The First Sign

OF FALLING HEALTH, WHETHER IN THE FORM OF NIGHT SWEATS AND NERVOUSNESS, OR IN A SENSE OF GENERAL WEAKNESS AND LOSS OF APPETITE, SHOULD SUGGEST THE USE OF AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. This preparation is most effective for giving tone and strength to the debilitated system, promoting the digestion and assimilation of food, restoring the nervous forces to their normal condition, and for purifying, enriching, and vitalizing the blood.

Falling Health.

Ten years ago my health began to fail. I was troubled with a distressing Cough, Night Sweats, Weakness, and Nervousness. I tried various remedies prescribed by different physicians, but became so weak that I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest. My friends recommended me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which I did, and I am now as healthy and strong as ever.—Mrs. L. Williams, Alexandria, Minn.

I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my family, for Scrofula, and know, if it is taken faithfully, that it will thoroughly eradicate this terrible disease. I have also prescribed it as a tonic, as well as an alterative, and must say that I honestly believe it to be the best blood medicine ever compounded.—W. F. Fowler, D. D., S. M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

It would be impossible for me to describe what I suffered from Indigestion and Headache up to the time I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was under the care of various physicians and tried a great many kinds of medicines, but never obtained more than temporary relief. After taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for a short time, my headache disappeared, and my stomach performed its duties more perfectly. Today my health is completely restored.—Mary Harley, Springfield, Mass.

I have been greatly benefited by the prompt use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It tones and invigorates the system, regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, and vitalizes the blood. It is, without doubt, the most reliable blood purifier yet discovered.—H. D. Johnson, 383 Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Price 50¢; six bottles, $5.

FOR LOVE, NOT RICHES.

"Twas a bright, lovely, life-giving morning in June.

The fast express train speeding through some of the loveliest New England scenery was carrying Millie Mayhew home to spend the summer vacation. Two gushing young ladies occupied a seat quite near Millie, and a very plainly dressed, silent young gentleman occupied the seat beside her.

The coach having been somewhat crowded when she had entered he had kindly offered to share his seat with her.

From the conversation of the young ladies, which they unavoidably overheard, the silent couple learned that they were on their way to visit an aunt who lived in the village adjoining Millie's home.

"I think I shall be delighted with the place," commented one of the young ladies.

"Oh, no doubt about that, providing you find that perfectly charming place—Laurel Grove—coming into your possession," tauntingly retorted the other.

"Now, Kate Vane, you know that you are afraid that you won't succeed in catching John Fletcher yourself."

"Oh, come now, sister Rita, you need not fly off like that. You know I'm not the least bit jealous. I am only going to try to outshine you, to pay you off for some of the mean tricks you have played on me. I think I'd not want to marry that horrid old rake, Lefe Armstrong, just that he is awful fast; a reckless spendthrift, and extravagantly fond of gambling." Kate informed her sister.

"What do I care for that Lefe Armstrong says? You know a man is expected to leave off some of his fast habits and settle down when he marries."

"Oh, I hope he is handsome, gallant and all that," exclaimed Rita, betraying a strange mingling of vexation and interest.

The above conversation was carried on in boarding-school French, and just at this point Millie leaned over their seat, and in the same delicate addressed them.

"Parlon me, ladies, but permit me to inform you that you have been misinformed with regard to Mr. Fletcher's character. And don't you think that it would be more prudent, not to say charitable, not to make comments so publicly on persons to whom you are strangers evidently."

"What is the gentleman to you?" discreetly inquired disdainful Rita.

"A very near neighbor, Miss," with a laugh that had something like mischief in it, which a close observer might have noticed.

This remark had the effect of a cold-water drench on the spirits of the fair schemers. They sat in silence until the train reached the next station, where they abruptly left the coach.

"Then you are a neighbor of this wonderful Mr. Fletcher?" asked the hitherto silent gentleman beside Millie.

"Perhaps you are able to give me a little information with regard to him, that may benefit me."

"Me? Oh, no! I—I don't mind telling you, though; you look honest. I have not the honor of that worthy gentleman's acquaintance, and know but a little about him as you do, perhaps. I only know that years and years ago he purchased Laurel Grove, and has never lived there, yet he has it improved wonderfully, and it is a most delightful place. I wish it were my home."

"Then may I inquire why you so valiantly defended one who is an entire stranger to you?"

"Oh, the truth is—and I may as well own it—I don't like the style of those girls, and the—I suppose rather ungracious—desire to rub their vanity and behold their chagrin become irresistible. He may be all they picture him; but I don't believe it," decidedly.

"And why don't you believe it?"

