This slight to ken of respect shown to the company was, no doubt, very acceptable and appropriate. It was intended there should be some speaking afterwards, but many of the men having some distance to go, were anxious to get home to their families, and thus having neglected business to advend to they all quietly departed.

RENNETH MANTAINS HIS HOUT—THE MYSTERHOUS VISITOR AT THE LENARTE

ASPLICAL.

It was a cold binstering day in February, and the road which intersected a portion of Ayrshine was dead along with his head bent to the blast, before whose severity he chivered, notwith standing the many wrappings with which his frame was enveloped to shield him from the cold.

As the country around was level and bleak and bare, the cutting wind swepty without obstruction along the highway, whisting drearily among the leafless branches of a solitary thorn that stoods as a landmark on the level landscape.

"Geh' this cold is enough to perish many folds encircled his throat. "I had almost forget wint a winter day in Scotland was like, but, by all the fiends, the I gold is enough to perish may folds encircled his throat. "I had almost forget wint a winter day in Scotland was like, but, by all the fiends, the I gold is enough to perish may folds encircled his throat. "I had almost forget wint a winter day in Scotland was like, but, by all the fiends, the I gold is enough to perish may folds encircled his throat." I had almost forget wint a winter day in Scotland was like, but, by all the fiends, the I gold is encoughed the summer come. Will that horrible wind never moderate? It ents my face like a knife, and my teeth rattle like a box of dice. Not even a strip of plantation by the rondshiel to give one shelter, and how Rangoon and the boy are to stand it, I don't know. By remaining indoors, and keeping up large fires, I suppose, till the way? No, that cannot be; the directions will be the summer come. Will that horrible wind never moderate? It ents my face like a knife, and my teeth rattle like a box of dice. Not even a strip of plantation by the rondshiel to give one shelter, and how flant grant for me to mistake. Al, do I see chimmers, who had accomplished to give one shelter, and no appearance of the place by the rondshiel like a box of the bill of life. He wore a broad brimmer conditions and the low of the bill of life. He younger man than his dress indicated.

As he assended the slight eminence and obtained a view of the road beyond, an exchanation of satisfaction escaped him at sight of a large sparae building standing by itself at no great distance off. It was a plain, dingy-looking-structure, with minnerous windows—not unlike a factory, only it had no tall stalk, and numerous chimneys from which smoke issued proclaimed it to be a dwelling house of such a size there, seemed an anomaly.

It stood in the centre of perhaps two acts of ground, which was enclosed by a very high wall, and no other buildings were nearly. It presented a heavy, dreary prion-looking aspect, which the high, felit centriciting wall did not tend to be seen.

That's the place," mattered the leating, as he began to walk a little wer. "That's the place, and now I. I know how our chauce stands. It's old game we have started—a devilish ligame—and it will need wary playing, it the magnificent stake is worth the three were the game ten times more aggrous. Only let me find him in the ate which the newspaper holds out, and a are safe to proceed. To proceed!— heaven, we must proceed now. We we come to far to give it up. Ah, ere is the gate, and now to keep to my haracter."

He he had now come to the front of the bailding, where a high and massive door set in in the wall gave access to the interior of the grounds. The door was closed, but in the stone lintel at the right hand an iron handle stuck out, and above the handle were the painted words, "Porter's Bell," giving sufficient directions to strangers how to proceed.
