ADMINISTRATION USES "CLUB" TO INCREASE TAXES

Orders Assessment Commissioner to Boost Assessments of All Property.

A HUMILIATING POSITION

Capable Official Is Forced to Place Excessive Values to Recoup Finances.

London's honored and capable assessment commissioner, Stephen Grant, is in a most humiliating position.

Mr. Grant, as everyone knows, has striven to give London an equitable assessment. He has seldom, if ever, been accused of unfairness, and his decisions have held with a long succession of courts of revision.

Today Mr. Grant finds himself forced to raise the assessments on London property in such a manner as to bring a heavy burden on many citizens, and with which he himself has no sympathy.

Left to himself, Mr. Grant would have provided a normal increase in assessment such as would have come from year to year with natural growth.

But this would not do for an administration that was beset with the fruits of an unprecedented program of wild spending.

Mr. Grant was "called in" and told to raise the assessment so many millions of dollars. It has been intimated that this order ranged all the way from $4,000,000 to $10,000,000.

Mr. Grant was not anxious to make a radical increase in assessment, and he told "the boss" so in so many words.

Then the club came out. "You get so many millions' increase in assessment or someone else will," was the order.

Now, Mr. Grant and his assessors take their orders from the bodies in control. But when they go about raising assessments from $500 to $2,000 at one shot, they feel their positions keenly.

And the men who are responsible are striking at the prosperity of London families in the name of "boosting." Citizens are becoming alive to the fact that such tactics are the worst "knock" London could be given.

CLEAN-UP PAINT-UP CAMPAIGN MONDAY

Spotless Town Movement To Be Launched—Mad Rush For Cleaning Utensils.

Clean-up and Paint-up Week commences on Monday, and a mad rush to purchase brooms, brushes, paints, dusters, rakes, hoes, shovels and other things necessary to the work is expected.

Mayor Graham and Chairman Dr. P. L. Burdon of the board of health have issued a joint proclamation calling upon all citizens to do their share toward making London a spotless town, and a universal response to the request is expected. The movement will mean more or less work, but the latter will be more than justified by the result.

HUERTA MUST SALUTE FLAG BEFORE SIX O'CLOCK SUNDAY

If This Ultimatum Is Not Obeyed Congress Will Be Asked to Sanction Necessary Measures to Enforce It.

Washington, D. C., April 18.—Huerta will salute the American flag at Tampico before six o'clock Sunday afternoon or President Wilson will go before Congress in a joint session Monday and ask for authority to take such measures as may be necessary. This statement was issued at the White House.

"General Huerta is still insisting upon doing something less than has been demanded, and something less than would constitute an acknowledgment that his representatives were entirely in the wrong in the indignities they have put upon the Government of the United States."

The scene which attended the morning developments was very dramatic. President Wilson had gone, as is his usual Saturday habit, across the Potomac to a secluded little club, where he plays golf. When Charles O'Shaughnessy's dispatches were deciphered and their import became known to Secretary Bryan and Mr. Tumulty, a hurried attempt was made to get the President on the telephone.

Secretary Bryan and Mr. Tumulty started in a fast automobile, and while they were rushing across the Virginia hills the White House telephones had succeeded in reaching the President, who hurried back and started for Washington.

Secretary Bryan and Mr. Tumulty met the President, and the important dispatches were communicated and the journey was continued to the White House.

The President went at once to his study, where he wrote his statement, giving Huerta until 6 o'clock Sunday night. He typed it himself upon his personal typewriter, as is his custom with important official documents. Then he decided that, inasmuch as there probably would be no

SPRING FEVER!!

HORSE ENTERS JEWELRY STORE VIA PLATE GLASS WINDOW

Colt Passes Up Vanity Boxes as It Plays Leading Role in Exciting Corner Drama.

A colt, a street car, and James McCartney enacted a little drama on the corner of Park avenue and Dundas street at noon today, which brought Officer James Oakley off his beat and attracted the attention of a large crowd of people who were on the streets.

McCartney, in company with a friend, was driving a colt west on Dundas street when he encountered a car at the corner of Park avenue. The animal refused to pass and when gentle persuasion was brought to bear by McCartney, reared up, striking a light standard with its front feet and shattering a globe. McCartney, nothing daunted, turned around and made another attempt to pass. This time the left line broke, and the thoroughly madened equine made for the doorway of W. J. Young's jewelry store, passing the east window, filled with vanity boxes, it crashed into the west one. Had it not been for the adeptness with which P. C. Oakley went to his assistance, the colt would have broken loose.

The horse, which was a valuable one, had its right fore leg badly cut, necessitating the attention of a veterinary. The window was valued at $50, with no insurance.

FAVORS MILITARY SCHOOL TRAINING

Inspector Edwards Declares It Has an Excellent Effect on Boys.

RELIES ON THE TEACHERS

Should Adapt Education to Individual Needs of School and Community.

School Inspector C. B. Edwards, who returned yesterday from Toronto, where he attended the sessions of the Ontario Educational Association, declared this morning that he believed military training in the schools to be an excellent thing. The question was discussed by the O. E. A. and is a bone of contention with school boards throughout the Province.

Mr. Edwards was shown a copy of a newspaper editorial in which it was stated that "the notion that a boy's nature can be transformed by a few hours of military drill is a militarist superstition."

"Why all this kick, then?" commented the Inspector. "If the drill has no effect on the boys, I certainly think that it has an effect and an excellent effect. It straightens them up, and possesses a great physical and moral value. The moral value comes in the developed ability to work with others and to learn obedience to the officers the boys themselves have chosen. The real value of a man to society is his freedom with which he works with other persons."

FAIR AND UNIVERSITY ROBBED OF CITY GRANTS

PAYING THE PIPER

The administration which this city had wished on itself is in desperate straits.

Certain to inflict upon the taxpayers the largest tax rate in the city's history, they are striving in every way to KEEP UNDER THE LIMIT ALLOWED BY LAW.

In order to achieve this they find it necessary to strike a serious blow at the Western Fair and the Western University.

Neither of these institutions is to receive a cent from the city's taxes. Last year the city gave the University only $5,000 of the $10,000 grant provided through the efforts of ex-Ald. Richter. This year a great clamor has been made for assistance, and the Ontario Government has made a grant, the city refuses to give the university a cent. It must take what it got last year and be content. This will be a serious handicap to the institution on the eve of its expansion, and every effort should be made to prevent the unjust curtailment of what, by precedent, the university understood it was to receive each year.

The Western Fair, which got $5,000 out of the people's taxes last year, is denied anything. A part of insurance money, collected on burned buildings last year, which should be devoted to the restoration of the same buildings, is to be thrown as a sop to London's greatest institution for the attraction of visitors. "This year the fair will receive for its maintenance $2,500 out of the insurance that should go to replacing buildings. The rest of the insurance money went into temporary buildings, which will have to be replaced at large trial of expense."

The controllers are piping and citizens are dancing.

ROYAL COMMISSION WILL INVESTIGATE N. B. CHARGES

Hon. Dr. Landry's Name Included, After a Scene, by Mr. Dugal in Those Against Whom He Has No Accusations to Make.

[Canadian Press.]

Fredericton, N.B., April 18.—Before the New Brunswick Legislature decided last night to appoint a royal commission to investigate the charges of Mr. A. Dugal against Premier Fleming and Hon. H. F. McLeod, formerly provincial secretary, now a member of the House of Commons, an exciting session took place.

It started when Mr. Dugal undertook, in response to a request by letter from Acting Premier Clarke, to give details of his charges. Mr. Dugal said he expected to be able to prove that John Scott, of the firm of Scott and Kelley paid to J. K. Fleming the sum of $10,000 as the price of contracts on the Valley Railway and to H. F. McLeod the sum of $1,000 for the same purpose. The payments, he said, occurred during the year 1912, and before the contracts had been awarded.

Mr. Landry's Objects. When reading his charges, he named Hon. John Morrissey, Hon. George Clarke, Hon. James E. Murray, and Hon. John E. Wilson, as members of the Government against whom he had no accusation or suspicion, and whom he was pleased to exonerate. Hon. Dr. Landry's name was omitted from the list, and this precipitated a scene as Dr. Landry demanded that he either be charged formally or else exonerated. Mr. Dugal went into conference with P. B. Carvell, who was in the House, and also with P. J. Veniot and E. S. Carter, Liberal organizers, and after a few minutes' hesitation, said he had no charge to make against Dr. Landry.

This did not satisfy the gentleman, however, and Mr. Dugal then amplified his statement and the incident ended, amid applause.

Mr. Clarke moved that the investigation be by royal commission instead of House committee. The Government of New Brunswick, he declared, desired no whitewashing, there had been wrong doing they wanted to know it, let the blame fall where it might. They had nothing to hide and nothing to fear.

Mr. Clarke's motion was carried. It was rumored today that Mr. Justice Ezekiel McLeod and Mr. Justice P. Landry, of the New Brunswick Supreme Court, will be members of the Royal Commission.

EXPECT VERDICT IN DUAL ACTION TODAY

The dual suit of the city of London and Percy Summers against the Grand Trunk Railway was resumed in the jury assizes this morning, many employees of the railway being called to testify that the fire truck, which was smashed up by an engine at the White Horse street crossing could have escaped injury by an exercise of proper care in approaching the tracks.

The evidence taken today was largely accumulative, and threw no new light on the accident on the night of August 5, when the city's No. 2 motor fire truck from the central station was completely destroyed, and young Summers, who was on the running-board of the truck, received serious injuries that have incapacitated him for anything but the lightest work.

Percy Summers asks for damages to the amount of $5,000, and the city, through City Solicitor T. G. Meredith, has entered a claim for $5,000.

The case is proceeding this afternoon, and a verdict will likely be brought in tonight, as Mr. Justice Kelly wishes to return to Toronto to spend Sunday with his family.

Not One Cent From This Year's Taxes Provided For Them.

BOLD TACTICS TO CUT RATES

Assessment Commissioner Forced to Effect Enormous Increase.

A WILD CAT ERA

No Provision for L. and P. S. R. Funds Will Be Made by the City.

Faced with the problem of raising enormous increases in taxation and assessment, the present board of control of the city of London is pursuing tactics of a kind never before known in the city's history.

A club has been held over the head of the assessment commissioner. He has been told to produce so much increased assessment or to give satisfactory reasons. Though the assessment office was hitherto conducted with fairness and good judgment, from his superior officers the commissioner has been told to put the jack under every assessment that will stand it.

INCREASE IN ASSESSMENTS AS HIGH AS 50 PER CENT.

As a consequence increases of $2,000, $1,500 and $1,000 have been placed on every house that will stand it. In some instances with frontage taxation the properties will be taxed to the limit allowed by the law. "Put it on every one who can stand it," has been the order, and the owners know the result.

Meanwhile in order to keep the tax rate below 27 or 29 mills London's finest institutions are being robbed of their legitimate grants. It is all right to spend money in any manner so long as the cry of "for the people, by the people, and with the people," can be shouted by certain persons. What the cry means is, "We are doing the people good." The people appear to be standing it, but from murmurs everywhere they are making wry faces over the medicine that is being handed out. But the tax doctors seem to have them by the nose and all they can do is to make a wry face.

BOTH WESTERNS ARE ROBBED OF GRANTS.

Do the people of London realize that the grant to the Western University is likely to be cut off this year? Do the people realize that the Western Fair will not receive one cent out of this year's taxes?

Last year the Western University, the first institution behind which citizens wish to stand, was voted $10,000. It received only $5,000, apparently because the city was not flush with funds.

THIS YEAR ALL THE WESTERN UNIVERSITY IS DUE TO RECEIVE IS THE $5,000 IT FAILED TO RECEIVE LAST YEAR. IT WILL CERTAINLY NOT GET THE $10,000 FOR WHICH A PRECEDENT HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED UNLESS A DETERMINED STAND IS MADE.

LADY-FROM-CARADOC TALKS ON FASHIONS AND FARMS

"Thirty-two cents a pound for butter!"

Oh, what a nerve your farmers have! said the workingman's wife who was doing her shopping on the Saturday market, and had priced the neatly-wrapped rolls of golden butter from Willowbank Dairy Farm, somewhere out in Caradoc, that the farmer's wife was offering for sale in the dairy pavilion.

"Well," said the quiet little plainly-dressed lady from Caradoc, "it largely depends on the angle you look at things from as to where the 'nerve' comes in, and who has the big share of it. You city folks think we are robbers because we take 25 cents a pound for our butter when we can get it; but if you had to help to milk eighteen cows, and wash and clean a cream separator with two dozen disks, and break your back over a churn that isn't a daisy by any means, you wouldn't want 32 cents a pound for your butter. We haven't got hydro on our conscience yet, and the milking machines like they've got 'way out in Wisconsin ain't in general use down in Caradoc. Have you ever lived in the country, lady?"

No Country Life For Her.

"Not much," sniffed the city woman whose husband drives a grocery wagon at 112 per and takes her and the children to see "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," whenever May A. Bell Maris comes to town.

"Well, you might do worse," retorted the lady from Caradoc, "but it's hard work on a farm, and don't you forget it."

The city woman passed on to look at some eggs at 22 cents per dozen. Then the lady from Caradoc turned to the sympathetic listener. "Those city women," she said, "who haven't got anything to do but wash their dishes and gallivant round to picture shows, seem to think we ought to give our produce away. My old man wants to come to town to live. Thinks we've got enough saved up in the bank at Mount Brydges to keep us going in town, along with the rent from the farm. But I tell him, to want a while. I think an old country body like me would be out of place in the city. I never could learn to dress like some of the city women."

Styles Getting Outrageous.

Take those petticoat skirts for instance. Make me think of the Hans and Liza advertisements in the street cars. They look like a Dutch boy with his hands in his pockets."

AWARD CONTRACTS FOR NEW STATION

Public Utilities Commission Accepts Bid for Radial Power-house Equipment.

REQUEST FOR TENNIS COURT

Queen's and Springbank Parks Are Suggested for Location.

In a session lasting just one hour and ten minutes, members of the public utility commission put through a big batch of business Friday afternoon. One of the recommendations of General Manager H. J. Glaubitz, contracts were awarded for approximately $50,000 worth of materials for the new radial station, including brick, cement, hardware, etc.

The board adopted a recommendation from the parks board to increase the Springbank rentals to the extent of $210. The largest portion of this increase is made up on the merry-go-round privileges, the fee for which was boosted from $50 to $200.

Municipal Tennis Court.
A request for the use of a portion of Victoria Park for tennis was referred to the general manager. The commissioners approved of the principle of municipal tennis courts, but thought that Victoria Park was hardly the place for them. Queen's and Springbank Parks were suggested instead.

It was decided to grant $110 to the Byron Public School instead of $100, as formerly. The children of several of the employees of the commission attend the school.

The parks board reported a communication from the Biological Club suggesting the establishment of a zoo at Springbank Park. The letter was filed, with the explanation that no funds were available for the purpose, and that it was useless to go into the matter unless they city was prepared to spend a large amount of money in connection with it.

The salaries of the permanent men employed at Springbank were set at $50 a month, with $60 for the superintendent.

No Action Taken.
Manager Glaubitz advised that as yet no move had been made by the board of control toward having all electric wires placed underground.

A request from the residents of Thorn-ton, avenue, which runs between Colborne and Mainland streets, north from Oxford street, to have all poles placed in the rear yards and ornamental lights substituted was referred to the general manager for an estimate.

Mr. Glaubitz gave a brief report of the recent conference of hydro managers at Toronto, emphasizing the desire to secure greater co-operation between the officials of the various municipalities in developing the electrical business.

AMONG THE AFTERNOON AND EVENING DRESSES

The original lines of fashion introduced in Paris in late February for the spring and summer season, have crystallized into general acceptance, so that the loose waist, the wide hips, the drooping shoulder and the narrowness of the bottom of the skirts are the accepted keynote of summer fashions in gowns.

OLD SCHOOL BAPTISTS

Members of Covenanted Baptist Organization Hear Leading Speakers.

Covenanted Baptists, sometimes called Predestinarian Baptists, but more generally known as Old School Baptists, to the number of fifty attended a service conducted by Elder J. B. Slauson, of St. Thomas, in the council chambers of the county buildings last night. Services are held regularly on the Friday preceding the third Sunday of the month.

Elder Slauson Heard.
"The Descent Into Baptism of Philip and the Eunuch" was the subject of Elder Slauson's sermon, preached from the text, Acts viii, 26, 29. "Was returning, and sitting in his chariot read Esaias the prophet. Then the spirit said unto Philip, 'Go near and join thyself to this chariot.'"

