Part II.

THE EVENING HOUR.

BY MRS. L. WILSON.

This is the hour when memory wakes Visions of joy that could not last;
This is the hour when fancy takes A survey of the past.

She brings before the pensive mind,
The hallowed scenes of other years,
And friends who long have been consigned To silence and to tears.

The few we liked, the one we loved, A sacred bond come stealing on;
And many a form far hence removed,
And many a pleasure gone.

Memories that now in death are hushed,
And young affection's broken chain,
The hopes that fate too quickly crushed,
In memory live again.

We watch the fading beams of day, But muse on hopes as quickly flown;
But after that, they died away, Till all at last were gone.

This is the hour when fancy wreaths Her spell round joys that faded not;
This is the hour when memory breathes A sigh to pleasures past.

MRS. NICKLEBY'S SUITORS.

"Oh yes!" said Kate, "I remember. I was going to ask, mamma, before you were married, had you many suitors?"
"Suitors, my dear!" cried Mrs. Nickleby, with a smile of wonderful complacency.
"First and last, Kate I must have had a dozen at least."
"Mamma!" returned Kate, in a tone of astonishment.

"I had, indeed, my dear," said Mrs. Nickleby, "not including your poor papa, or a gentleman who used to go at that time to the same dancing-school, and who would bring gold watches and bracelets to our house in a gilt-edged paper, (which were always returned,) and who afterwards unfortunately went out to Botany Bay in a cadet ship—a ship I mean—and escaped into a bush with a killed sheep, (I don't know how they got it) and was going to be hung, only he eventually choked himself, and the government pardoned him."

"Then there was young Lukin," said Mrs.
Nickleby, beginning with her left thumb, and tapping of the names on her fingers—"Moggins—Tipstark—Cabbery—Smifer—" "Young now reached the little finger, Mrs.
Nickleby was carrying the account over to the other hand, when a loud "Hem!" which appeared to come from the very foundation of garden wall, gave both herself and her son a violent start.

DECLARATION OF LOVE BY THE GENTLEMAN NEXT DOOR TO MRS. NICKLEBY.

Kate rose from her seat in some alarm, caught her mother's hand to run with her into the house, she felt herself rather checked than assisted in her intention; following the direction of Mrs. Nickleby's eyes, was quite terrified by the apparition of an old black velvet cap, which, by slow degrees, as if its wearer were ascending a ladder or pair of steps, rose above the wall dividing their garden from that of the next cottage, (which, like their own, was a detached building,) and was gradually followed by a very large head, and an old face, in which were a pair of most extraordinary grey eyes, very wide open, and rolling in their sockets with a droll, languishing, and leering look, most ugly to behold.

"Mamma!" cried Kate, really terrified for the moment, "why do you stop, why do you lose an instant!—Mamma, pray come in!"

"What do you want, sir?" said Mrs. Nickle-by, addressing the intruder with a sort of sneering displeasure. "How dare you look into this garden?"

"Queen of my soul," replied the stranger, folding his hands together, "this goblet sip."
"Nonsense, sir," said Mrs. Nickleby.

"Kate, my love, pray be quiet."
"Won't you sip the goblet?" urged the stranger, with his head impudently on one side, and his right hand on his breast. "Oh, dear sip the goblet!"

"I shall not consent to do anything of the kind, sir," said Mrs. Nickleby, with a laughing air. "Pray begone."

"Why is it?" said the old gentleman, coming up a step higher, and leaning his elbows on the wall, with as much complacency as if he was looking out of a window, "why is it that beauty is always obdurate, even when admiration is as honourable and respectful as mine?" here he smiled, kissed his hand, and made several low bows: "Is it owing to the bees, who when the honey sac-son is over, and they are supposed to have been killed with brimstone, in reality fly to Barbary and lull the Moors to sleep with their drowsy songs? Or is it?" he added, dropping his voice almost to a whisper, "in consequence of the statue at Charing Cross having been lately seen on the Stock Exchange at midnight, walking arm-in-arm with the Pump from Aldgate, in a riding habit?"

