Vegetine.

IS RECOMMENDED BY ALL Physicians.

Valley Stream, Queen's Co., Long Island, N. Y. Mr. H. R. STRWENS—

Dear Sir.—I take the pleasure of writing you a small certificate concerning Vegetine prepared by you. I have been suffering with Dyspepsia for over forty years, and have had the Chronic Didrirhozs for over six months, and have tried most everything, was given up to die, and did not expect to live from day to day, and no physician could touch my case. I saw your Vegetine recommended to cure Dyspepsia. I commenced using it and I continued doing so, and am now a well woman and restored to perfect health. All who are afflicted with this terrible disease, I would kindly recommend to try it for the benefit of their health, and it is excellent as a blood purifier.

VEGETINE.—When the body becomes lifeless and stagnant, either from change of weather or of climate, want of exercise, irregular diet, or from any other cause, the Veorrine will renew the blood, carry off the putrid humor, cleanse the stomach, regulate the bowels, and impart a tone of vigor to the whole body.

side of the long nursery.

There were babies, plump, rosy and good-natured, as all babies should be, and pale, fretful, puny little creatures, who looked as if they were already disgusted with the life upon which they had entered; black, blue, and gray-eyed babies, and babies with eyes of very little color at all.

It would seem that the lady addressed, and who was desirous of obtaining one for adoption, would find no difficulty in suiting herself; but either she did not see what she was in search of, or was too bewildered by so many rival claims to be able to make any choice.

"Here is a very fine boy-baby," said the matron, pausing in front of a blackeyed fellow, who sat on the knee of its nurse, sucking its fat thumb.

"Yes, but I want a girl, a blonde. Some thing like this." As the matron glanced at the photograph that was handed her, which was that of a very lovely child of not more han two summers, she uttered an ex-never marry !" "Does he?" was the grim response.

"I think I shall have something to say about that. Do you love Charlie?" "Dearly."
"And you think he loves you?"

"I'm sure of it." "Then I see no reason why you two shouldn't marry." .

Lilian opened her eyes widely. "You don't think I ought to disobey "I've said nothing about your disobeying your father; that is about the very last thing that I should be likely to counsel you to do. But Charlie is poor, you know. I have a daughter, just about your age, who will inherit all my wealth. Do you think you could be happy in a small, plainly-furnished house, with neither servants, fine dresses, or any of the beautiful things to which you have been accustomed all eur life ?"

The golden lashes drooped until they ay quiveringly upon the flushed cheeks. "If Charlie were there." Mr. Haven's face betrayed strange

"Cheer up, my child," he added 'leave the matter to me, and all will be well. I was on my way to your house when you met me. I am going to dine there to-day. Let us go back

Mr. and Mrs. Howard were too much accustomed to the vagaries of their wealthy and eccentric neighbour, to be any way surprised at his appearance. He had frequently dined with them in ROUND MACHINE STEEL the same unceremonious fashion : his genial and kindly traits of character making him a great favorite with all the family. Their after-dinner talk turning upon the improbability of a recently published story, Mr. Haven said:

"I will relate a story, as strange any that can be found in what is called fiction, and which is strictly true:

"Sixteen years ago yesterday, as it stands upon the records of a certain orphan asylum in a distant State, a lady, young, fair and wealthy, went there for the purpose of obtaining a child to take the place of one she had just lost. In one of the wards was a lovely little girl, whose parents had both been killed, as was supposed, in a railroad disaster, and who so strongly resembled her lost it at the first glance. She took it away with her, giving it her child's place and name, and her husband, who was absent at the time, has never once suspected that it was not the little one that he kissed at parting, and over whose grave the grass has been growing for many a year. Six months later the father of this child, who had recovered in a measure from the accident which had made him a cripple for life, called "She looks enough like you to be at the asylum to claim her, but only to
