorer parish of Sheerness. From Sheerness he transferred his activities to Lockathead in the Diocese of Argyll, and the next and last post which he filled was that of Vice-Principal of Theological College of the Episcopal Church, in Edinburgh.

There is general regret felt in town at his passing, and we feel certain that the same sentiments will be general in the many spheres of his activities. WINARD'S LINIMENT FOR DISTEMPERS.

Cardinal Begin

BANS DANCING AND THEATRES IN QUEBEC DIOCESE.

In one of the most important pastoral letters issued since he became the head of the Archdiocese of Quebec and primate of the Catholic Church in Canada, His Eminence Cardinal Begin banned dancing, condemned the illicit manufacture of liquor, its sale and smuggling, warned the faithful against certain classes of moving pictures and plays, and announced that special instructions have been given to parish priests and members of the clergy regarding immodest dress. The pastoral also cautions the people against non-religious social clubs, which may bring religious and national indifference to the people.

The letter, which was read in all the churches of the archdiocese, last Sunday, is expected to be preliminary to similar documents in other sections of the province, and even throughout Canada, by the Catholic Church. It refers to nearly all modern dances, and the violation of the decree is regarded as a grievous offence. The ecclesiastical document was prepared at the recent Synod held in Quebec, which was presided over by His Eminence and attended by representatives of the Church from all sections. Coming a few days before the usual celebration on the occasion of Christmas and New Year holidays, the letter has created a commotion as it affects not only balls, but even private dances. As a result, many social affairs which had been arranged for the holiday season have been cancelled—Family Herald & Weekly Star.

Thackeray liked his pipe and said so—a great physical aid in conversation

William Makepeace Thackeray must have felt more than friendly towards smoking, for he wrote: "Honest men, with pipes or cigars in their mouths, have great physical advantages in conversation. The pipe draws wisdom from the lips of the philosopher and shuts up the mouths of the foolish." Often you see two men sitting comfortably smoking their pipes in silence. They have no need for talk. The quiet puffing at their pipes is sufficient bond between them. Or you will see other men sit for hours in friendly discussion with pipes going all the time. Here the pipe seems to draw them out. And yet, for all its sociability, the pipe is a great solace to the man who finds himself all alone. As a real companion you have to travel far and wide to find anything to beat the pipe. You have any number of brands to choose from. No matter how hard you are to please, you can surely find the tobacco that suits your smoking temperament. If you haven't tried Edgeworth, there is a fairly good chance that it is the tobacco you have always been hoping to find. Edgeworth has made thousands of friends in all parts of the country, and each year it makes more and more new friends. A few pipefuls suggest to you whether or not you care to go further along the Edgeworth trail. "Edgeworth" is sold in Newfoundland by all leading stores.—dec27,31,th

Unusual Precaution Taken by Argentina

WHEN SHIPPING GOLD.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—(A.P.)—Patented by a ton of gold, over which twenty soldiers stood guard day and night, the steamship American Legion has arrived here with its precious treasure of $5,000,000 in bullion from Buenos Aires. It is the first gold locally to be exported from Argentina since the wartime embargo and, according to Munson Line officials, the largest consignment ever to pass between the two continents.

The gold, in 20 oaken chests bound with metal and sealed, when shipped here by the Argentine National Bank for deposit against London drafts to pay the coupons on part of the Argentine external debt. Since the debt is payable in sterling, the gold probably will be exchanged for British pounds, after which it will go into storage to remain until it is mined or reissues in a stream of bullion constantly flowing between the United States and foreign countries.

Because of the difference in the rates of exchange the government of Argentina expects to profit to the extent of about 3,500,000 paper pesos in New York when the gold is exchanged for pounds sterling.

Handling large shipments of gold and silver bullion has become commonplace with trans-Atlantic steamship companies and the bullion is handled as so much "merchandise." But the shipment of a few millions from a South American country becomes a national event, and the steamship chosen for its transport is freighted with responsibility.

The removal of the $5,000,000 from the Argentine National Bank to the ship was attended by the greatest of precautions. It was rushed through the streets of Buenos Aires accompanied by a guard of 200 men, armed with rifles and swords and hustled into the burglar-proof vaults of the American Legion. The precious cargo was under strict watch throughout the voyage. Upon arrival here similar precautions were taken, the regular police being augmented by armed guards, while the armored trucks that carried the gold to a government sub-treasury were protected by armed men.

Handling gold has become so commonplace with the largest trans-Atlantic steamship companies and the dock hands have become blasé about handling millions of the metal. The process of loading, storing and unloading gold in international shipments has become so systematized that the factors of responsibility and risk are considered hardly more than in the transportation of toys. An official of the International Maritime Marine explained that when the gold is placed in a ship's vault. In transporting the gold to and from ships, guards are usually provided by the consignor and consignee.

Hugh Contracts Now Being Made

TO SHIP OUR PULPWOOD TO U.S.A. MONTREAL.—The deadly effect of the government's dilly-dallying with the pulpwood question is getting graphic demonstration in the new contracts that are being arranged almost daily for the exportation of Canadian pulpwood to the United States. Such a contract was reported by the Campbellton Graphic the other day in the following news item:

"An announcement of considerable interest came from the local office of the O. J. Klein Transportation Co. recently. During an extended trip to New York and through Eastern States, Mr. Klein signed huge contracts with American mills in the vicinity of Watertown and Carthage for their supply of wood. These handsome contracts stretch over a period of ten years and call for the shipment of 35,000 cords per annum.