"Mamma," murmured Kate, "do you hear him?"

"Hush, my dear?" replied Mrs. Nickle-by, in the same tone of voice, "he is very polite, and I think that was a quotation from the poets. Pray don't worry me—your arm black and blue. Go away, sir."
"Quite away?" said the gentleman, with a languishing look, "Oh! quite away?"
"Yes," returned Mrs. Nickleby, "certainly.
You have no business here. This is private property, sir; you ought to know that."
"I do know," said the old gentleman, laying his finger on his nose with an air of familiarity most reprehensible, "that this is a sacred and enchanted spot, where the most divine charms"—here he kissed his hand and bowed again—"waft mellifluousness over the neighbours' gardens, and force the fruit and vegetables into premature existence. That fact I am acquainted with. But will you permit me, fairest creature, to ask you one question, in the absence of the planet Venus, who has gone on business to the Horse Guards, and would otherwise—pshaw! of your superior charms—interpose between us?"

"If you will conduct yourself, sir, like the gentleman which I should imagine you to be from your language and—appearance, (quite the counterpart of your grand-papa, Kate my dear, in his best days,) and will put your question to me in plain words, I will answer it."

If Mrs. Nickleby's excellent papa had borne in his best days, a resemblance to the neighbour now looking over the wall, he must have been, to say the least, a very queer old gentleman in his prime. Perhaps Kate thought so, for she ventured to glance at his living portrait with some attention, as he took off his black velvet cap, and exhibiting a perfectly bald head, made a long series of bows, each accompanied with a fresh kiss on the hand.
After exhausting himself, to all appearance, with this fatiguing performance, he covered his head once more, pulled the cap very carefully over the tips of his ears, and resuming his former attitude, said,

"The question is—"

"Here he broke off to look round in every direction, and satisfy himself beyond all doubt that there were no listeners near. Assured that there were not, he sapped his nose several times, accompanying the action with a cunning look, as though congratulating himself on his caution; and stretching out his neck, said in a loud whisper,

"Are you a princess?"
"You are mocking me, sir," replied Mrs.
Nickleby, making a faint of retreating towards the house.

"No, but are you?" said the old gentleman.
"You know I am not, sir," replied Mrs.
Nickleby.

"Then are you any relation to the Archbishop of Canterbury?" inquired the old gentleman with grave anxiety, "or to the Pope of Rome, or the Speaker of the House of Commons? Forgive me, if I am wrong, but I was told you were niece to the Commissioners of Paving, and daughter-in-law to the Lord Mayor and Court of Common Council, which would account for your relationship to all three."

"Whoever has spread such reports, sir," returned Mrs. Nickleby with some warmth, "has taken great liberties with my name, and one which I am sure my son Nicholas, if he was aware of it, would not allow for an instant. The 'dea!" said Mrs. Nickleby drawing herself up, "niece to the Commissioners of Paving!"

"Pray, mamma, come away!" whispered Kate.

"Pray, mamma! Nonsense, Kate," said Mrs. Nickleby, angrily, "but that's just the way. If he had said I was niece to a piping bulfinch, what would you care? But I have no sympathy,"—whispered Mrs. Nickle-by, "I don't expect it, that's one thing."

"Tears!" cried the old gentleman, with such an energetic jump, that he fell down two or three steps, and grated his chin against the wall. "Catch the crystal globules—catch 'em—bottle 'em up—cork 'em tight—put sealing-wax on the top—seal 'em with a cupid—label 'em 'Best quality'—and stow 'em away in the fourteenth bin, with a bar of iron on the top to keep the thunder off!"

Fixing these commands, as if there were a dozen attendants all actively engaged in their execution, he turned his velvet cap inside out, put it on with great dignity so as to obscure his sticking eye and three fourths of his nose, and tickling his arms akimbo, looked very fiercely at a sparrow hard by, till the bird flew away, when he put his cap in his pocket with an air of great satisfaction, and addressed himself with a respectful demeanor to Mrs. Nickleby.