"Well, he is a cousin or something to the Vanderzans, of Stafford—people of culture, refinement and of high standing in society—and they speak of him in the highest terms, papa says."

"In that case you might imagine those other ladies and gain the Laurels for a home, quizzically."

"Oh, mercy! no! I could never do that!" blushing, and looking a little confused for a moment.

"Why not? Don't you think you are pretty enough?" with mirth in his deep, resonant voice.

"No, not that. I did not think of that. But then, I'm not so very horrid looking, am I?" with a saucy witchery in her manner.

"Oh, no, I think you are quite pretty," "Well, that settles that point, then. But do you know that, although I like to be pretty, I don't as much care for a pretty face as for a beautiful heart?"

"A heart of thoughtfulness overruling her pride of beauty, and with a pretty, sweet grace the words fell from her cherry-ripe lips."

"Beauty of the face or form may vanish, but that of the heart never will, and will continue to grow as long as we cultivate it quizzically."

Her companion looked a little puzzled, and silence reigned for some moments; then she continued: "I could never marry a handsome man if he were not good, too. Besides, I abhor old bachelors—the reason I could not think of marrying the owner of the Laurels. He must be pretty old now. I was only six when he was here. Oh, my! I would rather marry his gardener or steward, if he were a nice young man, and I loved him."

"That is strange. Yet I am glad you said that. But do you not think that would be a misalliance?" questioned he, while just the suspicion of a twinkle lurked in the depths of his dark eyes.

"What is strange? That I would rather marry a nice poor man because he is young and I loved him? Of course it would not be a misalliance if he were worthy."

"No, not just that. I should have said the coincidence is strange; I am the steward of the Laurels."

"Oh!" and she broke out into a low, merry, silvery laugh, while a faint flush overspread her face.

"Then we are to be neighbors," she remarked, interestedly.

"Yes, I am happy to know."

"Well, if we are to be neighbors, I suppose we may as well be friends and know each other's names," suggested she, blithely.

"As you please; I'm sure I should be most happily honored by such an arrangement. They call me Jack Moses," he politely replied, with an amused twinkle in his eyes, and a pleased expression over his face.

"You count now, sister Rita, you need not fly off like that. You know I'm not the least bit jealous. I am only going to try to outshine you, to pay you off for some of the mean tricks you have played on me. I think I'd not want to marry that horrid old rake, Lefe Armstrong, just that he is awful fast; a reckless spendthrift, and extravagantly fond of gambling." Kate informed her sister.

BEST ON EARTH

SURPRISE SOAP
THE GREAT
T-SF WASH TRY IT

A marvel of efficiency and economy. Quality never varies. The purest and best for all home-hold purposes; washing and cleaning without injury to hands or fabric. No boiling needed, no hard rubbing necessary. The saving of fuel alone pays for the soap. Makes white goods bright, laundry scrubbing, and all other work easy. One soap for all purposes. Sold in all stores. Beware of cheap imitations. The directions plainly given on each wrapper and bottle. The name "Surprise" is blown in glass of the old way. Wash day is made a pleasure of the old way. Wash day is made a pleasure of the old way.

A new poem commences with the line,
"I wish to die away from home." It sounds as if it might be rough on rats, but it isn't.

A MODERN MIRACLE.

The story comes to us of a man who more than twenty years ago, injured his knee by being thrown from a horse. The leg was bent at right angles. After abandoning all hope of ever limbering his knee joint, he had a wooden leg fitted from the knee down, and thus he walked for more than twenty years. A few months ago, hearing of the marvelous restorative power of Johnson's Anodyne Linctament, he was induced to make a trial of it and strange as it may seem after rubbing in the liniment twice a day for nearly five weeks, the cords were completely relaxed and the leg straightened.
Several months have elapsed since this occurrence took place and yet the knee joint is as serviceable as the other, with no tendency to become stiff again.

Another case fully as remarkable, if not more so, comes to us from Nova Scotia.

HARRISON, Kings Co., Nova Scotia.
DEAR SIR—I enclose a duty I owe you and the public, to make known the very extraordinary, and I may say astonishing, cure effected on my daughter, a miss of thirteen years of age, by your invaluable medicine. In consequence of taking cold after being inoculated for the line pox, the whole spine became dissected, and she lost the use of all her limbs, and her back was rounded up like a hump. She was utterly disabled for work, and almost helpless for about eighteen months. I had a medical advice, both in this Province and from an eminent physician in New York, in the United States; and they all pronounced a very difficult case, and that it would be a very difficult case to cure.
We used your Johnson's Anodyne Linctament with entire success. She is now well, and about the house.