That an overruling power, an overruling hand, marks out the way men must go and fixes the bounds or limits which restrain them, controlling and guiding their path, was a main thought of the address. When the spirit takes possession of men they are separated from former things.

It was the Father's good pleasure and purpose from the beginning that Christ should suffer ignominy, shame and pain and that the sin of the world should be laid upon Him. The Lord prepares the heart for the truth and prepares the tongue to speak it. God made the eunuch anxious and ready to receive the gospel and led and prepared Philip to carry the gospel to the eunuch, who was baptized in the Jordan which signifies judgment. The Jordan flows into the Dead Sea which has no known outlet. Similarly none can escape death. There is no other outlet. The solemn ordinance of baptism signifies becoming dead to the things of the world," said the speaker.

Elder Slauson conducts meetings in five other places besides London, Dutton, St. Thomas, Lobo, Ekfrid and Duart.

COLLEGIATE CADETS DANCE

Soldier Boys of High School Entertain 100 Couples.

An interesting event was the informal dance held in the Armory: Thursday evening, at which the Collegiate Institute cadets

During the evening a unique dance number, and won a glass vase filled with roses. Marjorie Headley was queen of this number, and won a glass vase filled with roses. Music was rendered by the High School Orchestra under Leader Mel. Platt.

The patronesses of the enjoyable entertainment were the members of the Seventh Regiment Fusiliers Chapter, Imperial Order of the Empire.

Huerta may have been taking counsel with the champagne bottle, and so fortified himself against battleships whose shot can't reach the wine cellars of Mexico City. He may be like the mouse that after a saucer of brandy called out, "Now bring on your cat."

MANIPULATION OF MONEY.

THE Provincial Government has introduced a new system of manipulating money appropriated by the Legislature. Last session a complacent majority gave it authority to raise $5,000,000 for improvements in Northern Ontario. The Opposition objected to a blanket appropriation of this kind. Mr. Rowell and his colleagues were quite willing to vote all the money required by the Government to advance the interests of this important section, but they demanded that the usual British practice should be followed, and the Legislature informed how the money was to be spent. That reasonable and proper demand was refused, and the ministers were given authority to get the money and spend it as they pleased.

That was bad enough; still the expectation was that it would be spent at all events for the general purpose for which it was granted. It appears, however, that this has not been done. The evidence of the assistant treasurer before the public accounts committee shows that under the act to raise $5,000,000 the Government had received $4,362,838; and of this it had spent in Northern Ontario only $1,300,488—the remaining $3,662,349 having been spent for other purposes. And the Government declares that it was justified in following this course. But the practice of using for one purpose public money voted by the Legislature for something else is not justifiable. To put it mildly it is a misapplication of the public funds. It establishes a dangerous precedent. If it can be done in one case it can be done in every case and the Legislature's control over public expenditures is lost. Carried to its logical conclusion the precedent would justify a government in coming to Parliament and asking for a lump sum for the year's expenditures without going into particulars as to how the money should be spent.

The Provincial Treasurer in defending the course of the Government said that "It was not sound business to earmark funds for a particular purpose." That is simply a revision to the old Conservative idea that the ruling power should spend the money, and not take the people into its confidence. When the act authorizing the loan was passed, the natural expectation of everybody was that the money would be raised just as fast as it was needed for Northern Ontario expenditures, and no faster. Instead of that three-fifths of the total amount has been used for something else. If any more money is to be spent for the original purposes of the act it will have to be raised from some other source, or further securities will have to be sold.

That may be good business methods according to the Government's ideas of financing, but it will strike the average man as very unwise, and decidedly inconsistent with the principle of full parliamentary control. No matter how it may be glossed over it was a misapplication of public money. The misapplied money may not have been wasted. Northern Ontario may get its full five million in time. But that is no excuse for unsound business and unparliamentary methods.

THE BEST PEACE MEMORIAL.

PROPOSALS come from the American Centenary Organization at New York to spend one million dollars on the erection of peace memorials to mark the hundred years of peace between Great Britain and the United States, and large appropriations are made for the erection of statues, one of Lincoln in London, one of Francis Parkman, the historian, in Ottawa, and one of Queen Victoria in Washington. At all capitals a monument, being the message of peace from the United States to the world, will be erected.

These proposals are all good, but the proposal of ex-President Taft that Great Britain and the United States should submit all questions of dispute, whether involving the honor of the nation or not, to arbitration, would be far better. That was one of ex-President Taft's best acts. It did not succeed, but if it cannot be carried out to the fullest extent, let it be carried out in part. The last suggestion that a monument typifying the message of peace from the United States to the world should be erected at all the capitals would have great meaning given to it, and force added to it, if Great Britain and the United States entered into a treaty for peace, referring to arbitration all questions between Canada and the United States, whether such questions involved the honor of the nation or not. This would only be carrying out part of ex-President Taft's suggestion, but the world's capitals would have a united message of peace, from not only all English-speaking America, but all the English-speaking world.

It would be a precedent that would be

CHICKENS AND COWS SUPPORT EX-CLERK'S FAMILY FIRST YEAR ON FARM

$18-a-Week Clerk Takes His Third Step and Learns How to Farm Scientifically.

By W. M. J. CHAPTER IV.

The first winter on the farm was learned that the extension department of the university would help solve our problems even to sending a man out to make an on-the-ground study of things if necessary. I have submitted a great many questions to them since then and have always profited by following their advice.

Third Step.

A daily paper answered my queries on feeding, and a poultry paper unraveled knotty chicken puzzles for Mary. The farmer who really wants to know things doesn't have to guess. The price of a postage stamp gets him an expert's opinion, and maybe saves a crop. We had paid the taxes in January from the proceeds of our fall poultry sale, and the cows and chickens added enough to what was left to pay the interest in March. Besides this and making our living, there was $50 left to buy seed. We resolved to raise all the chickens we could this year. Buying feed had cut heavily on profits.

I was eager to begin the spring work. The cheerful neighbor dropped in one late March day and found me hitching the team.

"Ain't goin' to plow, are ye?" he asked. I told him I was. "You'll spoil yer land," he declared. "Wait till it dries a little. When you can see a shine on the furrow keep the plow out of the ground. It'll bake hard as a brick. Wait till the soil crumbles loose off the moldboard."

I waited. Meanwhile Mary was having her troubles. We had drawn on the $100 in bank for an incubator. The first hatch was a failure, caused by the oil tank getting empty and the lamp going out. The second hatch was better only by seventeen chicks—not enough ventilation and moisture. The last hatch from eggs we bought came off fine, but the chicks began to droop when two or three days old and die.

"White diarrhea," the neighbor's wife enlarged before many years pass, to include the whole of ex-President Taft's proposal. Duels have almost entirely disappeared in all civilized countries. War is only wholesale duelling. There is no likelihood of war between Great Britain and the United States, on Canada's account anyway, and such an agreement between the two greatest nations in the world, would be the best international memorial of the hundred years of peace.

The Canadian Parliament should take such steps as it can to effect such a desirable agreement, and to realize in part the treaty favored by ex-President Taft.

TWO VIEWS.

TWO newspapermen were discussing the Riley trial. One said it had little value as news with intelligent readers, because it lacked the romantic element. It was just a "drunken brawl" crime that did not have the peculiar attraction of human interest. There was no element of mystery, no peculiarity of method or motive. The other writer did not take the same view of it. "It's true, there's no superficial fiction about this, but it seems to me that these so-called 'sordid' crimes are the ones that cry loudest for publicity," he argued. "Your peculiar baffling mystery is individual, and of a consequence it has the appeal of the unusual. The criminals with an individuality do not confront society as a great problem, but the very fact that you say the Riley trial is of no news value proves that it is of frequent occurrence, and needs a remedy. It is a common crime, and the crime that is common is the one that should arouse what is called society. This crime was caused by drink. Drink causes hundreds of commonplace killings. The very ordinariness of it makes the public lose sight of it quickly, but, to my mind, is the reason why a newspaper should print every sordid detail. The public should be shocked and shocked and shocked every time such a crime occurs until it comes to realize and fear and abhor The Thing behind such a crime. Your so-called romantic murder is not true to life. The drunken murder is life and truth, and it is life and truth that should be dealt with first. Why, there is more psychology in these sordid crimes than in all the society murders that ever happened."

MUST STOP QUARREL.

THE New York Times comments on a curious incident in connection with the home rule struggle. This is a joint article in a Berlin periodical by a nephew of John Redmond and a son of Sir Edward Carson, representing the respective sides in the fight, in which they declare that the older generation must lay aside their quarrel because the younger ones, they say, have shaken hands.

This is an excellent sign, as it indicates that the hostility between the north of Ireland and the central and southern parts is not as keen as has been pictured. From the utterances of the two leading the Ulster anti-home rule forces the world has been led to believe that the religious hatred between Irish citizens of different religions was at white heat. The stand taken by these young men is evidence that the religious animosities of the past have greatly declined. When people become intimate, learning to know one another, racial and religious distrust vanishes and ancient controversies disappear except where an attempt at survival is kept up through personal expression.

A SHOCKING DISCOVERY.

On the Spur of the Moment

(BY ROY K. MOULTON.)

Fire at Hickeyville. Fire bell rang out 'tother night. When the folks were sleepin' tight; Hod Peters' hencoop was on fire. Flames was raisin' higher and higher. Everybody said they'd bet 'Twas caused by some cigar. Fire Chief Frisby heered the bell And he ran to town like mad. With his nice red uniform. To petcock him from the storm. He got to the hose house quick And it almost made him sick. When he realized that he Had forgot to bring the key. Seemed like some decree of fate, Fireboys had to stand and wait. While he ran back home, two miles, In a true Dorado style. Frisby got back home, but he Couldn't find no gold dum key. Then he got mad at his wife, Just bekuz, to save her life, She could not hink on what shelf He had put the thing himself; Might be in the syrin' jus. Or beneath the parlor rug. Then his wife recalled by chance That the key was in his pants. She gave to the rummage sale. Man that bought 'em was in jail. Frisby he raced back to town. But the hencoop had burned down. Fireboys they are in disgrace, Frisby has a given up his place. And the council's bought a peck Of new firehouse keys, by heck.

Uncle Abner.

The only way to make a livin' without workin' at it is to marry a school teacher.

When a feller's wife goes down to the store and picks out his clothes there ain't much doubt as to who wears the longer portion of 'em around the house.

When a feller looks around a bit and sees some of the microbes that are floatin' around the streets with pants on and smokin' cigars it makes him feel like goin' and coughin' up $2 for one of Mr. Darwin's justly celebrated books and lookin' into the subject a little deeper.

It all depends on the points of view. A feller kin fall out'n a twenty-story window in skyscraper and get killed and the papers will give him three lines, but if he falls out'n an airship ten feet from the ground and sprains his ankle he gets three columns with pictures.

From the Hickeyville Clarion.

William Tibbitts, our postmaster and proprietor of the general store, always reads all the past cards that pass through our midst. Mrs. Anse Frisby called at the store some time ago and ordered, among other things, a ham and two pounds of cheese. Two days later she called at the store and asked why the goods had not been delivered and Tibbitts said: "I saw by the past cards you got that your friends wasn't comin', so I naturally thought you wouldn't need them things."

THE HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, APRIL 20, 1914.

While the planetary influences are not so distinctly emphasized as they are sometimes, astrologers announce that care should guide men and women today, for Mars and Neptune are both in adverse aspect.

Danger of quarrels and misunderstandings is most to be avoided under this configuration.

The evil sway of Mars is held to lead to accidents and injuries. Journeys are under an unlucky omen, which presages disappointment and delay.

While the configuration prevails it is well to conserve physical energy. Athletics should be especially cautious not to overdo.

It is an unfavorable time for indulging in any expression of emotion or affection. There is a warning sign for operations of every sort. Surgeons, dentists and all who contribute to physical well-being are held to be subjected to sinister influences.

Under the evil leading of Neptune it is well to be on the guard against deception and fraud. Schemers are said to gain power to convince their victims.

Women should beware of the influence which tends to cause discontent by awakening desires for wealth, social influence and the gratification of extravagant tastes.

There is a prophecy that October will be a critical time for San Francisco. Discord and trouble among men and women who have great public responsibilities are fore-shadowed.

In the Middle West there is to be a summer marked by extraordinary crop conditions, the seeds declare.

The omen is good for travel next summer. Railways and steamship companies should prosper greatly.

Persons whose birthday it is should avoid all litigation and speculation the coming year. Women may find economy necessary.

Children born on this day have the guidance of stars that presage vicissitudes. Boys may find it difficult to succeed in their life work. Girls should be guarded against unfortunate marriages. These subjects of Aries and Taurus should be exceedingly clever.

WOES OF MRS. NEWLYWED

"I have a copper jardiniere that is very much tarnished," said Mrs. Newlywed. "How may I clean it?"
"After cleaning brass or copper with salt and vinegar, rub with olive oil and the metal will not tarnish for a long time," answered Mrs. Neighbor.

My advice to you would be to wait a year and then if you find your affection for him deepening, and that he "wears well"—marry him.

Rhubarb Jelly.

Dear Miss Grey: Please give me a recipe for rhubarb jelly and a rhubarb marmalade containing bitter almonds. I appreciate the help your column gives very highly.

Ans.—Cut the rhubarb into pieces about one inch long, but do not peel it. Cook it to a soft pulp in water enough to cover it, strain through the jelly bag, and allow one pound sugar to each pint of juice; finish like other jelly. Apple and rhubarb mixed together and finished like other jellies is very nice.

Perhaps this is the marmalade recipe you want. Cut the rhubarb into pieces one or two inches long; to each 1½ pounds of rhubarb allow 1 pound sugar, ½ of a lemon cut thin, and ¼ ounce of bitter almonds blanched and divided.

Boil all well together and put up like other marmalade.

Decorating a Bungalow.

Dear Miss Grey: I hope my letter will not be too long and that you will be kind enough to answer it. I live in a bungalow, one story and attic, five rooms and bath. I would like to know what colors to have the walls in these rooms and also what kind and color of rugs to get. We have a hall, about 6 by 6, one large door, facing west; living room with three west windows, one south window; dining room with three south windows, kitchen with two north windows. These rooms are finished with medium color golden oak woodwork, and all furniture is oak. The dining room has a built-in sideboard.

Ans.—In the hall, living and dining room I should use a tan or butty colored paper of plain or conventional design; you will find the effect much better in keeping to one tone and making it harmonize and restful. The golden brown rugs, green rugs would also go nicely, or blue or even a rose color. In the kitchen use a washable enameled paint on the walls of pale yellow, with a linoleum in brown and tan block pattern. Have lighting fixtures of dull brass.

Y. W. C. A. BOARD DECIDE TO SELL THEIR PRESENT RESIDENCE

House on Wellington Street Offered for Sale—Purpose Campaign for Erection of Fine New Building in the Down-Town Section

The members of the Young Women's Christian Association board of management of this city, decided at a recent meeting to offer for sale the residence on Wellington street, and to purchase a more convenient, downtown site, where the entire work can be carried on under one roof. This decision was not arrived at suddenly, for the matter has been under deliberation by the board for some time. The present residence will likely be offered for sale at once, and within the year a campaign started to raise funds for a new building. It is probable that the entire property where the central rooms are at 328 Dundas street will be purchased, and suitable additions and improvements made.

Up-To-Date "Y." Needed.
A city the size of London should be able to boast a worthy Y. W. C. A. building—one equipped with swimming pool, library and gymnasium. Already the "Y." plays an important part in the life of many a working girl in London, and how much a factor for good it might become if these added attractions and benefits were made possible! There is at the present time too work in this city. Miss Ludwig, the energetic secretary in the central office, is very much interested in the girls who have been attending the educational classes during the winter. Among these, the first-aid class has been particularly successful. Lectures and demonstrations have been given each week, until now the members of the class are quite proficient in binding up wounds, bandaging sprains, and giving aid for the injuries and ailments that befall humanity most frequently.

The travellers' aid. Miss Lang, is doing a splendid work at the different depots in the city, in meeting the principal trains day and night, and giving care, protection, and advice to girls and young women arriving here strange, lonely, and oftentimes almost penniless. Just now her hands are more than full, as the flood of immigration has begun to sweep across the continent, and scarcely a day goes by without some "stranger within the gates" requiring help in some manner or other.