"Beautiful madam," such were his words —if I have made any mistake with regard to your family or connexions, I humbly beseech you to pardon me. If I suppose you to be related to Foreign Powers or Native Boards, it is because you have a manner, a carriage, a dignity which you will excuse my saying that none but yourself (with the single exception perhaps of the tragic muse, when playing extemporaneously on the barrel organ before the East India Company) can parallel.
I am not a youth, ma'am, as you see; and although beings like you can never grow old, I venture to presume that we are fitted for each other.

Really, Kate, my love!" said Mrs. Nickle-by faintly, and looking another way.

"I have estates, ma'am," said the old gentleman, flourishing his hand negligently, as if he made very light of such matters, and speaking very fast; "jewels, light-houses, fish-ponds, a whaler of my own in the North Sea, and several oyster-beds of great profit in the Pacific Ocean. If you will have the kindness to step down to the Royal Exchange, and to take the cocked-hat off the stoutest beadle's head, you will find my card in the lining of the crown, wrapped up in a piece of blue paper. My walking stick is also to be seen on application to the chaplain of the House of Commons, who is strictly forbidden to take any money for showing it. I have enemies about me, ma'am," he looked towards his house and spoke very low, "who attack me on all occasions, and wish to secure my property. If you bless me with your hand and heart, you can apply to the lord Chancellor, call out the military if necessary—sending my tooth-ick to the commander-in-chief will be sufficient—and so clear the house of them before the ceremony is performed. After that, love, bliss and rapture; love and b. s. Be mine, be mine."

Repeating these last words with great rapture and enthusiasm, the old gentleman put on his black velvet cap again, and looked up into the sky in a hasty manner, said something that was not quite intelligible concerning a balloon he expected, and which was rather after its time.

"Be mine, be mine," cried the old gentleman. "Gog and Magog, Gog and Magog.
Be mine, be mine!"

"It will be sufficient for me to say, sir," resumed Mrs. Nickleby, with perfect seriousness—"and I am sure you'll see the propriety of taking an answer and going away—that I have made up my mind to remain a widow, and to devote myself to my children. You may not suppose I am the mother of two children—indeed many people have doubted it, and said that nothing on earth could ever make 'em believe it possible—but it is the case and 'they are both grown up. We shall be very glad to have you for a neighbour—very glad and delighted, I'm sure—but in any other character it's quite impossible, quite. As to my being young enough to marry again, and perhaps may be so, or it may not be; but I couldn't think of it for an instant out on any account whatever. I said I never would, and I never will. It's a very painful thing to have to reject proposals, and I would much rather that none were made; at the same time this is the answer that I determined long ago to make, and this is the answer I shall always give."

LOVE.

BY MISS MARTINEAU.

There needs no other proof that happiness is the most wholesome moral atmosphere, and that in which the morality of man is destined ultimately to thrive than the elevation of soul, the religious aspiration, which attends the first assurance, the first sober certainty of true love.
There is much of this religious aspiration amidst all warmth of virtuous affections.— There is a vivid love of God in the child that lays its cheek against the cheek of its mother, and clasps its arms about her neck. God is thanked (perhaps unconsciously) for the brightness of his earth, on summer evenings, when a brother and sister, who have long been parted, pour out their heart stores to each other, and feel their course of thought brightened as it runs. When the aged parent hears of the honors his children have won, or looks round upon their innocent faces as the glory of his decline, his mind reverts to Him who in them prescribed the purpose of his life, and bestowed his grace.—But religious as is the mood of every affection, none is so devotional as that of love, especially so called. The soul is then the very temple of adoration, of faith, of holy purity, of heroism, of charity. At such a moment the human creature shoots up into the angel; there is nothing in earth too defiled for its charity—nothing in hell too appalling for its heroism—nothing in heaven too glorious for its sympathy. Strengthened, sustained, vivified by that most mysterious power, union with another spirit, it feels itself set well forth on the way of victory over evil, sent out conquering and to conquer.—There is no other such crisis in human life.—The philosopher may experience uncontrollable agitation in verifying his balancing system of worlds, feeling, perhaps, as if he actually saw the creative hand in the act of sending the planets forth on their everlasting way; but this philosopher, solitary scrup as he may be regarded amidst a myriad of men, knows at such a moment no emotions so divine as those of the spirit becoming conscious that it is beloved—be it the peasant girl in the meadow, or the daughter of the sage, reposing in her father's confidence, or the artisan beside his loom, or the man of letters musing by his fire-side. The warrior, about to strike the