HOLD THE FORT—Minard's Linctament, Minard's Family Pills, Minard's Honey have not only held the fort over all other preparations of a similar nature, but have increased in their sales over 200 per cent., and in their cures several hundred per cent. during the past year.

Dead silence in the parlor. Half lights.
More silence. Dim lights. Increase of silence. Female voice speaks verbally, breaking quiet: "Oh Jack, you haven't shaved to-day." More silence in the pa-rour, accompanied by gradually decreasing quiet in the sitting room.

FREE TRADE.
The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines no doubt has greatly benefited one of these classes.
As well as relieving the burden of home manufacturers. Especially is this the case with the Angust Plant and Baccharis German Syrup, as the reduction of revenue stamps has been added to the reduction of the duties on the raw materials. The Angust Plant and Baccharis German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles, has perhaps, the largest sale of any medicine in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles for 10 cents remain the same size.

Farm and Household.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

In ventilating a room, open the windows at top and bottom. The fresh air rushes in one way, while the other air makes its exit the other; thus you let in a friend and expel an enemy.

Lace may be washed by winding it around bottles or sewing it on muslin and boiling it in soft water with white castile soap. It should be rinsed in soft water after removing it from the suds.

Nothing is better for a sore throat than a gargle of salt and water. It may be used as often as desired, and if a little is swallowed each time it is used it will cleanse the throat and allay irritation.

A damp cloth enveloping the broom head will be found desirable in removing the dust from a carpet in a room where there may be many small articles to catch the dirt raised by an ordinary sweeping.

Preserving jure should be stood on their heads for at least an hour after sealing, when the liquor will escape if the jar contains air. Cranberry jelly mixed with cold water makes a refreshing drink for the sick.

Salt, in doses of one to four tea-spoonfuls in half a pint to a pint of tepid water, is an emetic always on hand. This is also an antidote to be used after poisoning from nitrate of silver while waiting for the doctor to come.

Silver should be washed with a chloroform skin, saturated with silver soap, each time after use, thus avoiding a general cleaning. Windows should never be washed while the silver shines upon them, as it is impossible to polish them without leaving black streaks.

To clean silk gloves rub them with very slightly dampened crumbs of bread. Or scrape fresh chalk upon them while on the hands and wash them in a basin containing diluted spirits of ammonia. Some gloves can be cleaned with milk, with rice pulp or with turpentine.

If you are troubled with moths in your feather bed boil the feathers in water for a short time; then put them in sacks and dry them, working them with the hands all the time.
Silk dresses should never be brushed with a whisk broom, but should be carefully rubbed with a velvet mitten kept for that purpose only.

Disease often lurks in a dirty dis-cloth, a greasy skin, an unclean tes-ticle and a poorly ventilated oven.

Flannel should be washed in hot water, and rinsed in hot water containing soap enough to saponify it a little. A carpet-sweeper is invaluable in a dining-room where small children eat, but should never be used for general sweeping.

If the feet are tender or painful after long walking or standing, great relief can be had by bathing them in salt and water. A handful of salt to a gallon of water is the right proportion. Have the water as hot as can comfortably be borne. Immerse the feet and throw the water over the legs as far as the knees with the hands. When the water becomes too cool, rub briskly with a fresh towel. This method, if used night and morning, will cure neuralgia of the feet.

To prevent the juice of pies soaked into the under crust, beat the white of an egg and brush the crust with it. If the oven is too hot when baking, take place a small dish of cold water in it. Well ventilated bread-trays will prevent moulding headache and lassitude. Powdered rice, sprinkled upon fresh fruit and applied to fresh wounds, will stop bleeding.
Tallow candles or pieces of tallow wrapped in tissue paper and laid among furs or other garments will prevent the ravages of moths.

SELECTING A STALLION.

There was a time when farmers were obliged to use the stock horses to be found in their immediate localities.
But little attention was given to the lines of breeding, and still less to the condition or quality of the brood mares. Then a colt was bred with the hope but without the certainty of paying a profit. In doing this, a farmer was a gambler, but a game of chance. Gradually, later, stud breeders began to gather in flocks and beginning to their stallions, and an improvement was noticeable at once.

Now all of us must not use the small, inferior blood, poorly bred horse, though his service be free. It is too expensive an experiment to try.
Horses are bred for a profit, and the market demands something more than the hoof, bones and skin of a horse.
To get the best results, there must be intelligence in breeding. The days of ignorance are gone, and now it is a fact well established, that, barring accidents, every colt may be bred at a profit. This of course leads to the use of small, diseased or crippled mares, for the fact of the trans-mission of deformities and diseases as weakened condition in offspring, is everywhere recognized. Having the large sound brood mare, the selection of a st