Summerhome for Girls.
Another feature of the local Y. W. C. A. work which has been conducted for some years is the summer cottage, "Sum-much need for a women's building in the centre of the city, with an auditorium where women's clubs and societies might hold meetings. If such an assembly hall were established in connection with the Young Women's Association building, it would prove a great boon to London club-women.

During the winter, the price of board at the residence was never raised, despite the increased cost of food stuffs. And for the first time in the history of the association, it was found necessary to ask the public for assistance. Previous to this winter the boarding home has always been self-sustaining.

Some changes in the management of the residence were discussed at the recent meeting. It was decided to engage Miss Sutherland, of Winnipeg, as superintendent. Miss Sutherland comes highly recommended, having been in charge of a home of 150 girls in Winnipeg. She will commence her duties on April 23.

Perhaps too much cannot be said about the various departments of Y. W. C. A.

merhome," at Port Stanley. This is open for two months, July and August, each year, and here the working girl who cannot afford a long railway journey to a resort farther away from the city, finds a quiet resting place, in which to recuperate during her vacation of one or two weeks. A committee of ladies connected with the Y. W. takes charge of this home, and sees that everything is in readiness for the first of July. Summerhomes afford accommodation for 22 girls at a time, and the board rate is very moderate. Many girls return year after year to spend their vacation at the "Y" cottage.

In view of the practical work being conducted by the association for the girls of the city, it is hoped that when the campaign for an enlarged residence is inaugurated the response from the citizens of London will be hearty and generous.

Members of the board present at the recent meeting were: President Mrs. A. T. Edwards, Mesdames Kling, McPherson, Hale, Orr, Waller, Reid, Spencer, Jarvis, Misses Moore, McMillan, Fraser, McBride, and the secretary, Miss Ludwig.

Cynthia Grey's Mail-Box

[Correspondents are requested to make their inquiries as brief as possible, and to write on one side of the paper only. It is impossible to give replies within a stated time, as all letters have to be answered in turn. No letters can be answered privately.]

Should She Accept.

Dear Miss Grey: I am a young woman of 30 years and have had only one real love affair during my life. The young man whom I loved and who appeared to love me suddenly grew cold and indifferent, saying I was too haughty. This was five years ago, but it has affected my life very deeply. I have considerable means and have had several offers of marriage since but I have refused them all, thinking that I have been sought after owing to my money and property. I am now being called upon by a man of twenty-five, of excellent character and habits, who wishes to marry me and who declares he loves me for what I am. I am quite fond of him but nothing like my first love. Would you advise me to marry him or remain in my present independent position, having regard to the consequences "pro" and "con"? "CLARINDA."

Ans.—Yours is quite a serious problem, Clarinda, and one for which I always hesitate to offer advice. Marriage is, after all, pretty much a game of chance as far as happiness is concerned. Couples whom one would have thought ideally matched, have had anything but a happy home, and the opposite has been exactly the case, too. But I think you would be wise to bury the memory of that first love entirely. You were younger and more impressionable then, and were probably more in love with being in love than anything else.

My advice to you would be to wait a year and then if you find your affection for him deepening, and that he "wears well"—marry him.

Rhubarb Jelly.

Dear Miss Grey: Please give me a recipe for rhubarb jelly and a rhubarb marmalade containing bitter almonds. I appreciate the help your column gives very highly.

Ans.—Cut the rhubarb into pieces about one inch long, but do not peel it. Cook it to a soft pulp in water enough to cover it, strain through the jelly bag, and allow one pound sugar to each pint of juice; finish like other jelly. Apple and rhubarb mixed together and finished like other jellies is very nice.

Perhaps this is the marmalade recipe you want. Cut the rhubarb into pieces one or two inches long; to each 1½ pounds of rhubarb allow 1 pound sugar, ½ of a lemon cut thin, and ¼ ounce of bitter almonds blanched and divided.

Boil all well together and put up like other marmalade.

Decorating a Bungalow.

Dear Miss Grey: I hope my letter will not be too long and that you will be kind enough to answer it. I live in a bungalow, one story and attic, five rooms and bath. I would like to know what colors to have the walls in these rooms and also what kind and color of rugs to get. We have a hall, about 6 by 6, one large door, facing west; living room with three west windows, one south window; dining room with three south windows, kitchen with two north windows. These rooms are finished with medium color golden oak woodwork, and all furniture is oak. The dining room has a built-in sideboard.

Ans.—In the hall, living and dining room I should use a tan or butty colored paper of plain or conventional design; you will find the effect much better in keeping to one tone and making it harmonize and restful. The golden brown rugs, green rugs would also go nicely, or blue or even a rose color. In the kitchen use a washable enameled paint on the walls of pale yellow, with a linoleum in brown and tan block pattern. Have lighting fixtures of dull brass.

Asparagus

[BY CAROLINE COE.]

From the housewife's standpoint, one of the best things about asparagus is the ease with which it can be prepared. In fact, with a little boiling in a little water, with a little salt and butter, you have a dish fit for any king.

Asparagus should always be cooked with salt in the proportion of a teaspoonful to a quart of water.

It isn't easy to lay down a hard, fast rule as to the time to cook asparagus. But in general, if it is young and tender, about fifteen minutes will suffice. While on the other hand, if it is rather old and tough, it will be better for about thirty minutes' cooking.

The important thing to consider in buying asparagus is its freshness.

Serving it.
Asparagus can be served on a strip of buttered toast, dressed with pepper and salt and butter, or it can be served with a good cream sauce.

If the housewife prefers, she can make asparagus the foundation of the main dish in her luncheon. For instance, she can have an:

Asparagus Omelet—To make which the tougher pieces can be cut into small pieces, one-inch pieces and boil them slowly in salted water until quite tender. Beat the whites of three eggs, with a pinch of salt, till they are stiff and dry, and then add the beaten yolks. Add a teaspoonful of cream to the mixture and then put in the inch-long asparagus, which should be quite soft.

Mix the asparagus and eggs lightly. Pour the mixture into an omelet pan or a skillet in which a little butter has been melted. Brown it slightly. Fold it, sprinkle it with salt and pepper and slip it on a hot platter. Garnish with sprigs of parsley.

Asparagus loaf is another luncheon dish. Put two tablespoons of butter in a small saucepan and when it is bubbling add a tablespoonful of flour. Then add a cupful of milk, slowly, stirring all the time.

Season with salt and paprika. Cook the whole slowly until a creamy sauce results. This will take six or seven minutes probably. Remove from the fire, adding four well-beaten eggs and a cupful of asparagus tips, cooked till tender.

WOODSTOCK W.O.B.A. MANAGER PREPARES FOR 1914 SEASON

Bradley to Attend Meeting in Berlin Today—Woodstock Players to Have First Chance.

Woodstock, April 17.—The Woodstock baseball team met tonight in W. A. A. rooms. Jimmie Bradley outlined his plans to the men behind the club and the prospects look bright for a strong team to represent this city. Bradley will attend the meeting of the W. O. B. A. in Berlin tomorrow. The matter of playing grounds was discussed, but nothing definite was decided upon. The club intends holding a meeting some time next week, when officers will be elected and everything put in shape for the season. There is a lot of good material in the city at present and all of the Woodstock boys will be given an opportunity to make the team. If the interest shown tonight is an indication, baseball should flourish here this season.

BAKER INTERVIEWS STANLEY AND REMAINS A HOLDOUT

[Canadian Press.]

St. Thomas, April 17.—"Wild Bill" Baker, the London boy, who last season pitched two no-hit games for the Saints, came over to St. Thomas this afternoon and had a lengthy interview with President Stanley. "William" is a hold out "right," he listened to a long line of eloquence from the St. Thomas magnate, but would not fall for it, and again refused to append his signature to a contract. While "Bill" left for home without agreeing to terms, it is thought he will come in before very long, as he really has nothing to gain by holding out, as the Saints leaving staff looks formidable now, with some seven twirlers on deck and six of these "true and tried."

Mullin Made Success of Position, and Is Popular With Thousands of Fans.

Marletta, Ohio, April 17.—It is seldom that a ball player who is only entering his second year in the professional game, has a managerial berth thrust upon him, but such is the experience of Mike Mullin, London's stocky third sacker. Mike is entering upon his fourth year in the game this season, but two years ago he managed the Sharon Club in the Ohio and Pennsylvania League and made a good job of it, at that. Mike was only twenty years of age when he found himself a real dived-in-the-wool manager. He turned the position down at first owing to his lack of experience and knowledge of the game, but the honor was thrust upon him and he finally accepted it. It came about this way:

Mike had spent his first year with the Dallas Texas League Club, but took down with malaria fever and had to return home during the middle of the season. He did not wish to return to Texas, but signed up with the Sharon team in the O. and P. because it was near his home town and he knew most of the fellows on the club. The Sharon Club had a manager at the time Mike signed, but before the season opened the manager and club could not reach an agreement in regard to salary. The owners then decided to get a manager from the players already signed. When the team reported for training the players were sounded as to the most popular man on the club and Mullin proved to be the favorite. The job was accordingly offered him. When Mike finally accepted, he asked the co-operation of the older and more experienced players and they turned in with a will to help him. The club finished in second place and as a manager Mike came through with flying colors. He was the youngest member of the organization at that time and it is doubtful if there ever were any younger managers than he.

Before the season closed the Sharon franchise was transferred to Bridgeport and the Bridgeport owners appointed another player. Mike went into a higher class league then and since that time has been making a name for himself. He has been unfortunate in getting into leagues which have up about the middle of the season. Last season he started out with Stuebener in the Interstate League, but in mid-summer the organization went under. Erie fans know Mike pretty well and he will get quite a reception when he appears in that city with the London team this season.

How The Knight Motor Won Mr. Edge.

[Canadian Press.]

To have achieved success in face of much adverse criticism and opposition is a privilege accorded few, but when success comes in spite of the best efforts of opponents, it is particularly acceptable. Several years ago one of the foremost exponents of the poppet valve engine—Mr. S. P. Edge—the father of the six-cylinder Napier car, spoke strongly in opposition of the sleeve valve motor when it was first introduced. Recently, Mr. Edge purchased, for his own use, a Bideley-Deasys Knight, and thus gave to the "Knight" a testimonial of its worth which could not be purchased for mere money.

Speaking editorially, the Auto Car of March 1st, 1914, which is, by the way, the leading automobile authority in Great Britain, has this to say:

"We have referred to the fact that, starting as an unbeliever in the sleeve valve, Mr. Edge has now no unfavorable criticisms to make, but he refers to some of its good qualities, particularly to its freedom from 'pinking.' This is, of course, due to the fact that the sleeve engine is so remarkably unaffected by carbonization; it runs for such very long periods without any semblance of knock, or pre-ignition from dirt in the engine; indeed, it is the only form of internal combustion engine with which we are acquainted which actually runs better, rather than worse, in the natural condition of a gas engine, i.e., dirty. We are not at the moment discussing the relative merits of poppets and sleeves, but we say without hesitation that we do not know of any equally efficient poppet engine which will run as long as a sleeve engine without requiring decarbonizing."

"While the poppet still greatly outnumbered the sleeve, the latter is steadily gaining ground, not because of its silence, which many a poppet engine very nearly rivals, nay, in some cases quite rivals, but because of its ability to run continuously with no less of good average efficiency, without any cleaning or adjustment."

MANAGER JOE BIRMINGHAM MAY NOT PLAY DURING 1914

[Canadian Press.]

Chicago, April 17.—Examination of the injury to Joe Birmingham, manager of the Cleveland American League team, today confirmed fears that he was hurt internally in Wednesday's game here. According to Dr. J. H. Blair, physician of the Chicago Americans, the Cleveland leader is likely to be out of the game for the rest of the season.

TWIN CITY ATHLETIC CLUB TO ENTER TEAM IN W. O. B. L.

Weary Sufferers Welcome
Dr. Stohr's Kephaldol
THE GREAT UNFAILING PAIN RELIEVER

In all cases of NEURALGIA, NEURITIS, SCIATICA, GOUT, RHEUMATISM, etc., especially in acute form where maddening pain makes life almost unbearable, KEPHALDOL offers that which will evoke heartfelt gratitude—relief, prompt and certain, with speedy cure ahead. KEPHALDOL is no injurious drug, no charlatan nostrum—thousands of medical men all over the world, including all representing the clinical opinion of Vienna (to which City belongs Dr. Stohr, KEPHALDOL'S famous discoverer) have pronounced this remedy to be a means not merely of alleviating, but of stopping pain without risk of injury to the heart or other organ of the body.

MRS. A. E. TURNER, 52a, Willoughby Street, New Lenton, Nottingham, writes:—
"I must say Kephaldol seems to charm away the pain like nothing else does. I have tried a great many things for Rheumatism, but Kephaldol eased the pain quicker than anything I have ever had."

MR. LAWRENCE WINDLEY, Cranleigh, Dane Road, Luton, Eng., sends the following letter:—
"I had rheumatism in my leg, and had to go about with the aid of a stick. I took two Kephaldol tablets at 10 a.m., and by eleven all trace of pain had disappeared and I have not had it from that day to this."

KEPHALDOL IS SOLD IN TUBES BY DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE AT FIFTY CENTS A TUBE
If you find any difficulty in procuring locally, a large tube will be sent direct by the Manufacturers upon receipt of 50c.
Address: KEPHALDOL LIMITED, 31 Latour Street, Montreal.

All you say of Kephaldol is true. It is a pain killer. The remaining tablets I gave to a friend suffering with acute Neuralgia, and they have positively cured him."

A letter from MRS. BEATRICE COSSEY, Brookfield, Eng., is worth repeating:—
"My experience of Kephaldol as a pain killer is absolutely marvellous. I had a fearfully acute attack last year of Neuritis, Sciatica, and Lumbago, and it did wonders for me. I shall always feel most grateful for what it has done, and I am most happy to let others know of its wonderful effects as a pain destroyer."

John G. Brown, of Wyoming, Noted Oil Expert, Who Has Circled Globe Five Times

WYOMING EXPERT IS REAL GLOBE TROTTER

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Wyoming, April 17.—John G. Brown, a Wyoming boy, of whom his home town is justly proud, having spent many of his later years in foreign lands as an invaluable employee of the American Oil Company. His operations have been marked with wonderful success.

Mr. Brown is now on his way home from the East Indies and is expected here early in May. He will then have completed his fifth journey around the globe. Something over 20 years ago Mr. Brown made his first trip abroad, going to Australia, where he remained five years.

Back to Australia.
Spending a year or more in Wyoming after his return, he again sailed for Australia, this time taking his bride, Miss Jessie Anderson.

Four years were spent on this occasion when, bringing Mrs. Brown and their two little ones here, he purchased his present beautiful home, wishing his family to enjoy the advantages of environments and education of Ontario.

New Mexico and Texas fields next beckoned the successful driller, and he spent one year there, later embracing the opportunity to operate in the East Indies. He spent three and a half years there.

Didn't Like Egypt.
At the expiration of this term, after resting from foreign work for a couple of years at his home, Egypt was the next field to call him abroad, but owing to the intensity of the heat, general trying climatic conditions, and threatened with blindness, only six months of the term were passed.

Home and home ties presenting an alluring picture, strong pressure was required to win his reluctant consent to again enroll for foreign service, but on March 12, 1911, he left to fill a three years' contract, this time in Miri, Sarawak, East Indies. This spot, he writes, more than any of his foreign locations, presents fascinating natural beauty, splendor of vegetation and magnificent growth of trees, shrubs and flowers.

Harry Hill and Alexander Watson, who were with him, were also burned, but not so severely. The explosion was caused through one of the men smoking a cigarette when the trio went to have a look at the tank.

But the girl turned the cart and insisted that she would take him back to the village. She would not be gainsaid and Algernon gave in with a sudden, vague, but half-formed idea that she was in some way suspicious of him, and wanted to see what became of him.

"Where shall I take you?" she asked, as they started back.

"To the hotel, please," said Algernon. "I am a stranger in these parts."

She looked at him curiously, and he saw the desire to question him frankly in her eyes. "Wonders where my baggage is," he decided.

"It is a beautiful place," said she, "but very, very slow. Indeed, it seems as if it, too, had balked."

"Balking," said Algernon gaily, "is right in my line."

"It certainly is," said she, laughing. "But I do not suppose you will be here long enough to have to make use of it. Her words were either statement or question, and Algernon preferred to take them for the former."

"I would hate to have to set the town on fire," said he.

"I hope you would leave first," said she, politely, trying to learn the extent of his stay.

"I should certainly have to afterward," said Algernon cheerfully.

"If you are going to be here long," said she, not looking at him, "I advise you to get rooms at the old Misses Allen's if you can. You will like it much better than at the hotel."