"It is understood that this wood will be cut on lands acquired by Mr. Klein on the Matane Coast, and also by purchase from settlers in that territory and along the Gaspe and North-New Brunswick Coasts."

In the case of this contract, provision is made for the export to the United States of 350,000 cords of Canadian pulpwood which will bring the country around $3,000,000. Made up into paper, the revenue to Canada would be closer to $15,000,000. Canada loses the difference by permitting the export of the pulpwood in its raw state.

True it is an embargo may be put into effect if the pulpwood commission ever finishes its meetings; but all practical effects of the embargo have been removed by the order-in-council of last August that permitted the export for a period of ten years of pulpwood under contracts dated before June, 1923. American firms now arranging contracts for supplies of pulpwood are seeing that the contracts are dated before January, 1923, and it is anticipated that a large supply of the pulpwood available for export will be contracted for very shortly. The only remedy for the depending of the freehold forests under these contracts will be the rescinding of the order-in-council, the origin of which has never yet been explained by Premier King.—Financial Post.

Boosting Local Products

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press).—Two generations ago Chas. Francis Adams, then Minister to England, gave a barrel of Newtown Pippins from his native Massachusetts to Queen Victoria, the favor of which so pleased that discriminating lady that every year thereafter she ordered a supply of such fruit from the same orchards. And now her stately discriminating great-grandmother, Princess Mary, having sampled the output of New Jersey orchards a year ago, is having a crate of Winesaps shipped to England to figure in the dessert of her Christmas dinner.

Under the caption, "Our Supreme Apples," the New York Tribune gives us this interesting information. Ought not the Women's Institution of Canada see to it that next year the merits of the juicy Canadian apple are placed before Princess Mary. Surely the Prince of Wales might have given her a brotherly hint on the subject! "Our Supreme Apples!" This is terrible!

But in another column of the same paper we are given faint consolation. The expert shopper for the New York Women's Institutes "Column" writes: "We went to talk meats and fowl and fish and got held up at the cheese stand the first thing. Did you ever eat Canadian cheddar, at 40 cents a pound? Pale, soft and with a surprising tang, but not strong—perfect for sandwiches, salads or for a rarebit."

London to Near East Air Service to be Extended

Munich, Dec. 14 (A. P.)—Plans for a comprehensive air service from London to Persia were outlined by Major von Tschudi in a recent lecture at the Munich Museum before a meeting of representatives of various companies operating airplanes commercially in Europe. A trans-European union was established which Professor Junkers and many other men prominent in the world of aircraft joined. Bavaria, Switzerland, Austria, Hungary, and the leading airplane companies of all these countries are represented in the union.

It contemplates the extension of the London-Cologne-Fuerth service by night flights along the Danube to Budapest in hydroplanes which will be guided by reflectors along the river. Before 1926 this union hopes to extend this service to Braila on the Black Sea, to Russia, Persia, Greece, Turkey and Spain.

Sailing Ships

INMOLATED TO PROVIDE MOTIE THRILLS.

SAN PEDRO, Cal., Dec. 8.—(A.P.)—Clipper ships and merchant schooners of the old days—symbols of a past era of adventure—are being assembled here from the nooks and crannies of many ports. The romance of their careers will close in a burst of thrills. What if the thrills be tinned? They will be none the less real to the movie audiences of a nation.

Some of the ancient windjammers are destined to reach Davy Jones' locker in a way their builders never dreamed of. While the cameras stand by, they will be wrecked by "terrible storms" or scuttled by pirates. Hand-to-hand fights will be waged on their decks. From some of them high flames may shoot at the signal of a director. The movie companies recently have bought many of these archaic craft, for which commerce has no further use. The vessels will be altered to fit the "script," thus becoming Chinese junk, vikings' ships, historic men-of-war or what-not.

In the Realms of Sport

SOCCER IS BOOMING IN THE U.S.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Soccer is the coming game in the United States. That fact has been definitely established in the course of the last two seasons, and this year, particularly, the remarkable increase in popularity of the game has astonished football followers and sports writers generally. For example, taking the attendance test as a fair one, the rapid advance of the sport is indicated by the fact that the National Challenge Competition of 1921-1922 attracted a total paid attendance of 95,019; the total for 1922-23 was 129,857; and the attendances in the first three rounds of the 1923-24 competition indicated that last year's figure will be far exceeded. A second round cup match played at Fall River on November 18 drew a paid attendance of 14,375 persons, approximately 5,000 more than last year's final. All this the fact that this season sees the first appearance of a "Soccer Guide," and it will be realized how rapidly the position of the game is being strengthened. Whether or not it will eventually outdo the American form of the Rugby game, only time can decide.

Tenth Birthday.

The United States Football Association, which governs soccer here, celebrated its tenth birthday last spring, after ten years of hard and steady effort to bring the game to the position in public regard to which it felt its merits entitled it. During those ten years they met with many discouragements; but hard work and sincere effort have won their reward, and the association is now universally considered as an established success. The association is, through its membership in the Federation International Football Association, closely allied with the international government of the game.