BULWER AND HIS WIFE.

The novel lately published by the wife of Bulwer the novelist, has already passed through five editions in England. Its only merit consists in its bitterness, and the success with which it portrays the angered feelings of a vindictive woman.

Bulwer was an ambitious man—full of genius, of profound learning, and liberal views. He had written Pelham, the first novel of the nineteenth century, and the Disowned, not far behind it in merit.

This spirited passage is extracted, not from Willis' or Corsair, as the Chronicle above asserts, but from a review of "Chevely" in the National Intelligencer, in Washington City, from the pen of Henry J. Brent, a writer inferior none in the country.

Byron's Opinions on Music.—I like music (said he) but do not know the least of it as a science: indeed I am glad that I do not, for a perfect knowledge might rob it of half its charms.

pleasure, which I can enjoy without the use of less trouble. Byron (adds Lady) lessington has little taste for fine arts; and, when they are the subject of conversation, betrays an ignorance very surprising in a man who has travelled so much.

Woman's Love.—There is a principle in woman's love, that renders it impossible for her to be satisfied without actually doing something for the object of her regard. I speak only of woman in her refined and elevated character.

Spontaneous Combustion.—If paper, linen, tow, wool, cotton, mats, straw, wood shavings, moss, or soot, be imbued slightly with linseed or hempseed oil, and placed in contact with the sun and air, especially when wrapped or piled in a heap, they will soon become spontaneously hot, emit smoke, and finally burst into flames.

Not Particular.—An aged spinster, growing weary of a life of "single blessedness," beckoned her self to the silent recesses of the Grove, and there prayed most fervently that Providence would provide for her what forty years of smiling and simpering and rouging had failed to entrap, viz:—a husband!

Whiskey Punch.—It is difficult to form a correct estimate of the quantity of whiskey punch which may be comfortably discussed at a sitting. In the case of a gentleman whose life had been insured for a large sum of money the payment at his death was resisted by the insurance company upon the plea that he had caused his death by excessive drinking.

The British Ministry.—The following table will show the names of the present ministers who constitute the British Cabinet, with their titles and salaries expressed in pounds sterling:—

Table listing British Ministers: Wm. Lamb, Viscount Melbourne: First Lord of the Treasury, £5,000; Charles C. Peppys, Baron Cottenham: Lord Chancellor, 14,000; Henry Petty, Marquis of Lansdowne: Lord President of the Council, 2,000; J. W. Ponsonby, Viscount Duncan: Lord Privy Seal, 2,000; Right Hon. Thos. Spring Rice: Chancellor of the Exchequer, 5,000; Lord John Russell: Secretary of State for the Home Department, 5,700; Lord Palmerston, Viscount Palmerston: Secretary Foreign Department, 5,000; Henry Phipps, Marquis of Normandy: Colonial secretary, 5,000; G. E. Kynnymond, Earl of Minto: First Lord of the Admiralty, 4,900; Sir J. C. Hobhouse: President of the Board of Control, 3,500; Sir Charles Poulett Thompson: President of the Board of Trade, 2,000; Viscount Howick: Secretary of War, 2,500; H. R. Vassal Fox, Baron Holland: Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, 4,000.

The Marquis of Normandy has lately been removed from the Government of Ireland, where his salary was £20,000, to succeed Lord Glenelg in the Colonial Department.