"I shan't be here long," said Algernon, amused at her ingenuity for politely discovering his intentions, and wondering what she wanted to know them for, modestly aware that she was rather anxious to have him go.

They drove back, past the town pump, past the store and up the village street to the gaunt, unattractive hotel. It had once been white, but was now a dull gray, with dusty, sagging blinds and decayed, dirty windows. The long, narrow porch was deserted, and the girl for some reason seemed relieved as she drew up and Algernon alighted once more.

"Thank you so much," said she, amusement and friendly admiration lighting for a second the deep blue eyes and twitching the corners of her dimpling mouth. "It was so—so thoughtful in you. Good-by."

"Thank you for the lift," returned Algernon, raising his hat as he stood on the porch steps, the dog beside him.

"Not at all," said she, distant politeness, and turning the cart, she drove rapidly away, sitting erect and himself apparently and the yaller pup asleep at his feet as to anyone. "Shucks! a horse is like a woman. You have to know them before you can handle them, can get the best out of them. Tact." And he blew a tiny smoke wreath upward with dreamy pleasure.

The circle was visibly impressed, but still somewhat skeptical.

"Elizabeth has been around here for the last two months," said Higgins, "and a little fire started under her has proved about the most tactful fact."

"Oh, I don't know," said Algernon, with the lazy indifference of one entirely uninterested personally, merely correcting an error for the sake of truth.

"We know," snorted Brown. "That horse has been here two months now, and stood still most of that time."

"A little skill," returned Algernon cheerfully, and waved the unquestioned result aside with an airy gesture.

"A little dynamite," said Higgins, and the others laughed.

"Rats!" said Algernon, with the low chuckle of knowledge for an exhibition of ignorance. "It didn't look to me as if we needed dynamite."

"I'll bet a nickel you didn't find the nag walking, even," declared Brown, determined not to relinquish his well-formed and well-grounded idea of Elizabeth's character.

"It was walking over from Brockton when the cart overtook me," said Algernon with dignity. "I asked the young lady the direction, but as the horse was rather mettlesome, I offered to take the reins."

"You made her run," admitted Higgins slowly.

"I made her stop," corrected Algernon. "Why don't you buy her from the Todds and make your fortune?" asked Brown, cynical but wavering.

"I may when they come," said Algernon. "Mrs. Todd's come," chorused the others.

"Mrs. Todd?" questioned Algernon fearfully, wondering if his mother had returned unexpectedly from Europe without letting him know, to surprise him in his new undertaking. Mrs. Todd abhorred newspapers as much as she did sloth, and her goings and comings were never chronicled in those mediums of gossip for the uninitiated. Algernon was fond of his mother, but he disliked surprises.

"The young lady's here all right, and don't you forget it," said Brown, with gloomy pleasure.

"Young?" stammered Algernon. Brown nodded. About twenty-two or three, can't be more, looks less, but the women are never as young as they look."

"I thought Todd was about the same age," murmured Algernon.

"He is," said Higgins. "She is his stepmother. It was a surprise to us all, too, her age, until she explained. She was mighty young when she married old man Todd, was his second wife, see? And I don't blame him none for marrying her. She's prettier'n a picture. He only lived about two years after she married him. Talk about luck!"

"His or hers?" asked Smith from down Waterford way, with a wing at Algernon.

"Hers," said Higgins. (To Be Continued.)

A Miniature Grand Piano a Favorite in Many Canadian Homes, and Why.

The Miniature Grand Piano manufactured by Ye Old Firm Heintzman & Co., Ltd., is a piano that in style of architecture is similar to a Boudoir Grand or a Concert Grand, but is smaller in size than either. What is more important, however, it possesses all the properties and musical features of the larger grand. The same power and beauty of tone is there, and the same delightful touch. The case is built of a series of longitudinal hardwood in one continuous length, which adds wonderfully to the acoustic properties of the piano. Our readers are invited to visit the warehouses of this House at 242 Dundas street, London, and inspect one of these beautiful instruments.

Mr. Hanna Enters Plea That Harsh Law Should Not Be Past.

[Canadian Press.]

Toronto, April 16.—The special committee appointed to consider the Brantford Gas Bill reported to the municipal committee this morning that only one change of importance had been made in the bill, and that was that the company could transport gas although they might not sell it in Brantford.

Mr. Hanna pointed out that any harsh law made by the Legislature in connection with the question would likely have a dangerous effect on the companies' securities. Should the company be put out of business, many widows and orphans might suffer.

"Personally," said Mr. Hanna, "I have no financial interest."

Hon. I. B. Lucas Suggests Co-operation of Three Universities—Commission May Inquire Into Needs of Central Institution

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Toronto, April 18.—From a hint given in the Legislature this afternoon by Hon. I. B. Lucas, provincial treasurer, a commission is to be appointed to take up the whole question of the financial needs of the University of Toronto. The matter arose in considering a vote of $30,000 to meet a deficit in the current expenditures of the state institution. At the same time Mr. Lucas referred to a vote of $10,000 each to Western and Queen's Universities, which he said had been made without prejudice to whatever permanent financial arrangement was made. Mr. Lucas did not view with favor the placing of the burden of maintaining three universities on the finances of the province. "It may be," he said, "that there can be some cooperation or co-ordination of their work. Toronto University can be relieved by transferring students to Queen's or the Western University."

The matter might be so arranged so that there would not be any overlapping in the expensive departments of university work. Mr. Rowell had a heated passage with Dr. Pyne over the lack of information in the education department regarding the needs of Toronto University. Dr. Pyne admitted that he had no information beyond what had been given the members of Sir Edmund Walker and President Falconer at a recent meeting in the Parliament Buildings. This Mr. Rowell characterized as evidence of the "incompetence of the Government" to deal with a situation of such importance to the public.

times, this Government has done nothing but commit itself to a policy of building draughts and cut backs," declared Mr. Robb, the Liberal member for Huntingdon, who opened the budget debate for the day.

He had heard Finance Minister White make budget speeches, and each had been gloomy and discouraging than his predecessor until the present budget of 1914 was "An excuse for continued borrowings and unsettled trade conditions."

Hon. Mr. White had been borrowing at 4 1/2 per cent. "Why should this be the case?" asked the Huntingdon man, "when we pay only 3 per cent to our depositors in the postoffice savings bank?" He suggested that the Government should give some little attention to the savings of the people.

NO PROVISION FOR RADIALS IN ESTIMATES

Five Millions Fund Is for Hydro Work Under Way—Rowell's Questions.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Toronto, April 17.—Persistent rumors as to friction between Hon. Adam Beck and his colleagues in the hydro-electric power commission were aired in the Legislature this afternoon when the hydro-electric estimates of over $5,000,000 for the current year were being considered. Hon. Adam Beck was not present and Col. Hendrie undertook to pass the estimates through the House. He read a long statement with a great many details, referring to the proposed work for the year, much of which was already under way. The amount to be voted included part of the vote of last year.

Contrary to general expectations the money does not include a dollar for the construction of radial railways. Mr. Lucas explained that the Province was not asked to construct the lines, but the demand for the municipalities was that they should be permitted to build the lines and the Government should give certain guarantees to their securities. There is a vote of $165,000 for general provincial services in this direction along with the general hydro-electric work.

Mr. Rowell questioned whether the lack of any announcement "as due to the lack of harmony between the members of the commission. It was now almost a public scandal."

"The honorable gentleman should not believe newspaper reports," said Mr. Foy. "A great many people believe it," replied Mr. Rowell.

"Nonsense," commented Mr. Foy. "The honorable gentleman is out of order." Other members of the Government laughed at the suggestion.

"My hon. friend appears to be very sensitive over the matter," continued the leader of the Opposition. Col. Hendrie said he had read statements in the newspapers from Controller Church and Mr. Lyon, of the union of municipalities. "Is it true or not?" pressed Mr. Rowell, amid derisive laughter from the Conservative benches.

"Put it on the order paper," remarked Mr. Lucas.

"The situation today is a public scandal," said Mr. Rowell. "The vital question is whether it is possible in the public interest to continue working in harmony."

Current Year's Estimates.

The estimated amounts required by the commission for the work of the current year were given by Col. Hendrie as follows:

Niagara Falls extensions	$3,421,785
Severn system	550,000
Wawadette Falls	191,751
St. Lawrence system	22,880
Port Arthur system	20,512
Eugeneville Falls system, Grey County	350,000
Office building	150,000
Estimates on account of provincial work	165,000
Total	$4,771,729

In a statement, bristling with detail, Col. Hendrie took up the proposed work for each of the different systems. In respect of a great portion of the work the contracts have been let, and much of the work was already under way. He explained that a great portion of the $5,000,000 was on this work.

Last year the total amount expended on construction was $1,234,000, while the balance required to complete the several works under way was $5,170,242.

Practically all of the proposed construction work referred to by Col. Hendrie had already been dealt with in the announcements made from time to time by Hon. Adam Beck.

BERLIN NURSE IS MISSING IN WEST

Miss Annie Noll Not Heard of Since September—St. Thomas Man Disappears.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Berlin, April 17.—Local relatives of Miss Annie Noll, a graduate nurse, are greatly worried about her strange disappearance in Vancouver, the young lady not having been heard from since last September.

Miss Noll, who was a stenographer here, left Berlin seven years ago for Detroit, and after graduating from St. Mary's Hospital, left for Vancouver to engage in private nursing. Not hearing from her for some time, Mrs. T. H. Callaghan and Mrs. E. Lippert, sisters here, requested the authorities of Vancouver to investigate her whereabouts.

It was learned that Miss Noll had decided to leave Vancouver for Saskatchewan on Sept. 24, prior to a visit to sisters in San Francisco and Seattle.

the. The C. P. R. baggage officials have notified the relatives that they still have her trunk, delivered to the station on Sept. 24. A roommate of the young lady, Miss Nix, identified the clothing in the trunk and also learned that she had drawn her money from the bank on that date to leave the city, but had disappeared between the bank and the station.

Her relatives are fearful that she was murdered, as she never reached the station to check her baggage.

ST. THOMAS MERCHANT IS ALSO MISSING.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

St. Thomas, April 17.—Mystery surrounds the disappearance of Malcolm Johnson, of the firm of Johnson & McCormick, shoe merchants, who left his boarding house on Catherine street last Tuesday afternoon and has not been seen since.

A continuous search by friends, aided by the police, failed to locate the slightest clue to his whereabouts, and it was decided this evening to send out a general appeal to the district.

About six months ago Mr. Johnson fell down the cellar stairs and fractured his skull. Recently he has complained of serious pains in his head, and his friends fear that he has suffered a temporary lapse of memory and has wandered away into the country.

He is unmarried and came here about a year ago from South America. Before that he had been in the Klondike. Mr. Johnson is about 45 years old.

He is about five feet eleven inches in height, heavily built, sandy hair and gray eyes. When he left his boarding house on Tuesday he was wearing a black felt slouch hat and a black overcoat.

He has several relatives in Illinois and they have been notified of his strange disappearance.

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Bradley's Health—Her Own Statement.

Winnipeg, Canada.—"Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth. The doctors said it was a tumor and could not be removed as it would cause instant death. They found that my organs were affected, and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in."

"After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper, and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."

"Mrs. ORILLA BRADLEY, 294 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba, Can."

Why will women take chances or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

"There is no question in my mind regarding the virtues of Sanol Anti-diabetes, and I feel that a great blessing has been conferred upon suffering humanity by the discovery and use of this medicine."

ROBERT D. BLACKMAN, Manager

SISTER: READ MY FREE OFFER.

I am a woman. I know a woman's trials. I know her need of sympathy and help. If you, my sister, are unhappy because of ill-health, and feel unfit for household duties, social pleasures, or daily employment, write and tell me just how you suffer, and ask for my free ten days' trial of a home treatment suited to your needs; with references to Canadian ladies who gladly tell how they have regained health, strength, and happiness by its use. I want to tell you all about this successful method of home treatment for yourself, my reader, for your daughter, your sister, or your mother. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home at trifling cost, and without aid from anyone. Men cannot understand women's sufferings; what we women know from experience, we know better than any doctor; and thousands have proved there is hope even for the hopeless in my method of home treatment. If you suffer from pain in the head, back, or bowels, feeling of weight and dragging down sensations, falling or displacement of internal organs, bladder irritation with frequent urination, obstinate constipation or piles, pain in the sides regularly or irregularly, bloating or unnatural enlargements, catarrhal conditions, dyspepsia, extreme nervousness, depressed spirits, melancholy, desire to cry, fear of something evil about to happen, creeping feeling up the spine, palpitation, hot flashes, weariness, sallow complexion, with dark circles under the eyes, pain in the left breast or a general feeling that life is not worth living, I invite you to send today for my complete ten days' treatment entirely free and without cost to you. You will find that these ailments can be easily and surely conquered at your own home, without the expense of hospital treatment, or the dangers of an operation. Women everywhere are escaping the surgeon's knife by knowing of my simple method of home treatment, and you are cured, my sister, I shall only ask you to pass the good word along to some other sufferer. My home treatment is for all—young or old. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectively cures green-sickness (chlorosis), irregularities, headaches, and lassitude in young women, and restores them to plumpness and health. Tell me if you are worried about your daughter. Remember it costs you nothing to give my method of home treatment a complete ten days' trial, and if you wish to continue, it costs only a few cents a week to do so, and it does not interfere with one's daily work. Is health worth asking for? Then accept my generous offer, write for the free treatment suited to your needs, and I will send it in plain wrapper by return mail. To save time you can cut out this offer, mark the places that tell your feelings, and return to me. Write and ask for the free treatment today, or you may not see this offer again. Address:

The "Four" that Excels the "Six"

Here is a four-cylinder Knight engine car that challenges the world's best sixes.

Russell KNIGHT
$2,975

It is the PROVEN superior of any "cheap" poppet-valve Six. The equal of even the highest-priced Six of that type.

Every advantage claimed for the best poppet-valve Six is found in this RUSSELL-KNIGHT Four. Plus many valued features not found in any poppet-valve Six.

It has more power than many Sixes with motors almost twice its size.

It has a flexibility in the motor which auxiliary gearing and extra transmission speeds can never produce.

It is economical of oil and gasoline to a degree with which no poppet-valve motor can compare.

It has established world's records for reliability and durability which no poppet-valve Six dare undertake—not even for $20,000.

In dollar-for-dollar value, no car built in a foreign country can match it by 35 per cent.

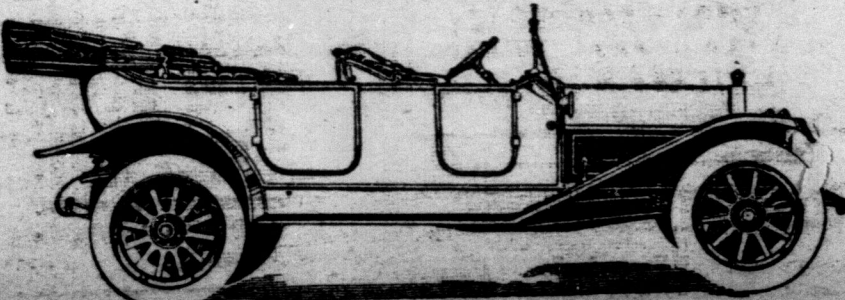

These are not claims. They're FACTS. Facts that YOU can easily prove. Facts that vitally affect your investment in any car. Facts which every shrewd buyer will thoroughly consider, in order to buy wisely and well.

Call at our Branch today. Make us "show you" to your complete satisfaction wherein this RUSSELL Four excels any poppet-valve Six.

Don't These Figures Tell Which Tire?

Note How Men Have Flocked to Goodyears Since Odometers Came In

In the United States—before the vogue of odometers—our sales for the fiscal year—1908—were

$2,189,749.49

And that was our ninth year of tire building.

In 1913—when nearly all cars came equipped with odometers—our fiscal year sales were

$32,998,827.25

Yet those multiplied sales—nearly 16 times larger—fail to tell the whole story. For No-

Rim-Cut tire prices in the last year dropped immensely.

These figures are more startling still:

In our last fiscal year we sold eleven times as many automobile tires as in the fiscal year of 1909.

And this year's sales are exceeding last year's by 35 per cent.

Mileage Did It All

That's the simple result of mileage tests on hundreds of thousands of cars. Of tests applied to three million Goodyear tires.

Some other tires, in those years, dropped tremendously in sales. And the reason for all these ups and downs lies in odometer figures.