In the last two or three seasons, the improvement in the playing skill has been marked as the improvement in attendance. With a surprisingly heavy importation of high class players from Scotland and England, young Americans have had the best kind of instruction and have profited accordingly. The result is a far better balance as between the teams, the star teams finding it increasingly harder to defeat clubs which, in former years, were easy prey.

Other outstanding events of the year were the determination to send a team to France to play in the Olympic games; the decision to grant this honor to the winner of the amateur cup competition, and the tremendous impetus given to soccer in the Pacific Coast and Rocky Mountain territory. Pioneers of the game here were astounded to learn that Memphis, Tenn., one of the youngest centres of the association, expected to win the amateur cup. It was able to put four entries into the first round of the competition.

HOPPE RULES CUE REALM CONCERN

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—Willie Hoppe again has gone through the familiar process of being acclaimed a world's champion. Tied by Walker Cochran, the Hollywood, Cal., south, in the recent New York International tournament Hoppe emerged victorious 1,500 to 1,161 last night after a three night's tilt in Orchestra Hall here for the title.

Hoppe, still the master billiardist and match game strategist, lost the final block to the young coast player by virtue of a long lead he had built up against just such an emergency by taking the opening night's block, 500 to 203, and the second instalment 500 to 233. Cochran seemed to suffer from a head cold throughout the contest but suddenly, when Hoppe slipped last

HOW DO YOU SNEEZE!
Dr. Heinrich Lehmann, of Vienna, says that he can diagnose a man's character as well as his physical condition by the way he sneezes. Most people sneeze to the left. Sneezing to the right, says Dr. Lehmann, is a good sign. A hearty sneeze is an indication of physical fitness, and sneezes should never be suppressed.

MILLIONS LOST BY INCOME-TAX EVASION.

A Royal Commission estimated that the revenue losses £7,000,000 yearly through income-tax evasion, and some authorities put the loss at anything between £10,000,000 and £100,000,000. Whatever may be the actual amount, there can be no doubt that it is very large.

Some men escape payment of income-tax by removing. When shipyard hands were earning high wages, many assessments could not be enforced, because those who owed the money had migrated to all parts of the country and could not be traced.

Other people have numerous methods of evading income-tax. A common practice is to make a return of the interest paid by banks on deposit and current accounts. Under the existing system there is no way of detecting this fraud, and as a result many a man evades with impunity payment of income-tax on some hundreds of pounds a year.

Just as common is the trick of putting securities, and so on, in the names of children, and of thus evading payment of income tax or super-tax or both. Sir G. Locker-Lampson, M.P., recently gave a fragment case. He stated that he knew a man who, though he lived in his own house, paid no income-tax, because the house and his property nominally belonged to his three children.

Another practice is to remove a business abroad or to become technically domiciled there, and so escape the payment of British income-tax. Before the Royal Commission on Income-Tax, 1916, a certain man admitted frankly that he had resorted to this expedient. He said that, in order to avoid what he regarded as excessive taxation, he had removed his enormous business interests abroad, and that they were then domiciled in the Argentine. "The present position of affairs," he added, "suits me admirably. I am abroad, I pay nothing."

Generally, however, the same end is attained by living in a foreign country for six months and spending nearly the whole of the rest of the year in Britain. Under such conditions, a man is deemed to be domiciled abroad, and if his money is invested in certain securities he need not pay British income-tax.

Many businesses, again, are carried on in hotels and boarding-houses, which serve as offices, and as it is almost impossible to keep on the track of them, income-tax is again evaded.

But it is doubtless by the deliberate "faking" of returns that the revenue is most heavily defrauded. A remarkable instance came to light by accident. The profit disclosed by a certain firm was a little under £3,000, whereas actually it amounted to about £25,000. The revenue was thus deprived of nearly £15,000. To hide the transaction as much as possible, the firm kept eight banking accounts, on which cheques were drawn in fictitious names.

False Books and "Faking."
In another case the income returned over a series of years was £169,775, and the true income was £283,117—a difference of £113,342. So that the tax paid was £13,727, representing a loss to the revenue of £20,300.

Still more amazing, perhaps, was a conspiracy involving more than £25,000. The fraud was carried out by means of false books and by paying into a private account revenue which was not included in any return. It has been semi-officially asserted, indeed, that in returning profits only one-half the income world is absolutely straightforward, and that one-fourth of it does not hesitate at deliberate fraud.

Mice That Cost 100 Pounds Each

High Prices Paid for Pedigree Pets.

Many people who visited the recent Poultry, Pigeon, and Rabbit Show at the Crystal Palace were amazed at the prices asked for special specimens. Mice of all colours were among the exhibits, and more than one specimen was priced at £100.

Keeping these small rodents as pets is a growing hobby, and one expert has no fewer than 6,000 in his collection. There are "mouse clubs" in many parts of the country, with a parent body in control.

"A prize mouse," declared an expert, "has to be bred as carefully as a prize dog. Pedigrees are preserved, and although £100 is quoted to be a prohibitive price, quite recently a notice had a mouse for which he was offered £12."

Fowls Worth Fortunes.
Fowls at £1,000 each provided another shock for housewives who knew only of the barnyard rooster type. Two prize birds stood at this figure. There were dozens valued at £250, £200, and £100 each.