The ages of ministers are as follows:—Viscount Melbourne, 60; Baron Cottenham 58; Viscount Duncan, 58; Marquis of Normandy, 42; Earl of Minto, 57; Lord Holland, 60.

We have not the means at hand of ascertaining the ages of the other members of the cabinet.

It may be interesting to know how far some of the leaders of the opposition have got along in life; we therefore set down some of them. The Duke of Wellington is 70 years old; Lord Lyndhurst, who is son of John Cooley, the distinguished portrait painter, was born in Boston in 1772, and is 67 years old; Lord Brougham is 60; Earl of Durham, 47.

THE TRANSCRIPT.

QUEBEC, MONDAY, JULY 8th, 1839.

Papers from New York, Upper Canada, and the Lower Provinces received by this morning's mail, are without news of interest.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.

Last evening, about six o'clock, as eight men (habitués) were crossing the Montmorency River, in a crazy flat boat, a little below the place where the new bridge is being erected, by some mismanagement the boat was allowed by the force of the rapids to strike a rock about the middle of the river, when it immediately parted, and the men were hurried down the stream. A man named Bureau succeeded with a rope in rescuing two of them, near the brink of the falls; the other six unfortunate men were seen clinging to each other in the rapids, but no assistance could be given, and all went over the falls, and perished.

The synod of Canada, in connexion with the Church of Scotland, was to meet at Kingston on the 4th instant.

The Halifax Journal, contains some particulars of the melancholy loss of the ship Aide-de-Camp, from Londonderry, bound to St. John, New Brunswick. She had 300 passengers on board, of whom sixteen were drowned. The remainder reached Halifax, where their wants had, as far as possible, been supplied by a Committee of gentlemen who had undertaken the humane task.

The Montreal Gazette says:—We understand, that Mr. James Porteous, of the Post Office of this city, has been appointed Acting Surveyor of the Post-Offices of Upper Canada. We sincerely trust that it may be confirmed; for the Department does not contain a more active, intelligent, and obliging officer than this gentleman.

Among the passengers in the Liverpool were the Right Rev. Bishop Hopkins, of Vermont, Hon. Samuel Candan, Col. Charles Wetherall, Mr. Walsh and family, and Rev. John Chambers.

Medical Board.—At a Meeting of the Board held on Monday last, the following Candidates were admitted to practice:—Messrs. Henry Cartier, of St. Anne; Joseph Marmette, and Benoni Guay, of Quebec; William Dill, of Ireland; Bazile Lanoeque, of Chambly; and Moses L. Glines, of Stanstead.

Mrs. Bailey, (formerly Miss Watson,) a celebrated vocalist, has given two concerts in Montreal with much success, and it is stated that she intends proceeding immediately to Quebec, in continuation of her professional tour throughout the Province.

The new Hotel at the Caledonia Springs will be opened on the 15th instant, and the baths will also be ready by that time. Previous to the end of the month, the billiard table will be set up and the bill alley laid down, so that there will be no dearth of amusement for the visitors.

We are sorry to have heard of the death of the Rev. Mr. Harper, a Roman Catholic Missionary to the Indians on the upper waters of the St. Maurice.

The canoe in which he was proceeding up a rapid turned round in the stream and upset, when the drowned and much regretted geologist was recovered.

Among the numerous visitors lately arriving in Quebec, was Mr. Combe, the celebrated phrenologist. He left town on Saturday, on his return to the United States.

STRANGERS' LIST.

From Latest English Papers.

House of Commons, June 3.—Lord John Russell brought forward his resolutions upon the state of the Canadas. He went somewhat at length into an argumentative statement of the condition of affairs in the two provinces, corresponding with Lord Durham's report, arriving at the conclusion that the only practicable measure of relief was a legislative union.

In the plan now proposed to parliament government had come to the conclusion that representation should not be regulated by the population, as it existed in each province, but by the double principle of territory and population—which would have the effect of giving greater weight to the English loyalists in both provinces than they now possessed.