In Canada

Here, in Canada, the same astounding increase is shown. Here, at our Bowmanville factory, are employed the same methods, equipment and experience of our American plant.

Here are made the tires that have won the dominion for Goodyears.

And size for size, Goodyear Anti-Skid tires cost you less than others.

So that in these Canada-made Goodyears you get utmost tire mileage, safety, utility and simplicity for the least money.

See them. Test them. Learn why the legion of Canadian motorists has come to them. Goodyear dealers are wherever you go.

Go-to-Church Sunday.—The Melrose Methodist Church will hold its go-to-church Sunday tomorrow. Mr. Hoskin, will occupy the pulpit.

Injured by Stone.—Charles Wachsmuth, a carrier boy for The Advertiser, residing at 249 Wortley road, was rendered unconscious Thursday, when he was hit on the head with a stone from a slingshot in the hand of another boy at a house on his route, where he delivers papers. The missile struck him hard on the side of the head, and it was almost half an hour before he recovered to tell what had happened.

Schools Reopen Monday.—The public schools and Collegiate Institute will reopen Monday morning, following the Easter holidays. Inspector C. B. Edwards, who returned yesterday from Toronto, where he attended the sessions of the Ontario Educational Association, is making the necessary arrangements. The only new teacher on the staff is Miss Marjorie Cook, who will teach domestic science.

To Open Park Driveways.—At the meeting of the public utility commission, held yesterday, General Manager H. J. Glauzitz advised that the driveways in Victoria Park would be opened for traffic as soon as the frost had entirely left the ground. The roads are a bit soft at the present time and if vehicles were allowed to use them now damage would be done by the wheels sinking in.

"V" Anniversary.—The thirty-fifth anniversary meeting of the Y. M. C. A. will be held tomorrow afternoon in the Majestic Theatre. Many of the city pupils will be occupied by men from out of the city. This young congregation has made splendid progress and with the growth of the southeast part of the city in the next few years will certainly become one of the strong churches of the Presbyterian family in the city. The church is making every effort to have the third anniversary on Sunday and Monday a great success.

KIDDIES SAVING MONEY

Have More Than $13,000 in School Penny Banks.

The school children of London have between $12,000 and $14,000 on deposit in connection with the penny bank system, according to Inspector C. B. Edwards. The inspector said yesterday that he considered the system an excellent thing for the pupils.

Inspector Edwards also favors the proposal of the department of education to provide a fund for the superannuation of school teachers. The teachers, said Mr. Edwards, would have to furnish part of the fund out of their salaries, but he considered the proposal an excellent one in that it gave teachers grown old in the service a chance to drop out with a little nest egg in sight. The system was in force in Ottawa and Toronto, said Mr. Edwards.

Asquith's Dramatic Announcement Made Memorable Scene; Tremendous Ovation When He Resigned and Left Commons

The Prime Minister, the right honorable gentleman, speak, one would have supposed that the difficulties about Ireland were nearly settled on the 14th of March. What was the case? On the 5th of March the Prime Minister made his offer to the Opposition, and after that offer had been made it was quite clear that it was not the Ulster question which lay between them but much larger, wider, and graver issues. It was clear that it was no longer in the cause of Ulster's liberties, civil and religious, that these dangers were to be incurred by the Opposition. It was because Ulster, no longer concerned with her own affairs, was seeking to bar the way to the Government to influence the destinies of British politics. (Ministerial cheers and Opposition cries of "No.") How was the offer received? The gist of the speech of the

Mr. Churchill:—The right honorable gentleman will destroy his prestige if he makes silly interruptions. (Ministerial cheers.) THE NEW PUBLIC HEALTH

QUESTIONS. ANSWERS. COMMENT.

The Advertiser Bureau of Public Health. Conducted by Institute of Public Health. (The Public Health of Western University, London). Established and maintained by the Ontario Government.

THE NEW PUBLIC HEALTH

What is the correct feeding for children after the age of one year?

MOTHER.

Ans.—The ideally brought-up child should have mother's milk until one year old, and little else except water and a crust of bread to mumble. After that, little by little, all the ordinary good adult foods, not much at a time, and with careful watching, until by four years old, the child can eat anything fit for a human to eat. Cow's milk, relatively speaking a poison to children under one year, is good for children after that time. If pasteurized, or perhaps better, although very difficult to attain, taken from a perfectly healthy cow and used fresh and raw. Eggs, porridge, bread, sugar, cake, meat, vegetables, all are good after one year, in reasonable quantities, not too much at a time, and the feedings not too far apart. A little raw fruit, apple, banana, etc., should be given also. After the first year, children do not die so much of intestinal troubles as before that age; they die more of infections, and cooking is a guard against that to some extent. Rapidly growing children of the rich are often fed too much fat; of the poor, too little fat. All babies, rich or poor, require a deal of protein, and that kind of food stuff which is represented best by lean meat, white of egg, bread (the protein of the latter being chiefly or wholly vegetable protein). It is a mistake to feed babies over one year only starches and gruel, etc. Remember they are growing, not merely keeping up a fixed weight, like an adult, and remember we cannot make ourselves out of fat and sugar; we are protein, and need protein in our diets, children especially.

You say that "vitamins" are destroyed by the heat in canning goods. How about ordinary fresh vegetables?

VITA.

Ans.—"Vitamins" are things so very newly discovered that we know very little in detail about them. High heat, and some other things tend to destroy some of them, but how high the heat or how prolonged it must be to destroy any particular kind of vitamin, we cannot yet say. The safest plan until we know more about them is to stick to the rule already given; take something raw at every meal or at least every day; something raw, vegetable or animal, for it appears that vitamins are widely scattered in nature. A raw egg, a glass of pure fresh milk, an apple, half a dozen radishes, cabbage salad, almost anything of the ordinary good staples, raw. Perhaps we shall find these things are not essential, that vitamins are present in many cooked things as well as uncooked. But certainly this is a safe rule at present.

I would like to hear something on the subject of indigestion. A great many sufferers from these troubles exist and I have hoped you would take it up, but so far in vain.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY.

Ans.—Indigestion—a huge subject! You had better write me about some particular phase of indigestion for as it stands your question is too broad to answer. However some general points may be useful.

From the lay standpoint, indigestion means almost any abdominal trouble which is connected with food. From the medical point of view it is used to mean a condition where the food is not digested, although physicians often use it in the layman's sense also, especially when talking with the laity. Indigestion in the medical sense, is found except when limited to a very small portion of the alimentary system, or to certain foods.

Comparatively little of the troubles with food and digestion are found in the stomach. Some great authorities have gone so far as to state that stomach troubles, in this sense, do not exist at all; that most of the supposed stomach troubles (except cancer, ulcer and like things) are really intestinal or elsewhere in origin. This statement is a trifle too broad probably, but indicates a general rule that it is well to remember.

It is very probable that a vast majority of the intestinal troubles of adults, including occasional "stomach troubles" proper, are due to bacteria. Enormous numbers of these inhabit the mouth, oesophagus, stomach, intestine, at all points. Half of the ordinary bowel discharges (leaving out the water) are composed entirely of bacteria, living and dead. These bacteria multiplying, growing, nourishing themselves on our food and our discharges, keep up a constant struggle amongst themselves.

Suggesting a condition of affairs in our insides not unlike the struggle preserving the balance of power in Europe; and as one kind outwits another or new forms are added to the turmoil from outside, our intestinal comfort waxes and wanes. We do not yet more than guess at the combination; but ordinary intestinal troubles are usually benefited by rest, change of diet, or better, no diet at all; perhaps these things "subdue the angry passions" of the germs and give us, their alleged "bosses," a chance to get into the saddle again.

COXEY'S ARMY WILL INVADE WASHINGTON

Jacob Coxey

Special Correspondence.

New York, N.Y., April 14.—"Gen." Jacob S. Coxey, who 20 years ago elected himself commander-in-chief of the "army of the unemployed," is on the job again. He is now recruiting forces among the unemployed of New York and his "army" will invade Washington about April 16. Coxey will ask Congress to establish a chain of federal banks to loan money at a two per cent. tax, instead of interest; also a congressional enactment for a government loan to be used in building roads and other public works which would give employment to the idle. While marshaling the unemployed "Gen." Coxey is living at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The Deeper Feminism Explains Peculiarities Not Considered by Larger Feminism.

[From the New York Evening Post.]

As usual the last word on the subject has come from Germany. In his epoch-making book on "Modern Woman and Marriage by Capture," Prof. Junker of the University of Zuerich has demonstrated in masterly fashion how every physical and mental trait of the woman of today may be traced back to the time when the primitive rule, whenever he wanted a wife, went out and caught one.

Why, for example, is long hair common among women and not among men? The explanation is simple enough. The primitive wife-hunter would naturally seize his victim and future wife by the hair, especially if he were on horseback and going at full speed. The short-haired women escaped capture and died unmarried. The long-haired woman, Professor Junker, although in the course of time women have got out of the habit of looking upon their long-streaming locks (Langwallende Locken) as a badge of servitude and have learned to take pride in them, ladies will occasionally speak quite sharply to their maids who are engaged in brushing their hair for the theatre. This is undoubtedly an atavistic remembrance of primitive times.

Evolution of the Male. Incidentally, Professor Junker points out that the same explanation will account for the evolution of a short-haired male race. Primitive woman, taken captive and thrown over the male's shoulder, would naturally struggle to escape. Burying her fingers in the man's hair, she would pull with all her might, tearing out large handfuls. This is why men, as a rule, are short-haired, with a tendency to baldness, the only exception being poets and musicians, who knew how to win women without capturing them and so were seldom in danger of depilation.

The age-old habit of struggling to get away from her future husband and of looking back with tears to the paternal home from which she was being abducted, undoubtedly, according to Professor Junker, accounts for woman's present habit of facing backward when she is getting off a street car. The writer does not allude to a second peculiarity closely connected with the first, from which in fact it seems to have been derived. He refers to woman's difficulty in finding the proper change when paying her fare to the conductor, or, better still, when she is purchasing her ticket at the ticket-seller's window with fifteen men in a line behind her and the train just pulling in. Under marriage by capture, woman never travelled of her own accord, but was always being hauled off carried. Hence the queer survivals of inexperience in the matter of rapid transit.

As between a primitive maiden who went in for tight sandals and one who wore loose footwear, or, better still, went barefoot, which would be more likely to escape the clutches of the wife-hunter? Obviously the free-shod maiden, says Professor Junker (die freitrittige Jungfrau), would go free, whereas her rival companion would only hobble and so fall a victim to marriage. This is why the primitive maiden who sought the refuge of the family tent with nightfall remaining safe, but the girl addicted to lettering outside after dark was inevitably captured and married, and passed on to her descendants the faculty for getting to the theatre fifteen minutes late.

As for the habit common among women of crying at weddings, says Professor Junker, the cause must be obvious. When women were captured for marriage they were always crying. On the whole, we cannot say too much for this latest profound contribution to the anthropology of the Deeper Feminism.

Edison Stops Talking and Gets Busier; Famous Inventor Is Great Worker; Tells of Marvels

"Thomas A. Edison, who is now nearing sixty-seven years of age, was not long ago voted first among the 'Ten Most Useful Americans' by our readers. He might also be termed the Most Busy American," says the New York Independent.

"He has practically ceased talking for publication, because he needs to conserve his strength and because his cares of business and invention were never greater than today. It was, therefore, special kindness on his part when he consented (amid extra harassment of preparations to go on a vacation trip to Florida) to give the following interview to the Independent's representative, Mr. John R. McMahon.

His Long Hours.

"The inventor of the incandescent lamp and phonograph is still addicted to long hours. A recent time card (he punches time cards like any employee) showed that he worked in his West Orange laboratory late at night several times in a week. During the past year, while perfecting the disk phonograph, he organized and headed one of his old-fashioned 'insomnia squads,' which stayed with him, on the job, in the laboratory and the works for five weeks without more than two or three hours' sleep in the twenty-four. A caterer brought food; the men's wives brought occasional shifts of clothing. Mr. Edison's own time card showed that he was working 120 to 140 hours in a week.

His Incessant Labors.

"It is incredible how his labors still and keeps in touch not only with the complexities of his scientific research, but with the minutiae of a manufacturing business employing 5,000 persons. "In returning the past year to the perfection of the phonograph, which he invented thirty-six years ago, Mr. Edison was confronted with a problem involving the fact that a fine print on a piece of glass, or a microscopic bit of dust, will make discordant the musical ray carried by the phonographic diamond point needle. Thousands of experiments, chemical and physical, were needed to battle with fingerprints, infinitesimal specks of dirt and other obstacles in the way of the perfect phonograph.

The Trend of Invention.

"What is the trend of invention? Application of electricity to all moving things. "The most significant invention of 1913? Manufacture of ammonia from nitrogen and hydrogen.

"What work of your own during the past year is most important? Perfection of the recording of music by the new disk phonograph.

"What of setting off explosives by wireless? It has been of no value, except for military purposes.

"Is radium to be harnessed? It's driving a clock in Paris. Radium, so far, has only a scientific value. No one can predict. There are enormous possibilities.

"What of new sources of power? Sun engine of considerable power, 20 to 30 horsepower, are working in Africa and Arizona. There are many inventors working on the problem. Burning coal at the mouth of the mine, converting the power into electricity, and transmitting the power over long distances, has already been put into effect in Nova Scotia and in England.

"How soon will ships be driven by new power? Until we find a practical method of converting combustible matter directly into electricity, steamboats will continue are different in that they do not gripe, purge nor cause nausea, nor does continued use lessen their

to be driven by steam and internal combustion motors. "Are not some machines displacing individual machines; e.g. the public laundry against the domestic washing machine? The individual washing machine will hold its own for a while. Electric-driven washing machinery suitable for the small house is rapidly coming into use, and the labor is reduced almost to nothing.

The Inventor and Society.

"Does not invention follow social opportunity and need; cannot society now ordain its inventions? Society is never prepared to receive any invention. Every new thing is resisted, and it takes years for the inventor to get people to listen to him and years more before it can be introduced, and when it is introduced our beautiful law and court procedure are used by predatory commercialism to ruin the inventor. They don't leave him even enough to start a new invention.

"Would you recommend that the United States Government establish a cabinet department of inventions? I do not believe the Government should do anything but regulate the activities of its people, give them a free swing, and see that every man is protected in that which he produces. Panama is an example. In this case the right man was selected; he was given a free swing. Suppose the wrong man had been selected, and he was hampered by red tape and politicians; then Panama would not be used as an example. A department of inventions is not wanted. What is wanted is that the methods of court procedure be changed and the courts realize that the man who makes inventions, by the very nature of things, cannot be a businessman, familiar with its mercenary code; and they should take this into consideration and protect him.

"When I want to discover something, I begin by reading up everything that has been done along that line in the past—that's what all these books in this library are for. See what has been accomplished at great labor and expense. In the past, I gather the data of many thousands of experiments as a starting point, and then I make some thousands more.

The Way of Happiness.

"There isn't too much happiness floating around, and the man who gets near the right share of it has a character, a little bungalow in the country, and a family. What does the very rich man get? He's always scheming, always suspicious of the men around him. His money is mostly out, invested. Yes, he lives in a fine house, rides in an automobile, and he eats three meals a day when he feels able to. I don't see anyone who gets much out of life. Money doesn't make a man happy and it doesn't make a man a good companion.

I'm going down to Florida for a fishing trip and I'd rather have some of the men upstairs go with me than those Wall street millionaires. Well, I'm going to have pretty good companions—John Burroughs and Henry Ford.

"Things are wrong enough, and to right them we need two remedies. One is to develop the convolutions in man's brain; those coils inside with which he does his thinking. We have gradually developed what we have in there, and if we could develop about two convolutions more we would be able to grasp and solve our social problems.

Edison and Education.

"The other remedy is education. Education of the right sort in early childhood. You can't do anything with a grown man. If you spend your life in school, you can't do anything either, because he is all instinct and emotion. But take a child four years old and his mind is plastic, and whatever you put in there will always stay. Teach a child of four that the moon is made of green cheese, and though you give him a thorough scientific education afterward, there will always be, at the bottom of his mind, a feeling that the moon is somehow possibly made of green cheese.

"See how religious beliefs implanted in childhood stay with the adult in spite of everything. Montessori has the right idea. It is necessary to take them young and to teach morality and character, to fix ideas in those plastic minds so that it will be impossible for them to think wrong or do wrong.

"What we want to do in this world is to eradicate the crooks, high and low, and to do that we must begin early and prevent them from going crooked at the start," concluded Edison.