One of the poultry judges had an alarming experience with a huge black Orpington that seemed to resent his presence, for the bird "savaged" him with beak, spur, and wing in true gamecock style.

Some poultry fanciers "fake" their birds in a remarkable manner. "Hens, before being shown," said another expert, "are often bathed, dried, and then wrapped up and put away in a warm box. The following day they are brushed with brilliantine until their coats shine like satin. Their feet also are polished."

"The faces and wattles may be rubbed with cold cream, which serves to deepen and enrich the colour; while in certain breeds I have seen the leg feather being curled with an electric iron."

Pigeons as Heroes.
The racing pigeons shown included some that did remarkable service in the war. "The (Mine) Sweepers' Hope," as one bird was nicknamed, repeatedly made journeys from the successive North Sea, and on four successive Saturdays arrived half-frozen with important despatches, and so won the approval of the authorities of the approach of Zeppelins.

Another, known as "Tommy's Friend," brought the news from a disabed tank of the missing of German battalions behind Amiens, whereby the impending attack was smashed by a British barrage.

When Skipper Crisp, V.C., of the trawler Nelson, lay mortally wounded, his last act was to scribble a heavy message which was sent off by a third veteran. A British warship arrived in time to save the crew.

Mini-Minute Birds.
This particular bird is still suffering from the effects of its severe buffeting in all kinds of weather, and is not expected to live long. When it dies, its owner, Lieut.-Col. H. O. Osborn, has promised to have it stuffed and to present it to the National Lifeboat Institution Museum.

Homing pigeons can travel 500 miles at an average speed of nearly a mile a minute, and the popularity of pigeon-racing may be judged from the fact that during July and August many of the northern railways run "pigeon specials."

Rabbits priced at £100 each were exhibited, while one beautiful black cat had a selling price of £100. These are bred largely for their fur, which makes up into effective coats and wraps. Indeed, many a so-called "sable" coat had its origin in the humble bunny.—Tit Bit.

2,000-Mile Wireless Beams

By ARTHUR R. BURROWS, Director of Programmes, British Broadcasting Co.

Senatore Marconi, speaking from the London broadcasting studio, and heard throughout the country by the process of simultaneous transmission, made a statement the full significance of which may not be apparent to persons just initiated into the wonders of wireless.

He reported that excellent telephony from Poldhu, in Cornwall, had been received by him on his yacht when the whole of the Cape Verde Islands, 2,000 miles distant. This alone is interesting, though by no means a record in the matter of distance.

What is much more important are the facts that only one kilowatt of power was required at the transmitting station, the wave-length was as low as 100 metres, and the telephony was projected from Cornwall to the ship in a narrow beam, and not radiated in every direction as is the case when broadcasting.

It is a big jump from 100 miles to 2,000 miles, and makes one wonder whether Senatore Marconi and his engineers are not in the process of repeating the history of twenty years ago, with this difference, that they have taken the predetermined courses.

If this line of progress continues we may have within a very few years not only wireless telephonic communication between two countries separated by a vast expanse of ocean, but verbal communication of practically a secret character.

There is, however, a third point in Senatore Marconi's statement which deserves emphasis, and this is the short wave-length on which the recent successful experiments have been conducted.

Until now it has been the practice when endeavouring to signal wirelessly over a great distance with a small amount of power to use a long wave-length. The Chelmsford wireless telephone of 1920 which was heard in Northern Persia was operated on a wave-length in the neighbourhood of 2,500 metres. Had that big station been working on 100 metres it is questionable whether it would have been heard far outside the British Isles.

Now, there are two disadvantages in using long wave-lengths—the other is already fully taxed by stations operating on such wave-lengths, and the avoidance of interference is difficult. It is regarded as practically impossible to separate the signals of two wireless telephone stations that have less than three per cent. difference in wave-length.

This means that, assuming a station is working on 2,500 metres, any other stations hoping to operate successfully in the same territory or sphere of influence must have wave-lengths of not more than 2,523 metres, or less than 2,477 metres.

A Peep Into the Future.
If, on the other hand, it is found possible to work long distances on short wave-lengths, many more stations can work in one territory without overlapping. Three stations could work satisfactorily within the six metres separating 97 metres from 103 metres and between twenty and thirty in the wave-band 100-200 metres.

We may look forward, therefore, to the day when, well below the already long wave-lengths employed in broadcasting, as many as forty or fifty wireless beams may be engaged in private commercial telephonic conversation with foreign countries.

Blackmailing at Elections

A Political Agent Describes How Candidates are Fleeced.

As soon as a Parliamentary candidate sets foot in a constituency he becomes a mark for blackmailers, and he has to come to terms with them or take the consequences, which include defeat at the polls.

Since he is expected to subscribe to every club in the district, a number of clubs are created expressly for the purpose of "milking" him, and he is bound to hear from many brigands in urgent need of temporary relief. If one of these pests is not out of work, he is certain to have an ailing wife or a delicate daughter who requires change of air and scene.

The cost of silence.

The candidate, too, must submit to blackmail in still uglier forms. At the last General Election a man got an inkling that a certain jobmaster was secretly supplying horses on behalf of a candidate. He rang up the trader on the telephone, and impersonating the candidate's agent, asked for his account, receiving the reply that it would be sent round in a quarter of an hour. He had a witness to this conversation, and the ushnet was that the candidate was "bled" for £10.