To obviate the danger of giving a representative system to districts lately in rebellion, it was proposed that no assembly should be called till 1842—constituting to the Government of Lower Canada the power he possesses, or even increasing it where necessary. The crown revenues he proposed to apply into the complete control of the assembly, after securing an adequate civil list for crown officers, judges, &c.

He could not consent to the principle of responsibility to the people of the province, to the extent insisted on by Lord Durham. His lordship concluded by moving two resolutions—first affirming the principle of union—the other providing that matters shall remain as they are until 1842.

It is understood that the ballot is to be an open question; that is, no ministerial influence will be opposed to it, and that the porters of the ministry will not be expected to vote against it, merely as ministerial supporters.

In the House of Commons Lord John Russell announced the intention of ministers to propose a resolution for a penny rate of postage, which was received with loud cheers from both sides of the house.

It seems to be understood that no change in the cabinet will take place. Lord Melbourne and his colleagues have determined to go on and try their fortunes.

The Buffalo store ship sailed from Portmouth on the 4th, with detachments of the Coldstream Guards and other regiments to Canada; and on the 5th, the Athol sailed with a detachment of the 24th for the same destination.

A Russian slave ship has been captured one of the British cruisers. A crazy man was arrested on the night of the 10th June, attempting to enter the palace. He avowed that his object was to kill the Queen, whom he loaded with abuse and inscriptions.

A woman appeared before the Lord Mayor on the 9th of June, soliciting assistance in establishing her claims as the daughter of Geo. IV. and Mrs. Fitzherbert.

The London Times announces the return of Mr. Jaudon, and the breaking up of the United States Bank agency. A hostile correspondence has taken place between Lord Brougham and Mr. Henry Clarendon, but it ended in nothing of importance. Mr. Southey was married to Miss Bewley, the first week in June. Mr. Abercromby, the late speaker, has been raised to the peerage by the title of Baron Dunfermline. Lord Hill is expected to quit the command of the army, and be succeeded by the Marquis of Anglesea. Lord Clarendon has married Lady C. Bingham at last. Lord Fitzalan, heir to the Dukedom of Norfolk, is escorting Lady Lyons to England. He marries Miss Lyons next week.

THE QUEBEC TRANSCRIPT.

They fell in love among the ruins of the Acropolis at Athens. How romantic!

A laughable matter has made the Emperor and Empress of Russia quit the new winter palace. It is full of bugs! Built in a hurry, with new timber, and heated by steam, it is supposed the noxious vermine were thus produced.

The British Queen will leave Portsmouth on the 1st July. She is 275 feet long, upper deck, 245, breadth within the paddle boxes, 40 feet; breadth over all, 64 feet. Depth of hold, 27. She has two engines of 250 horse power each. Her whole crew is 85. She will take 300 cabin passengers, her hold 1000 tons of coal, and 1000 tons of goods. Her small, best bowler and sheet anchors, weigh respectively, 32, 43, and 47 cwt. Her engines, boiler and water, will weigh 500 tons. Her paddles are to make 16 strokes a minute. The enormous sum of four thousand pounds has been offered for Mr. W. Ridsdale's famous horse Bloomsbury.

Chief Justice Robinson of Upper Canada is in London, and paid much attention to.

A very curious collection of autographs is announced for sale in London, at Southey's auction rooms. It wholly consists of autograph letters, confessions, reflections, and memorials, of the criminals who have been executed at Newgate for the last thirty years.

The second series of Lord Brougham's Historical Sketches of States in the times of Geo. III. is out. Among the foreigners are Washington, Carroll, Mirabeau, Lafayette, Neckar, Carnot, and Madame de Staël.

CALEDONIA SPRINGS.
THE favorable opinion I formerly entertained of the waters of the Caledonia Springs is MORE THAN CONFIRMED, as well from the benefits personally derived from their use, as from what I observed of their effects on others. The water should be drunk in moderate quantities before breakfast, and persevered in for some weeks at least.