Death of "Bertha M. Clay"

It was doubtless something of a shock to many of Bertha M. Clay's multitudinous readers to learn a few weeks ago that the author of "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," "In Love's Crucible," "Her Marry," "The Wicked and the Parted," "At War With Herself," and dozens of similar stories in which virtue triumphs and poverty goes hand in hand with nobility, was in real life Thomas W. Hanshew. Nor was the personality of Bertha M. Clay the only disguise behind which Mr. Hanshew masked his tireless literary activities. Dying at the age of fifty-seven, he had already written more than two hundred books, although few of these had appeared over his own name. Another of his pseudonyms was Charlotte Monica Braeme. Beginning life as an actor, he was in turn novelist, playwright, businessman, and writer of moving-picture scenarios. In the Kansas City Star we read: "Hanshew accumulated several fortunes through his writings, but these were lost in unfortunate investments. At the time of his death he was under contract with a large publishing house in London to write four novels a year and two short stories each month. But the strain of this was too much. He died of overwork."

His greatest success in recent years was the creation of a new detective character, Clerk, who is now well known on the moving-picture circuits. The Clerk stories are published over Mr. Hanshew's own name. We read in the New York Evening Post that "Clerk of Scotland Yard," a book in published only a week before his death, introduces a novel feature in modern fiction—it is illustrated by photographs from the motion-picture although an American by birth, Mr. Hanshew spent nearly half of his life in England, and it was in Amnesley that he died.

Stopping the Midnight Flyer to Test the Engineer; Language of the Winking Lamps That Guide "Eagle Eye"

At night, the little lights that wink and glow along the track; by day, the unglamorous, but almost human-looking semaphores, with their gestures toward the heavens above or some distant horizon: what do these mean to the average traveler, snugly enfolded in the latest comforts of the Pullman? It is only when something has gone fatally wrong and the investigators are looking for some one to blame that the block comes in for its due of attention. At such times it is fairly spoiled by attentions. One wants to know how it was placed before, how after the wreck; another inquires concerning its general and customary position; all the most intimate affairs of its existence are made public. But "on the run" few of those it serves bother their heads about it. It has contributed to the peace of mind of millions by its inconspicuous reliability; its reward is to be quite forgotten and overlooked. How many lives the block-signal has saved can only be guessed at. But the mere perfunctory performance of its duty is not all its tale. There are many more amusing features in its life-story. These are touched upon most entertainingly in an article by A. D. Cloud in The Sun-set Magazine. Mr. Cloud begins with melodrama, as follows:

Melodrama of the Rails.
The stillness of the hour before dawn lay over the valley. The dull red moon hung low in the west just above a ragged silhouette of tree-tops. The little town slept beneath a cover of black shadows, unbroken save for the red and green bull's-eye of the switch lights and the bright green signal-lamp near the station. Only the occasional sleepy crowing of a rooster or the far-away droning of a cow-bell broke the silence. The world awaited the morning. Suddenly a dark figure stole out from the shadows along the track. Reaching the signal near the station, he climbed to its top and put out the light behind the green glass. Then he crept back into the shadow; and as the moon hurried behind the trees, only the switch-lamps were left to disclose the position of the hour with the powers of darkness. Hardly was the mysterious figure safely hid when there was a rumbling along the sleeping hills, and a shrill whistle from their wooden sides. A bright headlight pierced a deep white hole in the darkness; the rails tingled and hummed; and a fire-lit smoke-cloud raced down the valley. Then with a quick rush of air, and a rattling and clanking, and grinding as the brake-shoes bit into the wheels, the Midnight Express came to a stop with her pilot just under the thin black shadow of the signal.

Stopped the Flyer.
"Mike," said Kelley, the engineer, "why did ye put out the light?" "To see if ye'd stop th' train," replied Mike, the fireman, carefully placing a scoopful of coal in a far corner of the fire-box. Kelley sat looking up at the dim outline of the signal. It was the first time in many months that the green light had not called him on with the promise of a clear track around the curve and up over the long grade.

"Mike, I'll be ye . . . that did it is hidin' in thim bushes," he said, without looking around. "Ye never kin tell. They're up to them tricks right along," answered Mike, and continued his shoveling.

Soon Kelley reached out for the throttle, and the great engine resumed its journey. The staccato of the exhaust became a rattle and was lost among the echoes; the red dragon's eyes on the front faded into tiny stars and disappeared; and the stately sleepers rolled on toward the east and the sunrise.

Testing Kelley.
The lone figure who stole out from the shadows and put out the light did not intend to wreck the train, or rob the express car, or relieve the sleepy passengers of their money and jewels. On the contrary, he was an officer of the road, and he only wanted to test the quality of Kelley's obedience. Kelley might have rushed on without paying any attention to the signal, and he would have come to no harm, for the situation was prearranged and the danger counterfeit. It was a green light, not a red one, that the superintendent extinguished. And if it had been any other than the darkest hour of the night, Kelley might have seen that the semaphore arm pointed straight toward the starlight zenith, in which position it was the daylight authority to proceed at full speed. But Kelley didn't know what color the light had been. He could see nothing but the switch-lamps. The one thing he was sure of was that there was no green signal where he was accustomed to find it; and the rule-book said that the absence of a signal where one was usually displayed was a danger-signal. That meant "Stop." So Kelley stopped; and the superintendent hiding in the bushes knew that the passengers in the dozen Pullmans behind Kelley's engine were in safe hands.

This little drama of discipline, the "surprise test," as it is called, is enacted somewhere in the land every night in the year. Its purpose is to show how Kelley conducts himself when the conditions are real and when only he and the signal, the "silent watchman," are present on the scene. It is a check on his obedience to the signals which mark the miles for most of the overnight travel on the railways of the United States. And it is to the everlasting credit to Kelley and his brother engineers that, though most unexpected conditions are set up in the tests, not one in a thousand fails to obey the rules or the signals.

Varied Tests.
Overlooking a signal may mean instant discharge for the offender, and such discipline is, and must be, true wherever there are railways. So seriously is this offence regarded in railway circles that in England an engine-driver recently secured damages from certain persons who had accused him wrongfully of driving his train past danger-signals. Tests, to be adequate, must be carefully elaborated and carried out. They must vary, too, with each trial; for, once a man has detected one trick, he can never be fooled by it again, and, moreover, in nine cases out of ten, will endeavor, in fun or earnest, to frustrate a repetition of it. A few of these variations are given.

The tests are more careful than the lightning about "striking twice in the same place." As a rule the superintendent, or his subordinate, who arranges the setting changes the green light to red, instead of leaving the signal in utter darkness. Sometimes the officers pay no attention to the lights, but arrange the surprises to see how the engineers regard other rules than those connected directly with the signals. The vice-president of one of the great systems west of Mississippi not long ago went out on a tour of inspection. His private car looked like an ordinary car, and when it was attached to a passenger train at the top of a long grade, which the engineers were accustomed to make up their lost time, the men in the cab called in some way to grasp the situation, and didn't know whose car it was that had been put into their train. The engineer was under no great strain, for thirty minutes to make up. The vice-president soon became aware that the train was running at unusually high speed. He sat down in front of the speed-indicator and watched it climb to 55 to 60, then to 70 and finally the hand stood at 75 miles per hour. At the next station the engineer was summarily given a thirty-day lay-off, for there was a rule which said under no condition should a speed of sixty miles be exceeded, no matter how late the engineer might be running.

The operating vice-president often conducts surprise tests himself, for if there is any one thing in his department in which he is very and intensely interested, it is discipline. In the early days of surprise tests some engineers did not take to them very kindly, and there were generally considerable bluntings and profanity on their part when the train was under observation. Even while obeying rules in every particular they lost no opportunity to express their personal opinions of the men who made them.

Caught By a Test.
One engineer, a man whose record was good, and whose discretion and sound judgment could be relied upon, was bitterly opposed to the installation of signals and the inauguration of surprise tests, and threatened to shoot the first officer who tried "anything on him." No railway officer feels safe in entrusting lives and property to one whose attitude is antagonistic to conditions that will not only prevent them from having accidents, but will also assist them materially in the discharge of their work. So the general superintendent determined to put this engineer to a test and one dark night he built a fire close to a wooden bridge on the main line. The engineer passed by without noticing the fire and did not even report it. The next night the superintendent repeated the test, and still the engineer disregarded the fire, in spite of the rule which said that when train-men see a fire along the right-of-way they must stop and report it at the next station. The engineer was given a thirty-day lay-off. He threatened the life of the general superintendent and was then dismissed from the service. Yet in the course of a few months the discharged employee came back asking to be reinstated. The conditions were such that the superintendent thought it advisable to take him back, and the result has been that this man is now one of the best and most careful and trustworthy engineers in the employ of the road.

Surprises of this kind are exactly what is needed to keep engineers well disciplined, as few trainmen ever forget such treatment. They may know well enough that they are being tried, and resent it, but as long as there is a chance of some one in authority "hidin' in thim bushes," it is worth a stop. Also, it is worth going slowly and acting out the whole comedy; if it is no trick, caution may be worth promotion and extra pay; if it is a trick, it doesn't injure the driver's good name and he is wiser if he is treated as cautious on the suspicion of danger. In the old times, which is to say, ten years ago, there were few surprise tests. At that time only three kinds of signals were in extensive use. Mr. Cloud describes these:

The Old-Time Signals.
The most common was the switch-signal, which did nothing more than indicate whether the switch near which it stood was open or closed. The train-order signal came next in numbers. It was to be found at every station, and it told an approaching engineer whether or not there were orders awaiting him, for ten years ago, practically every movement of a train had to be authorized by an order from the dispatcher. The interlocked signals, the third kind, clustered about crossings, junction points, and yard entrances. The original interlocked signals and the "interlocking" machinery by which a number of switches could be thrown by hand from inside a tower were imported from England in 1876, and have since been vastly improved upon by the genius of American engineers. No surprise tests are necessary in connection with these signals. Long ago it was found less expensive to throw a train off the track and with guard rails safely guiding it, to keep it from turning over into the ditch, than to have a collision at a crossing or junction. So the derail was invented, and now one of these devices is to be found at the foot of nearly every interlocking signal. Few engineers "take a chance" with them. A stop signal at an interlocking plant requires the engineer to stop his train and wait until the signal is pulled to the proceed position by the towerman before he can get under way again.

Within the last decade a fourth signal has come into general use, and now the engineer has for his guidance not only the switch and the train order and interlocking signals, but also the "automatic," the latest and most important safeguards of travel. The automatic block system was invented in America. The track circuit, which is the basis of its operation, was patented by one William Robinson in 1872. But it was not until many years later that the value of Robinson's invention was recognized, and not until the nineteenth century had gone into history was it put to practical use to any considerable extent. Since 1900, however, the automatic block system has been installed on most of the important main lines of the country, and the mileage of track circuits is greater than that of the equator.

The United States Government has been keeping close watch of the progress of the block system, and the latest report it has published reveals the interesting fact that western railroads, with the Southern Pacific Company leading the list, have been foremost in adopting this latest and most efficient kind of block system.

The daytime indications of all of these signals are conveyed by the color of the arm and the position it stands in. A red arm, which is horizontal, or at right angle to the signal-post, means "Stop." If the arm is yellow, it means "Caution." When either red or yellow arm is at an angle of 60 degrees below the horizontal,

it means "Clear" or "Proceed."

Red Spells Danger.
The origin of the use of these colors is not recorded, but the association of red with danger seems natural and fitting. Red is the color of disaster, the emblem of battle and destruction. It brings to mind the shedding of blood, anarchy, rebellion, conquest, the burning cities of history. So, if Kelley is imaginative, the solemn, unblinking red eye of the signal shows him visions of splintered cars, crushed bodies, and piled-up wreckage. This association, however, is more or less a sentimental afterthought, for the selection of red as the signal for danger on railways was undoubtedly due to the fact that it can be seen without danger of confusion with other colors farther than any other color of the spectrum, at night and in foggy weather. Yellow is next in penetrating power, so it is used to show Kelley that he must proceed cautiously. Green is third choice and is the "clear" color. Thus, when Kelley starts out on his night run he is guided by the language of the colors. The mantle of darkness has obliterated the position signals which directed him in the daylight, and he relies upon the lights alone, watching for them as he rushes through the sleeping villages and thunders over the long bridges and across the hills, checking his speed or pulling the throttle over another notch or two as they flash their messages out of the darkness in front of the headlight.

The automatic signal is, as its name implies, self-operating. It is placed at the entrance to a section of track called a block, which is usually about a mile in length. When there is no train in the section the signal indicates "Proceed" to an approaching engineer; and when there is a train in the block it is pulled by gravity to the "Stop" position.

The signal-arms work on a pivot with a very heavy casting on one side and the arm itself on the other, and the signals are so arranged that they are forced out of the "Stop" position by the positive action of the electric current, but return by their own weight to that position immediately when the current ceases to exert the positive holding effort.

Each block has its own track circuit and is insulated by special joints from the adjacent blocks; and each track circuit has its electric battery at one end and its relay at the other. The current flows through the rails, and, as long as there is no train on them, holds the track relay energized, while the relay in turn closes the circuit by which the semaphore arm is moved out of the "Stop" position and held in the "Caution" or "Proceed" position. When a train occupies a block the current finds an easier path from rail to rail than through the track relay. It goes through the wheels and axles of the engine and cars, and the relay is thus deprived of the power necessary to hold the signal circuit closed. The signal, as a result of the removal of the holding force, drops to the "Stop" position, and Kelley, coming along behind, finds a horizontal arm, or a red light, telling him that there is some one in the block ahead.

The political parties that I would call great, are those which cling more to principles than to consequences; to general, and not to special cases; to ideas, and not to men. SPRING IMPURITIES IN THE BLOOD

A Tonic Medicine Is a Necessity at This Season.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an all year round tonic, blood-builder and nerve-restorer. But they are especially valuable in the spring when the system is loaded with impurities as a result of the indoor life of the winter months. There is no other season when the blood is so much in need of purifying and enriching, and every dose of these pills helps to make new, rich, red blood. In the spring one feels weak and tired—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills build strength. In the spring the appetite is often poor—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills develop the appetite, tone the stomach and aid digestion. It is in the spring that pimples, eruptions and boils—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills speedily clear the skin because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood. In the spring anaemia, rheumatism, indigestion, neuralgia, erysipelas and many other troubles are most persistent because of poor weak blood, and it is at this time when all nature takes on new life that the blood most seriously needs attention. Some people dose themselves with purgatives at this season, but these only further weaken themselves. A purgative merely gallops through the system, emptying the bowels, but it does not cure anything. On the other hand Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood which reaches every nerve and organ in the body, bringing new strength, new health and vigor to weak, easily tired men, women and children. Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills this spring—they will not disappoint you.

FASCINATING LOVE STORY IN THE LIFE OF ALEXANDER HAMILTON AND BETSY SCHMYLER

He was brilliant of speech, wonderful in intellect, kindly but at times imperious, master of many arts—a genius. She had a few educational advantages, lacked the superficial graces and accomplishments about which most young women think so much of; was gentle in manner and retiring in disposition. They clasped hands in the stately mansion in Albany, where her father, major general of the Continental army, kept open house during the revolution. He was blue-eyed, fair of face, rosy of cheek, slender and under medium height. She was black-eyed, pretty, beautifully proportioned and rather shy. He was little more than a boy—only 22 years old, but already a power in the fighting colonies. She was six months his junior. He was aide-de-camp, confidant, counsellor, practically the right hand of the commander-in-chief of the patriot army. She was descendant of the First Patroon, a patrician of patriots. He was poor. She was a daughter of one of the greatest of the landed proprietors. He was a scholar. She was a maid who knew more of cookery, of Indian raids and of needlecraft than of the classics.

The man of destiny was Alexander Hamilton. The maid was Betsy Schmyler. He was bringing orders to her father concerning the coming campaign. She was having the honor of an introduction to the gallant young soldier. He looked into the depths of those black eyes of the Albany maid and saw more than man ever had seen before. And from that moment he loved her. Hamilton was a glorious lover. If she were a queen he could not have been more devoted. He lavished upon her all the wealth of his tender affection. He was part Scot, part French. He sang to her, wrote verses to her, paid court morning, noon and night. When he had to leave he sent letters back by every messenger. She had bewitched him. To him she was the most beautiful of her sex. He wasn't satisfied with telling her how charming she was; he wrote about her to her father, to her sisters, to her friends. Here is what he said in one of his letters: "She is most unmercifully handsome and so perverse that she has none of those pretty affections which are the prerogative of beauty. Her good sense is destitute of that happy mixture of vanity and ostentation which would make it conspicuous. She is so strange a creature that she possesses all the beauties, virtues and graces of her sex, without any of those amiable defects which others possess."