Occasionally the same end is attained by circulating, or threatening to circulate, scurrilous leaflets and pamphlets. A man who represented a northern constituency for many years, once paid £500 for one hundred copies—all there were in existence—of such a production.

If, as sometimes happens, a budding legislator has a past that is not altogether flawless, a blackmailer may attack him without investing in paper and print. A certain candidate had this experience on the eve of an election, and, though the incident which was to be broadcast was not true, he paid the blackmailer £1,000 to keep quiet.

Some years later the candidate had his revenge. The story was repeated on the platform by a political opponent, whereupon the aggrieved man sued him for libel, and gained a verdict for £10,000.

Now and again, moreover, a candidate is made to pay by threat to break up his meetings. This kind of blackmail is sometimes met by importing a crowd of the "boys" from neighbouring towns. But disturbances are dangerous, and the ruffians who put the screws on candidates are usually "sweetened."

There is a further species of blackmail—that levied by "pensioners" who are strong party supporters. It takes the form of gross overcharges for goods supplied and services rendered. Sometimes such overcharges are more than the candidate dare pay in the usual manner; but this difficulty is easily overcome. A man renders a bogus bill, which is duly met, and the amount of which is returned in the election expenses. Afterwards he is paid the balance surreptitiously. In this way the permissible expenses may be exceeded by hundreds of pounds.

Of course, many candidates will not submit to blackmail, no matter how it may be disguised. Some announce at the beginning of a campaign that they do not intend to subscribe to any charities, and at the last election one had the courage to declare from the platform that he would not give a penny to anybody, as he could not afford it.

If all candidates would only have the moral courage to make a firm stand against the disgraceful blackmailing to which they are subjected would soon become as rare as flagrant bribery is now.

Where Honesty is a Crime

THE WORLD'S MOST REMARKABLE ROGUES.

(By ST. NIHAL SINGH).

The oddest job, possibly, assigned to any official in India or elsewhere, is held by a British official, Mr. H. W. Starte, who has been appointed the official father-confessor to a number of tribes which take to crime as a duckling to water.

Among these "criminal" tribes in India, crime descends from father to son and is literally a hereditary profession. Crime among them is regulated according to caste. One group specializes in cattle-lifting, another in counterfeiting, and so on.

That sort of thing has happened for so many centuries that the moral instinct has been practically killed in these people. For a member of a caste which specializes in thieving to decline to engage in it would be regarded as an act of backsliding on his part for which he would be out-cast. In short, it would constitute a social crime for one of them to lead an honest life!

The training of children of the criminal tribes begins as soon as they start to take note of their surroundings. I was told by a high police officer who has been intimately associated with these tribes that the parents show a coin, secret it, and then ask the child where it is. As their intention is to make the child

Master of the Rolls

Quaint History of a Famous Office.

The recent appointment of Sir Ernest M. Pollock as Master of the Rolls has drawn attention to the very interesting origin and development of a high judicial office.

In very early days a Clerk of the Chancellor's department of the Curia Regis, where all Writs, Charters, and so on were prepared for the Great Seal, is mentioned as supervisor of the Scribe who composed the Chancellor's Roll (which quickly grew into Rolls). During the Middle Ages the principal of the many Clerks (or Masters who assisted the Chancellor) was styled the Keeper of the Rolls, John de Langton, 1286, was the first.

In 1316 William de Ayrmyne for the first time combined Keeper of the Rolls with Keeper of the Domus Camera in Chancery Lane, a home since Henry III's time for converted Jews. There he deposited the Rolls.

A King's Favourite.

The House was in 1378 granted by Edward III. to the Keeper, and so became the College of the Chancery Men, and by degrees showed them how much happier they would be if they would settle down and pursue an honest calling instead of living in fear of the police.

To tame these tribes and to teach them civilized habits and trades a number of settlements have been established in various towns of the Bombay Presidency. Mr. Starte, who initiated the experiment, is in charge of them all.

On visiting the settlement at Bilapur, I found that each principal tribe lived by itself. Thieves, robbers, burglars, counterfeiters, and cattle thieves each own their own little colony. They quickly learn to be skilled workers, particularly the counterfeiters, and after a short period of training, become good blacksmiths, carpenters, masons and domestic servants.

A Colony of Counterfeiters.

While visiting the counterfeiters' colony my attention was drawn to a little booth containing an image clad in gaudy clothes and garlanded with roses, jasmine, and marigolds. The officer conducting me told me that this was the particular god of the counterfeiters, and they always worshipped it and promised it a share of the proceeds of their crime before actually committing it. The god remains, and the instinct to worship it, but the propensity to commit crime is being educated out of the people.

Talking With Mars

Further back than the memory of the oldest inhabitant can travel there has been talk of communication with Mars. It is the nearest of the planets to the earth, and therefore naturally selected as the object of all astronomical experiments.

Would the world be any happier if it were to discover that another gas-bell, wallowing in space like itself, housed a type of human being more emancipated, better educated, cleverer, greater and happier than we are? Would it enable us to do our daily work any better, or be better companions over the dinner-table at night, or talk to our children, or help friends out of worries and difficulties, if we knew that up in Mars they had no difficulties, felt no worries, did not have to work for a living, and enjoyed a sort of perpetual dolce far niente?