The Sorrows of Hamilton. The sorrow of Hamilton's life at that time was that his duties kept him from her, but he had the great joy a little afterward to meet her when she accompanied General Schuyler to Morristown, and there she feted and stately functions in which she played her modest part. It was not Hamilton alone who would woo the pretty Betsy. There were half a dozen of the gay blades of the army who were her slaves. Four of her sisters had eloped. She had a number of proposals, but she wasn't as flighty as the others. She turned the heads of so many of the young men that Hamilton wrote in a spirit of banter to her sister Angelica, as follows: "It is essential to the safety of the state and to the tranquility of the army that one of two things take place. Either that she be immediately removed from the neighborhood or that some other nymph qualified to maintain an equal away come into it. By dividing her empire it will be weaker and she be much less dangerous when she has a rival equal in charms to dispute the prize with her. I solicit your aid."

With all his love and all the glory of his prospects, Hamilton was ill at ease. There was a shadow on his life that he feared might blight his happiness. As he wrote to her, he had to make a confession before he asked the girl to wed him. He had to tell her that he was born out of wedlock and that the brand of the bar sinister was upon him. What effect this information had upon her is evidenced by the fact that early in 1780, a little more than a year after he first met her, they were married. To the credit of stout-hearted old Peter Schmyler, father, be it said, he wrote to Hamilton at the time he looked upon it as an honor to have the young man come into his family.

A Too-Short Honeymoon. The honeymoon of Hamilton and Betsy was all too short. A few days of companionship and he had to hurry back to the camp of Washington. He was a wonder in those days; more of a wonder even than in the later period when he filled a larger role in the public eye. All the details of the army management were in his hands. Washington trusted him implicitly. He labored from early morn until late at night. He wrote in that clear and beautiful hand of his multitudes of letters, every one so plain, so well worded, so clear that there could be no misunderstanding. He helped plan campaigns, was adviser and shield to the commander-in-chief, and he seemed never to tire. With all his duties, he found time to write love letters that must have delighted the heart of the fair Betsy. He called her his nut-brown maid. "I have told you, and told you truly," he wrote in one of his letters, "that I love you too much. You engross my thoughts too entirely to allow me to think of anything else." And again, after a rhapsody in which he likened her to a goddess, he said: "To drop figures, my lovely girl, you become dearer to me every moment." The night before he led the assault at Yorktown, he wrote, telling her that he expected to win immortal fame on the morrow, and he closed his letter with this sentence: "Think of me, dream of me and love me, my Betsy, as I do you."

When the war closed and Hamilton was able to rejoin his wife, he said it was impossible for him to be unhappy. Perhaps he was right. He had taken rank as one of the great men of the new nation. The world was before him. He had been blessed with one of the tenderest, best and most patient of wives; and she had given a son to him who was the apple of his eye. The future was full of promise. They went to New York to live, and there she was more than a wife to him. She, a woman of but moderate education, had such rare good sense that Hamilton deferred to her opinion in many matters. Nearly everything he wrote he submitted to her for approval or disapproval. She sat by his side while he worked. When he finished writing he would read to her and ask for her opinion. "You must be to me, Betsy," he said, "what Mother's old nurse was to him."

These two married lovers had some queer experiences. It was Hamilton who wrote Washington's farewell address to the army. Hamilton and his wife were walking in Broadway, a few days after the delivery of the address, when an old soldier, who was selling the address to the people, asked Hamilton to buy a copy. When Hamilton had handed a coin to the soldier, Betsy smiled and said: "If he only knew that he had sold to you a copy of your own work, what would he think?"

Busy as Hamilton had been during the war, he had more active days in the ten years that followed, and he did a greater work. The winning of independence was no less a task than the fashioning of a government such as the world never had known before. Few persons realized how great was Hamilton's labor in his undertaking. And then, when the new government was launched, it developed upon him, as the first secretary of the treasury, to bring order out of the disorder of finance.

From 1790 to 1795 he practically lived in Philadelphia, and Mrs. Hamilton in New York. As often as he could he was with her. His letters to her breathed love and devotion. By an odd trick of fate, Aaron Burr was the messenger who carried some of these letters to her. Burr was Hamilton's friend and travel companion. He had been a student at the same time as Hamilton in the law school of New York. No cloud was on their friendship in those days. Mrs. Hamilton's home at this time was at No. 57 Wall street. Her husband at this period of his career was proving himself one of the ablest financiers the world has ever known, but he made a sorry mess at this time as at this period of his career. Burr was full of promise. They went to New York to live, and there she was more than a wife to him. She, a woman of but moderate education, had such rare good sense that Hamilton deferred to her opinion in many matters. Nearly everything he wrote he submitted to her for approval or disapproval. She sat by his side while he worked. When he finished writing he would read to her and ask for her opinion. "You must be to me, Betsy," he said, "what Mother's old nurse was to him."

the end of 1801 were the happiest in Betsy Hamilton's life. She had one experience about this time that would have wrecked some homes, but not hers. Hamilton became involved in an affair with a vulgar, coarse, almost illiterate woman named Mrs. Reynolds. There was a great scandal as a result. Although Mrs. Hamilton's heart may have bled, she acted like a stoic. Never did she permit the subject to be mentioned in her presence.

Two Tragedies. Whatever of happiness she had in the eighteenth century was more than counterbalanced by the sorrow that came to her in the nineteenth. A silly boy's quarrel robbed her of a son. Philip, her first born, criticized a schoolmate, who had made a speech in favor of Burr. The boys went to Weehawken, fought a duel and on November 23, 1801, the day after the duel, Philip Hamilton, who was only 19 years old, died in her arms. Less than three years afterward, on the same field at Weehawken, Aaron Burr shot her husband in a duel, and the following day she was a widow. Of all the days fought in America, none has received more attention than this one. Hamilton was largely to blame. He and Burr had been enemies for some years. A few months before the duel he had written of Burr as a profligate, a voluptuary and little short of a thief. The person to whom the letter was sent was imprudent enough to show it to others and reference was made to it in a newspaper. Burr called upon Hamilton to avow or disavow its authorship. Hamilton refused and the challenge that led to the duel followed.

Betsy Hamilton was great as the wife of Alexander Hamilton, but she was greater as his widow. Within a few years she had known not only the shock of two violent deaths by duels—those of her eldest son and her husband—but the deaths of her mother, her father and her sister. In addition, her eldest daughter had gone insane. With the death of Hamilton she was left with seven children to support, and she had little or no means. Her father had been rich in land, but not in money. The light of youth faded from her face the day the widows' cap replaced the Marie Antoinette coiffure. She set about to educate and support her children, and she did it well. Aside from that, she devoted her life to vindicating the name of her husband. She journeyed the country over to interview public men and to collect letters and documents bearing upon events in his life. That so much remains today bearing upon his history is due to Betsy Hamilton's efforts. She has a great mind for detail. She made a record of every place where he had lived and wherever she had lived, so posterity should know and mark the spots. Among Hamilton dwellers were those at No. 57 Wall street, No. 56 Pine, No. 58 Partition (now Fulton street), Liberty near Broadway, No. 26 Broadway (now the site of the Standard Oil building), and later, Hamilton Grange, where Hamilton planted the thirteen trees symbolical of the thirteen original states. She dwelt also, for a short time, at No. 69 Stone street. There is a story that once she was travelling on a boat on the Hudson, when she stepped on the deck, saw Aaron Burr and demanded to be put off at the next landing. Even if we did not have the authority of her grandson, Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton, for pronouncing the story untrue, it would ring false. She was not the sort of woman to scream. It would have been Burr who would have sought flight from the boat.

An insight into her character is better given by her interview with James Monroe, years after he had been president of the United States. He was one of those who had been instrumental in exposing Hamilton's relations with the Reynolds woman. He was very old and she was very old. He went to visit her. It was a visit of friendship, he told her, and he wished to be friends with her once more, for they would not long remain on earth. She looked at him calmly and then told him that unless he came to beg forgiveness for the great wrong he had done, no lapse of time, no nearness to the grave could make any difference in her feelings toward him.

A remarkable woman was Betsy Hamilton. For 50 years after Burr shot Alexander Hamilton to death she lived. She was 97 when she died, and the greatest honor she could show to any visitor at her home in 11 street, in Washington, was to let them touch the sword her husband wore at Yorktown and to drink from the punch bowl of George Washington.

Fraternal Prescription For Nervous Wrecks

[From "Medical Reports."] Thousands of men, nervous wrecks, have found the following "Fraternal Prescription" a blessing and a boon. Such men lack aggressiveness, they are timid, nervous, easily discouraged, lacking in self-esteem and confidence. They suffer from cold extremities, thin, watery blood, nervousness, sleeplessness, frightful dreams, tremulous hands and limbs, unsteady gait and an absolute inability to perform the ordinary natural and rational acts or duties such as any healthy normal man can. A vigorous man works, plays, eats and sleeps always with the keenest enjoyment. The greater his exertions are, the stronger becomes his appetite and slumbers. The nervous man seems always tired and worn out. Retiring brings no relief. Sleep brings no refreshment, all because of an abnormal condition of the nervous system, brought about by—well, no matter what—the desire is for relief and freedom, with rich, red blood surging through the body supplying the sensitive nerves with all the power of sensation, so that sleep is refreshing, food is delicious, work is play, and play is pleasure. This treatment is thorough, simple and correct. The ingredients are used in the following proportions: one ounce of tincture of calomel compound (not cardamom), and one ounce of compound essence of cod-liver oil. Mix, shake well and take a teaspoonful after each meal, and one when retiring, until a vigorous, bounding new health takes hold of the tired, exhausted nerves. Only a few weeks' treatment will astonish, and rejuvenate, because the treatment is the right thing at the right time, and contains no deceptive opiates.—Advt.

Two Doctors Said He Had Consumption.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP CURED HIM.

Mrs. John Ellis, St. John's West, Ont., writes:—"My little boy was very bad with whooping cough and severe cold. I went to two doctors with him, and they said he had Consumption. I could get no relief for him, he would cough all night long, with a dry hacking cough. I was persuaded to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and was surprised to see the first bottle did him good. I have had five bottles, and they cured him. He rests well at night now, and is well and hearty. If he gets a cold we always give him Pine Syrup and he is soon better. I did not think I could raise him, but I am thankful to say Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup saved him from being a consumptive. Too much stress cannot be laid upon the admonition to all persons affected by the earlier stages of throat and lung trouble, as failure to take hold at once will cause many years of suffering, and in the end that terrible scourge "Consumption." Lawlessness to Regain Power For the Party Is Last Rally of the Tory Aristocracy, Says Labor Leader

[The following article by Philip Snowden, the English Socialist leader, shows how Labor views the present political situation in the Old Land. He sees a grave peril to society, one greater than the possibility of civil war in Ulster, charging that the aristocracy, driven to its last stand, is resorting to lawlessness in order to regain power for the Tory party. However, one considers the situation, this opinion of a profound student of social and political conditions is well worthy of attention.]

(By Philip Snowden, in Manchester Guardian.)

The present political crisis raises issues and involves the fate of matters tremendously more important than home rule for Ireland. We appear to be approaching the determining conflict between aristocracy and democracy. The British aristocracy have hitherto, with more or less good grace, acquiesced in the surrender of some part of their political privileges and monopolies to popular agitation when surrender seemed the wisest course in the circumstances; but they have, until the passing of the Parliament act, always retained and held in reserve a power which the popular political power could be defeated when they so desired. So long as the House of Lords retained its power of veto the popular franchise was largely a mockery, and all the interests represented by Tory privileges. The strong respect for law and constitutional methods which the working classes have generally and instinctively felt, as the result of generations of teaching of obedience to the law, has been strikingly shown during the labor troubles of the last few years and the great miners' strike, when nearly a million men were out for five weeks, there was hardly a case of the committing of a minor illegal act. For five months the Dublin lock-out continued, and though it was led by the most extreme spirits in the working-class movement, there was practically little of the nature of riot or illegality.

Aristocracy Blocked.
The Parliament act has taken away the power of the aristocracy to defeat the popular will by constitutional means. But the House of Lords and the Tory party have far too much at stake in the form of social privileges, landed interests, and other forms of property and wealth to submit quietly to having their authority over legislation taken away. They are not blind to the signs of the times. They are quite aware of the growing unrest among the great mass of working people and discontent with the hardship and sordidness of their lives. They know that a fully enfranchised democracy would devote its political activities to abolishing the legal privileges by which the aristocracy and plutocracy are enriched, and by which the masses are kept in poverty. The "classes" are under no illusion as to the purpose to which the power of a completely enfranchised people would be put.

The Tories would no doubt very much have preferred to retain their power by constitutional rights. The high regard, the almost sacred respect for law and order which they have professed in the past has served a useful purpose for them. It has instilled into the minds of the working classes a real respect for law and constitutional methods which has made them obedient and servile to the upper classes, and which has been a very strong protection for vested interests and

What the Working Classes Are Learning.
But how different is the lesson which the Tories, as the political organization of landed and other property interests, are now setting the working classes of the country. It is ridiculous to think that in the attitude the Tories are taking up to the House rule will be that measure, and are acting out of sympathy with the "loyalists" of Ulster. The Tories have no rooted objection to home rule. The object of their attack is the Parliament act. They seek to restore the veto of the aristocracy on democratic legislation. That is the patent fact which is being pressed home to the working classes by every successive act in this Tory conspiracy against the Constitution. The Tories and the aristocracy have a great respect for the Constitution and for law and order so long as they are the Constitution and the people to make law and to keep the lower classes in order. But their present conduct is making it abundantly clear to the least observant that they care for the Constitution and for law and order only just so far as their profession of regard for these things can keep for them their privileges and monopolies.

Defiance of the Law.
Popular respect for constitutional government and law and order is going to be serious in the extreme. The example of defiance of the law is being set by the Tories just at a time when a section of the working classes are in a temper to follow such a precedent. The microbes of anarchy multiply at a rapid rate. The working classes have always been ready to take lessons from the upper orders, and they will not be slow to do so in this case. The Tories have surely never considered what tremendous forces of lawlessness they are setting loose and encouraging by their present action. The immediate outcome of their conduct may be a period of licence, riot, or revolution, but it is madness for them to suppose that if the aristocracy deliberately enter into a contest with democracy for the control of Government, in these days, the aristocracy can emerge successful.

The Attack on the Integrity of the Army.
The Tory leaders have laid down certain principles for the regulation of the conduct of officers of the army which cannot be restricted either to the particular case of Ulster or to officers of distinguished rank. The claim they have set up for the officers of the army is that these men are to be refused to carry out their duties according to their personal inclinations. But what this amounts to, in fact, is that the army officers, who are drawn from the same class as the men who in politics are fighting for the maintenance of aristocratic supremacy, and whose sympathies are with the law which, without hesitation, calls out soldiers to intimidate working men striking for a living wage gives officers of the army the liberty to go on leave when their ment to be used for partisan and class purposes, and to prevent the carrying out of laws which have been enacted in a constitutional way. This tampering with the army for the purpose of serving political and class interests confirms in the most striking way the point that there is no institution of law and order the upper classes have supported except as an instrument for serving their own purposes.

Two-Law Standard.
The attack upon the integrity and impartiality of the army which has borne a first-fruit in the incidents at the Curragh last week, is a treasonable and seditious conspiracy, which would have been visited with the most severe punishment if the men who had inspired it had been working men and if the soldiers had been mere privates. The present conduct of the Unionist leaders is accentuating the bitterness of class feeling. It is showing the working classes that there is one law for the rich and another for the poor. The law which puts a trade union leader into jail for an indiscretion uttered without premeditation and under great provocation lets prominent politicians of the upper orders openly prepare for rebellion without interference; and the law which, without hesitation, calls out soldiers to intimidate working men striking for a living wage gives officers of the army the liberty to go on leave when their duty calls them to a service their class or political feelings disapprove. It does not seem unlikely at the moment that the present crisis will develop into a revolution in which the contest between aristocracy and democracy will be finally settled; but if it does not go so far it certainly has a keenly accentuated class feeling that the political contests of the future and the attitude of labor in industrial struggles will be marked by a class antagonism and bitterness greater than anything we have known in the past.