Or, on the other hand, if we were to discover that the inhabitants of Mars were a people lower in human development than we are, if we were to be shocked by the revelation of

The Man Who Took Jerusalem

Several conflicting accounts of the surrender of Jerusalem to the British have been published from time to time, but it has not been previously made public that the city was first "captured" by a sergeant in the 2nd Battalion of the 19th London Regt.—
 Frederick Hurcomb, of Camden Town, London.

He told the story of his great adventure to a London reporter.

"Just at daybreak on Dec. 9th, 1917, I was sent out on patrol with twelve men and a corporal, with orders to go forward until fired upon. For some time we crawled over Turkish trenches in the darkness, seeing nothing; but as it began to grow light I spotted a house, and I went forward with my rifle at the ready.

"A woman was in the window, and when I said 'hands up!' she said 'Good morning.' She was an American, I think.

"This woman told me that the Turks had all gone; and as we were talking I saw a party of about twenty people, with a white flag, coming down the sloping road from the town.

"Their leader, who turned out to be the chief man of the place—a sort of mayor, I take it—gave me to understand in very broken English that he wished to surrender the city."

Birth Control and the Empire

A DANGEROUS APPEAL TO SELFISHNESS.

By LORD MORRIS, P.C., K.C., ex-Prime Minister of Newfoundland.

At a time like the present, when the Ministers of the great congregation of States which make up the British Empire are considering the important question of filling up under the British flag the great vacant spaces of the Old and New Worlds, the question of Birth Control has a special significance for us all. No country, past or present, has achieved such success in colonizing as has Great Britain and Ireland. One might say since the discovery of the New World the British have gone overseas and settled, and planted the Union Jack in every corner of the ocean. It was the overflow of the surplus population, that trade and industry could not support at home, who carved out new homes for themselves in the newly discovered lands. In these homes the English set themselves the task of subduing the forest; the lessons of Empire were learnt on these strange shores. The mastery of the seas was acquired, and the colonial territories now girding the globe had their origin in these early settlements. We poured an endless stream of prime, lusty manhood across the ocean: we have been the great generating-house of colonial power. The populations now inhabiting our great Dominions and the other far-flung portions of the British Empire were of our own island stock, and it was this kith-and-kin bond that bound us together when Germany rose up to annihilate the Homeland.

It is inconceivable how any one studies the founding and growth and expansion of our Empire can find a dam across that river of future power and loyalty. Without free birth we shall have no one to go from here to fill up the great empty spaces. Stripped of all polite dressing, birth control means that, instead of allowing our overflow of labour to carry its influence across the world, we shall prevent that excess labour from being born. The ancient empire which once stood where Britain stands to-day declines and falls from the moment it adopted the abhorrent cult of Malthus. We need not go back to the despotic empires of Rome and Greece for illustration and example. When the tragedy of the Napoleonic wars had been lived to a finish the signing of peace found France a ravaged and distressed country. Wealth, which is nothing more or less than commercial productivity, had departed from her; she had lost both trade and trade outlets. She was in that state of national convalescence that we are in to-day. The inevitable result was that there were more mouths to feed than food to feed them. Birth control became a factor of French national life, and from that hour France's manpower began to decrease. When the World War broke out France was the only nation whose manpower showed a decrease on the ten-yearly census, and her population had been decreasing for many years. To-day she is using black troops in the occupied territories of Germany.

There may be rare cases where from the standpoint of health or other genuine cause a limitation of family may be permitted—yet they are rare cases; but when birth is controlled for mere motives of convenience, to give people more time for sport, society, and the thousand and one reasons now assigned by those who have recourse to contraceptives, there can be no satisfactory answer. For those who believe in Christianity, who believe in hereafter, whose lives are governed by the tenets of the New Testament, no justification will be found. On the contrary, they are expressly told they are not to consider the natural consequences which flow from large families. "Take no thought of your life, what you shall eat or what you shall drink, nor what you shall put on. Is not the life not more than meat and the body than raiment? Behold the fowls of the air, they sow not, neither do they reap." Those who do not believe in Christian God, who are atheists and agnostics, who look on all things around them as the result of accident, natural phenomena not controlled by any Architect or First Great Cause—they in turn will not find any precedent in nature, in the animal, vegetable, fish, or bird kingdoms, for birth control; they are carrying out the great command, "Increase and multiply." The fundamental and basic principle on which the earth was peopled was that the human race should be propagated in the natural order. That is the dominant reason for existence. "Increase and multiply"—that is the whole and sole object of human life.

Marriage Not Compulsory. People need not get married; they are not bound to get married, but if they do so it is for the sole purpose of uniting their love for a definite end, namely, that the human race should be propagated. Having married, neither party may arrest or control in any way the natural results of their union. To do so is a crime and a sin, not alone in its effect upon themselves, but, far more serious, in its effect on posterity, over whose destiny it was never intended by God that they should have control. St. Paul, the great interpreter of Christianity, made it quite clear that there was no obligation on any one to marry, nor is there. Indeed, he pointed out that the higher life is celibacy, but that if people were not able to resist the attractions of conjugal union, and were likely to fall into forbidden sin, then it was better to marry than burn, meaning that to run the risk of incurring the consequences both here and hereafter. Clearly, therefore, when people marry, it is not merely for the pleasure of companionship, but to shoulder the full responsibilities of married life in its relation to God and the State.

If such a principle as is now suggested ever became general, then it would be only a question of calculating when the human race would become extinct. History furnishes illustrations of the extinction of plant and animal life, the result of a change of environment. The human being is equally liable, and subject to the danger of extinction by any serious sustained attack on its moral and physical environment, and when that is still further weakened by the encroachments of physical degeneracy which always follow on birth control, then, indeed have we cause for despair.

It may be said, "What are we to do with our surplus population in Great Britain, which is being added to at the rate of a thousand a day?" The answer must be, "Do what was done in the past; construct an intelligent emigration policy, improve home markets, so that people will have the means of earning sufficient to keep themselves and their families in comfort and decency; spend less on luxury, and in that way give the worker a better wage; enabling him to increase his purchases in the home market. Teach people who are not in a position to bring large families into the world that it is their duty to exercise moral restraint."

Moral Restraint. We hear from time to time of the awful sufferings of the mothers and the children who constitute large families, but that is no reason why methods which violate both the natural

Horse Faces Extinction in Century, Says Savant

Berkeley, Cal., Dec. 14 (A. P.)—Statistics recently circulated stated that horses, in large measure freed, because of motor power, from the labours, that made them beasts of burden were increasing rather than diminishing in number. But now comes Professor E. L. Furlong, curator of the vertebrate collection at the University of California, with the prediction that the horse will be virtually extinct on the American continent in another century.

Professor Furlong is so confident of his supposition that he has started for posterity a collection of all modern specimens of the equine family. His collection will rest in the museum of paleontology, along with the bones of the three-toed horse and other prehistoric kin. Recalling the dominating position of motor conveyances in the cities, Professor Furlong adds: "Daily the tractor and the automobile are taking the place of the horse in rural life. As the usefulness of the horse passes, so will the necessity for the purposes with which he has been identified since time immemorial will be a curiosity. In another hundred years you may find horses in zoos. I am sure you will not find them anywhere else."

AT REST.

Along the churchyard paths I walked, and presently they hit me the eventide, and I heard the sexton talked of people who had died. "Here they repose in peace," quoth he, "beneath the quiet stars; and most of those whose graves you see were killed by motor cars. As stubborn as Missouri mules, or Africa's crocodiles, they laughed to scorn the laws and rules, and hit up sixty miles. And some of them would hog the road, a course that's sure to grieve; and then they came to this abode, whose tenants never leave. And some of them neglected brakes they knew were insecure, and scorched serenely by the lakes and o'er the gloomy moors; and presently they hit a tree because they could not stop; and here they're sleeping, woe is me, with marble shafts on top. And some would talk while yet they drove, with those who rode behind; and by the mere and through the grove we saw them go it blind; though in the bylaws duly versed, they gave such

Ministers Debate Big Canal Project

STEWART CLAIMS CANADA PROTESTED CHICAGO WATER DIVISION.

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—At the invitation of Sir Adam Beck, Hon. George Graham and Hon. C. A. Stewart visited the offices of the Hydro-Electric Commission here yesterday afternoon and exchanged views on the Chicago water diversion scheme and the power shortage in Ontario.

Mr. Graham said the United States Government had made inquiries as to Canada's attitude on the St. Lawrence development and so he had conferred with Sir Adam. Mr. Stewart discussed the Chicago drainage and the flow of water at the falls.

Contrary to published statements, Mr. Stewart said that the Canadian Government had protested several times about the drainage of water at Chicago.

"It is on record that we have protested six or seven times. The matter has become acute lately owing to the opposition of the border States and the matter is now before the United States court. We are interested in it from both a navigation and a power standpoint. Under the arrangement with the United States War Department, Chicago was allowed the flow by tapping the waters above not been able to find any Canadian sanction for the diversion.

"It is a serious matter, so far as Canada is concerned, because of the effect it has on navigation. Our engineers report that there was a reduction this year of 10,000 feet at the falls."

"The Canadian Government is interested in the question of increasing only in navigation. The development of the height of land?" Mr. Stewart was asked.

"No, that is a matter for the Province," he replied. "We are interested only in navigation. The development

Animal Showers From the Sky

Much interest has been aroused in England by the discovery of vast swarms of flies, which had infested the English Channel in the neighborhood of Deal and the Goodwin Sands.

"Millions of these insects were found crawling over the hard sand and great black patches of dead flies could be seen floating on the water.

Similar "plagues" have happened previously. One case in particular was a heavy snowstorm in Russia in 1827, when the snow was accompanied by a large number of black insects about an inch and a quarter in length, and with feet which enabled them to crawl into the snow.

Some years ago in France a shower of frogs descended near Toulouse, and so great was the "downfall" that a carriage containing an eye-witness of the affair killed thousands in its passage along one of the roads.

Instances of fish descending inland in showers are numerous. In 1828, at Foderly, in Scotland, a farmer, walking on his land, saw a great portion of the ground covered with herrings, each three to four inches in length. About two years later, in the island of Islay, in Argyllshire, after a day or so of heavy rain, the inhabitants were surprised to find swarms of herrings strewn over the fields, some perfectly fresh.