DON'T HAWK, SPIT, SNEEZE---CURE YOURSELF! BREATHE 'CATARRHOZONE'

Gives Instant Reliefs, Clears Out Nose, Throat and All Breathing Organs.

In this sickle climate, repeated colds very easily drift into Catarrh. The natural tendency of Catarrh is to extend through the system in every direction. Exposure to cold or dampness intensifies the trouble, and nasal catarrh is the result. Unless a complete cure is effected, inflammation passes rapidly to the throat, bronchial tubes, and then to the lungs. You can't make new lungs--hence Consumption is practically incurable. But Catarrh can be cured, except in its final and always fatal stage. Catarrh sufferers, meaning those with colds, sore throat, bronchial trouble, etc., can all be cured right at home by inhaling "Catarrhozone." In using Catarrhozone you don't take medicine into the stomach--you just breathe a healing piney vapor direct to the lungs and air passages. The purest balsams and the greatest antiseptics are thus sent to every spot where catarrhal trouble exists, germs are killed, foul secretions are destroyed, nature is given a chance, and cure comes quickly. Colds and throat troubles can't last if the pure healing vapor of Catarrhozone is breathed; sneezing and coughing cease at once, because irritation is removed. Use Catarrhozone to prevent--use it to cure your winter ills. It's pleasant, safe and guaranteed in every case. Complete outfit, $1. Smaller sizes, 50c. at all dealers.

CHICKEN CHAT

Intensive Method Makes for Poultry Success--A Handy Outdoor Hatchery--Fluff and Feathers for Fanciers.

"Intensive" is the key word to poultry success. No man gets the greatest returns for time, labor, material, space and money invested without intensive methods. The poultryman succeeds as he avoids wastes.

If under the most favorable circumstances one man can care for 5,000 chickens and develop each to its best, then the man who cares for a less number has to reckon with the loss of time.

If with labor-saving devices and convenient arrangements a man manages as many fowls as any two men with no additional expense, the latter suffer a loss in labor.

If by an economical use of material a person saves one-fourth of his investment, the man who uses more is handicapped by a loss for material.

If ten acres can be made to provide for as many chickens as are now being cared for upon twenty acres, other things being equal, there is a loss to be charged to space.

If given a certain capital you get by fair means in the course of a year returns equal to that of the man who has twice the amount your neighbor has to figure a loss by his investment of money.

There are certain economic factors in the chicken business which save time, labor, material, space and money.

Certain localities which possess favorable soil, vegetation, climate, and marketing facilities provide advantages.

Some poultrymen by their adaptability to the science and arts of the business avoid the mistakes of others.

There are breeds and strains which are more virile, healthy, and easily cared for than others.

A knowledge of the physical nature of the fowl, its tendencies, needs, weaknesses, and strong points are all important.

Time, labor, material, space and money-saving methods, devices and houses accomplish more than all else with successful poultrymen.

The possibility of success with the largest industries depends chiefly on their ability to conserve time, labor, material, space and money. Note intensive methods in large department stores. To get the greatest returns, intensive poultry culture is absolutely necessary.

Why not interest the boy in poultry-keeping, and stimulate his interest by giving him a pen of pure-bred fowls? There is always more interest in high quality stock, and he will pay more attention to them and develop an industrious, home-keeping hobby that will give him pleasure and profit all through life.

Don't undertake more than you can do. Don't raise more chicks than you have room for. Don't fail to keep chick quarters clean. Don't forget to feed and water regularly and generously. The healthy bird is first up in the morning, and shells out the eggs to show that she is happy and well cared for.

The egg crop starts on the soundest basis of any article produced on the farm. When an egg is laid it is a "fresh" egg, and one of the very finest of food products. Why should that egg be allowed to deteriorate and become a stale egg before it finds its way to an appreciative consumer? A new-laid egg is perfect goods, and only carelessness allows it to be sold for half its value or thrown into the garbage. Stale and bad eggs are an absolute loss, because it takes food and labor to produce them, and you might as well have the price for the better article.

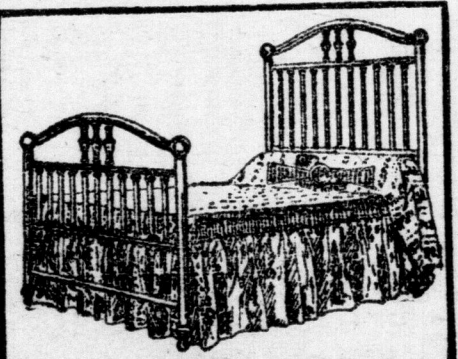

In early summer lettuce is an excellent green food for chicks. If a bunch is fastened within their reach the fowls will devour it readily. It helps digest their grain rations, thereby keeping them in good health, and it is very helpful to their growth. Lettuce is quickly and easily grown, and by sowing the seed at intervals a succession of fresh food can be had all through the season.

and houses perfectly clean. If they are cleaned out each morning and sprayed, new litter provided frequently, and general cleanliness maintained, there will be no dangerous fumes to poison and sicken the little ones.

A splendid open-air natural incubator or hatching-box is easily constructed, and can be made in length to supply any number of setters you desire. It is 12 inches high in rear, and 16 inches wide. Rear wall, ends and partitions are solid boards. The bottom is of one-inch mesh poultry netting. The roof is framed and covered with smooth roofing fabric, 12 inches wide and 6 inches longer than the body of the box, to give an overhang in front, rear and at ends. The greatest overhang of three inches is in front. Roof hinges in front and back. A 4-inch strip at top and bottom, between the doors being hung. This arrangement is good and location sheltered, makes an excellent hatchery. Set the number of hens you desire at the same time, and when hatch comes off mark any special chicks and give all to half the number of brooders and reset the others, or return them to laying house. A few minutes' attention morning and night is all that is required, and the chicks hatched in this near-to-nature method will be of the healthiest and best quality.

Read the "Poultry and Eggs" small ads in The Advertiser, and if you have surplus stock or eggs to dispose of, insert an ad therein, and you won't hold the stock long. There is a greatly increasing demand for anything good in poultry, and now is the time to get results.

CLANDEBOYE MAN SUCCESSFUL IN BREEDING KARAKUL SHEEP FOR MARKETING OF RICH PELTS

Industry, Involving Million of Dollars Annually, Hitherto Confined to Asia, May Soon Be a Feature of Western Ontario Breeding.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Clandeboyne, April 17.—Eli Bice, Clandeboyne, as was stated in a recent number of The Advertiser, has made a start in a new industry, that of raising cross-bred Karakul-Lincoln sheep for their pelts.

As some people seem to be very skeptical in regard to the scheme, it may interest them to learn that a few men—a very few—in the United States have begun to place these pelts on the New York market. What is more, they may be surprised to learn that the American market calls for $14,000,000 worth of this same kind of furs, which are annually imported from Asia.

Some of the lamb skins from Karakul grade Persian crosses were recently priced in New York at $10 apiece, and it is said that some of the choicest should bring $12 to $15 and even more.

Pure bred Karakuls from a ranch in a Western state sold for $1,000 each, while half-bloods brought $100.

One American breeder, L. M. Crawford, has a 1,500-acre ranch on which he has 1,100 Lincoln ewes. He bought 30 head of pure bred Karakuls, nineteen of which were rams, that came originally from Asia, and these were crossed with the 1,100 Lincoln ewes.

The first season's returns from his fur farm were estimated as follows:

100 half-blood pelts at $5.....	$ 500
12 pure bred Karakuls at $1,000.....	12,000
200 half-bloods at $100.....	20,000
From sale of wool.....	1,200
Total.....	$33,700

Pure Bred Karakul Lamb Owned By Eli Bice of Clandeboyne

This certainly is a substantial return for the first season's business. Next season's will no doubt be greatly increased.

What can be done in the Western States can be done here, Mr. Bice asserts, and he points with pride to the lamb. He now has 22. Anyone who sees them must be convinced they are superior to the ordinary native breeds.

In short, Mr. Bice asserts he makes no claim that he cannot substantiate. And practical men who pay him a visit look at his fine flock of sheep and talk with him about the new breed are becoming convinced that he knows what he is talking about. It may be added that Mr. Bice is a practical farmer and breeder of many years experience.

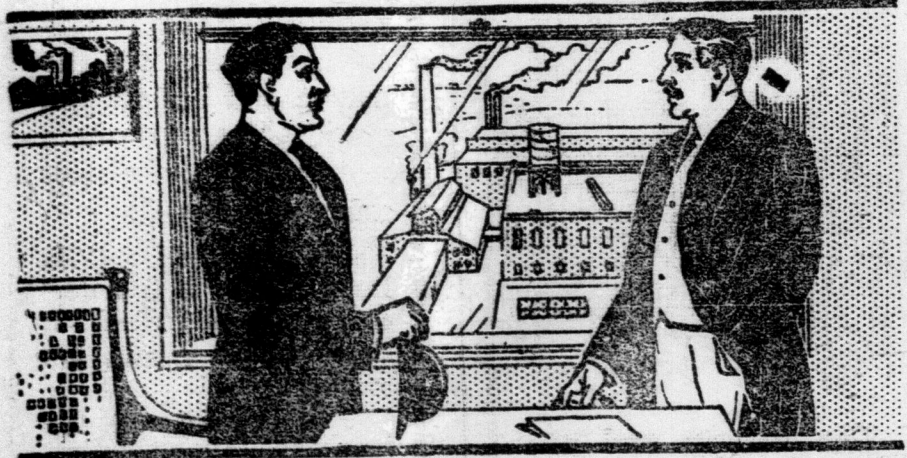

When Karakuls are crossed with other breeds there is often an increase of weight, sometimes amounting to 50 per cent. Not only that, there is often an improvement in the quality of the mutton.

Here is something of direct advantage to everyone who keeps sheep and aims to improve his stock.

In the United States the experiments are being conducted along thoroughly scientific lines.

It will not be surprising in a few years if the New York furriers will pay that $14,000,000 to Canadian and American breeders instead of sending it abroad.

REV. DR. H. D. HUNTER TAKEN BY DEATH

Last of Large Canadian Family of Preachers and Once a Pastor Here, Dies at Yale, Mich.

The Rev. Dr. H. D. Hunter was a Canadian by birth and was born in the township of East Gwillimbury, County of North York. He was of Irish parentage. His father and mother lived at Mount Albert, a village in the County of North York.

The deceased was a brother of the late Rev. Dr. Samuel J. Hunter and Rev. Dr. W. J. Hunter, who both filled prominent positions in the Methodist Church of Canada. The father, John Hunter, was a local preacher, his other son Robert, deceased, was a local preacher in the same church. Upwards of 150 years combined service in preaching was given by the above members of the Hunter family.

In the death of the late Dr. H. D. Hunter, the Presbyterian Church has lost a leader, who had an eminently successful record as a Pastor and Church administrator. His ministry of 40 years and more was divided between Ohio, Illinois, Missouri, Texas and Michigan. Ten years of the above time, he served as pastor of the First Congregational Church, London, Canada.

His executive abilities regarding the manifold activities of a large congregation were of a high order. He was distinctly an edifier of the religious lives of his people, confirming their faith, disposing of their difficulties and encouraging their hearts. "None bore with more graciousness and effectiveness, the shepherd's crook for the guidance and protection of the flock of the great Shepherd, than did he." It was a beautiful culmination of his ministry to see the respect shown by all the various churches and townspeople of Yale. The leading pastors of the various Presbyterian Churches in Michigan, together with the pastors of the local churches, assisted in conducting the funeral services in the church and afterwards to Elmwood Cemetery.

Dr. Hunter was united in marriage to Miss Charlotte Price White, of Stouffville, Ontario, on the 11th day of May, 1871. Two children were their's, John Edward and Pearl, the latter's death occurring in May last. His only surviving sister and member of the family, Mrs. Wm. Munns, of Toronto, and Mr. Wm. Munns, brother-in-law, were present during the Doctor's short illness.

To Cure Catarrhal Deaf- ness and Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness and head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected a complete cure after all else has failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear a watch tick have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear.

Therefore, if you know someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrh, or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand to them, and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home, and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parment (Double Strength), about the worth. Take this home, and add to it ½ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of moist or granulated sugar; stir up. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

The first dose promptly ends the most distressing head noises, dullness, cloudy thinking, etc., while the hearing rapidly returns as the system is invigorated by the tonic action of the treatment. Loss of smell and mucus dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms that show the presence of catarrhal poison, and which are quickly overcome by this efficacious treatment. Nearly ninety per cent of all ear troubles are directly caused by catarrh; therefore, there are but few people whose hearing cannot be restored by this simple home treatment. Every person who is troubled with head noises, catarrhal deafness, or catarrh in any form, should give this prescription a trial. There is nothing better.

Important.—In ordering Parment always specify that you want Double Strength; your druggist has it, or he can get it for you. If not, send it to the International Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine street, Montreal, P. Q., who make a specialty of it.

THE "STREET OF PAIN" IN JERUSALEM

"The Street of Pain," or the Via Dolorosa, in Jerusalem, is rightly described as the most sacred thoroughfare in the world.

Through it hundreds of pilgrims every year slowly and tenderly linger over its stones as they follow its zigzag course to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, firmly believing it to have been the way our Saviour walked to suffer an ignominious death for the sins of mankind.

During Holy Week, especially, it is crowded with Russian pilgrims, many of whom painfully make the journey upon their hands and knees.

The Via Dolorosa really consists of four streets, which exhibit every characteristic formation of the streets of Jerusalem; the narrow arched passage, the open way with the latticed windows, and the steps that show the rise and fall of the hills on which the city is built.

Fourteen stations mark the various episodes which are supposed to have distinguished the painful journey of our Lord, commencing with the traditional "Palace of Pilate" now the town, so-called holy steps, Scala Sancta, from the Judgment Hall, were removed to the Church of St. John Lateran at Rome, where they may now be seen. Near the Seral the narrow road is spanned by an arch, known as the Eco Homo Arch.

According to a monkish legend, it marks the spot where Pilate said, "Behold the man." It is part of a triumphal arch of Hadrian, and near to that part of it built in the School of the Sisters of Zion, on the right-hand side, are some curious stone cylinders of solid rock of undoubted antiquity, on which the town-cryer used to stand when proclaiming the loss of certain articles or announcing some particular event of public interest.

House of Dives and Lazarus.

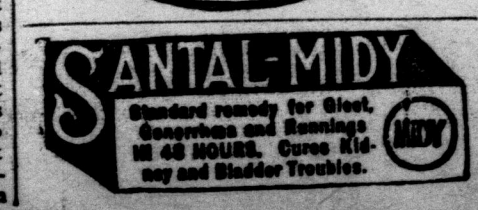

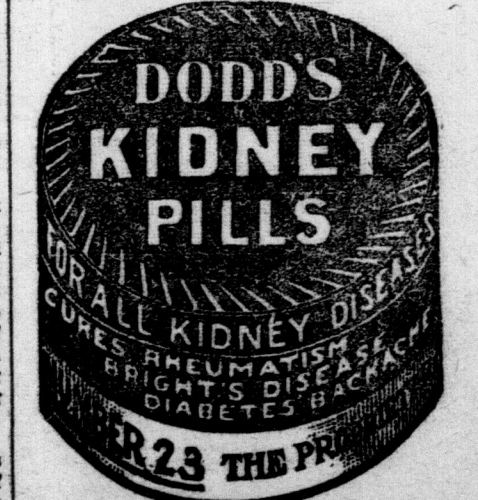

Through the arch, a street passes the Austrian Hospice at the bottom of the hill, then crosses another street at an angle, leaving the "House of Dives and Lazarus" on the left hand, and ascending the next hill through arches and a vaulted passage, crossing the street from the Damascus Gate before it reaches the German Hospice. Then mounting step by step higher up the hill, turns at right angles through the vaulted roof of a prolongation of Christian street, where an old entrance to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre stood.

Various crosses and other religious emblems serve to remind the pilgrim of the sacred spots along the route; the place where Christ sank under the Cross, and where Simon of Cyrene was called upon to bear it; where Jesus leaned against the wall for support; where Veronica wiped the sweat from His brow, and His features became imprinted on her handkerchief and the many other holy places that are annually kissed and wept over every Easter.

The last four stations are in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre itself. It should be added, perhaps, that it was not until the fourteenth century that these sacred sites became known, and there is no historical evidence whatever to prove their identity. Indeed, the destruction of Jerusalem under Titus was as complete, that neither streets nor houses could be identified afterwards.

Nevertheless, thousands of pilgrims visit the Holy City and follow the road which Christ is said to have followed on the way to Calvary.