On another occasion fish were carried from the Firth of Forth to Loch Leven, a distance of eight to ten miles, and at Wick, in Caithness, a large quantity of fish were found lying scattered in a garden about half a mile from the seashore.

How can one account for these strange happenings? There is a suspicion that winds, whirlwinds, and waterspouts are the chief source of their production. Waterspouts are not unknown at Foderly, and the shower of fish at Islay occurred after a day of heavy rain. The herring fall at Loch Leven happened at the same time when a strong gale was blowing from the Firth of Forth.

Just before the shower of frogs at Toulouse it was noticed that a heavy cloud appeared on the horizon.

Each one of these "plagues" is probably due, wholly or in part, to the fact that wind, having a tendency to become circular or rotary, sucks up any small, light objects, carrying

Every Man His Own Banker

A NOVEL SCHEME THAT Baffles Burglars.

The ideal of a certain impetuous subaltern, who, on being thought of by his credit at Cox's, said he feared every man ought to be his own banker, has been nearly attained at Birmingham. That city has a Municipal Bank, the customers of which are more than one in ten of the entire population.

This undertaking has proved both profitable and useful. Its financial success is shown by the report for the year ended March 31st last. Though the bank has been in existence only about three years, and though it pays 3 1/2 per cent on deposits, the profit on the year's working was £9,922.

The utility of the bank is equally remarkable. Besides affording absolute security to all customers, it gives special facilities to some of them, particularly shopkeepers.

Safety for Travellers' Takings.

An important provision for such citizens is opening on Saturday evenings. Though takings are then specially heavy, they cannot in the ordinary way, be banked, but have to be kept over the week-end. Burglars are well aware of this circumstance, and, as a result, there are more robberies than at any other time.

Shopkeepers are thus caused a good deal of anxiety. For this reason the Finance Committee of the Deptford Borough Council recently considered whether local traders should not be offered facilities to deposit their takings in the Town Hall.

But at Birmingham shopkeepers can sleep on Saturday and Sunday nights just as on other nights of the week. For the Municipal Bank is open on Saturday evenings, and takings can be deposited.

Such is the success of the Birmingham Municipal Bank that a similar form of local government enterprise

The Ex-Crown Prince

WILL HE LEAD THE GERMAN MONARCHISTS?

A new Monarchist attempt, headed by von Kahr, has been revealed in Berlin. The Bavarian dictator has been busy re-organizing the fighting troops under his own leadership since the Hitler and Ludendorff failure put them out of the running, and has gone so far that a tentative date in early December has been chosen for the action.

Von Kahr is still without a leader, but he is now working to persuade the ex-Crown Prince to accept the figurative leadership, in the hope that he will swing the whole country with him. The ex-Crown Prince has already been approached by von Kahr's emissaries, but thus far he has turned a deaf ear to them.

However, with excellent Monarchist assistance in the North, Von Kahr has been able to gain considerable strength, and pressure on Wilhelm is being redoubled in order to convince him of his duty to the nation in permitting his name to be used in a rally-cry for the Monarchists. Von Kahr is basing his hopes for national success on the Reichswehr in the North. He believes that they will desert the Government to follow the ex-Crown Prince if he is able to convince Wilhelm of his duty in undertaking the leadership in the attempt.

Participants in the game are including at least one of von Kahr's men have visited Oels during the last five days, and had long conversations with the ex-Crown Prince.

Catching Things

A medical witness in the courts this week told us that the worst thing a sick person can do is to "read medical books."

This doctrine has become fairly familiar, by implication, since the excellent M. Cote popularized the maxim that, if you want not to be ill, you must continually assure yourself that there is nothing whatever the matter with you.

But it still isn't sufficiently realized, perhaps, that to brood about symptoms is often to develop them.

Probably there's a curious imitative instinct deep-buried within us. We "catch" things mentally, as the poor fellow did who fell upon a bulky doctor's book and imagined that he had every disease there described "except housemaid's knee"; and that he knew he couldn't have, because he had never cleaned the front doorstep in the cold.

Can it be that it is with many maladies as La Roche-foucauld tells it is with love—that many people would never have fallen into it had they not heard it so much talked about?

Let us hope that the evident danger may restrain those alarmists who are always discovering new causes for old complaints and writing to the papers about them.

"Have I got it?" is the horrid whisper a man hears, when he reads about "symptoms" in medical books. They form a technical literature infinitely depressing to laymen.—Daily Mirror.

PRIZE-FIGHTING.

Manchester Guardian: Something which was dignified by the title of the heavy-weight championship of England was decided recently, and the winner battled his fierce way to the championship by getting knocked down twice and then having the good fortune to be hit by his over-zealous opponent as he was in the act of rising. As this blow was a foul, the fight was awarded in the second round to the victim of this ill-timed assault. "Another Plaseol!"

Member of German Gymnast Club

DIES PLAYING NEW GAME.

Aachen, Dec. 18. (A.P.)—A new game, which has become popular in Belgium, recently resulted disastrously for the Dienst Gymnast club. One member died and 17 others narrowly escaped the same fate.

Participants in the game are locked in a motor truck and taken for a long ride. Then they are released and the first to reach a designated place is declared the winner.

When the chauffeur was about to release the Dienst club members he found one of them dead, 15 unconscious and two bordering on that condition. Escaping gas had entered the closed car.
